Township Hall, June 10, 1885. Council met according to adjournment, all the members present, the reeve in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Messrs. Woods and Stewart, of the gravel road between sections 7 and 8, asked assistance from the council in removing water, blocked by the road, from their property. Moved by coun. Gibson, seconded by coun. Todd, that the matter be laid over, and that the reeve consult the members of Ashfield council to find out what assistance they will give in the matter.—Carried. The following accounts were ordered to be paid: John Clark, opening gravel pit, $4; Wm. Thompson and Jas. Robertson, making culvert and bolts for same, $6; James Innie, stationery, $2.75. Moved by deputy reeve, seconded by coun. Gibson, that $300 be raised for roads and bridges for the year.—Carried. A slight change was made in the scale of statute labor. With respect to the complaint made by Alex. Scrimgeour against certain parties having their fences on the road, the clerk was instructed to notify Messrs. Scrimgeour, Taylor and Moss to appear at the next meeting of the Board to have the said grievance investigated. He was also instructed to telegraph Mr. Warren, asking him to inspect his drain at once, and in case Mr. Warren cannot do it now to engage another surveyor to survey for digging of ditch asked for in the petition of J. D. Symile and others. The council then adjourned to meet on Friday, July 10th, at the same hour. R. K. MILLER.

Literary Notices.

Canadian Methodist Magazine for July, 1885.—Price $2 a year; $1 for six months; 20 cents per number. For sale at all book stores.

This number begins the 22d volume. No other Canadian Magazine, we believe, has reached this age. It opens with a handsomely illustrated paper by the Editor on "Walks about Rome," followed by others on "Mexico and the Mexicans," and on "The Cruise of the Challenger," also illustrated. A paper of much interest is one by John Macdonald, Esq., entitled "Leaves from the Portfolio of a Merchant." It embodies the keen observations of a successful business life. Prof. Coleman (Victoria University) contributes an article on "A Visit to the Rockies," almost as graphic in pictorial effect as his admirable painting of these mountains at the last exhibition of the Ontario Art Society. The Story of "Shiny Smith" is a capital character sketch of London life. Miss Carnochan, contributes a patriotic poem, entitled "Has Canada a History?" A review of President Warren's "Paradise Found, or the Lost Eden at the North Pole," a paper on the C. P. R., an account of a Rescue from the ice in Newfoundland, and other articles complete an excellent number.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK for July is the 661st appearance of this venerable Magazine. Like old wine it gives on the fruition of age. The number for July needs no special recommendation as it exceeds in beauty and merit any previous appearance of this old time Magazine. Its illustrations are rich and beautiful, while its reading matter, Dreaming, Household and Recipe departments are replete with entertainment and information. A house without Godey's does not know its loss as each month it contains practical hints of far more value than the price of the Magazine. Those desiring to try it may subscribe for the balance of the year for one dollar, which allows every subscriber a selection of a full size cut-paper pattern each month. As these patterns are noted for their accuracy, more than the price of the Magazine is received in the value of the patterns. J. H. Haslebeck, P.O. box, H. H. Phila.

We have received from the Grip Printing and Publishing Company, of Toronto, a copy of their new plate, "The Capture of Hatochi," illustrated in five colors, and 200 in. This is a graphic sketch of the now famous Hatochi, a very creditable piece of work, in our opinion equal to anything of the sort we have ever seen. Evidently no pains have been spared in its production and it deserves to have a large sale, as well from its artistic beauty as from being a memento of this great fight. It has been compiled from the most reliable sources, and, in the opinion of eyewitnesses and participants in the battle, is a correct delineation of the action. It is retailed at 30 cents and can be had from all newsdealers or from the publishers.

PINK-EYE IN HUMAN BEINGS.—A zymotic disease analogous to the pink-eye in horses, has broken out in horses, has broken out in various parts of London township, and is causing considerable alarm among the people. In S. S. 17, Hyde Park, it has attacked several children of the school, and threatens to go all through the neighborhood. The symptoms are low fever and inflammation of one or both eyes, with a clear and distinct pink of the sclerotic membrane, not congestion, as in ordinary inflammation. The eye remains clear, with a watery expression. The disease communicates itself to the neighboring eyes, and the eye is shut, closed. The disease runs from eight days to two weeks; the face breaks out in a rash resembling scarlet fever, accompanied by nausea, and irritability of temper. The vision is inflamed in both eyes, even though only one eye is affected. This is caused by sympathy of the optic nerve. The doctors have not made a complete diagnosis of the disease yet.—[Free Press.

The New Strawberry Pest.

