Poetry.

HONOR TO THE WORKING MAN.

ALL honor to the working man,
Who worketh "with a will,"
With energy and industry,
With cunning and with skill,
Be it with head or hand,
Who knows his work is fair and true,
And knows that it will stand.

All honor to the working man,
Who worketh "with his might,"
In patience and in honesty;
Whose life, though passed in poverty,
Will bear the light of day,
Nor fears his works should follow him,
Die when or where he may.

Miscellany.

OUTDONE BY AN ACTOR.

Having some business to transact at New Orleans, I took passage on board one of those floating palaces to be found on the Mississippi. At Cairo we took aboard a party that I was not happy to see, not a bit of it. I don't like seeing walking about on two legs. The party consisted of a young man thirty or thirty-five years old, with his wife and a young baby, and his mother. The young man was what I should call a hard character. He wore a great coat and pants, and purple velvet vest, with a massive gold, or it might be plated, chain across the breast. His long black hair was curled and shiny, and smelt like a barber's shop. He had a red, bluff face, and his eyes were black and wicked. He had been what many call good looking—good, I do not think he could have been with such a mother. She was a tall and stately woman—quite as tall as her son, and about half a century old. She wore a false front, and her forehead was shaved to make it look more expensive and intellectual. I can't answer for her age very accurately, for she was made up in the most elaborate fashion, and was dressed, even on the steambot, in the richest more antique and the costliest lace. There is not a sin of the civilized world that was not written on that woman's face. I have seen a great many women with little enough that was womanly about them, but I never saw one who seemed to me so bad as this gambler's mother.

The fact is, it was a party of gamblers. The poor little wife was a trained stool-pigeon, and even the pretty little baby was dressed to attract and lead the acquaintance. The wife was very pretty, but struck me as a strange compound. She seemed loving and gentle, as I dare say she might have been under other circumstances. She was dressed too well, and wore too much jewelry. This I afterwards found was not her fault. She was made to play her part in attracting her husband's victims. The coquetry of her appearance did not correspond with the expression of her face. There was a sad look in it that made me pity her. They had come from Canada, they said, and were going to New Orleans. I kept my eyes on them, and so I found, did the experienced chambermaid, who had been on the river too long not to know such customers at first sight.

Among our fellow-passengers was a gentleman who called himself Mr. Brown, who seemed to me to be an actor travelling incognito, or a gentleman who intended to add to the dramatic profession. We got acquainted over a sherry cobbler, became intimate with our noses in our two first jumps, and when we had a little private party in our corner, he amused us by imitating those on board, or others we happened to know, very cleverly. Among others he took off the rous-looking gambler, Rodden, as he called himself, and the stately mother. He had made up his mind about them pretty much as I had made up mine.

Among the other occupants of the great cabin, where society gets about as well mingled as you ever find it in this world, was a young man, a Mr. John Green, a master carpenter, from Chicago, going to Memphis. He was simple, honest, and verdant as his name. He got acquainted with everybody, and told of his means, intentions, and prospects, as if he thought every one as innocent as himself. Rodden had had money, but not by making the first advances. The old lady talked to him in the motherly way about his home, his prospects and sweethearts. The young wife, who seemed at times to scorn everything about her, smiled on him sweetly, and often gave him her baby to hold. Whoever she may have feared or hated, she loved the baby. It was, I believe, the bond that held her to the gambler and his mother, and made her do their infernal bidding. But for the baby, she might have jumped into the river to escape a tyranny that became more and more apparent to me as I watched the drama playing before me.

Rodden, of course, had made up his mind to plunder the young carpenter, and it had to be done before we got to Memphis. They had played in a little family party at whist and euchre for games and sherry cobbler, or champagne. Green generally won, and was confident in his luck, and a little proud of his skill. He was fascinated with the pretty woman who could win him round her fingers. Then he tried his hand with Rodden alone, and won plenty of dollars, as he boasted to Brown, at half a dollar a game. It was no use to advise him. He was as conceited as he was honest. Like many very green persons, he believed himself an excellent judge of character, and as a card player a connoisseur.

