Weakened by Anaemia Doctors Gave No Hope

Said She Was Threatened With Consumption, and Gave Her Three Weeks To Live.

Anaemia is indicated by thin, watery blood. The gums and eyelids grow pale, there is great weakness and fatigue and digestion fails.

Since Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood, it is naturally most suitable as a treatment for anaemia. This letter proves its efficiency in the most severe cases.

Mrs. J. Adams, Port Hope, Ont., writes: "About six years ago I was taken with very weak spells, and though I doctored with the family physician and used other medicines for two years, I got very little relief and, in fact, continued to grow weaker. I was so weak I could not walk on myself or raise my hand to my head and decided to go to my daughter in Toronto. When examined by Toronto doctors they pronounced me to be in a dangerous condition, threatened with consumption and other ailments and said I would not live for three weeks. One day I was looking through Dr. Chase's Almanac and read about the cure of anaemia by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I began the use of this treatment at once and am now well on the way back to health, after having used the Nerve Food for six months. I want my friends to know that my cure was effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food alone and after my discouragement from the use of other treatments. I feel it my duty to let everybody know about this remarkable cure."

As a restorative for persons who are pale, weak and run down there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Gradually and naturally the red corpuscles are increased in the blood, the color is restored to the cheeks and the strength comes back to wasted nerves and muscles. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

The Web; OR, TRUE LOVE'S PASSION.

CHAPTER XIX.
A Suspicious Scene.

CYRIL—for we will call him so still—had escaped from London in time to be present at the ball by one of those lucky chances which favor ardent lovers.

On the morning of the 14th he had called at Lord Newall's in a state of desperation which almost prompted him, in case he should find that that erratic nobleman had not returned, to leave a polite message to the effect that Lord Newall must find some one else to paint his picture. He had hunted Moses' shop and Harley street every day, and had worked himself into a frame of mind which rendered him a nuisance to himself and to Jack, as that candid friend did not fail to inform him.

But it is the unexpected which always happens, and to Cyril's inquiry, "Is Lord Newall at home?" the footman replied in the affirmative.

Lord Newall, little suspecting that the young artist was Viscount Santleigh, an heir to a peerage compared with which Lord Newall's was a mere mushroom, treated Cyril with that mixture of cordiality and condescension which is so exasperating, and expressed his desire that Cyril should set off at once—that is, the next day, the 15th—for Brittany.

"I am going there to-morrow, and shall be glad if you will accompany me," he said.

Cyril felt sorely tempted to decline the offer and the invitation, but it occurred to him as he hesitated—much to Lord Newall's astonishment—that he could run down to Santleigh and see Norah before he started; and, full of his resolve to make himself famous before he presented himself to the Earl of Arrowsdale, he signified his acceptance of the proposal.

"You won't start until the night mail, I suppose?" he said, not quite so respectfully as Lord Newall was accustomed to be addressed by his "inferiors." "Because I don't think I could manage it if you started any earlier."

"I will go by the night mail, Mr. Burne," said his lordship, a little haughtily.

"All right, then," said Cyril, "I'll be at the station—my lord," he remembered to add.

He jumped into a hansom, and, dashing into Jack's room, informed him, all in a breath, of the arrangement he had made with Lord Newall, and that he intended running down to Santleigh at once.

"Can't you write?" asked Jack, and Cyril had colored.

"Write? No, you know I can't. Besides, I—I may be kept over in that beastly place for months. What, go without seeing her? I'd rather let the picture slide."

"Brittany is anything but a beastly place," remarked Jack with a smile. "But go down and bid your lady-love adieu, by all means. You'll look in here as you come back?"

Cyril caught a train, and arrived at The Chequers at sunset, and considerably flurried Mrs. Brown by telling her that he was going to leave The Chequers the next morning, and demanding a clean shirt, hot water, and his dress clothes.

While he was dressing—which he did in a kind of mental abstraction, thinking all the time of how Norah would look when he entered the ballroom—he missed his ring, and, on coming down, asked Mrs. Brown if she had seen it.

"A ring, sir?" she said, getting flurried instantly. "Oh, dear me, sir! You don't mean to say that you've lost—"

"Oh, no, never mind," broke in Cyril, promptly. "I dare say I've left it somewhere about the rooms. I've dropped it somewhere else; I'm always losing something. Don't be alarmed, Mrs. Brown, but if you find my head lying about some day, please put it on the mantelshelf. Don't worry about the ring," and he hurried out to his fly, which he had ordered as he came through the village, and was driven away, leaving Mrs. Brown in a nice state of confusion, and muttering: "Bless me, what a wild young gentleman he be! But there, he's a harlot, and he can't help it."

Cyril was driven to the park, and entered the anteroom of the ballroom to leave his dustcoat, and while he was being relieved of it by the footman peering through the opening into the big marquee.

It was brilliantly lighted, and looked indeed like a fairy scene, with its flowers and flags and its myriad of vari-colored lamps. But he could not see the one person for a sight of whom his heart ached. Then he entered, and, looking round with scarcely concealed eagerness, saw her—saw her dancing with Gullford Berton!

She was smiling at something he was saying, and her loveliness, heightened by her simple ball dress, bewildered and overwhelmed him. To the lover the beauty of his mistress is always changing, intensifying, always a sacred mystery and subject for wonderment.

Hitherto he had only seen her in ordinary walking attire; to-night she was arrayed for conquest: a queen in splendor, though her dress was only a simple one—her arms gleaming like ivory, her red-brown hair shining like burnished gold, her beautiful eyes glowing with the reflected many-colored lights, her lips half-parted with a smile.

He gazed at her open-eyed, drinking in her loveliness, falling down before it, mentally, and worshipping it. Could it be possible that this lovely creature had condescended to love him, to tell him so, to promise to be his wife?

Then all in a moment a chill struck him. She was dancing with another man, his arm was round her waist, her hand was resting on his shoulder, and that man was—Gullford Berton! And he had come all this way to see this!

Love is unreasonable, illogical. It never occurred to him that, being there, Norah could scarcely refuse to dance because her lover—who had left her for nearly a fortnight without a word of explanation—was absent! He did not think of that, but stood still, and suddenly grew cold—not hot—with unconscious jealousy.

At that moment Lady Ferndale saw him, and went up to him.

"Mr. Burne," she said; "and at last! How unkind of you to keep away from us all day!"

"It is my fate that is unkind, Lady Ferndale," he said. "I assure you—"

"Never mind. I shall keep my scolding until after supper, and so give you time to invent some pretty excuses. But now you have come you must dance. Let me see."

She looked round, and saw Becca standing looking on with glittering eyes, her small foot softly tapping the ground impatiently, and her ladyship, thinking "At any rate, I have found a handsome partner for him," went toward her.

"There is a young lady—that pretty one with the black hair. Will you dance with her?"

"I will dance with any one you are good enough to choose for me," said Cyril, and he went up to Becca, casting a longing, wistful thought, if not a wistful glance, toward Norah.

Becca blushed becomingly, and her dark face grew radiant. She had thrown over her last partner, whose clumsy movements had threatened the destruction of her frock, and had been dying to dance. And now Mr. Burne, a real gentleman—though an artist—had chosen her.

Becca could dance—Santleigh and Ferndale girls took to it naturally, just as the children of the Pacific Islands take to swimming—and, to her delight, Mr. Burne was simply a perfect waiter. Blushing with pleasure and pride, she went two or three times round the room with him, then the smile on her parted lips and in her glittering eyes died away, and she stopped.

"What is the matter?" asked Cyril, awaking from a moody abstraction. "Anything wrong? Haven't I got your step, Becca?"

"Oh, you dance beautifully, beautifully, Mr. Burne," said Becca. "But—but I want to pick up my dress."

But it was not to arrange her train that she had stopped. When she had started for the ball that evening Becca was perfectly satisfied with her dress, but deplored the fact of one thing being lacking—she had no jewelry. All the ladies would, she thought, be smothered in diamonds, and most of the village girls would have brooches or bracelets or ear-rings, and she had nothing, not even a—

Then, suddenly there flashed upon her the remembrance of the ring she had "found" beside Cyril's watch.

Now, a man, if he had stolen it, would never have dreamed of wearing it in public. Only a woman—and only a woman of Becca's type—would have had the courage and audacity of even entertaining the thought.

She looked at it, put it on, held up her hand before the glass, and—went to the hall in it!

