Poetry.
"I SHALL NOT WHOLLY DIE."
I know that I shall die;
It needs no gloomy herald standing near,
To sound this daily message in my ear,
As the swift years go by.
The soft winds whisper it with every breath,
Earth's streams all hasten to the gulf of death.
That which is born must die.

What is that we call death?
Is it to drop with all our hopes and fears
Down to the silence of eternal years.
When ends this laboring breath?
To have no part in all this wondrous whole,
While sun shall rise and starry heavens roll.
Is this what we call death?
A whispering voice replies:
"Nay, nay, when man the mortal turns to dust,
Kind mother-nature will restore her trust,
And he again shall rise.
Revered, and live in plant, and flower
and tree,
Passing through life and death eternally,
Beneath these arching skies."
Oh, cheap and foolish word
Vain, empty show and mockery of life!
Is this the hope when ends our mortal strife,
By which man's soul is stirred?
Nay, immortal life ever full and free
Moving in conscious thought eternally,
Like flight and song of bird.
ASTHY DAY.

As this my day! O promise blest!
Sweet words of comfort, words of rest!
No more with boiling fear I wait
To read to-morrow's hidden fate,
What'er its tears,
What'er its perils, pains, and fears,
While sun and stars and worlds endure
The old, sweet promise standeth sure.
The Hood that hides the world upears
My weary heart with all its cares,
The eye that slumbers not has seen
My graveyard wounds with grasses green.
My father's pining love has read
The pain behind the tears I shed,
How comforting his words to me,
"Child, as thy day thy strength shall be."
Long, long ago, when life was new,
I learned that love, divinely true,
That watchful care, that cares for all,
The stars' grand march, the sparrow's fall.
Long, long ago I learned to trust
That calm, wise will and purpose just,
Worn, weary, wounded, now at length,
I lean upon that matchless Strength.
As this my day! my little day;
My broken troubled, thwarted day;
The day whose rosy morning bloom
Was quenched and darkened into gloom,
The moon of grief! The moon of loss!
The lengthening shadows of the Cross!
Once more my Father, say to me,
"Child, as thy day thy strength shall be."
—(Mrs. Mary H. Finn, in the Advance.

A TINY LETTER.
A memory of brighter days
Is mine to-night:
A fireside with its ruddy blaze,
And two eyes bright
That look in mine so thoughtfully;
The look of the lad who wrote to me.
Perplexed, I toiled, with many cares,
Upon my task;
My little one came up the stairs
Something to ask;
Rudely repulsed, without a word
He left me with his wish unheard.
The moments fled; then at my door
A step came light;
A tiny letter on the floor
I picked it up, my heart was sad
That I had so repulsed the lad.
"Dear pa," the tiny letter read,
"I know that you
Are tired; so I'll go to bed,
But these words few
I write to tell you that I love
You more and more, all else above."
Oh, how the wisdom of my books
Shrunk into naught
Before those unclaiming looks
That erewhile sought
My own! I called him back to me,
Dear lad—and kissed him tenderly.
A memory! Oh, if we knew
The future's blight
That oft our pathway doth pursue
'T would clear our sight;
And words that chide would seldom fall
To haunt us like a gloomy pall!
I could not keep my little lad!
But here tonight
A fond memento, sweetly sad,
Makes dim my sight:
A letter kept so sacredly,
The one my darling wrote to me.
A GOOD INDUCEMENT.—The Farm Journal is chock full of gumption and it has the largest circulation of any farm paper in the world. It is good everywhere. TEMPERANCE COLUMN.
Contributed by the I. O. G. T.
WANTED, MEN!
Wanted, men! heroic Men,
Fearless, valiant, true;
With a heart for any task
That brave men ought to do;
With a will that dare not yield
To a wrong, how'er concealed
Wanted, Men!

Wanted, Men! devout men;
Men of single aim;
Men who work for love of Right,
Not for wealth or fame;
Men who every day will prove
Faithful in the cause they love,
Wanted, Men!
Wanted, Men, aggressive men;
Men of push and nerve,
To be a lion in his den,
And drive without reserve
A giant demon from our land,
Whose curse is seen on every hand,
Wanted, Men!

Wanted Men! good, generous men,
With the open hand,
With the large o'er flowing heart
That gives to rights denied;
Men who work and freely give
To help their fellow men to live,
Wanted, Men!
Wanted, Men! firm, honest men,
Who'll neither thaw nor bend;
Not like the craven Esau tribe
But Daniels to the end;
Men who will not sell their souls,
To cliques or party, at the polls,
Wanted, Men!
Wanted, Men! to help the weak;
To save a run-cursed world
That in death's meshes struggles still,
Whene'er our flags unfurled;
While thousands starve and thousands weep
And breaking hearts their vigils keep,
Wanted, Men!
Wanted, Men! clear-headed men;
Men of speech and brain;
Men to teach, rebuke, persuade,
And all this wrong explain.
Until our Country frees its name
From liquor's curse—from liquor's shame,
Wanted, Men!
Wanted Men! true Christian men,
Hand in hand to go,
With prayer, with power, each day and hour
To fight our common foe.
Youths are falling, mothers crying,
Children starving, fathers dying,
Wanted, Men!