The night before we were to reach Memphis, Rodden and Green were playing, and Green was flushed with his luck and drinking more than usual. Brown watched them till he was tired, and turned in about eleven o'clock. Then Rodden and Green drank more, or stronger than usual, and they played for higher stakes. It was the old story—infatuation, madness, and, of course, the loss of the last dollar Green had in the world. Then came another insanity worse than that of the drunkard and the gambler—the insanity of despair. Instead of going to his berth, he ascended to the deck. Then he took off his coat and vest and wrote on a scrap of paper the following scaterly legible note:—

"To the Captain of this Boat: Rodden has robbed me, when I was drunk, of three thousand dollars, all I have in the world. I am going to drown myself. Please thank Mr. Brown for me, and tell him I am sorry I did not hear to him. JOHN GREEN."

This paper he pinned to his vest, and then quickly jumped in the river; but he was not born to be drowned—not that time anyway. There was a cry from the watch on deck, of a man overboard. Now I always take my dog Muser with me when I travel; he's as good as a bowie-knife and six shovels as good as a hoeing the cry, I sprang out of the stateroom with Muser. "Save him, Muser!" said I. The dog didn't need another invitation, and he caught him and held him up, until the steamer's boat took them both in, and brought them on board again. The captain came down on Rodden, but Rodden drew a bowie-knife and showed fight. The boat had touched at Memphis, and before anything could be done, he had broken away and was clear. His mother, elegant and impetuous as ever, had her baggage taken ashore, and we were soon on our way, like the river, and life, and all that sort of thing, and I forgot all about the adventure. New Orleans was a city at that time, full of wealth and beauty, lying a purple grape, in the sun, full of luscious pulp and sweetness. Well, it is just like a grape skin now sucked and thrown under foot to be trodden on; but we'll adjourn that subject.

On the 5th May, having got through my business, I left New Orleans to return north. I went on board that place of a boat. Black Hawk, and almost the first person I saw was Rodden's mother. There she was with the same stately presence, the same shaven forehead and false front, the same rich and moist antique; to which were now added a little woman, with her baby, now a year old, both dressed in the same showy manner; and presently I saw the hard faced gambler, Rodden. The young mother and her baby looked pale and ill, the old mother and her hopeful looked fazed and eager for prey. I paid so much attention to those people, and thought so much of what they had probably been doing all winter in New Orleans, that I rather neglected the other passengers; but the day after we started, I observed a particularly green looking individual, with light flaxen hair, an awkward slouching hat, blue homespun pantaloons, and a butternut colored coat, which seemed to me both homespun and home-made; he had old worn gloves on which he never removed, except to put on some old leather or kid ones. I watched the gambler for it had come into my mind that this greeny homespun individual had been to New Orleans with a considerable cargo of bacon and cheese. I thought of poor Green and his three thousand dollars. One day I saw Rodden and the stranger—"like," so he called himself—together.

No matter about my name, mister, said he, call me like, I'll answer to that till the cows come home. You can't come to ever me calling me mister. How do I know but you are one of them fellers that plays poker and allers wias?

I never played but three games of poker in my life, said Rodden; but I'll play euchre with you for the drinks.

No you don't. Look o'here, mister, pulling down the lower eye-lash, do you see anything green there?

I see that you have cut your eye teeth, said Rodden. I wouldn't undertake to cheat you, if cheating was my trade, which, I am happy to say, it is not.

Ye don't say so! Good-lookin', but ye can't come in, I shan't play for the drinks, nor for nothing else. I promised Susy when I came away that I wouldn't tie a kiard the hull time I was off; an' no more I won't. You see, five thousand dollars worth of bacon and cheese wouldn't be no shakes at all to one of them fellers as plays poker.

That's so, said Rodden. You are wise. Yes, an' that ain't the whole on't, for my money's in the cap'n's safe, and what's more, I'll stay there till half an hour afore I land at Memphis.

At—yes, at—said Rodden, suggestively. At—yes, at; but where that at is, you'll have to find out, for I told Susy I'd keep as dark as a woodchuck's hole, and not to talk to nobody more'n was raily necessary. As to you, I wouldn't mind telling you, for I took to you at once. You are smart, but you can't keep a hotel, or you wouldn't come at me about kiards. You might have known I wouldn't play by the looks of me.

Rodden was persevering; the man in homespun was firm. The young wife seemed more terrified and miserable every hour; the old mother more hard, proud and imperious. She would take the baby, and keep it from its mother, and I believe, pinch it simply to torture the poor woman. What a life the poor thing was leading, and what a fate for the child! One evening I heard Rodden talking to the gawky man about play.

