CHAPTER XXXVII.

"Of course, it is only natural. Keep things as quiet as you may, in a place like this the truth will leak out, and everybody who is anybody in Nouvelle knows that you have secured the great catch, the heir to Powis and the Palmer millions. My dear, you seem half-insensible to your own notoriety! Why, the eyes of the world, represented by Nouvelle-sur-mer, will be upon you, and are expectantly waiting for you. Don't laugh!" for a mirthless smile has fitted over the pale face. "Take the honours the gods have given you and be happy. Here is your dress. I should make an admirable lady's-maid, judging by the care and forethought I expend on your behalf. You left it to me—and here it is," and she lifts a beautiful costume de bal from the large imperial.

Paula looks at the dress, a cloud of black lace with flakes of silver shimmering here and there, and the domino of dove-grey, looks at it with the faint interest of one who is regarding a dress that is to be worn by anyone but herself, and says, calmly: "It is very pretty."

"Pretty!" echoes Alice. "Pretty! My dear, it is the loveliest thing I ever saw. It is a work of genius. I wrote and told him that I wanted to represent Moonlight, and—here it is, the very thing. Talk about painters, now I call Worth an artist, really an artist. Come and try it on."

Paula goes slowly to the box, and Alice slips the dress over her head.

"My dear," she says, emphatically, "it does me credit. It does indeed. I used to laugh at your hair in the old days—of course you have forgiven me—that was before this craze for red hair, you know; but your hair looks simply lovely against that silver and the dove-grey of the domino. Draw it round you. Here, take the mask!"

Paula slips the mask on with a half-hearted smile. What does it matter whether she looks plain or pretty? She is sold; part of the price, the earnest-money, has been paid, and is on its way to Bob—poor Bob! And now, ah, well! Life has lost its savour, and not even the genuine admiration of her sex—that most delicious of all tributes to a woman—can lighten the heart that lies so dead and benumbed in her bosom.

With a smile she puts the finery away from her.

"It is very pretty. I am much obliged to you, Alice," she says. "But, what are you going to wear? That seems to me of more importance; you, you know—with one of her old laughs—are still in the market."

Alice shrugs her shoulders, and lifts a pearly blue dress from the box.

"Oh, I am of no consequence. I am not the bride-elect, I am only the elder sister of the lovely Miss Estcourt; but I have got a very pretty dress," and she holds it up.

"And what does that mean?" asks Paula, taking the dress and examining it with a forced display of interest.

"I am Dawn," says Alice. "Rather hackneyed, isn't it? I expect there will be half a dozen Dawns and Mornings at least; but what does it matter?"

"It matters very much," says Paula, "but you will be sure to look nicer and prettier than anyone else in the room."

"Bar one," says Alice, cheerfully. "My dear, I know you will eclipse me, and I am quite resigned. Indeed I have known it for months past. We have changed places; it is you who are the 'beautiful Miss Estcourt,' now, and I am quite content to shine by your reflection."

Paula laughs incredulously.

"This will be a big affair," says Alice, folding up the dress and bustling about cheerfully. "They say it will be the biggest things they ever had at Nouvelle."

"Where is it to be?" asks Paula, absently.

Alice stares at her.

"Why, do you mean to say that you don't know—that you didn't hear them talking about it, Stancy and May, and all of us, the other night, any night of the week past?"

Paula colours slightly.

"I remember something about it," she says, quietly; "but I'm afraid I didn't listen very attentively. I must have been thinking of something else."

Alice laughs quietly.

"Well, Paula, my dear, I have vowed a vow that I won't lose patience with you, and I'll keep it, though you do try me pretty hard sometimes. Where is it to be? In the salon of the casino—the large salon next the play-room, you know. I forgot; you have never seen it"—for Paula has always declined Stancy's offer to take her in to the gambling-room. "They thought of having it in the Golden Eagle, but the room was found to be too small; and Mr. Palmer arranged—he really doesn't seem to care what he spends—with the committee, that they should have the casino salon."

"I hate that place," says Paula.

Alice laughs.

"You'll like it to-night, my dear. Besides, you are not obliged to go into the gambling-room, although it adjoins the ball-room. Come along; let us go and dress. I have told them to send some tea up."

and it wasn't his crime

Justice sometimes goes wrong. Men are often punished for crimes they do not commit. And when we thoughtlessly take purgatives and cathartics to relieve stagnant bowels, we are committing a similar injustice.

When the system is unable to remove food waste at regular intervals, it is the food waste, and not the system, that is the correction.

Every other form of treatment either irritates or forces the system. Nujol works on the waste matter instead of on the system. By this entirely new principle Nujol will keep the poisonous waste moving out of the body.

Nujol prevents constipation by keeping the food soft, thus helping Nature establish easy, thorough bowel evacuation at regular intervals—the healthiest habit in the world.

It is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take—try it!

Nujol is sold by all druggists in sealed bottles only, bearing Nujol trade-mark. Write Cowan & Company, 111 John's, Newfoundland, for booklet, "The Very Best of Drugs." Nujol Laboratories, Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), 20 Broadway, N.Y.

A New Method of Treating an Old Complaint

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Perhaps Paula is the only person in Nouvelle who is indifferent to the grand annual ball which is one of the chief attractions of that charming watering-place. Nothing but the ball has been talked about for the last fortnight, and the great question of the day, not only for the gentler but the rougher sex, has been, "What shall I wear?"

Stancy has decided to go as a cavalier, and has already practised before his glass the proper swagger—which comes rather naturally—pertaining to the costume of a swell of the Charles II. period. Even Mr. Palmer has been bitten by the prevailing mania, and has consented to wear the costume of a doge of Venice, though what sort of a person a doge may have been that respectable gentleman is totally ignorant. Alice has chosen May's dress, as she has chosen Paula's and her own, and all are looking forward to the eventful evening excepting Paula, to whom all evenings are uneventful now—now that she has lost her first and false love and has sold herself.

Of the party, Stancy de Palmer is perhaps the most radiant and self-satisfied. As usual in his pampered, selfish life, he has "got his way;" he has set his small heart upon getting Paula—perhaps because she was difficult to get—and he has won her. He goes about all day in a state of enthusiastic satisfaction and conceit. Conceit, because it has suddenly dawned upon Nouvelle that the younger Miss Estcourt is the beauty of the place, and she belongs to him! It goes for nothing with him—the cold, icy way in which she has accepted him—the fact that he has "bought her" as certainly and palpably as ever he bought a horse or a dog. Another man might feel hurt by her cold indifference, but Stancy does not. He is quite satisfied, and takes all the congratulations that are showered upon him with a self-complacent smile of superiority and assurance, and—happy Mr. Palmer and May are satisfied also, for is not Stancy ever so much steadier already? Does he not limit the champagne and the whiskey, and avoid that dreadful gambling-table?

"Stancy's all right," says Mr. Palmer, with a chuckle. "Once married, he'll settle down and go steady."

And if May remarks Paula's set face and cold, absent smile, she consoles herself with the reflection that Paula was always a strange girl, and that when she and Stancy are married they will be like the good people in the fairy tales, happy ever afterwards!

