Legal Decisions

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office—whether directed to his name or another's or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay up all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the Post Office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

GENTLEMEN—Last spring I had a severe attack of the MEASLES. After the acute stage passed, and I was supposed to be convalescent, I did not gain as I ought. With NO APETITE, and lost with a BAD COUGH, day after day, I continued to run down.
My friends feared I was in a DECLINE, and would never be any better. I was much reduced when I began the use of SKODA'S DISCOVERY. Before I had taken one bottle, I was greatly improved. I continued its use, and am now in my USUAL HEALTH, thanks wholly to SKODA'S DISCOVERY.

Respectfully,

POETRY.

The Fellow That Means What He Says.

There is one whom you ever may trust,
As you travel o'er life's varied ways,
Who will strive to be honest and just—
He's the fellow who means what he says.
He is not one to lead you astray;
On his word you may always depend;
When he owes he is sure to repay,
And he never goes back on a friend.
What he says to the lat is all;
What he holds to his heart is the truth;
All temptation he will be defy
Who will keep to this rule in his youth.
To be true—all is there—to be true!
You will find in the end that it pays;
Search your heart, and be certain that you
Are the fellow who means what he says.

SELECT STORY.

HIS OPPORTUNITY.

BY HENRY CLEMENS PEARSON.

CHAPTER V.

"Hole in the Wall," the popular groggery of Steep street, was the evening resort of most of the able-bodied men of the settlement. The proprietor, a short, stout man of German-Irish parentage, named Pfaff, was said to be wealthy. In addition to his stock of liquors he kept a small grocery, which, occupying the room directly in front of the groggery, gave ample opportunity for sly drinks. His customers embraced most of the adults of the village, and indeed some of the children might be so called, as they invariably tasted the beer which they carried home by the pitcherful. Pfaff was thought a very jolly fellow—a trifle obstinate in his opinions, but generally as fond of friendly converse as he was of American dimes. He was ever ready to drink with his guests, at their expense, and on rare occasions "stood treat" himself. Not only in the mill village, but in the town above, Pfaff was noted for the excellence of his drinks. For this reason numbers of the liquor-loving folk from the upper settlement frequently dropped in to taste "Jacob's Best," and the fact was enlarged upon by the liquor-dealer with loud-voiced pride to the evening loungers.

The laborer, in a factory where the water is poor, is like the desert traveler, often morbidly thirsty. The wells in the file works furnished water that was brackish and hardly fit to drink. The homes on Steep Street were not better off. The people used the water for washing, but no more than was absolutely necessary. In drinking it was frequently neutralized by a portion from the family bottle, in the proportion of one part of water to three parts of liquor, and sometimes the hurtful water was entirely left out. It had naturally come to pass that a special prejudice existed against it in the minds of the villagers. If any one was sick, it was laid to the water. Every ill seemed to have its origin in the unwholesome furnishings of the wells. Had it been within the bounds of reason, there is cause to believe that most cases of delirium tremens would have been traced directly to "bad water." This being the case, it was not strange that Jacob Pfaff grew rich and bloated; that men, women, and children drank his beer and other liquors; that the traces of excessive drinking were on masculine countenances, otherwise intelligent and manly; on feminine faces that, free from it, would have been womanly and attractive.

Pfaff had no sign over his door, but he had many a sign through the hamlet. What were the old hats stuffed in broken windows, the filthy door yards, the noisome fumes, the bloated fathers and mothers, the rickety children, the rags, vice, and squalor, but Jacob Pfaff's signs? The people did not read them thus, however. Their thought was "the water is bad; we must drink something."

It happened one evening, as Chamberlain was returning from work, he was overtaken by one of the grinding-room hands with whom he had often spoken. Pleasanter and better informed than most of the men, he had taken pains to give timely and valuable hints about the work. These he appreciated about the work. These he appreciated about the work. These he appreciated about the work.

Chamberlain was young and fiery; a threat was to him like a whip to an untamed horse; his pride was roused; he despised bar-room rows, but he could not allow a bully to insult him thus. His friend whispered, "take your beer, don't be a fool." The younger drew nearer to see the young upstart punished for his insolence.

At this stage of affairs, a back door of the bar opened and Sam Putnam came in.

"Hollo! what's this?" he inquired, his eyes lighting up with interest.

"Why," said Jacob, "this young fellow says my beer ain't fit for swill, and he's got me to draw it, and now is goin' off without drinkin' it."

"Did he pay for it?" asked Sam, throwing one leg over the bar.

"Yes."

"Well, it's his then, ain't it?"

"Yes; but—"

"Then I don't see as it's any of your business what he does with it," was the cool reply.

