CHAPTER VIII.
 "Enter Mr. Jack Madison!"

LIKE that face, she said positively. "Shall I write down its description, or can you spare the photo?"

"I cannot give up the photo, but I will have it copied for you."

"That will do. Go about it tomorrow. I may leave very soon, now. And, Cousin Alphonse, do not give up your true love. Just as surely as I and you are talking together, everything will come right for Margaret and you. Be patient a little. Can you trust me?"

"Indeed I can, Bessie."

"Say for six months?"

"For all my life!"

"Oh, that is a big promise. I will not ask so much. Be true to yourself and Margaret for six months."

"Six months?"

"So long, and no longer. And do not forget to have the photo copied."

"Do you expect to find Jack in six months?"

"I really do. Now I am going to Louis, but I shall not name Cousin Jack to her. Jack is our secret. Don't forget the photo. It must be copied in a few days."

"Stay and talk a little longer, Bessie. You make life look so different."

"Then go and write a long love letter to Margaret, and make life look like one large hope to her. If I had a lover, I should insist on love-letters, even if he lived next door to me. Write a long, sweet one, Alphonse. You have no idea how girls do love love-letters."

She left him, with his new found hopes, but she did not go to Louis. With swift little feet she sought her own room. She locked the door and sat down a dab began to laugh softly to herself. Then she got up and went to the looking-glass and gazed at her happy, rose face and sparkling eyes, and, after another long peal of laughter, she said:

"My very hair is kinking and curling with laughter. I wonder how I behaved so well! I do not think Alphonse suspected anything. Now I know why he did not get up to see me leave the steam-rail. G-d bless. There are reasons, for ever, of course, if we had our hearts to discover them; and now I know why Mr. John Newton did not wish to meet Mr. Sam Madison, not to speak of Mr. Alphonse. 'T is a pretty little play as ever was, and I would not spoil it for any consideration. But it will not be very long ere I shall say: "Enter, Mr. Jack Madison!"

CHAPTER IX.
BESSIE'S CONFIDENCES.

"Let me, then, take my will for a reason."

"And what but this is sweet—at last to win The fields of home, that change not while we change."

A creature not too bright and good For human nature's daily food.

other interests to occupy her time and thoughts. They were for some weeks a happy in the main as it permitted to be. The doctor certainly wearied of the frequent dinners and balls he was compelled to give and to receive, because behind this outward seeming of indefinite time there was a consciousness that he had not time enough for all the duties he ought to perform and all the plans he wished to carry out.

He endeavoured at first to gratify both his wife and himself by giving up the hours of sleep to his investigations. But the result of this effort was a nervous irritability and a physical weakness he was quite able to diagnose. He came to the conclusion that he must give up society or resign his profession, and he put the case very frankly before Ambrosia.

She was sure there was some middle side way. Women are always in favor of half-and-half measures, and thence cometh their misery. She would not hear of the doctor resigning his lectures and scientific researches. They made him famous. As for his patients they made him rich. And society, she thought, was really his best advertising medium. When he went to a dinner at some multi-millionaire's palace pointed him out as one of the cleverest and most advanced physicians in America. Multi-millionaires are certain to be multi-invalids, and what will not a man give for his health when he has once thrown it away? Ambrosia could fortify her arguments with the most respectable list of patients, and as the doctor had no counter-arguments worth speaking of, the question, though frequently agitated, remained practically unaltered.

This was a case in which Will Carter found himself in an embarrassing position. He was a plain little man, and he felt his physical deficiencies very much. When Ambrosia put on the garments and the attitudes of a queen, he had reluctance to be her only attendant. Robert perfectly matched her in stature and in the air of superb dignity she affected; and if Robert was to bear the weight of the comparison, Will was delighted to be Ambrosia's faithful squire—to carry her fan and cloak, to fetch her an ice and order her carriage, or even to dance with her when a disagreeable partner was to be avoided.