And so the comedy—ah! and the tragedy—of life go on. Hearts break, and one's friends are blind, and to their cry of "All's well!" the human soul sinks in the deep waters, perchance never to rise again!

And May is happier than she has been for some time, for Paula has whispered a word of hope, and a word of hope means so much to timid, unexpecting May. Instead of telling her what Bob had written, that he must give her up, Paula has whispered that all may yet be well, and that Bob may make his fortune and keep his word after all. But not a word has she said of the sacrifice she has made for them both—not a word of the thousand

You are welcome to use this letter for the benefit of other suffering women."—Mrs. F. A. GAINES, R.R. No. 1, Steele, Ala.

Youthful Bandits Raid Poker Game.

New York, Feb. 21.—Detectives of the Simpson street station expressed confidence yesterday that they would have in custody to-day the four youthful bandits who descended upon a convivial poker game in the home of Benjamin Cohen, a manufacturer, living at No. 510 Dawson street, the Bronx, early Sunday morning and escaped with $1,500 in cash and about $1,000 worth of jewelry. The raid, details of which were suppressed by the police until yesterday, was executed with a felicity that would charm the heart of the wildest movie fan. In the dining room of the Cohen home five men were seated somewhat drowsy with many hours of playing. In addition to Cohen there were August Kayser, a dealer in diamonds; J. Coox, Morris Bello and Mendel Marenos. The men heard a low knock upon the door. Cohen rose and slowly walked through the long hallway that leads to it. A voice outside said it was "Mr. Green," a friend of Cohen's, who occasionally dropped in to take a hand in the game. Cohen opened the door. A masked youth flashed a revolver and ordered him quietly to throw up his hands. Three youths, also masked, suddenly appeared and followed Cohen inside. The process of separating Cohen from his wallet and his jewelry did not take many seconds. And then suddenly the four pushed him into the dining room and curt orders were received by Cohen's guests to throw up their hands. They complied. So dexterously was the raid pulled off that Cohen's wife, who was sleeping in an adjoining room, heard no unusual sound until the gunmen had finished their work. Kayser, the diamond dealer, was carefully searched and relieved of $1,000 in cash, a gold watch and several rings. The money on the table was swiftly swept into the pockets of the ringleader of the four while his men searched the guests. When they had finished they quietly walked out.

APPOINTMENTS THAT PLEASE.

OTTAWA, March 4. Major W. B. V. Hooper, a returned soldier of Charlotte Place, Ontario, is appointed Postmaster at that place. In the recent bulletin from the Civil Service Commission, Lewis V. Robertson, returned soldier, is appointed Postmaster at Shelburne, N.S.

THE POWERS AND TURKEY.

LONDON, March 4. The Allied Foreign Ministers met to-day at the Foreign Office to discuss the details of the treaty with Turkey. Premier Lloyd George attended the meeting for a time. After a short session the Conference was adjourned until later in the day.

STRIPPING THE TURK.

LONDON, March 4. Turkey is stripped of virtually all her territory in Europe but retains the sacred places by the treaty now being completed by Conference of Foreign Ministers and Ambassadors. It became known to-day. Thrace has been awarded to Greece by the Peace Conference but the present Conference is charged with the task of working out plans whereby the Turks will keep control of sacred places. Adrianople and Smyrna will be placed under Greek control.

denly the four pushed him into the dining room and curt orders were received by Cohen's guests to throw up their hands. They complied. So dexterously was the raid pulled off that Cohen's wife, who was sleeping in an adjoining room, heard no unusual sound until the gunmen had finished their work. ## The Lord Chamberlain Stops a Burlesque.

On March 5, 1873, Messrs. Tomline and Gilbert a'Becket's burlesque, entitled "The Happy Land," was produced at the Court Theatre, Sloan Square, and in the first act it appeared that Mr. W. E. Gladstone, Mr. Low and Mr. Ayrton, were caricatured under the names of the "Right Hon. Mr. Ethars, the Right Hon. Mr. Phyllon and the Right Hon. Mr. Luton," represented by Messrs. Righton, Hill, and Fisher, whose "make-up" caused them to exactly resemble the distinguished statesmen. The performance was received uproariously by the audience, and in the morning the leading journals contained articles, drawing attention to the supposed incapacity of the Lord Chamberlain to restrain the licence of the stage. This resulted in that personage visiting the theatre, with the result that he discovered that various interpolations, or "gags," had been introduced that were not in the original M.S., which he had previously licensed for production. He therefore gave orders that the burlesque should be forthwith stopped. The manager at once expressed his regret, and obtained permission for the piece to be resumed on condition that the verbatim text of the play—as originally licensed—was strictly adhered to. Immense crowds, attracted by the free advertisement it had received, attended at the Court Theatre, and the burlesque proved an enormous success. The book of "The Happy Land," as originally played, with the interdicted portions printed in capital letters, was also published, and the offers of the authors, manager and publishers were considerably replenished.

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Apply few drops then lift sore, touchy corns off with fingers—No pain!

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little Freesone on an itching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right out. Yes, magic! A tiny bottle of Freesone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation. Freesone is the sensational discovery of a Cincinnati genius. It is wonderful.

At the City Hall.

The regular weekly session of the Municipal Council took place yesterday afternoon. All the members of the Board were present. Councillor Morris, after his extended trip, was present and received a hearty welcome from the Mayor and members. After the preliminary business of the Council meeting was gone through a letter was read from St. John's Abattoir Co. Ltd., per Campbell & McKay, to the effect they had recently incorporated a company for the purpose of erecting a modern Abattoir in the city. The site is on Water Street, immediately west of the Standard Mfg. Co.'s premises. They asked for the Council's approval. After considering the matter, the Council approved of the proposal and when the plans are submitted they will be discussed with favor.

Tobias Verge wrote that owing to sickness and death in his family he could not proceed with his building on Franklin Avenue.

H. Dawe, 65 Pennywell Road, again wrote as to the ash dump in that section. Mr. Dawe is to be informed that it is nothing new to have a dump in that locality, it has been there for many years, and from information received nothing has happened to show that it was a nuisance. Meantime the Engineer will investigate the place.

E. N. White wrote as to the condition of the South Side Road. The matter is to be looked into.

Capt. H. A. Anderson wrote it was proposed to erect a Celtic Cross in the city in memory of the officers and men of the Royal Nfld. Regiment who fell in the late war. It was a gift from the officers and non-commissioned officers of the Second Battalion, Royal Nfld. Regt. Cost will be about $1,500. They wanted a site from the City Council. They suggested the open space at the foot of Garrison Hill. The meeting approved of this suggestion and if the site suggested were suitable, Capt. Anderson could have it.

Plan of alterations to be made to the store of Philip Murphy, Water Street, as submitted by J. C. Barter, was approved.

Reports were read from the Solicitor on the ownership of the property at Fort William, which he held, belonged to the Imperial authorities. The only parties who could apply to the Supreme Court for declaration of title would be the Reid Nfd. Co., the Imperial authorities, and, possibly, the Government. Ordered the Colonial Secretary be written on the matter.