"But I intend to make it some of my business," replied Pfaff, excitedly.

"I don't allow no man to throw mud on me and then rub it in this sort of way."

"If you touch that young fellow," said Sam, measuring his words slowly.

"I'll throw you out of the window into the river."

"Well, let him get his beer off my counter, and out of my glass," sputtered the other; but Gaffney had attended to that, having quietly finished the troublesome liquor.

As Chamberlain continued his walk with his friend, the latter began to question him as to the cause of his sudden aversion to the glass of liquor.

At first the young man's replies were unsatisfactory; he gave no reason for his strange conduct, but on being pressed, he said:

"Did you hear Gaffney speak to me?"

"Yes."

"Well, he said when he saw me with a glass of liquor in my hand, 'now I know that you are one of us'; that is what the trouble was. 'One of us'; what did that mean? It didn't mean that I was one of the workmen who could hold his own at the forge, or on a grind-stone, or over the furnace. It meant that I was one of the drinkers."

One of the men who go on a spree every Saturday night, who can't live from one week's end to the other without drink; who are a curse to themselves and their families. That was what it meant; I saw it all in a flash, and I could no more sign such a compact by drinking that glass than I could commit murder."

"You are excited," said his companion, in a quaver muffled tone.

"Perhaps so; but if I am, I am sure of this, that I will never taste another drop of liquor in my life. I see clearly now; there are but two sides: those who drink and those who do not, the drunken and the sober."

"You are right," replied the other, in a low voice, "keep your resolve, you have no appetite to fight; never allow it to waken."

"I am not so sure about not having any appetite. I have always been accustomed to wines, and at times, stronger liquors, and I doubt not I shall have a flight of it, but I have tasted my last drop."

"Would to God, I could say as much," acknowledged Temple, with a groan, and at once Chamberlain, who had been engrossed with his own resolve, awoke to the struggles of another.

"Come up to my room," he said, drawing the other's arm through his. Reaching the tiny apartment, he threw open the blinds so that the evening breeze came in and cooled their heated brows.

"Were you in earnest in what you said?" he asked.

"Yes, but it is of no use. I am made of weaker stuff than most men. Over and over again have I resolved to stop drinking, but I can't do it," was the reply.

"Why don't you sign the pledge?" asked the young man.

"I have, several times."

"Do it again; make up your mind and stick to it."

"No use," was the reply.

To the best of his ability his friend cheered him up, trying hard to give him more faith in his own power of resistance. Finally Temple said:

"There is but one thing that can save me, the religion of Christ. I was well taught when I was young; I know the way, but strange though it may seem to you, I am not willing to give up to it."

What could Chamberlain say? Could he advise others to flee from the wrath to come while he stood still and braved it?

Surely not. Yet his heart was stirred by this man's trouble; he longed to help him. It was like watching a man drown without stretching out a hand to save him.

When his visitor had departed, Chamberlain did not go down to supper. Instead he sat alone and commended long with himself.

Finally, as the town-clock struck eleven, he arose, went down stairs, and out into the night. A storm was brewing, and he had no doubt that it would bring him to the lodgings of his friend. He found that he had not yet retired. His message, whatever it was, brought the tears to the other's eyes, and soon two earnest souls were kneeling side by side, entreating forgiveness and cleansing at the throne of grace.

That night Tom Chamberlain and John Temple began life anew. The glorious surrender had been made. Two hearts had been won; two who had, but a few hours before, been identified with the sin and misery of Steep Street, of whom the drunkards could say, "you are one of us," had crossed the line, and were rejoicing in the love of a new and all-powerful master. With great joy in their hearts, they communed one with the other, knowing that they would be "epistles, known and read of all," in the factory and out. The test of true and right living would be most rigidly applied to them. It must be a whole consecration or none at all. Without discussing the question, Temple swept the pipes and tobacco from his shelf and threw them out of the window.

Not noting the flight of time, the two friends sat and planned for the future. The fields were white with harvest, and they were the laborers. It was a responsibility to which too few young men awoke. They felt their own weakness—their own inability to cope with the powers of darkness so stoutly entrenched in the valley below—yet to them was the promise, "Lo, I am with you always."