A SONG OF HOPE.
Though hidden the sun and darkness
abound,
And common joy in existence be gone,
Work in the shadow withhold not thy hand;
Faint not till thy labor is done.
There's a rift in thy cloud though small it appears
And through it Hope's rays pierce their way,
Strain on till they reach you, stop not to repine
Each murmur but causes delay.
No bar is so heavy you cannot remove,
Though at present it hinders your view;
The longer you shrink from the duty before
The farther you are from your need.
Strength's given to those who are steadfast, who fight,
And who work with a will not their own,
That not unto those who linger dismayed,
On the pathway to victory's throne.
In direst of straits there's a hand to uplift,
In despair there's a glimmer of light:
In moments of sadness, a solace to sooth,
In temptation a turning to right.
Wherever there's shadow, there sunshine
unseen,
And labor is followed by rest.
In the master of God's willing workers
on earth,
Be regarded as one of the best.
It is a foolish habit of the day to try and get what is called "rites" out of people—that is to say, to see what they can be made to believe. Sometimes gossip which is not intended to be injurious, only funny, is started in this way, but assumes proportions that would startle
the original perpetrator if he recognized in the full-fledged slander one of his own brood of lively anecdotes. Pure malice is undoubtedly rare, but a good natured person, prone to exaggeration and with a taste for the sensational, may do even more harm than one who deliberately falsifies for a purpose.

Nerves and Food.

It is the nervous cow that gives the greatest amount of good milk, says C. W. Jones in the Boston Cultivator. One inclined to go to fat makes an excellent beef cow, but a relatively poor milker. As the nervous cow is apt to be smaller in proportion than a large, fat, beef making cow, the idea gains some headway that she requires less food. Indeed, there is a tendency in some quarters to reason that a cow needs food in proportion to her size—that is, a large cow requires more food than a small one. That is an error of the most pronounced order. It is nervous energy that absorbs and uses up food, and it requires more to feed such a nature than it does one of a phlegmatic disposition. If anything the opposite to what is true in general practice should be observed. More rich and highly concentrated food should be given to a small milkier than to the beef maker. The good milkier, if her digestion is good, can change more of her food into milk than another animal can convert into beef or fat. A good deal of this food that is given to the milkier is converted directly into milk and is thus more profitable than when fed to the beef cattle.

The nervous animal's mechanism is more easily deranged than that of the heavy, beef making animal. A plow horse can stand more abuse than the high strung race horse. Many dairymen do not appreciate this thoroughly either in their feeding or in their milking. As the nervous animal's mechanism is more easily deranged than that of the heavy, beef making animal. A plow horse can stand more abuse than the high strung race horse. Many dairymen do not appreciate this thoroughly either in their feeding or in their milking.

Green Bone.

The value of green bone lies in its well proportioned and numerous constituents, which is just what is needed by the hen to produce eggs, says Inland Poultry. In it we have lime for the shell, mineral water for the yolk and albumen for the white. It is as near an all round food as any can be. There is only one objection to it, and that is that it is somewhat concentrated. If hens are fed on it entirely, they will eat too much; hence, it is necessary to feed it in connection with some bulky food, such as clover or bran.

Harvesting Garden Crops.

When storing vegetables handle them carefully. Bruises liberate moisture which in time causes decay. If the vegetables have been exposed to the hot sun, allow them to cool before storing. Tubers of all kinds, such as turnips, beets, carrots, vegetable cysters, etc., should be packed in barrels or boxes with some earth mixed through them and a layer on top. Potatoes keep better in small heaps. There is no better place for onions than in a garret or outbuilding, where the temperature is just above the freezing point. Spread clean straw about a foot deep on the floor, and upon this place the onions 8 or 10 inches deep, covering with 2 ft. of straw. If the temperature of the room should fall below the freezing point the straw will keep them from freezing. But two or three light frostings will not injure onions. Cabbage may be kept in fine condition until January by cutting off the stalks and trimming of the outer leaves, wrapping them in three or four thicknesses of newspaper and placing on a shelf in the cellar. For late winter or spring use it is best to store them outside. Bury a box or barrel in the ground in a dry situation, trim the heads and wrap them in newspaper, put them in the barrel and spread a layer of leaves or straw on top and cover with boards so it will be water proof. When the weather becomes colder put on a little dirt and add to it as the cold increases. Squashes and pumpkins may be kept in any dry, airy place until freezing weather, and then put in the cellar. One of the best methods of preserving squashes for winter use is to give them a coat of varnish.

Autumn Work in the Garden.

