THE
 Lady of the Night

Amelia Makes a Success

And she was offering him love; love in his solitary, loveless life. Nora was lost to him for ever; the boy Cyril, whose friendship, affection, had almost made up to him for the loss of Nora, had vanished; at that moment he felt his loneliness as he had never felt it before. And this beautiful creature was offering to sacrifice herself, to share his poverty, his insignificance—for Elliot attached no importance to her hint of a mysterious fortune. Why should he not take this gift from the gods? He did not love Florence, even at this moment, but doubtless he would come to love her; he had read of men who had learned to love their wives after marriage. He looked long and steadily at the beautiful face, the downcast eyes now almost hidden by their lids, as she drooped towards him; then he rose and his arms opened as if to draw her to him.

At that moment, that moment in which his fate and hers hung 'twixt heaven and earth, a voice, low and soft as a lute, breathed "Elliot, Elliot!"

The sound broke the intense stillness. Elliot's arm dropped, and he stared at the spot from which the voice had seemed to proceed. It had come from behind the portiere; it had been like a sigh, a murmur in the air. But low and soft as it was, there was a note in it which recalled the past, the past in which Nora—and yet Cyril—had moved. In an instant Florence's spell was broken. Elliot drew back from the beautiful form which had bent forward to receive his embraces; in the same instant, forgetting the beautiful woman at his side, he sprang towards the doorway. There was no one there, no one in sight; and yet he thought he caught a glimpse of a black robe with silver stars.

He came back slowly to Florence Bartley. She was standing now, her hand pressed to her heart, her face white, her attitude and expression that of disappointed hope. For a moment there was silence, then he said, his face pale, his lips twitching—

"I don't know what to say. I'm not worthy—I can't—I can't thank you. For God's sake don't trouble about me—don't think about me! I'm not worth a thought of yours—Oh, I can't explain!"

She sat with her head bowed, her whole attitude one of despair and humiliation.

When Choosing the Material for a washable frock for the growing child—

MOTHER naturally thinks of the possibilities of the fabric shrinking in the wash. It is therefore a relief to her to know that the fabric will not shrink or lose its charm if Lux is used for its cleansing.

Durability, charm of colour, quality of texture, the freshness of newness—these are preserved to all good fabrics washed with Lux. A packet of Lux—a bowl of warm water—and dainty hands can cleanse delightful fabrics in a delightfully easy manner.

The beautiful pure Lux flakes are whisked into a creamy, bubbly lather in an instant. Gently squeeze this cleansing foam through and through the soiled texture—then rinse in clean water and hang to dry. Lux cannot harm a silken thread, it coaxes rather than forces the dirt from the clothes.

Packets (two sizes) may be obtained everywhere.

think. Drop in whenever you feel inclined.

Elliot murmured something in response and passed out into the open air. He got a cab, and made his way to the "Deer." Mr. Wedderburn was waiting him at the entrance.

"Oh, here you are!" he said, "I've just got back. Splendid affair, wasn't it? Wonderful man, Sir Joseph! I've taken a thousand pounds of shares in this copper mine of his."

"Have you?" said Elliot. "I want a drink badly. Come in here," and he drew him into the refreshment-room.

"We had better change these things, hadn't we?" said Wedderburn.

"Oh, contoured them, yes!" said Elliot, "but what for?"

They changed and went into the smoking-room; Wedderburn sat smoking with the easy smile on his face which a man wears when he has done a good bit of business.

"I only got those shares as a favour," he said. "Of course, you'll get some; you're one of the family."

Elliot shook his head.

"No," he said; "I shall not. I've no money to speculate with."

"My dear fellow!" exclaimed Wedderburn promptly. "That needn't trouble you. I could let you have a thousand—of me, for the moment."

"It's very kind of you, Wedderburn," Elliot said; "but how on earth should I pay you back?"

Wedderburn looked surprised.

"Why, you must have plenty of money," he said, "unless you spend it as you get it. But there, that's your business, not mine," he added hastily, as Elliot gazed at him with what Wedderburn thought was a frown of offence. "If you haven't got the money, you've got the honest way to look here. You know that south-west corner of Wally Hollow? It runs right into my ranch; of course, you've been to it, and it's not much use to you. Sell me that, and I'll give you a thousand on account; we can have it valued, or date together upon the price afterwards."

Elliot's frown grew deeper, and he stared at Wedderburn. "The land's not mine," he said. "The land's Sir Joseph's; he told me to buy when my father smashed up."

Wedderburn looked perplexed. He did not want to pry into Elliot's private affairs.

"Oh, ah, yes," he said in an embarrassed fashion. "I didn't know—I mean that I know there was an agreement between your father and Sir Joseph, but I didn't know what the terms were. Of course, you have it. I understood from you that, you're doing well, and I naturally concluded that the Wally Hollow estate had righted itself."

Elliot shook his head. "No," he said. "I didn't intend to give you that impression. I'm doing well in this sense that I'm earning my own living."

"Oh, quite so," said Wedderburn shyly. "Anyhow, Elliot, my boy, you can have a thousand or two if you want it, to put you into the great Ebyworthy Copper Mine."

"Thanks," said Elliot, with sincere gratitude. "but I don't. It's fearfully late, hadn't I better go to bed? I shall never forget your kindness."

They parted for the night, or rather morning, and Elliot went up to his room. His thoughts were full of the voice murmuring "Elliot, Elliot!" rang in his ears. To whom could it have belonged? To whom was it that had intervened at that critical moment, and saved him from the temptation to which, man-like, he had been on the point of yielding? Presently Wedderburn's words came at the very nick of time; it had come at the very nick of time; it had saved him from sinking beneath the spell of Florence Bartley.

Whence had it come? Had some human being uttered it, or was it a freak of fancy? He entered the ballroom and looked round him. Half-unconsciously he was searching for the Lady of the Night. She was nowhere in sight.

With a sudden loading of the scene, Elliot made his way to the ballroom and joined the throng which, with complimentary phrases, was bidding farewell to Lady Ferrard. Beside her stood Sir Joseph.

"Ah, Elliot!" he said. "Hope you've enjoyed yourself? Had a good time, eh? Been a successful evening, I

CHAPTER XXXV.
 THE MYSTERIOUS VOICE.

With an imperious gesture Florence swept past him and entered the ballroom. Elliot sank into a chair, thrust his hands into his pockets, and sighed. Only one period of his life had been as tempestuous—that of the moment when he found that Cyril had come over the cliff to save him. The soft, low voice breathing his name "Elliot!" rang in his ears. It sounded to him like the voice of Nora. It had come at the very nick of time; it had saved him from sinking beneath the spell of Florence Bartley.

Nora did not sleep at all that night and as she tossed and fro in the bed that seemed to burn her she was at that moment hot with love and jealousy and shame. She had been with as consuming a fear. Concealed by the portiere, she had seen and heard all that had passed between Elliot and Florence Bartley in the smoking-room. In her agony she had called upon his name and so prevented his surrender to the famous beauty; she had called to him almost unconsciously, but now the fact that she had done so tortured her with a humiliation almost intolerable. It was as if she had said in so many words—"I love you, Elliot; oh, don't leave me!"

The ball had been a social success for her; she had been besieged by men eager to dance with her; she had insisted on Miss Deborah leaving immediately after she herself had stolen away from the ante-room, she had Miss Deborah had expostulated and wished to remain; for Miss Deborah had been quite excited by the ball and Ada Norton's success, and was pleased and satisfied by her own appearance and her re-entry into society.

"I declare it's quite like old times, my dear," she had said when they reached the hotel. "I've been buried so long—yes, it's just as if I had been buried and had re-visited the glimpses of the moon, as Shakespeare says. You look very pretty, my dear; you reminded me of my girlish days." She stepped the tea table had used for them, and said suddenly, "There was a young man there—I think you danced with him—called Elliot, Graham. That Mr. Stripley introduced him; must find out who he is. I knew—knew a man of that name. He must have been a relation. She smiled heavily and gazed before her with perplexity. "There was no time to ask him any questions; Mr. Stripley took me away. He was very handsome and very like—"

She sighed again. "But you must go to bed, my girl; you're looking quite pale and gone up. You can give me a kiss if you like."