The first gray tinge of morning was showing itself in the east when Chamberlain went back to his room. As the day broke he sat at the open window—very happy, very peaceful. He felt that the knowledge of his sin, the burden that he had carried about ever since he awakened to the condition of Steep Street was now gone. Like a runner freed from a load, he had such freedom as only Christ can give. As yet he had sent no word to his friend in the far away city home. Perhaps it had been in part because there was nothing to tell but what was bound not to divulge. Now, however, he had news that he knew would make Marshall happier than any other message that he could send, so he sat down and wrote, in a few simple sentences, of his decision, of his great joy, and of the friend who had at the same time been born into the Kingdom with him. In conclusion, he earnestly asked him to remember them both in his prayers, as they sorely needed wisdom. This was enclosed in a letter to Dr. Ponsbury, and mailed at once.

"Good land! Have you had a fortune fall to you?" asked Mrs. Bowman as she came into the kitchen with a very happy look.

"I guess so; a fortune that you can have too if you wish," was the reply.

"Well, if there is anything good that's free, I'd like to know it for I'm right there," said the landlady, energetically shaking the fire.

"Salvation's free," said the young man.

"Look here, young man, I ain't much on religion, and I spose you know it, but I don't never allow nobody to make fun of it in my presence. Joke just as much as you please in the right way, and I'll enjoy it when I have time; but don't make fun of things that some folks respect."

"God forbid that I should do anything of the kind. I was in earnest, for last night I gave my heart to the Lord, and I believe he has washed away my sins," replied Chamberlain earnestly.

"Do you mean to say that you have honestly and truly experienced religion?" was the astonished query.

"Yes."

"Well, I never. I hope it will last. It's dreadful to be a backslider; that's what I am. You never get no comfort out of life while you're a backslider. I ain't been a happy Christian for a good many years, not since Rob was born; and I'm sure I've suffered enough on account of my shortcomings. I've got so hardened that I durst not pray; but Mr. Chamberlain, won't you pray for Rob?"

"There was a pathos, an entreaty in the voice that went to the young convert's heart. Poor, erring Rob! The only son of the widow Bowman. Basely led, full of good resolutions, abounding in broken promises; the tool of the smarter loungers in the village.

"We can both pray," said he, and they knelt on the floor and prayed.

First, Chamberlain offered a faltering petition for the erring son, and the strong muscular woman by his side sobbed like a child, and added a few words of her own at the close.

"Why, I don't know; I had hardly thought."

"I thought 'cause you knelt down maybe you was a Methodist; you know the Congregationalists always stand up when they pray."

Not feeling like discussing the different customs of denominations just then, Chamberlain was silent, and breakfast being ready, they sat down to eat, after which the late-ness of the hour compelled him to hurry away to the mill.

CHAPTER VI.

On an elevated plateau overlooking the factory street was an old-fashioned mansion, surrounded by ample, well-kept grounds. The general atmosphere of the place was that of respectable old age. A departed generation built the house, laid out the grounds, planted the trees, sowed the hollyhocks, and no modernism had re-arranged their works. Between the estate and the straggling line of tenements a high board fence capped with spikes, was erected as a "thus far and no farther" to the juvenile apple hunters of the village below.

The estate was owned and occupied by a maiden lady, Miss Louise Whittier. Like it, she belonged to the past. The last of the Whittiers, she held scrupulously to the faded customs of her race, as she did to the rusty silks and bombazines that filled her attic trunks. None of the Steep Street people knew her, and few of the dwellers in the upper town were at all intimate, although her wealth and blue blood entitled her to more than usual consideration. She attended the North church, of which Mr. Lumson was deacon. She was not, however, a member of the "Ladies' Charitable Society," "The Woman's Temperance Club," or "The Home Missionary Bureau." She was, therefore, to many of the good ladies a comparative stranger. Nevertheless, in spite of her negative qualities, Miss Whittier gave largely to the charities above named and was regularly at church.

It was with a knowledge of most of these facts that Chamberlain lifted the brass dragon's head knocker on the front door of the Whittier mansion, and dropped it with a clang that smote upon the quiet interior like an alarm of fire. There was a bustle within, a glimmer, as if a lamp were lighted to banish the fast-gathering shadows, a rustic, the door opened and the lady of the house stood before the young man.

She was tall, with lovely white hair, a plain, shrewd face, and gray eyes that had the least glint of suspicion in them.

Raising his hat, he said:
"Is this Miss Whittier?"

"It is."

"Can I see you for a few moments?"

The lady gave him a quick, keen glance. He had used the usual introductory phrase of the book agent.

"Pardon me, but have you anything to sell?" she said.

"No, madam," replied he quietly, although with a flush.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JULY 14, 1893.

The Defective Classes.

Bulletin No. 16 of the Canadian census, while possibly not as useful as some others, shows a great deal of work and presents some interesting statistics. It relates to the defective classes, viz: the insane, blind and deaf-mute.