It seems hard and needs a good deal of resolution to start fall work in the garden, but it is necessary for the well being of the plants, and for the neatness of the borders. Stems and tops of herbaceous plants must be cut off and well rotten manure dug into the soil. Hardy roses should be kept pruned into manageable shape, and before very hard frost heaped around them, as well as tender varieties. When autumn leaves can be gathered over them, they make a good warm blanket, and can be kept in place with a few branches. Clematis should be cut back to within two feet of the ground, and protected in the same way. Cannas, dahlias, gladioli and other tuberos plants should be dug up and dried a little in the sun, then stored in a dry cellar, but away from furnace heat. Wherever bulbs are to be planted the ground should be prepared carefully, and all rubbish taken off. Plants must be made for next season, and herbaceous plants set accordingly. Grape vines can be pruned, and a little later they may be put down from the trellis and covered with earth. All dead wood should be cut out from shrubs, shade and fruit trees. It is a good time to take off the rings of the tent caterpillar, so destructive last spring in orchards. Only the other day a thoughtful apple picker when bringing in the new fruit brought out a handful of the rings that she had taken from the trees. As each contained several hundred caterpillars, it was easy to estimate the value of this act of forethought. Vegetables, too, should be taken out of the ground and dried before storing. While the land is always better for being dug or ploughed in autumn, at the same time planning for a rotation of crops, onions do well on the same ground year after year, but most of our vegetables improve by a change. Wood ashes should be applied, and any manure well dug in will show results in spring. If chances are to be made in the herbaceous border, it can be done as soon as the leaves fall, and the same rule applies to shrubs and trees.

COOK'S SURE COUGH CURE
Storing of the Celery Crop.

To store celery for winter, the severity of the weather and the quantity to be stored must be considered. The simplest method is to dig trenches 6 or 8 in. wide and of sufficient depth, so that when the celery is placed in them upright, the tops just show above the surface. A dry and sheltered spot must be selected. Pack the celery two plants abreast, with all the dirt possible adhering to the roots. After filling the trench of any desired length, dig another and fill, and still another until you have three finished. Take care to leave 4 or 6 inches of earth between each trench.

The filling must be done quite late and the celery be perfectly dry when packed. After trenching, an A-shaped covering of boards must be placed over the celery, and the ends left open for ventilation, till severe weather, when board roof and all must be made proof by covering with roughage, as salt hay, corn stalks, etc.

An easier method is to plow 8 or 10 inches deep with roots upland. Place a row of celery with roots in furrow and tops slanting at an angle of 45 degrees on to the upturned earth. After filling one furrow, take the plow and turn another 10 inch furrow right onto the celery in the first, covering it nearly out of sight. Repeat filling and covering until crop is all in. Allow it to freeze slightly, as earth protects from injury. When severe weather sets in, cover all over with straw or coarse manure or salt hay and leave until wanted for market.

AUTUMN.

Like the thousands that had preceded it, the summer has departed; it has passed away like a tale that is told; other summers will follow, but for the summer that has gone there is no resurrection. As dead are the grass and leaves and flowers of last spring so are the foliage and flowers of a thousand years ago, and the wealth of a Vanderbilt or an Astor could not buy one hour from the past—revivify one of its faded flowers. The fields are yellow and grey; the woods lift bare arms to a leaden sky; the golden seed has grown ragged and disconsolate—so have the white and purple saters and all of their brothers and sisters of the pastures, meadows and woods. The crows gather in convention and discuss the coming exodus; the wild geese have already begun their annual southern pilgrimage; many others of the feathered tribes have stolen away quietly; a week ago, or two weeks ago it may be; we miss them now but took no note of their departure. The English sparrow and the chickadee remain; for them the grey skies, the frost and the snow appear to have no terrors. They are sturdier than most of their fellows. The chipmunk is one of the geniuses of the woods; he is more provident than most of his relations, furred, feathered, four legged or two legged. Every body who observes and thinks admires and honors him. The chipmunk is the philosopher of philosophers, the genius of geniuses, the happy-go-lucky gentleman who thinks his native land the best of all lands, and who notwithstanding his frivolity, almost always has corn in his garner when it is needed.

THE INFIRMITIES OF GENIUS.

Some of the world's greatest geniuses have been, physically, pigmies. As a rule, it is said, a hunchback; Pope and Byron were deformed; Marston was blind, and so is Miss Keller; Grant, Allen, philosopher, naturalist, novelist and poet, a native of Kingston, Ontario, who died a few days ago from consumption, was always an invalid. One of Canada's most brilliant verse writers, Mr. Arthur D. Wilmot, of Salisbury, is writing but brain; he sees with his eyes; his sight is a pencil held between his lips, but since childhood every member of his body has been paralyzed. His patience, it is told, under such affliction surpassed belief. Mr. Wilmot addressed the following sonnet: TO H. L. SPENCER, AT 70. How swift the wheel of Time can turn—how slow! In vain we try, we children of a day, To stop the wheel and lengthen out our play; Around and round it turns and brings us woe Or joy—and change to everything below. The vision Memory brings to waiting age Of bright and happy scenes from Youth's fair page: Are streams; the husk of things we need not know Nor feel is falling off, and Nature's wheat is shining through the chaff; the joys of Youth, So real and deep when every breath was sweet; The lasting pleasures of unconscious truth; And golden dreams and sympathy as keen As love—for everything when life was green.

ST. JOHN LETTER.

