THE MASONIC HALL MEETING.

The Masonic Hall Meeting, held on the call of Mr. Thomas Troy, one of the Candidates in the late contest for the representation of Northumberland in the Provincial House of Assembly, on Monday evening last week, was a large one and nearly all the seats were filled with more favorable consideration than those portions of New Brunswick, because of her large contributions to the stumpage revenue and she should also have credit for a proportionate share of the Export Duty Subsidy of $150,000.

No little interest was manifested in the meeting for several reasons. First, there was a general desire to hear Mr. Troy, who, in the beginning of his campaign, had appeared in the same hall to make his first speech and did not succeed - an experience of many public men under similar circumstances, - and next, because it was known that Mr. D. G. Smith had been invited to attend the meeting to address his fellow-citizens in defence of the ADVANCE and himself against the attacks made upon them in the canvass by the Surveyor-General.

It was also known to quite a large number of the Surveyor-General's friends that as that gentleman was not to be present, he had arranged with Mr. Tweedie, ex-M. P. P. to be his deputy and these friends were expected from that quarter. It afterwards transpired, in fact, that Messrs. Adams, Call, Tweedie and others, had met the afternoon before, at a Chatham rendezvous and arranged a grand coup de main, by which Mr. Troy's meeting was to be turned into a Waterloo for the friends of the Opposition candidates.

By the acquiescence of the Surveyor-General's deputy - Mr. Tweedie - and the congenial spirits at his back who stationed themselves conveniently about the Hall - the more bubbling being nearest the door, in order that they might with the more facility, "keep up steam," they had arranged.

On motion of Mr. John Bell, J. B. Snowball, Esq., was appointed Chairman, and he called upon Mr. Troy to address the meeting. That gentleman made a speech of about three quarters of an hour, in which he referred to the fact that he was not a candidate by his own seeking, but had come out at the solicitation of his friends. Proceeding, he dealt with the several points covered by his speech at Newcastle on Nomination day and which was quite fully reported in last week's ADVANCE. He urged the right of the working men of the County to more adequate representation than they had yet secured and claimed that by bringing on the elections so early in the season - just when agricultural operations were in their farming operations - the Government seemed to show a fear of appealing to a full electoral jury. Referring to the canvass of 1878 he affirmed that Mr. Adams had then appealed to voters to meet him on his nomination as an Opposition man, although that gentleman thought fit to now deny the fact. Such being the case he had acted inconsistently in going into the Government, which he did only a few days after being elected. Messrs. Laudy and Hinington had held out to him, as an Opposition man, Adams, for they also had opposed the Government in the canvass and, like him, entered it when they were offered an opportunity to do so. If it were of doing this, these three gentlemen had held out to him, as an Opposition man, Adams, for they also had opposed the Government in the canvass and, like him, entered it when they were offered an opportunity to do so. If it were of doing this, these three gentlemen had held out to him, as an Opposition man, Adams, for they also had opposed the Government in the canvass and, like him, entered it when they were offered an opportunity to do so.

After referring to the Government's inconsistency in the matter of the Legislative Council, Mr. Troy took up the subject of the property qualification required of those who offered as candidates for the Local Assembly. If the principle was correct that no such qualification was required of those who came forward as Dominion candidates, why should it not prevail in respect of those for the House of Assembly? Why should the people's choice be thus narrowed down to one great class of men, to the ignoring of another as intelligent and, certainly, as well qualified for other respects?

The Government was entirely too large - there were too many in the Executive in proportion to the number of members in the House, thereby giving the Government an undue influence.

Mr. Troy then referred to the desirability of having the head of the Education Department in the House of Assembly. About a quarter of the whole revenue of the Province was devoted to the support of the public service spent so much, it was only reasonable that its head should be directly responsible to the House and people. It might, however, be urged that special qualifications were required to enable a man to properly direct educational affairs, yet if the system were brought more within the scope of the requirements of a common school education, it would not be difficult to get a man in the House properly qualified for the headship of that service, while it would be believed, and the actual indubitable.

Here some person shouted out "Give us local politics!" "Speak grammatically, please!" whereupon Mr. Troy said "If you don't like my grammar you may go out." [Mr. Troy did not say "you can lump it," as stated by the World.] The difference between the assumed and actual debt, together with the balance on hand as well as the special subsidy of $65,000 a year, which we had up to 1877 had been all spent. We had obtained $150,000 in lieu of the Export Duty from the Dominion Government, besides the extra lumber tax.

and, yet all was spent and the Province was a borrower from the Dominion treasury to the extent of half the yearly subsidy, on which interest was being paid - showing reckless management, which needed to be checked. We had rolled up a debt of over a million dollars of which Northumberland received only $86,000, for the Chatham Branch Railway, while it seemed that the southern parts of the Province were able to get almost anything they asked for. This County was entitled to more favorable consideration than those portions of New Brunswick, because of her large contributions to the stumpage revenue and she should also have credit for a proportionate share of the Export Duty Subsidy of $150,000.