The number of insane in Canada in 1891 was 13,335 an increase of 3,932 in twenty years. Nova Scotia has 1,373 of these, or an increase of only 119 in the twenty years. Quebec's increase was 1,200 and Ontario's 1,800. Of the insane born in Canada, 5,837 were born Canadian and 28 insane per ten thousand of population, as compared with 33 in the United States, 37 in Ireland, 32 each in England and Scotland, etc. In fact Canada's proportion of insane is smaller than that of any other country in the world where statistics are given, except Germany, where the proportion is only 24 in ten thousand.

Of deaf-mutes Canada has 4,819, an increase of 2,030 in twenty years. Of these, 3,598 are natives and 1,221 are foreign born. As to their educational status 2,759 can neither read nor write.

The blind in Canada number 3,568, an increase in twenty years of 792. Nova Scotia has 400 blind and New Brunswick 262. Of Canada's blind, 2,007 are natives and 1,561 foreign born. The need of educational effort is apparent when it is found that 2,464 can neither read nor write, and lack of education makes the blind one of the most helpless of beings.

It is amazing to find what occupations the trained sightless ones of Canada are filling. The difficulties to be surmounted in their becoming physicians have been overcome by 5; one is a stenographer and three more are civil engineers. Perhaps more remarkable still is it to find that we have, among the blind laboring classes, 2 pilots, 3 sailors, 8 blacksmiths, 12 carpenters and four painters. It is wonderful how successfully other faculties can be developed so as to make the loss of sight almost no bar to success to any walk of life.

A Royal Wedding.

London was on a fete on Thursday last on the occasion of the marriage of the Duke of York, Prince George of Wales, and Princess Victoria Mary Teck, which took place at noon in the chapel royal, St James Palace. The populace turned out in immense numbers to cheer the royal couple upon their return from the ceremony to Buckingham Palace, and walked on their way from Buckingham Palace to the Great Eastern railway station on their way to Southampton. The enthusiasm of the people evidently shows that they look favorably upon the young couple who at some future time may become King and Queen of the British Empire. Every true British subject, whether of British or colonial birth, will join heartily in wishing them long life and happiness, and peace and prosperity to the nation at large.

In the evening London is reported to have outdone itself in a blaze of illumination on all the principal buildings in the city, in celebration of the happy event.

Business Failures.

The returns of failures in Canada for the past six months, although showing an increase of a million dollars in liabilities, bear favorable comparison with former periods. The number of failures since January 1st is 887 as against 751 the corresponding six months of last year. Total liabilities were $8,215,759 as against $7,225,238 the corresponding six months of last year.

The showing in the U. S. is poor. Liabilities this year equal $170,000,000, nearly twice as much as in 1891, two and one half times as large as in 1885, and 114,000,000 larger than in the first quarter; this year compared with last was only $4,000,000 without an increase in number of failures. There were 175 failed banks with liabilities of 43,000,000, an increase of 600 per cent. in number over last year, and more than 800 per cent. in debts.

A Nova Scotia Horse Abroad

The Boston Globe reports an exciting match race which took place at the Cotuit driving park, Cotuit, Mass., on the 4th, between Captain U. A. Hall's Dandy and D. B. Bentley's Victor. Dandy Eastmont won in three straight heats, 2:25, 2:30, 2:27. The winner was bred by Leander Shaw, of Hantsport, and sold by him to Capt. Hull. He was sired by Allie Clay (one of the Meadow stock farm Stallions, of Billtown, King's county), his dam being Topsey, also dam of Mr. Curry's Topsey's Baby. Mr. Shaw is of the well-known breeding firm of Shaw Bros., who have a large farm somewhere near Walton, Hants Co. They had an auction sale of trotting stock last fall and realized fine prices for all the stock offered, two heads going to Lynn, Mass., and it was at this sale that J. W. Currie purchased Topsey's Baby, for whom he has since been offered $450. Allie Clay has now two in the 2:30 list: Clayton, 2:21 1/2, owned by Wm. Ash, Lynn, and Dandy Eastmont, 2:25.

In an article on Dominion day, the Ottawa Journal says: "One can get rich faster in some other countries. One may starve more surely in other countries. One can rise to higher rank and honor in bigger nations. One cannot in any other nation make a living more easily, or more wholesomely. The conditions of life, education, progress, commerce and recreation can be improved in this country, greatly improved, but they are probably better for the mass of the people than the present conditions of any other country. God bless Canada."

A Splendid Record.

A PROVINCIAL INDUSTRY TREMBLES ITS BUSINESS IN THE LAST THREE MONTHS.