It would be a blessed thing for the public if those editors who are wrangling about the pay of the Canadian soldiers who have set out for the Transvaal would convert their pens into swords and follow them. Britain has accepted a few soldiers from Canada, not because she wanted them, but out of deference to the loyalty of the dominion and its desire to be represented in the war. She drew the line, however, at soldiers; she had no use for our skeletons, and through Mr. Chamberlain she said so very plainly. But the third rate politician insists on "hollerin," which is about all he ever succeeds in doing. The incessant din reminds one of a pork packing establishment where the swine, gorged and hungry, keep on squealing until the pig sticker, having done his work, "Ups with his heels and smother their squeals." In the foam of the boiling broth." Four boys, 10 to 13 years of age, are under arrest for breaking into a car in the I. C. R. yards and carrying off a large quantity of fruit. A 13 year old boy was sent to the reformatory last Tuesday for till tapping. Incidents like the above show the necessity for compulsory education. The streets were gay with flags and banners all day last Wednesday and when the volunteers for the Transvaal marched to the Union depot in the evening there were thousands of citizens there to bid them farewell. There were many pathetic leave takings but the young men held up bravely, knowing that they were only doing their duty and that the empire would honor them for doing it cheerfully. The city will be ablaze when the survivors return and will long and sincerely mourn the "unreturning brave," if such shall be the record of any of their number. Thomas Miller, the first man who engaged in St. John as a florist, died last Wednesday. The four market is unchanged and no material advance is anticipated in the near future. The following are some of today's quotations: Clear pork, $15 25 Boneless beef, 16 00 Extra plate, 14 80 Plate, 14 25 Beans per bushel, 1 50 Canned tomatoes per doz., 1 00 " corn, " 1 10 Cheese, per lb., 11 1/2 Codfish, per 100 lbs., 4 00 EDWARD EDWARDS, St. John, Oct. 26.

THE GOOD HEALTH Promised by Paine's Celery Compound Nothing Vague or Indefinite About Results There is nothing indefinite about the kind of "good health" that is promised by Paine's Celery Compound and that is so strongly vouched for by letters that come from our best people. Paine's Celery Compound among other blessings gives firmer and stronger nerves, perfect circulation, complete digestion, clear complexion, sweeter breath and more regular bodily functions. These blessings are always secured by Paine's Celery Compound when other remedies fail. It is foolish and criminal to neglect daily aches, pains and the unmistakable symptoms of dangerous diseases, when it is well known that a few bottles of Paine's Celery Compound will completely banish every trouble and give a condition of health that guarantees a long and happy life. Every man or woman whose nervous strength is overtaxed, or whose life is a busy one and full of mental worries, will soon feel the invigorating and vitalizing effects of one or two bottles of nature's health-giver, and see his or her health improve after the first dose of this greatest of all remedies.

Diamond Dyes are the True and Unfading Agents. In November thousands of women will be coloring dresses, shirts, jackets, coats, vests, pants, shawls, wool yarns and carpet rags. The dyeing operation is an important one and demands great care. The principal point is to secure the right dye—colors that are pure, bright and fast to washing and sunlight. The Diamond Dyes—the only guaranteed dyes on earth—possess all the grand qualities that make perfect and true colors. Diamond Dyes have such a universal sale that unscrupulous dealers make efforts to imitate them. If you would be successful in dyeing, avoid all crude imitations. Promptly refuse all dyes recommended by dealers to be just as good as Diamond Dyes. The Diamond Dyes are the best in the world, and all dealers are aware of the fact.

Cambridge.

Mr. James Parke trapped a large bear. The carcass when dressed weighed over 500 pounds. Although the night was stormy and dark a fair congregation greeted the Rev. Mr. Anderson on Sunday evening in the Baptist church. All who were present speak in the most flattering terms of his excellent singing and of his fine gospel sermons. This reverend gentleman, undoubtedly, at Cambridge on Thursday evening, when he again speaks to the people, will be greeted with a full house. Don't forget the date, Thursday evening the 2nd of November. Rev. Mr. Anderson will preach at McDonald's Corner on Friday evening the 3rd of November. Mrs. David Hamm of Johnston is dangerously ill. Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Colwell of Lower Cambridge drove to Sheffield last Saturday to spend a few days there visiting Mr. Colwell's sister, Mrs. N. Day. A certain amount of uneasiness was manifested by a number of persons one day last week on account of a young teacher who had wandered away from home and did not return at sunset, and when last seen was close to the Den pond. But at a late hour the young man returned home not much exhausted on account of his midnight search greatly to the delight of his anxious friends.

Peter Mitchell Dead.

MONTREAL, Oct. 25.—Hon. Peter Mitchell was found dead this morning in his room at Windsor Hotel in this city. "Sir Peter," as he was familiarly called, was around the rotunda as usual in the evening chatting with friends and was apparently in his usual health, though that has of late not been as good as formerly. Shortly after ten o'clock Mr. Mitchell retired to his room and nothing further was heard from him, nor was any unusual sound heard in his room. This morning, shortly before nine o'clock, a chambermaid noticed that the hon. gentleman's boots had not been taken in as usual, and becoming suspicious notified the manager. Upon investigation, Hon. Peter Mitchell's body was found lying on the floor between the bed and bureau. He had evidently fallen while in the act of disrobing. His coat and vest were lying on the sofa near by. Coroner Mc Mahon was notified, but decided that an inquest was unnecessary, as there was no doubt but that death had resulted from paralysis. The sudden demise of the hon. gentleman was a startling surprise to his many friends.