It is announced by the daily press, that Prof. Riley, Entomologist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., is to visit Staten Island and inspect the strawberry beds, which are devastated by a new insect pest. The strawberry growers of Michigan have been annoyed by the same insect, and cultivators elsewhere have reason to be on the look-out for it. In view of its importance, we give a sketch of the habits and appearance of the Strawberry Weevil. The scientific name of the insect is Anthonomus musculus; it is known as the Strawberry Weevil. It is closely related to the Plum Weevil, or Curendia. The Strawberry Weevil feeds upon the flowers of the strawberry, and also pierces the stalks, just below the flower clusters, causing them to break off with the young berries, and thus the crop is lost. S. G. Winant, of Staten Island, who first brought this insect to our notice last year, now writes us, that the weevil scarcely troubles those kind of strawberries which have pistillate flowers. While the Sharpshooters show hardly a flower, the Jersey Queen and other pistillate kinds, in the same field, are but little disturbed. The immunity of the pistillate varieties may be due to the fact that the insect is fond of pollen, and avoids the flowers which do not furnish it. We are glad that the habits of this insect are to be studied, and trust that it may lead to the suggestion of some effective remedy. The weevil will very probably spread, and strawberry growers should be on the watch for its first appearance. Hand-picking a few weevils, when they are first seen upon the flowers, may save much trouble. The insect is no imported enemy, but native, which is only recently invaded cultivated grounds. As in other cases, finding an abundance of food to its liking, the insect will no doubt increase with a rapidity heretofore unknown to it.—[American Agriculturist for July.

Help One Another.

"This little sentence should be written on every heart—stamped on every memory. It should be the golden rule practice, not only in every household, but throughout the world. By helping one another we not only remove the thorns from the pathway and anxiety from the mind, but we feel a sense of pleasure in our hearts, knowing we are doing a duty to a fellow creature. A helping hand or an encouraging word is no loss to us, yet is a benefit to others. Who has not felt the power of a little sentence? Who has not needed the encouragement and aid of a kind friend? How soothing when perplexed with some task that is both difficult and burdensome, to feel a gentle hand on the shoulder, and to hear a kind voice whispering, 'Do not be discouraged; I see your troubles, let me help you. What strength is inspired, hope created, what sweet gratitude is felt; and the great difficulty dissolves as dew before the sunshine. Yes, let us help one another, by endeavoring to strengthen and encourage the weak; and lifting the burden of care from the weary and oppressed, that life may glide smoothly on, and the fount of bitterness yield sweet waters; and He whose willing hand is ever ready to aid us, will reward our humble endeavors and every good deed will be 'broad upon the water, to return after many days,' if not to us, at least to those we love."

Lord North was accustomed to sleep during the parliamentary harrangues of his adversaries, leaving Sir Grey Cooper to note down anything remarkable. During a debate on Abolition, a tedious speaker treated the subject historically, commencing with a description of Noah's Ark, tracing the progress of the art slowly downwards. When he came to the Spanish Armada Sir Grey indolently woke the slumbering Premier, who hurriedly left the hall, and the honorable gentleman had arrived. Being answered, We are in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, Sir Grey, said he, why did you not let me sleep a century or two more?

Cleanliness Pays.

Very few people die of old age or accident; more than 99 out of every 100 deaths are the result of disease, and nineteen-twentieths of these diseases are preventable, if we would but observe the laws of life and health. Ignorance and carelessness are death's silent generals. Decaying matter is the hot-bed from which spring the gases that are the vehicles of poison to the system, that causes sickness and suffering, if not death. A pile of potatoes, a barrel with a few rotten apples, the dirt from the winter vegetables or roots, have more than once caused the empty chair and the aching heart in the household. How important therefore that the cellars and waste places be carefully cleaned, and the cellar walls and ceilings be whitewashed, and now is the time to do it. It won't take as much work as to run for the doctor and to care for the sick, and will be much pleasanter. 'Tis much more comfortable to contemplate clean premises than a vacant place about the hearthstone; and then how much better everything looks when made tidy! Be admonished in time!

The stowing away of winter clothes is one of the most fatiguing of all home events. Take the early morning hours to the work, and have the clothes line put up in the yard to make the work easier of beating and inspection. The spots show out in the sun, and where ever there is a spot that looks like grease have the ammonia bottle ready, with a bit of sponge and sanger, to cleanse it thoroughly. Moths and mice are attracted by the grease spots. Let all garments be perfectly dried, shaken and brushed in every fold before they are put into papers. Turn out the pockets, turn over the collars and cuffs. Remove everything that looks like a bit of white dust or end of thread. Wherever there is a film, of a bit of cobweb, that means mischief.—[Chicago Journal.

Mushroom parasites are among the noxious. They are made of silk canvases, woven gauzes, black, white and colored, and covered with a shirred circle of piece lace, black, white or colored, with a ruffle at the edge to match, or sometimes with a deep flounce of lace, which does duty for both covering and border ruffles. The lace forms a chow (cabbage) or tuft at the top, made more decorative by the addition of a ribbon bow and loops and floating ends, the artistic handle being adorned.

CLER'S

A MULE'S OBSTINACY.

And How it Led to a Marriage.

About two miles from my house on my Dakota wheat farm, stands one tall, lonely tree. It is the only object in sight that breaks the low horizon, and for many a long mile, north, south, east and west, no other tree can be found. It stands just on the high bank of Smoky river, which goes curling and winding across the country westward, and close beside it stands Chris Tronsen's log house, built of logs brought down the river in the spring time from the North.