The Solicitor also reported that in the case against the Reid Company, for road repairs, Mr. Conroy, solicitor for the Company, made motion for the appointment of a commission to take evidence in Montreal and Toronto.

Decided to order new plates or numbers for motor-cars this season.

C. Wiseman's tender for house Quidi Vidi Rd., was accepted.

Report of the City Engineer on the fire on Water Street and the water pressure, as well as the work on roads and water and sewerage departments was read.

The Health Officer's weekly report was also submitted, after which the meeting adjourned.

McMurdo's Store News.

FRIDAY, March 5.
Remedies for grip, influenza, colds in the head, etc., are numerous; effective preventions are not so common. It is a commonplace to say that a preventive of all that class of troubles known by the above and other names, is very much better than a cure; and we believe that we have secured a real and genuine means of preventing these prevalent and serious troubles, by means of a preparation known as V.E.M. Of its value we have no doubt. It is there in the preparation itself, consisting of eucalyptol and menthol, two first rate nasal antiseptics, with a proper base; it is there particularly in the mode of application which is most ingenious, and most efficient. V.E.M. has been used with triumphant effect by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company who served it out to all their employees during a recent epidemic, and by many of her people in the United States with good results. Price 70c. a tube.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 5. That a money hand-out to ex-service men would be simply thrown away, was the statement made yesterday before the House Ways and Means Committee, by Walter W. He contended that the satisfaction of having fought to defend the country was a sufficient reward.

In Memoriam.

JAMES LONG.
Now that the train service is working again, I beg to chronicle through your journal the death of James Long, Sr., of Open Hall, who died on January 1st of angina pectoris. The deceased had reached the ripe old age of 77 years, but one may say had scarcely a day's sickness up to the time of his death. On the evening of Dec. 30th he complained of feeling a very severe pain about the region of the stomach and heart, which as the night advanced seemed to grow worse. Then both spiritual and medical aid were summoned, but the fiat had gone forth. He suffered much for these two days but was quite reconciled to God's holy will and conscious to the last. Rev. Fr. Scully, of King's Cove, remained by his bedside till the end, and assisted at a solemn Mass of Requiem on the day of his funeral.

Mr. Long was certainly a fine specimen of the old school, charitable to the poor, devoted to his church, and his word was his bond. His house was ever open to the poor and the stranger, and many a tear will be shed and many a prayer offered for the repose of his soul. He is survived by five children, two sons and three daughters. Mr. J. E. Long, teacher at Open Hall, and Mr. Wm. Long, who formerly taught at Bay Bulls, but now residing at the old homestead, still were around his bedside at the time of his death. He leaves also nearly thirty grandchildren and numerous other relatives. To one and all the writer extends his most profound sympathy. P. F. T. Open Hall, Feb. 25th, '20.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 5. That a money hand-out to ex-service men would be simply thrown away, was the statement made yesterday before the House Ways and Means Committee, by Walter W. Burns, a former artillery captain. Burns said all demobilized men were employed, and some of them had no idea of the effect of a bonus on the countries outstanding bond obligations. He contended that the satisfaction of having fought to defend the country was a sufficient reward.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHY SHE WASN'T ENVIOUS.

On a wonderful evening last summer I sat with an older woman on the seashore and watched the waves breaking in the misty moonlight.

After we had been there a few minutes she drew my attention to two young people who had just come down and were sitting on a drift-wood log near us.

The Moment Most Women Love Best

They were apparently in that blissful state of courtship which comes just before there is any open declaration or overt act of love (I have a feeling that to a woman this is the supreme and most exquisite moment in the whole drama), the time when a casual hand-touch, as both burrow in the sand, is rapture, then simple words have magic meanings, when the meeting of eyes is an intimacy too poignant to be borne for more than a second.

"Aren't they wonderfully happy?" said my companion.

"Does it make you envy them?" I asked.

"Yes," she said, "and no. I envy them. I'd like to be feeling as they are. And yet I have so much that they have not that I do not really envy."

"You mean--"

"The Thing: She Has and They Have Not."

That they have more pleasure out of their sensation, but that I get happiness in other ways they don't get and won't for years. For instance, do you think all this wonderful country means to them as much as it does to me. (She is an artist.) Do you think as they walk down the street they see as much as you or I who have learned to be interested in so many more things? Do you think they have the keen interest in watching the big vital drama of the daily news that an intelligent older person has? And what about the joy out of the companionship with growing children and with a husband with whom I have a hundred things in common to the one they two have with each other--don't you think those things weigh pretty heavy on my side of the scale? Of course I don't mean that I would be for anything having passed through the stage they are in now.

and in a way I do envy them, but I have so much more than they that I'm not sitting in the envy."

Don't you think that is a beautiful summing up of the whole situation, I do.

Why All Education is Worth While.

We all know that all the school education one can get is worth while, even if one cannot make it pay financial dividends, because it gives one that much more background, puts that much more meaning into life, makes you see that much more and understand that much more.

Well, is it not equally true that every year one lives adds to the richness of life for the same reasons, since all life intelligently lived is education?

Of course, to get the most out of this education, one must have one's ears, one's eyes, one's mind and last but not far from least, one's heart always open.

RIGHTS.

The meanest man I ever saw Knew all there is about the law. He never stepped an inch beyond The legal phrasing of his bonds. He wouldn't lie and wouldn't cheat. But children dodged him on the street.

And neighbors had no love for him Because his ways were stern and strict. He wanted everything in sight If he could say 'twas his by right.

I've noticed that the meanest fights Begin with men who want their rights: Even as Shylock, they pursue The fina. dollar that is due. And though they pay the debts they owe, No mercy to their friends they show: The law proclaims them honest men, But in the verdict rendered then, Throughout the script you cannot find That it is written they are kind.

All men have rights, and yet it seems The happiest joys and sweetest dreams Are always theirs who now and then forego their rights for other men: Men who their petty claims release For friendship or the sake of peace, And would not make another bleed Although the law allowed the deed. Know more about the world's de-light Than they who coldly want their rights. Give me the man who will not press The neighbor who is in distress. The man who, when there is a doubt, Forgets his claim or wipes it out. He shall be richer in the end For having been to all a friend.

"Marching Through Georgia."

The song, "Marching Through Georgia," was the product, in 1865, of Henry Clay Work, a popular song writer, who wrote many songs that were popular in civil war time. He was a printer by trade and often composed the words while working at the "case," and when he was setting up music type he would compose the music "free hand." "Marching Through Georgia" is probably unique among war songs, in that it was composed without appearing in manuscript.

A New Competitor.

In addition to Norway, France and Iceland in Europe, a new competitor in the codfish markets of the world has entered. Japan is now about to encourage the prosecution of the codfishery amongst her people. The entrance of the Orient into Western avenues of trade has been made quite possible by the imitiveness of the Japanese, their students having been sent into all countries for the purpose of studying conditions, at the expense of the Tokio Government. As an imitator the Jap has no equal. As an originator he shows but little aptitude, but as a people they are very thorough and no detail is too small to be overlooked. With encouragement from the big shipping concerns of the seaports, there is no doubt that into this new avenue of industry Japan will be a formidable rival to the fish producing countries on this side of the Atlantic. That this is fully realized by Canadians and Americans, the following leading article reprinted from the January issue of the Canadian Fisherman proves, and the subject matter contained therein should be of more than ordinary interest to Newfoundland.

