

The Pantry Shelf Dairy

Pure, fresh milk, concentrated—more than twice as rich as ordinary milk—always in perfect condition from day to day—Pet Milk is the modern pantry shelf dairy.

Pet Milk is fresh milk. Put in sealed containers and sterilized within a few hours after it comes from the cow, Pet Milk comes to you always fresh and sweet.

In place of cream, Pet Milk gives always the same fine flavor to the coffee. It is splendid on fruit.

For cooking Pet Milk gives the "cream and butter" flavor that can only be had by adding a lot of butter where ordinary milk is used.

Your grocer has it. It costs no more than ordinary milk.

A QUEEN UNCROWNED

THE STORY IN THE LONE INN.

CHAPTER XV.

"Alfred," said Mr. De Vere gently, for there was something thrilling in this shrinking off of all.

The young man lifted his head, and raised his eyes, and his uncle started to see how pale, and cold, and stern he looked.

"I am sorry, if this unpleasant scene has pained you, but it was unavoidable. Dinner is waiting—will you come down? You have tasted nothing since breakfast."

Captain Disbrowe gently placed Orrie on the ground and arose.

"Of course you will not think of leaving us for a few days, now. It will be so lonely here that we can ill spare you."

"Thank you! I believe I shall carry out my original desire, and leave to-day," he said, in a voice of chilling coldness.

"Leave to-day! My dear Alfred, you do not mean it!"

He bowed slightly.

"Will you have the goodness to deliver my luggage to whoever I may send for it to-morrow—and make my adieux to Miss De Vere and Frank!"

"Alfred!—my dear boy!—what do you mean?"

He was almost pitiful in his earnestness, and in the gathering sense of his loneliness, and he looked earnestly, wistfully, in his nephew's face. But that proud, full, handsome face was as cold and inflexible now, as his own had been a few short moments before, when listening to another pleader.

"I am going, sir. I thank you for all your kindness to me since I came. Good-by."

"Alfred, you are angry?"

"No, sir—Not that I am aware of."

"You are more—you are grieved hurt, and deeply offended."

He only made a motion with his hand, and turned to leave the room.

"No; you shall not go!" said his uncle, sternly, "until you tell me what this means. It is because she, Ja—"

"Excuse me, sir!—I do not care for hearing that name again."

"Is it because she is gone?"

"Not because she is gone," he said, coldly, "but because of the way she went."

"She was guilty!"

"She may be. You ought to know best, since you have known her longest."

"She has deceived me!"

"Well; so you told herself."

"And she did not deny it."

"Pardon me—I think she did!"

"Well; what matter?" said his uncle, impatiently; "she was guilty, none the less. So I could not act otherwise than I have done."

"I do not presume to criticize your conduct."

"Yet you are angry. Why is it?"

"I have been deceived—that's all," said Disbrowe quietly.

"Deceived?"

"Yes, sir!"

"How?"

"The person I was led to believe your daughter, my cousin, and a young lady, turns out to be a wife, a mother, and the daughter of one whom she herself justly called the greatest villain unhung!"

"Do you love her still?"

"Excuse me answering that question, and allow me to bid you, once more, farewell."

"You will go?"

A bow was his answer.

"I have acted for the best, and yet you all turn against me. I loved her myself, and yet, because I obeyed the command of justice, I am looked upon as a monster."

"Charity is as great a virtue as justice."

"Good-by, Alfred."

"Farewell, sir."

They shook hands, but how cold and quiet one hand was!

Disbrowe turned to quit the room, and his uncle sank into a chair and buried his face in his hands. A child's shrill scream echoed through the house, and little Orrie was clinging to him, wildly.

"Oh, don't go!—stay with me!"

He stooped and put his arm around her.

"You must be quiet, Orrie, and let me go—I can't stay."

"Well, take me with you, then?"

"No, I cannot do that, either. You must stay here. If you cry, now, I shall not like you. Will you be quiet?"

"Yes," sobbed Orrie.

"Then, good-by! Now let me go."

He kissed her tenderly. "For her mother's sake," he said, gently, and then he let her go, and quitted the room.

He ordered his horse, and in a few moments was in the saddle, and galloping away, as if the archfiend himself was after him, toward the Mermaid Inn. He knew he would hardly reach it that night; but he would almost as soon have passed it in a wolf's den, as under the roof from which Jaquetta had been expelled.

How he thought and thought, as he rode along, until though became agony, and he dashed over the ground like one mad to escape himself. He felt sure that they had taken her to the lone inn, and he was glad that it would be dark long before he reached it, so he would not be obliged to look even on the house that held her. Not for words would he have looked on that fair, bright face again—not for ten thousand worlds would he have touched that small, white hand it had once been such happiness to hold. He tried to shut out the "haunting shape, the image gay," that flashed before him in all its beauty, as if in deriding mockery, until his very brain reeled. He dashed and plunged furiously along through the deepening night, almost mad with impatience to reach the Mermaid. There was a possibility of his meeting Captain Nick Tempest there, and a diabolical determination filled his heart that one or the other should leave it a dead man. The Spanish boy, too—he felt as if it would be a direct mercy from heaven to twist his neck for him—and, in his present savage mood, he could have done it without remorse.

The daylight faded, and faded, behind the western hills, and the holy calm of a soft spring night settled over moor, and forest, and flowing river. Up rose the "young May moon" serene and silvery, smiling down like an angel-face on the young rider dashing along the lonely road at such a frenzied pace. There was something of heaven in the holy hush and drowsy calm of that bright, moonlit night, and something of its peace stole into the passion-tossed heart of the young Englishman. He looked up at the face of the serene sky, where the serene moon smiled, and reverently uncovered his head, and by the deep-solenn beauty of the pale, bright night. The cool breeze lifted lightly the clustering locks of his dark hair, and calmed the feverish brow beneath, until his high heart-beating subsided, and he rode along in a subdued and decidedly more Christian mood.

The eastern sky was ablaze with the crimson and gold heralds of the coming morn, when the tired horse and rider halted at the door of the Mermaid Inn. Everything was profoundly still, the shutters closed, and the door barred, and his master far in the land of dreams. But our impatient young Briton cared little what brilliant visions of princely custom old Bob Rowle was indulging in; and with the butt end of his horse-whip, knocked furiously at the door in a way that might have awoken the dead. Ten minutes elapsed—during which Disbrowe kept up a steady canonade at the door, until there seemed some danger of his beating it down altogether; and then an upper window was opened, a red wooden nightcap protruded, and a startled voice demanded who was there.

"A tired traveler. How long do you intend to keep me waiting here? Come down and open the door, you old villain!"

Thus civilly apostrophized, Mr. Rowle drew in his head, shuffled downstairs, and blinking very much, held the door open for his early customer to enter.

"Where is my horse to go? See that he is attended to directly; and let me have a bed as soon as possible. I feel completely used up."

Old Bob led the way upstairs to a small hole in the wall containing a bed and a chair, and informed Disbrowe it was his "best bedroom."

"Oh, it will do well enough," said the young man, casting a careless glance around. "See that my horse is well cared for and carefully rubbed down."

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Rowle.

"And look here, my friend, what do they call you?" said Disbrowe, directing himself to his coat and boots.

Wind Storm Causes Disaster During French Air Manoeuvres

"Prosecution Would Give Communists Advertising Wanted" Says MacDonald—Newspaper Comment on Political Situation.

NOT GUILTY OF PIRACY CHARGE.

MONTREAL, Oct. 9. Captain Samuel Forde, charged with pirating the steamer Luton of her liquor cargo off Rum Row last October, was found not guilty by a jury in the Court of King's Bench this afternoon. In his summing up of the evidence Judge Demers declared that there had been an incredible amount of lying during the trial, telling the jurors that there are perjurers in this case on one side or the other. The judge's remarks were prompted by the vast amount of contradictory evidence given by various witnesses.

FRENCH AVIATORS KILLED.

PARIS, Oct. 9. Two army aviators were killed and 11 airplanes were wrecked in a series of accidents caused by a terrific windstorm yesterday that caused the sudden cancellation of the army air manoeuvres intended to be held near Versailles and Rambouillet. The aviator was killed in a short fall near Le Bourget, a minute after they had taken off with their squadron.

CROWDS WITNESS PRINCE'S DEPARTURE.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 8. "Was au revoir, not good-bye that R.H. Prince of Wales waived from his private car Balmoral, as his special train pulled out of the C.P.R. Station yesterday afternoon. "I've enjoyed myself thoroughly and thank you all for my good time. I'm coming back again two years hence and intend to stay longer." This was the message he gave Mayor Owen as he shook hands with the city fathers on the station platform. Next year he was going to South Africa. There was a tremendous crowd at the station to see the Prince pass through to his train.

PREMIER McDONALD'S VIEW.