One day, early last spring, I had been to the next town to get an iron bolt made at the blacksmith's to replace one that had been broken the day before, and was riding home. My mule was loping at a good rate along the road which follows the river. And when we reached Chris's log house, which had just been newly white-washed outside, I saw Chris sitting calmly on the door step, while Lotta, his wife, was lifting the heavy harness, and throwing it on to 'Yack,' their old white mule.

'Chris must be either sick or very lazy,' I said to myself 'to sit and let his wife harness the mules.' I did not know much about Chris then, but giving him the benefit of the doubt, I shouted, in passing:

'Sick, Chris?'

Chris shook his head in what I thought was a rather sheepish way, and Lotta looked over her shoulder and laughed. In the hurry of the day's work, this occurrence slipped from my mind. But some time afterward, when I happened to pass their place again, I saw Lotta out in the fields, driving the mules, which were fastened to the seeder. This in itself would not have been surprising, for the Norwegian women in the Territory, with their vigorous frames and robust health, often work with their husbands at the out-door labor. But I saw great, robust Chris himself paring potatoes outside the door. And just as I rose into view from below the river-bank, he caught up his pan and slipped into the house.

'No doubt he is lazy, good-for-nothing fellow,' I said to myself, 'who has a thrifty, energetic wife. And so he sits down and does her light work, while she is out sowing the wheat. It might not have a bad result if he could be harnessed up with one of the mules for a day, and made to work under the whip.'

After that I saw Chris himself at work in the field several times. But one evening, a week or two later, I passed there again. The mules were fastened outside the straw barn. The ground had been very wet for two or three days past, and of course the mule's legs were fairly coated with sticky mud, which had partially dried on. Lotta was hard at work over the old white mule, scrubbing and scrubbing, scraping and brushing and curing, as if her life depended on her success. And there, on an overturned barrel, sat Chris, much at his ease, calmly smoking his pipe and looking complacently on. I remembered what I had said to myself before about his laziness, and now I added:

'I will just stop for a few minutes, and see if the presence of a stranger would shame the fellow into taking off his coat and going to work in his wife's place.'

So I tied my mule to a ring at the corner of the house, and walked over to where Chris was sitting. He looked up and smiled, and said, 'Good-evening with the same sheepish expression I had noticed before. And Lotta paused for a moment and stood up, her face glowing with the exertion, and laughed—'I thought she would have done better to give her husband a good shaking,—and said it was very warm. Then she went to work again, to get through, so she said, before dark. But do my best I could not lead the conversation to any explanation of the strange state of affairs and Chris showed no disposition to take hold of the work himself.

When it was dark, Lotta led the two mules to their stalls, and then at last Chris condescended to rise and fasten the barn door. I was sure by their manner, and by Chris's expression when the subject was broached, that either he was outrageously lazy, or there were some explanation of his wife's doing so much of his hard work, while he sat idle. So I took pains, as I met one neighbor and another here and there about town, to make inquiries about Chris. And with one accord they all gave the same answers.

'Had Chris Tronsen a good reputation?'

'Yes, very good.'

'Was he industrious and steady?'

'As hard-working and steady as any man in town.'

'Did he treat his wife kindly?'

'There could be no doubt of it. He was as kind-hearted as he was hard-working.'

'Then why, I would ask myself, was his wife always plowing, or rubbing down mules, while he looked on and did nothing?'

'This all happened in the spring and early summer. But it is only about a week ago now that I drove over to Chris's one mild evening, to get some bag that I had lent him to use in carrying his grain to the elevator.

After Chris had got the bags and thrown them into my light wagon, he and Lotta asked me into their little parlor, the walls of the logs, fitted, closed and hewed smooth. There was a gay-colored carpet on the floor, and the whole room was quite cheery and comfortable, and we sat down in the twilight without a lamp. After we had talked for some time about the crops and prices, and the best way of banking up houses in winter, in which Chris was greatly interested, I said to Lotta:

'But you have worked almost as hard as Chris this year. You must be glad the summer is over.'

Chris shifted uneasily in his seat. Lotta laughed.

'So now I shall tell why it was so, Chris,' she said, looking at Chris.

He only nodded in silence. He apparently did not anticipate much pleasure from the recital.

'But no,' said Lotta, 'you shall tell those first part, and I shall tell those last part that is how we shall do.'

Chris appeared still more uneasy, and laughed nervously, but after a moment's hesitation, he plunged into his explanation, which he had so often wondered at.

'You had one day here two years ago?'

'That is all,' I said.

'Well, so this is all happen one year longer ago as that,' he said. 'Those time I live alone in sod shanty, and Ruya and Oscar—those was the two mule, the last one he named for the King of Sweden and Norway, because he is so good— they live in other sod shanty. I had one or two acre broke then, and ready for sow seed. Very few neighbors then. One Mr. Knudt Qualley and Mr. Peterson near here. So then Mr. Janssen, father of Lotta, he come to live very near—on one or two mile away. And sometime I see Lotta on Sunday at meeting to Mr. Qualley's house, and sometimes I go to Mr. Janssen's house to borrow something. Then I go there almost every day to borrow something, and Mr. Janssen say:

'Mr. Tronsen, you lose great time to borrow something, but I say I like to ride so far to borrow something.'