THE JAPANESE AND THE CODFISH INDUSTRY.

Our United States contemporaries on both coasts have been devoting some space of late to the competition of the Japanese in the codfish trade. It appears that they are invading the markets long regarded as being wholly in the hands of American, Canadian and Newfoundland exporters and by reason of their low cost of production, they are able to undersell the white producers. We are cognizant of an increasing activity in the visits of so-called Japanese fishery students to Canada and the United States and many requests for information have been coming to us of late from Japanese sources.

The late war has been a stimulating factor to Japanese effort in numerous industries and we do not doubt but what they will make a determined effort to develop the Siberian and Behring Sea cod-fisheries and invade the American, West Indian and South American markets with their product. This competition is perfectly legitimate, but it is nevertheless a cause for alarm and our producers will have to prepare themselves for a fight to hold their markets.

We have seen numerous Japanese products and few of them can be characterized as being first-class—in fact, they seem to have very ably filled the place formerly occupied by Germany in the manufacture of cheap goods. We cannot hope by bounty or protective tariff to prevent Japanese competition and we might as well prepare to meet it in the only way it can be met, viz.: by utilizing the most economical methods of production; by producing a better product and by catering a little more to the wishes of foreign importers.

The Japanese trade invasion may be the means of waking our people up to the necessity of curing our codfish on a higher standard than obtains generally at present and to bring our legislators into line for the necessary action and encouragement of technical education in our fishing industry. The Japanese recognized this long ago and have spared neither expense nor effort to develop their fisheries and educate their fishermen. The result of their policy is the present aggressive bid for larger markets and the fact that a nation which was regarded as being semi-civilized twenty years ago is now able to become a dangerous trade rival in many other lines besides fisheries is an indication that it is time for us to wake up.

It is not in keeping with Anglo-Saxon tradition or character to sit down and squeal at legitimate trade competition, nor is the hiding behind restrictive tariffs to be commended. Such only tend to encourage a condition of self-complacency—a lazy security, which is fatal to healthy industrial effort. Competition is the life of trade and it is up to our producers to take stock of themselves and produce a better article in a better manner than heretofore.

Hundreds of opportunities have been pouring into Canada for extensions of export trade in fish products and the producers have been kept fully informed of same. Some of our people have taken advantage of them, but a good many have made absolutely no effort to secure the business, nor have they even acknowledged direct enquiries. Markets calling for specially-cured and packed products have been ignored by us—but it is a safe bet they won't be ignored by the Japanese.

It is up to the firms affected, or threatened, by Japanese competition to overhaul their business methods and to insist on Government standardization and inspection of their products. It is also up to them to pay a little more attention to the development of the fishing industry along progressive lines. The Japanese menace is no figment of the imagination. Japan is the Germany of the Orient and the Japanese are just as aggressive as were the Germans of pre-war days and the Japan of today is something to be reckoned with, for while other nations were fighting, Japan was busy building up a strong foundation for post-bellum world trade. At the same time the Japanese worker is no longer the underpaid cheap laborer of pre-war days. Standards of living have arisen in Japan just as they have in other countries, and trades unions and high wages are becoming as much of a vogue there as in the white nations. These conditions do not make competition with Japanese producers an altogether hopeless proposition. We have faith enough in our people to believe that we can meet any outside competition if we take stock of ourselves and remedy our many faults.

Bon Voyage.

French Consul P. Suzor is leaving by S. S. Rosalind en route to Chicago, where he is to take charge of the French Consulate in that city. He first intended to go home for a six months' leave, granted him after his seven years' stay in Newfoundland, but we understand that he has since been asked by the French Government to postpone his leave on account of some confidential work to be done in Chicago for a few months.

Hon. Tasker Cook, Norwegian Consul, has been appointed as French Vice-Consul pro tem, pending the arrival of Mr. Suzor's successor. The services rendered in this connection by Hon. T. Cook were recognized long ago with the award of the decoration of "Officier d'Academie", and we have no doubt that any one having business to transact at the French Consulate in this city will find with him a ready welcome.

Owing to a severe attack of grippe Madame P. Suzor is unable to accompany her husband on this trip of the Rosalind. However, she is expected to follow by the next boat, as she is already on the way to recovery.

M. C. L. I. Debate.

At last night's meeting of the M. C. Literary Institute, the subject for debate was: "Resolved that the principle of Uniform Wage is unjustifiable." The leaders for the affirmative were Messrs. Wm. Drover and G. Gaudet; for the negative, Messrs. R. A. Templeton, W. Moore and W. Knight. The affirmative presented sound arguments and endeavored to show that the principle of uniform wages contributes largely to the unsettled state of the world to-day, and has been the means of imposing a financial burden on a helpless public, because employees have to pay as much for inferior as for superior work. The principle is destructive to the industrious workmen as he is reduced to the level of the careless or indifferent artisan. The affirmative made it clear that it was not hostile to unionism as a principle, but rather looked with dismay upon the application of uniformity in wages which was eating as a cancer into the vitals of unionism. The application of a minimum wage was considered by the affirmative as more calculated to bring about better conditions for labor and greater fairness to the public, than the principle in question. The negative argued that the position of labor in the individual world makes it imperative that uniformity of wages be paid and is essential to the well-being of the worker. It was pointed out that unions do not apply this principle without discretion but rather put a fair classification in labor and discriminate between unskilled and skilled labor and also classify various degrees of skilled labor. Uniformity is a principle applying to every avenue of life and that money paid does not destroy the efficiency of man. Except for its application a great hardship would be enforced on older men who have borne the burden and heat of the day. If there was not the protection of such uniformity, men in advanced age would not get a living wage, because of the fact that their productive power was lessened. Much useful information was brought out during the debate and on a vote being taken, it went in favor of the affirmative. Next week's subject will be: "Resolved, that a System of Education along the lines of Commercial Training would be more adaptable to the needs of our young people than the system of Higher Education now in vogue."

Bell Isle Scheme Impracticable.

Forty years ago Mr. James Cupar, a naturalist, residing in Montreal, attracted some attention in a series of letters to a project of blocking the Straits of Belle Isle, between Newfoundland and Labrador, and according to his theory, so modifying the climate of northeastern Quebec that it would have seasons like those of New England. The scheme was one of those geographically attractive ones which map students delight in conceiving," says the Montreal Gazette. "The Straits of Belle Isle, at the narrowest part, is only a few miles wide; but to erect across it an embankment strong enough to resist the storms and tides of the North Atlantic would be a tremendous work; and no one has spoken with authority to give assurance that the result would be what was expected or would be a compensation for the cost involved. The scheme is to the fore again, however, this time in connection with a railway project to connect the systems of Newfoundland with northern Labrador. The old theories advanced by Mr. Cupar are revived. The Arctic current, it is declared, were the straits blocked, would be deflected into the Atlantic and lost, and the Gulf stream, holding closer to the shores of the continent, would give Newfoundland and southern Labrador milder seasons. The confirmation of the coast does not support such theory. The Labrador or Greenland current does not all pass through the Straits of Belle Isle. Much or most of it sweeps along the eastern shores of Newfoundland, bringing with it great numbers that sometimes blockade St. John's and often embarrass sailors in the neighboring waters. With the strait blocked this phase of the Atlantic problems might be made worse. The situation is too vague to issue a prospectus on. Not even a Canadian parliament, the world's easy mark for railway promoters, would vote a subsidy on what is certain in connection with the scheme, or on what is likely to be known for many years."