Some three months ago this journal informed its readers that a new provincial industry, that of the Hawker Medicine Co of St John, had completed its first quarter's business, and that its book showed a development of trade and a record of sales that was not only gratifying but really astonishing.

Another three months have now elapsed, and the company have balanced their accounts for the six months. The results show that in the last three months they have trebled the business of the first three: they have about doubled their working staff, and work has been carried on in the packers' room till 11 o'clock every night in order to fill orders promptly. From all parts of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, from Newfoundland and parts of the United States, the orders have rolled in. The business is now firmly established. The experimental stage is past. Repeat orders come in constantly, showing that where once the remedies are introduced they win permanent favors with the people, who know as soon as they have given any of them a trial that these standard remedies are all that they are claimed to be. Indeed, this last might readily be assumed with-out a trial, and judging solely from the character of the gentlemen who form the Hawker Medicine Co, as they are numbered among the leading citizens and successful business men of St John.

The Hawker Medicine company are now patenting their remedies in Great Britain and will presently extend their operations there, as well as more extensively to the United States. About the middle of this month Thomas Rankin, who so successfully introduced the Hawker remedies in Newfoundland this spring, will start and traverse the western part of Canada, from Montreal to Vancouver, in the interests of the company. With such a record as that of their first six months now closed, the Hawker Medicine Co. are evidently destined to achieve a great success. They control standard remedies, which have received the endorsement of leading physicians in Canada and the United States, as well as the fervent praise of sorely afflicted people who have by their means been restored to health.

Their place of business is at 104, Prince William St., St John, N. B., where they have the most extensive and elaborately fitted up premises of the kind in the lower provinces. William Hawker, the original inventor of the remedies, has been in charge in St John for 30 years, and had long prior to the value of the different remedies before the present company was organized. It is with pleasure that this journal records the company's wonderful success.

The Maritime Christian Endeavor societies will hold their fourth annual convention at Halifax, from 1st to 3rd of August. The previous conventions have been full of interest, and it is expected that this one will be even more interesting as the movement has greatly increased each year, and there will probably be a much larger number present. Each society is to be represented by two delegates, whose names are to be sent to George W. Woods, P. O. Box, 532, Halifax, as soon as possible. We are advised that it would be well for all who intend going, to send names, whether delegates or not.

The Windsor and Annapolis railway has made the following resolution:— "Those who have paid one first class fare going to the lake and back for one third of one first-class fare. The steamer Bridgewater will issue return tickets for one fare—$2.00.

The meetings will be held in St Matthew's Presbyterian church. The committee of the local union are busily engaged making all necessary arrangements, and we have no doubt will be well able to entertain their fellow Endeavorers.

Good Templars in Session.

The Grand Lodge of the I. O. G. T. order is in session in this city yesterday and today. The Grand Secretary's report showed there were now 122 working lodges in this jurisdiction. The present membership is 5,263, showing a loss of 888 members during the year. The loss is accounted for by the fact that little or no agency work was attempted.

The lodges over which the Grand Lodge has jurisdiction own property to value of $14,916. The officers elected for the year are: G. C. T.—B. D. Rogers, Stellarton. G. C.—Rev. J. W. Crosby, Amherst. G. V.—Mrs Kate O'Connell, Halifax. G. S. J. T.—J. A. Simpson, Amherst. G. Sec.—J. B. Black, Amherst. G. Treas.—C. I. Wolfe, Wolfville. G. Chap.—A. B. Fletcher, Truro. G. Marshall—John Murphy, Windsor. G. G.—Sarah Connolly, Truro. G. Sentinel—A. Arthur, Amherst. A. S.—H. D. Ross, Amherst. G. Mess.—Jas. Clarke, Halifax. G. P. C. T.—B. B. Ducaan, Grand Pre.

A very pleasing feature of the afternoon's entertainment was a visit from Minnieha Lodge of Juvenile Templars, who submitted a complimentary address signed by Harry Eford, G. S., and Ben Crofton, Secretary. Mr Crofton Dickey is the Superintendent of this Lodge, and spares no pains with the children.—Acadian Recorder, July 6th.

"The Canadian Magazine" for July.