'And almost every time it was Lotta what brought me those things what I come to borrow, and she tells me to come often. She say they always very glad to borrow me anything.'

'New I can see,' I said, smiling, 'why Lotta did not tell this part of the story.'

'Oh, no,' said Lotta, 'it is not any reasons at all. Chris he knows why he did come so often to see my father, better as I do.'

'Well,' said Chris, continuing, 'so those day I were very bashful, and I never dare to stay for talk with Lotta. I always talk one or two with Mr. Janssen. Mr. Janssen very good man,' he added in explanation, 'but I rather talk to Lotta. But I always afraid, so I make believe I go every day to visit Mr. Janssen and borrow something. And Mr. Janssen he think I was his very good friend. So he say one day 'Chris, I never had any one care so much for me before, like you does, and come so every day to talk with me. So when I see Lotta, I never knows what to say, and so I borrow knife, or nails, or shovel and go right away.'

'So one day, after I go away, I say to myself, 'Next time I shall go and I shall say, 'I have not come to see Mr. Janssen, I have not come to borrow something, I have come to see Lotta, and I shall talk with Lotta.' But when the next time comes, I dare not say so. And I talk with Mr. Janssen all times. So by-and-by I wants ask Lotta to be married with me, and come and live here after new house is built. But I could not dare to talk to her about that. Well, then, so I had saved up my money for long time, for build house. But Oscar—that mule named for King and Queen of Sweden and Norway—he die; and so I must go and take those mule, and buy new mule, so I buy white Yack.'

An expression of actual misery settled on his face at this mention of white Yack, and it took him a moment to recover equanimity.

'Those dreadful mule!' he exclaimed, in consternation. 'He eat and eat and eat. He eat his oats, he eat his hay, he eat his straw bed all night. But he would not let to work. He let to put his ears up straight, and stand up on his front legs, or lie down and roll after those harness is on. Sometimes he lie right down in furrow and roll, and break harness. And fire pour out of his eyes. He are a dreadful mule. So I whip him some—not too much, I very kind,' he added, at a reproachful look from Lotta—and stare him—on one or two mile little bit to make him feel sorry for been cross. But all no good. He yump and bite and kick and sometimes he will not do some work at all. So I could not tell what I shall do. One I is working in field near house, with both mules, and he stops and puts up his old white ears. Then he throw his back heels clear up in the air. Then he just going to lie down, but I whip him—on one or two mile very easy. So he did not lie down. He on one stand still. He stand still half an hour. First I try to pull him, but he stick his hoofs in dirt and pull back. Then I try to coax him, those fire come out of his eyes, and he snort and stand still. When I been got all discouraged, I saw Lotta going down those road on ox team with little brother. Those come stop, and I go to roof to see Lotta. So Lotta laugh and say:

'Good morning, Mr. Tronsen. Why do you and mule stand still all times in field?'

'Then I say, 'I do not know; you must ask Yack.'

'Then Lotta say, 'Does those mule willing to work?'

'So I say, 'Those white mule, he will not work, he will on one stand still. I had pull him, and I had push him, and he will not go.'

'So then Lotta say, 'Well I think if I shall ask him to go, he will go. Mules and dogs and cats love me all times.'

'And I say, 'Well, I think he will go.'

'So she get off ox team, and we go out to where Yack stand. Then she put her face to Yack's old white face, and she rub his nose and talks to him little while, and make him believe he are very handsome and very kind. So then she say:

'Now, Yack, let me see you plow some furrow so nice.'

'So I takes reins, and Yack start and work better as he never had work before, and she walk along and talk to him. So by-and-by she haf to go away. And after she go away we feels very lonesome, but Yack he keep on and work hard all day. And that night I gif him more oats, and big, soft bed. But he eat it all up, every scrap. Well, he work very well for few days, and then he got bad some more. So every time he got bad I drive him over to see Lotta. He always willing to go. And he be so ugly, and bite and gnaw, and stamp his feet, and wrinkle his nose. But after Lotta talk with him little while, and tell him he very handsome and how he must be good and work hard. he get so gentle and run home very fast and be so good. But he likes to go to see Lotta too often. Sometimes he will go every day. If he cannot go to haf Lotta put him and talk to him, he will not work. So when harvest time been come, I are very busy, I cannot go to see Lotta every day. It were impossible. I tell Yack so but it didn't do some good at all. He should not work. He on one bite, and wrinkle his nose and lock ugly, and some fire come out of his eyes. And while he are ugly, those wheat must be cut, or it get spoiled. It are those whole year's work. It must not been lost. I ruin me to sit still in harvest, and not cut my wheat. But Yack would not work. He hate me, and almost every body. So one evening we went over to see Lotta about it. She came out to road to see Yack, and rub his nose, and pat him and tell him to work. And so I jes' told her how it all was. I told her how Yack he ugly at times and would not work, because he hate me. But if she talk to him and pat him, then he work. I tell her all about wheat, how it must be cut, I tell her I don't know what to do about it—and then I stop.