Missionary Hypocrisy.

Capt. J. Lanning Writes of Some Grenfell Lectures.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir,—A few days ago I learned from a news item, appearing in a St. John's paper that Dr. Wilfred Grenfell had recently arrived in Halifax and was starting once more on a Lecture tour of United States and Canada, prior to his return to missionary and medical activities on Labrador. I wonder very much if the average person in this country realizes, or gives a second's thought to what is meant by a Lecture on "Newfoundland and Labrador" by Doctor Wilfred Grenfell to a crowded auditorium, say, in New York or Chicago. As a Newfoundland—who has spent nearly fifteen years in travelling far and wide along the trails Doctor Grenfell has followed throughout the English-speaking world, I know only too well what is meant and the knowledge does not give me the smallest measure of satisfaction or pleasure. During those fifteen years I have been almost continually fighting a distorted conception of "Newfoundland and the habits and Customs of its people" left behind in the mind of nearly every- body who has accepted Doctor Grenfell and his lectures at face value. While giving due credit to every philanthropic individual and purpose, that stand for the betterment of mankind or the amelioration of human suffering, I feel quite sure that, through the medium of Doctor Grenfell's lecture tours, Newfoundland has suffered a humiliation and loss of national pride far outweighing any blessings the medical and missionary activities of the man have bestowed upon the few people on the Labrador coast line.

DON'T LIKE HIS LECTURES.

What the people of this country as a whole think of Doctor Grenfell I do not know, but in all my wanderings abroad, I have never met (apart from the missionary profession) one solitary Newfoundland who had the faintest appreciation of the man or his methods, while I have met thousands who, like myself, endeavoured in every possible way to contend against the tide of warped information which always seemed to flow from Doctor

Grenfell's lecture tours. Some years before the war I had the misfortune to listen to one of his lectures at Toronto, Canada. It was quite tame compared to another of the same series. I found it my duty to attend at New York, but on each occasion my patriotic soul was stirred and I deeply resented the impression left in the minds of his audience that Newfoundland was the poorest, the most drunken and demoralized country on earth and well-merited the sympathy and charity of the civilized world. On each occasion, too, I wrote a reply to the garbled reports of the Lectures which appeared the following day in the Press, but even though I did not fail to identify myself and use my own name, as well as the names of other Newfoundlanders associated with me, I could not find a paper fair enough to publish the reply. I went to one Editor for a personal interview. He was quite willing to admit the justice of my arguments but so strong is the force of missionary hypocrisy at times in this world that beneath its cloak great wrongs can pass unchallenged, and I was obliged to bow to the inevitable. In this connection I must pay Doctor Grenfell a compliment, and however generously disposed I may feel it is the only one I can pay him—with the exception of a certain ex-president of the United States, he is to my mind the most successful self-advertiser the world has ever seen.

SELF-SACRIFICING MARTYR.

There is a general opinion among Newfoundlanders abroad that no other country under the face of Heaven so readily opens its doors to fakirs and impostors of every creed and origin as does Newfoundland and once here they are signally and collectively successful. It is nauseating to me and to thousands of my fellow countrymen scattered over the world to find Doctor Grenfell everywhere extolled as a martyr of self-sacrifice—a Saviour to the cause of the Newfoundland people, when we all know he is enjoying the time of his life and for every kind act or thought extended to the people of Labrador through the medium of his missions he manages to obtain a thousand pounds sterling worth of advertising and a tour of the English-speaking world every year for eight months. Given similar opportunities and access to the funds Doctor Grenfell handles in any one year and I will set sail for Greenland upon the opening of navigation and take with me eight or ten professional men, all as keen and eager for the enterprise as myself. None of us will consider ourselves heroes, nor martyrs nor emblems of self-sacrifice, as we shall one and all be merely satisfying a spirit of adventure within us and a love for the silent wilds of the Northland.

TAKES A CYNICAL VIEW.

I have spent nearly nine years in unexplored regions of Canada from the Klondyke to Hudson Bay, and I have known and lived much of the life Doctor Grenfell must so thoroughly enjoy. I know its fascinations and its charms and I possess neither the heart nor the soul of a martyr or a medical missionary. Many of us Newfoundlanders have only recently returned from the maelstrom of the accursed war and we have seen the hollow mockery of nearly two thousand years of missionary activity. We have seen a great deal more, and the church and missionary societies as a whole must pardon us if we take a cynical view of what constitutes modern civilization.

A WIDER FIELD IN THE U. K.

Doctor Grenfell may be doing splendidly on the Labrador but he could do a great deal more in the land of his birth and he would have a much wider field for his activities. I have seen more drunkenness, more moral and social degradation in one square mile of an English industrial centre during war-time than in twenty-five years of my life in Newfoundland, and ten years sojourning in the States and Canada. I have seen worse in England and ten times worse in the countries of Southern Europe, and we have been supplied with missionaries from over there since Cabot made his first landfall on this side of the Atlantic. There is something radically wrong somewhere and we have come to a period in life when we question many things and think a little for ourselves. If Doctor Grenfell must continue his work on Labrador (since he finds the beautiful summer climate so conducive to his health and happiness), I have no objection, but as a Newfoundland who has the pride and best interests of his country at heart, I strongly object to those abominable lecture tours, and the methods by which he secures old clothes and pennies from the charitably disposed and hopelessly deluded people abroad. If the people of Newfoundland and Labrador were possessed of only one-half of the primitive instincts and missionary-eating proclivities that Doctor Grenfell's hearers believe them to possess, he would have disappeared from the scene of his activities long ago, and would have been a real martyr to the missionary cause, and I am firmly convinced Newfoundland would have gained considerably by the transaction.

Very truly yours,
J. LANNING,
Captain Royal Air Force.
St. John's, March 3rd, 1920.

Rainbow Colored Clothes for Men.

When one recalls what London tailors have been able to do with "checks of bold pattern," but with the color scheme confined rigidly to blacks, browns and greys, one may well shudder at the proposal of such checks enlivened with streaks of bright orange or purple, or grass green, or crimson. Is one to be able to tell a Londoner from a Highlander only by the length of his "brecks"? And if travelling Americans fall for the new color scheme, is one to witness at the gang plank of returning steamers a rival to Byron's scene, where "The Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold, His cohorts all gleaming with purple and gold?" We suspect that when autumn comes we shall be delivered from the gleams of purple and gold. Americans have stood for fuzzy green hats, and a few weeks ago a man in a well-tailored suit of alic blue walked down Washington street without having anything more harmful than stares thrown at him. But the suit of that daring spirit was all of one color. If it had been striped with green or yellow, we should hate to answer for the consequences. That suit has never come back, although the man may walk that pavement daily clad in normal garments. The Americans in Europe may take flyers in various sorts of extreme togery, but about the time he sights Sandy Hook he begins to look for normal clothes and pumpkin pie. "Old friends, old time, old manners, old books, old wine" and old clothes are just as lovable now as when Goldsmith wrote of them.