She had it on when Cyril entered, and had meant to take it off, but when he approached her and asked her to dance she forgot the ring in her flurry and fluster of pride and gratification, and only remembered it after the third turn.

She stooped down, found the arrangement of the train so difficult that it required both hands, and managed to take off the ring and slip it into her pocket.

"I'm all right now, sir," she said, looking up at him with angelic innocence in her black eyes, and they resumed their dancing.

Poor Cyril danced like a machine, in perfect time and harmony, but neither his heart nor his brain was in it, and all his soul was intent upon his beautiful sweetheart.

He watched her, sometimes directly, sometimes over his shoulder, and he saw her walk off on Gullford Berton's arm. They disappeared for a time, and then when he saw them next the dark-faced, self-possessed Berton was still her companion.

Cyril wondered whether they had been dancing together before, whether they had "spent the evening" in each other's company, and his heart ached and burned as he tried to talk to Becca, who was really dancing beautifully and deserved on that account a little attention.

Veils of coarse dark, tulle are heavily embroidered in white or gray.

A slender woman can follow almost any fashion and look right in it.

Many of the best looking dresses for small girls are fashioned on middy lines.

Incandescent Gas Lighting.

Possibly, the feature of incandescent gas lighting most frequently noted by casual observers is the great ease with which tasks, ordinarily arduous under artificial light may be performed under the Welsbach gas mantle. The light has a peculiarly "soft" quality, difficult to describe, but which is readily recognized by those who have had experience with the gas mantle lamp.

In its general effect upon bodily health and comfort, the use of incandescent gas lighting is decidedly favorable. The currents of air set up by the burning gas improves ventilation, tending to expel the air vitiated by respiration and draw in fresh air to replace it. Harmful or dangerous disease germs are instantly destroyed in the flame. The extent to which this effect takes place may be verified by placing a gas lamp close to a ceiling without any provision for interfering with the up-rushing air currents. The charred particles which collect immediately above the lamp are the remains of dust particles which before passing through the flames were laden with germs and microbes. Actual experiments have shown that the burning of gas lamps in rooms previously containing bacteria, resulted in absolute sterilization of the air.

Contrary to the popular notion the temperature of rooms lighted by incandescent gas lamps is seldom markedly greater than under incandescent electric light, even under unfavorable conditions of ventilation, while in rooms provided with the ventilating facilities required by the demands of hygiene, the temperature in gas-lighted rooms is frequently lower.

Telegram Fashion Plates.

The Home Dressmaker should have a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Fashion Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

A SIMPLE, PRACTICAL STYLE.

1596—Ladies' House or Morning Dress.

In linen, khaki, gingham, seersucker or percale, this style will be most serviceable. It is made with overlapping fronts, and round neck outline, and has a four-gore skirt cut in comfortable fulness. The sleeve in wrist length is finished with a hand cuff. In short length a neat turnback cuff forms a suitable trimming. The model could also be developed in serge, flannel or flannellette, and is nice, too, for lawn. The Pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 6 1/2 yards of 36-inch material for a 36-inch size. The skirt measures about 3 yards at the lower edge.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

A SMART AND PRETTY STYLE FOR MOTHER'S GIRL.

1891—Girl's Dress with Added Trimming.

Serge, gabardine, voile, prunella, checked suiting and plaid mixtures, taffeta, velvet and corduroy are nice for this style. The trimmings could be of matched satin on serge or of checked or plaid suiting. The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. It requires 3 1/2 yards of 36-inch material for a 10-year size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

Seven Glorious Hours at Verdun.

How the French Regained Ground—Surprise Attack in Rain and Mud.

By E. Ashmead Bartlett.

I have just witnessed the crowning irony of the war—in all history, I have watched the French army of Verdun—exhausted and useless, according to the reports—relate in seven hours, out withdrawing a man or a gun, the Somme, practically the whole ground which it took the Prince's army six months to hold at a cost of roughly half a million of the best German troops.

Donnaumont was the key to the and to peace, according to the proclamation.

It turned out to be neither the nor the other.

Every German hope and every perilous promise was concentrated on Donnaumont. For the possession of this dominating plateau the German infantry fought and died like heroes. No one will deny that. For that plateau the German people gave sons, willingly, relying on the Imperial word that decisive victory must be won which would bring the longest peace in its bloody train.

Now in seven hours all is changed. The work and futile sacrifices of months have been undone at a cost which perhaps may work out at eight per cent. of the achievement.

Moral Value of the Victory.

The importance of the victory, not to be calculated in mere words or figures. It is the moral effect on German people and on the German army that must count most in the long run. The truth is, however, that cannot be concealed for ever. The French army at Verdun was shown to be exhausted. But October 26th showed that with proper artillery, port and sound infantry tactics, with a minimum of loss the German army can retake positions in hours which cost them six months to lose. There is only one constant to put on these facts. There is other possible explanation. The German army in the west everywhere stands in numbers, guns, and morale. It can only be won in the west. The German army is slowly but surely being whittled down. Its open veins are now bled. It is only a question of time, patience, fresh sacrifices, unlimited munitions.

Days of Big Gun Fire.

For some days the enemy seem to have had an expectation that the attack was mediated, and he had in a state of extreme nervousness. Thus the actual hour of the attack may have taken him by surprise, but he cannot claim it was altogether unexpected. For days French heavy guns have been smashing his positions to pulp, and Sunday afternoon being seized, the sudden panic of an expected flank attack the enemy opened "ferocious barrage" with no fewer than eighty batteries, the position of which the French have been endeavoring to accurately locate weeks. Thus in his panic the enemy's premature gave his positions, and thus materially assisted the of the French counter-attack against his artillery on the afternoon of the assault.

There being no fight on Monday was able to have a good look at the and its circle of forts. It was always believed that the Germans very near to taking the fortress, that the French were within an hour of vacating the right bank of the Meuse, including the dominating plateau of Donnaumont altogether. This is a controversial question that I do not propose to go into here. One I do know is this, that they were intended to evacuate the town and its citadel, and that orders were given to defend it to the last extremity. You have seen the fortification of Verdun and the citadel of the town. I can only believe that it is of the divine mission which the Highest claims on earth, Divine vengeance is certain on the side of the Allies.

Seven Glorious Hours at Verdun.

How the French Regained Lost Ground—Surprise Attack in Mist, Rain and Mud.

(By E. Ashmead Bartlett.)
I have just witnessed the most crowning irony of the war—perhaps in all history. I have watched the French army of Verdun—exhausted and useless, according to the enemy's reports—relax in seven hours, without withdrawing a man or a gun from the Somme, practically the whole of the ground which it took the Crown Prince's army six months to win and hold at a cost of roughly half a million of the best German troops.

Donaumont was the key to France and to peace, according to the Kaiser's proclamation. It turned out to be neither the one nor the other.

Every German hope and every Imperial promise was concentrated on Donaumont. For the possession of this dominating plateau the German infantry fought and died like heroes. No one will deny that. For that same plateau the German people gave their sons willingly, relying on the Imperial word that decisive victory must follow which would bring the longed for peace in its bloody train.

Now in seven hours all is changed. The work and futile sacrifices of six months have been undone at a cost which perhaps may work out at one-eighth per cent. of the achievement.

Moral Value of the Victory.
The importance of the victory cannot be calculated in mere words or figures. It is the moral effect on the German people and on the German army that must count most in the end when the truth comes out, and it cannot be concealed for ever. The French army at Verdun was supposed to be exhausted. But October 24 has shown that with proper artillery support and sound infantry tactics and with a minimum of loss the French infantry can retake positions in seven hours which cost them six months to lose. There is only one construction to put on these facts. There is no other possible explanation. The allies in numbers, guns and morale. Victory can only be won in the west. The German army is slowly but surely being fled white. Its open veins cannot now be tied. It is only a question of time, patience, fresh sacrifices, and unlimited munitions.

Days of Big Gun Fire.
For some days the enemy seems to have had an expectation that an attack was mediated, and he has been in a state of extreme nervousness. Thus the actual hour of the French attack may have taken him by surprise, but he cannot claim it was altogether unexpected. For days the French heavy guns have been smashing his positions to pulp, and on Sunday afternoon being seized with the sudden panic of an expected infantry attack the enemy opened up a "ferocious barrage" with no fewer than eighty batteries, the position of many of which the French have been endeavoring to accurately locate for weeks. Thus in his panic the enemy prematurely gave his positions away, and thus materially assisted the fire of the French counter-batteries against his artillery on the afternoon of the assault.