Look o'here now, said the latter, if you say kiards to me again, I'll pitch into you. I'm a man o' my word, specially when my word is given to Susy. But I have got a pocket full of dice and they ain't loaded dice nuther. Ef you want play enough to bet something handsome again my terbacker box, I'll play with you.

He drew out a very ancient silver box, of about five dollars weight, and laid it on the table. Rodden sat down to the table with eagerness in his dark eye that meant mischief. He won it—then lost it. It was lost and won several times, but rested in the pocket of the countryman.

Smart fellow, but you can't keep a hotel, nor win my terbacker box, said he. The next day they played again, and he lost his box, and watch, and thirty dollars. The next day they were at it again, when the luck seemed to turn for the green one, as he won a large sum of money, in fact, all or nearly all he had to lose, and then the countryman refused to play any longer.

Not to-night anyhow, said he. I might be willing to play to-morrow, but I want to sleep with my pockets full for one night. I allus put my money in the captain's safe, but I'll keep this ere that was yours to sleed on; just for luck.

That foolish fellow will be robbed to-night, I said to myself, and may be murdered. I could not go to sleep, and at midnight, when I heard him go to bed, I knocked at his stateroom door, and said: Will you allow me to speak to you?

I know what you're goin to say, said he, but never you lay awake on my account. I ain't a boxer, and I know what Rodden will do. But he's barking up the wrong tree. Look o'here, mister, said he, he drew out a tremendous bowie-knife from the back of his neck, and showed me under his pillow a six shooter. I reckon them ere will do the business, if he comes here to look for my winnings.

I left the man, reassured, and returned to my berth, but not to sleep. The boat went snorting and rearing on her way up the gloomy river. It was high flood, and if any accident happened to the boat, there was a poor chance for the passengers. More than once did we steam past the floating corpses of a burnt or exploded steamer. As I lay thinking of all this I heard a step. The countryman slept with his door open. He would choke to death at once, he said, if he did not get the air. People brought up in log houses are apt to feel so.

I sprang to my feet and crept towards his stateroom. The door was shut. There was a sudden explosion of a pistol followed by a fierce cry. I opened the door. Rodden had fallen on the floor, but he sprang to his feet with a cut across his hand, and one of his ears shot off. He dashed out of the door as the countryman exclaimed:—

That varmint?

Are you hurt?

Not a bit of it.

He had a slight cut on his hand, however. Rodden had scarcely left the stateroom when he was grappled by the porter, who like my self, had been watching him. The porter saw the brief conflict which he had not time to prevent. The rascal struggled hard, but he was soon disarmed, bound securely, and locked up in a stateroom. His loss of blood helped perhaps, to conquer him. I asked a lady, who had come from her stateroom to indulge her natural curiosity, to go to the poor wife and tell her the sad truth, that her husband was wounded and a felon.

Oh, what have I suffered with him and her! If I could but return to my once happy home! said the poor wife, when informed of the affair.

And why can you not? asked the old lady. It was the old, old story. She had run away from home and married a shifty scamp without the consent of her parents. The captain, the countryman, and myself went aside to consult as to what was to be done.

Wait a minute, said the countryman, as he went into his stateroom and next instant came out in a dressing-gown, another natural head of hair and without the everlasting old gloves. It was my acquaintance, M. Brown, and a capital actor, too.

I determined to serve out that fellow if I ever got a chance, he said, when he robbed that poor carpenter, and drove him crazy; he got cured of that by a small dose of water cure in the Mississippi, and by the help of your dog Muser. I shall hunt him up, and give him back his money.

Muser wagged his tail, as if he remembered all about it, and approved of returning the cash.

The poor little wife decided to return home. The mother deprived of her son, did not attempt to keep her ill-used daughter-in-law.

When Rodden found that he was to be sent to jail at St. Andrews, he sent for his wife. It's all up with me for the present, said he. They have got me foul. You had better go home, Lib, and stay with the old folks and behave yourself. Mother is not fit company for you unless I am about.