LONDON, Oct. 9. (Canadian Press)—Premier MacDonald's view was that the prosecution of the editor (Campbell) of the communist paper, "The Workers'

Weekly, on a charge of sedition, would give the Communists the advertising they wanted." This and some other phrases used in the defence of the Attorney General, Sir Patrick Hastings, in the House of Commons last night in connection with the withdrawal of the prosecution in question indicate a line of thought which now seems to be coming into prominence gradually. Ought not Attorney General Hastings rather to be censured for having ever started the prosecution instead of for having withdrawn it. This question is now being asked by some of the papers. "Is it seriously suggested," one writer asks, "that British soldiers could be seduced from their allegiance by writings in an obscure sheet? If any soldier had been foolish enough to start an agitation in barracks, would not the commanding officer readily and effectually have quashed his communism by a period of confinement in the cells?" Sir Patrick Hastings in the House of Commons last night, dwelt at length with similar prosecutions which were undertaken during the war but not pushed to a conclusion.

PRESS COMMENT ON POLITICAL SITUATION.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—(Can. Press)—Following are some interesting points from newspaper comment on the political situation in Great Britain: Morning Post (Conservative). Sir Patrick Hastings' defence was that he had done nothing and that others had done it before. The Manchester Guardian (Liberal): The fall of the first Labour Government comes when nobody desires it and when the country least of all desires an election.

FEEL IT HEAL

MENTHOLATUM
LONDON

The Daily Mail (Conservative): The Liberals decided to join forces with the Tories in an anti-Labour alliance. Daily Telegraph (Conservative): The Government anticipated its certain fall upon the Anglo-Russian Treaty by no more than a few weeks. Westminster Gazette (Liberal): The Government must abide the consequences (referring to the outcome of the withdrawal of the prosecution of the editor of the Workers' Weekly on a charge of sedition) Mr. MacDonald treated every request for information as though it were an insult.

A GATEWAY TO GREATER VICTORY.

LONDON, Oct. 9. The conference of the Parliamentary Labor Party, begun yesterday morning just before the opening of the momentous House of Commons session which resulted in the defeat of Great Britain's first Labor Government, was continued to-day when it turned into something which resembled a joy feast and an enthusiastic election campaign meeting. When Attorney General Hastings arrived at the conference the delegates rose en masse, cheered for several minutes and sang "The Red Flag" with whole-hearted justness. The conference decided to abandon, in the light of yesterday's developments, unimportant points in the agenda and to deal with others as part of the election campaign. J. R. Clynes, Lord Privy Seal, told the meeting that the Prime Minister was with the King at Buckingham Palace, whereupon there were shouts of "He's in good hands." Continuing, Mr. Clynes said Labor had cause to be proud of its Premier and never more than in this hour of defeat which would be the gateway to a greater victory.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

LONDON, Oct. 9. The present composition of the House of Commons membership is as follows:—Conservatives, 246; Laborites, 187; Liberals, 156; Ulster Unionists, 11; Co-operative, 8; Independent, 3; Independent Liberals, 2; Nationalists, 2; Sinn Fein, 1. Total 614. The total membership of the House of Commons is 615, but there is a vacancy for London University constituency.

CANADIAN M.P. DEAD.

OTTAWA, Oct. 9. Word was received here this morning of the death of C. A. Gauvreau, M.P. for Temiscouata. Mr. Gauvreau was a Liberal and has been in the House of Commons since 1879. His death creates the third vacancy, the other two being West Hastings, Ont., and Yale, B.C.

Vital Facts for Women

Sooner or later almost every woman is brought face to face with the fact that she is a victim of some weakness or ailment peculiar to her sex. It may be the young woman suffering from pain or irregularities, a mother who has brought on some weakness or displacement from overwork, or the middle aged woman passing through the most critical period of her life. For each of these trying periods Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved the greatest boon ever given to women, and there are women living in every town and city in the country who testify to its value.

JACKIE COOGAN REVEALS GREAT GENIUS IN "DADDY."

Jackie Coogan in "DADDY"

With his appearances in "Daddy," little Jackie Coogan about completes the cycle of human emotions, for in this newest picture play, written for their boy by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Coogan, the youthful genius is called upon, in one scene, to sound the deepest of tragic notes. It was the performance of this role and scene that evoked from Will H. Hays his tribute of tears and the remark that "the world needs more pictures like this." Nobody better than Jackie's parents could write a story for him, calculated to explore every angle of the boy's versatile genius. In "Peck's Bad Boy" the impishness of the lad was specially revealed; in "Trouble" the note of pathos was injected with the merriment that is Jackie's birthright; in "My Boy" humor abounded, and in "Oliver Twist" the courage, tenderness and nobility of an upright youth were revealed. In "Daddy," the capacity of Jackie Coogan as a tragic emotionalist is so superbly disclosed that his work in this picture will forever stamp him as one of the greatest actors of all time, regardless of age! "Daddy" is a First National picture.

Killed at Humber Canal

Detective Peter Lee received a message yesterday from Humber Canal, conveying the sad intelligence that Patrick Lee, aged 19 years, had been killed there a day or two previous, and that the body was being forwarded to his home in Holyrood for burial. Mr. Ambrose Lee, father of the victim is accompanying the remains. The message gave no particulars as to how the young man met his death.

Cause of Typhoid Outbreak

Recently the Municipal Council asked the Medical Officer of Health if he could explain the cause of the outbreak of Typhoid Fever. Dr. Bremm's reply is as follows:—
Department of Public Health,
St. John's, Newfoundland,
October 8th, 1924.

J. J. Mahoney,
City Clerk.
Dear Sir.—In reply to your letter of October 4th, I beg to say that, in my opinion, the present prevalence of typhoid fever in the City is due to the infection of food, milk, etc., by flies, which have been particularly numerous this season on account of the unusual warmth and dryness of the summer. The house-fly is now known to be one of the principal agencies in the spread of disease, and there is little doubt that the outbreak will soon come to an end if all flies could be excluded from the dwelling-houses, and food, milk, etc., properly protected from contamination by these pests. To this cause also has been attributed this summer more fatal prevalence this summer of infantile-diarrhoea, with the consequent high rate of infant mortality. The only way in which the fly danger can be radically and effectively prevented is by improvement in the housing and general sanitation and cleanliness of the City, but a very great improvement would be effected if citizens would keep the fly out of their houses by screening doors and windows and would protect food and milk from infection by using simple gauze covers.

There is no reason to believe that the water supply is in any way responsible for the prevalence of typhoid. The history and distribution of the outbreak are opposed to such a supposition, and the City water supply, when examined recently, showed a high degree of purity, both bacteriologically and chemically.

Fortunately the typhoid cases in the city have, so far, been of a mild type. Almost all the cases have been paratyphoid—a comparatively mild and non-fatal form of the disease. There has only been one fatality attributed to typhoid, and in this case the diagnosis was somewhat doubtful.

Yours very truly,
(Sgd.) R. A. BREHM,
Medical Officer of Health.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

ON THE TRAIL OF THE VIKING.

HALIFAX, N. S. Oct. 10.

William Washburn Nutting a New York editor and three companions, are believed to be twenty five days overdue on a voyage from Reykjavik, Iceland to Baddeck, N.S., in a forty-foot sloop the Lief Erickson in which they set out from Norway early in the summer. "We will drop in to you for dinner about the middle of September" Nutting wrote on a post card at Reykjavik, to F. W. "Casey" Baldwin partner of the late Alexander Graham Bell, who lives on the Bell estate, near Baddeck, Cape Breton. The message said "the Lief Erickson would shove off from Reykjavik, August 1st. Nothing further has been heard from the party so far as Mr. Baldwin knows, and the craft is now sixty days out. Mr. Baldwin is not worried, as he believes the craft would weather any storm it might have encountered in that time. It was described by Mr. Nutting as slow but seaworthy, and fitted out better than any of its inches had ever been fitted out before. The Lief-Erickson carries beside Mr. Nutting, Arthur Slidebrand, a writer and author of "Blue Water" and John Towdahl, a marine painter also a Norwegian amateur sailor. They set out early in the summer to follow the trail of the Vikings who sailed from Norway to North America one-thousand years ago. Mr. Nutting and Baldwin made a memorable voyage from Baddeck, N.S. to Cowes, England and back, in 1920 in the yacht Typhoon.

MACDONALD MAKES STRONG ELECTION SPEECHES.

LONDON, Oct. 10.

Political events, following the Government's defeat last night, have moved with quite unusual expedition. The Prime Minister early to-day obtained the Royal Assent to the dissolution of Parliament which was prorogued with the usual formalities to-night, and immediately dissolved. By the King's proclamation the Privy Council for these formalities is meeting at the usual hour of seven o'clock in the evening. The King, as always, omitted no courtesy in meeting the Labor Premier's wishes, despite the fact that the unaccustomed haste to get the formalities provided for by the constitution, is somewhat of a novelty. Premier Macdonald had two reasons for advancing the date of the elections as much as possible, first a desire to avoid inconvenience to the business community and public interests generally, and second, the necessity of holding the General Election on some date, which would not conflict with the English Municipal Elections, scheduled for November 1. Mr. Macdonald and his parties, conceive themselves, as on a wave of popularity, and therefore considered it advisable to hasten the elections to the utmost. To achieve this end they even sacrificed the pet laborite idea of holding the elections on Saturday, when the workers have more leisure to record their votes. The date has been fixed for Wednesday, October 29th. This choice was only possible, through the House of Lords adopting the Irish Bill unamended. Lord Carson in the Upper House, to-day, proposed an amendment requiring that the bill should only become operative when ratified by the Ulster Parliament, but he consented to withdraw the amendment on the representation that it would delay the bill, and cause conflict with the House of Commons.