In the Prize Ring.

FRENCHMAN THREW UP SPONGE.

Paris, Feb. 21.—Knockout O'Laughlin, an American, last night defeated Paul Breviere in the fourth round of a boxing contest. Breviere's seconds threw up the sponge in order to save their man from further punishment.

LEVINSKY DEFENDED HIS BOXING TITLE.

Detroit, Feb. 20.—Battling Levinsky of Philadelphia, light-heavyweight champion, successfully defended his title at the Arena Gardens to-night, when he won the decision from Clay Turner, the St. Paul Indian fighter, in ten rounds of tame boxing. An immense crowd, looking for a repetition of the whirlwind fighting which prevailed on the last meeting of the pair, left the Arena disappointed. Levinsky had the better of six of the ten rounds.

Levinsky took it easy in the first two rounds, and Turner had the better of the bout until near the end of the fourth period, when Clay's left eye, which was partly closed in the second, became completely shut, and from this time on the Battler out-fought the Indian. Neither showed any too much aggressiveness, missing so many punches and swings that the crowd hissed them.

In his ten-round bout with Joey Dalley, of Erie, Pa., Mickey Dillon, of Charleroi, Pa., met his first defeat in this section. Beating men of his weight rather easily, Dillon went out of his class and received a lacing that will live long in the memory of the fans who saw the contest. Game to the core, Dillon, battered and bruised from Dalley's swings and jabs, refused to quit, and left the ring as popular as his opponent.

BIG PURSES—HURTING BOXING GAME.

Tom S. Andrews, Milwaukee fight critic, handler of boxers and fight promoter, has probably had as much, if not more, experience with boxing than anyone connected with the sport. So when Tom describes the fabulous purses that are offered for championship fights, you have to stop and listen to him.

"All such talk, whether it be true or merely gossip," he said last night, "hurts boxing. Usually these offers mean nothing more than advertising for some person or persons or some community. But even if they are bona fide they react against boxing. Fighters are entitled to as much for their services, and when it goes above a certain figure it makes people jealous and dissatisfied."

"The fans begin to think about the vast amount of money divided between two fighters and the enormous prices charged for seats. The comment is not at all favorable to the game. Managers ought to realize this and be more moderate in their demands."

Andrews is right, but you can't make the managers believe he is.

MASON'S RECORD.

Frankie Mason, who is to meet Jimmy Wilde for the flyweight championship of the world, is the undisputed bearer of the American title for that weight. Mason in something like sixty fights during the past year, has lost but once, and that was a doubtful decision. He beat Pal Moore in 10 rounds at South Bend, Mich., March 11 last, and has a decision over Jack Sharkey at Detroit, May 7. These are the two men who were given decisions over Jimmy Wilde, the former in London, and the latter recently at Milwaukee. The one bout Mason lost was to Tremaine at Toledo, July 4, whom he had beaten twice before at Detroit, Jan. 20, and at Toledo, Feb. 18. Mason ranges from 105 to 112 pounds. He has twice beaten Mike Ertle, who fought Wilde recently. He has a draw with Joe Lynch, who weighed 118 against his 107. All reports of his fights agree that Mason is slow to start, but once started is a whirlwind and always finishes.

CARPENTIER MUST DEPEND ON SPEED.

Boxing followers in America soon will have an opportunity to see Georges Carpentier in action and judge for themselves what chance he will have of beating Jack Dempsey. The noted Frenchman may not take part in any real battles when he arrives in this country next month. He is slated to give exhibitions with his sparring partners. Even that will afford some line on his form and will be far more satisfactory than the contradictory reports regarding him that have drifted across the ocean.

Carpentier has been described as a second Jim Corbett in speed and skill with the gloves. If Carpentier boxes along the lines of Corbett he may be able to keep away from the hard-hitting Dempsey as Corbett kept out of range of Jim Jeffries for twenty-three rounds. Dempsey is not a Jeffries in the matter of endurance, and the first time he meets an opponent clever enough to keep out of his way for a few rounds the chances are that he will tire under the terrific pace he sets.

But, judging from the accounts of Carpentier's battles, his styles of boxing in no way resembles that of Corbett. Gentleman Jim believed in making his opponents miss. He circled around John L. Sullivan, jabbing lightly, and he got away from everything the old fellow started. He made Sullivan beat himself by missing so much that he became too exhausted to continue.

From all accounts Carpentier is as aggressive as Dempsey himself. The Frenchman has made a study of American methods and he has learned the value of being the aggressor by watching American boxers dispose of the slow-moving English heavyweights. Willie Lewis, his first coach, used to spread-eagle the cumbersome English heavies by stepping in with his one-two punch while they were going through the preliminary movements that are customary in England.

Carpentier's recent victory over Joe Beckett was the exact duplicate of many victories scored by Lewis in England rings. He used the same methods and obtained the same result. While Beckett was slavishly following custom by going through certain formal poses—filling in, he called it—Carpentier stepped in with the Lewis one-two and knocked him out.

In a recent cabled interview, Descamps, manager of Carpentier, was made to say that eight or twelve rounds would be plenty for the bout with Dempsey, because Carpentier will go in to win or lose in a hurry. That would indicate that Carpentier believes Dempsey can be taken by surprise.

If Descamps really intends to send Carpentier in right off the reel to swap blows with the champion, the Frenchman is not half as shrewd as he is reported to be. Mixing it up is Dempsey's long suit. For a man of his sturdy build he hits faster and harder than any other heavy-weight. It would be nothing short of suicidal for the slender Frenchman to make a slugging match of it from the start. Dempsey has too many natural advantages to be overcome in that way.

If the Frenchman has any advantage at all in his favor it is his superior science. His footwork is reported to be of the highest order, and if he uses it to good advantage in the early rounds Dempsey must either win quickly or tire under the strain.

When Dempsey grows tired he is an easy mark. He showed that in his four-round bout with Willie Meehan, the Californian third-rater. Dempsey went into that bout only half trained, and before he had gone two rounds he had shot his bolt. From that point on Meehan battered him all over the ring.

The bout showed that Dempsey does not know what to do when his arms begin to grow heavy. As long as he has his speed with him he needs no defence, because he is so fast that he can beat his man to the punch. But when Dempsey is tired he loses everything.

Widow's Cruse Had Nothing on This.

Toledo, Feb. 24.—Corn whiskey that automatically multiplies itself without loss of its original strength is being held as evidence in the case of two Hungarians, Nicholas Evanoff and Colom Koloff, held by the police. When the men were arrested two one-gallon jugs and a quart bottle filled with the liquor were taken and placed in the police storehouse.

The custodian found later that the bottle had burst, that the corks had blown from the jugs and that the liquor was bubbling—not merely foaming or frothing—over the top. The overflow now amounts to two additional gallons and the original jugs are still full.