The wife answered only with her sobs. She held the baby for his father to kiss him, but she did not offer him her own lips or cheeks. He was her tyrant no longer. She had many friends. She would escape. We took her to her paternal home on the Ohio, and saw her kindly received by a worthy father and loving mother. Mr. Brown went with me and left a thousand dollars of the sum he had won from Rodden in her father's hands. Rodden was tried for a murderous assault with intent to rob, and sent to the penitentiary for twenty-five years. He will be sixty when he has served out his time. The mother has tried hard to save him, and may get him pardoned after a while. The little wife became an exemplary and happy mother.

I don't keep up acquaintance with all the world and his wife, because I can't, but I keep track of Mr. Brown, who is acting in England,—with another name, that I won't mention,—and as I said before, a very good actor he is, too.

A plain old clergyman was once applied to by a young man for advice on a very important matter. He asked which of two sisters he had best pay his addresses to. One was very lovely in her disposition, but not a professor of religion; the other was a professing Christian, but very ill-tempered. "Marry the good-tempered one, by all means said the old gentleman. The spirit of God can live where you can't."

A country girl, says the Rocky Mountain News, was split from a wagon the other day, and had all her finery mused in the snow-drifts. After recovering from a short spell of insensibility, her first struggling colloquy was:—"Oh! fiddle! I hope there was no editor man in sight!"

Arrival of the Europa at Halifax.

The Steamship Europa, Hockley, which left Liverpool at 11 a. m. on 1st and Queenstown 2nd, arrived at Halifax at 2 a. m., 14th. She has 43 passengers for Halifax and 30 for Boston.

The Cuba arrived at Queenstown on the afternoon of the 21st, and Liverpool at noon on the 1st.

Lisbon telegram of March 31st, says: "Commanders of 'Niagara' and 'Sacramento' state that they had no intention of sailing when fired upon by the forts, but were only shifting their anchorage. It is rumored that 'Diplomatic notes have been exchanged in reference to this incident. It was thought that the 'Stone-wall' would make from Lisbon for Gibraltar."

A letter from Lisbon asserts that on leaving Ferrol the topmasts of the "Stone-wall" were struck and the ship cleared for action; captain sent his papers and money on shore for safety.

The "Sacramento" and "Niagara," however, avoided a conflict. The "Stone-wall" has two screws which in the event of flight, are expected to be of immense advantage to her.

The London Index suggests that, should the Washington Government pressure on the supposed inferiority of Portugal, to exert reparations in the case of the Niagara and Sacramento, the Great Powers will be placed under an unavoidable obligation to protect Portugal in the assertion of her rights.

Lisbon despatch of the 31st says:—The American Minister has demanded satisfaction for firing upon the Niagara and Sacramento by the forts. He also requests the dismissal of the Governor of Fort Belem, and a salute of 21 guns to the American flag. Nothing yet decided in the matter.

The Times' correspondent at Richmond, writing March 4th, says:—I am daily more convinced that if Richmond falls, and Lee and Johnson are driven from the field, it is but the first stage of this colossal revolution which will then be completed. There will ensue a time when every important town of the South will require to be held by Yankee garrisons, when the exaltation of New York will be exchanged for sobriety and right reason, and when it will be realized that the closing scenes of this mightiest revolutionary drama will not be played out save in the times of our children's children.

Parliamentary proceedings on the 30th ult. unimportant.

In the House of Commons, 31st, Lord C. Paget said Admiralty had received no proposal for sanctioning any fresh attempts to reach the North Pole. He was, therefore, unable to say what course the Government would take if such proposal were made.

Mr. Newdegate put some questions as to the idea of the Pope taking up his residence in England, as indicated in some foreign journals.

Lord Palmerston replied that the Government respected the Pope personally very much but for him to come to England would be both an anachronism and a solecism.

Revenue returns for financial year ending March 31st, show net increase of over £104,000 on year; notwithstanding the great reductions in taxation, the revenue exceeds by nearly a million sterling the estimates of Gladstone.

ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.—French Government will probably send one or two steamers to accompany the two that are to be sent by the English Government with the Great Eastern across the Atlantic, at the time laying the Atlantic cable, and it is hoped that the United States Government will do the same.

Baring's Circular says: Large business has been done in 3.20 bonds; prices advanced early in week to 57½ & 58, but have since relapsed to 56½ & 57; demand chiefly from the Continent.