RUM RUNNER HAS A MARITIME ALIAS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.

The extent of the rum running activities of the British steam trawler Fred B. seized off Atlantic Highlands N. J. last Friday, was bared before the United States Commissioner John N. Boyle, to-day, when members of the crew came up for hearing in the libel proceedings under which the government seeks, forfeiture and sale of the ship, by a United States Marshal. The log of the trawler, identified by Chief Officer N. W. Landry, showed that in two days, July 3 and 4 last, 319 cases of liquor were sold. Then with frequent notations little business was done. To-day it was shown that it took another month to dispose of the remaining 576 cases on board, before the trawler sailed for Halifax on August 5th. The account and the agreement of the crew disclosed the owner of the trawler as Charles Stewart of Montreal. The two women arrested when the vessel was seized, identified themselves as Mrs. Chris McLean, 33, who shipped from Halifax as a cook, and Mrs. G. A. Gillis, also 33 an assistant cook of Sydney N.S. Mrs. McLean testified that she had made five trips on the vessel and each time the cargo consisted of boxes, with the contents of which, she said, "she was not familiar." The clearance papers of the vessel disclosed, that it was allowed to sail from Halifax to St. Pierre, or the West Indies. The log of the Bernard M. also seized on the trawler, convinced the Prohibition Authorities that the name Fred B. was a maritime alias, for the vessel to deceive port authorities. The hearing will be continued to-morrow.

The Political Situation in England

In less than a twelve month the British Labour Government, which only held power through the pleasure of one or other of the political parties has been dissolved. The result was inevitable the moment there arose an issue upon which the factions of the Opposition held a common view, and although it happens that the downfall of the Party was not immediately brought about by the Anglo-Soviet Treaty, there can be no question that the conclusion of that agreement signed the Government's death warrant for the time being at any rate.

It is easier to trace the cause of the overthrow of the MacDonald Party than it is to foresee the result of the defeat and the policy which will form the basis of the forthcoming election. In November last Protection took the field against Free Trade, and owing to the ignorance or the indecision of the voters on the questions at stake, Labour climbed into the saddle, but they were in the uneasy position of having to rely upon the Liberal support for their very existence. It cannot be doubted that that support was only a matter of expediency, and was liable to be withdrawn at any time that the Liberal leaders thought that it would be opportune to make another appeal to the country. The Russian Treaty, however, precipitated matters somewhat for it is difficult to see that the Liberals have anything definite to place before the electorate.

The Conservatives are somewhat similarly circumstanced, and although the Labour party has in many respects proved an agreeable surprise to the country as a whole during their brief tenure of office and have carried out several beneficial measures, they have failed lamentably in solving the most pressing problem, namely that of unemployment, and in fact both by the terms of the London Conference and by the Treaty with Russia they have threatened to make the labour situation even more acute. In their last contest they had the support of the extremists, but both the Prime Minister and several of his colleagues have exhibited and expressed but little sympathy with that faction since their assumption of office, and there seems to be in consequence every possibility of a split among his former supporters.

Prior to the last election the representatives of the Dominions were practically unanimous in supporting Baldwin's policy of Empire preference. Great Britain can no longer look upon her elections as a purely domestic affair, and although the dependencies have no voice in the election of a party to Westminster, it is nevertheless the case that their interests are vitally at stake and their wishes should in a measure receive consideration. Their very existence depends upon the grave questions which are decided in the Mother of Parliaments. In the Great War the money of the Dominions was freely given, and their man power, their greatest asset, was placed unconditionally at the disposal of the British statesmen who were responsible for conducting the campaign. Such action cannot go unrecognized and it has made more than ever before the party which holds the reins of power in London an Empire Government.

That this is realized in Britain has recently been practically shown by the visit to the parts of the Empire of the Special Service Squadron, to mention but one instance. That it must take more concrete form in future elections in the Old Country is becoming more and more evident, and possibly it may prove the factor which will save the situation, if not in the forthcoming contest, then in another in the near future. A Coalition party under ordinary circumstances may not be considered desirable, but a union of the ablest men in Britain of whatever political colour on a policy which embraced in the widest sense the Empire problems, and which would enable them to sink their petty differences at this critical juncture, would go far to remove the difficulties by which the country is beset and to restore that peace and prosperity for which the people have so long waited.

Lecture on Printing Ink

A lecture of particular educational interest to the St. John's printers and advertisers will be given in the Grenfell Hall, Water Street, on Monday evening, when Mr. W. E. Sharpe, sales manager of the Canada Printing Ink Co., Toronto, will give an illustrated talk on "The Story of Printing Ink." The story is illustrated with 70 slides, many of them beautifully colored, describing the many varied uses of ink, the source of some of the raw materials and the various processes of its manufacture. The lecture has been given before Employers Association, Franklin & Craftsmen's Club and other trade organizations in all of the larger centres in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Sharpe is well known among the printing fraternity as a practical printer and ink man, and is qualified to impart a great deal of useful information in a very entertaining manner. The lecture is free and all persons interested are cordially invited.

Quick Returns

In yesterday's issue we advertised the loss of a purse containing a sum of money and a number of cheques. The paper was actively in search of the purse when a young lady, of Prospect Street, came in with the lost article. Similar incidents are an every day occurrence and the moral is, it pays to advertise in the Telegram.

RICHARD'S LINEN FOR HEAD-ACRES.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES.

October 9th.—News this day of R. MacDonald's Cahal defeated on a Whig motion of censure and the Prime Minister compelled to seek a dissolution from his Majesty. So England is again thrown into a political turmoil and God knows what will be the end of it. Methinks this coming election will result in the return to power of the Tories, and indeed, in the almost total extermination of the Whigs. Comes Povey and tells me how the Grand Jury this day considers the indictments preferred against Sir R. Povey and 4 other former public servants, and that of Sir Richard is the first taken. I do learn later how this case is concluded by 5 of the clock and the Grand Jury brings in a "no bill" so Sir Richard is now cleared of all these charges which are covered by the indictment. It is said by some that he is like to contest the bye-election in Bonavista, but how true this is I know not, and is most probably an idle rumour. My wife still is in honour after our quarrel of last night, so I sit alone to the Club and play at Bridge with fair success.

No Indictments

Yesterday we stated in a headline in reference to the cases against five former public servants now before the Grand Jury that they had been indicted. As the paragraphs showed this was obviously an error. Parties are not indicted until the Grand Jury finds a True Bill.

Up to the time of writing only one case has been disposed of by the Grand Jury, that being the case of Sir Richard Squires. In his case they have found "No Bill."

We understand that this morning Messrs. Emerson and Winter, who are acting for the Crown, applied to the Court to have the Grand Jury, as at present constituted, discharged, on the ground that there were certain irregularities in connection with the drawing.

Pleasing Presentation Last Night

GOLD WATCHES PRESENTED TO WINNING CREW.

A very pleasing presentation took place in St. Joseph's Hall last night when the City rowing crew, stroked by Mr. Thomas Kearney, which won the challenge race against the Outer Cove fishermen at St. Joseph's Regatta, were presented with handsome watches, the gift of Mr. H. D. Reid. Amongst those present were, Rev. Fathers Pippy and Miller, Sir Michael Cashin, Hon. W. J. Higgins, K.C., the members of St. Joseph's Regatta Committee, besides a large attendance of citizens. Hon. W. J. Higgins presided, and following a short musical programme, he addressed the gathering and outlined the purpose of the meeting, which was to present to the winning crew the prizes which they so well won. It was a memorable race, he said, and the winning crew had to be good to defeat their opponents. During the course of his remarks, he took occasion to personally congratulate the winners, also Father Pippy, who had proved itself well worthy of the support it received from the public. Rev. Fr. Pippy then addressed the gathering and expressed his regret that Mr. Reid, the donor, was unable to be present, and on his behalf he extended best wishes to the crew. He then presented the watches to the coxswain and crew, amidst much applause. The event concluded with cheers for the winning crew.

In the matter of the charge of attempted murder preferred against Robert Sears, Mr. W. J. Brown, B.A., Sir Richard Squires returned to Court and reported through their foreman that they had found a bill. This morning at 11, when the Court sat, it was expected that the matter against Mr. J. T. Meany would be proceeded with, but the unexpected happened, when Mr. L. E. Emerson with Mr. H. A. Winter read an affidavit of himself, drawing attention to certain irregularities in connection with the drawing and summoning of the Grand Jury.

