SLEIGH BELLS.

The night is starry, cold and still, The moon is in its glory,
And rising up to meet the blue
The mountain heads gleam hoary
As up the bill and down the dale, And dashing through the dingle all overgrown with evergreens, The merry sleigh bells jingle

Fair cheeks outredden now the rose And beauty's eyes beam brighter; More music maidens' voices make, And happy hearts grow lighter For life itself is more alive, As, every nerve a-tingle, The blood goes dancing through the veins, When merry sleigh bells jingle.

What though the Winter-King has bound The earth with icy tether? Love makes it summer in the heart; And cuddled close together agliding o'er the frozen ground, Two souls may meet and mingle Ah! many a winsome wife if one When merry sleigh bells jingle!

Old memories stir in aged breasts, Though eyes through tears are twinkling As, in the frosty night is heard Afar the silver tinkling; And grandma, sitting snug at home Beside the glowing ingle, Grows young and is a girl again When merry sleigh bells jingle.

A correspondent of the New York Sun urnishes the following: - > ever saw call a bull moose within rifle range. Calling the moose is about the surest and easiest way of getting a shot at that saga-cious animal, as it takes the most expert and patient manœuvring on the part of the hunhim at his own strategy, which is his in-stinctive keeping of his trail always with the wind blowing from the source of possible danger. In the nutting season, however, when the cows are lowing their lone calls on the hills, the cunning old monarch of the wilderness, while not abandoning his natural caution, permits himself to be more easily undone. The Micmac Indians of New Brunswick are, beyond doubt, the most skilful moose callers on the continent, just as the Indiane and half-breeds of Manitoba are the most in-created around Kensington and Margate, as well as about town, by certain reports which have been put in circulation relative to new and important evidence which has turned up in the Millman case. It will be remembered

THE PROGRESS OF THE TRIAL Jabez Tuplin, the brother of the murdered girl, testified that on the night of the 28th of June, wood had been stolen from the wood in the neighborhood of the Mud road. Con siderable effort, was, I understand, made to discover who the party was who took the wood, but without success. Now one of the reports to which I have referred in opening is to the effect that a man has come forward and states that he cut the wood on the night in question, and that while so doing he saw the girl passed down the Mud Road in company with some fellows and that Millman was not one of them. Another of the reports is to the effect that evidence is forthcoming to show that James Somers, the brother-in law of the murdered girl, and who swore he saw Millman sitting on the roadside near Tuplin's house disguised, on the night of the murder, was at a lobster factory at New London all that night. The Herald correspondent called at Mr. Hodgson's office yeserday afternoon to see what truth there was n these rumors. He was informed that these reports had reached the office and that they had received letters bearing upon them, but further information was refused, your correspondent being informed that would tell what truth was in the reports.

It would be seen from these figures, therefore, that allowing for the difference in the ments of the two years, the last year made quite as good a showing as far as the collection of taxes was concerned, as the previous one. It was a crying shame, howfelt that the Council would support the Treasurer in his endeavors to have all the Artillery, who has been visiting British Colarrears now due collected. Of course there umbia, states that "O" battery stationed at arrears now due collected. Of course there were cases where it would be a hardship to enforce the payment summarily; but on the list of defaulters to-day there were men occupying official positions and having good salaries, and also estates owned by non-residents who were obstacles in the way of the city's progress. He sought his room and shut himself in from the sight of every human eye, save that of his valet, and for nearly a week yielded to the misery and pain that almost crushed him.

His trust in humanity was well nigh destroyed, for he had unlimited confidence in the friend of his school days, and now to discover such cold-blooded treachery, such malice and vindictiveness, in one whom he had so trusted, was like removing some strong foundation from his life, while the loss of the fair girl whom he had literally worshipped, well-nigh dethroned

Acting upon the impulse of the moment he packed a few articles of wearing apparel in his portmanteau, and, without telling even his valet of his intention, took the first train for London that he could catch.

Here for weeks he wandered hither and thither, fluctuating between his club and the hotel, growing more and more restless and unhappy, and more rebellious against the ruthless fate that had blasted all his hopes.

At length he decided to go still farther away, and strive to lose himself in the excitement of visiting new scenes. Accordingly he returned to Linden Grange, shut up the house, dismissing all the servants save one to remain with the housekeeper and the gardner, then, turning his back upon his beautiful home once more, be-

Wherever he went, whatever he did, one fair, beautiful face haunted him continually-one sweet, loved voice forever rang in his ears, torturing him with that last, mournful farewell which had nearly broken his heart, "My love, my love-for such you will be till I die-good-by forever."

When he lay down to sleep at night he seemed to hear Pearle's despairing tones repeating it; it haunted his dreams, torturing all his sleeping hours. When he arose in the morning, it greeted him like a knell for the dead, until his brain was to the verge of insanity.

If not cured, complications multiply and Consumption of the Lungs, Skin Diseases, Heart Disease, Rhoumatism, Kidney Disease, or other grave maindies are quite liable to set in and, sooner or later, induce a fatal termination.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery acts powerfully upon the Liver, and through that great blood-purifying organ, cleaness the system of all blood-taints and imputities, from whatever cause arising. It is equally efficacious in acting upon the Kidneys and other exerctory organs, cleansing, strongthening, and healing their diseases. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it promotes digestion and nutrition, thereby building up both flesh and strongth. In malarial districts, this wonderful medicine hus gained great celebrity in curing Fover and Ague, Chills and Fever, Dumb Ague, and kindred discuses.