Dear Sir: In reply to the article which was written by "Peter Joe" in your last out the land of Cambridge were quite surprised to find that the Cambridge correspondent had since more arisen from the deep slumbers under "the shadow of himself among the colored of Ottagow in

WHY DOROTHY WENT HOME.

"There's things better'n money for a young girl," said the old minister, who had known Dorothy Webb all her life of nineteen years, and felt free to express his interest in her affairs. "There's sure to be something for you right here in St. Ignace in time, and your uncle and aunt need you. Chicago's a big town."

Pretty Dorothy's cheeks grew pinker. She resented the minister's disapproval. She had obtained the position of cashier in the great hazaar of Williams & Williams, only by a strenuous effort. She was to have eight dollars a week, as much as Peter Ruby who kept the biggest dry goods store at home, paid his oldest clerk.

"Aunt Sarah is very well," she said, looking down at the tips of her new boots, "and Uncle Reuben needs money. He's never been able quite to pay off the mortgage he put on his house to help somebody."

"I know," assented the minister. (Uncle Reuben had helped Dorothy's father years before). "But I hope to see you back."

"They don't come back, I notice," said the girl, lightly, as she turned away.

"If you find things aren't just what you thought they'd be, you know where to come," said Uncle Reuben Fitch that evening.

He had pattered upstairs to strap Dorothy's trunk. She was his wife's niece, not his own, but he never remembered that.

"If there's ever the least chance to get you into one of the schools here, I'll know it." He had drawn the strap so tight it squeaked.

It was on the top of Dorothy's tongue to remind him that the pay would be less than she was to get in Chicago at first, even, but something in the old man's wistful gaze restrained her. She had known no other father, and she had loved him even more than she loved her aunt.

The neighbors said admiringly of Mrs. Fitch that she was "deaf-dumb-mute," but that she had "faculty"; and old Jean McNulty, who, in spite of his Irish name, talked French like his quarter-breed mother, said: "Mme. Fitch was of a character decide." It was she who had encouraged Dorothy to seek for something to do outside of St. Ignace. Kind, clumsy, slow Uncle Reuben could sleep soundly in spite of the mortgage, but not so his wife. It was she who made their plain living exquisite, but the delicate neatness was the achievement of high courage, not physical strength; even Dorothy, intent upon herself, was compelled to notice how pale her aunt looked as she waited at the station.

"I wish, Aunt, I wasn't going," she cried, impulsively.

"You've promised, and you've bought your ticket," said the old woman, with sad finality. A promise and money invested were to her sacred things. "I only hope Lewis Dutton will meet you as he said he would."

The train was an hour late when it rumbled into the vast, smoky station the next morning. Faint from sleeplessness, scared and bewildered by the roar and rush of sounds, Dorothy looked in vain for a familiar face. Instead, she was accosted by a pleasant, middle-aged woman: "If you are looking for Lewis Dutton, and are from St. Ignace, I am deputed to look after you," she said. "I am an officer of the Woman's Christian Association," she pointed to her breast where shone a badge. "Your friend could not wait. Nothing waits here that's alive."

Dorothy's heart fell when she was shown up the stairs that led to the attic where the members of the Central Club slept. Lewis Dutton had done his very best for his old schoolmate. The Central Club, as its name indicated, was just in the heart of the city, only three blocks from Williams & Williams; its membership and location were perfectly respectable; it was inexpensive, yet good for the price. The parlor looked to Dorothy as it had to Lewis, almost splendid, for it was set forth with rugs, portieres, cabinets and pictures. But the attic, where Dorothy was to room, looked like the attic of Peter Ruby's "Emporium," at St. Ignace, and was not half so attractive as Aunt Sarah's woodshed chamber, where Uncle Rubin kept his fishing tackle, garden seeds, and old carpenter's tools. Mrs. Emmons, the matron, however, seemed to be satisfied with the accommodations. "I've been able to give you a single corner room," she said, opening a low door. "Some young ladies prefer company, but the young man said you'd be sure to want to be alone. We get two-fifty a week for this. Each young lady has her own lamp. Gas is not brought up to this story."

The room was very high up, and gave her a wide view of chimney tops. Though the one breadth of carpet before the low cot bed was very much worn, the spotted curtains dingy, the place was in a way clean. There was one chair, a small dresser, and washstand of microscope size set forth, with cracked crockery. The expressman had set her trunk down under the window; there was no other place for it.

Williams & Williams exacted careful service from their employees, as successful business men must, and, in spite of her homesickness, six months flew by as if on wings. Sometimes Lewis Dutton, who was in a wholesale house miles away on the west side, came to see her on a Saturday evening. His father was a St. Ignace doctor, and he and Dorothy had learned their A B C's together. But the calls were not pleasant, for the girls of the Central Club were always in the parlor; then, their rooms were so chilly, talking of the trifling experiences of the day, giggling and chewing gum. They dressed loudly, with many twinkling ornaments; and it was far from pleasant to see them winking at each other as Dorothy and Lewis exchanged commonplaces in a low voice. They were girls who meant to be good, and lead faithful, hard working lives, but, as they said to Dorothy, "they were different."