Accident to Fishing Boat

Last week while Constable Tucker was stationed at Greenpond was out in a motor boat overhauling his traps in company with a man named Parsons a schooner coming out of the harbor cut their boat in two. Constable Tucker managed to catch hold on the head gear of the schooner and scramble on board, Parsons became wedged between the broken planks of the motor boat and would probably have drowned but for the assistance of some other men who were not far distant. He was in a bad state when rescued and he is not yet on the road to recovery. The master of the schooner has made good the damage of the motor boat.

APPARATUS RESPONDS TO LINE TEST.

In connection with the Fire Prevention Week programme, a test was given the Fire Companies yesterday afternoon, which proved the efficiency of the Department. The test was a good one, and His Excellency was greatly pleased with the result.

Municipal Council

WEEKLY MEETING.

The weekly meeting of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon. Mayor Cook presided and Councillors Martin, Outerbridge, Collier, Ryan and Dowden were present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Messrs. Blackwood, Emerson and Winter, Solicitors for Dr. J. McLoughlan, asked that in view of houses having been removed on LeMarchant Road West, the question of compensation for land and other matters in connection therewith be given consideration. A special committee, consisting of Councillors Ryan, Collier and Martin, with the City Engineer, will meet the owner and discuss transfer of the land, and the improvements at this place.

Mr. George R. Williams complained of overhanging branches of trees on LeMarchant, Circular and other Roads in the city, which he stated was a great annoyance to pedestrians and he asked that steps be taken to have same removed. He also referred to the condition of surface drains on Carpasian Road. Both matters were referred to the City Engineer.

A communication was tabled from the President and Chairman of Schools, Benevolent Irish Society, with regard to the condition of retaining wall, Queen's Road, which, they stated, in the public interest, should be repaired. The Engineering Department will give this matter attention.

C. J. Ellis, Hon. Secretary Regatta Committee, informed the Council of certain proposed improvements to the northern bank of Quidi Vidi Lake, and asked that arrangements be made for the dumping of filling material. This was agreed to.

Messrs. Moore and McLeod, visualizers, asked compensation for sheep destroyed by dogs in June last. The Solicitor is to be asked to report as to Council's liability.

Messrs. Higgins, Hunt & Emerson, on behalf of Keatings Estate, requested compensation for land expropriated for road purposes some time ago. Particulars as regards amount of land taken and the situation of same, are to be obtained.

The following permits were granted subject to the approval of the City Engineer:—

Imperial Tobacco Company, to raise smoke stack of factory building.

F.M. O'Leary to erect bill board on vacant property, Duckworth St. East.

Bowring Bros., to extend seal factory, southside premises.

Newfoundland Lime Mfg. Co., to make repairs to kiln, Battery Road.

The following plans were approved of:—

Messrs. Wadden, to remodel building, Water Street.

Messrs. Brophy and Goodyear, for erection of double dwelling, Cavell Street.

Cyril Wiseman, to build a garage, Quidi Vidi Road.

Plan submitted by George Pearce for the erection of a stable at rear of his premises, Cavell Street, will be approved, provided he gives a written guarantee to conform to the Municipal Regulations as regards the installation of water and sewerage, concrete floors, etc.