Then, it must be admitted, that Ambrosia had a slight contempt for Will. Adversity had not opened her eyes. She was yet influenced almost entirely by what appealed to the senses. Nothing could make Will Carter handsome, and his intelligence and good heart were not qualities society required or valued. She was ashamed of Will's bad taste in gloves and neckties, of his little embarrassing moments with young ladies and his ineffectiveness with old ladies, and she was not proud of his self-denying charities, his wide erudition or his great musical skill. These things were not outward and visible graces like well-fitting gloves and a nonchalant air, and, of course, if people live for society, then the things which society endorses are the things to live for.

So Will, in social matters, could not fill his brother's place; and Ambrosia, very delicately and flatteringly, made the doctor feel this. He blushed with pleasure even while he pooh-poohed the idea, and affected to be a century behind Will in all things lovely and of good report. Yet the personal compliment went into all the little corners of his heart, and he fastened his consideration for his pretty wife's youth and her vanity about his own handsome face and figure.

"I ought to be at hospital to-night," he thought; "I really ought. But then Amber ought also to have some company. She is so young and so foolish about going out only with me, and so proud of me, what can I do but try to give her a few hours? Duty is a great 'dull' but, then, there are so many kinds of duties—and Amber loves me!" And, of course, this consideration made it very easy for him to do his duty to Amber.

In domestic life, however, Will had a great and acknowledged influence. It was Will who smoothed away those tempers which came often from Robert's inconsiderate and unavoidable delays, and who said the wisest words which often made the worst impossible. It was Will who went on Ambrosia's little errands, and who hunted the town through for her fancies; who attended to the printing of invitation cards and the ordering of flowers, and, who, in short, spared Ambrosia physically and counseled and consoled her mentally in the many small perplexities and emergencies that social life creates and insists upon.

"The Liberator."

From our cable despatch it will be seen that "The Liberator" prosecution is attracting much attention in the English press.

"A little while ago we were offered the amusing spectacle of the English Parliament debating gravely the question of what the King's religion should be.

"In other words, the Constitution prevents the sovereign from having a soul of his own.

"The members of the British Parliament are chiefly remarkable for the skillful manner in which they avoid discussing all vital questions.

"The latest sensation in the royal cattle-market of Europe was the effort made to secure a royal English bride for innocent little Manuel of Portugal.

"Monarchy, with its crowned and spangled mediocrities, its mental inferiority, its manufactured glamour, its bacchic proclivities, its artificial rule for measuring human value, its morbid craving for luxury and class-distinction, its hatred of truth and love of ritual, its frigid indifference to questions of social justice, needs to be combated in the new world as well as in the old.

"The Durango is due here from Halifax to-day.

"The Nellie Louise, fish laden by Bowring's sails to-morrow, for Pernambuco.

"The Florizet left New York at 3 p.m. Saturday for this port via Halifax.

The Fever Outbreak.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—We have fever in town just now, and there is much comment about how we developed it. I have read some very sensible letters in the People's Paper about the sickness. In what they say, especially Tim Shanahan's. Now, then, this is the right way to get at the proper system of doing things. I mean by getting the opinion of your many writers. Abusing the Council, or our City Fathers as they call them, is no benefit. These people do the best they can under the present system. There is no money in Council work. These men give their time for almost nothing. Abusing them does no good, but it may do harm. You may not get a respectable citizen to stand for that office in time to come. What you want is the Government to draw out a system regarding the city's welfare. While farmers spread night soil over meadow land and cabbage gardens you will always have lots of germs to poison the air, and the prevention of sickness is impossible, for the germs of three parts of the city are spread over the farmland of this country. Then, Mr. Editor, we in our ignorance ask where the fever came from, and here we are even eating the germs from the products of the night soil farmland. There is no doubt about this. It's almost too true, for every day throats to suck down. Deep sinken pits should be made for this night soil, and any farmer who used it on his garden should be heavily fined, for this is the cause of spreading germs and the taking of many lives. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am,

Yours truly,
ARTHUR WHEELER.

Pleasant Sunday.