Bank of England on 30th reduced rates of discount to 4, at which there is a fair demand for money. This movement strengthened English funds and Consols were buoyant and advancing.

Kelson, Tritton & Co., India and General Merchants, suspended—liabilities estimated at £200,000 sterling.

Another financial Bank—the Portsmouth and South Hants Banking Company—has suspended. Liabilities about £170,000 sterling.

The Birmingham Joint Stock Banking Company had agreed to take up the business of Atwood & Spooner's Bank, which lately suspended at Birmingham, and to pay creditors 11s. 3d. on the pound.

The West India Mail Steamer arrived with over two and a quarter millions in specie; she also brought several captains of blockade-runners whose occupation is gone.

FRANCE.—Weekly returns of Bank of France show an increase of cash in hand of over ten and a half millions francs.

In French Chambers, 30th, first opposition was debated amendment of Jules Favre, who spoke upon necessity for political liberty, but was interrupted by President and declined to finish his speech. The amendment was rejected.

Amendment in favour of Liberty of Press debated, but rejected by large majority.

Stated Napoleon will leave Paris early in May, not returning till November, his physicians having recommended seven months absence in the country air.

SPAIN.—"Epoca" states Minister of War tendered resignation, and Gen. Latorre refused to resign. Later despatch says Minister of War resigned from ill health. Gen. Rivera succeeded to office.

DENMARK.

King relieved M. Heitzen, representative alliance between reactionary and extreme Democratic parties. Supposed all members of late Cabinet will return to their posts.

ITALY.—In Allocution delivered at last Consistory Pope expressed surprise and sorrow at sad events which have recently taken place in Mexico. His Holiness hoped Maximilian would abandon the course upon which he had entered and satisfy just desires of Holy See. Pope further thanked Bishops of Catholic world especially those of Italy, for zeal in defending religion and liberties of Church despite decess of secular authorities.

FROM THE STATES.

President Lincoln Dead!

WAR DEPARTMENT, April 15th, 1.30 A. M. TO MAJ. GEN. DIX:—

This evening at about 9.30 P. M., at Ford's Theatre, the President, while sitting in his private box, with Mrs. Lincoln, Mrs. Harris and Major Rathbun, was shot by an assassin who suddenly entered the box and approached behind the President.

The assassin then leaped upon the stage brandishing a large dagger or knife, and made his escape in the rear of the Theatre.

The pistol ball entered the back of the President's head. The wound is mortal.

About the same hour, an assassin, whether the same or not, entered Mr. Seward's apartment, and under pretence of having a prescription, was shown to the Secretary's sick chamber.

The assassin immediately rushed to the bed and inflicted two or three stabs on the throat and two on the face.

To-day's telegrams states that President Lincoln died this morning at 7.22 o'clock, and that Secretary Seward is also dead.

Wilkes Booth, the actor, with an accomplice, are the assassins.

Directives are on their tracks.

The one that stabbed Secretary Seward also stabbed his son, who is not expected to live.

Boston, April 17. Mobile was captured on the evening of the 9th, without much resistance, after opening fire.

The following despatch has been received:—

WASHINGTON, April 15th, 11.50 A. M.—A man said to Surratt, the supposed assassin of Secretary Seward, has just been taken up Pennsylvania Avenue, surrounded by a large cavalry guard and followed by an immense crowd of people.

He was caught in Maryland.

Major Seward will be sent for to identify him. As far as can be ascertained he is the man.

Glad 149.

April 18. The assassins of the President and Secretary Seward have not yet been arrested.

Evidence accumulates that it was a deep laid conspiracy in which not less than six persons were engaged, and contemplated the murder of the President, Secretary of State, Vice-President Johnson, Gen. Grant, and two other members of the Cabinet.

Great preparations are being made for the obsequies to-morrow.

Gen. Johnson has surrendered his army to Sherman.

Steamship City of Baltimore with one day later news has arrived.

The Portuguese Government has acceded to the demand of the American Minister and removed the commander of Fort Belem who fired on Niagara.

Consols 90½ to 90¾ for money. No change in market.

Gold 146.

