KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE
The most successful Remedy ever discovered as it is certain in its effect and does not blister the skin or injure the human flesh. Read proof below.
SAVED HIM 1,800 DOLLARS
ADAMS, N. Y., Jan. 30, 1882.
Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents—Having used a good deal of your Kendall's Spavin Cure with great success, I thought I would let you know what it has done for me. I was raised in Jefferson County, and when I was breaking him, he kicked over the cross bar and got fast and tore one of his hind legs to pieces. I employed the best farrier, but they all said he was spoiled. I had very large throats, and I used two bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure, and it took the bone entirely off, and he was sound in three weeks. I have used it for the same spavin and wind galls, and it has always cured completely and left the leg smooth.
It is a splendid medicine for rheumatism. I have recommended it to a good many, and they all say it does the work. I was in Witherington & Knatch's drug store, in Adams, the other day and saw a very fine picture you sent them. I tried to buy it, but could not; they said if I would write to you that you would send me one. I will write to you and you will send me one of the good ones.
Very respectfully,
E. S. LYMAN.
From the Aikon Commercial Office, of New York, 1882.
Readers of the "Commercial" can not well forget that a large space has for years been taken up by Kendall's advertisement—especially of a certain Spavin Cure. We have had dealings with Dr. Kendall for many years, and we know of some large business houses in cities near by, who have also dealt with him for many years, and the truth is fully and satisfactorily proven, not only that it is a good honest cure, and that it is a Spavin Cure, but that the English language is not capable of recommending it too highly.
Kendall's Spavin Cure will cure spavin. There are hundreds of cases in which it has been proved to cure certain spavin and swellings, and it is a great relief to the sufferer. It is a great relief to the sufferer. It is a great relief to the sufferer. It is a great relief to the sufferer.

Very Ind., Aug 13th, 1881.
Dear Sir, I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your kind letter of the 10th inst. and in reply to inform you that the Kendall's Spavin Cure is in excellent demand in our country. Mr. J. W. Voss, one of the leading farmers in our county, expressed a wish to have a bottle of the value of the remedy for horses, tried it and it did the work. He has had a horse suffering from this disease for many years, and it has been cured by your remedy. Yours respectfully, C. O. FERRIS.
P. S. If you have a bottle or bottles for sale, please send them to me, or if you prefer, send them to the proprietor, Dr. B. J. Kendall &

Various Causes.
Advancing years, care, sickness, sleep disturbance, and hereditary predisposition—all operate to thin the hair, and make it fall out. It is a common prematurely. AYER'S Hair Vigor restores fallen or gray hair, light or red hair, weak or sticky hair, or which falls out as desired. It softens and cleanses the scalp, giving it a healthy action. It restores the natural color of the hair, and by its use falling hair is checked, and a new growth will be produced in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or the glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on brunet, weak, or sticky hair, on which a few applications will produce the gloss and richness of youth. It renders the hair in its results, it is incomparable as a dressing, and is especially valued for its softening, lustrous, and richness of its imparts.
AYER'S Hair Vigor is colorless; contains neither lead nor mercury, and is not soiled or colored by water; it keeps its fragrance long, and is a safe and agreeable perfume.

John Macklefresh's Telegram.
By ANNA F. BURNHAM.
"I didn't say—pratt my dear wife, blue coat, brass buttons and all. Come, are you dead?" "You act so!"
"No, broke in Mrs. John, who had found a tongue, but we thought you were. It said so—the telegram did. We came up so long ago you've stepped in it. The boys are dead and the telegram did."
"And so between hysterical tears and laughter and questions that nobody pretended to answer, they unloaded and got into the house. At least Mrs. John did.
The two brothers suddenly sided off towards the door. There, John, out of his brother Samuel's hand and shook it slowly and solemnly, while the strong tears ran down both their cheeks. Neither offered or asked explanations. In that moment their hearts spoke plainly enough.
"This my 'brother' was dead, and it was alive again."
In the home they went to work more reasonably to unravel the mystery. Mrs.
John, who had been with a sudden light, "there's a Samuel Macklefresh dead at the four corners, and I did hear he was low last week. He's got a brother John, but I didn't know he lived in your town. Now he won't get it. Alas! it's too late!"
The brothers now came in wiping away superfluous tears with their coatsleeves.
They were talking over the curious event, telling the man that when he sat at the window, he one rushed out to get it, but lost with a sudden impulse John Macklefresh, hastily placing about, he studied one this epistle into his own pocket.
"This is the cutting letter."
"That'll keep to the day of judgment," he muttered, "I'll write him a recipe in full for the two hundred—two!"
"I'm a deacon and a Christian."

