

Nerves So Bad That She Would Sit and Cry

Mrs. Mary Hocking, Madoc, Ont., writes—
 "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a wonderful lot of good. I suffered from general weakness and was so run down and my heart and nerves were in such bad shape that I would sit down and cry and not know what I was crying about. I also used to have weak spells. Thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, however, I am real well now. I shall always keep a box of the Nerve Food in the house, and recommend them to my friends; they are a wonderful medicine."
 (Mr. J. W. Vince, Druggist, of Madoc, Ont., says: "I have sold Mrs. Hocking your Nerve Food, and the medicine has done her much good.")

Lady Wyvernes' Daughter.

CHAPTER XXVI.

It was evident the marquis saw something in her which attracted him very forcibly; his attentions to her were so marked and deferential that a dark frown gradually overspread the face of the Italian.

If Lady Lynne had not been so thoroughly wretched, she would have felt amused at her sister's evident desire to be freed from both admirers. There was nothing of the coquette in Agatha; since her sister's warning, she had had rather a dread of the count; and she cared no more for the marquis, with his title, his wealth, and his estates, than she did for any other of the young men who sighed and made sentimental speeches to her.

Lady Everleigh was almost in despair as she watched this trio.

"Could any one imagine," she said to herself, "any creature so entirely without tact? With no kind look and a few kind words, Agatha Lynne might be Marchioness of Horington, and she neither gives one nor the other. Did ever a girl throw away such a chance?"

All unconscious of the interests, the envy, and the jealousy she was causing, Agatha was wishing that the concert was over. She had something approaching fear for the count. None of the terrible things that Inez had prophesied should come true if she could help it. She would show him decidedly that his attentions were all thrown away. For the marquis she had a quiet kind of liking and some little pity. He was so kind and ingenuous, so simple and unaffected, she could not help liking him; at the same time she wondered why he had not had the sense to choose some brilliant, beautiful girl, who would have returned his love, instead of herself. She could never care for him. She did not know that that very fact constituted her great charm in the eyes of the young man who was sought after by every maneuvering mother in London.

When the concert was over and Lady Lynne's carriage was announced, the marquis, by an adroit movement, was the first to rise and offer his escort to Agatha. She accepted it, and Count Rinaldo followed with a lowering face. He fancied the young girl was cooler than usual to him. When they reached the house he was the first to descend and offer his arm to Miss Lynne. She refused with a graceful gesture, and passing before him, tripped lightly up the steps; yet he would not believe that she had purposely slighted him. When they reached the drawing-room Agatha took possession of a pretty lounging chair, her favorite seat. The count followed her, and, bending over her, began some slight remonstrance upon what he was pleased to call her cruelty. She made him some slight, laughing reply, and, rising immediately, crossed over to where Inez was talking to Lord Lynne and the marquis. Then the face of Count Rinaldo was not pleasant to see. He saw Lady Lynne intently watching him, and it struck him that she had perhaps been warning her sister against him. "She would not dare me so far," he said to himself. "She would never be so blind to her own interests, or so rash." But the conviction grew upon him. Agatha was neither unkind nor pointedly cool to him; she did not attract attention either by her indifference or any exhibition of her real feelings; still there was something, an indefinable something, in her manner, which clearly proved to the count that she was aware of his liking for her, and wished to show him quietly that it was all in vain. Once Lady Lynne caught his eye fixed upon her with a glance that, brave and fearless as she was, seemed to freeze the blood in her veins. As he was leaving, Count Rinaldo drew near her.

"You must see me to-morrow alone," he said.

"It will be impossible," she replied, drawing back proudly.

"If you are wise, Lady Lynne," said the count, "you will not trifle with a desperate man. Unless I see you to-morrow alone, I shall seek an interview with your husband. Be at home at three—I will not be later."

She looked at him, and in that moment Lady Lynne would have given the whole world to dare and defy him. He read it in her haughty glance, and smiled contemptuously upon her.

It was an easy matter to secure a tête-à-tête, but Inez revolted against the necessity. Lord Lynne was from home and would not return until dinner time; Agatha, only too pleased to enjoy a few hours' quiet, had gone to the library with one of her favorite books.

This time Lady Lynne made no preparation for her interview with the man she detested. Punctually at the time appointed he was shown into the drawing-room, where she received him with the dignity of a queen.

"Let there be no waste of words between us," he said; "I am here to warn you. I love your sister; her fortune is just what I require, and I intend to marry her. I can see plainly that you have tried to prejudice her against me. Now, beware in time; you must see your influence for me and in my favor." She made no reply, and he continued: "If you thwart me in this you know the consequences; Agatha loves you, she is young, easily influenced, gentle and yielding—if you add your entreaties to mine, your influence to mine, I know she will consent and will be my wife. Then all will be well; if you refuse to help me, you lose all that you value most."

"Rinaldo," she said, gently, "have you no mercy for me?"

"I have learnt to act and care for myself," he replied, wondering at the new and strange softness in her manner.

"Have you no regret, no pity for the blight and ruin you have brought upon my life?" she said. "I was a child when you lured me on to love and marry you; have you no pity for the sorrow you brought upon me, the fever of grief you made me suffer, and still more for the bitter shame and agony I passed through when I read your letter and found that I was but the foolish dupe of a clever, wily man? Have you no regret or remorse for the youth, the trust, and the faith you blight and slew when you killed my love?"

A strange, wistful light came into his dark eyes.

"It seems to me," she continued, mournfully, "that my fate, my story, would move the heart of a stone. What have I done that I am so hardily tried? Rinaldo, be just, be merciful and leave me in peace. You have wrought me evil enough."

She might have pleaded to a rock with as much success as to a man whose heart had for years been hardened and corrupted by selfishness and worldliness. He listened to her in gloomy silence.

"It is too late for this sort of thing, my lady," he replied, moodily. "I must have your sister's fortune, and as she goes with it, I must have her."

"But," said Lady Lynne, "she does not love you, Count Rinaldo. Believe me, if you knelt to her to-day, and prayed for her to become your wife, she would refuse. I know her so well; she is gentle; but she is firm—she does not care for you."

"That is what I fear," he replied, "and why I ask your help. You have more influence over her than any one, and you must persuade her. In three weeks from this day I shall ask her to be my wife; if she refuses, you know the consequence. Do your best for me; and remember, I never fail in keeping my promise."

He did not wait to say more, but left her with these last words ringing in her ears.

When Lord Lynne returned he hastened first to his lady's boudoir; she was not there. He rang the bell, and asked her maid where her mistress was.

"My lady was in the drawing-room an hour or two ago," replied the girl. "I have not seen her since."

"Inez," cried Lord Lynne, as he opened the drawing-room door, "are you here?"

There was no reply; but, looking into the apartment, on a couch at the far end there lay my lady, with a pale, still face and rigid lips. She had lain there senseless for hours.

Sydney Mines Have Legal Vendor.

DISTRIBUTION OF LIQUOR REFUSED DRUG STORES.

Sydney Mines—John W. Johnston was appointed legal vendor with a salary of $65 a month, and with an office in the town-hall at the monthly meeting of the town council Tuesday night.

During the past few years the distribution of liquor was cared for by the local drug stores, which he had, were not by any means responing a harvest for the town treasury. Coun. Boyd's motion was seconded by Coun. J. L. MacKinnley that a legal vendor should be appointed.