The New York World, alludes to the departure of Prof. Agassiz and party—among whom was Mr. Hartt, son of the Principal of the High School, city of St. John, in the following terms:—

"On Tuesday Professor Agassiz, with a company of distinguished savans—sailed from this port in the new steamer Colorado, for Brazil. The party consists of Professor and Mrs. Agassiz, Dr. E. B. Coting, (the curator of the Lowell Institute) and Mrs. Coting, Mr. Burkhart, artist to the expedition, and Messrs. Anthony, Sawyer, Hartt, St. John, Allen, and James, assistants. The Colorado will take the party round the Horn to Rio Janeiro, and at this place they will pass a few weeks in resting and making preparations for their arduous duties. The professor and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. Coting, and Mr. Burkhart, will proceed to the Amazon, and be conveyed up that river to the Andes in boats; and they will ultimately cross over to Lima. Each assistant has his special department in obtaining specimens and Rio Janeiro is to be made the point of separation for the search for these. The principle object of the Professor's is to test the glacial theory advanced by him. The prominent incidental result, as we have stated, will consist in securing for the Massachusetts Museum of Comparative Zoology the most extensive collection of tropical specimens that has yet been gathered. The specimens will be, so far as possible, brought home in duplicate, in order to carry out a system of exchange with other museums, so that the Massachusetts Museum will be benefited in double or even greater degree. The trustees are enabled to spend $24,000 in the present year out of the interest accruing from various endowments; and in addition to this, Mr.

Nathaniel Thayer, of Boston, has offered to defray all the expenses of the party exploration. It is thought that his majesty, Don Pedro the Emperor of Brazil, will extend to the party the peculiar facilities in furtherance of their search inasmuch as he has already displayed great interest in the museum, substantially expressing it by forwarding several hundred very fine specimens."

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal says:—The number of pensioners is increasing with startling rapidity, no less than 13,724 having been placed on the rolls during the year 1864. The number of invalid pensioners at the commencement of the present war was 29,422 and the number of widows pensioned was 36,988—making a total of 66,390. It is not unreasonable to conjecture that even should the war terminate within the present year, the number of pensioners will reach 100,000. Based on the present expenditure of $8,000,000 for 66,390 pensioners. The annual cost is estimated at upwards of $10,000,000.

The Detroit Board of Trade have invited the Boards of Trade of all the Loyal States and the British American Provinces to meet in Convention at Detroit on the second Tuesday in July, to discuss the following subjects:—viz: Commerce, Finance, Communications of transit from the West to the seaboard; Reciprocal Trade between the United States and the British Provinces, and such other business as may come before the Convention, not of a purely local or political character.

We presume that our own Board of Trade has received an invitation. Should it decide upon sending a Delegation to Detroit, we hope the gentlemen for this duty will be taken from the ablest members of the Chamber. The movement is an excellent one, and ought to meet a handsome response.

ST. ANDREWS, APRIL 19, 1865.

DEATH OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN.—The telegraph on Saturday last, communicated the unexpected and melancholy intelligence that President Lincoln was shot by a young man named J. Wilkes Booth, while in his box, at Ford's Theatre, Washington, the previous night. The intelligence was received with profound regret throughout the Provinces. The assassin made his escape, at the time, but it is to be hoped will be arrested, if he is not already. About the same time and perhaps by the same man or an accomplice, Secretary Seward and his son were stabbed, his son died in a few minutes, and it is said Mr. Seward cannot recover.

From reports since received, it appears that there was a conspiracy to murder the whole Cabinet! What a horrid state of society this indicates at Washington; where, it is evident, the President was not as safe as he was while visiting Richmond! The news will be received with regret by every right thinking man in the Mother Country. We refer our readers to the details of this horrid murder in another column.

The nomination of a candidate to fill the seat rendered vacant by Mr. Gillmor's accepting the office of Provincial Secretary, will take place to-morrow, Thursday, at the Court House. From authentic reports it appears that there will not be any opposition, and that the County will be rejoiced at having an Executive Councillor and Prov. Secretary, as one of its representatives. It is believed that the Election will be decided by a show of hands.

THE SEXTONS.—Their Worship have been busily engaged with the County business for several days, and a large amount of labor has been performed by a few of the magistrates in the Town and vicinity—in fact the business has increased to such an extent that it is both a tax and a labor upon the magistracy, and the pruning knife of reform, should, and no doubt will be applied ere long. As a first instalment we have the appointment of a County Auditor. The Grand Jury's Report which we will publish, is an evidence that all knowledge does lie in such bodies. There are other matters connected with the Session business, which we will refer to in our next issue.