'So then she say she don't know what to do about it.'

'So then I get very bold and say:

'Lotta, I long time want to ask you to get married with me, but I too afraid you would laugh at me. But will you not come?'

'So she look down on ground, and poke little stone with her shoe, for long time, and by-and-by she say:

'Perhaps, Chris, by-and-by.'

'I haf want you to come for ever so long,' I said. 'But how can I wait now? Yack hate me. He will not work for me. I shall lose my wheat, for I can get no one to help me; they are all busy. So then I shall haf no money to build house and I cannot get married at all.'

'Lotta poke the little stone with her foot some more, for long time, and look at ground. It been got very dark, and everything so still and quiet.'

'After a while she say in very low voice:

'My father been say that Pastor Hefsen shall be at our house to see him, tomorrow.'

'That was all she say. Then after a minute, she turn and run into the house. So I talk some more with Mr. Janssen, and tell him I want to borrow one thing more to keep away. He very much surprised. He say he always thought I come to see him, all those times.'

'And next day,—

'So if I do not tell the rest,' said Lotta, from her corner, 'I shall tell nothing. So we been got married those next day. When Pastor Hefsen come, and I came here and feed Yack, and rub him down and lead him when he are cross, and he did work hard and saved all those wheat. He let me very much, but when he are very cross, he will not work if Chris stay near him at all. Those times I drive him. I likes to drive Yack and plow. I plenty strong. Chris, he don't like it, but he can't help himself. Nobody will buy Yack, and we cannot buy some other mule yet. But Yack are getting old. He haf lost two teeth this summer. So I hope when he is old he will not be so ugly, but will get kinder like some old people, and then he will let me and let Chris too.'

I confess I do not share Lotta's faith in Yack's reformation. But I thought the explanation of her working in the field now and then, while Chris sat idle, was a very good one.—[Youth's Companion.

To Tempt Appetite.

Try to keep a pretty china cup and saucer, a delicate plate and a small goblet to present food to the sick. One expert nurse always serves tea and milk in a wine glass; one of the thin, bell-shaped glasses, that hold more than they look to hold. A sick person will turn away from a bowl of soup, and be pleased with a pretty cupful. Sick children especially are amused and pleased with the color and pattern of the cups and dishes, and there is a trace of the frolicful child in every invalid. There is something tempting in a small quantity. It does not tax the eye. Therefore, always present just as little as you judge the invalid wants to see. A coarse white dinner plate, heaped with food, will take away all appetite, while a small plate or saucer, especially if it is a pretty, dainty one, will be successfully cleared. A mauve saucer, or a pink plate, will coax a feverish patient to eat rice pudding or orange cream, or a few grapes, when all other arts have failed. There seems to be an appetite of the eyes as well as of the stomach, and it must not be offended. Very often the effort to lift the head, even if persons are not dangerously ill, disinclines them to take refreshing or nourishing drink. There is no need to disturb such sufferers by propping them up with pillows and making them lift their heads and change their position. A bent glass tube, sold for five cents at the apothecary's, is not a signal of extreme illness or weakness except that the head may rest low. It simply means comfort, and that the invalid need not be disturbed in a sick head ache or extreme fatigue, but can take the beverage provided without a change of position. The art of comfort is not cure, but it goes a great way towards it.—[Ledges and Transcript.

A True Home.

Dr. Holmes says: 'I never saw a garment too fine for a man or a maid; there never was a chair too good for a cobbler or a king to sit in, never a house too fine to shelter the human head. These elements about us—the glorious sun, the imperial moon—are not too good for the human race. Elegance fits man; but do not value these tools a little more than they are worth, and sometimes mortgage a house for the mahogany we put into it. I would rather eat my dinner off the head of a barrel, or dress after the fashion of John the Baptist in the wilderness, or sit on a block all my life, than consume all on myself before I get home, and take so much pains with the outside when the inside was as hollow as an empty nut. Beauty is a great thing; but beauty of garment, house, and furniture, are law-dry ornaments compared with domestic love. All the elegance in the world will not make a home; and I would give more for a spoonful of real heart-love than for all the ship-loads of furniture and all the gorgeousness all the upholsterers in the world can gather.'

No injurious effects can follow the use of Ayer's Eucalypti Cure in the treatment of malarial diseases. It contains, besides a specific and unfailing antidote for malarial poison, other remedial agents which unite to expel the poisonous humors, purify the system, and leave it in a healthy and reinvigorated condition.

Borrowed Himself Out.

It often happens that the loan of some household necessity may be of great consequence to a neighbor—such as flour, eggs, matches, tea, etc.—but how often these things are paid back by an inferior article or else entirely forgotten; or perhaps the show of making payments is gone through, when a less quantity than was given is returned. I remember hearing a story which is so apt to this last point that I cannot help but relate it.