This new and most creditable Canadian periodical will maintain in its July issue the high character it has had from the first. It aims to secure interesting, instructive and timely articles of national interest rather than material which appeals merely to the lovers of artistic excellence, and it succeeds in a way gratifying to all who have a patriotic regard for the country. A popular science article of great interest is "The Birth of Lake Ontario," in which Prof. Willmott of McMaster University, shows the ancient drainage of Lakes Huron, Erie and Ontario, then river valleys, through the Hudson river to the Atlantic. Mr E. J. Toker's article, "Our Forests in Danger," is a well written, interesting and powerful appeal for systematic forest conservation. Attorney-General Longley furnishes a thoughtful article on "The Greatest Drama," the drama of each man's life. Geo. S. Ewart, Q. C., Winnipeg, the eminent counsel who defended the claim of the minority in the Manitoba school question before the supreme court, enters a powerful appeal for tolerance of faith, in his article "Fame in Schools." Rev. Prof. W. Clark's "Kingsley's Wives, Babies" is written in the charming style of that prince of Canadian literature Public School Inspector Hughes, of Toronto, in "Humor in the School Room," tells of many humorous incidents, mostly apparently of Canadian experience. "The Battle of Stony Creek," an illustrated article by E. B. Biggar, of Montreal, is a most valuable and painstaking addition to Canadian history, full of interest throughout, and much of it novel in information and treatment. Mr Tipton's "At the Mouth of the Grand" is another illustrated article, and treats artistically of the Grand River of Ontario as it appears at and before its sluggish entrance into Lake Erie. "The Automatic Maid-of-All-Work," by Mrs M. L. Campbell, of Ottawa, is very amusing, and Miss Florence Aston Fletcher's conclusion of her powerful story, "The Chamois Hunter," well maintains the interest of the first part. Altogether the number is a strong one, and will no doubt meet with a wide appreciation. The Canadian Magazine is published by the Ontario Publishing Co., Ltd., Toronto. Subscription, $2.50 per annum.

A despatch to the Halifax Herald says: "Considerable interest has been manifested in the two questions which the mayor of Annapolis put before the people at last Friday's election. One, whether the town should have a Scott Act Inspector; the other, should the town purchase the electric plant at the figure of $7,500, as offered by the company. Mayor Gillis put the first question to the people for the reason that there were two petitions, for and against the appointment of an inspector; the signatures of which people represented about an equal amount of votes. The council were equally divided on the question, and he did not want to put expenses on the town if they did not wish it. The other question, of course, meant heavy taxation if adopted. Quite a large number of citizens attended a meeting at the academy of music to discuss the questions. The sentiment was strongly in favor of a Scott Act Inspector, and not to purchase the electric plant at present. Notwithstanding this at the poll the vote to have an inspector was lost by a majority of 21, while the vote to purchase the electric plant was carried by a majority of four."

Tales of a Garrison Town.

This is the title of an interesting work from the combined pens of Arthur Wentworth Eaton and Craven Longstroth Betts, issued by a U. S. publishing house. The Toronto Weekly says of it:—"No Nova Scotian fail to recognize the faithfulness of description and portraiture which mark the well told 'Tales of a Garrison Town.' From the fine relation of generous and chivalrous self-denial by which 'Crossway' saved his friend; through the romance of 'The Fall of the D'Arays'; the boisterous humor of the 'Rev. Washington Ham's Triumph' and 'The Corporal's Trousers'; the graphic and stirring strength of 'Court Martial'; and the touching pathos of 'A Soldier's Funeral,' the reader will be led at a pace that never wearies, but on the contrary is bracing and exhilarating. Our only regret on closing the pages of these bright, typical and enjoyable Canadian stories, is that our country has lost these clever sons in whose work she cannot, however, lose her pride."

Price—Paper cover, 50c.; bound in cloth, $1.25. By an arrangement with the publishers, we can offer the book to all paid up subscribers to the ACADIAN for 40c. and $1 per copy according to binding. On receipt of amount, a copy will be sent to any address in Canada or the United States, postpaid.

Physicians in cholera districts state that where there is no indigestion there will be no cholera. K. D. C. will cure your indigestion and make you cholera-proof.

Marriage De Convenance.

"Dear beloved, we are gathered together here in the sight of God, and in the presence of this company to join together this man and woman in holy matrimony."

The minister's voice penetrates the spaces of the church, its monotonous accents echoing from the chancel, nave and choir.

The group about the altar stir expectantly. Rich silks and satins rustle. Jewels sparkle in the dim, cold light that struggles through the Gothic windows.

From somewhere out of the shadows of the church rumbles the deep undertone of the organ, and, wavering above it, vague harmonies come and go like echoes from a celestial choir.

The minister's calm eyes are upon them. "I charge you both as you will answer at the dreadful day of judgement, when the secrets of all hearts shall be disclosed, that if either of you know any impediment why you may not be lawfully joined together in matrimony, you do now confess it."

There comes a stifled, choking sound like the ghost of a sob. The minister pauses. The fashionable men and women about him are motionless.

They had heard nothing. The bride's eyes were dry and clear; the groom's eyes remained fixed on the altar.

