SAVAGING MANHOOD

The work of the Military Hospitals Commission embraces everything which can be done for the recovery, comfort and usefulness of the brave men who have been discharged from the army because of injuries which unfit them for future service.

Not the least important part of this work is to provide every man with instruction in some remunerative employment by which he may be able, with returning health, to earn for himself a comfortable living.

Many of them will find it impossible to revert to their previous occupation, and none of them will desire to live an idle life and be a burden on their relations or friends.

France and Belgium, as they were the first of the Allies to see the sad havoc which war was making among their own men, were the first to see the necessity of this vocational training. It was not long, however, before England was forced, by the long trains of the wounded brought to her homes and hospitals, to consider the problem of their need. Canada too has necessarily taken up the work, and already results have followed the endeavors of the Commission charged with it.

A visit to the School organized in a part of the building of the Grey nuns of Montreal, which has been kindly offered for this purpose, will be of great interest. Here are convalescent soldiers learning carpentry, one of them at least with Dr. Amar's hand equipment attached to his working arm; others have chosen the barber's art; others are practicing shoe-making, sitting in the old fashion way on bench or standing at the side of a modern invention; a former stationary engineer who was buried three days at Fostubert is learning draughtsmanship. This man considers, it is said, that Jonah had nothing on him as regards excelling experience or miraculous escape. "He was dug out much the worse for wear," but after a long time in the hospital is sufficiently recovered to think of preparing to go back to a higher branch of his former business. Others whose eyesight has been affected are learning the touch system of type-writing. One man with Dr. Amar's equipment is practicing on the violin. Others with a view to a college course are studying Latin and Greek, under a Lieutenant who is a graduate M.A. One man who was a day laborer, and returned from Flanders incapacitated, is now a draughtsman in the employ of the Bell Telephone Company, and is earning about double of his former income. Others are connected with business classes preparing for future employment in commercial life. Some who have already taken the course are now engaged by big corporations and private concerns. Telegraphy is also taught.

Examples of the carpentry work done in the Grey Nunnery school were recently on exhibition at the Arena, and orders were booked sufficient to occupy the time of the men thus engaged, until Christmas. Twenty-five per cent of the money obtained in this way is retained by the School for cost of material and oversight. Twenty per cent is given to the men in cash and the balance will be paid to each man on his discharge. This is distinct from the separation allowances to dependents.

Another school has been started at St. Agatha for tubercular patients. The curriculum includes the three R's, and a great variety of light employment, such as mechanical and architectural drawing, basket work, metal work, electric wiring, motor installation, market gardening, poultry raising, the care of bees, and others too numerous to be here detailed.

The importance of the work thus imperfectly outlined cannot be over-estimated, in its value both to the convalescent soldiers and to the Dominion.

As the Commission says in one of its circulars, "occupation is often as necessary and beneficial as rest itself, in its curative and strengthening effect on body and mind." And the aim is to ascertain, as exactly as possible, just what industry each man is most likely to prove successful in, so that he may be a contented and self-supporting member of society and to prepare him for it as fully as possible.

The Commission had under its care at the beginning of November, 2881 soldiers. Of these 426 were at Sanatoria for tuberculosis; 1616 were in Convalescent Homes of whom 682 were outpatients, and 29 were in asylums for the insane.

Every true-hearted Canadian is grateful to the brave men who have valiantly offered their services to defend the honor and maintain the very existence of the Empire, against the most unscrupulous, teacherous and barbaric methods of a powerful enemy, and will approve of every effort made for the welfare of those who return with the scars of war upon them.

Only a few weeks until Christmas! This year there will be more sorrow than usual intermingling with the joy of the occasion, and when we spread joy to our less fortunate brothers, let us not forget Canada's heroes in the trenches, in the hospitals, prisoners of war, and those who are in training. A kind letter is a gift they would receive most gladly.

CLARENCE BORDEN OF TUPPERVILLE KILLED BY TRAIN.

This community was shocked last Thursday morning when it was learned that Clarence Borden, son of Mr. William Borden of Tupperville, had been killed early that morning, at Airtville, near Halifax, while in the performance of his duties as brakeman on a D. A. R. freight train. He had been on top of one of the freight cars and in some unaccountable way fell between two cars, four or five cars passing over his body, mangleing it badly.

A younger brother, Ralph died from the effects of a shell shock at the front a few months ago, and another brother, Fred, is now at the front, having enlisted in the First Contingent.

The surviving members of the family are the father, two brothers, Fred and Oliver, and two sisters, Jennie and Rena, who have the sincere sympathy of all in their sad bereavement.