Mr. J. E. Ray delivered a nice interesting address on the "Mystery of God," yesterday afternoon. Man throughout all the ages had tried to penetrate the mysteries of the Creator, and realized nothing after all but a more overwhelming sense of His mystery and Majesty. In Christ alone was to be found the Diana representation. Mr. Ray is a pleasing speaker and his address yesterday was particularly good.

With the Adventists.

The discourse on prominent Bible characters at the Adventist Church has proved very interesting and profitable. That of last night was exceptionally so. Elder Keslake's subject was "Abraham or the Obedience of Faith." From the midst of an idolatrous people God called Abraham to go forth into a country that he would afterward show him. By faith Abraham obeyed, not knowing where he was going. Later God gave him and Sarah, his wife, the promised son, Isaac, through whom Christ was to come. But the promise was fulfilled at a time when, humanly speaking, children could not be born to them. But the greatest trial of both the couple came to Abraham when he was called upon to offer up Isaac, who was then a young man of twenty-two years. For three days they journeyed to the place that God had appointed. During that period the conflict between reason and faith was waged. How could God mean for Abraham to offer up his only son, when through him, he had been told, the promisee seen, Christ, was to come. Reason could not solve the problem; faith could and did. Abraham believed that God would fulfill his promise by raising Isaac from the dead, from which he did receive him in a figure. So it is now. God calls us to forsake all and walk alone with him. Despite the most forbidding appearances faith in God's word will triumph. All must be tested as Abraham was before the promises in Christ are realized. The sermon was replete with Scripture quotations and practical thoughts, and was enjoyed by all present. Elder Keslake's next subject will be "Isaac or Laughter."

OBITUARY.

MRS. A. CAREEN.

There passed peacefully away at Point Lance, on January 17th, Mrs. Anthony Careen, aged 36 years. She was ailing for the past two years. She bore her illness with great patience and resignation, she was ever ready to respond to the call of her maker. Two months previous to her death was born a baby girl, and all thought she was on the road to recovery, but the "White Plague" soon set in and claimed her for its victim. She was of a meek and gentle disposition and one could but admire her pleasing face. Her funeral was largely attended which showed the esteem in which she was held. She leaves a husband, five children and a large circle of friends to mourn their sad loss. R. I. P.—Com. Point Lance, Jan. 22, 1911.

At Cochrane St. Church

Rev. Mr. Sawden, of Springdale, occupied the pulpit of Cochrane Street Church yesterday morning, preaching a most thoughtful sermon from the words, "What think ye of Christ?" The preacher gave his hearers three choice thoughts—that Jesus Christ is a unique personality; He is a supreme teacher; and an unrivalled Redeemer—closing with the question, "What does Christ think of you?" The evening service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. F. R. Matthews, B.A. "The Law of Christian Liberty" was the subject chosen, in view of the "Thanksgiving Service" to take place next Sunday. The pastor made an earnest appeal. "We are not to give grudgingly, or of necessity, but to give cheerfully, remembering the blessings that have come to us as a church and people during the year. At the close of the sermon, Miss Vincent, in a fine, clear voice, sang as a solo, "If I were a voice."

Death of Miss Knowling

The death occurred yesterday morning at the residence of her father, "Silverton," Kilbride, of Miss Elizabeth Knowling, eldest daughter of Hon. George Knowling, after an illness of short duration. When the sad fact became known in the city the many friends of the deceased lady and her father and family were shocked, as, though it was known she was ill Saturday, none expected a fatal outcome. As a matter of fact the deceased lady with Mrs. Knowling and other friends were booked to leave here for England by the Carthaginian. Miss Knowling's illness, however, took a serious turn Saturday and a consultation of physicians was held and everything possible done to restore her, but without avail. Miss Knowling was widely known and highly esteemed and sympathy for her parents and relatives is general and sincere. She was the only child left to cheer the home circle, the others of the family being married and residing away from the parental abode. There are left to mourn the deceased lady, her parents, Hon. Geo. and Mrs. Knowling; Mrs. W. Franklin, Mrs. John Lindberg, Miss Urquhart (Windsor), and Messrs. Philip, George and William Knowling. To the bereaved parents and relatives the Telegram extends its sincere sympathy in this their sad bereavement.