On motion of Coun. Boyd and Claren it was decided to pay the newly appointed official $65 a month and furnish suitable quarters for him to start his work on July 1. On motion the temperance committee will make all the necessary arrangements for installing a room in the Town Hall and for the necessary liquor to start business.

Councillor Boyd, introducing the question, said that he could not see any reason why Sydney Mines should not, as other towns, derive a revenue from the local dispensing of liquor instead of it going into the pockets of private dealers.

Spurious Claims to Fame.

ALTHOUGH WRITER DOES NOT CONCERN ANGLI-SAXONS ORIGINATED MOST THINGS WORTH WHILE HE DENIES FAKE CLAIMS. GINO SPERANZO.

That it was an Irish priest and not Columbus or Leif Ericson who first discovered America; that American independence could never have been secured had it not been for the aid of the Germans; that George Washington was of Irish descent and not English; that Abraham Lincoln was of German lineage and not English, and that the Battle of Gettysburg was largely won through the valor of a Jew—such are a few of many claims laid by various races making up the population of United States, according to Gino Speranzo, an American of Italian descent, writing for World's Work.

While Mr. Speranzo takes a sting at Americans of Anglo-Saxon descent for claiming that everything worth while in the history of the Union was brought about by English-Americans, he shows how ridiculously shallow are some of the claims set forth by other races. The claim of the Jews in the matter of the Battle of Gettysburg, for instance, is based on an assertion in a story of the battle that Brigadier-General E. S. Solomon "was the only man at Gettysburg who did not dodge." The Germans insist that Lincoln was of German descent because some old papers were found in which a family of that name spelled their name "Linkhorn."

But in the manner in which these claims are pressed the writer finds considerable difference in style. While the Germans and other Teutonic races go about it laboriously and with a heavy seriousness, the Irish claimants do not take them selves or their arguments with any such ridiculous gravity but outline them more in the spirit of "starting something." He takes these two phases of the matter up in part, as follows:

As the secretary of the German-American historical society of Illinois, from whose courageous address I have hereinbefore quoted, admitted further on in this discourse the existence (under the census of 1900 of some twelve millions of "Anglo-Saxons" in the population it might be thought that a few shreds of glory could have been left to this mindless element. I think it would have been good politics, even if admittedly bad history. But facts are facts. There is Abraham Lincoln, for example, whom the old stock has palmed off as "typically American," that is, as one of themselves. But a gentleman who I believe is, or was the secretary of the society for the history of the German-American in Maryland, presents evidence to cast doubt on this Anglo-Saxon legend.

On the whole I prefer the Irish-American to the German-American historiographers. Style is the man, and the Gaelic historic style is far more engaging, though perhaps not so conclusively probative, as the Teutonic. Compare, for instance, the German-way of casting doubt on Lincoln's New England ancestry, as above outlined, with the Irish claim on George Washington. The Teuton is a little ill at ease in his labored argument; but witness what lightness of touch in the Gaelic handling of a mere historic possibility. "I may mention," thus writes the author of an essay on "The Irish Emigrant during the 17th and 18th centuries,"—just as if it were an incidental and curious little item—"I may mention that even Washington was possibly descended on his father's side from a Washington who had lived in Ireland, and his mother's family, the Balls, beyond doubt came from the neighborhood of Dublin." And is not the title of this other Irish contribution to Washingtonians teaching enough to make even a Henry Adams accept it as historic verisimilitude: "The Irish Washingtons at home and abroad, together with some mention of the Ancestors of America's patriot" by George Washington of Dublin, Ireland, and Thomas Hamilton Murray, Boston!"

Helium.

Helium is a gaseous element abundant in radio-active minerals. It occurs in certain springs and in the atmosphere, being produced by the disintegration of radium emanations. It is colorless, insoluble in water, and the most difficult gas to liquefy, a temperature of two degrees above the absolute zero being necessary.

Although slightly heavier than hydrogen, helium has the advantage for inflating airships of being unflammable. During the Great War a survey of the sources of helium showed that natural gases in Ontario and Alberta contained 0.34 per cent. of helium, and could supply 12,000,000 cubic feet per annum. This amount, however, would be sufficient to keep in commission only a very few airships. It might in the future be used to fill the compartments adjacent to the engine, where danger of fire is greatest.

Captain Marshall Replies to Daily Mail.

Editor Evening Telegram.
 Dear Sir--Would you kindly allow me space in your paper to make some objections against the editorial of yesterday's Mail, regarding the petition presented to the Honourable members of the House of Assembly on Monday. The Editor goes on to say, "Never before the initiation of the Labrador steam service has the claim been raised against non-certified masters and mates. And I will go farther than that and say it never would have been raised, if there was foreign service to warrant the employment of these men." The Editor no doubt, would be glad to make this political, but such is not the case. That petition is pure and simple non-political, for it is known to the Editor that some of the signatures attached to that petition were supporters of his party and it was not made with any political view whatever, but appealed to the Hon. member if it was fair play to have men with master's certificates walking the streets without employment, some of them having put in 40 years at sea, men who know the Labrador coast as well as foreign coastwise. We venture to say that we can do the work of the S. S. Watchful as well as her present master, and further, if an S.O.S. call should happen to present itself, can also find the position given. The Editor of the "Mail" is absolutely wrong when he makes a statement that not one of the single gentlemen, whose signature is to that petition, had any experience of Labrador coast as some of them have had quite an experience. In justice to the Master Mariners, I want to point out to the Editor of the "Daily Mail" that the profession of a Master Mariner, one who has his qualification, is just as much of a profession as an M.D. or Lawyer, and has something to protect. If I should want a script today, I would have to apply to a Medical practitioner, and if it should be, if you want a master by all means take a man with a certificate. The Editor refers to all the ships coastwise, I am not reflecting on these men or any man in particular, but they would be better men if they had a certificate. In justice to Mr. Higgins, I may say there was no particular wish or desire on his part to present that petition. The signatories would be more pleased if one of the members of the Government would do so. That was the desire of the petitioners. The undersigned wishes it to be understood that the petition presented is non-political, and the signatories to that petition (some of them if not all) instead of fighting politics this spring, were fighting and endeavouring to bring the needed supplies to the country. Thanking you, Mr. Editor.

Yours truly,
 S. C. MARSHALL.

Better Health for Women

Any woman who will stop and consider the result of a questionnaire recently sent out by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company of Cobourg, Ont., will in all fairness admit the value of this old-fashioned root and herb medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Fifty thousand replies were received, and 98 out of every 100 women stated they had been benefited or restored to health by its use. This means better health for women in America. It will surely pay any woman who suffers from any ailment or weakness peculiar to her sex to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

BELL LINES SERVICE INTERRUPTED.
 Last night about 11 o'clock street car No. 6 left the rails near Adelaide Street, and the whole belt line service was consequently interrupted. After considerable delay the tram was eventually placed on the track and service resumed without further trouble. Waiting for Work.