There being no fight on Monday, I was able to have a good look at Verdun and its circle of forts. I have always believed that the Germans came very near to taking the fortress, and that the French were within an ace of vacating the right bank of the Meuse, including the dominating plateau of Donaumont altogether. This is still a controversial question that I do not propose to go into here. One thing I do know is this, that they never intended to evacuate the town and the citadel, and that orders were issued to defend it to the last extremity. After you have seen the fortifications of Verdun and the citadel of the town itself you can only believe that in spite of the divine mission which the All-Highest claims on earth, Divine Providence is certain on the side of the Allies.

How any general staff can ever justify an attack on positions of such natural and artificial strength it is difficult to conceive. The Germans could not have chosen a more favorable piece of ground for the defence on which to throw away the flower of their army and to exhaust their material. Now, after going all over Verdun, I cannot conceive how it ever could have been captured, even if the French had evacuated all the heights on the right bank of the Meuse.

Mist, Rain and Smoke.
It simply poured with rain during the night of October 23 and the morning of October 24. At dawn the rain was still coming down in a drizzle, and the mist was as bad as ever. Throughout the morning the French guns kept up an incessant and furious bombardment along the whole line, so heavy was the atmosphere and so dead the sound waves that you could hear little of this fire unless you were actually within half a kilometre of the guns. But the flashes showed up clearly in the gloom.

Practically at 11.45 the French infantry everywhere advanced along the front of seventy kilometres, and assaulted the enemy's works. They immediately disappeared amidst the mists and rain and smoke. It was impossible to tell what was happening, or how they were progressing. Throughout the morning the advance went steadily forward splendidly supported by the French guns in spite of the conditions. The horizon to on-lookers was merely an inferno of bursting shells. However, towards 3.30 the weather lifted somewhat and, like a swarm of flies who discover a corpse, the French aeroplanes went buzzing forward over our heads, hungry to send back information to the gunners.

Both Thiaumont and Donaumont could not be seen, but were completely surrounded by smoke. It was obvious, however, that Thiaumont was already won, for the German barrage was concentrated on it to check a further advance on Donaumont—their last hope.

A Pimply Face or Poor Complexion Quickly Restored

Thousands of young men and women would be handsome and attractive were it not for unsightly pimples, blackheads, and rough uneven skin. Custom seems to recommend lemons and salves, but unfortunately their effect is but temporary. These skin-flourishing blemishes do not originate in the skin—their birth in every case goes further back, to the blood, which must be cleansed of humors before the pimples depart for good.

A physician who has made a careful study of such cases, says that the quickest cures comes from a blood-building medicine like Ferrozone. The minute Ferrozone strikes the blood its good work begins. Poisons and foul matter are expelled. Every trace of humor is driven out, and the whole life current is supplied with nutritious and health giving qualities. You can always tell a Ferrozone complexion when you see it—the cheeks are clear and rosy, no signs of sallowness—the eyes are bright and expressive because rich, red blood is circulating through the whole system carrying health, energy, and strength with it. Not only will all skin eruptions disappear, but an increase in vital strength, an all-round improvement will be apparent. No rebuilding tonic could be more efficient. Get Ferrozone to-day—Good for young and old, for well folks and sick ones, too. 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from The Catarhoxone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Missionary Meeting at St. Thomas's Church.

A large congregation attended the missionary service at St. Thomas's Church last evening and listened with deep interest to two very descriptive, eloquent and impressive addresses on mission life in the Arctic regions and in China ably delivered by the Rev. A. G. Bayley, M.A., and Rev. C. H. Barton, M.A., and Rev. Dr. Jones, addressing the congregation on the general mission fields of the world, urged all true Christians to help by prayer and supplication for the success of those that labor in the mission fields. Rev. C. H. Barton, M.A., spoke of the life-work of the venerable missionaries, Rev. Mr. Peck, Rev. Mr. Stewart and other Christian workers of the great northern country far beyond Cape Chidley. Rev. A. G. Bayley gave an account of the church work in China and pointed out that upwards of eight hundred ordained ministers of the church were at work in that far eastern land. Public men of China, leaders of the people, had given up offering prayer to their heathen Gods and were fast becoming true Christians. Special missionary hymns were sung and the collection, which amounted to a large sum, will be devoted to the various missionary works.

WAR SUMMARY.

LONDON, To-day.

With the armies of the Teutonic Allies advancing towards it both from the west and southwest, Bucharest, the capital of Roumania, apparently is in peril. Field Marshal Von Mackensen's troops have crossed the Danube from Bulgarian territory to Zimmitza, and are in touch near Alexandria, 57 miles southwest of Bucharest with the forces of General Von Falkenhayn's army from Craiova. All along the front on the Wallachian Plains, east of the Alt River, the Roumanians are in flight, burning towns behind them, says Berlin. To the north on the heights between Durges in the region of Dragoslavel, northeast of Campolung, and in Western Moldavia, near Otuz the Roumanians are offering strong resistance to the southward advance of the Teutons. On all these sectors attempts by the Austro-Germans to advance have been held back by the Roumanians. As yet there has been no indication of the arrival of Russian reinforcements to aid the Roumanians on the Wallachian plain, but the Russo-Roumanian troops at Dobrudja are active, possibly in an endeavor to push back the invaders to the Tchernavoda-Constanza railway line. She reports that this reinforced army was intended for a general attack along the entire front, but has been compelled to confine itself to partial attacks. In the Macedonian theatre there is bad weather. There has been no infantry action except on the left wing of the Entente Allied line where the Italians have made further progress towards Turnova, near the Monastir-Presha Lake Road, according to Paris. This statement as regards the gain is contradicted by the Sofia War Office, which says that an Italian attack here was repulsed and that the attackers lost a large quantity of war material. Sofia also denies the recent French report that the French had captured the town of Dobrenit, saying the Bulgarians had full control of their territory. The French front is also quiet. Except for small attacks at various points little activity has been displayed by either side. There has been artillery firing along the eastern front at various places from Riga to the region of the Carpathians, with the German aggressors; also on the Austro-Italian front with the Austrians on the initiative.

GERMAN-BULGARS CROSS THE DANUBE.

SOFIA, To-day.

The German-Bulgarian forces crossed the Danube at two points east of the Alt Valley, according to an official statement. The first crossing was made near Sivietova, about fifty miles east of the foot of the Alt Valley, the second crossing was made near Somovit, at the mouth of the Alt.

APPREHENSION IN U. S. RE SUBMARINES.

NEW YORK, To-day.

Apprehension is felt in shipping circles here in view of the large number of passengers and freight steamships nearing this port and the reported proximity of German submarines. Rumors of several days ago to the effect that two German submarines have broken through the Allied cordon and were on their way to the Atlantic Coast has received official recognition in a general warning sent out last night by the British cruiser Lancaster. The warship is stationed fifteen miles southeast of Sandy Hook, and cautioned all steamships flying the flags of the Entente Allies to be aware of hostile submarines on this side of the Atlantic. The British wireless read: "German submarines may be met anywhere in Atlantic, especially west of 50 degrees west, to show no unnecessary lights and to avoid all trade routes and converging points." Not since the U-53 entered Newport Harbor on October 7th and the following day sunk several British merchant vessels has there been so much uneasiness in marine quarters. It is believed that the merchant vessels of the Allies now loading in this port will not go out until the British Government gives assurances that the way will be clear and the danger removed. Among the steamers due to arrive this week are the Cunard Line steamships Laconia and Paunonia, with passengers from Liverpool and London respectively; the Anchor Line Tuscania from Glasgow, the White Star liner Lapland from Liverpool, the Duca D'Aosta from Genoa, and the Borussia from Bermuda. The freighters due include the Celtic and Bovic of the White Star Line. Almost a score of French and British merchantmen have sailed from this port within the last two days, and all of these vessels are within the zone which is supposed to be dangerous.

Endorses Fairplay.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir:—In your issue of 21st inst. appears a letter signed "Fairplay," in which the writer justly praises the mercantile body for the 15 p.c. raise of wages voluntarily given to the laborers. Fairplay makes a strong plea to the Government for a raise of salary for the civil service employees; he truthfully states that the civil service clerk is the poorest paid man in the Government. He quotes the police, penitentiary, lunatic and poor asylum and customs but omits the post office officials who are the worst paid in the whole civil service. The Placenta Post Office is a striking instance of this where the P. M. is paid a miserable $400 a year. He is on duty from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and is on call at any and all hours when steamers and trains are off time. He has to go to the office every night from 9 to 10 to make up the mail for the early train. The work and responsibility of Placenta Post Office is equal to any in Newfoundland outside of St. John's and all this for $400.00 a year. Yours truly, PLEASANT, Placenta, Nov. 24th, 1916.