The Trial of Mylius.

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, Jan. 29.
The News of the World says that King George's advisers have instituted criminal libel proceedings with the object of ending the rumours which have been freely circulated for years that His Majesty, when Prince of Wales, was moragnatically married to the daughter of an Admiral at Malta. The defendant in the case, Edward F. Mylius, is said to be connected with the paper, "Liberator," published in Paris, which printed statements on which the libel charge is based. Mylius was arrested some time ago, committed for trial, and sent to jail. In an ordinary case of criminal libel, the proceedings would be in the Central Criminal Court, but, on application of the Crown, the present action will be brought up in the High Court of Justice, before Lord Chief Justice Alverstone and a special jury. According to a statement in the Liberator, the defendant intends to advance the plea of justification, and also to subpoena the King as a witness. Constitutional law, however, makes it impossible for His Majesty to give evidence in his own courts.

Taft is Determined.

Special to Evening Telegram. WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.
President Taft is determined that the Reciprocity agreement shall pass. If his own party fails to put in operation the reciprocal trade pact it is said that the President will not hesitate to submit the programme to the Democrats. One man in the confidence of the President said that Taft would not hesitate to call an extra session of Congress, if he thought such a course would do the business. The overturning of the majority in the House of Representatives and the great change in the complexion of the Senate after March 4th, will, it is thought, give the President a chance of success. Seven Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee are believed to be in sympathy with the agreement. It is certain that four republicans will vote to report it. It is in the Senate that the barriers now appear to be impregnable.

Garvin is Hysterical.

Special Evening Telegram. LONDON, Jan. 29.
The Observer, the "Unionist" paper, edited by J. L. Garvin, in a characteristic article says that British democracy is likely to pay dearly for the "orgies of Lloyd Georgeism." The first forfeits will soon be demanded in what tariff reformers prophecy is a length to happen. President Taft has secured the initial triumph for North Americanism.

How to Grow Hair.

It has been proven that Henna leaves contain the ingredients which will positively grow hair. That they contain this long-sought-for article is proven every day.

This preparation is called SALVIA and is being sold with a guarantee to cure Dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed, SALVIA makes a most pleasant hair-dressing. McMurdo & Co., your druggist, is the first to import this preparation into St. John's, and a large, generous bottle can be procured for 50c.

$100,000 Bail.

Special Evening Telegram. LONDON, This morning.
All the morning papers publish stories of the intention of the King's advisers to carry the Mylius case to court on a charge of criminal libel. The Morning Post publishes an article on the constitutional law of such an unusual case, saying the police arrested Mylius during the long vacation, and had abstained from charging him in a police court, according to the usual procedure. Application was made to Vacation Judge Chambers on behalf of the prisoner, who issued a writ of Habeas Corpus, and on the return of the writ committed him for trial and fixed his bail at $100,000. This amount Mylius has been unable to furnish, and he has remained in custody. As a result, Mylius was committed legally for trial without much publicity, and until recently the London papers made but brief references to the case. It is understood that the proceedings in the suit are founded on a Statute 200 years old.

The Why and Whereof of Toms--Hand and

The Why and Whereof of Man Army Customs—Hand and Salute—The Origin of the Form Goes Back to the Time of the Bogias and the Latter to the Knights of the Crusades—Funeral Valleys and Taps.

Why does a soldier when saluting superior raise his hand to his forehead? The beginning dates back to the time of the Bogias, if not earlier. In those days assassination was in vogue, and in order that an inferior might not have a superior advantage the inferior was compelled when coming into his superior's presence to raise his right hand, not to the front, to show that no dagger was concealed there. From this custom our hand salute has come down.

The salute with the sword was not done that way in the beginning either. When knights of the crusades received their orders it was the custom for them to call upon God to witness their assumption of the orders given. To do this the sword was raised to the front so that the hilt reached the lips, when the cross formed by the hilt and blade would be kissed and an oath registered to carry out the orders faithfully. The dropping of the sword, point to the front, indicates submission.