From the telegram it will be seen that Gen. Johnson has surrendered his army to Gen. Sherman; this we suppose was done at the instance of Gen. Lee, who is desirous to save the further effusion of blood. What a terrible ordeal the United States has passed through the past four years—thousands of men and treasure have been lost, property desolated, and but the other day the President and the Secretary of State assassinated.

Vice President Johnson was sworn in President of the United States on the 15th instant, and from his address appeared to feel the responsibility of the situation. The funeral of the late President was to take place to-day.

Mr. Grant, Photograph Artist, has for sale Caricatures of the portraits of Booth, the murderer of President Lincoln. They are taken from life.

THE CONCERT to be given to-morrow, Thursday Evening, in the Town Hall, will be a deserving of patronage. The object is a laudable one—in aid of the Church Bazaar. Give them a bumper.

The Annual Election of Church Wardens and Vestrymen for the ensuing year, took place in All Saints Church on Easter Monday, when the following gentlemen were elected:—

Geo. D. Street, J. H. Whitlock, Vestrymen.

J. W. Street, H. H. Hatch, W. Whitlock, G. F. Sockney, E. Phœasant, Dr. Gove, T. A. McCurdy, L. R. Stevenson, Jas. Stinson, G. S. Gimmer, Henry Osborn, and M. J. C. Andrews, Vestrymen.

ITEMS.—

The Quebec News of the 10th says:—"The Hon. T. D. McGee left town last evening for Montreal, from whence he will leave for Port and on Thursday evening, to take passage in the steamer Nova Scotia, on Saturday the 25th inst. Mr. McGee will visit his native land, and be present at the opening of the Dublin International Exhibition."

Phlegging has been commenced in many parts of Nova Scotia.

The Unionist says the price of butter in Halifax has fallen from 25 cents in 14 cents per pound, and nearly all kinds of farm produce has come down with a crash.

The Montreal Witness says, that some of our man factories are dismissing all their hands on account of the gloomy prospects of business, and others are working partially.

It is understood that the sum voted by the Canadian Parliament to indemnify the St. Albans banks for the money taken from them by the raiders, and returned to them by Mr. Lathams, has been handed over to the banks.

A few days ago in the city of Hamilton, Canada West, an individual was sentenced, under the new act of Parliament, to six months imprisonment with hard labor, and a fine of $200, with further imprisonment until the amount is paid, for the crime of "criminally" that is, enlisting recruits for the Federal army.

Friends of the Government say the latter intend to proceed with Western Extension as a government work, and issue Treasury notes to pay for it. They will also seek to bring about Free Trade among the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland, which they term a "Commercial Union." [Telegraph]

It appears that the imports of Nassau—the haunt of the blockade runners—rose from £274,584 in 1861, to £4,295,816 in 1863. The value of land in the city and suburbs has risen from 300 to 400 per cent. and in good business situations much more.

The colleries of Great Britain number 3,160. The amount of coal mined in 1863 was 66,292,216 tons. Over one-fourth of this amount is obtained from Durham and Northumberland districts, one-eighth from Scotland and but little from Ireland.

We learn (says the Fredericton Farmer of Monday) that part of the Shuonogo Mill, and the bridge over that stream on the mill route to Woodstock, were carried away yesterday afternoon, by the breaking up of a reservoir of water some distance up the stream.

London Owl says that the celebrated Sane diamond has been purchased by a firm of London jewellers for Sir James F. Jejeeb, at a price of £20,000. This historical stone was lost in the possession of the Deedoff family.

A rebel woman, who says she is a niece of James Madison, lately proposed, in the Mobile News, that the young ladies of the South should give their hair, to be sold in Paris, and the proceeds used to pay the Confederate debt. She thought there was nearly her enough in the South to cover the whole debt.

Gelagher's evening stock exchange is to monopolize a whole building in New York costing $10,000. The building, when completed, will have a billiard room, containing eight tables, besides a coffee room, and a bar room.

Sam Brannan, who is one of the richest men in California, on receipt of the news in San Francisco that Charleston had fallen, held a private celebration and had a band of guns fired under his windows. About $2,500 worth of glass was broken by this firing but he paid the damage without a murmur.