'A plain friend had for a neighbor one who was a constant borrower, and as she saw the articles when returned less in quantity than she had given, she resolved to put the following plan into execution: She bought one pound of the very best tea and put into a separate box, and when the neighbor borrowed a cupful it was taken out of this box, when she returned it, it was put back in the same place, but as she always returned a much less quantity than she borrowed, the result was in time the box became empty. So one morning, when she came for the usual cupful of tea, which she would return after she came back from the store, the following conversation took place:

'Dat thou see this tea box, Sarah Ann?'

'Yes, some time ago I filled it with a pound of the very best tea, and kept it for thy use. I took from it only what I loaned thee, and I put back into it what thou returnedst. Now it is empty; therefore I say unto thee, thou hast borrowed thyself out, and I have no more to loan thee. Farewell!'

A Good Teacher.

A truly good teacher is cheap at any price, and poor one is dear at any price. So, too, if a good one be necessary in any school he becomes equally necessary in every school. Hence two hundred and fifty thousand competent teachers are necessary to supply a host of skilled educators in a far more difficult task than to raise, equip, discipline, and support an army of equal numbers. It is, moreover, a more important undertaking, and necessarily involves a far greater expenditure of time, labor, and money if it is to be well done. True teaching or educational power is not and cannot be a cheap commodity, because it is not only rare but is a more difficult and higher order of work than any other confined to human hands. The tiller of the soil, the artificer in wood and iron, or even the painter and sculptor, with all their delicacy of conception and refinement of touch, have an easy task in comparison with the true educator who works upon the subtle forces of mind and spirit, seeking to mould his precious materials into the divine symmetry, unity, and beauty of a perfect character. If a high or of talent and skill be required in these lower, perishable forms of human workmanship, how much more should be exacted of those who labor upon imperishable materials, and who are thus shaping the characters of beings destined to a life that knows neither limitation or decay.

In no other medicinal preparation have the results of the most intelligent study and scientific inquiry been so steadily and progressively utilized as in Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It leads the list as a truly scientific preparation for all blood diseases.

Kitchen talks.

'It seems as if house-cleaning would never be finished.' So said the lady this morning, and we all echoed the sentiment. For when years of painting and papering and sundry renewals come round, the regular course of work is a little put out, and it needs time and patience to obtain the pleasant results. In the meantime the flowers bloom, the trees have put forth flower and leaf; all nature is in its best and most beautiful array. It was a very sudden transition here, and cannot be healthful; but it is best to be granted against too much change of raiment until the season is fairly settled; even in June sometimes chill winds come, and wet days, that remind me of the poem:

'The sad tree moaned and shuddered— 'Alas! the Fall is here.'

Then it is better to see that clothes are not too thin and airy for the cold blast to penetrate.

The Siles.

Despite all we can do, they occasionally come and cast in dark shadow our aims, hopes and expectations. Avoid disappointment by not expecting too much, and waste of money by never purchasing the worthless; avoid sore spots in the heart, or where the heart should be, by always using Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor the only safe and painless remedy in the world for corns. Beware of substitutes, counterfeits and imitations. Sold by druggists and dealers in medicine every where.

The discovery of the instantaneous process of taking photographs has been quickly followed in the medical world by a perfect and instantaneous remedy for all acute aches and pains, as Neuralgia, Toothache, Rheumatism, etc. This valuable remedy is called Fluid Lightning, and is sold at 25 cents a bottle by Geo. Rhynas, Druggist.

Scotch Thrift.

The Scotch are, in some respects, the most wonderful people. It is reported that at the recent ball given to the Prince and Princess of Wales at the Agricultural Hall, in Dublin, all the flowers and plants used for decorative purposes came from the conservatories of a Glasgow florist. The Scotch have never a bright, sunny day, and barely any flowers at all, yet they are famous as landscape gardeners. They are the most bigoted race, yet they have produced the most radical thinkers. They have the most abominable climate, yet go without breeches and never seem to catch cold. They have barely any fruit, yet are celebrated for their jams. One would suppose a Scotchman had never seen an orange in his life, yet all the world delights in eating their Dundee marmalade. Surely they do more for the benefit of the world at large than the Irish do, and certainly give much less trouble.—[N. S. Sun.

How to select Clothing.

'How is an inexperienced buyer to distinguish between all-travel goods and the material containing a cotton warp?' asked a reporter of an up town tailor. 'By merely raveling out the rough edge of the material and inspecting the threads,' said the tailor. 'Any one can tell a cotton thread from a woolen thread. The one will break short in two, on being tested, while the other will fray and pass out like yarn and worsted. In this way you can readily detect a mixture of cotton warp in a sham all-woolen fabric.' 'How do you detect shoddy in cloth?' 'In just the same way, and even more easily. Fray out two or three threads from the rough edge, and untwist them. If they contain shoddy, it will drop out of the twist, sometimes like sand, and then again in an impalpable dust, that will lie enough make you sneeze. If you'd inhale enough of the stuff it would be apt to give you both a headache and a sore throat, for most shoddy is rank poison.'