There are thousands of men who would have been engaged at the fishery this summer were it not for the broadcast prediction promises that were made by Government candidates and Government spell-binders that there would be work for all—plenty of employment—with good pay in the Humber Valley. How these men have been disillusioned! What bitterness is in their hearts to-day over the cruel and callous way in which they have been deceived by political tricksters, who having now attained their ends, can make jokes over the affair and laugh at their dupes, whom they have so successfully but cruelly deceived. In the northern harbors, once the busy scenes of healthy and manly activity in preparation for the fishery at this time of the year, the schooners are anchored bow and stern, for the summer, and the fishermen are waiting, waiting for the promised work on the Humber; the panacea that was to cure all their financial ills and make them safely indifferent to the contingencies of whether they could get supplies or not, and immune from the anxiety of the vital problem of whether the price of fish went up or went down. It appears that the principal job that requires the most men just now in the Humber preparations is sub let to a Contracting Co., which knows no sentiment political or otherwise, and will take on only the exact number of men that they require and no more; and they will employ only men whom they know can give a good day's work for the pay that they are giving. They know no Squires and no Coakers and are unimpressed by letters from members of the Government, and by labor seekers who go out armed with tickets. They will engage the men if they require them and will not if they do not. Already men have returned to their homes in the northern outports, having been unable to get work, and denouncing the Humber in language stronger than we would care to print. In the days prior to the election any possibility of such a disappointing condition of affairs occurring was studiously kept from the people. If this state of things happened at any other time of the year the result would not be so productive of injury to the country; but to occur on the eve of the fishery operations is nothing short of a political crime. It has kept thousands from making their plans and preparations for that avocation, and it is too late now, when they have realized their true position, to get ready for the fishery. The next idea that occurs to their minds, especially the young men, is to scrape up the price of their passage in some way or other and get out of the country.

Telegraph Offices.

There are probably a hundred settlements in Newfoundland whose people are looking for a telegraph office from the Government without avail. Amongst these settlements are many thickly populated ones. They want only one telegraph office. Ferryland is going to have two, and the second one is being established there not from any necessity as there has been an office of the Anglo-American Telegraph Co. in Ferryland for over forty years, and it has fulfilled all the requirements of the public. The operator is Mrs. Farrell, who, we may state incidentally, sent two sons to the war and both are now resting in the fields of France, having given up their lives for justice and right. As we have said there is no necessity for the establishment of this second office, but the result will probably be to deprive this poor woman of her small income by compelling the closing up of the Anglo office. The only hope is that the case is one, as far as the financial results are concerned, that is in the hands of the people of Ferryland and vicinity who may have telegraph messages to send, and the fair minded business people of the city and the country where there are Anglo offices who may have despatch business to transact with Ferryland. If the spirit of justice, fairness and proper sympathy with the lady who conducts the Anglo office in Ferryland exist in Ferryland the Government is certainly inviting trouble, especially if it be correct that the motives underlying this transaction are what they appear to be. In any case, this will be interesting information for the people in the many settlements in Newfoundland who have been for years clamoring for telegraph offices and have been turned down by the Government. They can't get one, but the Government thinks that Ferryland ought to have two.

Magistrate's Court.

A 30 year old laborer of the East End was summoned before court this morning at the instance of Const. White for acting loose and disorderly on the public street the night of the 17th inst. In this case sentence was suspended and the accused was ordered to pay costs.

Annoyance to Motorists.

Owners of motor cycles are complaining of the annoyance caused by being compelled to stop by policemen who demand to see their motor license. Instances have occurred where a person who has paid his license was stopped no less than a dozen times in one day. The trouble appears to be that no new license numbers have been issued this year. On enquiry, it is learned that as there is a very few motor cycles operating, the same numbers as last year are being used. The evident intention being to detect those who have purchased machines from their last years owners who have not passed the examination required by law before they are allowed to drive. Matters would, it is suggested, be simplified if licensed owners of motor driven vehicles would notify the authorities when they dispose of their machines.

At the Dry Dock.

CAPT'S REPAIRS NEARING COMPLETION.

The repairs to the S. S. Capto at the Dry Dock are expected to be completed by the end of the week. As soon as she comes off the slip the S. S. Glencoe will go on to undergo some minor repairs. The repairs to the S. S. Prospero which has been laid up for several months past will very likely be commenced with next week. Dock hands have a busy period just now, and with the additional work ahead, it looks as though the mechanics and laborers will have enough to do to keep them employed all season.

"AT HOME."—Mrs. R. Allan Edwards will be "At Home" on Thursday and Friday, at 54 Fleming Street, from 3 to 5 p.m. June 20, 21.

Fish in Local Market.

Codfish was fairly plentiful at Hesse Cove this morning and boats on the grounds secured good catches of splendid size fish, which were quickly disposed of in the city this forenoon. On the local grounds the fishermen did not do much this morning, and the fish taken were of very small size.

In Passing.

Two weeks ago to-morrow since the Assembly was officially opened, during this period only three sittings were held.

The Prime Minister on all occasions moved the adjournment. Monday he asked that further business be postponed until Thursday which means that as Friday is a general holiday only two sittings will be recorded this week.

It is now drawing up to the latter part of the first half of the year and so far no business other than the tabling of preliminary resolutions on the Humber Valley project and Railway has been done.

The Opposition's request for certain aspects of land and water areas asked for at the first session is still unfulfilled. It is important to see these reports before the resolutions relative to the Humber can be discussed or debated and it is to be hoped they will be presented to the House on Thursday.

Carefully prepared political addresses which tend to camouflage the issues as delivered by the Premier during the last two sittings are only taking up the time of the Assembly when important business should be receiving proper consideration.

These addresses which contained a lot of matter irrelevant to the questions before the chair are at this particular period unnecessary and unwarranted.

The most important question to be answered at the present juncture is what is going to become of the Railway? and who is going to run the service after June 30th.

The Premier intimated that at the present time he could not answer these questions nor could he determine who will likely be responsible for the operation of the railway but in all probability the Government will have to operate for several months to come.

In brief beginning July the first of this year the Government will have complete control of the steamers, Dock and Railway as it did three years ago when a commission was created costing the Colony some five millions of dollars.

The most important business to be dealt with is that of finance.

Where is the Government going to get the two million dollars to pay the Reid's one hundred and ten thousand dollars interest yearly?

Where is the Government going to get the money to meet the interest and principal of the temporary loans already secured from the Bank of Montreal.

What method of raising money to meet the Humber Guarantee and other large financial votes which will have to be submitted by the Finance Minister in his budget which it is understood will be presented to the House early next week.

Provision will also have to be made for the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars which the Prime Minister will ask to have allocated for relief employment in the districts of St. John's East and West.

Previous governments during the session before a general election always voted a specified sum to pay actual expenses of same and a vote in the vicinity of forty thousand was passed.

Such procedure did not meet with the wishes of the government of the day which secretly by an order in council reserved the right to spend all that they desired to buy up the electorate in every district, as well as shown thru other channels before the Assembly prorogues.

It is authoritatively stated that the recent general election cost the Colony over six hundred and fifty thousand dollars, a statement which may be accepted as "critically correct."

That a big portion of this six hundred and fifty thousand dollars was spent between nomination and polling days will be proven despite the attempts on the part of the Government to keep back from the Opposition vouchers and other information relative to same as requested each day since the session began.

When packing your basket for the holiday do not forget to include a tin of Van Camp's Pork and Beans—a delicious and appetizing dish that is wholesome and nourishing. Van Camp's Pork and Beans are always ready, always acceptable, always hunger appeasing. Sold by all grocers.—June 20, 21.