It was because Dorothy was different that they began to dislike her. The minister of the church to which she took her letter called. His assistant came with his wife, but besides these she formed to other acquaintances outside the Club and Williams & Williams' Bazaar.

Then she had difficulty in managing her finances, for live as plainly as she could, her food cost her at least three dollars a week; then there was her laundry, and the oil for her lamp. Although she was able to take many stitches for herself, her clothes were out fast, and the ready-made garments with which she replaced them fell in pieces after a short time. The first three months she sent her aunt forty dollars, but the next three, try as she would, she could only send twenty-five. Life was more difficult because of her isolation. Only little Rosa Moses, who occupied the next room with four others, came in to see her as she sat alone evenings. Rosa wanted to learn to mend, and to make buttonholes, Dorothy taught her, glad of her company, and as a return learned from Rosa how to frame pretty wood cuts in brown paper and tack them upon her wall, just where they would get the western light. Rosa introduced her to the Art Palace, where she herself went every Sunday afternoon.

One Saturday, after six months of this life, a cash boy stopped at Dorothy's desk with a message. "Mr. Titus wants to see you after five o'clock," he said, grinning.

"Take a seat," said Mr. Titus, curtly. She entered, in answer to the summons, the tiny, cell, where he was imprisoned all day.

"—I—," he began, but as his keen eyes noted her pallor, "we are much pleased with your work, Miss Webb; so pleased that since we are to lose Miss Paul, I have asked that you be given her place as my assistant. There is extra work every Saturday night, but the pay is four dollars more than you are now receiving, and you'd better learn to run a typewriter, and yes—to take dictation."

Dorothy's lips tried to form a question, but no sound came from them. Mr. Titus guessed what she would ask. "Lots of places teach Sunday afternoons," he said, easily; "and lots of places each evening, if you are to be out. Here's a card. You may come in here next Monday." Mr. Titus never expected any one to talk back to him. He evidently considered the matter as settled.

Dorothy went home to find two letters waiting her at the Central Club. One was a note from Lewis Dutton inclosing a passage from his father's letter. His father who was the doctor, had written: "Mrs. Reuben Fitch is not at all well. She's just as plucky as ever, but her heart is weak. I wish that noise of hers knew it." The second letter was from Uncle Reuben. The writing was large and clumsy, like himself. After he had told all the local gossip, he wrote: "There's going to be a place in the high school for you, Dorothy. The pay is only seven dollars for forty weeks. But you would be at home, and you may have it all. I have seen one of the trustees, and I wish you would think about it. Your Aunt Sarah bids me tell you she is pretty well. I guess she is, but she has kind of weak spells."

Dorothy's head was in a whirl; her supper tasted like ashes. She did not sleep until toward morning, and then only fitfully. At one moment she was drawn to her home. The next she felt the fascination of the city. Besides, six hundred and twenty four dollars a year is not two hundred and eighty dollars. Uncle Reuben had always been anxious to have her learn to use a typewriter, a machine of which he always spoke with awe. But to learn on Sunday afternoon! She knew the custom of her foster parents with regard to the keeping of that sacred time. As for the evening classes, she was as afraid of death of the city streets at night.

The next day she went to Church and to Sunday school as usual; but she could not go back to the club with its unbearable odor of stale dinners, and its unsympathizing throng. She took a car and went to the nearest park, for if the air was chilly the sun was warm. Finding a retired bench near some lilacs she sat down, and was quite oblivious of the flight of time until she heard familiar voices nearby pronounce Miss Paul's name.

"Don't you know what's the matter with her? She's goin' most blind. That's what's the matter. Working by electric light in that dark hole all day, and half Saturday night. She's goin' to the hospital."

The next instant half a dozen of the Williams & Williams "salesladies" rounded the curve of the walk. They walked two and two, bringing down their heels with a sharp click, and tossing their heads rather too conspicuously. Behind them came half a dozen or more flashy young men, who, it was plain, were unknown to them, but with whom they were exchanging loud jokes.

"Well, I never," exclaimed Rachel Frank, who was one of the room mates of Rosa Moses, as she came to a sudden stop before Dorothy. "My goodness, gracious!"

"I should say!" screamed the rest in shrill chorus, as they circled about her.

Just how she escaped the grinning girls and the howling young men, Dorothy did not know, but in a few seconds she was in a southward bound car, her very ears scalded with humiliation. An hour later Rosa Moses returned from the Art Palace, and opened the door softly. "I know what is to happen," she said, in a sibilant whisper. "It was Miss Paul who told me. Did I not not tell you the city is the place for chances?"

"I am going home to St. Ignace. I am writing my resignation," said Dorothy, without looking up from her writing.

"What is there for you in that little town?" cried Rosa, in amazement. "Tell me, now!"

"A sweet, clean, soft bed in a quiet, big room, in a quiet clean house; food delicately cooked, and the daily company of the two people who have done everything for me, and who love me better than anyone else, and whom I love; plenty of refined, intelligent company, and from everybody the treatment of a lady," said Dorothy, quietly.