A success over night. The New Improved Gillette

Patented Canada, Aug. 31, 1920

Everyone remembers the old carbon filament lamp, with its yellow glow—a tremendous advance over previous lighting methods. You remember, too, what happened when inventive genius discovered the tungsten filament, with its radiant WHITE light.

The world goes along for years doing things the same old way. Then comes some invention that carries all civilization to a new and higher plane of living.

The modern shave is the creation of the Gillette Safety Razor and Blades.

Twenty years ago, the old-type Gillette swept into every part of the world.

To-day, it is superseded by the New Improved Gillette Safety Razor—the result of Gillette experience, the first shaving INSTRUMENT OF PRECISION ever produced or even dreamed of.

Measured by the precision of the New Gillette—any other razor you've ever known is crude.

You'll see what it means to your shaving the minute you pick up a New Improved Gillette at your druggist's, hardware merchant's, jeweller's, sporting goods dealer's, haberdasher's or men's department—one of the 250,000 Gillette dealers the world over.

The New Improved Gillette Safety Razor

Uses the same fine Gillette Blades as you have known for years—but now your blades can give you all the luxury of the finest shaving edge in the world. Identify the New Improved Gillette by its:

- Fulcrum Shoulder
- Overhanging Cap
- Channelled Guard
- Micrometric Precision
- Automatic Adjustments
- Diamond Knurled Handle
- Diamond Trademark on Guard

Finer Shave—Longer Service—More Shaves from your Blades.

GOLF.

The origin of golf is uncertain. So far as I have been able to ascertain as a result of an exhaustive research into ancient literature, which included a perusal of the Bible in all the sixty odd languages in which it has been translated, the first mention of the game appears in Genesis. The reference though a trifle indefinite is none the less meant to refer to golf for in one of the early chapters we find that Cain hit his brother Abel with a club (Editor—"How do you know it was a club?")

Club Editor—"All the pictures show Cain swinging Abel with a club" with disastrous results to poor Abel. Whether the club was a putter, a masher or a brassie I really cannot say, but it undoubtedly was a club. After this we find frequent mention of the use of clubs in other parts of the Bible and in various other books. The same, according to Caesar's commentaries, was quite popular amongst the ancient Britons also, but it took the Scots to bring it to its modern form. Golf, as it is to-day, is a game which whilst providing the requisite number of thrills, causing considerable amusement and the use of lurid language, is a splendid recreation for all between the ages of six weeks and 101 years. To begin golf at a late stage in life requires the embryo player to be possessed of an infinite amount of patience, an excellently vivid vocabu-

Anyone who has tried to play the game knows it only too well. The second is of course consequent on the first. Money is only necessary if one cannot obtain the loan of a friend's club. If this can be done a great deal of unnecessary expense is avoided because one can always rely on the good nature of one's friends to forgive one for breaking their club.

I suppose the Editor will be growing at the amount of space I am taking up with this digression so I shall continue it next week. Let world-be-gone look out for some excellent hints.

Evening Telegram

W. J. HERDER, Proprietor; C. T. JAMES, Editor

Saturday, June 25, 1921.

Notice to Subscribers

Owing to the greatly increased cost of news-print the publishers of Daily Newspapers have no option but to increase the subscription price.

Newfoundland is probably the only country in the world where the one cent rate prevalent before the War has been maintained throughout the struggle and during the days of reconstruction.

The strike situation in Grand Falls, and the maintenance of the wage schedule in force during the period when the cost of living was at its maximum, make an increase in revenue imperative.

It is with regret that the decision has been arrived at, but no other course is now possible, and the proprietors feel sure that the increased cost will be approved by the public.

It is necessary to remind our readers that the same price for the Daily Newspaper has prevailed hitherto, as existed when four small pages formed the daily issue.

COMMENCING ON JULY 1ST, THE PRICE OF ALL CITY PAPERS WILL BE TWO CENTS A COPY.

In the case of prepaid subscriptions, the new rate will be effective on expiry.

Acknowledgments, Subscription Lists, and Reading Notices of an advertising character, will, in future, be charged for at regular advertising rates.

Rates for Births, Deaths and Marriages, fifty cents (50c) for five lines or under. Extended notices, ten cents (10c) a line, payable, invariably, in advance.

THE UNREADIES.

One week ago, the Leader of the Opposition, backed by his supporters, asked or requested or demanded of the Government that they formulate a Railway Policy and bring it before the House of Assembly, in order that the public might have an idea of just what is contemplated with regard to the running of the service for the coming twelve months. The answer of the Government to that request is the tabling of the—mark well the phraseology please—REPORT OF THE GOVERNMENT MEMBERS OF THE RAILWAY COMMISSION. The Government members only bring down a report, and that report is signed by two no less notable personages than W. F. COAKER, as Chairman, and T. A. HALL, Commissioner. It is addressed to the very latest and newest knight in the realm of Britain, viz., Sir Richard Anderson Squires, Knight-Commander of the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George, Prime Minister of the Colony of Newfoundland, and contains some very edifying and interesting reading between the twenty-nine pages of closely typed long cap in which it is submitted.

But why the report of the GOVERNMENT MEMBERS of that Commission only? Where is the report of the REID MEMBERS of that celebrated and notorious Commission? On the Government side there were but the two celebrities who affixed their signatures to the most amazing document that has been read in the Assembly for years. On the Reid side of the transaction were the President and Vice President of the Commission from whom that most important document, W. F. Coaker, took over the operation of the Railway and Steamboat services of Newfoundland; and in addition to these two officers of the directorate there was also the General Superintendent, Mr. John P. Powell. Thus the Government members of that Commission were in a hopeless minority, and had to do just what the three Reid members told them. And yet there is no report whatever of the managing department. And the House and the Colony is asked to accept and ratify the statements of the GOVERNMENT MEMBERS only. And that is the presumed policy of the Government with regard to the most important and necessary services of Newfoundland.

W. F. COAKER and T. A. HALL. The former man carried away by his own ambitions, falling into a position for which he was never intended either by Nature or Profession. An accident of circumstance. Yet he undertakes to run a railway service for this colony, knowing full well that he can draw on the revenues for any mistakes of expenditure incurred, and have his actions accepted without murmur by a Prime Minister of his own making, backed by a corrupt, time-serving and subservient political entourage. T. A. HALL is a paid servant of the Crown. The volume of his sentiments would naturally be those of his employers, and when Mr. Coaker ordered Mr. Hall to sign the report of the Government members of the Railway Commission, Mr. Hall had to do so willy-nilly. So much for the value of his signature. Mr. Coaker made the report, or had it made to his order, and Mr. Hall simply penned his name at the bottom. He had to. The country, however, will not be satisfied with this minority report. Neither will the House of Assembly. The report of the Reid employees of the Commission must come down, and neither the Premier with all his inherited and assumed arrogance, nor Mr. Coaker with characteristic impudence can very well refuse or delay the production of that report of the Reid portion of the Commission, which must be read in context with their own report, if Newfoundland is going to get a fair estimate of the cost which has been imposed upon her revenues by a couple of men gone mad.

Irreplaceable.