Floored with Silver.
A MYSTERIOUS RISE OF THE NORTH SEAS OF SILVER.
An old miner who has lived on the North Shore of Lake Superior for the past twenty years tells the following wonderful tale:—"Just about thirty years ago," said he, "two men named Kingsley and Mephan (I knew Mephan well) were stationed at one of the Hudson Bay Company's posts north of Winnipeg. Some Indians, who by their dialect and dress were known to be Chippewas from the North Shore of Superior, came to the post one day to buy supplies, but instead of producing fur trails, offered ingots of pure silver.
The metal was in a crude state. It had not been melted, but was hammered into rough oblong shapes. Their curiosity was strongly excited, of course, and they questioned the Indians closely, but could get no satisfaction from them. Next spring other Chippewas came who also had silver to trade, and making all their arrangements the two traders left their post when the Indians did, and by land work and great exertion of wood craft followed until they reached Dog Lake, a body of water lying a little north of west of where Prince Arthur's Landing now is.
Near here the Indians came to a village of their tribe, and their journey ended. Kingsley and Mephan watched in the woods for a long time, and after many failures finally saw a party of bucks going into the forest. They were informed, on a hunting expedition; they followed them until they reached a point nearly twenty miles northeast of Dog Lake, they reached the great Indian mine. They waited until the Indians had left the mine, which was nearly dark, and they went in and examined it.
Only the most primitive work had been done, and yet a bed of solid metallic silver had been exposed, to large that only repeated experiments would convince them that it was real. The metal occurred in great nuggets and also in a loose rock, just as copper is found. They marked the place with all the care they could. It was in the case of a short ravine one of series with which the country is covered, and leading their one party, with suggestions as to the best time to go, they set out for home. It was a week's journey, and the heavy load on the pony soon wore the animal out; they reached the silver, and pushed on home. At the end of their story and the nuggets they produced caused the wildest excitement. A party was organized at once, and the buried gold of the pony found on the way, but search as they would they never found the mine. Kingsley died on this trip, but Mephan lived to see this mine for years and years, and he was making me know the place, and he was getting ready to go into the woods. I have never heard of him since, and I suppose he died on the trip. The mine has never been discovered, and a peculiar thing is, too, that although before this silver was not common among the Indians, no one ever saw any of it now. All the old miners believe that they have reached the whole mine. It will be found some day however, and the man who finds it will have a bigger thing than all the mines in Nevada rolled into one." Mephan is not the only one who has
now. All the old miners believe that they
found some day however, and the man
who finds it will have a bigger thing than
all the mines in Nevada rolled into one."

POETRY.
The First Step.
To-night as the tender gleaming Was sinking in evening's glow, Watching her tenderly before you Brightened the darkening room, I thought with the ray's soft radiance That you were the sun's own light, For the beautiful form-eyed lady Took his first step alone!
Hardly running to meet him Came trooping the household band, To reach his helping hand,
To watch him with silent rapture, To see his little fair-skinned daughter
My one little fair-skinned daughter
And four brown romping boys,
Leaving the sheltering arms,
That this world is his best rest;
Near to the mother's breast!
Wild with laughter and dancing,
My one little fair-skinned daughter,
And four brown romping boys,
Leaving the sheltering arms,
That this world is his best rest;

THE MEDICAL QUESTION OF HONEY.
There is no doubt but that honey is one of the most valuable of medicines. We have seen a doctor who has made use of good effects, and would now add another testimonial to those already published. It is from Mr. Luther Corey, Yorkshire, N. Y.
He says: "On October 1st, I was taken with bilious and gastric fever, followed by a relapse in the shape of influenza.
The lungs and their surrounding membranes were inflamed, and I was unable to eat or sleep. I was confined to my bed for three weeks. I was unwell, and therefore too weak to do any work, and when I did commence eating honey, and had a few more, I was able to get up and about. I have since had several attacks of the same kind, and in every case I have been cured by the use of honey. I think the honey is doing the business. I am now able to walk about the house."

SCENES.
A correspondent of the Oregon Farmer and Horticulturist says he has cured "scary" horses, old and young, of this disagreeable and dangerous habit by the following simple process. My plan when riding a horse was to keep him as quiet as possible, and to speak to him kindly. There stop him as soon as convenient. Let him stand and take a good look at the object he is scared at, then give him a few gentle strokes on the neck with the hand and coax him up to the object. Do not whip him at all times of his fear, but let him see that he is not to be hurt at first, but give him time to see that he is not going to be hurt. Then have him go up and smell the object—it is not a dead animal or some other offensive thing, but a simple object, and he will soon get over his fear. I have cured many horses of this habit, and I think it is well worth trying. I have cured many
well worth trying. I have cured many
well worth trying.

For the Ladies.

Miss Cicely Jones is just home from boarding school and engaged to be married, and as she knows nothing about cooking or house-work, is going to fit her for the station in life which she is expected to adorn with household grace. She certainly makes a charming picture as she stands in the kitchen, draped in a chemise apron, prettily trimmed with bows of ribbon, her hands hidden under a Doller Yarden cap, and her dimpled, white hands encased in old kid gloves, while she sways to and fro on her dainty French kid heels, like some graceful wind-blown flower.