Norwegian Fishery.

The report of the Norwegian fishery to-date received yesterday by the Customs gives the following figures: June 19, 1923 50,100,000 June 19, 1922 47,800,000

The Annual Regatta.

Now that the Regatta Committee have made a start to prepare for our greatest annual sporting event "The Day of the Races," as we commonly call it, a spirit of enthusiasm should at once be developed by every member thereof to make it as successful as we all wish to see it.

The great majority of our citizens, the old, the middle aged and the young, consider this eventful day as the most enjoyable of any in the year, and so would sincerely hope that all owners of boats, all young men capable of handling an oar, should help out the Committee to enhance the pleasure of the glorious event.

Committee meetings should be held early and often, because there is but a limited time left to lead up to all that is necessary to make the Regatta as good as the best we ever had before. There should be no inclination on the part of any member to act as a mere figure head on the Committee; to be satisfied with merely getting his name on the role and to let others carry the burden of the work that has to be done.

All should take a lesson from the example showed by Mr. Arthur Hancock, the President, who in all past Regattas injected an immense amount of enthusiasm into his efforts on behalf of the great event, and who is to-day just as eager to carry it to a successful conclusion as in the years when his vitality and youthful energy were at their best.

The deserving of a rest from his Regatta labors now after his long and faithful and enthusiastic services, he very generously agrees to lead the Committee again, and we are all delighted he is doing so, but in justice to his willing nature, his younger lieutenants on the Committee should not insist too much on over-taxing this willingness of the genial President.

It is therefore up to the Vice-President, Mr. W. J. Higgins, M.P.A., to help him on as much as possible, and to see such a pace to the Committee's exertion that no words of reproach will be uttered, the day after, that the races were not so good this year as in the palm days when Mr. Hancock possessed the liveliness of younger years.

It would certainly be a great pity to allow the races to decline for it is undoubtedly our greatest civic historical festival, one that appeals to the plain common people more so than to the aristocracy, and therefore for the sake of those large numbers of our citizens who take such a delight therein, all who are capable of helping it out, should come forward and do so.

There are many members of our aristocracy also who have always generously patronized our aquatic Derby. We may be sure that our present Governor will do all in his power to assist, for since he has arrived here, he has evinced an interest in our winter sports that gives promise of a large interest in our Annual Regatta. This would be welcome indeed, for he would thereby show an example to our aristocracy to come forward also and assist in its success.

From the outset, until our club organizations took charge of the racing boats, the merchants and other leading citizens always supplied the rigs and contributed largely in other ways towards the success and perpetuation of the day. Who amongst our elderly citizens does not remember the activities of Walter Grieve, Moses Monroe, Tessier's, Job's, Duder's, and Stewart's firms as well as the Harvey's and Bowring's, year after year, in providing new racing rigs and encouraging all their employees to make up crews whereby to uphold the Regatta and stimulate all to a spirit of friendly rivalry.

The names of the many boats these firms placed upon Quidi Vidi Lake are still treasured in the memory of all old timers. There was notably the famous Volunteer, owned by the firm of Walter Grieve & Co., the Laurine, Bowring's boat, Moses Monroe's Mary, Stewart's historic Heather Belle, built on the Clyde in Scotland, the Dora, the Resolute and others of familiar repute.

Then there was the Rosetta, in which as a Juvenile Nix Chislett, a life long lover of the races and one who takes therein an active interest, yet, first handled a Regatta oar, and with his juvenile companions of that day brought her in to victory a splendid first.

These were the days when practicing began on the harbor about the middle of June, just after the spring supplying trade was over and the stores began to close at 6 o'clock in the evenings till the summer season terminated about the middle of September.

Out upon the waters of the harbor then would the racing crews be seen from 7 in the evening till long after the stars came out, and along the pier heads would be seen citizens of all classes viewing the respective boats and crews and commenting on their prospects of success or otherwise.

This practice on the harbor lasted up to within two or three days of the Regatta, when the boats would be transferred to the Lakeside, brought thither on the shoulders of the various firms employees and there given the final polishing touches of the morning of the races.

We no longer see this harbor practice as all the preparatory work is done on the Lake, and the Club members have replaced the merchants as owners of the rigs, nevertheless the interest in our races has been well sustained down through the year and so we should all see to it again this year, that the latent enthusiasm must be properly developed. There is a lively committee in charge, but they must be backed by public interest and practical support, to accomplish the desirable success.

We shall all miss the late enthusiastic Secretary, Mr. James L. Noonan, in his very much indeed, on the day of the races especially, because of his splendid social personal traits which made him extremely popular with his fellow members on the Committee and with the public generally.

He is replaced, we notice, by another of our estimable citizens, Mr. Charles J. Ellis, who like Regatta enthusiasts feel confident Mr. Ellis will prove a worthy capable and popular successor to the late secretary, the genial Jim Noonan.

From time to time we shall add a few more notes concerning the Regatta of this and other years for publication in the Telegram, until the event is run off, and thus hope by this means to help create as much interest as possible towards the success of our aquatic derby.

Prospecting Party Coming.

LEAVING MONTREAL BY MANOIA.

It is learned that Capt. Jeffery, the original staker of the gold claims at Stag Bay is leaving Montreal by S.S. Manoia with a well equipped party of prospectors engineers and two experienced placer miners. Capt. Jeffery is associated with Mr. Stanley May of the Montreal Stock Exchange and the confidence which he, and the company which he represents (Stag Bay Gold Fields Ltd.) has in the gold possibilities of the Labrador is shown by the fact that all the money to finance the expedition was subscribed by themselves and no attempt was made to place stock in the company on the market.

Dance Preparations.

Preparations are now being made for a dance which will be held in the C.L.B. Armoury on Friday night, June 29th, in aid of Child Welfare and the C.L.B. Cadets. In view of the fact that two such excellent organizations will benefit from the proceeds it is expected that the dance will be well patronized. The catering will be in the capable hands of members of the Child Welfare Association.

No Trace of Child.

POLICE CONTINUE SEARCH.

The police are still continuing a search for four-year-old Bobby Peddie, who disappeared from his home, Rosier's Lane, on Sunday, June 10. Yesterday several constables were engaged all day examining the river bed in the neighbourhood of the Gas Works and where the little fellow was reported as being last seen. An investigation is also being conducted in regard to the various reports of the child's movements, but so far there is no evidence of anyone having seen him since he had left his home to play in the street.

LAVA TORRENT ADVANCING.

CATANIA, June 20. A great lava torrent from Mount Etna, bearing in its flow great masses of earth and volcanic stone, is advancing inexorably, and has already reached the outskirts of the town of Lingua Gioiosa. Confronting it is a molten stream, eight hundred yards wide and nearly thirty feet deep, travelling about forty yards an hour, and unless some miracle happens, the town must go under. Smaller torrents of lava threaten the villages Randasio and Broto.

U.E.W.A. ORDERS GENERAL ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 20. Indianapolis headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America, has ordered an immediate general election of officers in District 28 which includes twelve thousand coal miners of Nova Scotia. A telegram to this effect was received here last night from John L. Lewis, International President.

ETNA DISASTER APPALLING.