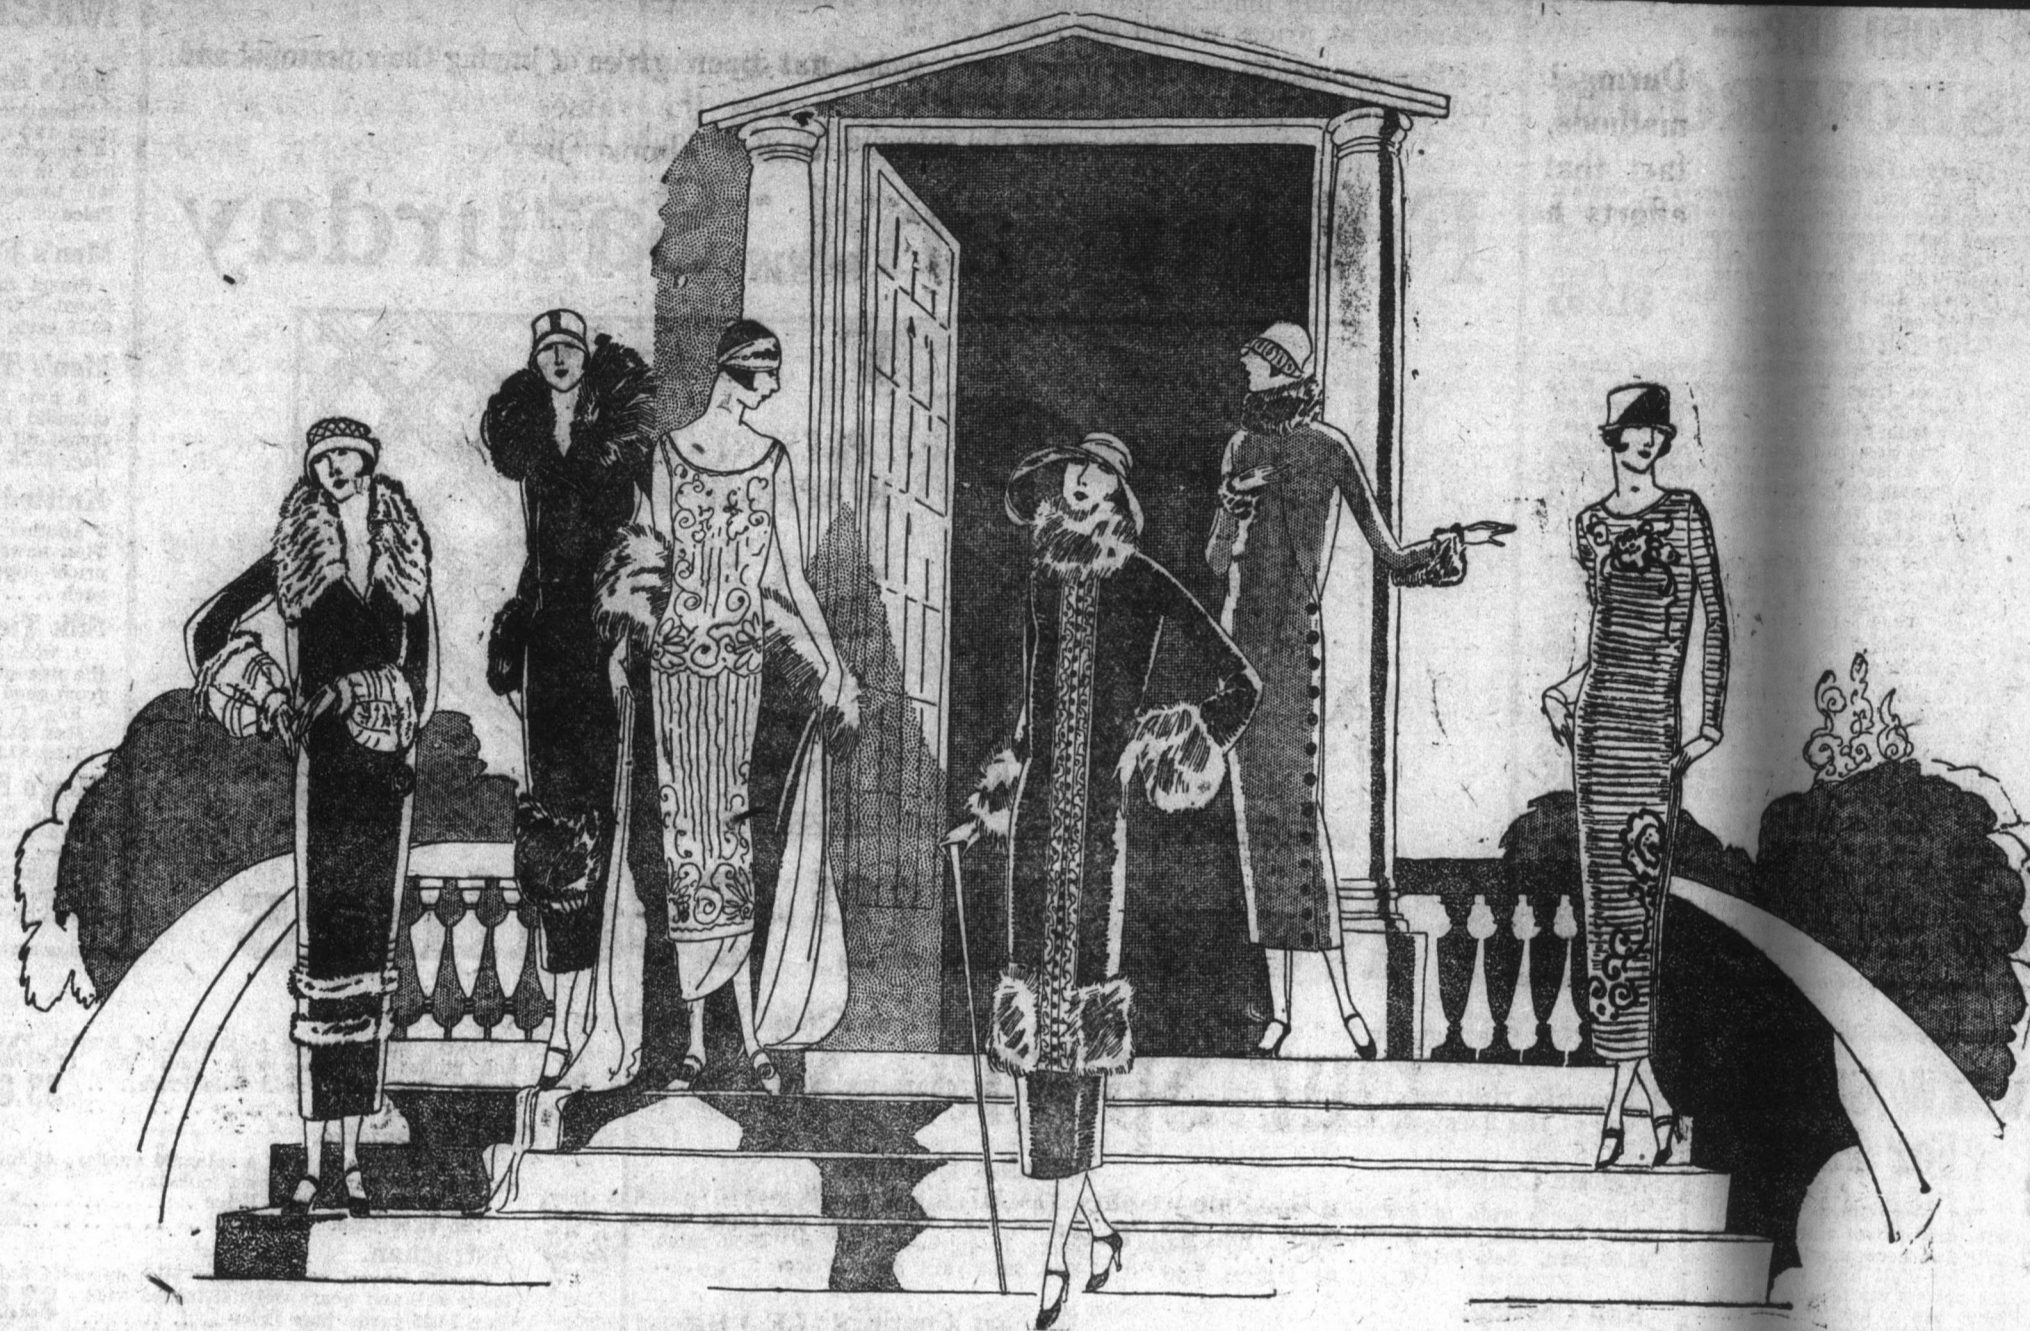

The City Engineer called attention to the need of having immediate repairs made to the retaining wall, near Whitten's, Southside. Plans and specifications are to be prepared, with a view to calling tenders for the work.

The Sanitary Supervisor, reported that during the week some 94 drains, 96 gullies and 57 hoppers had been flushed and cleaned; that most of the drains and hoppers were flushed four times a week, and some of them every day. He also tabled a requisition for the usual yearly supply of hay and oats for his department. Tenders are to be called for same.

The Medical Officer of Health reported seven new cases of Scarlet Fever and six Typhoid for the past week.

With the granting of several requisitions for the various departments and passing of weekly accounts, the meeting adjourned.

Strad and Legato Win Rounds of Applause

CAPACITY HOUSE GREETES MAJESTIC VAUDEVILLE TEAM.

Strad and Legato who arrived by S.S. Rosalind yesterday made their first appearance at the Majestic Theatre last night. Their act, "The Viol's Dream" was a distinct surprise and its safe assertion that they will make a multitude of friends during their engagement. Their stage settings and costumes demonstrate the standing of the team in the vaudeville world. Their Operatic selections were particularly pleasing and from every aspect their act was very acceptable. The feature "Dark Secrets," with the celebrated Dorothy Dalton, the star is a superb feature whilst the ever popular Mack Sennett was all to the good in the comedy. The same program will be repeated to-night, to-morrow afternoon and night.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

COMPLIMENTING BY PROXY.

There is a certain subtle method of giving compliments which very skilful people at this art of it become conspicuous or a conspicuous masters of. You might call it complimenting by proxy. The method is based upon the fact that people generally feel a glow of pride when their particular type is praised or preferred to some other type.

Says the clever mistress of this art to the short man: "I thought the judges made a great mistake the other night when they chose Jim and his partner as the best dancers."

The Proxy Flatterer.

Says the short man: "Oh, I don't know, Jim's a wonderful dancer; he's awfully smooth."

"I know," says the proxy flatterer, "but he's so terribly tall. If he were a few inches shorter I think he'd look a lot more graceful."

Whereupon the short man feels as if someone had given him a compliment, and glows with responsive liking.

Generally, of course, it is a woman who masters this art because it is always women who are best at flattery. It is one of the capacities which the conditions of feminine existence have developed in the sex through centuries, just as the chameleon developed protective coloration as a defense.

Once in a while, though, you find a man with enough of the feminine in his composition to develop it consciously or unconsciously.

Disparages The Pretty Girl.

I heard a young man talking to a girl the other day about some other girls in the crowd. Every time the name of a pretty girl came up he would have something critical to say: "She doesn't look as if she knew enough to go in when it rained." "Hasn't she got an awful voice, though." "Yes, but she's awfully dumb." But when she mentioned two of the girls who are not so pretty, he spoke highly of them. "I like a girl who's got some sense," he said.

It didn't sound at all like what you expect from the modern youngster and he is not at all a prig or a back number. But the key to the situation was that the girl he was talking with and whom he wanted to please is herself clever and nice, but not at all pretty. In preferring the sort of girls that she knows very well are her type, he was paying her a compliment, and I could tell by the look on her face and what she said to me afterward that she was pleased by what he had said even if she didn't just know why.

Don't You Feel Complimented!

You may think that what I have written is far fetched, but watch yourself. Don't you feel as if you had received a personal compliment when someone disparages the kind of girl who goes in for athletics all the time, you being the non athletic type yourself?

And conversely, don't you feel somewhat taken down when some one admires a person as far removed from your type as possible?

There are many people who do not take a great deal of stock in first hand, out-and-out compliments. They are suspicious of them. But even these wary people will fall for proxy flattery. I hate the word "flattery," it carries an invidious tinge. I wish someone would invent a word which meant saying pleasant things, without the invidious suggestion.

A Costly Weapon

Lloyd George, who has the journalistic instinct for touching drab and sombre facts with the tint of romance, argues against the wastefulness of strikes by telling his hearers that 36,000,000 days have been lost to British industry, during the last five years, through this destructive agency.

Britain goes back to the year 1768 in her strike history, for in that year the Northumberland miners refused to work for several weeks in protest against the prevailing practice of annual contracts of service. These conflicts grew in intensity and in the number of men affected. In 1844 forty thousand miners in the North of England were out for eighteen weeks, while in 1893 came the great struggle when more than 300,000 men were affected. For violence no British strike can rival the disorders of the Chicago strike of June and July, 1884 when riots, intimidations, assaults, arson and burglary were unwelcome attendants and the loss to the country was estimated at $100,000,000.

To-day, however, there is growing up a body of intelligent and humanitarian opinion that sees only waste, hopeless conflict and class hatred in the present methods of settling disputes. This body of opinion is firmly convinced of the fundamental soundness of the capitalist system and its productivity. It believes that there is no waste through competition, but it holds that the sum total of this waste is less than the unavoidable wastes of a Socialistic system. It insists that the law of supply and demand must be the basic governor of wages as well as of merchandise; that forced increases in wages only result in increase in prices and the benefitting of one group of workers at the expense of the other. It believes in a frank discussion of industrial problems with employees, but it would share profits only with those who are willing to share the risks of the enterprise by investing in its securities. Finally it seeks within each industry to insure regularity of employment and protection against sickness, incapacity and death.

This is a constructive program, but it is destructive of many things that have been taught in the Labor movement for years past. It would substitute co-operation and conciliation for the succession of conflicts and armed troops and the Shop Committee for the selfish and militant type of Labor organization that has not been able to hold its own forces in check or to guide its membership along the lines of constructive effort.

Tom Shaw, the British Minister of Labor, is putting into practice the wishes of many employees in Britain in establishing courts of enquiry throughout the country and in recommending arbitration as a means of settling industrial disputes. The old theory that the strike was a part of the general struggle between the capitalistic class and the proletariat, in which the proletariat by virtue of being regarded as the under-dog had the better case and should win and so should be supported in all its methods, is fast dying out. A strike, whether in direct violation of a contract or not, should never be regarded as a thing to be rejoiced over as part of a general class struggle. Montreal Star.

Roman Ruins in England

TO ENRICH BRITISH MUSEUM.

HARRGATE.—(A.P.)—Further details of the discovery near Harrogate of the 2,000 year old Roman city of Eboracum make it apparent that the city covered about 70 acres and was surrounded by a wall a mile in circumference, nine feet thick, and about 20 feet high.