AMERICAN SCHR. ABANDONED AT SEA.

LONDON, To-day.

The captain and crew of the American schooner Bobroy, have arrived at Magader, Morocco, in a motor boat. The Bobroy ran into a gale on November 18th while bound from Alicante in Spain for Havana. Buffeted by high waves and leaking, the schr. was abandoned on Nov. 20th ninety miles northeast of Madeira. She was then in a sinking condition.

LONDON PAPERS NOT SO PESSIMISTIC.

LONDON, To-day.

Although the commentators in the morning newspapers to-day do not attempt to disguise the fact that the position of the Roumanians has become very much worse and that they are sorely in need of succor, the weightiest writers in their opinion refuse to be pessimistic. These writers maintain that Roumania's position may be better than the map shows and the fact that the Central passes are still being held and that the Roumanian soldiers are fighting everywhere with desperate courage is taken to show that the morale of the army is unimpaired. It is contended that as long as this is the case the Roumanians may yet turn the tables as did the Allies on the Marne in 1915 (?), the situation then having many of the general features of the present position of Roumania. Confidence is also expressed that reinforcements from the Roumanian northern army and the Russians soon must arrive for the aid of the threatened army in the Danube. The consequences of the thaw also are regarded as a factor which may prove very awkward for the Germans. Some of the comment even approaches optimism, it being contended that the Germans in their haste to conquer Roumania have actually weakened ed themselves through the necessity of drawing men from other fronts for the Roumanian campaign; and although the move of the Germans across the Danube is characterized as a brilliant one, it is declared it will be proved to be inauspicious from a strategic standpoint. The only really lugubrious comment appears in the Daily Mail, which accepts the details of the Roumanian retreat as true.

COMMENT ON NAVAL RAID.

LONDON, To-day.

Except in quarters which are campaigning to oust Balfour from the Admiralty, the latest dash of the German destroyers into British waters is treated by the newspapers as a futile junketing tour undertaken for purposes of home consumption. The Times' naval correspondent says that as long as the Germans care to take the risks involved they will always be able to repeat such exploits. The Mail on the other hand uses the incident as a base of another severe attack on Balfour, whom it holds responsible for this humiliation, which exposes a proud and great nation to the jeers of the enemy. The Mail also recalls Balfour's speech of November 9th, in which, referring to the Channel raid of October 25th, he said that he was confident that if the Germans came again they would not escape disaster.

STRAIGHT TALK FROM GARVIN.

LONDON, To-day.

J. L. Garvin, Editor of the Observer, declares in that paper this morning that it is impossible for the Anglo-French to break through on the Western front unless the Allies totally change their policy regarding Southeastern Europe, with a view to eliminating Turkey and Bulgaria. He says the fundamental question of the war now is to remodel the transport so as to strengthen Russia. The naval blockade, continues Garvin, can never by itself reduce Germany which is exploiting the resources of the Turkish and other Dominions containing some of the most fertile tracts in the world and developing their man power as in all the history of nations never before. Before the finish of the war the Central league will have had from this beginning to end nearly 20,000,000 men under arms. Our estimate is that the Central league altogether has four million men in reserve. We now see the stupendous folly of the withdrawal from Gallipoli. Russia can never act with maximum power until the Dardanelles and Black Sea are reopened enabling the Allies to muntion her reserves fully. Under the present conditions Russia cannot come to the maximum of her possible fighting strength even within a year from now, perhaps can never come to it. The Allies made one of their worst mistakes in their incredible mis-lanching the opportunities presented by the Roumanian intervention. The Germans grasped the situation and struck first in a way that does equal credit to their industry (?) and energy.

Hr. Grace Notes.

The pupils of the Presentation convent are holding a concert in their school on Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

The free rain last night cleared the streets of all the snow and ice that had been about for the past two weeks. To-day's clear, bright sun gives the surroundings a spring-like appearance.

The Sale of Work and Tea held by the Women's Guild of Christ Church on Wednesday and Thursday of last week was a grand success socially and financially. The splendid sum of $213.60 was realized. The ladies are grateful to all who helped them.

John W. Withers, Esq., of St. John's has the thanks of King Edward Brigade for a very encouraging letter, accompanied by a $5 donation. Both are very much appreciated by the lads.

The many friends here of Mr. and Mrs. Dugald Munn regret that they are leaving this town to reside at St. John's, and in leaving they take with them the best wishes of all.

The annual missionary meeting of the Methodist Church was held at Hr. Grace Nov. 21st. J. Trapnell, Esq., J.P., presided. The chairman, in opening the meeting gave a very hearty welcome to the congregation. The first speaker was the Rev. Mr. Coffin, Presbyterian Minister. In choice language Mr. Coffin presented his message. He declared that the missionary enterprise was a great one, and was here to stay. It is worthy of our best efforts. Miss L. Thompson, came next with a solo, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus say." Her rich voice, with the beautiful words of the song charmed the audience. Mrs. O. Leach accompanied her on the organ. One had but to hear Mrs. Leach to know that she was a skilled musician. The chairman then introduced Dr. Whyte, Superintendent of Missions from British Columbia. The veteran doctor with the vigor of a young man took the platform and gave a most interesting address. He said many good things which the audience will not soon forget. The last speaker was Dr. Fenwick, Supt. of Methodist Missions in Nfld. The Doctor was in good form, and gave us facts and figures which kept his hearers wide awake. Nothing short of a substantial increase will satisfy the doctor. The offering was taken and was found to be in advance of last year. The National Anthem and Benediction brought the meeting to a close.

Household Notes.

By planning meals for a week ahead the housekeeper can save herself a good deal of trouble.

Coffee will be better if one or two cups are poured off and back again, just before serving.

Save all opium tins which have held baking powder and use them to steam brown bread and puddings.

Hominy grits served with sausage are delicious, and they will cause the sausage to be more easily digested.

An attractive way to serve cream cheese with salad is to roll it in a ball and place it alongside of the salad. Milk strains should be washed out.

Fall and Winter Suitings and Overcoatings made in the MAUNDER Style.

If you can't find what you want come here. Our Serges are guaranteed dyes, and very reasonable in price.

Samples, style sheets and measuring forms sent to any address.

"Mo-Momentum."

By RUTH CAMERON.

One of my little nieces is not quite four yet, but she has a busy mind which is forever seeking information. This she ponders over, sometimes commenting on it in a way that makes us grow up gasp.

The other day she was watching her father start his automobile. "It don't make so much noise after it gets going," she observed, and promptly asked the inevitable question. "Because it's always harder to start anything," explained her father. "After it gets going it gathers momentum and that makes it easier, and the engine doesn't have to work so hard."

At that point her mother interposed, saying to her father: "Albert, how do you expect the child to understand that?"

Like Getting Up In The Morning
 Before her father could answer, my little niece piped up: "I do, too. It's like when Katie tells me to get up in the morning. At first it's hard to get up in the morning. At first it's hard to get out of bed, but when I get momentum it's easy."

We all laughed outright. But since then I've wondered if my small niece, failing to grasp the mechanical principle, did enunciate a great human one. Have you ever noticed how hard some things are to start? It may be a disagreeable task, or the solution of a problem that eludes you. Or even getting out of bed in the morning.

As Hard As You Expected.

Queer Aeroplane Smashes

When the Knights of the Air Come to Grief.

A single-seater high-speed biplane collided with a Rolls-Royce motor-car the other day. The aeroplane lies on a stretch of moorland. Across this winds the public highway, which, at the spot where the accident occurred, stands some six or eight feet above the level of the moor.

The flying area is surrounded by a high barbed-wire fence. The biplane would, ordinarily, have skimmed the road, cleared the fence beyond with a foot or two to spare, and landed safely in the "drome." But the pilot was on a machine new to him. He made a slight miscalculation in vol-planeing to earth. The left wing caught the tarmac and the bonnet of the passing car—itsself doing thirty or forty—at nearly one hundred miles an hour. There was a rending crash, and aeroplane followed motor-car to the barbed-wire in the hollow.

The occupants of the car escaped, but the pilot of the plane subsequently succumbed to his injuries.