'Mamma, she slipped, prettily, please introduce me to your assistant.' Whereupon mamma says, 'Bridget, this is your young lady, Miss Cicely, who wants to learn the name and use of everything in the kitchen, and how to make omeletts, rusks and angel-cakes, before she goes to housekeeping for herself.'

'Whereupon mamma says, 'Bridget, this is your young lady, Miss Cicely, who wants to learn the name and use of everything in the kitchen, and how to make omeletts, rusks and angel-cakes, before she goes to housekeeping for herself.'

Joker's Corner.

A ladder about twenty feet long was leaning against a building on Michigan avenue the other day, and at the top of the ladder was a boy. A Polish woman came along with a cart full of wood and the boy cried out:

'Hey! old woman, where's your lace collar?' She looked up at him and shook her fist, and he continued: 'It's too hot for your sex prevents you from climbing a ladder.'

'Then something occurred which the boy had not provided against. The woman approached the ladder, seized the foot of it and backed off, and the way the boy and the ladder came straying down made every ladder on its head stand erect. He tumbled into an ash-barrel, received a couple of kicks from her broad foot, and as she continued her journey he sat up and spat out the ashes and remarked to himself:

'Well, now, there's one or two things I didn't know of after all!'

A rather superstitious young man of the city, who is fond of quoting fragments of wisdom in old sayings and maxims, was recently sitting to the girl of his choice, trying in vain to summon up courage to pop the question. Every time he plunged in and said something approaching the subject he would be seized with a spell of bashfulness and colour his face as if about to have a fit. One day he had proceeded as far as:—

'Supposing a young man should ask you to marry, would you be so good as to become his wife?' 'What is the matter with your nose?' asked the young lady, solemnly. 'Tickle; I must be going to kiss a fool as the saying is.'

'The girl smiled into his face with sweet innocence.' 'Mother said I look like a fool sometimes,' she said archly. 'He had sense enough left to improve the opportunity, and now he says that actions speak louder than words, and she better to.'

'Don't MENTION IT.—A young author has several articles rejected by an editor of a popular magazine. Later another magazine accepts his work and he becomes famous. Editor of first magazine meeting author and being introduced, says:—

'I've read your contributions.' 'Yes. But don't think I bear you any ill will on that account. I'm sure I would have done the same to you.'

'The DEBENTURE.—In our country,' said the Englishman, 'as I learned back in his chair, before we marry we arrange to settle a certain sum on our wives.'

'Yes I know,' replied the American, 'but with us it is different. It is after we are married that we settle every thing on the wife, and arrange to beat our creditors.'

'How I see. And how do the creditors take it?' 'They never find anything to take.'

'ONLY ONE CONCLUSION.—You said you were going to vote for me, indignantly exclaimed a defeated candidate addressing Mike, a well known Irishman. 'An' didn't I vote for ye?' 'Now, you didn't.'

'Well, you're in that what there's only one conclusion that I win arrive at.' 'And that would be a lie, sir.'

'A VIOLET NIGHT.—Flouring the loud rooster of a gun from the castle, an old body from the country engaged as she went along Princess Street, Edinburgh, with her son, what the sound was. 'Oh, I suppose it's just sunset,' was the off-hand reply. 'Surely,' exclaimed the old woman, 'my son's that the sound of a doon here w' a bang like that!'

'Little Girl.—Oh, if you please, father, send back this cheese, and say he can't eat it. He doesn't think a few minutes, but he says he objects to eating a mass of mites with a small piece of cheese fixed on; and would you please give him another bit, and sell this to a man that's going fishing.'

'OVERLOOK.—Sister! If you are going into the town, you can do something for me, Fred. Brother: 'All right, it's nothing much. Got an awfully busy day on you see. Got to get my hair cut, and—er—er—come back lunch, you know, and—er—come back lunch, you know, and—er—come back lunch, you know, and that, don't you know?'

'A CONDUCTOR was recently chosen a deacon of a church. When it became his duty to take up a collection, he surprised the congregation by starting with the characteristic ejaculation, 'Tickets, gentlemen! The contribution that day was large.'

'A woman in Akron, O., bothered the central telephone office for an hour and a half trying to get her husband's ear, to tell him an important piece of news. When she was put in communication with him, all she had to say was: 'Baby's got a tooth through.'

'Still alive, Uncle Reuben, I've been under you, snub.' 'How do you know that?' 'Why, snub, I'm some snub you know that I'm lib fr de man of March I lib fr de whole year.'

'Astronomical chat, chatting with his table, and put the soup into a tureen or deep padding dish, and eat with spoons. COFFEE CREAM.—One-half cupful each of molasses, brown sugar, butter coffee; cups of flour, I egg, 1 teaspoonful of saleratus; spice to taste, sufficient.