CATANIA, June 20. Some reports from the Etna disaster say it is evident that the force of the eruption is about spent, but other quarters report the situation practically unchanged with lava streaming slowly but surely on Lingua Gioiosa, at the rate of about forty yards an hour. During the night the crater was enlarged by renewal of terrible convulsions and its lips, slipping into the seething interior, were hurled to the skies, tumbling down sides of mountains with tremendous clatter. One by one little towns that cling to the mountain's outermost flank, have been evacuated, their inhabitants fleeing with such household possessions as they can carry. The entire landscape is under a grayish powder blanket, and the whole region of the beautiful country has taken on a note of mournful sadness which, with the oppressive heat, gives the aspect of a dead land.

FRANCE WANTS PROTECTION FOR BOND HOLDERS.

LAUSANNE, June 20. The Near East Conference continues suspended pointing to a definite decision by the Powers as to the course to pursue with the Turks, regarding the question of Otoman debts. France is said to be standing out for the complete protection on bond holders.

FUNDING AGREEMENT SIGNED.

WASHINGTON, June 20. A debt funding agreement, providing for the repayment to the United States by Great Britain of a war loan of four billion, six hundred million dollars, has been formally signed, and began its life of sixty-two years yesterday.

FOOD SITUATION SERIOUS.

ESSEN, June 20. The food situation in Ruhr reached such a serious phase yesterday because of transportation difficulties let it be known that if it became any worse the forces of occupation would undertake to have German food cars from frontier to central distribution points. The situation confronting the Germans, who have refused to cooperate with French, has been rendered more difficult by lack of motor trucks and gasoline.

An Open Letter

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

GENTLEMEN—
I beg to remind you of the high ideals for which our profession has always stood, and would ask your co-operation in retaining these ideals. I believe that the majority of the profession will be with us in the attempt to defend our standing in the community.

The Medical profession stands high in every community, and deservedly so. No profession has done more to relieve suffering, and none have given more freely of their time and talents. Take, for instance, the latest example, in the discovery of the cure for diabetes, by Dr. Banting and Mr. Best of Toronto. If these men had kept the discovery secret, and used it for their own gain, they could have become immensely wealthy in a short time. But, instead of this, they gave it to the University of Toronto, to be fully safeguarded for the benefit of humanity, they themselves getting nothing out of it, but the satisfaction of relieving suffering. This is but one of many examples that will occur to you as you read.

But what about the Medical men of St. John's? Are we measuring up to this high ideal? I fear not in some cases. I do not believe that a Medical man in St. John's would supply a morphine habit with unlimited morphine. We would not snatch a slice of bread from a child's hand, nor would we allow anyone to drink water polluted with typhoid. But the so-called "scripts" for liquor have been handed out wholesale, in many cases to men who cannot keep decent boots on their feet, or decent clothes on their backs.

In the name of the Medical profession of St. John's I would therefore cry halt, to those of you who have been "dealing in scripts" for your own personal gain, and would remind you, that you are feeding the appetites of addicts to a drug equal to morphine itself, in its effects upon the human organism.

Yours truly,
N. S. FRASER.

Presentation to Rev. Dr. Greene.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY TENDERS ADDRESS.

On Sunday last at the meeting of the Holy Name Society, the Spiritual Director, Rev. Dr. Greene, was presented with an address of farewell, which was read by President Murphy, expressing the universal regret of all St. John's at the Doctor's departure, particularly the personal and heartfelt feelings of the members of the Holy Name Society. Besides recalling his constant energy and zeal in his everyday spiritual and parochial work; his impartial dealings with all classes, high and low; his special interest in the fostering and encouraging of ecclesiastical vocations; his practical charity shown in his work and help to the poor working boys; the address elaborated on Dr. Greene's live-wire activity for the uplift of the H.N.S. Society's standard; his eloquent and earnest sermons of practical advice and encouragement at meetings, Holy Hours and Tridiums which proved him a Director of Souls; his successful efforts in the temporal and social affairs of the Society which proved him a director of men.

Mr. C. W. Ryan, President of St. Vincent de Paul's Society, in a feeling address praised Dr. Greene's great work in St. John's during the past twelve years; he had reason to know of his interest in the poor. Having had the honor of close connection with him for five years when he (Mr. Ryan) was President of the Holy Name, he was well aware of the Doctor's sterling qualities and worth. St. John's was certainly meeting with a great loss.

Mr. W. F. Frozigan also spoke referring to Dr. Greene's invaluable directorship of the Cathedral ceremonies; he also referred at length to the Night School which he managed for poor boys and to his obtaining for the H.N.S. the new hall for its meetings and recreations.

Dr. Greene replied in a most feeling manner, in an address which will long be remembered—thanking all for their goodness and loyalty. He reminded them that earthly directors may come and go but the one Supreme director under whose glorious banner they were enrolled, was always there to help and encourage, provided they remained true and faithful to their pledges.

WHY BE PROUD?

There are many people who seem to take pride in the fact that they do not take any kind of care of themselves.

I suppose that pride is a reaction against the super-care that they see someone else take.

Every hypochondriac drives someone to the opposite extreme of ostentatiously neglecting his own health to prove to himself and others that he isn't a hypochondriac.

But is that extreme really any happier than the other?

It is foolish to get the habit of fretting over all one's little pains and aches, or fancying that every minor discomfort is the symptom of some fatal disease, of talking frequently about diseases, of destroying your own happiness and casts shadow onto other people's lives.

Just as Foolish.

But isn't that equally likely to be the result of determined neglect of some persistent trouble?

A man I know has recently spent a long siege in hospital with appendicitis. He has suffered from that trouble for years, but has refused to consult a doctor. "I'm not going to run to a doctor every time I feel a pain or an ache," he would say when his wife tried to get him to have something done.

When he did finally go to the hospital, the appendix had ruptured, and what would have been a very simple operation if he had had it done in the earlier stages became a very serious operation from which it took him twice as long to convalesce.

Was there anything to be proud of in having caused himself twice as much misery and expense as if he had been willing to take the advice of his family?

Pain is Nature's Warning.

Pain is Nature's warning that something is wrong in our complex mechanism, so much more intricate, so much more wonderful than the finest piece of machinery ever built.

A small pain may mean some temporary maladjustment that will right itself. It is only the hypochondriac who worries over every little temporary pain.

But when pain or discomfort persists, in spite of our attempts to ignore it or to banish it by attention to the simple rules of health, isn't it wiser to take the machine to the physician and have it looked over?

Better, surely, than to have it stop suddenly at some time when you have urgent need of its services.

You Can't Be Sick Alone.

If we lived to ourselves alone this deliberate neglect of Nature's warnings might be foolish but not culpable.

But no one does live to himself alone. Our lives are part of a complex pattern. Sickness almost always puts a burden on someone else—if not of extra work and extra expense, then of anxiety and nerve strain. It is wrong to be sick if it can possibly be helped.

It is wrong to make oneself sick by fretting so much about oneself that one weakens one's own resistance. It is also wrong to make oneself sick by neglecting unmistakable warnings.

Don't be thinking all the time of trouble—but when trouble intrudes itself on your notice, deal with it before it become serious trouble. That's not cowardice. It's common sense.

Forty Million Lost Days.

ENORMOUS FOUR YEAR DRAIN ON BRITAIN DUE TO LABOR DISPUTES. CHANGES MUST BE MADE IN ESSENTIAL CONDITIONS.