The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon with a service in the Central Baptist Church.

A special train placed at the disposal of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, ran from Kentville to Airtville, on board were members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, and Oddfellows from Kentville, Berwick, Kingston, Middleton and Bridgetown to the number of over two hundred.

Upon arrival at Tupperville the members of the fraternal orders presented formal in procession by Rev. G. C. Warren, who gave a brief but strong address. The choir furnished music, the singing of "Some day he silver cord will break," by Louis Brooks, being rendered with good effect.

Hiawatha Lodge, I.O.O.F., Kentville, of which the deceased was a member, conducted the service at the grave. Mayor Polson acted as Noble Grand and Rev. W. R. Turner, of Middleton, taking the chaplain's part. The service was most impressive. Among the beautiful floral tributes which bore stent testimony of esteem and affection for the departed, was a broken wheel from the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, wreaths from the B. L. F. E. Order of Railway Conductors, and Hiawatha Lodge and a pillow and wreath from the railway staff at Kentville.

Many People Will Don Goshes Early This Season to Combat the High Cost of Leather Foot-wear

"Buy rubbers," says the shoeman, the dealer who plans fair with his customers.

Leather is up and shoes are up to such an extent that the buying of a pair of shoes is almost on a level with the acquiring of a new suit or coat. Shoes must be worn, but the economical person will don rubbers as soon as the weather gets the least bit "damp under foot"; not only for the protection to the health that the rubbers afford, but to save the costly shoes he or she wears.

There was never a problem in economics that was not solved sooner or later, and rubbers and overalls seem to be the answer to the augmented price of shoes this winter.

FAREWELL SERVICE TO REV. H. G. MELLICK AT LAWRENCE-TOWN

At a farewell meeting held in the Baptist Church at Lawrence-ton on Monday evening of this week for the Rev. and Mrs. H. G. Mellick, the following address together with a purse of $101.75 was presented:

Dear Brother Mellick: On behalf of the Church, of which you have been so long the faithful and honored Pastor, I wish to convey to you and Mrs. Mellick our sincere appreciation of your valued services during the years of your Pastorate in this part of the Master's vineyard. By your noble and unblemished Christian character, and your unselfish interests in everything that has been for the welfare of the Church and community, you have won the esteem of all.

Your presence amongst us has been an inspiration for good and the prayers and best wishes of a host of friends will follow you to your new field of labor.

We will miss you at our Church services. We will miss you in our homes and in the every day walks of life, where your kindly greetings and wise counsel have helped us in the better to grapple with life's problems. You have been with us in our joys, and you have been with us in our sorrows, and your kind and loving sympathy have helped to brighten the lives of many.

During your Pastorate of nearly seven and one half years, you have had the joy of welcoming seventy to the fellowship of the Church. We know your heart has yearned for the salvation of others, and we believe the good seed that has been sown through your instrumentality will prosper and bear abundant fruit to the honor and glory of God. Your influence will abide with us after you are gone, and eternity alone will reveal the magnitude of your work in this place.

We shall ever cherish sweet memories of the past, and pray that our Heavenly Father will use and bless both you and Mrs. Mellick, in the preme work of life—the salvation of souls.

It gives me much pleasure now to ask you to accept this gift as a small token of the love and esteem in which you are held by the church and the community.

WINTERING IDLE HORSES CHEAPLY.

Below are given some results obtained at the Experimental Station, Cape Rouge, Que. in the chafing wintering of idle horses. The methods followed and the feeds used were such as to make the plan applicable to, and worth a trial in, practically all parts of the Dominion.

More Horses are Required

Help is scarce, high-priced, and often times unreliable so that larger implements and more working stock have to be employed. It is not unusual possible to buy a good team at a reasonable price in the spring, while it is often hard to get a decent figure for the same animals in the autumn. It would thus seem advisable, when the ground freezes, to lay aside, as it were for the winter, all horses which are not absolutely required and to feed them as cheaply as possible without impairing their future usefulness.

A Cheap Winter Ration

To gather data upon this subject, an experiment was started at the Cape Rouge Station in 1911 and has been continued during five consecutive winters, with mares and geldings, some nervous, others quiet, aged five to eighteen years. It has been found that they fared well on a daily ration of one pound mixed hay, one pound cut straw, and one pound carrots or swedes for each one hundred pounds of their weight. Not only did they gain an average of twenty-nine pounds during the five months of the test, but they showed, the following season, that they had lost no vitality nor energy.

Change must be Gradual

The rule generally followed was to gradually cut down the work, also the feed, from November 1 until November 15 when the animals under test were placed in box stalls. They never went out during the winter, with the exception of an occasional drive of a mile or so. On April 15, easy jobs were given to them and a small quantity of concentrates was allowed until May 1 they could be under harness ten hours a day and were on full feed.