What the Wind Did.
 On the west coast a Bristol Scout machine essayed a landing upon a rather precarious section of an aerodrome close against the sea. The pilot did not allow for sufficient ground play when his biplane touched the turf. The air-speed and ground momentum dashed it into a low sand dune fringing the cliff, and over it went, fifty feet down, into the shallows and rocks of the fowing tide beneath. The machine was totally wrecked, but the aviator miraculously escaped.

On our bleak northern coast a remarkable affair occurred not so very long ago. A number of pre-war type machines were condemned as dangerous for further experiments, and were consigned to a spare shed pending removal to the depot for demolition. During the night a heavy gale sprang up. The hangar was one of those "constructed" in the early days of the war, and the stiff northeaster lifted the roof clean off its standards. The huge sliding doors, themselves unable to resist the tremendous wind pressure, barged inward, and squashed the contents of the shed to pulp.

A representative of a famous aeronautical firm was chartered to deliver a brand new machine into one of our army aerodromes a little while back.

He found his way all right, but unfortunately something went wrong in the landing, the aeroplane came down sharply on its undercarriage skids, turning a complete somersault, ran about ten yards on the chassis wheels, slanted forward, and broke in two with its nose deep in the sandy soil. In the overturning the pilot was badly injured.

"That is one way of delivering the goods!" remarked a callous mechanic in relating the incident.

Landed in a Cemetery.
 An incident which put a ban on net fishing in a certain area off the east coast took place when a powerful seaplane fouled a "setting" of herring nets. Its floats got entangled during the taxi-ing preliminary to taking the air. The machine actually lifted about an acre of meshes before the drag of these clinging tentacles capsize it. It narrowly missed a great iron mark buoy when coming down "wrong side up."

A field of standing corn was responsible for the death of an aerodrome. During night-flying practice his machine was heard overhead, and the firing of colored lights signified that he was about to land.

In the uncertain flickering of the flares he apparently could not distinguish between the cornstalks of a field near by, and the dried ploughed grass of the aerodrome. Parching the cornfield, he came to grief on the boundary fence.

A Bleriot monoplane had a narrow shave once in coming down in a thick fog with engine trouble, and landing in a cemetery.

The propeller snapped off short on a tombstone.

"Decent handy!" was the airman's only remark, but he is still on the right side of the sword!—Pearson's Weekly.

Two Thousand Daily.
 The Hague, Nov. 17.—The number of Belgians deported by the Germans up to date, according to information given to-day from a reliable source, apparently is between 30 and 40 thousand, and they are being deported at the rate of about 2,000 daily.

 For a very small sum a little bed can be made that is pretty, comfortable and occupies none of the floor space in a small bedroom.

Get a store box about three feet long, a foot and a half wide and a foot deep. Have a blacksmith fasten two strong iron hooks securely on one side. Then paint with two coats of enamel paint, pink, white or blue.

Fasten a full ruffle of dotted muslin edged with lace around it, and the a ribbon bow in the color used to one corner. Make a little pillow and mattress to fit it.

When fastened on the foot of the bed it makes it possible for the mother to give baby his night nursing without getting out of bed, which is pleasing in winter.

England is Enraged by Deportation of Belgians

Seeks Means of Reprisal For Germany's Act—Some 300,000 Belgians Are Affected—Vatican Not Protesting With United States.

London, Nov. 18.—England is to-day seeking some means of reprisal against Germany for the "enslavement" of Belgium's men. Not since the execution of Miss Cavell has there been such a wave of popular indignation as that which is sweeping the country over fresh details of the Teutonic plan of giving employment to the Belgian civil population by deporting them to Germany.

It is realized that with the United States rests the only hope of interest to prevent a clean sweep from the desolated nation of all its manhood. Stories of fathers and sons parted forcibly from their wives and mothers and other loved ones by German soldiery have served to fan indignation to a fever heat.

Three hundred thousand male Belgians above the age of seventeen are affected by the "employment" orders from Berlin. So far at least 45,000 of these have been transported from their homes to Germany that they may be given employment, according to the German explanations.

Rome, Nov. 17.—A semi-official denial has been issued that the Vatican has taken any joint action with the United States regarding a protest to Germany over the deportation of Belgians. The Vatican is trying to prevent these deportations in the same manner as it did when French workers were deported from Lille but its action is entirely independent of other countries.

A recent despatch from Paris said that advices had been received from Rome that the United States had joined the Vatican and Spain in a joint protest to Germany respecting the deportations.

Sir Hiram Maxim's Maxim.

HE STARTED LIFE IN A MILL.

The veteran inventor who at the age of seventy-six has applied himself to the solution of the biggest problem he has ever tackled—whether there is a possibility of making petrol from paraffin—is no believer in "born genius." "Work, work hard, and work all the time," is his advice to the young man who wants to make good.

A humble wooden cottage built in a small clearing cut out of a forest in Sangerville, Maine, with no other dwelling in sight, and the black bears and lynxes which haunted the forest for sole neighbours, such was the birthplace of Sir Hiram Maxim, the veteran inventor of guns and war machines, who at the age of seventy-six is setting his mind to the solution of the greatest problem he has ever tackled, that of transforming paraffin into petrol, and is hard at work experimenting with this end in view at his laboratories in the old post office building at Hone Hill.

Sir Hiram learnt the meaning of real hard work in the grist mill his father took over when they moved from their forest home to more civilised regions. He was very sturdy and strong as a lad, and soon learnt to handle the bags of grain as well as the best man in the place. Often he would keep at his work the whole night-through.

Three kinds of grain had to be mixed together and ground, and then the meal had to be pounded into the bags, which were then tied and piled up.

It was a very hard job, but proved healthful exercise in the main and to his heavy physical exercise in the mill Sir Hiram ascribes much of his subsequent vigour and strength.

At fourteen he was at a carriage-maker's learning the trade, and working from five in the morning until seven in the evening, with short intervals for meals. After seven it was his job to chop all the wood for the use of the household the next day. At night he slept in an attic, and two other lads shared his bed. It was when he went to another carriage-maker's that he began to work out little ideas of his own in his spare time, inventing a rat-trap and a special kind of tricycle of which he was very proud.

The inventor came to England in 1838 when he became connected with the firm that afterwards became known as Vickers, Sons, and Maxim, and invented the famous gun which now bears his name.

Why He Succeeded.

As a boy it was his great ambition to become a sea-captain, but happily for the progress of the practical science in which he has made his mark, this ambition was never realised. Sir Hiram, in advising ambitious young men how to get on, is very fond of dwelling upon the rough experiences of his own childhood, and impressing upon them the truth of the fact that no matter how humble their beginnings may be, they can win through to great achievement if they only have the pluck and obstinacy to fight their way up.

"Work, work hard, and work all the time if you want to succeed," is his favourite maxim, a maxim which he has certainly lived up to all his life. "If I managed to get on it was not because I was clever, but because I stuck to it," he says.

And it is by sticking to it that he hopes to win through with the petrol-from-paraffin problem. Other inventors have tried and failed, but he is not discouraged by their non-success. If he succeeds he considers it will be one of the greatest achievements of his career.

And he is confident that he is going to succeed!—Pearson's Weekly.

Soldier Parson at George St. Church.

Rev. W. D. Stenlake, a veteran soldier of Gallipoli fame, occupied the pulpit at George St. Methodist Church last night and delivered an impressive and instructive sermon, taking for his text Paul's great declaration, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ." He illustrated his remarks by the courage and action of some of our lads who gave their young lives on the battlefields of Gallipoli and France for the great cause of England and our Allies. It should be an encouragement for us to become better men and more loyal followers of Him who died upon the Cross. The large congregation, who listened with interest, were greatly impressed by the sincere words of the Soldier Parson.

ASK FOR MINARD'S LINIMENT AND TAKE NO OTHER.

Cochrane St. Centennial Church.

Quite a large number of visitors attended with the regular members of the congregation at the services held in Cochrane Street Centennial Church yesterday. The Pastor, the Rev. Dr. Bond, occupied the pulpit at both services.

The text for the morning was "Who Went About Doing Good." What constitutes the best type of a citizen, not the most learned, not the most wealthy, but the man who has most of the character of the Divine Master, doing good to his fellow citizens, in his home, amongst his friends and in his business, such a man is a real valuable citizen. At the close of the sermon, the Doctor addressed the Volunteers present giving them some good advice and asked them to be true and faithful soldiers, loyal to King and Country, to mother and to the King of Kings.