The Telegram wholeheartedly endorses the tribute paid by the Daily News editorially this morning, to Mayor Goeling. The sentiments expressed by our morning contemporary, will find an echo in the mind of every fair minded and patriotic citizen, and we can think of no better way of expressing our appreciation of his Worthiness and his Herculean labors in Civic interests than by reprinting the encomium which is deservedly and appropriately bestowed by one who recognizes the work of the Mayor in his endeavours to make the city of St. John's second to none of the many municipalities of the Western Hemisphere, for Mr. W. G. Goeling was the ideal of a chief magistrate and it will be extremely difficult to replace him. The announcement that Mr. Goeling will resign the Mayorality on Thursday next, will come as a surprise to few, but will occasion regret to many. Mr. Goeling has explored the "suaviter in modo" and thereby has forfeited some degree of popularity, but that is inevitable where there are strong convictions. Mayor Goeling has endeavored to effect reformation, and has achieved. His work has been arduous and continual. He has not received the support to which he was entitled, and in some instances has been unwarrantably interfered with in the exercise of the duties of his office. His work in connection with the City Charter was stupendous and arduous. If he has not fully succeeded the fault is not his. He reported to succeed, and wastefully in the way of civic improvement may result in the future, a large share of it will be due to the untiring and self-sacrificing efforts of Mayor Goeling. It is a safe assertion that at any time during recent years Mr. Goeling would have been generally recognized as the man who has done a man's part in a mainly civic way, and is entitled to retirement with the respect and honor of many citizens who heartily appreciate the devotion to duty and the admirable services to the community rendered by his Worthiness, whose work will grow in popular estimation as the years go by. We share in the regret that his aims have not all been achieved, and his work not fully accomplished, and also in recognition of the good work he has rendered and the great loss his resignation entails on the community.

Methodist Conference.

FRIDAY, June 24. The Conference listened with much interest to Rev. S. Dean, representative of the Department of Finance, in the morning session. This department is the oldest, but has already justified its existence. Its functions as stated by Mr. Dean, were to cooperate with the other departments, to do the statistical work of the Conference and to take charge of the General Conference Fund. Church property was also another field in which the department operated. Mr. Dean spoke of its spiritual aspects. The department is also the custodian of church funds. It has taken 570 policies on church property have been written up. Another of its functions is to institute into the church the principles of Christian Stewardship.

NOON LECTURE. Prof. Faulkner delivered his second lecture, the subject being "How Rome Prepared the Way." In a very scholarly manner he dealt with the various phases of the work of preparation in the old Roman Empire. The afternoon session was occupied with a consideration of the reports of the Missionary Committee and that of Religious Education.

THE BANQUET. The members of the Conference and their wives, together with our Conference visitors from Canada and U.S.A. and also Rev. Canon and Mrs. Bolt, and Rev. Bernard and Mrs. Holden, of the Congregational Church were the guests of the ladies of Gower St. Church at a banquet given in the evening. The ladies were exquisitely decorated with flowers and laden with good things. After a very excellent repast the party tarried in order to hear the "after-dinner" address which forms an integral part of this Conference function. The President of the Conference first called on Rev. S. W. Dean, of Toronto, who in his own inimitable way delighted the audience with his impressions of our Newfoundland scenery. Canon Bolt received an ovation on rising to address the gathering. He touched upon the subject of Church Union and the impossibility of effecting it with work with divided camps, and hoped that the larger union of churches would eventually be consummated. The next speaker was Rev. Canon Bolt, who was followed by Prof. Faulkner and Rev. B. Holden. The latter, who has recently arrived from England to become the Pastor of the Road Congregational Church, was given a very enthusiastic welcome. Rev. J. T. Newman very ably proposed a vote of thanks to the Rev. Canon Bolt, seconded by Mr. Robert Simpson, Carbonear, the gathering rising as a token of its appreciation of the very excellent report.

New Pastor of Congregational Church.

Rev. B. T. Holden, B.A., who arrived here by last steamer, to take up the pastorate of the Congregational Church will occupy the pulpit on tomorrow, Sunday. Rev. Mr. Holden is an Oxford University man and also a graduate of the Methodist Theological College. He succeeds a long line of distinguished men, some of whom have taken a prominent part in the religious efforts of this colony. Rev. Mr. Holden's subject will be "What Think Ye of Christ?"

Knocked Down by Car.

Only the fact that there was a buffer on the front of the machine prevented a boy from being either killed or seriously injured when he was knocked from a car to-day. The boy, whose name is Edward Whelan, had just left the Plasterer's Office with a bundle of papers when a Buick car, driven by Mr. W. Duffey, going up Water Street, hit him and threw him to the ground between the two front wheels. The driver was able to get up and go about again. No blame can be attached to the driver of the car.

Fire at Torbay.

Yesterday afternoon the home of Thomas Ferrin, an old and respected resident of the North Side of Torbay, was totally destroyed by fire. The blaze spread so rapidly that practically none of the furniture could be saved. A sum of money in a trunk was also burnt by the flames. The fire was supposed to have originated from a defective chimney. The loss to Mr. Ferrin, is, at this time of his life, a severe one.

Supreme Court.

In the matter of the application of Miss F. P. Wall to the Supreme Court to issue to the Minister of Agriculture and Mines to grant six mining locations to the applicant, Mr. John Ferguson, the Supreme Court has granted an application for costs. Mr. L. E. Brunson for defendant is also heard. It is ordered that costs be allowed.

Case Dismissed.

The case of Robins vs. the Mayor and City Council was dismissed this morning when Judge Morris, after a thorough consideration of the arguments on both sides, handed down his judgment. The case was an important one and was a claim for arrears in wages on a retail work. Mr. G. W. B. Ayre appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. E. Leo Carter for the defendant.

Coastal Boats.

S.S. Partia leaves for Western ports at 11 a.m. S.S. Prosper left Trinity at 10.30 a.m. and is due here this evening. GOVT RAILWAY COMMISSION. Argyle left Miramichi at 11.55 a.m. yesterday. What was the Apostolic Succession? Collection will be taken.

MONDAY.

9 a.m.—Ordination Service at which the usual offering towards the Sustentation Fund will be made.

CONFERENCE NOTES.

Miss Marjorie Hutchings will sing at the evening service in Gower St. Church to-morrow.

The Conference Love Feasts will be held at Gower St. Church, Rev. S. W. Dean, Moderator, George St. Rev. W. T. D. Dunn, D.D., Cochrane St. Rev. James Wilson, Wesley, Rev. Theo. Fisher.

Unemployed Workers.

CELEBRATE NEWFOUNDLAND'S NATIONAL DAY.

Those of the unemployed workers who attended the meeting and concert held last night in the L.S.P.U. Hall, enjoyed themselves immensely. This was the first public celebration of John Cabot's discovery of Newfoundland on June 24th, 1497, four hundred and twenty-four years ago. It is peculiar that it should be those least likely to indulge in festivities of this kind who were the first to put themselves on record in celebrating this epoch making event, namely the beginning of the British Empire overseas. The meeting and concert were held in the L.S.P.U. Hall, under the chairmanship of J. Whitty, Chairman of the Unemployed Workers, and right well he performed his duties. Besides gramophone selections during the evening, there were songs, recitations and step dancing of a very high order contributed by the members present. Mr. Richard Squires, by a curious coincidence, the namesake of the Premier opened the meeting by giving a step dance, which received great applause and created a great deal of interest among the performers and everyone else. After the ice was broken Messrs. Edward Peters, Caleb Roberts, Richard Squires, Michael Fowler and James Walsh sang several songs, all of which were heartily encored. Mr. William Tristia gave an excellent recitation, which was most interesting. Mr. Patrick Layman also gave a step dance, at first alone and then he was joined by Mr. Squires and they both danced to the accompaniment of the orchestra. After the concert the meeting was addressed by the Chairman and Vice-Chairman, Messrs. Whitty and Squires, and also by Mr. G. W. B. Ayre, the Solicitor for the men. Three cheers for Newfoundland brought a most pleasant evening to a close.

Of Interest to Everyone.