A MARVELOUS STORY.

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: '23 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 25, 1884. 'Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the enclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous cure.'

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case. 'Yours truly, W. M. FILLIS.'

FROM THE FATHER: 'It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my health was rapidly failing. I commenced the use of the Sarsaparilla in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what is your secret, such a cure to my case, and I tell them as I have here tried to tell you. 'Yours truly, W. M. FILLIS.'

Ayer's Sarsaparilla cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Pimples, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Eczema, Tumors, and Eruptions of the skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, and stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

PREPARED BY Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists; 25 cent bottles for 50c.

DOMINION DAY

A Swift Little Boat.

The queer little craft that beat the Mary Powell from New York to Singapore, running the thirty-one miles in seventy-seven minutes, has created quite a sensation by her feat. For years the Mary Powell has been the fastest boat on the Hudson, capable as she is of running nearly twenty-five miles an hour. She has beaten every rival; even Jay Gould's yacht Atlantic was left astern by her. In making nearly twenty-seven miles an hour with 138 pounds of steam, the Stiletto astonished the world. The Stiletto was built by John B. Herreshoff, the blind boat builder of Bristol, R. I. She is 94 feet over all, 11 feet beam, and 7 1/2 feet hold. Below the water line both ends of the craft are very nearly alike, being modeled so as to present the smallest possible surface exposed to the water with a given buoyancy. Mr. Herreshoff says: "Our aim is not only to build a yacht capable of conveying business men quickly to and from their country residences and the city, but also to produce a craft which would be serviceable to the Government in case of necessity as a torpedo boat. The problem of the naval warfare of the future, it seems to me, is to be solved by speed and dynamite—or, to be more specific, that one of the great ironclads of the present time would be absolutely at the mercy of a number of small boats of great speed armed with dynamite guns. The proportion of beam to length, which in this boat is 8 1/2-11, is about that which experience has demonstrated to be the best for obtaining high speed and that to which we are tending in the construction of ocean steamships. Some years ago tendency was to make them much narrower, and the proportion was worked down to about 11, but lately it has been carried up again to about 9, and the results have proved more satisfactory. The engine is designed to produce the greatest amount of power with the least possible amount of vibration. It is an annular valve inverted compound engine. It has two cylinders, one of 12 inches the other of 21 inches diameter, with 12 inch stroke of piston. With the maximum steam pressure of 150 pounds it will make 450 revolutions per minute, and is capable of working with that high pressure and high number of revolutions with very little wear and very little liability to break down. The space required for it is very much smaller than that occupied by any other in use of the same power. The ordinary yacht engines are capable of making only from 175 to 225 revolutions per minute. The essential feature of the engine is in the construction of the cylinder, which consists of one cylinder within the other, with an annular space between in which the valve works. The steam ports, or openings through which the steam enters the inner cylinder, are ranged all around it at the top and bottom, so that the steam pressure is exerted on the piston head from all sides at once, and not as in the engines in use now from only one side. We have made as much as twenty-five miles an hour with the Stiletto, and she can probably make as much as twenty-seven miles. We did not urge her to the utmost when we passed the Powell, because we ran her under 140 pounds pressure, we reduced the pressure down to 115 pounds."

Concerning Printed Poems.

By Josiah W. Leeds, Philadelphia, 528 Walnut Street. Published for the author, 1885. Square 16 mo., pp. 42. Price (mailed), 8 cents; per dozen, 60 cents; fifty copies, $2.25. This is a sensible and timely little pamphlet, (Philadelphia: 528 Walnut Street.) It shows that the drift of much of the reading matter in the State (to a certain extent) is true of Canada) is toward the sensational and immoral. Dime novels and other more or less sensational publications are rendering multitudes of readers quite incapable of reading anything that requires either thought or attention. This trash literature is making very many juvenile law breakers, even in some cases so young as eight and ten years of age. The sale of such publications is simply enormous—far beyond what most people have any suspicion of. Things are not so bad in Ontario as in most of the States, but the trend is in the same direction. Pernicious publications from the other side were for a while stopped by our Custom authorities. That they are now circulated in large quantities may be ascertained by any one who chooses to look into many of the news stores in Toronto and other Canadian cities.

About The Fine Art.

Up to the date the record of protection in Canada is (1) that it has not provided steady employment for the Canadian people; (2) that it has not made workmen's wages higher than they would be without it; (3) that it has not stopped the exodus of the Canadians to the United States; (4) that it has not caused the investment of millions of foreign capital in Canada; (5) that it has not secured fair returns upon Canadian capital invested in manufactures; (6) that it has not provided so large and steady a home market for Canadian farm and garden produce as to make Canadian farmers independent of foreign markets. To these will soon be added that the protective tariff has failed to provide a revenue equal to the public expenditure of the year. It takes time to prove what frauds the Tories are, but time does its work with wonderful completeness.—[Hamilton Times.]