The find is one of the most interesting made in England for 50 years, and has attracted the attention of noted archeologists of Great Britain and the continent. The excavations were easily recognized as the ancient Roman city by coins and other relics found. Its location is on the exact spot indicated in the sixteenth century maps of Roman Britain.

Already much of the wall has been exposed, including portions of a multi-angular tower. Close by were portions of a building, probably a grain warehouse, with the stone work in perfect preservation. A Roman road 30 feet wide was discovered a short distance from the granary.

Many coins and much pottery and glassware have been found scattered over the entire city. The work will be continued until the entire city has been uncovered. It is probable that most of the relics will be presented to the British Museum.

People used to make fire by rubbing two sticks together, it can still be done that way. But time and energy is saved by modern safety matches. New Uses for Potatoes Even for Shoe Polish

THE GERMANS ARE UTILIZING THE SPUD FOR MORE THINGS THAN EATING IT.

At a meeting of the Verein deutscher Kartoffelzuechter, which was held in the middle of February, Professor Parow made an interesting report on the possibilities of further use of the potato. It is well known that Germany had before the war an excess of potatoes. During the war there was a deficiency of these and through the Versailles treaty many regions in the east where potatoes were cultivated have been given up to Poland. But in spite of this, there are always potatoes that are poorly grown, frozen and no longer useful for eating purposes, for which a new technical use should be sought.

Aside from its use as food, fodder and meat, the potato formerly served as a raw material in the manufacture of alcohol, starch and yeast. It was also used in potato drying plants and in the manufacture of lactic acid. As has already been proven in France, experiments in the laboratory of the Forschungsanstalt fuer Staerkefabrikation and Kartoffelzuechtung in Berlin, have shown that by the utilization of dried potatoes a palatable, strong beer is obtained. At least 30 per cent. malt can be replaced by the dried potato, dried parings being better suited than potato flakes. The potato taste and odor completely vanish by cooking the wort.

Furthermore from dried and fresh potatoes a bleaching powder can be obtained that finds use in the bleaching of juices and alcoholic liquors. Formerly such a bleaching powder was made from chlorinated lime, or wood and blood. For the production of bleaching powder the poorest, completely rotten potatoes as well as the spoiled dry potatoes are used. This pure black bleaching powder, when mixed with oil of turpentine, makes a good shoe polish, so that the shoe polish industry is also to be taken into consideration as a purchaser for dried potatoes.—Industrial and Engineering Chemistry.

21 Indicted in Tarring Party

WOMAN AND 20 MEN ACCUSED OF ATTACK ON MARYLAND GIRL.
 FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 4.—Twenty men and one woman, Mrs. Mary Shanks, were under indictment here to-day as the result of a tar and feather party in which Dorothy Grandon, bob-haired Frederick girl, was the victim.

Ten of the men were charged with doing the actual tarring while the others were accused of aiding and abetting and with violating the riot law.

Mrs. Mary Shanks, who led a mob against the girl whom she charged with being too friendly with her husband, was charged with felonious assault, tarring and feathering, and aiding and abetting.

If convicted Mrs. Shanks and the first ten men could receive sentences of 20 years each while the others could be sentenced to five years.

The grand jury's report said that the attack on Miss Grandon followed her refusal to "make dates" with the Frederick men.

Few of the aliens smuggled in are aged. This is particularly true of the Scotch.—Eric Times.

Scientists Unveil Many Dark Secrets

DIAMOND MINES IN CANADA ARE TRACED BY STONES FOUND IN VARIOUS PARTS OF UNITED STATES.—HOW DEER GOT HIS HORNS, BOOSTER HIS SPURS AND PEACOCK HIS GAUDY PLUMAGE.

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 13.—By tracing more than a hundred diamonds found in glacial drift in Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin, Dr. George K. Kunz of New York, the mineralogist and gem expert, has succeeded in following the route of the glacier which carried them from Canada and in indicating the area in which diamond mines probably exist in Canada.

Dr. Kunz, who addressed the British Association for the Advancement of Science, submitted for Canadian geologists more than twenty specimens of rocks found in the glacial drift in association with the diamonds, and many of these specimens were identified as familiar rock in various localities in Ontario.

"One of the diamonds found in America was a fine stone of seventeen carats, which was discovered by men digging a well in Wisconsin," said Dr. Kunz. "More than 100 other diamonds have been found in glacial drift in America and some in Canada. I have seen a thirty-carat diamond which was found in gravel in Ontario. The man who found it brought it to show me in New York and I found it to be of excellent quality, probably having been carried by the same glacial movement which spread on in a fanlike formation. The owner of that diamond died and it is now in the possession of his son."

"Undoubtedly diamond mines exist in some parts of Canada, and by closely tracing the glacial drift to the point of origin the general locality of the mines can be found. All of the diamonds in the world to-day do not occupy an area of more than four square miles."

"As the southwest movement of the glacier must have gouged out the top of the diamond mine and carried the diamonds along, depositing them over an area of a thousand miles or more in diameter, I have no doubt that a diamond mine or mines of great value are to be found in Canada."

PLYMOUTH ROCK ALSO AN ALIEN.

Dr. Kunz, who is President of the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society, also succeeded in obtaining a geological identification of Plymouth Rock. That famous rock was shown to have been carried by a glacier from the mother body of rock north of the St. Lawrence, probably in Labrador. Dr. Kunz brought here bits of Plymouth Rock and microscopic sections for the examination of Dr. A. P. Coleman, Dr. W. H. Collins, Prof. E. L. Walker, Dr. H. M. Amf and other Canadian geologists.

Plymouth Rock was identified as "biotite granite with altered plagioclase feldspar." Dr. Kunz estimated that it made the pilgrimage to its present position on a glacier about 500,000 years ago.

An explanation of how the male deer acquired horns, and roosters spurs and peacocks their gorgeous plumage was offered by J. T. Cunningham. Injuries and irritations sustained in courtship and fighting by countless generations of these and other creatures gradually become hereditary characteristics, he said. By constant hunting, the buck deer and goat developed their head injuries into permanent attributes.

The endocrine glands are the connecting link which makes it possible for local injuries, or the growth of callous tissue, to develop into hereditary features. The homeless deer, for instance, by driving his skull against the skulls of other deer for scores of generations, caused the injured tissue to be absorbed into its circulation, until the new substance caused some modification of the chemicals produced by certain endocrine glands which control growth.

These changed chemicals, or hormones, used by the glands, gradually build up the horns of the deer and in some similar way the special fighting apparatus and decorations of other mammals were evolved.

HOW TO TELL AGE OF FISH.

To tell the age of a horse look into his mouth, but to learn the age of a fish look into his ear. There is practical as well as scientific interest in the method of estimating the age of a fish, announced W. J. K. Herkness of the University of Toronto. Fish canners and fish experts may use it.

In the region of the internal ear of fishes, corresponding in position and function to the semicircular canals or balancing organs of higher animals, there is a little closed, bony pocket. In this pocket there is a tiny stone-like object called an otolith, or "ear stone," which rolls about as the fish tips this way and that, and helps him to know whether he is right side up. These otoliths grow as the fish grows, and it is by a careful study of their marks and rates of growth that Mr. Herkness was able to devise his method of telling the age of a fish from the stones in his ears.

The rain-king project of Dr. W. D. Bancroft and L. Francis Warren has no commercial value, according to Dr. J. J. Humphreys, professor of meteorological physics at Washington who discussed all types of rain-making apparatus and pronounced them equally worthless, although it is said that scientific results of importance had been achieved in these experiments.

meteorological physics at Washington who discussed all types of rain-making apparatus and pronounced them equally worthless, although it is said that scientific results of importance had been achieved in these experiments.

The Bancroft-Warren system of sprinkling clouds with electrified particles of sand had been used by the army for dispersing clouds and making holes in fog to enable airplanes to find their way from the sky to land and water. Planes equipped with their apparatus were taken to Nova Scotia to punch holes in the fog, if necessary, for the benefit of the round world fliers. These experiments have not yet attempted to apply their invention to the making of rain on the ground that means must be found to protect the fliers from electrical effects that might be caused by bursting storm clouds with electrified particles.

Dr. Humphreys, however, included the Bancroft-Warren process with the others in his criticism of rain-making schemes. He classified the chief rain-making proposals as "the production of loud noises, fog collecting screens, mechanical or forced convection, dusting the sky, spraying liquid air on clouds and sprinkling clouds with electrified sand."

The Will

There comes a time in the life of every man when he must leave his worldly possessions to the care of another. In anticipation of this, therefore, the first obligation resting on an individual who is possessed of property is the making of a will, and this should be done before the capacities become impaired by time or the ravages of disease.

Stafford's Phoratone Cough Cure will cure almost every ordinary cough or cold in very short time, generally in twenty-four hours if taken at the first symptoms.

The changeable weather at this time of the year makes it very hard to avoid colds, but the minute you feel you have taken cold is the best time to take a remedy. You thus avoid any of the dangers that very often follow a cold.