Dear Sir—We have seen in the daily papers that booths are open all over the city for the purpose of receiving money for the National War Memorial. A number of patriotic citizens have organized this scheme and they hope to raise a large sum. It is a patriotic and noble deed and they are our countrymen who died in the war. How has the response been? From what one could see yesterday the effort on the public's part was very feeble. A few people have given large sums (one subscription of $1000 and several of $500 have been received), but the great mass of the people have not responded at all. Surely this Memorial is not to be erected by fifty or a hundred persons when there are 250,000 Newfoundlanders who should each do a bit. We can always dive into our pockets when it comes to theatres, to motor cars, to picnics, to cigarettes, to football and baseball matches. Cannot we sacrifice a little, every one, for so worthy a cause as this War Memorial, if only for the sake of the good name of Newfoundland, made good by the gallant men whose deeds the Memorial is to perpetuate. It was hoped that everyone would subscribe, without the necessity of a house-to-house or office-to-office canvass.

I would suggest that the National War Memorial Committee might raise funds in several other ways:

- (1) By asking the management of local houses of entertainment and ball games to put an extra charge of, say, 10 cents on their entrance fees for one week. I cannot estimate how much this would realize, but it should be considerable and no one with any spark of patriotism in his make-up could object.
- (2) By asking the parents of each schoolboy and girl in the county for ten cents as their offering to the Memorial. This should not be difficult to arrange when the schools reassemble in the autumn, and it would give the children a personal interest in the Memorial. Each school or class of each school would be awarded one of the Share Certificates to have framed and hung up in their schoolroom.
- (3) By establishing a War Memorial refreshment tent at the Regatta and, when possible, other sports meetings during the summer.
- (4) By getting clubs to institute a "Kitty" in all card games for a given period.
- (5) By organizing a big Regatta Sweepstake. This, I understand, is now legal.

These last two suggestions might not find favor in the eyes of certain local puritans, but personally I believe the means would justify the ends and, after all, these means are used in other countries.

There are many ways of raising money. The voluntary one is, of course, the best, but if that fails others should be tried, and a honourable method of collection should be left untried.

The writer's old school raised ten thousand pounds for the War Memorial. If the Dominion of Newfoundland cannot raise a like amount ($50,000) it will be to our everlasting shame. Everyone must contribute something, and a poor man's 50 cents is as good as a rich man's thousand dollars.

Yours sincerely,
St. John's, June 24, 1921.

B. I. S. DEFEAT BRITON.

The football game played last night between the B.I.S. and Briton, was one of the best exhibitions seen on St. George's Field during the present season. Whilst the B.I.S. won by 3 goals to 0, they did not by any means have things all their own way. The Britons played a hard game and showed very good form at times. The combination of the B.I.S. forward line was as good as usual whilst the ship's team also combined well at times.

During the first half the Briton defended the Western goal. Early in the game they had some very good tries at goal which were unsuccessful. The only goal obtained during the half was scored by Callahan for the B.I.S.

In the second half play was very keen, two goals being scored by the B.I.S., whilst many good attempts made by the Briton failed. The game ended with the score 3-0 in favor of the B.I.S.

Boosting C. L. B.

On Wednesday night at the C.L.B.C. Armory under the guiding hand of Sergt-Major Harry Peckham, the C.L.B.C. Old Guard, held their first meeting. The assembly, which consisted of forty old comrades was called to order sharp at 8 o'clock with Sergt. M. Peckham in the chair. After an explanatory and enthusiastic address by the chairman in which he eulogized the work of the organization in St. John's with reference to his great example, and the C.L.B.C., the election of officers began and resulted as follows: Patron, Major Lindsay; Hon. President, Capt. J. J. Miller; Chaplain, Rev. J. Stead; President, Mr. Ed. Rees; Secretary, Mr. J. Harvey; Treasurer, Mr. J. Butler; Executive Messrs. T. Norman, T. Kenes, S. Verge, W. Tilley. The patron then addressed the meeting, and in his usual brilliant style spoke of the work of the brigade on the Island and elsewhere, concluding by extending on behalf of J. C. a very hearty vote of thanks to Sergt-Major H. Peckham. After the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned.

The Bishop's Eyes

WHAT AN ARCHDEACON IS. A good many people have been wondering what exactly an Archdeacon is, and what his particular duties are. This has always been a puzzle, and some years ago, in Parliament, when the question was asked the reply given was that an Archdeacon was one who performed Archidiaconal functions.

An Archdeacon is not, as might be deduced from the name, the "chief deacon," although an Archdeacon or archdeacon would be a chief Bishop or chief angel.

He is a sort of deputy for his Bishop, and within his area, called an Archdeaconry, he performs all sorts of duties for the Bishop which do not of themselves require a Bishop. He cannot hold a Confirmation, for instance. That is limited to the Bishop. But he could dedicate a mission church or a memorial, and do much else to relieve the Bishop.

His "Archdeaconry" consists of a number of Rural Deaneries, and as the latter consist of a number of grouped and adjoining parishes under the oversight of a Rural Dean, it follows that an Archdeacon is superior to a

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

TROOP TRAIN BOMBED.
BELFAST, June 24.

Four persons were killed, and twenty injured, and numbers of horses met death to-day, when a train carrying troops homeward from Belfast, where they attended the ceremonies of the opening of Parliament Wednesday, was attacked with mines and bombs. The attack on the train took place at a desolate spot, one mile north of Abervorrie, near Dundalk. Two trains previously had passed safely over the spot. Most of the cars of the wrecked train were sent toppling over a steep embankment by the explosion. All telegraph and telephone lines north of Abervorrie were cut before the explosion took place, and the only way of sending assistance was by the sending of engine drivers to various points. An official account of the disaster which horrified the people of Belfast, says that a portion of the railway track was removed and a number of bombs were placed in the gap. Engineers were sent to mend the gap, but the explosion of bombs threw other coaches over the embankment.

Civic Commission.

WEEKLY MEETING.
The Weekly Meeting of the Municipal Council was held on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. Mayor Gosling presided, and Councillors Morris, Ayre, Peet and Jackson were present. After the reading of the Minutes of the previous meeting, the following matters were given consideration.

Deputy Mayor Peet, who works as a street sweeper, asked that the road, opposite Departmental Building, be repaired. This matter will be attended to as soon as possible.

The Secretary of the Newfoundland Motor Association drew attention of the Council to the danger to vehicular traffic, owing to bad condition of street car parts, and the need of the City also the necessity of having sidewalks, LeMarchant Road, completed. The former matter is to be referred to the Superintendent of the Street Railway Company; the latter will be looked into.

M. W. Myrick, on behalf of the residents of Military Road, asked that a garage be placed at the West corner of Knight Street. This was referred to the City Engineer.

A petition was received from landowners, near street, running from Road, asking that this thoroughfare be named "Blatch Street." The request was acceded to.

Wm. Snow asked that something be done to improve road conditions, South Side. The Engineer is to inquire into same.

The following matters were referred to the City Engineer:—Application of R. English, to plank sidewalk front of the Bethesda Pentecostal Mission Rooms; and William Egan to erect dwelling, Cornwall Avenue.

The following plans were passed, subject to the approval of the City Engineer:—W. H. Willis, (dwelling) corner Willow and McNail Streets; W. Williams, (dwelling) Quill Yidd Road; W. Hawkins, (dwelling) Blatch Street; A. Goodie, (dwelling) Munroe Street; J. Balpin, (dwelling) corner Cabot and Monroe Streets; J. M. Ryan, (garage) Hawley Avenue.

D. Munn asked permission to erect stable, Topsail Road. Plan must first be submitted for approval.

It was decided that the new road along the water-pipe line, from Freshwater to Portugal Cove Rds., be named "Mayor Avenue" as a tribute to Mayor Gosling, who, for the past seven years, has given so much of his time and worked so energetically for the improvement of the city of St. John's. Mr. Gosling has decided to retire from office on the 30th day of June, and citizens generally will regret to hear of his withdrawal, as, in his term in office, he has, on all occasions, taken an independent stand in protecting the interests of the City.

After disposing of some minor matters and the passing of the payrolls and bills, the meeting adjourned.

DIAMOND DUST

Nothing But the Truth—Without Fear or Favour.