"There is also work to do, worth in St. Ignace far more to me than the best place Williams & Williams has to offer," Rosa looked an instant at Dorothy, as she sat in the western light, the setting sun bringing out golden tints in her brown hair. She was sorry, for she was really very fond of Miss Webb. "What one knows, one knows," she admitted wearily.

"It is what I know that takes me home," replied Dorothy, softly. "I have known for some time that there are things better than money, and now I acting according to my knowledge."

The great value of the X-ray discovery is brought to mind by a surgical operation performed at Chicago last week in which Harriet Hellbuth, five years old, and for two years blind and paralytic, had her sight and the use of her limbs restored through its agency. Two years ago the child while playing fall from a porch to the sidewalk, striking on her head. The fall left her totally blind and with her right side paralyzed. A few days ago the X-ray was applied and revealed a tumor the size of an egg pressing on the brain. The skull was trepanned directly over the cyst as shown in the skiagraph, and the tumor removed. The child was able to move her limbs on recovering consciousness and is now gradually recovering her sight.

A Terrible Warning.

A $2 bill came into the hands of a lady in Boston which speaks volumes of the horrors of strong drink or the traffic in it. There was written in red ink on the back of it the following:

"Wife, children and more than $10,000 all gone; I don't an responsible. All has gone down my throat. When I was 21 I had a fortune. I am not yet 35 years old. I have killed my beautiful wife, who died of a broken heart. I have murdered my children with neglect."

"When this bill is gone I do not know how I can get my next meal. I shall die a drunken pauper. This is my last money and my history. If this bill comes into the hands of any man who drinks let him take warning from my life's ruin."

Good Health Akes Little.

The requirements of health are good air, good food, suitable clothing, cleanliness and exercise and rest. Good food is not necessarily expensive food. Exercise and rest should alternate and balance each other. It is quite possible to take too much exercise, and this side of the question must be guarded against just as carefully as the other.

Women, as a rule, do not rest sufficiently. Every woman should try during the day to get a few minutes of rest, even if it interferes with her regular work. It is impossible for her to attend to the health and welfare of her family if her own health suffers from overwork and lack of rest.

The Color of the Yolk.

The Baltimore Sun says a gentleman remarked the other day in a Baltimore restaurant: "I don't eat eggs now. They are not good. Thin, pale yolks show it." Another said in reply: "Well, I'll order soft-boiled eggs, for I know that it is grass and green weeds that make the yolks that very dark color they have later on, and it is the good grain food they have to feed now to make hens lay that makes the yolks so pale. I've raised chickens and know." There are city people to whom the taste of a genuine fresh laid egg would be a revelation.

Cook's Fostering Plasters.

Mar. A. told her new man-servant (a colored youth from the country) to make a fire in the drawing-room the other day. Coming in soon after, she found him hopelessly contemplating the auditions, tongs, etc., with a pile of logs by his side large enough to warm a regiment.

"Have you never made a fire before, William?" she asked, somewhat sharply.

"Well, ma'am, I ain't never made what yo' call a refined fire—no, ma'am!" was the puzzled reply.

Old Lady—I say, I sent my little boy down here ten minutes ago to get a porous plaster, and you sent this thing home by him.

Shopman—Yes, ma'am; that's a porous plaster.

Old lady—You can't palm off an old plaster that's full of holes on me. If yo ain't got a good one, I'll go somewhere else.

COOK'S NEW BLOOD PILLS.

The scene is laid in the schoolroom, during the writing lesson.

"Please, ma'am," speaks up a little girl, "Johnny Smith is makin' mistakes in his writing lesson."

"How do you know that Ellen?" asks the teacher.

"There's three capital S's in the copy to-day, and he's making L's."

"Why, you can't see Johnny's pen."

"No in, but I can see his tongue."

Why are cats like unskillful surgeons? Because they mew-ill-late, (mutilate).

2 PAPERS

AND A . . .

300 PAGE BOOK

PRICE OF ONE PAPER

FIRST, and properly, in making a choice of reading for the home you select your own home paper. However good may be the reading of other papers, there is none that comes home so closely to you as your local weekly. It is to further increase this interest by adding to our lists that the following liberal proposition is made to subscribers. We have been careful to form combinations only where we knew we were touching safe ground and could thoroughly recommend the publications offered. Read carefully every word of this offer for it means a saving of money to you.

Montreal Daily Herald

A GREAT METROPOLITAN DAILY

WE are pleased to announce that we have been able to make most extraordinarily liberal arrangements with the publishers of one of the greatest of Canadian dailies—The Montreal Daily Herald.

The Herald has achieved a well-deserved reputation for the remarkable value it gives its readers. It is one of the most enterprising newspapers in the Dominion, and in thousands of home circles is welcomed on account of the great interest it manifests in subjects of special interest to the family. It is admittedly the favorite daily of the women of Canada. To the farmer and business man, it appeals through its accurate market reports and business columns. To the young men, through the attention it bestows on clean, manly sport. To the lover of fiction, through the excellent stories appearing regularly in its columns. To the politician, through the calm and moderate tone of its editorial expressions.

The only reason which prompted the publishers of The Herald to make us the offer, which enables us to club the two papers at the extraordinarily low price given below, is their desire to immediately introduce the Daily Herald in large numbers in this neighborhood. The offer they now make will hold good for a limited time only.