Why in the funeral cortege of a mounted officer or soldier is the horse saddled and equipped with the trappings of the late rider placed before the front in the stirrups, led to the side of the burial? To show by reason of the boots the owner's march has been made.

We must go back to the days of the Romans for the reason why in the service three volleys are fired over the open grave of a comrade. Among the Romans the burial consisted of the throwing of earth three times on the coffin. Three times was the dead man called by name, which ended the ceremony, and as the friends and relatives departed each said "Adieu" three times. So as a farewell to our dear comrades we fire three volleys over the grave. Then the service called.

Responsible.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Kindly permit me space in the columns of your paper to say something regarding Mr. Myrick's proposal to the City Council for an amendment to the Municipal Act as to the collection of occupiers or tenants tax, which amendment, if carried through, will render the landlord or lessee liable for the six months taxes even though he may have only collected one month's rent from tenant.

Now, Mr. Editor, I as one of the heavy taxpayers cannot see how we are going to live, if we have to pay heavier taxes than we are already paying for water rates, etc. Next we shall be taxed according to the amount of milk we consume in our water. I feel sure that this amendment will be most detrimental to landlords, as we are already charging a high rental for our houses in order to meet the heavy taxes now levied upon us, and if we are to raise our rents still higher the income of the average workman would be insufficient to meet the demands; whilst on the other hand under the present system those who can afford to pay water rates will not cavil. Would it not be a better plan for the Council to collect monthly taxes from monthly tenants? They would then realize much larger revenue in water rates than under the present six months system.

Thanking you for space, I am, Mr. Editor, Yours respectfully,
Jan. 30, 1911. LANDLORD.

From this old custom our hand salute has come down.

The salute with the sword was not done that way in the beginning without any reason. When knights of the crusades received their orders it was the custom for them to call upon God to witness their assumption of the orders given. To do this the sword was raised to the front so that the hilt reached the lips, when the cross formed by the hilt and blade could be kissed and an oath registered to carry out the orders faithfully. We must go back to the days of the Romans for the reason why in the service three volleys are fired over the open grave of a comrade. Among the Romans the burial consisted of the throwing of earth three times on the coffin. Three times was the dead man called by name, which ended the ceremony, and as the friends and relatives departed each said "vale" three times. So as a farewell to our dead comrades we fire three volleys over the grave. Then the service called

There is a reason why the flag at half staff, as an indication of sorrow, must always be hoisted to the top of the staff before being lowered. Why the flag is saluted when raised and lowered only when it is necessary to display it at half mast it must be raised to the top before being finally lowered, for at this time the gun fires its salute, and either the band or the trumpeters are sounding appropriate music or call.

Twenty-one guns, the number fired in the international salute, were not selected at random. The number was chosen by our government because it was the number long used by the British for their international salute. Why the British used twenty-one guns was no doubt due to an early custom which had for a warship salute seven guns. A fort was allowed to fire three times as many guns as a warship, because in those days it was difficult to keep powder in good condition at sea. It could be kept in good condition on land, and consequently the shore battery was allowed a larger number, or twenty-one. When the time arrived that better powder was made and it could be carried at sea without deterioration the warship was allowed the same number of guns as the shore battery, and the twenty-one of to-day are the result.—Major B. W. Atkinson, U. S. A., in Chicago Record-Herald.

MORRIS-McDONALD.

On January 24th a very pretty and quiet wedding took place at the residence of the bride's parents, 66 Lime Street, when J. N. McDonald, M.D., son of the late J. H. McDonald, barrister, of Shelburne, Nova Scotia, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony, by Rev. Mons. Roche, to Miss Phoebe Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Morris of this city. The bride was attired in a pretty costume of cream broadcloth, with hat trimmed with ostrich plumes. She was attended by her sister, Miss Annie Morris, who wore a costume of tabac brown. The groom was supported by Mr. S. A. Righty, of the Bank of Montreal. After refreshments were partaken of, the happy couple joined the express for their future home, Curling, Bay of Islands. The bride wore a pretty travelling costume of wine colored cloth trimmed with velvet, and hat to match. They were the recipients of very many useful and pretty presents. The Telegram extends congratulations.