Dear Peegee—When I saw my first game of baseball some years ago at Stancombe's Field I became at once an ardent enthusiast, and have been so ever since. I therefore presume to write to your column on a matter which not only affects the league, the players, and the fans, but the good old game as well.

Clubs (more particularly my old team, the Lions), I must confess that to my mind the College Cubs seem to have secured all the good players. In their lineup I noticed 4 pitchers, 2 catchers, 3 firstbasemen, and about 6 utility men warming the bench and coaching. I do not wish to disparage the ability and skill of our footballers, as many a time and oft have I played the good old game on St. George's, but to my mind it is easier to learn footer than it is the other, for baseballers (like poets) are born not made. Admitting this, then, the College Cubs have a big list of "stars" and the only team that appears to measure up to them is the Lions who sorely need new blood in some departments. The inability to secure new good material was I understand the cause of the Wanderers dropping out.

Now, as a humble fan, what I would suggest to the League is to limit each Club to say 15 players, these to be registered at once, and only those 15 registered could compete for that particular club. This would then release good players to build up the weak spots in all teams and so give us a good all round brand of Ball. Think it over, Peegee. Yours, C.F.G.

RATHER OMINOUS, WHAT!
This morning's "News" says in its

OBITUARY column that the C.E.L. rowing crew held its first practice last evening.

PROTECT THE YOUNGSTERS

The following has been kindly sent us by a very prominent citizen with the request that it be published in "Diamond Dust". The excessive tax on athletic goods is an iniquity which should be repealed. If it rested on the golf player, the frowler, or the grow-up league players, and stopped there, one could not protest. For, however unjust the tax, these sports could doubtless flourish in spite of the increased handicaps. But the evil is much more comprehensive. It falls most heavily, not on the man of comfortable means, but on the young, whose slender resources have never sufficed, even under the most favourable circumstances, to purchase necessary equipment. The youth in this country who find in athletics the most normal and wholesome outlet for juvenile enthusiasm are being denied their inherent right to health and happiness by this unfair discrimination.

The few million Greeks, who inhabit the rocky coast of the Levant, would never have been the foremost power of their time had they not made athletic proficiency an ideal. Alexander the Great conquered the known world with a handful of warriors who were trained in the Greek stadium. Strike at athletic sport and you strike at the health of the nation. Athletic sport should be encouraged, not handicapped, in this country. Now that the Government is prepared to reconsider the various increased taxes, could not a plea be entered on behalf of the youth of to-day who must make our men of to-morrow?

THANKS.
We have to thank our contributors for the interesting letters they are sending along. It shows that the Column is not only being read but appreciated as well.

"YOUTH MUST BE SERVED."

"It will only be a matter of a year or two when the C.E.L. and B.L.S. must perform come into their own for Youth Will be Served, you know."—Vide Thursday's "Telegram". April opens—maybe fair—or cold and damp—And the big Manager treads the swampy mound, and takes hurried stock of those Who seek the rendezvous—the practice ground.

First on the scene the eager youngsters swarm, Hearts pulsing with ambition, strong and warm, Each dreaming of a golden future, and Doomed to be mowed like reeds before a storm. Then come the Veterans, of sprinck-like face, Guardians of pasturage or infield base, Silent and saturnine—yet quick to claim Exclusive rights at each one's well known place.

The practices start. As light as a gossamer Each youngster throws, and bats, and throws, too well— Then Peegee and Harry take notes and write much bunk, While the grim veterans yawn, and say, "Oh, h—!"

Closely the Manager keeps watch—and now He makes long speeches, telling each man how To play his chosen place—they hear him talk And give him due attention—some cow!

The days go by—a long and steady pull Rounds them all into shape. Papers are full Of glowing screeds, sent in each day by those Whose only mission is to throw the ball.

The same old Crowd, is here to face the foe— That same old Crowd that played a year ago— "Youth Must be Served" they say, but here we find About one youth in twenty gets a show!

Chairman of Moderates Resigns.

At the meeting of the Moderate Prohibitionists, held in the Casino Theatre last night, Mr. Warwick Smith tendered his resignation as Chairman of the Committee. This action on the part of Mr. Smith was explained by him as due to the fact that sufficient numbers did not express their interest in the work of the Committee to support it by attending the meetings. The expenses incurred by the Committee had not been met by the public, and it was not to be expected that he could further involve himself and his executive. Before vacating the chair he promised to hold on the movement in every way possible. Mr. J. J. St. John, as Secretary, endorsed what was said by Mr. Smith. A discussion in which many of the audience took part, followed, all the speakers requesting Mr. Smith to retain the chair. In view of the fact that the Committee was disbanded, Mr. St. John volunteered to summon another public meeting on Sunday night to be held probably in the Casino Theatre. The meeting closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

TRINITY.

Some years ago I was awarded the Free Press Christmas Prize for the best historical and descriptive sketch of a Churchyard in Newfoundland. The Churchyard selected and described by me was, of course, that of old St. Paul's, Trinity. In this article I called attention to several deeply interesting things that had been, and that were at the time, associated with that hallowed spot. Since then in my press reports from Trinity, I have frequently referred to other details of interest, hitherto omitted in references to St. Paul's, Trinity, in this article mentioned historical events, data, etc., such as no stone could produce from his well stored memory. There is, however, one grave in this churchyard, which though worthy of attention has (so far as I know) never been brought to the notice of the public. This grave, though it contains the body of one man, is marked by two stones, one at the head, and one at the foot of the grave.

The one at the foot is not a small marker with initials such as is often supplied by the stone cutter to indicate that end of the grave; but it is in every respect what is known as a "headstone." It is the same height and width as the stone at the head of the grave, and bears the full inscription of name, date of death, and age, such as are on the headstone. It has always been referred to by the few people who have known about it, as "the grave with two headstones," though of course, one is a footstone. The only difference between them is—there is a verse on the headstone, but none on the footstone. Each stone is three feet high, and two feet wide. The full inscription is: "To the memory of William Bugden, who departed this life October 12th, 1808, aged 58 years." The epitaph is: "Ye gentle mourners now your grief forbear. Weep not for him who needs eth not a tear. For though his body's buried in cold clay. Transparent brightness shall his soul display. A husband kind, a parent dear, a friend near to his God, and to his friends most free. On worldly toys he placed no great regard. He's gone to heaven to meet his just reward."

Now up to this point there is nothing very striking about it all, except that it is a story of a grave with two "headstones." However, we ask, why the two stones were ordered, and placed in those positions, then it becomes somewhat interesting. There are two explanations given. One of them I have known for years. It is, that the first stone was ordered from Poole, England, but as it did not come to hand for a long time after it was due, the widow decided that it had gone to the bottom of the sea. So she ordered another. After the second was ordered, the first turned up, and in due time the second came. The other explanation being more romantic, appeals to me. This explanation was given to me a few days ago by a great-grandson of the late William Bugden, who got it from his father, when he—the great-grandson—was a boy. It is this: When Mr. Bugden died, his widow ordered a stone from Poole, which she stipulated was to be "black and white." In due time the stone was received, and was found to be literally as ordered—the stone was black and the letters were white. It was placed in position at the head of the grave, and it was regarded by everybody (but Mrs. Bugden) as a curiosity. People began to make jokes about it, which came to Mrs. Bugden's ears, and then she was sorry that she had ordered such a stone. She, however, was equal to the occasion, so she ordered another stone to be—black "black and white" but "white and black." In due time the stone came—a white stone with black letters. As the first stone had been secretly erected at the head of the grave, the second was placed at the foot, and there, facing each other they have kept watch and ward for one hundred and twelve years, and are doing duty to-day in good condition, with the inscriptions fairly legible. Whilst on the subject of headstones, I mention the fact, that I found a stone last week in the old churchyard, with the date 1744. I had always thought that the stone bearing the date 1747 was the oldest.