They had heard nothing. A moment later the words that join the man and woman have been uttered. The mother smiles proudly. Her fondest wish has been realized. It is the season's noblest match.

The organ breaks forth into a joyous peal. The bridal party passes down the aisle. Relatives and friends press close behind, eager to congratulate the pair. The vestibule rings with mingled exclamations and happy laughter.

As the groom turns, smiling at some passing word, his eyes detect a slender figure in black, standing in the shadow. Only an instant—then the party presses on and out of the church.

Amidst a confusion of farewells the bride and groom drive away. The bride gently waves her hand to the group at the church. The groom leans back and rests his head against the hand-omely upholstered cushion.

Then a brief silence. "What is it, Ernest? You seem worried." The bride lays her jewelled hand half caressingly on his arm.

"Nothing—the heat—the flowers—a headache—it will pass away." He leans forward to avoid her glance, gazing across the fields where the ripe grain tosses and rolls.

The sunshine blinds him. He closes his eyes. The bright fields, the hot, dusty road, and the dazzling sky give way to shadows deep and sombre. The rumble of the carriage wheels expands into fluted organ tones. The horse's hoof beat out the stately measures of the grand old wedding march.

His heart contracts. A sense of suffocation comes over him. A woman's name rises instinctively to his lips. "Ernest, how dull and stupid you are. You have spoken scarcely a word—and this is our wedding day."

THE WHITE RIBBON.

Next meeting in Temperance Hall, Thursday, July 20th, at 3.30 P. M. The meetings are always open to any who wish to become members.

Two men stopped at a fruit dealer's. Said one: "What is the price of strawberries?" "Twenty cents a basket."

"Twenty cents a basket? You'll have to sell them to rich folks. I can't afford them. The old woman will have to do without strawberries this time. Come along, Jerry; let's go and take a drink."

They started off for the bar-room, and if they spent any less than the price of two boxes of strawberries, they went home it was a wonder. A drinker and a "good fellow" can afford to spend money in treating men who don't care a rap about him, when he "can't afford it."

Consider the enormous amount of valuable time wasted in and around saloons, fully one-half as much as is spent in useful labor.

You can generally tell by a man's tracks which way he is going. If they point toward the saloon he is not on his way to heaven.

Consider that nine-tenths of all the money spent for drink comes from the pockets of the laboring men, and that this is a large part of all the money they earn.

M. Pasteur states that, when bitten by a mad dog, a man who habitually uses intoxicating spirits is more difficult to cure than a temperate man. Yes, and when bitten by any disease.

The midnight attempt to blow up, by dynamite, the houses of citizens of Muscatine, Iowa, who had tried to enforce the laws against liquor-selling, reveals a malignancy such as no legitimate business could evoke.

The other day Mr Gladstone referred to the national vice of Britain in his speech at Liverpool, and made an appeal to the people that has attracted great attention. He said:—"Let us all carry with us, deeply stamped upon our hearts and minds, a sense of shame for the great plague of drunkenness—(hear, hear)—which goes through the land sapping and undermining character, breaking up the families, oftentimes choosing for its victims, not the men or the women originally the worst, but persons of strong susceptibility and open in special respects to temptation."

This great plague and curse, gentlemen, let us all remember, is a national curse, calamity and scandal. (Loud and prolonged cheers.) If we have a high place among the nations of the world in more respects than one, I am afraid it must be admitted that one of the points in which we occupy a very high place is "in respect to the habit and use of intoxication. Gentlemen, I believe in no place has stronger special force been made to meet this mischief than in Liverpool. I see, for instance, that a benevolent and enlightened scheme of coffee houses—places of innocent amusement and refreshment—has been projected here, judging from what I have heard from time to time with the greatest energy and effect, I wish we could all of us take it into our minds, for surely there is hardly one amongst us that has not seen in individual cases the pernicious result to which this habit unfortunately leads us, that we should all carry with us individually a deep and adequate sense of the mischief, and an earnest intention to do what in us lies, each man within his sphere, for the purpose of mitigating and of removing it. (Cheers.)

Another effort to unite Christian voters against our common enemy, the saloon, has its birthplace in Normal, Ill., and is known as the "Independent Christian Voters' League of America," incorporated December 3, 1892. The members of this organization pledge themselves to vote always and only for candidates who are known to be honest, and who themselves are opposed to the saloon in all its forms, "reserving the right of individual preference." We welcome this and any other effort which tends to unite our Christian forces against the saloon. And it follows as the night the day that the voter who honestly wishes to free our country from the domination of the liquor power, will learn that the candidates of the Prohibition party are the only ones who will uphold his principles and for whom he can consistently cast his vote. That this new Christian Voters' League may prove a compromise, tending to a complete conversion, is the wish of the mothers, wives and daughters of the white-ribbon host.