Minard's Lintment Cures Distemper.

These are important points not to be forgotten to lower and raise the ration little by little, and to leave the horses practically idle.

Details Essential to Success

If horses, due to a hard season's work, are in low condition, they should be fed up to their normal weight before being left aside for the winter and enough exercise should be allowed during that period to prevent stocking. Another good thing is to give a purgative so as to clean out the system before the long rest. One should also remember that some animals are more restless than others and dissipate more energy, which means that more food will be required, so that the above mentioned quantities should be increased or decreased slightly, according to circumstances.

Notes on Different roughages

Mixed hay, for this purpose, can be of any grass or weed which horses will eat, must not be mouldy or musty, and should not be worth more than half of timothy. Roots may be carrots, mangels or swedes, though the first are always liked, and the latter are sometimes refused at first which requires skill on the part of the feeder to have enough eaten; if roots are not given, bran should form part of the ration, as animals at rest will soon get constipated and will not thrive very well on dry roughage alone. Out straw should be used, as it is more palatable than other sorts.

How to Feed

It would probably be well to chaff at least half the hay and straw, but as the idea is to lower expenses, there seems no doubt that the cost of cutting these roughages would be greater than that of the extra feed necessary to supply the energy used in masticating them. The roots were sliced, most of the time, for the experiments, and it seems better to give them thus, though it is not absolutely necessary, as long as they are not of such size as to be swallowed whole, when there may be danger of choking.

When to Feed

It was noticed at Cape Rouge that the legs of horses kept in box stalls and fed as previously described, did not stock up. If there is no box-stall, it is advisable to turn the animals out every day, when the weather permits, so that they may take some exercise. In this case, it is probable that somewhat more food will be needed, to make up for the lost energy and that, as to the number of times to feed, it seems that twice a day is sufficient, and that about the same quantity can be given both morning and evening.

POULTRY

FIRST SEASON SUCCESS

Why is it that many beginners are successful during their first season but do not do so well with their flocks afterward?

In his enthusiasm for the new work with poultry the novice goes about the work with such thoroughness and care for detail. He starts with everything new, clean and fresh. He keeps things clean, he feeds wholesome food, he does not allow food to remain before the fowls or chicks in such a manner that it will spoil before he can use it.

It is not that he is careful to keep his pens free from lice and mites. Becoming more familiar with the work, he finds that the routine is not quite so much "fun" as it was, the work now becoming commonplace.

He looks to him like an exacting form of irreverence that keeps him away from conditions possessing more novelty. He grows careless, the coops and equipment are less clean, the sitting hens get less care or the incubator is neglected,—same too with the layers, brooders and growing chicks. He may assume that because his success at first was so apparent that the work is "easy"—"nothing to raising chickens"—and he becomes a slaphop or inclined to let the little but necessary details "slide" and to neglect essentials that were so interesting when new. Every beginner, sooner or later and generally sooner—reaches a "know-it-all stage" and right there his downfall is likely to begin. No man has yet lived long enough to hear what there is to learn about poultry,—much less to "know it all."

Something new and interesting can be learned every day. To those who will study, work, and apply themselves, the nervousness and interest will never wear off. When you begin to get to cock-sure of your knowledge of poultry, it is a pretty good time to "stop, look and listen" and remember that a "set slide" and "get away with it" but such a course is never safe for the beginner.

Start with things clean and in good order and keep them that way. Move the flocks to new ground now and then or leaving soil sweet by frequent cultivation. Be always "on the job."

SEPARATING THE SEXES OF FOWLS

It has been proved by more than one experiment that hens lay more eggs when separated from male birds than they do if kept constantly mated. Pullets mature in better form if separated from cockerels as soon as the sexes can be determined with certainty. It is better to sell the cockerels for market purposes than to keep them until older, and only such as are to be reserved for breeders should be kept, and these should be shut by themselves. Cockerels that are kept separated from hens and pullets unbrooded, are used as better as brooders. Eggs from hens kept away from male birds keep longer. Male birds kept confined are better off than if allowed to run at large. All this shows that it is a profitable practice to separate the sex during all the time that hatching is not going on. It makes a little trouble to keep the male birds confined, but it pays in better conditions for the females in earlier maturity, greater egg production, and larger profits.

The condition of the droppings is a good indication of the health of the flock. If there is any sign of looseness of the bowels see that a supply of charcoal is at hand.

Keep a patch well spaded so that the chickens will have a good dust bath.