Bugden, 1776. John Bugden, Junior, of Christ Church, Hants, England, married to Sarah Beston, daughter of Bernard and Martha Beston, of English Harbour. This, I presume, is the beginning of the Bugdens in English Harbour. A son was born to them in 1773, and baptized John. There is another entry in the Burial Register as follows: March 12th, 1773. Interred James Bugden, of Christ Church, Hants, England, aged 59 years. I think he was a brother of John Bugden, Jr.

Re William Bugden, whose grave is marked by two "headstones," there are two entries in the old Register. One, "October 12th, 1776. William Bugden married to Mary Verge." They had a family of nine children—six sons and three daughters; the eldest was born in 1775, and the youngest in 1780. All are carefully registered, and their names were: "Betty, William, Joseph, Thomas, Susannah, Dinah, James, Benjamin." The other entry is: "October 16th, 1808. Interred Mr. William Bugden, of this Harbour, Planter, aged 58 years."

In Garland's time in Trinity, any one in the employ who needed a special suit of clothes, had the "order" sent by the last vessel that went to Poole in the fall, and it came out by the first vessel in the spring. As they were making up the order one fall, old Davy Bailey came in the office. The clerk asked him if he wanted a new coat. At first he said "No!" for though he was worth a good deal of money, he was very saving over it. At last he said, "Well! you'll order one for me but it must be a cheap one." So the order went—"one cheap coat for Davy Bailey," and in the spring it came out with the others,—for all material was good in those days—but it had no linings in it, nor any buttons on it; it was a cheap coat all right.

Welcome Home!

Hello, everybody! I'm back from the best trip I ever made. Feel good? Well, I say if there's anything that makes a man feel good it is the kind that comes from having "gone one better than anyone else"—and that's what I've done. Made some of the biggest, quickest, keenest buys of my life. Yes, I caught the market at the right time, on the turn, and now goods are going up again—and here I am with the snappiest, crinkliest line of dressy masculine novelties that ever saw the sunlight—and all in before the new duty surtax. Well, I should say I do feel good!

New York—"The woman who neglects to bathe her arms and arms (now that they are in vogue) has only herself to blame if she is passed by as a faded beauty. It only requires a few minutes each day to make her arms beautiful and graceful. No covering to protect them; they become dark and sallow no matter how often they are washed. They can be easily and quickly made beautiful by taking proper care of them. The best way I have found to do this is to soften the skin with good cold cream (the kind you have found to be the best) and off the superfluous skin with a cloth and apply the popular Derwillo, to the hands. This combination is really the hands and arms and try it once you will never be without it. Just make this compare it with the other will need no further argument. You that are tired of convincing you that the arms and the skin you have for anything. Derwillo has three shades, white, pink and blue. Louise Huff the Famous Actress Tells How To Instantly Beautify The Hands and Arms

LOUISE HUFF

New York—"The girl or woman who neglects to beautify her hands and arms (now that short sleeves are in vogue) has only herself to blame if she is passed by unnoticed," says that beautiful actress, Louise Huff. It only requires a few minutes twice each day to make your hands and arms beautiful and attractive. With no covering to protect the elbows they become dark and rough and no matter how often they are bathed they look ugly and repulsive. This can be easily and quickly overcome by taking proper care of them. The best way I have found to accomplish this is to soften the elbows with a good cold cream (Liska cold cream I have found to be the best) then wipe off the superfluous cream with a soft cloth and apply that popular beautifier, Derwillo, to the hands and arms. This combination instantly beautifies the hands and arms and if you ever try it once you will never be without it. Just make this test: Try Derwillo on one hand and arm and then compare it with the other and you will need no further argument to convince you that there is nothing like it and you would not have missed it for anything. Derwillo comes in three shades, white, flesh and brunette. Use white on the hands and arms and the shade you are accustomed to for the complexion. Der-willo gives the skin that youthful appearance every normal woman craves. It puts the blush of a rose on your cheeks and a lily-white baby softness on the hands and arms. It cannot be detected. Derwillo has become a regular fad and over five hundred thousand discriminating girls and women use it in place of face powder as it stays on better and does not rub off on clothing. Persepiration does not affect it and is wonderful for a shiny nose, oily skin, freckles, dark, sallow, rough skin, and poor complexions. It's famous for the quick results it gives. The very first application will astonish you. Try it to-day. It can be obtained at the toilet counter of any up-to-date drug or department store and if your druggist does not carry it he will be glad to order it for you if you will ask him to. All wholesalers keep it so he can get it from them or the manufacturers direct. Accept no substitute, then you will not be disappointed.

NOTE—Derwillo and Liska cold cream are sold everywhere with the distinct understanding that if you are not pleased your money will be refunded. They are sold under the above guarantee in this city at all department stores and druggists, including—

Pick and Shovel Work for Veterans.

THE REWARD OF HEROISM.

Yesterday in a letter to the Editor of the Telegram, Major Butler accused this paper of using unfair criticisms and publishing untruths concerning the Employment Bureau. A small news item headed "Referred to the Labor Bureau" in Thursday's issue being mentioned as one of the untruths. As a matter of fact the item was gathered by a reporter who had absolutely no axe to grind by telling falsehoods about this department. He was aware that a few men had been placed at road work but as the number was so insignificant he did not think it necessary to be academic as to the distinction between a few days' labor in a gravel pit and employment in the sense which the men intended it. In stating that none of the war Veterans who petitioned the Prime Minister had received work, the reporter gave what to all intents and purposes was the situation up to the time that the item was gathered. The information was given that way by one of the executives of the G.W.V.A. who since has explained "that being in a hurry at the time he had not opportunity to give the actual fact" which is that 20 out of the 120 men who signed the petition had been put at pick and shovel work on a road 4 or more miles out in the country. However the accuracy of the item as a general statement was not affected by a few men being forced to accept what they had not asked for. The men wanted some form of permanent employment. They accepted the gravel pits because as had been stated by the executive member referred to when the men signed the petition many of them had not any food in their stomachs. The war veterans appealed to the Premier for special consideration, particularly having in mind their maimed companions. They were well aware at the time that there was an Employment Bureau (in fact some term it a whitewashing bureau, and other harder titles). The petition was forwarded by the Prime Minister to Major Butler and an arrangement made whereby the men would be employed at a rate of 10 men per day. If the reporter of the offending item had desired to send in copy that would be hard on the Employment Bureau he has heard sufficient comments by those who are still looking for that special consideration to fill several columns of the Telegram.

Obituary.

There passed peacefully away at his home at Monroe, Smith Sound, Trinity Bay, May 30, 1921, Mr. Joseph Sinclair, aged 68 years and 8 months. He had been ailing for years and since December he suffered dreadfully. Although his suffering was of a severe nature he bore it patiently and when the call came he was ready to go. He left to mourn a wife, 5 sons and 3 daughters, 17 grand-children, one son Charles, at Wabana, William in the States, Edward and Maxwell, Maude, Patience and Anna at home and Capt. John, who just returned home from sea in time to give timely aid and to see his dear father pass away. The whole community joins in sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Railway Commission Report.