Don't depend on luck to cure you—have a bottle of PHORATONE always in the house and use it when the cold starts. That's the best way—and the safest.

WHEN THE BABY WAKES.

When the baby wakes from sleeping
 There is laughing in her eyes
 And no hint of last night's weeping;
 Earth has heard no sweeter cries
 Than her gurgle and her cooing
 As she greets another day;
 Age may wake to cares pursuing,
 But the baby wakes to play.

When the baby wakes from slumber
 There is sunshine on her cheeks
 There are smiles too swift to number,
 It is magic when she speaks,
 And the way she shouts her gladness
 Drives all thought of grief away;
 Age must sometimes wake to sadness,
 But a baby wakes to play.

Life is good, and well I know it!
 Or my babe would wake to sigh;
 In some dismal way she'd show it
 As the days go slipping by;
 When the morning sun comes shining
 She'd not clasp her hands that way
 But, like us, would start repining
 At the burdens of the day.

When the baby wakes, there's never
 Any sudden thought of woe;
 Last night's tears have dried forever,
 Here's a face with joy aglow;
 Here's the day you called to-morrow,
 You can almost hear her say!
 Age may sometimes wake to sorrow,
 But a baby wakes to play.

Jackie Coogan Triumphs Anew as Belgium Lad

"A BOY OF FLANDERS" PROVES
 MOST HUMAN PICTURE HE HAS EVER HAD.

In each picture thus far revealing the genius of Jackie Coogan, a different facet of his singular appeal has been disclosed.

Now comes "A Boy of Flanders," different from all the other pictures presented last night at the Nickel Theatre, as effective as the best that Jackie has given to the world of his admirers. The plot floats in alternating sunlight and shadow. It is streaked with the gay colors of abounding joy and dashed with the sombre shades of tragedy. The verdict of last night's audience seemed to be that of all the pictures thus far made by this extraordinary child, "A Boy of Flanders" is unquestionably the most—human!

The setting is quaint with a charm unique. The costumery adds a touch of fantasy and charm; the story is set in the present, and again Jackie is restored to his enduring rags. No longer is he the proud prince of an ancient ruling house. He is the orphaned boy whom fate has cast in the loving, tender but poverty-stricken arms of an aged grandfather living a league or two from Antwerp.

And there is a dog, Teddy, the player of the role of Petrasche, in Ouida's immortal story, "A Dog of Flanders," from which Jackie's picture takes its origin, this noble beast plays an important part of equal prominence. Indeed the faithfulness with which the spirit and the letter of Ouida's juvenile have been retained in the picture merits particular praise. Nothing important is left out and nothing is added that lacks in pertinence and direct value.

Despite Plentiful Supply

FUR DEALERS RAISE PRICES.

LEIPSIC, Sept. 27. (A.P.)—Wild fur bearing animals throughout Europe fared fairly well during the war, according to Leipzig fur dealers, but there are no present indications that prices for women's garments in skins are to be cheaper. In fact, dealers say prices will be measurably advanced.

While great tracts of forests and uncultivated lands inhabited by game were devastated or swept clear time and again by the marching armies, the animals often sought shelter in swamps and other areas beyond the range of guns and came through safely. The soldiers, when attacking or during a retreat, were mostly too concerned with the military manoeuvres at hand to think much of sport, and seldom had time to shoot unless it was for the purpose of killing meat for food.

On the plains of Poland and Russia, along which the German and Russian armies clashed and held positions extending at one time nearly 1,000 miles, there are enormous districts covered with timber and here game are quite safe. The bison of Poland, however, which roamed the wilds northeast of Warsaw, were nearly exterminated by German soldiers who killed them by the thousand for food.

Reports from Russia are to the effect that ermine, sable and other species of marten are quite plentiful this year, and fur dealers predict a good harvest in the fall.

Letter Bridges Gap for Eskimo

S.S. ARCTIC BRINGS LOVE MESSAGE TO STONEY MOUNTAIN CONVICT — WIFE GRATEFUL — MATE OF POND'S INLET WAITS PATIENTLY FOR DAY OF PARDON.

Quebec, Sep. 25.—The old saying, "Love lives the world over," was given added significance yesterday with the arrival here of the Canadian Government S.S. Arctic, under command of Captain J. E. Bernier, noted adventurer and explorer, after having been absent in Northern waters on an exploration trip more than three months.

It will be remembered that when the vessel left here last July, F. D. Henderson, representing the Northwest Territories and Yukon Branch of the Department of Interior, took with him a letter written by Noo-Kud-Lah, the Eskimo, who is now serving a ten year sentence at Stoney Mountain Penitentiary, for the killing of James, a Newfoundland trapper, at Pond's Inlet in the year 1919.

The letter was addressed to Noo-Kud-Lah's wife at Pond's Inlet. Henderson stated, in an interview here, that he had delivered the letter to Noo-Kud-Lah's squaw and had brought back a reply which will be forwarded to the Eskimo at the penitentiary.

When asked whether the convicted man's squaw showed any emotion when she received the letter, Mr. Henderson said that although the native tribes of the North are noted for their stoical demeanor even under the most trying circumstances, the woman, it was easily to be seen, was visibly affected when she tore the crudely written love message from its envelope. She eagerly devoured the contents and at last her reserve broke down.

She cried, and rocked to and fro, she flashed a grateful look at the official who had been the means of bringing that gap of some thousands of miles between her and her loved one and, without more ado, the lonely native woman seized the opportunity of reiterating her felicity to her man in the big grey snow hut of the Great White Father.

What the exact contents are nobody knows, but it is almost certain that Noo-Kud-Lah's spouse has told him that she is waiting for him and is looking forward to the day when the white man's law will pardon him, send him across country on the "big sleigh without dogs" to his snow hut at Pond's Inlet.

The Beginning of Journalism

The first printed newspaper to be placed before the public, according to the best information available, was the Gazette, published in Nuremberg, Germany, in 1467; and the longest lived paper in the world was the Nueve Zeitung aus Hispanien und Hallen, printed in the same city in 1534. It was in existence until a few years ago. Other countries followed Germany in issuing printed newspapers in the following order: England in 1622; France in 1631; Sweden in 1644; Holland in 1656; Russia in 1703; Turkey in 1827. The first American paper consisted of three pages of two columns each, and a blank page, and was first published in Boston on September 25, 1690, under the name of "Publick Occurrences both Foreign and Domestic," but it was immediately suppressed. In 1704 the Boston News Letter appeared printed on one sheet of foolscap paper and flourished for seventy-one years. The oldest genuine newspaper in the United States is the "Weekly Massachusetts Spy," 1771. In Canada, the first paper to be published was the Halifax Gazette, March 25, 1752, and the Quebec Gazette followed in 1764.

Wonders of Finny World

The baby shark-like the human child is born without teeth. Sharks, sawfish and several species of the ray do not spawn; they produce their young perfect in exactly the same way as do human beings. An extraordinary creature lives in certain rivers of Queensland—a stumpy fish, which has an actual lung as well as gills, the reason being that the waters of these rivers run low in the summer and the lung has developed to help them breathe. In several countries of South America there are fish of the same family with two lungs as well as gills; the rivers in which they live dry up entirely in the summer, and the gills, the prime function of which is to breathe in winter, are then useless to the fish, so they borrow in the mud and breathe through their lungs until the wet season comes and the rivers fill.

Buried Forest Discovered

Irish bog oak ornaments have always been in demand and now a discovery has been made in the vicinity of Auckland, New Zealand, which bids fair to provide a healthy rival for the Irish industry, which of late years has been falling off. A huge tract of buried timber has been found in the Papatura valley. Here some upheaval of nature in the bygone ages laid low a vast acreage of great kauri trees. As time passed, they became covered with a layer of semi-liquid peat, into which their branches and crowns have disappeared. To-day the swamp in which they lie is a busy place. Great chunks of the lumber are being raft away from where they have lain for a century or centuries and more, and hauled to the sawmill. It differs from the wood cut from the living tree both in its strength and hue, which is of a dark red-brown, rather like mahogany.

Lutherans Say Bible Supports Death Penalty

CHICAGO CONFERENCE ISSUES STATEMENT DECLARING PRACTICE LEGAL.