"Are They Not all Ministering Spirits?" was the theme of the evening discourse. We are living in a spiritual world. The messengers of God are around and about us all the time. Our departed friends are not far away from us. The testimony of a number of officers and men was read as to what occurred after the relief from Mons in connection with the army under General Franch, which beautifully illustrated the thought which the Doctor wished to convey to the large congregation present.

Saturday Night's Fire.

Saturday evening shortly after 6 o'clock the West End Central Fire Brigades were summoned to the residence and store of Mr. L. J. Channing, shoemaker, at the corner of Prince and New Gower Streets. The origin of the fire is still a mystery, but is supposed to have occurred by the explosion of a kerosene lamp. By the time the fire companies reached the scene great volumes of smoke were pouring from the building. Not a moment was lost and as if by clockwork several streams were being played on the flames and in very quick time the danger was past. The congestion at the locality made it difficult for the fire fighters to get in their work. Any persons who are billed to the fact that our fire brigades are one of our most important and useful institutions were given an opportunity to alter their views at the Channing fire Saturday night.

The house, which is badly gutted, is the property of the Hon. M. P. Gibbs. The damage is estimated to be about $1,200 and is, we understand, covered by insurance; but unfortunately for the occupier his property was not insured and the damage to his furniture and stock is very large.

Rossley Opens British Theatre To-Night.

All lovers of good pictures and music will be pleased to know that Mr. Jack Rossley has got a splendid selection of pictures for their approval, the finest that can be had. Mr. Rossley has taken a lease of the British Theatre for a term of years, and has erected a beautiful stage and other improvements. The heating and ventilating system is all that can be desired. It is rather hard to induce performers to come here either from England or the States, but in the meantime while the scare is on, we can see all the best people in the picture. There will be drama, comedy, travel and educational films to please all classes, old and young. The British Theatre will be conducted in first class style, and the Rossleys hope to please patrons as before by giving only a clean and refined entertainment.

Obituary.

MRS. PATRICK MURPHY.

Many people in St. John's will learn with deep regret of the death of Mrs. Patrick Murphy, wife of Mr. Patrick Murphy, West End Road Inspector, and mother of the Rev. Father Thomas Nangle, Chaplain to H. M. Forces, which sad occurrence took place at her late residence on Topsail Road on Saturday last. The call, though not unexpected, comes as a severe blow to her numerous friends and relatives, who in her saw the strong character of a true Christian woman. A gentle and loving mother and friend, she possessed a charitable heart and hand that will be missed by many poor people of St. John's to-day. Her passing is the sadder by the fact that her only son, Father Nangle, is now "Somewhere in France" ministering to the spiritual wants of the brave soldiers of the Empire. To the devoted soldier and priest the sympathy of all classes and creeds in Newfoundland will go out and to other members of the family in their hour of bereavement, to which the Telegram joins its own.

GREEK PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT DECLARES WAR ON BULGARIA.

LONDON, Nov. 25. The Provisional Government of Greece, formed by supporters of former Premier Venizelos, has formally declared war on Bulgaria, says an Athens despatch to-day.

Salonika.—The Greek Provisional Government, composed of the followers of former Premier Venizelos, has formally declared war on Germany and Bulgaria.

DELIVERY OF ARMS DEMANDED.

ATHENS, Nov. 26. The first delivery of arms demanded from the Greek Government by Vice-Admiral Du Poutet, Commander of the Entente squadron, consists of ten batteries of mountain guns. The demand declares that failure to comply with it before December 1st will result in measures being taken by the Admiral.

WHY WAR WAS DECLARED.

LONDON, Nov. 26. Reuter's Athens correspondent says in Venizelist circles it is asserted the Provisional Government declared war on Bulgaria to prevent the entry of the Venizelist forces into the campaign from being interpreted as a political manoeuvre. In view of the fact that the Allies consider the Salonika Triumvirate as a government de facto, Greece is now virtually at war with Bulgaria. The Provisional Government also declared war on Germany because she torpedoed ships carrying national forces who are partisans of the Provisional Government.

SUPER-ZEPPELIN WRECKED BY A STORM.

LONDON, Nov. 26. The wrecking of a super-Zeppelin in a storm on Tuesday is reported by travellers reaching Amsterdam from Munich, says a despatch from Amsterdam. They report there was only one survivor of the crew of 28. The Zeppelin is said to have been on the way from Friedrichshaven to Wilhelmshaven on its first voyage, when it was blown out of its course and fell in the woods near Mainz.

SAYS NO SURRENDER OF ARMS.

LONDON, Nov. 26. Reuter's Athens correspondent says it is stated in circles close to the Greek court that any attempt of the Entente Allies to obtain possession of Greek arms and ammunition as demanded by Vice-Admiral Du Poutet, will be met with disaster.

An Athens despatch to the Weekly Dispatch says: If necessary, Admiral Du Poutet will occupy Athens if the Greek Government does not comply with the Entente ultimatum. Royalist troops declare a complete refusal to deliver up their arms, adds the despatch. Artillery has been sent to Admetos Hill, beyond the station, and arms have been freely distributed to 10,000 reservists. Fire engines went around the city all last night, pretending to extinguish fires, but really to distribute arms. This morning a League of resistance was formed by General Papoulas, who was recently recalled from Janina. Many officers already have adhered to it. The misfortune in Roumania is contributing to the strength of these plots. The idea is to recruit among the reservists and proceed to the interior beyond the reach of the naval guns and start a guerilla warfare until the arrival of the Germans after the conquest of Roumania, which they firmly expect.

GERMANS CROSS THE DANUBE.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 26. The war office announces that the Germans have made a crossing of the Danube near Zimnitsa, seventy miles southwest of Bucharest.

A PETROGRAD WIRELESS.

LONDON, Nov. 26. The Roumanian troops operating on the extreme left of their line in Wallachia have extricated themselves after destroying millions of hundredweights of cereals, according to a wireless despatch received to-day from Petrograd.

HAVE EFFECTED A JUNCTION.

BERLIN, Nov. 26. General Von Falkenhayn's troops invading western Roumania in the north and west, have effected a junction with Von Mackensen's forces that advanced from the south and crossed the Danube into Roumanian territory, the war office announced to-day. In the driving toward Bucharest, Von Mackensen's advancing forces have reached the outskirts of Alexandria, 47 miles from the Roumanian capital. The Roumanians retreating east from the Lower Alt are burning towns as they retire, according to the official statement, which also reports the repulse of a Roumanian cavalry division that offered battle protecting retreat.

THE ROUMANIAN SITUATION.

LONDON, Nov. 26. The situation in Roumania as described in to-day's news showing that Von Falkenhayn's forces, having gained the railway at Craiova, have rapidly pushed to the southeast and are, according to German accounts already in touch with Von Mackensen's forces, which crossed the Danube at Zimnitsa, and advanced with equal rapidity, and are now before Alexandria. The German reports do not state where the two forces joined hands, but says the roads leading eastward from the Alt river are encumbered with fleeing Roumanian supply columns, and marked by burning villages. The Roumanian official statement to a large extent corroborated this news by reporting an engagement with an enemy column advancing towards Rosiori-de-Vede on the railway a little north of Alexandria. Thus the Central forces are now within 50 miles of Bucharest which is threatened from west, north and south. The German communication brings the interesting news that Von Mackensen is personally commanding the movement, which seems to confirm the impression previously formed that his latest withdrawal into Dobruja was voluntary in order to assemble his forces for the Danube crossing. Neither is there anything definite known as to whether Falkenhayn has transferred any considerable portion of his forces engaged in forcing Red Tower and other Transylvanian passes to the operation through the Vulcan Pass. Should the Roumanians be driven to defend the line running north and south from the mountains between Red Tower and Toerzburg Passes to the Danube, in order to protect Bucharest, military critics here consider their position would be extremely critical. It is hoped Russia has been able to send sufficient reinforcements to relieve Roumania of the necessity of devoting large forces to the defence of her northern and Dobruja frontiers, so that she will have sufficiently strong forces to carry on effective fighting on the Wallachia Plain.

TO HELP ROUMANIA.

LONDON, Nov. 26. A large number of British airplanes and pilots have reached Bucharest, after long flights, says a Reuter despatch from the Roumanian capital. The latest arrival are to reinforce the British and French operating with the Roumanian army.