B. SEEBORN ROWNTREE.

During the last four years, over forty million working days have been lost in Great Britain owing to strikes and lockouts, and on the average the whole of the gain in the worker's standard of living which was obtained during the war has been lost.

Taking these two statements as his text, Mr. Rowntree in an instructive article in the Contemporary Review, suggests practical changes in industrial conditions which he feels must be made before any improvement in the relations between labor and capital can be hoped for.

Ask any hundred business men, says Mr. Rowntree, why they are in business, and ninety-nine will answer: "What do you think? To make money, of course!" Ask any hundred workers why they work, and ninety-nine will reply: "To earn my living." Now, so long as those are the replies which instinctively "leap to the tongue" when we are asked why we are working, there is little hope of making rapid progress in solving the Labor Problem. So long as we accustom ourselves to the idea that industry is merely a scramble, and that everyone is trying to see what he can get out of it for himself, so long shall we have unrest, discord, and insecurity; so long shall we continue to use such phrases as "Capital is on the top," or "Labor is on the top," phrases which imply a perpetual conflict. It is this conception of industry that we must change if the Labor Problem is to be solved, and in changing it we shall find ourselves driven to reconsider our relations to the various classes of men and women who make up the State.

What practical changes in industrial conditions should we strive for? Speaking as one who for over thirty years has been engaged in industry, and who has been dealing for the greater part of that time with trade unions and labor problems, I have come quite clearly to the conclusion that, whatever may be the ultimate framework of industry, or by whatever name we may call our industrial system, whether it be Capitalism or Socialism, or anything else, there are certain fundamental conditions which must be observed if the fabric is to endure. I have arrived at my analysis of these conditions slowly, as the outcome of experience and observation.

The essential conditions to be fulfilled are concerned with: wages, hours, economic security, the status of the worker, and his share in the prosperity of the industry in which he is engaged. I propose briefly to indicate the changes which, in my opinion, are absolutely necessary under each of these headings.

Wages.—There can, I think, be no doubt at all that before the war millions of people in this country belonged to families whose total earnings, no matter how economically spent, were insufficient to meet the bare needs of physical efficiency. The war brought about a marked improvement in the economic condition of practically all wage earners, but, taking the nation as a whole, that improvement has been lost. The estimated average increase in wages over 1914 now coincides almost precisely with the estimated increase in the cost of living. I think, therefore, that we are fully justified in assuming that, as a decade ago, there are in England millions of people who are living below the poverty line. While that is the case we shall never have industrial peace; indeed, we ought not to expect or even desire it. All who, either directly as employers, or indirectly as shareholders or financiers, are engaged in industry, should set before them as a definite object the elimination of "poverty wages," and the payment throughout the industry of minimum wages which, in the case of a man, will enable him to marry, to live in a decent house, and to bring up a family of normal size in a state of physical efficiency, whilst leaving a margin for contingencies and recreation, and which, in the case of a woman, will enable her to live in similar comfort whilst providing for herself alone.

Hours.—Since a forty-eight-hour week is so nearly universal in Britain, I need not occupy space in asking what may be considered the rightful claims of the worker with regard to leisure. I think it will be generally agreed that no system of industry is satisfactory unless it allows him ample time for adequate self-realization outside the factory gates.

Economic Security.—It is not easy for those who have never really known the full meaning of economic insecurity to appreciate how heavily it weighs on the minds of the workers. No scheme of industry can be regarded as satisfactory in which this sense of insecurity continues. In industry as we know it to-day, the average worker is always liable to get himself robbed of his means of livelihood, whether by unemployment due to trade depression, by long-continued sickness, or by old age. The level of wages in this country, save in a few exceptional trades, is too low to enable him, unaided, to make such provision as will safeguard him from risks to which he is constantly exposed or to render his economic position secure. There will be differences of opinion as to what the benefits should be. I would suggest that if they provided every worker with half his normal wages when unemployed, with an addition of 10 per cent. for a dependent wife and 5 per cent. for each dependent child under sixteen, with a maximum of 75 per cent. of his earnings, this problem might be regarded as adequately solved.

The Status of the Worker.—Another condition which must find a place in any industrial programme is that the status of the workers shall be such as befits free men living in a democratic country in the twentieth century. Employers have for so many generations been accustomed to being "masters in their own house," that they are conscious of something like an electric shock when it is proposed that workers shall be given a quite definite say in determining the conditions under which they work. If, however, we are to solve the Labor Problem, we must not allow ourselves to be bound by old customs. We must be prepared to investigate every question on its merits, and when we approach this demand of the workers with an open mind it does not after all seem unreasonable.

Giving the workers a share in the prosperity of the industry in which he is engaged.—I now come to my last point. I believe that no scheme of industry can be regarded as satisfactory unless the workers have a direct share in the prosperity of the enterprise in which they are engaged. This appears to me to be an inevitable and logical outcome of the conception that industry exists for the benefit of the community generally, and not merely for that of a favoured few. To express this conclusion in practical terms, some scheme of profit-sharing or co-partnership is obviously desirable.

Now profit-sharing establishes a fresh relationship. Its principle is this. The workers receive their standard wage, and Capital also receives its standard wage, with a premium varying in accordance with the risk run. If the enterprise succeeds in earning more than will pay its expenses, including these two items, the surplus is divided among those who have contributed towards its creation, both workers and capitalists receiving a share. The usual argument against profit-sharing is to ask, "But what about loss-sharing?" In the scheme that I have outlined, however, Capital receives, in addition to the wages of secured capital, such a premium as may be necessary to cover its peculiar risks in business enterprises. This premium is paid before any question arises of a surplus being divided between Capital and Labor, and, therefore, by the very fact of its payment, the workers have contributed towards safeguarding the industry against loss.

Questions Asked by Opposition.

On the Order Paper yesterday the following questions were asked:—

Mr. Higgins—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister if it is the intention of the Government to have allocations for public works under the direction of the Dept. of Public Works and the Dept. of Marine and Fisheries made upon the recommendation of the elected representatives of the various districts.

The Premier answered that any person approved of by the Government or Minister in charge of a department could make recommendation for allocations and they would receive consideration.

Mr. Walsh—To ask the Rt. Hon. the Prime Minister to lay on the Table of the House the following statements:

(a) The number of men given employment at construction or any other class of work in connection with the Humber Valley Proposition between May 2nd, 1922, and June 10th, 1923; (b) If any men were so employed during this period, by whom were they employed? (c) How many Newfoundlanders are now employed at this work? (d) If the passing of the Humber Bill will give immediate employment to four thousand men including those already employed? (e) If each Electoral District is to be given its proportionate per capita of the work? (f) Will the passes or employment tickets be given on recommendations of elected representatives?

The Premier replied that there were now 1003 men employed on the Humber. They were engaged by the agent of the Sir Armstrong Whitworth Co. who will attend to this work.

Mr. Walsh—To ask the Rt. Hon. the Prime Minister, in the absence of the Hon. Minister of Agriculture and Mines, if it is the intention of the Government to give or make any distribution of seed potatoes the present spring.

Replying for the Minister of Agriculture the Premier said a small quantity of seed potatoes had been given out, but none were distributed free so far.