He also referred to the canvass made against him that he came out to split the Catholic vote, and showed - as he did at Newcastle - how unworthy it was in those who used it and how degrading was the imputation involved therein against Catholic independence of thought and action. He closed this admirable speech by an honorable appeal for support, and thanks for the considerate treatment he had received on the same platform on the occasion of his first appearance. [Mr. Troy's speech was frequently applauded during its delivery and also with great heartiness on the part of the audience.]

There were at once a dozen or more calls for Mr. Tweedie and a large number for Mr. Smith. The Chairman said he believed it was understood that Mr. Smith was to speak next in defence of himself against attacks of the Surveyor-General and he would, therefore, call on Mr. Smith. As that gentleman proceeded to the platform a few of the boldest of Mr. Adams' friends continued to say "Tweedie," while others cried out "Adams isn't here," "Don't attack a man behind his back," but they evidently concluded that the game of the Newcastle audience could not be played with success, and that Mr. Smith's fellow-citizens were determined that he should have a hearing.

When Mr. Smith had taken his place on the platform Mr. Tweedie came hastily up and handed some papers to the Chairman, saying something about what Mr. Adams had told him to do.

Mr. Smith's Answer to the Surveyor-General's Charges. Mr. Smith said, - It had not been his intention to take any part in the platform discussions of the present canvass, because he was not a Legislative candidate, but the Surveyor-General had made such attacks upon him, personally, as well as upon his paper - from the platform of a fortnight ago, as well as at Newcastle on Nomination Day, and during the canvass in different parts of the County - that he had no alternative but to make a matter of fairness, hear his defence. He could not reply to the attack made upon him by Mr. Adams at the Chatham meeting a fortnight ago because he was among those who had arranged that meeting on the conditions thereof being that candidates only were to speak. Surveyor-General Adams had taken advantage of that opportunity to abuse him in language which no gentleman, or public man, was justified in using, and had intensified the offence at Newcastle, calling him (Mr. Smith) a "slenderer," "blackguard," "infidel" and even a "public thief" - and some friends of common decency, who were, no doubt, in sympathy with the ADVANCE and its editor, interrupted the hon. gentleman, when he (Mr. S.) - not Mr. Adams, as a local paper in that gentleman's interest, had stated - requested that the Surveyor-General be allowed to say what he pleased, to make as great a blackguard of him as his taste might dictate, but he desired it to be understood that when that gentleman's speech was ended he (Mr. S.) would claim the right to be heard in reply. He had attempted to get a hearing, but was prevented - not by the meeting - but by a few irresponsible, or rather, persons who were responsible only to a few gentlemen who evidently had them there for the purpose - "When the meeting was over, Mr. S. would not have been able to address them in that matter, for he believed the sentiment of the place protested against the course that he had incited as well as those who had actually committed it. He had told them, on that occasion, that he should hear from him in another place and he was here to-night to keep that promise. He must thank Mr. Troy for the opportunity that gentleman had afforded him to vindicate himself.

When he had obtained Mr. Troy's permission to address this meeting, he, at once, acquainted Mr. Adams with his intention, addressing to him the following notice: -

CHATHAM, JUNE 17, 1882. Dear Sir: Mr. Thomas Troy has announced to me that he will address the meeting at Chatham, on Monday evening next, and has agreed to allow me the privilege to address them in my defence against the attacks you have thought fit to make upon me in Chatham, Newcastle and other parts of the County. I therefore notify you of my intention in order that you may be present if you so desire.

THOMAS TROY, D. G. SMITH.

He had received a not very courteous reply and one which was, to his mind, unnecessarily long. He would read it - to be the original of the paper carried, for Mr. Adams, by Mr. Tweedie, to the Chairman and intended, no doubt, to be read by that gentleman. It has been since told us that when this letter was prepared "the party" thought it was "very severe" that Mr. Smith would not dare to read it.]

ATTACKS ON THE "ADVANCE" BY PRESS AND PLATFORM - MESSRS. WEAVER'S.