Launey Badly Stove.

At noon Saturday Bowring Bros. steam launch had hard work getting from the south to the north side of the harbor, and in butting through the ice stove her bows so badly that engineer Squires had a race for it to get to this side quick enough to prevent the launch sinking under him in the middle of the harbor. When the launch was injured, water flowed into the boat at such an alarming rate that the pump which was set going could not keep her free, and when the launch arrived at the wharf the slams were given and a half bag of broad quickly fetched from the retail store was thrust through the hole in the bows from the inside, and tackle was quickly rigged from the after davits of the Prospero and made fast to the launch, when he bow was raised and water could no longer get on board. The launch will be docked today for repairs.

Obituary.

JAMES HEALEY.

His friends and acquaintances were shocked this morning to learn of the death of Mr. James Healey. Deceased was taken ill of a heavy cold two weeks ago and it developed into pneumonia. Mr. Healey was in his 27th year, and was a popular young man, being President of the People's Club and President of St. Patrick's Club. He worked at T. J. Allan's store the past four years. A widow, father, mother and several brothers and sisters are left to mourn their loss. Funeral will take place from No. 1 Job Street at 2.30 p.m. to-morrow.

While doing his beat with another officer at 3 a.m. yesterday, and while the snow storm raged fiercely, Constable Power found a man who was overcome with drink lying on the street and almost smothered. Had he not been discovered he would have perished, and when conveyed to the station the unfortunate man was in a bad way. The man is subject to epileptic fits and it is thought that when he fell he was stricken with this illness.

After discharging her coal cargo here the S. S. Pontopidan will go to Nova Scotia to load lumber for South America.

8870-8871. Ladies' Costume.

Composed of Ladies' Waist Pattern 8870 and Ladies' Skirt 8871. The designs may be developed in any of this season's popular dress materials. Brown broadcloth, with tucked net for the guimpe or tucker portion, and bands of Persian embroidery for trimming would be very effective. Green velvet with lace and passementerie would develop equally well. The waist pattern is cut in 6 sizes—32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 inches bust measure. The skirt pattern in 5 sizes—23, 24, 26, 28, 30 inches waist measure. The entire costume requires 6 1/2 yards yards of 36 inch material for the 1 1/2 yards of 36 inch material for the tucker for the 36 inch size.

The EVENING TELEGRAM.

THE advertiser who puts his Adverts. in the EVENING TELEGRAM never complains of results. It is read and believed by the people who buy goods. That is one reason why the TELEGRAM'S advertising columns Carry More Advertising Than Any Other Newspaper in Newfoundland.

That fact "speaks for itself," and it is not our intention just now to emphasize it further. What we want to do is to bring home to the business men (if there are any who have not availed of our columns in the past) the advantage to be gained through a liberal use of the TELEGRAM, in bringing before the people what they want the public—the great buying public—most to know :

The Kind of Goods They Have To Sell, the Quality of the Goods, Prices, &c.

If that is what the shopkeeper wants the public to learn, the TELEGRAM is the right medium through which it can be conveyed, because—

1st. It has the largest circulation, and

2nd. Consequently it is the most widely-read newspaper in Newfoundland ;

3rd. Naturally, then, it must be THE BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM in Newfoundland ;

4th. Therefore, the advertiser has everything to gain, and nothing to lose, by availing of the services of the EVENING TELEGRAM during 1911.

We have opened 2 Sheds Prime North Sydney Coal to-day. Can be seen at Tessier & Co's Premises. Sent Home at Our Usual Low Price.

Why was every Coal Dealer allowed to build wooden sheds, covered with iron, and WE were refused? Was it because we lowered the price of COAL?

Orders taken at Beck's Cove Office, our Wharf Office, and at Tessier's Wharf.