It should be mentioned that subscribers to The Herald during the next few months will enjoy to the full the opportunity which that paper is offering to all readers to secure valuable books at merely nominal figures.

Dominion Cook Book

A Copy for Every Subscriber

IN the best sense of the term this is an Ideal Cook Book—ideal in being a practical book—a book which the housewife will want to keep constantly by her side and can depend on, because of the simplicity and reliability of every recipe. Starting with a chapter on soups, naturally the first course, throughout its three hundred pages and over there are to be found more than 1,000 recipes, winding up with an excellent chapter on sick room cookery. Following the cookery section there is a department entitled "The Doctor," in which are recipes selected from eminent authorities, and which will be found invaluable where the doctor is not readily available. The recipes are numbered throughout the book, and each is prefaced with a list of the ingredients called for by the recipe, rendering it unnecessary for the housewife to hand some cloth cover. It would be a mistake to confuse this book with any paper-bound cook book that would go to pieces in no time.

Everything will go to you at once. The Herald, during the closing months of 1899, will make some wonderfully liberal offers to subscribers. The Cook Book is mailed to you promptly on receipt of order, and coming along Fair Time and Thanksgiving Day, and later Christmas and New Year's, you want this book beside you. Glorious News

Comes from Dr. D. E. Cargile, of Washita, L.T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved,—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys, and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by all Druggists, every bottle guaranteed.

PETERSVILLE CHURCH, QUEENS CO.

To EDITOR QUEENS COUNTY GAZETTE.

Oct. 12th, 1899.

Early in September you published an account of a picnic, held by the Presbyterians of this place, to which I wish to make partial exception, viz: that of a Peterville J. P. "being the leader in a row, etc.

I think the most successful method of refuting a statement that has been made public, is by drawing the public mind to the author of such statement, in a manner somewhat similar to that suggested by Southey, "Come walk along with me and I will answer thee." So let us, likewise, have a look for ourselves, and if, after carefully noting the physique, phenological and general appearance as well as ascertaining the intellectual balance of the author of this effusion in question, we are ready to give vent to our feelings in such words as Wordsworth: "Proud am I that my country bred such strength, a dignity so fair." There, I am willing to allow the article to go for what it is worth. But if the experiment proves of a negative character then I will be bold enough to contradict the statement no further than with the variation, that instead of saying a "Peterville J. P.", etc., be substituted the son of a Summer Hill, J. P., with the addition that for crying out "Go in Hamilton," he got it not "where the chicken got the axe," but in the eye, which caused him to manifest a sort of groping appearance in all his movements for the next two or three succeeding weeks.

He should also have said that intoxicating drinks were sold at this picnic, and that trouble was plotted, but, I suppose the public will say, particularly those who know this correspondent, that we never look at his scribbling.

I will give you the particulars at some future date, but kindly insert the above so as to set the ball a rolling.

A very fine collection was taken, and a large subscription as well.

The meeting was a decided success from beginning to end, and reflected much credit upon those in charge of the meeting.

A pie social was held in the Orange Hall at Patterson Settlement, on Monday evening the 10th inst. G. W. Kirkpatrick was chosen chairman, C. E. Duplisse treasurer, D. P. Another great discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this country. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose, that she slept all night; and with two bottles has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hamrick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Sold by all Druggists at 50 cents and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

Round Hill.

Old Jack Frost has again made his appearance in this community. He tells us that winter is near. I am willing to say that he is not a false prophet. Messrs. Morgan and Wansbury are busy preparing for a large winter's operation in the lumber woods. George Cochran of Orlanville, Willis Spaight of this settlement and Lucy Ross, of Greenwich have begun their winter's work. We wish them all success in their venture.

Long years ago Jackson and Derrah displayed great bravery in a fierce encounter with a bear. Now I have the opportunity to record an adventure which proves that all of us are not heroes. Yesterday a person was out hunting when he chanced to come across Mr. Brin. He seemed to think that he had no way to defend himself, for instead of shooting the bear, he started in great haste for home. In short it is believed he made a child's bargain with the brute. The bargain was Mr. Bear you leave me alone and I will not harm you. Would he not make a brave soldier?

Ansley Derrah, several of the Speight's James Blyes, George Fowler (our youthful Nimrod), William Morgan Jr., and Henry Lee have all departed for the lumber woods, and in consequence there is much moaning, some for a loving husband, others for their sweetheart. May they all have a safe return.

VICTORIA, Oct. 25.—News from the north today is that Dawson has caught the war fever, and her citizens have sent an offer to contribute one hundred men and money to equip and pay them on service to fight for the British cause in South Africa. Many of the volunteers are time expired men of the Northwest Mounted Police and are splendid cavalry soldiers.

A Horrible Fate.

PETERBORO, Ont., Oct. 26.—Peter Weiss was literally blown to pieces, not enough of his body being found to warrant burial, and Goldsmith, an American, had both hands blown off, and the sight of both eyes destroyed by an explosion of dynamite in their camp at Jack's Lake, Peterboro county. They were members of a party of gold prospectors and were left in camp to prepare the cartridges, while the others were prospecting, when the explosion occurred.