City Chemist Reid has made an analysis of the liquor and says that it is corn whiskey containing 60 per cent alcohol and that the overflow does not seem to weaken the alcoholic content.

BRILLIANT MINISTER VICTIM OF INFLUENZA

Rev. Dudley B. Ashford,
Noted Preacher and Lecturer, Well Known on Three Continents, Was Ordered to Give Up
Work.

Reverend Dudley B. Ashford is an extraordinary man. Although still on the sunny side of forty, he has crowded more service to humanity into a few years than most men accomplish in a life-time.

Soon after his graduation from Harley College, London, England, he was ordained minister at the famous New Court Congregational Church, London. A short time thereafter he was selected to present the cause of Congo Reform and African Missions before the people of Norway, and toured that land with such success that he was greeted by enormous crowds at every meeting.

In 1908, under the auspices of the Colonial Missionary Society, he was sent to New Zealand and for three years labored as a missionary among the Maoris, where his experiences were novel and thrilling.

In 1916 he returned to England and served for three years at Wood Street Congregational Church, Cardiff, South Wales, the largest Congregational Church in the British Empire. It was while here that he fell one of the early victims of the great 1918 flu epidemic, an attack from which he had not fully recovered when he accepted a call to the Queen's Road Congregational Church, St. John's, Newfoundland, where his forceful preaching soon attracted record congregations.

The strain of this work upon his undermined constitution proved too severe and he suffered a nervous breakdown, from which now, however, he has completely recovered. Moved by a desire to serve his fellow men he has recently written a letter that tells how he was restored to health and strength.

Moved by Gratitude.
This letter, addressed to The Tanlac Co., Atlanta, Ga., is an eloquent expression of gratitude and is as follows:

"Gentlemen: Your medicine, known as 'Tanlac,' has been such an inestimable blessing to me that I feel constrained to write and tell you so. In October, 1913 while a minister of the Wood Street Congregational Church, Cardiff, South Wales, I had a severe attack of the Spanish influenza, from the effects of which I never fully recovered. I lost twenty-eight pounds in weight and was unable to recover my usual energy.

"Then, in February, 1919, I became the minister of the Queen's Road Congregational Church at St. John's, Newfoundland. My ministry was attended with great success, but the strain proved too great for me and I had a serious breakdown. My nerves seemed to go all to pieces and my digestion became so deranged that I could eat scarcely anything. My heart gave me a lot of trouble; it was an effort to walk upstairs and at night I used to lie awake in continual dread lest my heart should stop beating altogether.

"Then, as a result of exposure one winter's night in a small boat, while in the execution of my duties, I was seized with violent pains in the right shoulder and arm, which nearly drove me to distraction. I consulted doctors and specialists and underwent massage and electrical treatment, without getting much relief. I was ordered to give up all preaching and public work for at least three months, and I began to fear that my health was permanently affected.

He Had Been Skeptical.
"I had always been rather skeptical of the testimonials concerning the merits of any medicine, but one day I read the statement of a man whose symptoms seemed to be identical with my own, and his praise of Tanlac rang so true I decided to give it a trial myself. I bought a bottle and its effect was almost immediate. My appetite so increased that I could scarcely satisfy it, and I found myself putting on weight rapidly. By the time I had taken the fourth bottle, the pains in my arm and shoulder disappeared and I am feeling better to-day than for a long time past.

"I feel that I should be guilty of base ingratitude if I did not write and tell you what a boon Tanlac has been to me, and I give you this unsolicited testimonial to use as you may think best, in the hope that others may find in your wonderful medicine the means to restored health and strength."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, and by the leading Druggist in every town.—advtd.

Nfld. Scotch Cured Herring.

According to reliable factors, arrivals of the new pack in the New York market during the month of January did not exceed 3,000 packages, but several shipments are expected via rail in the near future. A Curling, Nfld. report states that four vessels were caught in the north arm of Bay of Islands, and are solidly frozen in the Arctic ice, with no possible chance of being liberated until the latter part of May. All four boats are partly loaded with salt bulk and frozen herring. Fisheries have closed for the season. The gulf is full of ice, and the weather so far this winter has been unusually severe. Arrivals of the new pack in New York are said to be about equally divided between large, mediums and matties, and are quoted variously at $20-$22 for equal quantities of each size. Prices on the 1919 pack ruled fairly firm throughout the month, with no appreciable variations.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, Feb.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.
Gentlemen—My daughter, 13 yrs. old, was thrown from a sleigh and injured her elbow so badly it remained stiff and very painful for three years. Four bottles of MINARD'S LINIMENT completely cured her and she has not been troubled for two years.

Mashed potatoes whipped with plenty of cream in them are deliciously fluffy.

Foreign Herring.

Signs of increased activity in the Scotch herring market were apparent during the latter part of January, although the volume of actual business transacted was small. While stocks on hand are plentiful, the major part of a few dealers. Despite early Lent and the shortage of Newfoundland goods the new pack, stocks have not moved as rapidly as in former years. Large matties are listed $36 per barrel, with mediums quoted $25. The former are becoming increasingly scarce. The demand for Holland herring is extremely slack this year. The dull market for these goods is said to be due to a general tendency on the part of former consumers of this fish to seek only the best in everything they buy, regardless of cost. Mixed Holland herring still ranges $5c-90c per keg, with Milchners bringing $0.95-4.05. Spot stocks are plentiful.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, Feb.

Whale 2000 Miles Inland

Dawson, Yukon territory, is exercised by a report that a whale was seen in the Yukon river at the mouth of Sixty Mile River, a little south of that city and 2,000 miles inland. Angus Cameron, a prospector, arrived in a small boat and vows he saw the big fellow playing beside the boat. A whale was killed in the Yukon at the mouth of the Tanana river two years ago after travelling 1,000 miles inland.

Rabbits should be more widely used to lessen the dependence on other meats.

"Orange Lily Saved My Life"
These words, or expressions having the same meaning, are contained in hundreds of the letters I have received during the past year. Many were from women who had suffered agonies from falling of womb; others from women who had escaped dangerous surgical operations, as the tumors of the uterus; and others who had suffered from suppressed menstruation, leucorrhoea, painful periods, etc. For all these and the other troubles known in general as Women's Disorders, Orange Lily furnishes a positive, scientific, never-failing cure. It is applied direct to the suffering organs, and its operation is certain and beneficial. As a trial actually proves its merit, I hereby offer to send, absolutely free, a box worth $5c, sufficient for ten days' treatment to every suffering woman who will write for it. Enclose 3 stamps. ## Secret Diplomacy and the Turk.

There is nothing to be gained by protesting after the event, and yet, while the development of the event is shrouded with secrecy, there is the possibility of protesting against something which never has occurred, and never may. That is the danger of secret diplomacy. It hides its negotiations whilst they are being carried on, and then meets a world, outraged or indifferent as it may be, with the accomplished fact. If a protest is made, during the spinning of the web of the negotiations, it is met with the reply that it is based on inaccurate information, or that to expose the facts would be to the detriment of the public interest. When the negotiations have given place to a definite agreement, then the protest is wasted inasmuch as it is too late.