Scraps for Odd Moments.

The height of folly—5 feet 3 inches, without her bonnet on.

There is a language of flowers. Hence, perhaps, the way the roses blow about June.

Minard's Liniment cures Distemper. The ice man now calls every morning at the home of the coal man and does him him up.

Garfield Tea cures sick-headache. Don't sit in a draught. If you do the doctor will in all probability be the one to cash it.

Garfield Tea is sold by all druggists. The modern landlord doesn't get frightened when he sees the handwriting on the wall. He just gets mad.

USE SKODA'S DISCOVERY, the Great Blood, and Nerve Remedy. Mankind is divided into two great classes—those who do not want to lend and those who want to borrow.

An advertisement for the day: The young lady to whom I became engaged at the ball last night is hereby requested to send her name and address to the office of this paper.

If you do not know how good a remedy Garfield Tea really is for constipation and sick headache, send a postal card to D. Denmore & Co., 271 Queen Street, East, Toronto, for a free, trial package.

"I say, Cholly," said Chappie, "I should think it would make you fished to sit head in the gymnasium and watch your man-swinging Indian clubs." "It does, dear boy, it does. I do it for hawf an hour evry morning. It's the way I take me exercise."

The Best Advertisements. Many thousands of unsolicited letters have roared the manufacturers of Scott's Emulsion from those cured through its use. Consumption and Scrofulous diseases! None can speak so confidently of its merits as those who have tested it.

"How do you like your new cook?" "Oh, so-so. She is very dirty, she has no idea of cooking, and she smashes every thing around her; but still she has one good and rare quality."

"What is that?" "She stays with us." Mr John Nickerson, an Officer of the International S. S. Co., says: "For years I have suffered with Catarrh, and spent hundreds of dollars on Doctors and Patent Medicines until my case was pronounced incurable. I was finally cured by Hawker's Catarrh Cure, which I consider to be worth its weight in gold. I would not be without it in any price."

There are no native kangaroos except on the continent of Australia. That country contains about 11,000,000 of them. Over 1,000,000 skins are shipped to the United States for use in boot-making. Each skin will make about four pairs of ordinary sized shoes.

Miss Jennie Bass, New Boyne, Ont., writes:—"For two years I suffered from sick headache and palpitation of the heart, and could get no relief until I began the use of Pink Pills. I now feel like a new girl." Sold by all dealers or by mail at 50c a box or 6 boxes for $2.50. Dr. Williams Med. Co., Brockville, Ont., and Schenectady, N. Y. Beware of imitations.

Aluminum is to be used wherever practicable in the accoutrements, arms and equipments of the German army. By its use the weight carried by infantry soldiers will be a trifle over fifty-seven pounds, whereas that of the British soldier will be sixty-eight and a half pounds.

F. G. Blacklock, of Cape Spencer light station, tried all kinds of remedies for rheumatism that had left him almost unable to walk, and at last got Dr. Manning's German Remedy. Before he had finished a bottle he could walk without a cane. This marvellous painkiller is a positive cure for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sprains, Strains, Bruises, Colic, Chills, Cramps and all pains and aches, either internal or external. An invaluable household remedy. Sold everywhere. Price 50 cents.

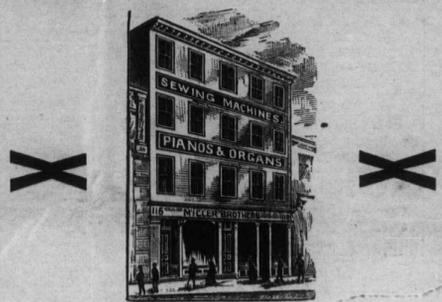

A farmer's taxes in Turkey are classified thus: (1) One-tenth of all crops and fruits; (2) 4 per cent. of the rental value of houses and lands; (3) 5 per cent on every transfer; (4) an annual tax of 33 pence on every sheep and 21 pence on every goat. The taxes are rigorously collected.

Edward Lisief, of St. Peter's, C. B., says:—"That his horse was badly torn by a pit-bull. One bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT cured him." Livery Stable men all over the Dominion tell our agents that they would not be without MINARD'S LINIMENT for twice the cost.

The ingenuity of the hardware man is never at a loss when it comes to the sale of his goods. The latest practical exponent of this fact does business at Albion, N. Y. To every one purchasing from him the one wheeled vehicle known as a wheelbarrow, he gives the purchaser a free ride home in it.
