THERE ARE WILDER SCHEMES in Canada than the proposed route from Churchill harbor, on Hudson's bay, to Liverpool. Churchill harbor, though not far from the centre of the continent, is 114 miles nearer Liverpool than is New York, and 64 miles nearer than is Montreal. A railway 350 miles long, joining the harbor with the Canada Pacific railway, would establish the shortest and most direct line between the best wheat-growing lands in the world and the best wheat market of the world. This is less than a quarter of the distance by rail between Winnipeg and Montreal; and as the Hudson bay is said to be navigable five months of the year, the opening of the the farmers of the western belt on terms of perfect equality in the north-Liverpool market with the farmers of Ontario or Ohio, and in a much better position than those of Iowa and Minnesota.

The writer proceeds to argue, in a be-thankful-it-is-no-worse fashion, that the influence exerted by the British government upon our affairs is of the most nebulous character; he declares that "Canada can make all the "treaties she pleases, so far as England is "concerned" that in fact, she is sided in the sided in the subject of the public. Amid so much chaff there is one equal to the occasion, and he will give the solitary grain of argument, and that we may as well deal with at once. It is the old threadbare argument of the "prestige of the British name"-how much more it would de for us if we wanted to make a foreign treaty than we could do for ourselves. The best guarantee of what British prestige would do for us in the future lies, as we have before pointed out, in what it has done for us in the past. British diplomacy invariably acts from the motives of imperial interests—it cannot be otherwise,—and whenever colonial interests come into collision with these, the latter are bound to suffer. We invite the Globe or anybody else to mention one single instance in which British diplomacy has touched the affairs of Canada but fer its hurt. TEN YEARS' RECORD.

In a Life Insurance Company, conducted on the mutual principle (such as Mutual Department of the ÆTNA LIFE), all the money paid in will, estantially, come back to the insured, with compound interest—except that rion disbursed for working expenses. Some expenses are necessary, even charitable operations. Other things being equal, those companies are usually and among the best—and live the longest, and return most value for the oney they receive—which are most economically conducted.

Only three eld companies (and they well grown previous to 1850) have shown etter record in this respect than the ÆTNA LIFE. The following table, carelly compiled from the official reports, embraces all the other leading U. S. ompanies also those of Canada, and lastly three British companies doing usiness in Canada:—

Average
Annual Income
durin g
past ten years.

Average Annual Vorking
Expenses.

The figures in the two last columns command attention by their magnitude. They show the amount that the Officers of the ÆTNA LIFE might have used in the mere running expenses, more than they have done, without exceeding the rate indulged in by other companies. For instance, by confining its working expenses to $9 05 instead of $15 07, the rate of the Massachusetts Mutual (9th in the list), it has saved the difference of $6 02 per $100, which upon the ten years receipts of the ÆTNA comes to $3,15,470!

When it is considered that the real cost of being insured is nor the premium paid, but the portion of that premium used up in expenses, it will be understood how large an interest the insuring public have in a table like the above. Such a table exerts a powerful influence in favor of economy. After examining it no one will be surprised to learn that the most expensive of the mutual companies has not yet declared any dividend to its members, and a stock company, the last one, has been obliged to write off half its capital, originally £50,000 sterling. 250,000 stering.

"The public cannot be misled if, when seeking an office in which to effect an insurance, they select one which transacts its business at a small per centage of working cost."—British Board of Trade Report.

"But he wasn't taken in the ordinary way," continued Miss Susan, her voice grown solemn. "Dear me, but it was such a strange Providence! Oh, yes, we know he died, bless you. The ship was wrecked and parts of her were found—all hands perished of course. I prevailed upon sister Martha to have a stone put up—one might as well buy one's grave lot when death has come into the family; but she was dreadful opposed to it for a long time. However, I prevailed at last, and it's the prettiest stone in the churchyard—almost a monument, in fact, with his name on it in gitl letters."

"Was he a sailor?" asked Melinda.

"Bless your soul and body, no. I guess not;" and Miss Susan's black eyes snapped algost angrily. "He was a merchant."

"A gentleman!" chorused both ladies.

"Who, pray?" continued Miss Susan.

"You know who comes here."

"It's nobody as comes here, miss, but an oldish one, with the biggest gray beard I ever laid eyes on, ma'am."

"Did you put him in the parlor?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Did he seem easy, or hurried? Who can it be, Susan?"

"He didn't seem a bit hurried, ma'am.

"He said: "Tell the ladies I can wait." He asked was you both in and well, and said when the ladies was at liberty he would be pleased to see Miss Susan."