Mr. Walsh—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister if the seat of Hon. Dr. Campbell, in the Legislative Council was vacated on his becoming a candidate for the House of Assembly, according to the terms of Section 8 of the Legislative Disabilities Act, Chapter 4, Consolidated Statutes, and if not, why not; also if it was so vacated has that gentleman been re-appointed to be Honourable, and if so to lay on the Table a copy of the Commission re-appointing him; and if he has not been re-appointed, to state by what authority he took his seat in that House at the sitting last Thursday.

The Premier answered that Hon. Dr. Campbell was re-appointed to the Upper House the day that he (Mr. Walsh) was sworn in a member of the Legislature.

The questions asked by Mr. Fox in relation to the command of S.S. Watchful are answered in the proceedings published elsewhere.

Mr. James Moore asked for copies of allocations from the departments of Fisheries, Agriculture and Mines and Public Works and documents respecting same.

The Prime Minister replied he would get same by applying to the departments in person.

Sir M. P. Cashin—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister to lay on the Table a statement showing the amount expended in this Colony up to date on account of the Humber enterprise and a copy of the Order, or Orders in Council in connection with the same. A copy of the agreement with the Bank of Montreal for the loan of the said money, and a statement as to terms of repayment, etc., also a statement of the amount expended in England to date on account of the same enterprise, a copy of all correspondence with the British Government or any department thereof and with the Trade Facilities Board in relation to the same.

Will be answered at the next session.

Mr. Cashin—To ask Hon. the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to lay on the Table of the House a statement showing the amount of money allocated to Ferryland District by the Department of Marine and Fisheries, from March the 20th, 1922, to May the 31st, 1923; to give the names of the parties to whom allocated; the amount allocated to each; and what work was performed. Also the original returns sent in.

It is hard to describe the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes adequately, for there is no other region with which to compare it. Niagara finds a rival in Victoria Falls. The Rotorua district of New Zealand is a competitor of the Yellowstone. The crater of Katmai must stand comparison with Kilauea and Crater Lake. Not so with the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes. It is unique. Nothing approaching it has ever been seen by the eye of man. To find a parallel we must search the records of geology, for here we have such a volcanic outburst as the geologist finds recorded in the rocks of the past, but never before has had an opportunity to observe in the world of the present.

Beyond Comparison.

In the side of the vents and the quantity of smoke given off the valley is so far beyond other volcanic districts that no other place can for a moment be compared with it. Well within truth, one might say that the sum total of the emanations from all the other volcanoes of the American Continent, from the Aleutians to Patagonia, except during rare periods of a dangerous eruption, is much less than given off within the radius of vision from the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes.

Indeed, if one could pick up all the other volcanoes in the whole world and set them down together, side by side as close as they could stand, they would present much less of a spectacle, always excepting a period of dangerous eruption.

So remote are these that members of the National Geographic Society's expeditions are the only white men who have yet explored them; but they are not inaccessible. A broad, deep harbor renders a landing easy, and fifty miles of roadway will place this natural wonderland within the compass of a day's automobile trip from the harbor, named Geographic Harbor, in honor of the National Geographic Society, which discovered and explored the region.—Family Herald.

The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes

"The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes" is the title of a volume just issued by the National Geographic Society of the United States, the author being Dr. Robert F. Griggs, leader of an expedition fitted out by the Society to study the eruption of Mount Katmai in Alaska, and discoverer of the valley which furnishes a title to the volume.

Although unaware at the time of the mighty upheaval of Mount Katmai, almost every inhabitant of the continent of America felt its effect, one of which was the cold, damp summer of 1912, caused by the interception of so much sunlight by the dust from the eruption, which quickly was carried around the world. Even in cloudless Sahara the sky was overcast; and it is believed that a succession of such eruptions could plunge the earth into another ice age.

Katmai's explosion was unnoticed because it was so remote. Had the upheaval taken place in New York the sulphurous fumes would have polluted the air everywhere east of the Rocky Mountains, the noise would have reverberated like an artillery duel across the Central States, and the lower Hudson itself would have been a giant tomb with few ruins even to tell the story. At least, that is what Dr. Griggs believes.

Fortunately, Katmai's eruption provided geographers one of their greatest opportunities for studying volcanic phenomena without any human toll. Katmai Village, twenty miles from the crater, was deserted because all the natives had gone fishing, according to their summer custom. Kodiak, the nearest settlement of consequence, and the most important town in an area larger than Ohio, is a sleepy village of 400 people, where a mosquitoie Russian church is a relic of the one-time Russian America.

A Foot or More of Ash.

An area around Katmai half again bigger than Delaware was covered with a foot or more of ash, enough to destroy all but the hardiest herbaceous plants. Before the explosion a sun-baking blanket of incandescent ash burst through orifices in the floor of the valley. When the explosion came two cubic miles of material was blown off the top of the volcanic mountains, and its present whereabouts still is a mystery to scientists.

The aftermath of this eruption promises to be one of the most interesting national heritages. Beyond Katmai lies a great valley, from the floor of which ascend countless columns of steam. These great, rolling clouds of vapour, which go billowing down the valley, sometimes trailing out before the wind a mile or more, have an uncanny fascination.

Fumaroles, or vents, through which the steam escapes, disclose encrustations of the greatest beauty, variety and color. There are masses of bright yellow sulphur, chunks of ash turned red and blue, and white masses of siliceous material.

Bright colors are not limited to the large and vigorous fumaroles. Over many hundreds of acres in the valley, where steam is everywhere seeping up from beneath, the ground glows with the most brilliant colors imaginable. Sometimes it is black, with the character and consistency of asphalt. This grades through various shades of blue into delicate light-seal gray or alternates as the chemical conditions change, with the various shades of red, and round about are the more ordinary yellows and browns.

After a trip across such an area one's shoes, covered with the particulate muds, take on a resemblance to an artist's palette, daubed with all possible colors in a confused medley. The fine-grained mud is indeed so similar to artist's pigments, that it may be readily used as a substitute.

Metals Melted in Hot Gases.

The temperature of many of the fumaroles is very high. Lead and zinc were melted in the hot gases issuing from a number and aluminum utensils placed in them became soft. One was found to have a temperature of almost 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit. Although the emanations consisted almost entirely of superheated steam, the temperature was so high that a stick thrust into the fumes smoldered and burst into flame.

These fuming holes were harnessed by the party which discovered the valley, and made to serve as cook-stoves. By selecting holes of various temperatures it was possible to warm and boil, bake and fry food. There is a natural hot-and-cold bathing pool. At one end the water, fresh from snow banks is ice cold, at the other, hot. Between, one may find water of almost any intermediate temperature.

SHELBY TOWN.

"I hear men talk of Shelby Town wherever I may go; the place has gained a great renown," I said to Richard Roe. "Some Edison, we may suppose, in a started business there; some man whose genius flames and glows like fireworks in the air. Perchance some Luther Burbank trains the vines of early peas, and with unceasing care and pains grows beets on turnip trees. When some great man his genius gives to an instructive game, the little burg in which he lives will share his lustrous fame. And so I wot that Shelby Town must harbor such a joy; perhaps a bard whose heading down an epoch-making lay. Perhaps a surgeon who has skill to make the ailing well, or a musician who can thrill and like a seraph-yell. Or peradventure Shelby Town is such a beautiful place, in loveliness it seems to drown, a spot of charm and grace. Or it may have a college great where learned professors stand, and teach the adolescent skate a culture truly grand." "Your guess is poor," said Richard Roe; "that town is on the map because a million chumps will go to see two bruisers scrap. A million chumps who make me grieve will watch two swatters eat, and say of Shelby when they leave, 'The village God forgot!'"