ROUMANIANS PUSHED BACK.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 26. The war office announces that the Germans made the crossing of the Danube near Zimnitsa, 70 miles southwest of Bucharest. The statement says the Roumanians have been pushed back toward the south of Traillmanochi on the River Alt, south of Rothen-thurm Pass, 20 miles west of the Alt.

SAYS GERMAN ADVANCE ARRESTED.

BUCHAREST, Nov. 26. The war office announces that the advance of the German troops, which crossed the Danube River, has been arrested. The crossing of the Danube was effected at Isiac, near the mouth of the river, as well as at Zimnitsa.

PROGRESS OF ITALIANS.

PARIS, Nov. 26. Fresh progress for the Italians in their northward drive west of Monastir, is reported by the war office to-day in its statement dealing with operations on the Macedonian front. There has been artillery fighting on the other wing of the Monastir position, but bad weather interfered with infantry activities.

GERMAN RAID ON ENGLISH COAST.

LONDON, Nov. 26. A raid by six German destroyers on the English coast took place on Thursday, it was officially announced to-day. The raid was ineffective, according to the official, one striking a small vessel, but causing little damage or injury to the crew.

GERMANS BOMBARD RAMSGATE.

BERLIN, Nov. 26. The fortified town of Ramsgate, England, was bombarded by German destroyers on Friday morning, says an official announcement. A British patrol ship which was encountered, was sunk by us as we were returning safely to base.

ARTILLERY ACTIVITY.

PARIS, Nov. 26. A bulletin from the war office issued to-night reads: There was considerable activity by both artillery forces in the region of Fort Vaux. Intermittent cannonading occurred on the rest of the front. The Belgian communication had nothing to report.

DANUBE ISLANDS OCCUPIED.

BERLIN, Nov. 26. Occupation by Bulgarian troops of islands in the Danube, including one near the mouth of the Alt River, is reported in the Bulgarian official statement of Nov. 24.

ON BOARD THE BRITANNIC.

LONDON, Nov. 25. With reference to a statement in a Berlin wireless despatch that the large number of persons on board the British hospital ship Britannic justifies the suspicion that the hospital ship was used for transport purposes, the Admiralty announces the total number on board the vessel has now been ascertained accurately. The Britannic, the Admiralty says, had on board 1,125 persons, of whom 635 belonged to the crew and 500 belonged to the medical staff of the various Royal Army Medical Corps ranks and ratings, including 76 nurses.

STEAMER LOST; CREW LANDED.

LONDON, Nov. 26. Lloyds announce that the steamer Helena, from Rotterdam for New York, has been lost, but that the crew has landed.

INTERESTING.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 26. Harvard won the soccer game with Yale, by 5 to 3.

ITALIANS PROGRESSING.

PARIS, Nov. 26. Italian troops on the Macedonian front made progress yesterday west of Monastir, the war office announces.

IN ROUMANIA.

LONDON, Nov. 26. The Teutons are making vigorous efforts to make their winter quarters nearer Bucharest, or probably reach the Roumanian capital itself before winter sets in. Mackensen tried to make a drive to the city from the south but he stopped between Hirsowa and the Upper Danube, apparently because Falkenhayn had been unable to get through the Transylvanian passes in the north. There has been little change in the situation in Transylvania. The Roumanians have retired slightly on both banks of Oltet River. They have taken another strong offensive in Dobruja, capturing the towns of Gelenei, Bazaralia, Estera, Palagulmie and Tachaul, fifteen miles north of the Tchernavoda-Constanza railway. The Russians are also advancing in this region, and have reached the district of Lake Tachaul and crossed the Karal River at several points. The Germans claim they crossed the Danube at Zimnitsa and that their advance in Wallachia has taken them to the Alt River.

HEAVY RAINS ON WEST FRONT.

LONDON, Nov. 26. From the front in France there is nothing to report, says the official statement issued by the war office to-day. "It is raining heavily."

ENEMY ACTIVITY.

LONDON, Nov. 25. (Official.) The enemy's artillery and trench mortars were active south of the Ancre and in the neighborhood of Hohen-zollern redoubt. Our heavy artillery shelled important points on the enemy's front. Our aircraft, in spite of unfavorable conditions, co-operated. One machine has not returned.

GERMAN ATTACKS REPULSED.

LONDON, Nov. 25. (Official.) German attacks east of Bapaume and north of the Ancre were repelled by British troops, who also repulsed a German raid in the Arras district.

Christian Brothers Collection.

As announced in all the R. C. Churches of the city yesterday, the annual collection for the Christian Brothers will be taken up on Sunday next. It is unnecessary to expound the self-sacrificing work and educational achievements made by the good Irish Brothers in this community, in the way of an appeal; suffice it to say that it is hoped that the collection will be a record-breaker.

An Amazing Forecast. What A German Wrote Two Years Ago.

(By the Well-Known Publisher, Mr. R. B. Marston.)

In 1912 an old Russian angling friend of mine, Baron T. wrote to me to advise me to get a copy of a German work which was attracting much attention in Russian military circles.

It was entitled "The European War of 1913". I procured a copy and found that it was a clever description of this present war by an eye-witness who published his account in 1912!

Among things he did not foresee were trench warfare—and the British Empire Army. The work has peculiar interest just now, because in 1912 its publisher, Paul Baumann, of Charlottenburg, when issuing a third edition, was graciously permitted to print in red type on it an extract from a letter from Count Zeppelin in which he blessed the work, saying: "May it have its due influence on the fortunes of our country."

This is the more significant, coming from the count, as the book attributes the inevitable Teuton victory largely to the Zeppelin air squadrons.

It may be interesting to give a resume of this German forecast of this greatest of wars, its causes, course and ending.

Not the least striking thing in the book is the intense hatred of England which is preached in every chapter, but in this respect it is not extraordinary—in my position as editor of a British book-trade paper I have very frequently during the last twenty-five years or so called attention to the extent and virulence of this anti-British propaganda in the German publishing world, especially in the shape of books like this, all set to the tune of "Gott strafe England!"

Cause of the War and Grouping of the Powers.—The war is described as due, ostensibly, to sudden insuperable dissension between France and Germany over Morocco; really to British intrigue and to the conviction on the part of France that at last the hour had arrived for the "Revanche" for 1870.

The Entente between England and France had never been more cordial; Russia had been bought over by profuse of a free hand in Persia; Italy could not be counted on by Germany and is described as later on throwing in her lot with France and England.

A Scrap of Paper.—"As the Powers guarantee these small States (Belgium and Holland) were at war with each other, the treaties guaranteeing neutrality were merely a scrap of paper, without practical value." This was said two years before Herr von Bethmann Hollweg's historical "Scrap of Paper" speech. England being engaged to help France, these States ask Belgium if she will or will not permit them to attack Germany through Belgium and allow England to land her troops at Antwerp; Belgian Chauvinism catches fire from that of France; Holland reluctantly listens to the wooing of her great German neighbour; and when English fleets and transports appear in the Scheldt, Dutch heavy guns in armoured batteries make a landing at Antwerp impossible. This upsets the plans of the Allies, the English are unable to arrive in time, and the first great battle of the war, the battle of Liège, ends in the French 3rd Army Corps being defeated, broken up, and compelled to seek safety under the guns of Namur, Huy, Givet and Maubeuge. The French are forced to withdraw to the line Rheims-Laon-La Fere; leaving to the English the task, with their four divisions laboriously landed at Ostend, Dunkirk, and Calais, of taking a flanking position in the Buzign district against the German advance.

Fate of Liège and the French Frontier Fortresses.—The Belgian Army, withdrawn to complete its mobilisation mainly behind the extensive fortifications of Antwerp, was to have operated against the German right wing; but owing to the threatening attitude of the Dutch and to German demonstrations was unable to move, and the greater part of Belgium, with its capital, was in German hands. Italy having joined the Allies, Austria's task is to defeat her on land and sea, which she eventually does. Except for a temporary success in the invasion of Germany at Mulhausen, the course of the war naturally goes against France. Liège is described as being able but for a few days to withstand the battering her forts were subjected to by the modern German siege artillery. The fall of Liège left the road to Namur open and Namur, Maubeuge, Mons, etc., are described as falling—much as they did fall. In a battle on the Sambre the little English Army is defeated, surrounded, and has to capitulate. France is left to fight her battles on land by herself.