Only the other day it was pointed out, in these columns, with respect to the League of Nations, that the tendency of the old diplomacy would be to reassert itself, if possible, behind its old wall of secrecy. And already, there is manifested, amongst the great powers of Europe, the tendency to revert to the secrecy of pre-war diplomacy, not only in its avowed, but in its policy of estimating the validity of a cause by its strength in bayonets. The truth is that it is only necessary to read what has been allowed to become public, or what is leaking into publicity, of the doings at the meetings of the prime ministers in London in order to begin to wonder whether the old diplomacy is capable of changing its spots. There is all the old secrecy, buttressed by all the old evasion, when inconvenient questions are raised in the House of Commons or elsewhere, and there is all the old calculated or unintentional leakage, which brings incidents before the public, either with deliberate intent, or owing to unintentional stupidity. As a result the world learns that Mr. Wilson is protesting against an Adriatic decision, that Lord Robert Cecil is vainly endeavoring to discover the truth about a reported Armenian arrangement, and that Mr. Venizelos is troubled over a tendency to repudiate the Greek claims.

Nothing more discreditable to European diplomacy could possibly be imagined than the sudden reversal of the Turkish policy of the powers at the instigation of the French ministry. It is only a year or so since the civilized world was appalled by the story of the massacres of the Armenians, of the Greeks, and of the Jews, in the Ottoman Empire. Columns of newspapers were filled with the story of these injustices and with equal denunciations of the Turks for perpetrating them and of the Germans for either instigating them or failing to prevent them. Unending speeches were made by public men, proclaiming the end of the Ottoman Empire, and demanding that the German Government should also be held responsible. To-day Germany lies crushed and faced with the demand for the punishment of her war criminals. But nothing is heard of the iniquities of Turkey. Turkey now is to be permitted to continue her reign upon the Bosphorus. The great basilica of St. Sofia, torn from the Greek Church, is to remain a Turkish mosque. The autonomous province of Armenia is to shrink to two vilayets, with nobody knows what sort of protection against the Kurd and the fanatical ulema. In Thrace, as in Asia Minor, Greece is to be put off with a minimum of concession; while finally there comes the grim announcement that, on February 12, the allied high commissioners called the attention of the Grand Vizier to the action of nationalist bands, and urged upon him the necessity of stopping such proceedings.

The action of nationalist bands is a delightful diplomatic way of expressing the fact that the Turk is once more murdering, as if there had been no war for righteousness, and as if nothing were of value to governments except railways concessions and mining rights. Toward the end of January 1920 Armenians were massacred, according to information received from the British agent of the Lord Mayor of London's Armenian Refugee Fund, near Marash, in Cilicia, and as a result the allied high commissioners have been calling, year after year and decade after decade; and the Turk smiles and continues his massacres, because he is perfectly well aware that behind the protests of allied high commissioners is the unlimited wealth of economic concessions in Anatolia. Governments which raged against Turkish massacres, while the war was on, and which denounced Germany for not preventing these massacres, are now that Germany and Turkey are crushed, satisfying themselves with calling the attention of the Grand Vizier to the continuation of them, and letting it be known that they are arranging for a continuation of the rule of the culprit in Constantinople and Asia Minor.—Christian Science Monitor.

Prince of Wales Takes Goldsmiths' Oath.

London, Feb. 20.—The Prince of Wales to-day received the freedom of the Goldsmiths company, one of the most ancient London trade guilds, which has been in existence for more than 700 years. He took a solemn oath that he would among other things warn the wardens of any deceit in anything that belonged to the craft of goldsmith that shall come to my ledge."

The Goldsmiths' Hall, where the ceremony took place, is a massive structure situated on Foster Lane in the city. Here the coin of the realm has been weighed and tested since the year 1248, but the chief work of the 100 men engaged there is to assay gold and silver plate. The patron saint is St. Dunstan, who, according to the legend, tweaked the devil's nose with a pair of red hot pincers.

Slaves of Fashion.

We talk about the emancipation of women. But the first emancipation they need is emancipation from high heels with their accompaniment of strained arches, corns, and physical discomfort generally. There is nothing ugly in a woman's foot. And yet the fashions are predicted on the assumption that the foot which the good Lord gave to woman is ugly—something to be ashamed of and camouflaged and distorted out of its real shape. A neat foot and a neat boot can go together without high heels. Try it ladies. You will lose none of your attractiveness by ceasing to wobble.—Montreal Herald.

A few cents buys a bottle of delightful "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter.

And Not Far From Zyskhoruikasyk.

The Russian Soviet forces has just evacuated Pogaevskaya; and if you don't know much about Pogaevskaya we'll tell you that it is 20 versts from Novocheerkassk. But the geography class that was full of vim during the war has about lost interest.—Boston Record.

The visitors' centre, played a game and in the manner in which was always where the puck was, admiration from the thirteen red people present. Cahill and also played fast and hard. Teams displayed more combinations than in the previous game. On local team, R. Stick, Payne, Robinson and Cannan played well. The City boys played a better game than on Wednesday night, and theirs with the ice and rink intimacy than on the first night. Donald, the Halifax right wing, spoiled several of his side's chances by his failure to be in position to receive a pass. Tait and E. were not playing for the city, and Robertson replacing them. In to-night's game the first goal was scored in the first period.

Training of a Scout.

The film "Boy Scouts to the Rescue" will be presented on Tuesday evening of next week at the Methodist College Hall for the benefit of the Gower St. Troop of Boy Scouts. Taking time by the forelock, the boys are already gathering for their next summer's Camp. They have been fortunate in being able to secure this fine film, which was prepared by English Scouts under the direction of Baden-Powell himself. The film for the evening will be rendered by the Methodist Guards Band, and is no doubt but what the boys receive the same hearty support in their concern in December. Reserved seat tickets are on sale at the Gower St. and Goodland's.

The Wrong Mr. Wright?

The final production of "The Wrong Mr. Wright" in the Casino last night attracted a large audience. The performers acted with that ease and comes of practice and the piece rendered without a hitch. Much of this is due to the talented artists and their time and talent for the production. To Miss Mary Ryan, the producer, and Mrs. Baxter, who directed the production, an especial word of commendation is due.

At the Majestic.

Brady, in Miriam Nicholson's novel, "The Better Hair," at the Majestic Theatre this evening. In this picture, Alice Brady is a dual part with much cleverness and the story is constructed with a hand and success. The plot hinges on a pair of twin sisters of very different characters who are left fatherless. One goes to New York while the other remains at home. The second one gives her sister Michael Thwaite, though she loves him herself, and when she has tired of him, becomes reconciled with him herself again and things work out right in the end. In addition to the feature there will be Kinodrama, the Visual News of the World, and the Ford Educational Film. The picture, therefore, will be a good one.

Shipping Notes.

Percy Wells is now loading from P. Templeman for Edinburgh. Miriam H. has entered to load from the Monre Export Co. The ship, the "Vogue" has gone on deck to receive her cargo. "Over the Top," 35 days from St. John's via Guelph, where she went to have her chronometer corrected, is in port last night in ballast. Messrs. Sons & Co., Ltd.