An Important Omission.

Dawny Campbell went to build a small outhouse of brick. After the usual fashion of bricklayers, he wrought from the inside, and having the materials close beside him, the walls were rising fast when dinner time arrived, and with it his son Jock, who brought his father's dinner. With honest pride in his eye Dawny looked at Jock over the wall on which he was engaged, and asked, "Hoo d'ye think I'm gettin on?" "Famous, father," but how d'ye get out? ye've forgot the door." One Jock around showed Dawny that his son was right; but, looking kindly at him, he said: "Man, Jock, ye've got a gran' heid on ye; ye'll be an architect yet, as shars yer father's a mason."

Ontario Steel Barb Fence Company

(LIMITED.)

SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF THE IMPROVED

"LOCKBARR" FENCE WIRE

Reasons why the "Lockbarr" is the Best Wire Fencing Manufactured.

We use only the best English Rosemer Steel Wire, and we claim that in its construction it is superior to all other barbed fence wires. The wires forming the four points pass between the wires of the cable, interlock each other and pass around the cable, which makes the strongest barb in the world. It has the advantage of always presenting the barb laterally, which no two-pointed barbed fence does.

At a recent test of the strength of the "Lockbarr," made at the Northern Railway Shops, in Toronto, the following was the result: Ontario Steel Barb Fence Co.'s, 1616 lbs., as against 1200 lbs. and 912 lbs. the Toronto Wire thus beating the Montreal Wire, and was awarded the contract.

THE RED, WHITE AND BLUE.

Goderich, April 30th, 1885.

The Poet's Corner.

Feeling the Fortune-Teller. I'll tell you your fortune, pretty maid! You may, if you tell it true. Well, I can see that you love right well A lad in sailor's blue.

Five Little White Heads.

WALTER LEARNED, IN ST. NICHOLAS FOR JUNE. Five little heads peeped out of the mold. When the dew was damp and the night was cold.

ONE OLD MAID.

A lowering morning, which made one wish for the sunny south or for Italy, for any place which would make one feel happier than could this dismal morning in Wisconsin.

Two ladies at once take their departure for the hotel, and other people stroll out about the depot, and there are left two persons, a man and woman, who, after a little time, settle themselves to reading to pass away the weary moments.

She looked curiously at the second train, but remembered that this was a junction, and did not notice her first nervous impulse, which was to go her to whom protector and ask him if he were on the right train.

An old maid she is, as far as years go, but no home is happier than her little ideal home. She had filled its rooms with bright little faces eagerly calling to mother, and the dream father is strong, earnest, helpful and loving.

'It is of no use to go back to that junction. We might as well go on to Chicago now and go from there; it will really take not much longer, and, as you trusted to my leading in the first place, I will, if you will let me, see you safe out of this trouble.

'I am used to taking care of myself,' she said, but her lips trembled a little.

'Where are you going?' he asked, and upon receiving a reply, added: 'I am going beyond there, so it will be no trouble to me to see you safe. I will telegraph your dilemmas to your friends at the next station; we shall reach Chicago in two hours, and the conductor tells me we can immediately take another train back, so that really the worst of it will be the extra four or five hours in the train.'

'Not that it matters much to me where I am,' he continued. 'Life can't give me anything harder than I've had.'

'That is a sad thing to say,' she said, in her timid way.

'A true thing, though,' he responded, and the corners of his sensitive mouth drooped a little more.

'How did you know her life was love,' he queried a little sharply. She hesitated a moment, then said, simply: 'It must have been, or you would not miss her from your living so much.'

'Oh, but it will come out straight in the next life,' she cried, eagerly. 'I don't know whether it will or not,' he responded. 'I haven't seen the next life yet, and I don't know what it is like, don't even know if there will be a next life; I only know that we are hedged in and around in this life.'

When the train drew into the great depot in Chicago, he felt that he had learned to know a pure soul, and she felt a deep pity for the lonely life opened to her view.

He sat silent for a long time after this, wondering if he dared do the thing he wished. He was lonely set adrift in the great world by the death of his wife, and he wanted a true womanly heart to sympathize with his.

'I have a good farm out there,' he said; '160 acres under fine improvement, house and outbuildings all in fine shape. You can find out all about me from Mr. —'

'I should be more generally understood among invalids that medicine, but it is a mode of motion or form of potential energy, which is set free when taken into the system, according to its chemical affinities.

He was baffled, and for a moment knew not what to say, then rallied and said: 'She has gone on into the future. I don't know what or where that life may be, and I am lost and lonely without her. I want that which has gone out of my life, and I believe you can supply that want. You are alone in the world, and I can make your life pleasant, I am sure.'

'I loved once, and have loved ever since, and it would not be right for me to marry any one, feeling as I do.'

'I shall always remember you and your happy ways of looking at life, and your faith will help me,' and then he swung on to the slowly-moving train, and she walked away into the gloaming, a tear or two falling as she thought of the lonely days to come.—The Current.