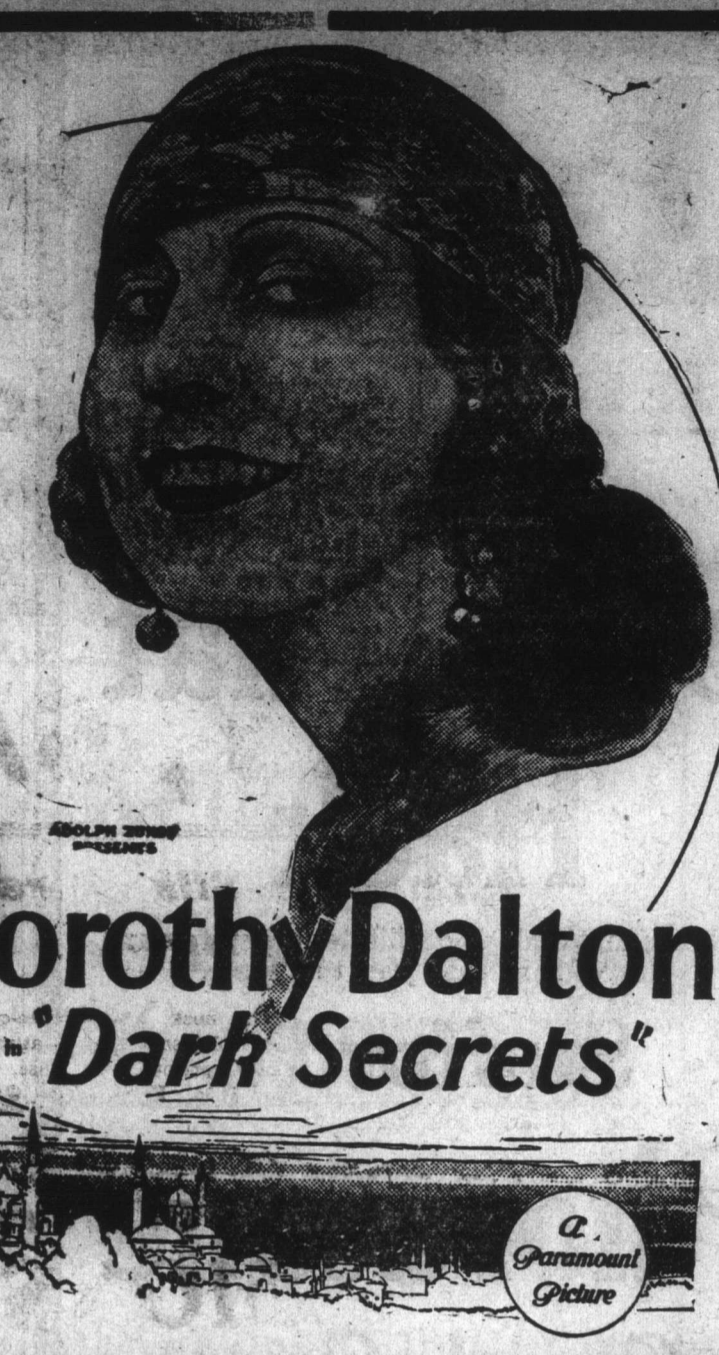

CHICAGO, Sept.—Declaring that punishment is "legal and backed by Scriptural authority," the Chicago Lutheran Conference of the Missouri Synod, largest of the Lutheran bodies, issued a statement endorsing the Bible in support of the death penalty.

To offset the arguments of those quoting Biblical authority in arguments opposing the extreme penalty, the statement said:

"Genesis 9, six—"Who so sheddeth man's blood by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God He made man."
"Lev. 24 seventeen—"And he that killeth any man shall surely be put to death."
"Romans 13, fourth St. Paul—"He (the Ruler, the Government) beareth the sword (the instrument of capital punishment) not in vain; he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil."
"Jesus—"They that take the sword shall perish by the sword."

"Romans 13, three—"Rulers are not a terror to good words but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power?"
"A most baffling situation confronts us to-day," says the statement. "On the one hand heinous and atrocious crimes are being committed in ever-increasing numbers, crimes that outrage and shock every righteous citizen; on the other hand we hear of persistent agitation for the abolition of capital punishment and a plea for mercy to the criminal."

As time passed, they became covered with a layer of semi-liquid peat, into which their branches and crowns have disappeared. To-day the swamp in which they lie is a busy place. Great chunks of the lumber are being raft away from where they have lain for a century or centuries and more, and hauled to the sawmill. It differs from the wood cut from the living tree both in its strength and hue, which is of a dark red-brown, rather like mahogany.

Lutherans Say Bible Supports Death Penalty

CHICAGO CONFERENCE ISSUES STATEMENT DECLARING PRACTICE LEGAL.

CHICAGO, Sept.—Declaring that punishment is "legal and backed by Scriptural authority," the Chicago Lutheran Conference of the Missouri Synod, largest of the Lutheran bodies, issued a statement endorsing the Bible in support of the death penalty.

To offset the arguments of those quoting Biblical authority in arguments opposing the extreme penalty, the statement said:

"Genesis 9, six—"Who so sheddeth man's blood by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God He made man."
"Lev. 24 seventeen—"And he that killeth any man shall surely be put to death."
"Romans 13, fourth St. Paul—"He (the Ruler, the Government) beareth the sword (the instrument of capital punishment) not in vain; he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil."
"Jesus—"They that take the sword shall perish by the sword."

"Romans 13, three—"Rulers are not a terror to good words but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power?"
"A most baffling situation confronts us to-day," says the statement. "On the one hand heinous and atrocious crimes are being committed in ever-increasing numbers, crimes that outrage and shock every righteous citizen; on the other hand we hear of persistent agitation for the abolition of capital punishment and a plea for mercy to the criminal."

40,000 Snakes Used Monthly

FOR FOOD AND DRINK IN TOKIO.

TOKIO, Sept. 27. (A.P.)—More than two hundred snake dealers in Tokio supply the city's demand for snakes as food and medicine, according to figures gathered by the Jiji Shmpo, one of Tokio's leading newspapers.

Tokio citizens consume about 40,000 snakes each month, says this paper. Snakes, mostly of the viper family or garter snakes, are either eaten by invalids needing the nourishing factor which science has labelled "vitamin A," in which these reptiles are supposed to be rich, or they are consumed as a drink, made by burning them and dissolving the ashes in spirits. Such consumption of snakes is due to old superstitions and does not have medical endorsement.

England Watches

Passing Away

OF VICTORIAN FIGURES.

LONDON—(A.P.)—The death of Lord Knollys, following closely that of the venerable Sir Dighton Probyn, another reminder that the great Victorian circle is drawing in. Both Lord Knollys and Sir Dighton spent their long lives in the service of England's royal family.

Lord Knollys, formerly trusted attendant of Queen Victoria, served the late King Edward for more than 20 years as private secretary, a capacity in which he also served King George until the weight of years forced his retirement. His contemporary, Sir Dighton Probyn, for many years controller of the household of the late sovereign, in fulfillment of a promise he made to King Edward the latter was dying, continued in the same capacity with the widowed Queen Alexandra.

The Queen Mother, now going on 80 years, and herself in feeble health, bowed with grief at the loss within short space of time of two trusted aids. Queen Alexandra is in the 70th year of Sandringham, and so are her infirmities that her death concludes he will not again appear in public.

Three sovereigns, of whom the late King Edward was the last, in a very confidential capacity, the recipient of many royal confidences, Lord Knollys had a diversified character and a wide knowledge of the world and its ways. He knew the late King in all his moods and the late sovereign's trusted companion when he was Prince of Wales.

He offered could ever tempt Lord Knollys to divulge any of the material in his possession concerning what went on in inner court circles, with the life of which he had intimate knowledge. An American publisher said to have sent him a blank check that he could fix his own price for book of court reminiscences. The check was torn up and thrown into a waste paper basket.

In the good old days when King Edward as Prince of Wales was doing what he could to dispel the gloom that enshrouded the mid-Victorian court, Lord Knollys was often the butt of the practical jokes which the heir to the throne and his set dearly enjoyed.

On one occasion Lord Knollys had a laugh on his side at the expense of the practical joker of the royal set. "Bay" Middleton, the famous sportsman, had a penchant for catching a friend by the coat-tails, ripping the garment to the neck. Lord Knollys, one evening offered a particularly tempting chance to Capt. Middleton, which was at once seized upon to the amusement of the Prince of Wales, who, however, was surprised to observe Lord Knollys' unaccountable silence.

On inquiring why his secretary had not seem to mind the ruin of a perfectly good coat, the Prince of Wales was informed by Lord Knollys that, suspecting Capt. Middleton's intentions, he had taken the precaution to have the coat's buttons sewed on with a special thread.

R-3 Capable of Lifting 40 Tons Dead Weight
FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Sept. 8.—(A.P.)—The R-3 will start her non-stop trip to Lakeland, New Jersey, with 11,000 gallons of gas. She tucked away inside her ribs. This will weigh, at the start, approximately 28 tons. It is estimated that the route she followed will cover about 4,500 nautical miles, the gasoline aboard will carry the dirigible possibly 400 miles further, if necessary. Engineers figure that the five engines operating at the cruising speed of 60 miles an hour will consume 100 gallons an hour. The voyage is expected, will require not more than 100 hours unless unfavorable weather should be encountered. More than 1,000 gallons of gasoline will be taken along for "good measure."

Household Notes

Stuffed oysters are delicious scalloped with chopped celery, cabbage, mushrooms, and seasoning. Add a teaspoonful of salt to each cup of water before adding any mushrooms, and allow to boil. A wise idea to pin or paste them to your shopping list—then you are sure to have them. Stuffed oysters can be stuffed with bread-crumbs and grated cheese, surrounded with a thick, white sauce, and bak-