U.S. Facing Another Coal Strike.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—(By Canadian Press)—Recent disclosure that the country is facing the danger of another anthracite coal strike, which would be harmful to Canada as well as to the United States, has served to stir new interest among members of Congress and officials in the question of what the government is going to do about regulations of the coal industry or dealing with that industry in some fashion. A large share of the public, especially in New England and the Southern States, has not forgotten the hardship which it suffered last winter; what it had to go through both as to lack of coal and high prices, to say nothing of interior coal. It was hoped there would not be a repetition of that sort of thing next winter, but the best-advised authorities here say the danger of it is real. If another strike develops, it will doubtless be in September. The contract between coal miners and operators in the anthracite fields ends August 31. A strike would be a grave thing because it would break right at the time when cool weather and autumn would be coming on. Moreover, there is no surplus worth while stored up. Feeling of the public in New England, New York and northern states over another strike would intensify it.

GOVT. WILL TAKE COMMAND IN CASE OF STRIKE.

It is believed here to be almost inevitable that if there is another strike by the anthracite coal miners, there will be such demand by the public and in Congress that the Government take over the mines as to be almost irresistible. At the least, it will result in legislation for the drastic regulation of the coal industry, including both anthracite and bituminous. Members of Congress generally would have to be legislation for regulation of the coal industry. They recognize that if there is another strike, they will be under tremendous public pressure for drastic action, and that the people are rapidly losing patience with the fuel situation and its uncertainties. No doubt is entertained, moreover, that Canada, which has been giving attention to solution of its coal situation recently, will feel impelled to take vigorous action to assure fuel to its people if there is another strike. The government commission which is investigating the coal industry by direction of Congress will make a report July 1 on anthracite coal, and is expected in September to make a final report embodying its recommendations for legislation on the coal industry. It is well-known that the coal interests have been doing their utmost to make a showing to the commission which would lead that body to make a mild report. However, if there is another strike, Congress will not be satisfied with any mild report from the coal commission or recommendation for gentle and innocuous regulation of the coal industry and will apply either stringent regulations or go to government ownership outright. It is true that there is much opposition in Congress to government ownership, but it is also true that there is more public sentiment for radical government action as to the country's fuel supply than as to anything else.

Corns

Just Say Blue-jay

The simplest way to end a corn is Blue-jay. Stops the pain instantly. Then the corn loosens and comes out. Made in clear liquid and in thin plasters. The action is the same.

official of the company, talking with the employees of the Sydney collieries have returned to work. The suspension seems to have been the result of a misunderstanding which has been satisfactorily cleared up. The employees, whose return was objected to, have been reinstated in some instances at their usual work, and in other instances at a production character.
Some of the time there has been a lack of coal producers at the mine's mines, and at the same time the company has been carrying an unusually large number of men on construction work, underground and work not directly produc-

The policy has been to reorganize working force at the mines, so as to give the maximum amount of employment and to increase the output of coal producers.
It is understood that the union members are not opposed to the reinstatement and to transfer of men to non-productive work to produc-employment."

Immigration Increasing.

June 15.—Immigration is steadily growing during the months. In May alone, 3,019
Canada from the United States compared with only 642 in of this year. There is, however, a decrease in immigration from the United States as compared with the 1922 figures.
The recent recovery in this class of immigration is regarded by officials as an indication that the efflux of the international boundary is stabilized.

Just Folks.
By EDGAR A. GURNEY.

THINGS.
I could sell you the house and could sell you the chairs, I could sell you the pictures which hang on the walls, I could sell you the curtains and sell you the stairs, But you wouldn't catch their real beauty at all. You wouldn't see what I see in that chair, The lost little girl who had once nestled there.

You wouldn't know as you looked at that scene Of the sheep in the meadow, hung over the estate, With the hills in the distance, the grass glowing green, That it has a story that it could re- late. You'd never see the small finger- prints fall Of the baby who loved every lamb that is there.

You'd never think as you climbed up the stairs, Of the feet that had raced where you wearily tread, You'd never know that this small room was theirs, And this was their table, and this was their bed, These are things which you look at, just things which you see, But things which are freighted with beauty to me.

The Lighter Side.

THAT DYING CALF EXPRESSION.
The boys have put on that dying calf expression and the fappers are adding a more deceptive kogoo look into their eyes. The oak trees are budding out and the dogwoods are in bloom and by heck we are almost prepared to say that Summer hex cum Half dollars have trends on them like auto tires. That's so they can travel fast without skidding.

He (fervently)—I could die for you. She (with sarcasm)—All right—go jump in the lake.

NEVER SAY BALD.
Day by day In every way I tried to make my hair grow; I soaked each pore With dope galore But still I was a scarecrow.

Then night by night, When mind was right, With neither doubt nor question, I visioned hair A-growing there In answer to suggestions.

Now hour by hour, With all my power, I scold at dope and Doc Coney, "Walls may have ears, but I stand serene— I bought a wig the other day."

STYLE NOTE.
Bow legged men are hoping that peg-top trousers of the basky type will again appear on the scene at an early date.

Lives there a newlywed with soul so dead who never to himself has said, "My God! What Bread!"

DO YOU KNOW HIM?
Why is it that a man with plenty of money will spend fifty cents each for his cigars without a complaint and jump at the chance to pick up a little Scotch at a hundred and fifty dollars a case and then go into a spash over the extravagance of his wife because she has paid twenty-five cents a cake to provide the family and guests with really good toilet soap?

You can't beat the weather prophe- ts. They are already predicting a hot summer. We can't remember any cool ones.

According to the reports coming from that House of David, trial in Michigan the bewhiskered boss of that saintly place was a regular cut-up.

ALL SAID AND DONE.
The speedometer said 80 miles an hour The Constable said it was ninety. The natives said it was a crime. He said it was the life; but— His friends said it with flowers.

The joke is told of on the mayor of San Francisco who talked into a broadcasting outfit an invitation to everyone who heard him to send him a telegram, collect, and found, next day, the bill reach $12,000.

One of the things an enquirer wants to know is how he is to keep an automo- mobile and the Sabbath at the same time.

A Michigan man who was blind all through the short alkfr period has re- gained his sight. Who says there is no such thing as hard luck.

A GRAVE MISTAKE.
"Hello! I want to order a box for to-morrow."
"What size?"
"There will be six of us in the party."
"But they come in single sizes— we'll have to have a 'dead special'."
"Is this the 'Lover'?"
"No, it is the 'underbaker'."

Bird signing is becoming popular over radio. Why not broadcast try- ing ham and eggs from the kitchens of some of the affluent.

Wallace Silverwear.

Is your Table Silver as good to-day as when you bought it?

Have you noticed that at the parts most exposed to wear, the plate has become worn?

Do you think this condition of your Silver is in keeping with your idea of a well appointed table?

Then why not, when you decide on replacing your old ware, give place to it with the "Wallace" Brand, the Silver that refuses to wear and is guaranteed without time limit.

Start with the Tea Spoons and gradually complete your Set with the one pattern—there are several for you to choose from and the price is very moderate.

Tea Spoons cost $3.00 for a Dozen.