From time to time we hope to publish extracts from the Report of the Government members of the Railway Commission, and to-day we begin with the first installment of the actual report, addressed to the Prime Minister and read in the House of Assembly yesterday by Sir Michael Cashin. The appointment section is appended: "The Railway Commission, as constituted by Minute of Council, dated 13th day of August, 1920, met at St. John's Terminal on 16th August last to take over the operation of the Railway and Steamship Service hitherto operated by the Reid Newfoundland Company. The usual preliminaries having been disposed of by the Hon. W. P. Coaker was elected Chairman of the Joint Board and Mr. T. A. Hall was appointed Secretary. An account was opened with the Bank of Montreal against which cheques were to be drawn under joint signature of one of the Government members and one of the Reid Newfoundland Company's representatives on the Board or Secretary. The Paymaster was allowed to open a subsidiary account which was to be replenished from the after-mentioned account as required to keep it in credit. Each member of the Commission was to have equal voting power. It was also agreed that the Purchasing Agent of the Company would purchase all materials and stores required for the railway and steamships as hitherto, that all invoices should be open to inspection by any of the Commission and that all stores held in the General Stores of the Company should be dispensed on requisition to the Railway and Steamships at cost price. These were the main decisions arrived at. The Commission thereupon entered upon its work. All the officials were retained in their respective positions and where performing duties both for the Reid Newfoundland Company and the Commission, the proportional amounts of their salaries were apportioned. As the Government is principally interested in the financial aspect of the agreement for operation of railway and steamships it was thought advisable to have an Auditor to look after the Government's interest solely and that he should be directly under the control of the Auditor General. After a considerable search for a suitable man the choice fell upon Mr. Victor R. Pill, formerly of St. John's who had gone to the United States some years ago and obtained a complete knowledge of railway accounting on one of the great railroads systems of that country. With him was associated Mr. Louis Crummy who has an office in the General Stores where all regulations for materials or supplies pass through his hands and are checked with the invoices. It is also his duty to check over and certify all bills presented for payment by the Reid Newfoundland Company. Mr. Pill is assisted in the checking of accounts by Mr. C. B. Dickes, of the Government Engineering Office, and the Auditor General has general supervision of the auditing of the accounts. Some little time was necessary to inform the Government members as to the working and needs of the Railway and Steamships. One of the first needs was the securing of an ample coal supply for the season the stock on hand being very small. Mr. Hall was despatched to Nova Scotia to interview the Coal Companies and ascertain the extent of their coal-making undertakings from the Dominion and Nova Scotia Coal Companies that they would look after the requirements of both the railway and the Colony at large. There was great stringency in the coal market at that time (September) and Europe was willing to pay almost any price, which fact left the Cape Breton Companies naturally disinclined to supply local requirements at a necessarily lower figure. The prices paid has greatly increased our coal bill for the year in common with that of all Railway Companies. About the same time your Commissioners visited the old workings of the Reid Newfoundland Company at Coal Brook Mine, South Branch, accompanied by Mr. Hatch and Mr. Forbes of the Natural Resources Department of the Reid Newfoundland Company. Under the guidance and explanation of these gentlemen it was thought expedient, both for present needs and with a view to develop a cheap supply of railway coal for the future, that the existing shaft be sunk deeper and equipped with the necessary hoisting gear, boilers, engines, houses for the staff and workmen and that the mine be developed from these basins." Globe Trotters.

SOME REMARKABLE WAGERS.

Tony Fizzo, who has just won a wager of $2,000 by riding from New York to Los Angeles and back—a distance of nearly 11,000 miles—wearing handcuffs which were chained to his bicycle, is the latest of a long sequence of unconventional globe-trotters.

Only a few months ago we were reading of Sam H. Cole, the "Newsboy King," who left New York on a tramp round the world, with ten cents in his pocket, and who crowned his adventure by wedding a pretty heiress during his short stay in London.

It seems but yesterday, although it is some years ago, that a man of mystery strode out of Trafalgar Square on a similar journey, but in a very different fashion. His face was concealed behind a black iron mask, and in front of him he pushed a perambulator, stocked with photographs for sale.

His journey was undertaken to win a wager of £2,000, and the conditions were that he must start without a penny in his pocket, must not reveal his identity to a soul, and must win a wife on his way.

Still more remarkable was the task attempted by Marinus Schroder, a Swiss, who for a wager undertook to compass the earth under the following singular conditions. He was to start his journey with no money in his pocket and to wear handcuffs for all but two hours daily, during which time he was to earn sufficient to pay his expenses.

An Unhappy Venture.

But even Schroder's task was enviable in comparison with that of the Belgian sportsman who, a little later, left Brussels with the intention of making his way round the world, walking backwards.

That these adventurous journeys are at times perilous was proved by the experience of M. Emile Alexander and four companions, who started some years ago on a tramp round the earth for a prize of £40,000. Before they had accomplished half their journey two of them were killed in an encounter with Arabs in the Sahara, and a third was carried off by Spanish brigands and never heard of again.

About the same time seven young Italians left Livorno on a similar trip, their itinerary of 45,000 miles being prepared for them by the Geographical Society of Rome. The condition of the feat was that the travellers should earn their own living en route; and a prize of £10,000 was to be their reward on the successful conclusion of their journey.

Four years later three of the original seven arrived in London with a remarkable story of their adventures. One of their band had been shot by brigands in Albania, a second had died of bronchitis in Montenegro, in Croatia another fell over a precipice with fatal results, and the fourth was too fascinated by the seductions of the Riviera to continue his journey.

Equally remarkable was the journey round the earth undertaken by G. M. Shilling, an American, for a wager of £1,000, the conditions being that he should complete the tour within four years without either begging or borrowing money.

Saved by Quick Wits.

Mr. Shilling failed in his task, the time expiring when he had reached Berlin, after a tramp of 82,000 miles; but the intrepid pedestrian decided to prolong his walk for three years more before he returned home.

One of his most trying experiences was the crossing of Australia from Adelaide to Perth, following the telegraph-line and obtaining his water supply from the Government tanks, placed forty miles apart.

One day he arrived, almost dead, at one of these tanks only to find, to his despair, that it was empty. Seeing no other escape from death, he cut a telegraph wire, and within twelve hours a party of engineers arrived on the spot to effect the necessary repairs, and incidentally to save his life.

Compared with such dangerous globe-trotting, most of these eccentric feats are prosaic, if uncomfortable—such as that of Anton Hanallan, a young Austrian, who, for a sum of 2,000 dollars offered by a New York newspaper, walked 7,000 miles in 260 days, pushing before him a perambulator containing his wife and child; and that of William E. Mason, a fifteen-year-old boy, who left London on a walking tour of the earth, attired in a suit made from two-pennyworth of newspapers, and pledged neither to "beg, borrow, nor steal" money during his journey of over 40,000 miles.

THE ROBIN.

Oh, yesterday a robin came a-hopping round my place
And I was at the window with a sad and gloomy face,
And I was feeling peevish and a-thinking thoughts that come
When a fellow's discontented and the world is looking glum;
So I watched old Mr. Robin as he snugged a worm or two
And slipped around the garden in the way that robins do.

His eye was bright and shiny and his head was in the air,
And if his face was wide enough a smile had lingered there.
The breeze was blowing chilly and the ground seemed mighty bleak,
But the robin wasn't growling that the hard spots hurt his beak,
And the robin wasn't kicking that his little feet were cold,
He was happy to be living as his bits of music told.

He was plump and he was chipper, and thought I while watching him,
Don't you ever get the notion that this fight for life is grim?
Do you ever tell your neighbors while you're sitting in a tree,
That food is not as plentiful as once it used to be?

Oh, little feathered songster, when the days are cold and long
Do you ever waste a minute walling everything is wrong?

As I watched old Mr. Robin at the business of his day,
With nobody near to help him or to pass the food his way,
To myself I think I muttered: "what's the matter now with me?
If a robin can be happy, why should I so dismal be?"

All my troubles are as nothing to the life he leads out there,
Yet this minute he is singing and I'm knee-deep in despair!"

Seek River of Doubt.

Six American scientists sailed from New York on June 1 for Chile, determined to reach the headquarters of the Amazon River. They intend to pick up the lost trail of Theodore Roosevelt's River of Doubt and trace it to its source, undertaking the most ambitious expedition ever attempted of the greatest river in the world and its adjacent terrain. The foremost object of the adventurers who will brave the fever-infested jungles and perhaps have to win their way against savages, will be the discovery of new herbs and drugs for the enrichment of medicine. Each of the voyagers is a specialist in a different branch of science and each expects to bring back new lore to add to the sum of human knowledge.

Although preparations have been under way for some time to send an extensive expedition to undertake researches lasting at least two years, nothing was known generally of the project until announcement was made, devoted particularly to the college of Pharmacy of Columbia University, will be at its head. At Dr. Rusby's home in Newark it was said that he was "doing a month's work every day" in preparation for the journey and had retired early.