Count Zeppelin Attacks London, Portsmouth, Chatham, and Destroys the British Fleet.—In the early days of the war the English are described as being beaten in the fight in an attempt to capture Heligoland, but for a time they succeeded in confining the German Fleet to its fortified bases. Then the whole civilised world was astounded at news from London. From his base at Brussels, Count Zeppelin, with six great airships, had suddenly appeared over London and paralysed its inhabitants by destroying London Bridge with high-explosive bombs. As suddenly as they came they disappear, only to do enormous damage to the docks and arsenals at Portsmouth, Chatham, etc. The 350 mile voyage between Brussels and Portsmouth is comfortably done in eight hours. The count returns to Brussels, and has lunch at the Hotel Bellevue, in the Place Royale, while he and his brave crews listen to the boys in the streets crying the news of his destroying visit to England.

But his work is only commencing. After refitting and taking in great stores of explosives he disappears with his air squadrons and drops bombs with such success on the British Fleet that before long all that is left of it floats surrenders—"never had there been such a sudden destruction of sea-power in the history of the world"—and Britannia no longer rules the waves. France makes heroic but hopeless efforts to repel the invaders; even her women, under a new Joan of Arc, rush to battle, fight, and die. Paris, the wonder city of the world, lies once more at the feet of the conqueror. Then the world is asked to look on while Germany, magnanimous, holds out her hand to France, says she bears her no ill-will, no hatred, offers her a place in the German empire and the blessings of German Kultur.

England the Enemy and Why She Suffers From the "Furor Teutonius."—In the last chapter this German prophet tells us that before the war there was only one nation, England, toward which Germany evinced an unalterable outspoken feeling of hatred. The reason for this hate has its roots, this Teuton tells us, far less in envy of England's possessions in the world than in the blood-boiling rage at the "everlasting, never-ending expressions of British brag," and her open and secret inciting of the nations against her dreaded competitor in the domain of commerce and industry—in short, "at the provocative hemming-in policy, which has its seat in Downing-street and its organs all over the world." It was this unbridled hate, he says, which led Germany to employ against England "such brutal methods of warfare as the world had never known." England is outside the pale of nations, and is warned that if again she tries to stir up strife the United States of Central Europe, under German leadership, will "give over her hand to fire and the sword and teach her to sing 'Home, Sweet Home' among the smoking ruins."—Daily Mail.

An Amazing Cure For Neuralgia Magical Relief For Headache

The Most Effective Remedy Known is "Nerviline."

The reason Nerviline is infallibly a remedy for neuralgia resides in two very remarkable properties Nerviline possesses.

The first is its wonderful power of penetrating deeply into the tissue which enables it to reach the very source of congestion.

Nerviline possesses another and not less important action—it equalizes the circulation in the painful parts, and thus affords a sure barrier to the re-establishment of congestion.

You see the relief you get from Nerviline is permanent.

It doesn't matter whether the cause is spasm or congestion, external or internal; if it is pain—equally with its curative action upon neuralgia—Nerviline will relieve and quickly cure rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, strains, swellings or enlarged joints, and all other muscular aches.

Nerviline is a guaranteed remedy. Get the large 50 cent family size bottle; it is far more economical than the 25 cent trial size.

Ugh! Acid Stomach, Sourness, Heartburn, Gas or Indigestion

The moment "Pape's Diapepsin" reaches the stomach all distress goes.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapepsin" is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—you stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

Ex-Telegram Man

Is Typewriter Magistrate.

A recent American exchange to hand boasts highly Mr. P. H. Collins, a native of Catalina and a member of the editorial staff of this paper. He left here ten years ago for the land of Uncle Sam where he has since made exceptionally good. Besides publishing a photograph of the successful Newfoundlanders, the U. S. Journal says:—

"P. H. Collins, of New York, who has been 'Manager' of the Buffalo branch of the Remington Typewriter Company for the past three years, has been promoted to the important position of supervisor of ten of that Company's branches, sub-branches and dealers of the North West, and will after November 1st have headquarters at Minneapolis, Minn. Mr. Collins is best known to the business men of Buffalo, and is a member of several local clubs. He has been active in the campaign work of the Buffalo Automobile Club and the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce. He will take with him Earl T. Butler as Secretary and Confidential Assistant. Mr. Butler has been cashier of the Company's local office. Mr. Collins is succeeded by F. W. McCormack, of Buffalo, who has been connected with the Remington Company for upwards of 10 years."

AT THE CRESCENT.

The Crescent Picture Palace opens the week with a great three reel Lubin feature: "Courage and the Man," presenting Edgar Jones the great Lubin star, supported with a strong caste. "One Chance in a Hundred" is an episode of the Hazards of Helen Rail-road Series featuring the darling Helen Gibson. "An Artful Artist" is a great comedy with Billie Hovest and Mae Hatley. Professor McCarthy has arranged a new program of music for this big show. Don't miss it.

THE DEFEATED CANDIDATE.

The defeated candidate is a person who paid out good money to locate the exact number of urbane and open-mouthed liars in his ball-tick.

There is nothing that will open a man's eyes to the possibilities of human nature better than running for some office which is a few feet out of his reach. The candidate is the most hopeful and sanguine proposition on earth, unless it is the man who sits in a poker game with total strangers. One of the bitterest experiences in life is to become a candidate, pay the price of an all-year touring car to the county central committee and then discover that one has cast his lot among several thousand pedigreed prevaricators, who will promise everything rather than be considered thoughtless or unkind.

The defeated Candidate always has a half-trigger alibi, ranging from the

Rheims Cathedral in Peril of Collapse

German Shell Parties of Workmen Who Seek to Make Repairs in the Ruins.

Rheims (correspondence of the Associated Press). November 4.—On the first day of November the thousandth German shell struck the Cathedral of Rheims. Ever since the recent French drive at Verdun salvos of shells have been poured daily into Rheims, many striking the cathedral. Four of the flying buttresses supporting the roof of the nave have been demolished and several others hit.

As the weight of the stone roof, which is 60 centimetres in thickness, is borne almost entirely by these flying buttresses, the danger of its fall has become imminent.

The fears of the art critics have been increased by the unusually severe rainy season, which this year has been uninterrupted for many weeks. The timber and leaden roofs of the cathedral having been destroyed early in the bombardment the rain falls directly into the building through shell holes in the stone roof and washes away layer after layer of the calcined stone of the interior, leaving muddy puddles on the floor and gradually percolating through to the crypts and foundations.

Endeavours were made at first to deal with this peril to the cathedral by employing men to clear away the water and at the same time to prop up parts of the building in danger of falling. The Germans, however, who keep very close observation of what is going on in the town, fired at the working parties and the effort had to be abandoned.

Don't Neglect Your Cough.

A little cold may not seem a dangerous thing—you may feel inclined to let it go on hoping that to-morrow it will be better—but can you afford to take chances? Just as the little insignificant acorn grows if let alone, to the mighty giant oak, that cough if not stopped may grow to a very serious illness. When a Cough starts there's no telling where it will end. You know no doubt, of cases right among people you have known, where serious complications and fatal illness have had their start from a neglected cough or cold. "Don't neglect your cough." Stafford's Phorotone Cough and Cold Cure is what you should take. For sale at Stafford's Drug Store, Theatre Hill, and Stafford's Pharmacy, Duckworth Street. Price 25c, postage 5c. extra.

No trouble to take this cough remedy. Prepared only by DR. F. STAFFORD & SON, St. John's, Nfld. Manufacturers of 3 Specialities:—STAFFORD'S LINIMENT, STAFFORD'S PRESCRIPTION A. STAFFORD'S PHOROTONE.

Fabric gloves are worn a great deal, except for formal occasions. The long loose sleeves known as angel sleeves are coming in again.

HAT AND HOSIERY ADVERTISEMENT
In August last we put an advertisement in this paper that we were preparing to send goods to the value of $15 to the person collecting the largest number of Welch's Grape Juice caps between that date and December 1st. Persons who have been collecting these caps will be given their share of the prize by turning them in at the 6 o'clock on Friday, December 1st, after which this contest is closed.
Kindly note the following regulations:—
(1) Wrap the caps in paper, address and a memorandum of the number of caps collected. This is supposed to contain the name of the shop that you patronize if you are a winner. Do not have the caps unwrapped. None will be opened until the contest is closed.
(2) Caps from WELCH'S GRAPE JUICE only, and other brands will be counted.
(3) The checking will be in the presence of a responsible person who has not been in the contest. Prizes will be given later. An award will be announced in the Telegram and Daily News on December 4th and 5th. The WELCH GRAPE JUICE nov28, tu, th