Mr. Smith said he was sorry Mr. Adams could not be present and also that he had deemed it necessary to send so ill-natured a notification of the fact. Perhaps there were some gentlemen present who might be asking themselves why he was not content to reply to Mr. Adams' attacks in the ADVANCE, - why he should come upon the platform in his defence. His answer was, - because that gentleman, who had established one paper here which had now two local journals at his back, was not satisfied with meeting the ADVANCE in journalistic discussion. He was not satisfied with the personal attacks of the vilest kind made by these papers upon him, but had taken advantage of the canvass to discuss and abuse the ADVANCE and its editor as they and not the Government's management of Provincial affairs were the issues of the pending contest. It was not enough that these papers - two of them - should wage war upon the ADVANCE - which according to one of them did not pay its employees' wages and was soon to go out of existence. Why, it was hinted, when the late representative of the County at Ottawa did not again present himself for re-election, that the ADVANCE must now cease to exist, as if any one man could so affect it. That gentleman was but the head, in the County, of a party, and it was the principles of that party which the ADVANCE represented - principles which could not die. Those principles were to-day, stronger than ever in the minds of the people of Northumberland, and so long as they lived, and sufficient men here believed in them, just so long would the ADVANCE live - and that, he could tell his opponents would be a very long time yet. The hon. gentleman and his friends had sent several papers during the last seven or eight years, each of which was to kill off the ADVANCE. Yet he (Mr. S.) had seen a few journals to flourish in Chatham. However, when one went down another had sprung up, and the last venture in that line appeared to be a little more healthy than the rest. Like many other youngsters, however, it was, therefore, dirt and made mud pies and, sometimes it daubed its dirty little hands against the ADVANCE, and its editor, but he hoped it would, with mature experience, learn how to do such things and that it was far better to be respectable and well-behaved, as the ADVANCE was.

The Surveyor-General and his friends seemed to have determined that they must not only attack the ADVANCE through their papers but make public meetings addressed by him as a character as to intimidate Mr. Smith to such an extent as to prevent him from attending them as a reporter of the press. Vile epithets and false charges were addressed to him, (Mr. S.) in the most pointed manner by the Surveyor-General at these meetings - language intended to incite the worst passions of his followers and suggestive of violence, language which he regretted that any public man should employ, language that was degrading to the hon. gentleman, personally, to the County he represented and to the dignity of a man holding the high position of Surveyor-General of the Province.

ATTEMPTS TO DRIVE THE PRESS FROM THE FIELD.

In replying to that gentleman's attacks he would not do so in kind. He had no personal quarrel with him. He spoke in his capacity, as a journalist, who had criticised the public acts of a representative of an important constituency, and member of the Government. He felt also that the difficulties of the situation were becoming discouraging. He had never before attempted to make a public speech and realised that he had to combat against the platform experience of the Surveyor-General, who had been accustomed to speak in public places and was an "old hand" at public speaking and his ability in that line had been fortified by long experience - from the time when he had first begun stumping through the County in behalf of the gentleman who he now held up as the embodiment of a detested "ledger influence" - against the candidate of Mr. Mitchell, the representative of Ottawa of the County - the present time. But he (Mr. S.) could not shrink from the duty thrust upon him. He would not be put down by intimidation and he stood up in defence of free public discussion and the liberties of the press, against the unbridled abuse and incalculable injury to a man in an important public position - a man who had preached the doctrine that he (Mr. S.) must be "deposed" and driven from the country. Mr. Adams had charged him with all kinds of offences against him (Mr. A.), with hounding and vilifying, misrepresenting and persecuting him, and the charges were not true, and Mr. Adams could not sustain them. He (Mr. S.) would not detain the audience by particular references to the slanderous attacks he had been made against him individually, but that gentleman and his friends but he would "only say that he had laid their slanders down and he was not afraid of any comparison of character as a citizen between himself and them or of the ADVANCE with the organs which were at their back. From the time when he came here, more than seven years ago, he had found the gentleman's hands against him, his influence being that he differed from them in regard to public matters and stood between them and their designs which he believed to be against the public interest.

MR. PARK'S ERRORS.

Before proceeding to take up the most important points of the Surveyor-General's attacks he must refer to two matters in which he thought Mr. Park - the other Government Candidate in the contest - had been unfair towards him. One of these was the ADVANCE's criticisms of that gentleman's position and conduct in the matter of the Miramichi Valley Railway. He would merely say, in passing, that before he concluded, he would justify any criticisms he had made in regard to that matter. Mr. Park's other point in which he endeavored to make his auditors believe that the ADVANCE had represented Adams as having no principle could not be proved by reference to the ADVANCE's columns. What the ADVANCE stated referred to the two lawyers we had in the last House, and he was willing to leave their regard for the principles they had professed during the canvass of 1878, to the judgment of men who knew what principle meant.