Dr. Rusby, who has been granted leave of absence by the university, will, in addition to directing the party, devote himself particularly to the collection of drugs and herbs. The natives are known to have their own potent remedies for the fever which to them is an ever-present peril and to possess secrets of substances which enable them to stave off exhaustion on long, arduous journeys. It is these two secrets which Dr. Rusby first will try to pry from the fastnesses in which they have lain hidden so long. Beyond that he will seek for whatever an unexplored region of excessive fertility may disclose of interest or value to mankind.

The expedition will be known as the Mullford Biological Exploration. Its members are to be well armed for defensive purposes, though seeking always to penetrate into the strange land under friendly relations with the natives. They are taking with them to make a complete pictorial record of their journey, Owen Cattell, an expert camera man, who will work under the direction of Gordon McGreegh, Oriental scholar. Besides the pictures and the pharmacological material, they hope to bring back complete collections of reptiles, insects, birds and animals of the region.

Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman, statistician Insurance Company, will devote all his time to an intensive study of the longevity, acclimatization and sanitary conditions as affecting white men in the districts visited. His data will amplify the work of the Harvard School of Tropical Medicine and the American Geographical Society, and will settle the question concerning the conditions under which Americans must live in that country.

Dr. William M. Mann, assistant entomologist of the United States Government, will devote himself exclusively to his own subject and will have every assistance in his work.

Dr. Everett Pearson, of the University of Indiana, will be in charge of the ichthyological investigations; Dr. Orman E. White, of the Brooklyn Botanical Gardens, representing Harvard University, will confine himself to the flora of the country and expects to bring back flowers the existence of which has not even been suspected. Geo. S. McCarthy of Woodbury, N.J., will act as rifleman and taxidermist for the expedition.

The steamship Santa Elisa, the expedition will disembark at Antofagasta, Chile, where it will complete its equipment and leave for La Paz, Bolivia. From La Paz, it will plunge into the unknown terrain in the general direction of the Maderia and Amazon rivers. Thereafter it expects to be out of touch with civilization for long periods. It will have to cross the Andes at an elevation of more than 19,000 feet by pack train, using llamas and mules. Calamar, the known head of canoe navigation, will be the first settlement reached. This will be used as a base for expeditions lasting months into the unknown watershed of the greatest river in the world. The territory passed over by Theodore Roosevelt in 1914 will be visited and his River of Doubt traced and charted to its sources.—Quebec Telegraph.

Smart Young Maiden.

Sir Walter Parratt, the organist of St. George's Chapel, Windsor, who recently celebrated his eightieth birthday, is fond of telling the story of how a fair visitor to the Castle "got one back" nicely on a bandman who was showing her round.

A number of stars upon the cuff of a passing veteran aroused the young lady's curiosity.

"He's the battalion astronomer," explained the escort gravely. "Most useful man. Guides us home by the stars when we've lost our way on night manoeuvres."

"How interesting," said the maiden. Then, noting his bandman's badge—the representation of an ancient stringed instrument—she exclaimed slyly:

"I suppose that thing on your arm means that you're the regimental lyre."

The Art of Bathing.

Precautions, Which Most Swimmers Disregard. Many people rather regret their dip in the sea because they do not observe certain simple precautions. In the early summer, however, hot weather may be, the water will be comparatively cold—many degrees below what it will be in late autumn. On the first occasion one should stay in the water less than three minutes. The time of day should be as near noon as possible, and it is well to have a biscuit, or better still, a warm drink before entering the water. Anything in the way of heavy food should be avoided. Don't think of undressing until the body is heated by exercise, but wait until you have cooled down. Go straight down into the water, splash all over the body. Then have a little swim or swimming. Proceed at the end of the three minutes have the sea water poured over you as you get into your clothes without delay. Then sit in the sun or take a little walk to keep up the circulation. Lunch comes as a suitable finish to the first bath.

Feeding a City Afloat.

So far as mere eating and drinking goes, one usually lives better as a passenger at sea than anywhere in the world. On most boats the fare is good, but comparatively few hotels keep such a splendid "table" as one finds in the big Atlantic liner.

For supplying their catering departments the companies owning these vessels maintain large bonded stores, grocery shops, and such-like establishments. Each of these must be well stocked, for the little army of cooks which each liner carries has every day whilst she is at sea to prepare as much food as would suffice for a fair-sized town.

Take a well-known ship like the Mauretania. She is fitted with large kitchens, equipped with the most up-to-date plant. Amongst the latter are electric grills that cook four hundred chops or steaks per hour.

If you are lucky enough to be making a trip in her, and desire a chop or a steak for your lunch, all you have to do is to choose your "cut," and in a few minutes' time it will be served up to you "done as you want it."

As for bread, you may select what you fancy. Everything from plain "household" to the crispest of rolls is baked in the ship. And if you have a dainty tooth—well, there's a confectionery shop at your service, from which you can obtain all sorts of toothsome things, from ice cream to fancy cakes.

See Air Gives Them Appetites.

Turning out such a variety of edible necessaries a large staff being employed. Cooks by the score are carried in all liners that ply to and fro across the "herring pond." On the regular catering staff of the Aquitania there are seventy-five cooks, fourteen bakers and nine butchers. Serving the food prepared by these, and otherwise attending to the needs of passengers, keeps busy 485 stewards and thirty stewardesses.

As to the table equipment, that runs in huge figures. In a vessel of the Mauretania's size there are in regular use many thousands of cloths and other pieces of linen, together with 20,000 cups and saucers, 22,000 plates and covers, 12,000 glasses and tumblers, 15,000 spoons, 15,000 knives, forks, and carvers, 5,000 jugs, sugar-basins, etc., 4,250 of such articles as cruet and egg-cups, 10,000 dishes, and 11,000 toast-racks and escallop shells. Keeping up the crockery supply must provide enough work for a fair-sized pottery.

It is quite certain that no single farmyard could keep a liner's "larder" filled. Every time she crosses the Atlantic, there is consumed aboard the Aquitania 50 oxen, 15 calves, 200 sheep, 70 lambs, 100 pigs, 350 ducks, 130 turkeys, 90 geese, 3,000 chickens, 400 pheasants, 400 pigeons, 400 grouse, 550 partridges, 800 quail, and 200 snipe, to say nothing of tons of flour, groceries, and other foodstuffs.

Just imagine what this totals to in a year. Think, too, of the number of times the "herring pond" is crossed in that period, and you will get some idea of the amount of food that is consumed upon it in a twelvemonth.

Another point of interest is that feeding the ships is almost as big a business as feeding the people they carry. Every time the Mauretania crosses the Atlantic she sets up 600 ten-ton truck-loads of coal, while the Aquitania, which is fed by suction, swallows 7,000 tons of fuel oil on each trip.

Astonishing the Natives.

In that most interesting book, "Some Experiences of a New Guinea Resident Magistrate," Captain C. A. W. Monckton tells an amusing story of how he succeeded in impressing the inhabitants of a cannibal village who, incited by their sorcerers or witch doctors, had been giving no end of trouble.
Entering the place alone, save for a native interpreter, he faced the mob of savages, and fixed their attention by telling them that he was going to show them that he was a greater sorcerer than the best of their witch doctors.

"Look at my mouth," he commanded, and expanded it into a grin, showing a complete set of false teeth.
Then, turning his back for a second, he dropped the teeth into his handkerchief and, swinging round again, exposed a double row of toothless gums.
A yell of horror and amazement went up, and fearful glances were cast behind for somewhere to belt to.
Captain Monckton swept his handkerchief before his mouth, and again grinned a glistening toothful grin.
"Now," he said, turning to the interpreter, "ask them whether in all their villages there is a sorcerer that can do such a thing as that?"
"No," was the answer. "The white chief is greater than them all."
