The Western Fair Is Over for This Year.

Removal of the Exhibits Begun Last Evening.

Yesterday's Attendance Well Up to the Mark.

The Week's Success Most Gratifying-Directors Delighted-Popularity of the Western Need Never Be Doubted.

The glory has passed from Queen's Park for a year. The Western Fair for 1899 has become a memory—a pleasant memory for the tens of thousands of people who thronged the grounds for the past few days. For the directors It has left more than a memory. There are some pleasing realities in the treasury which have been "left behind." One of the old time directors stated yesterday that all expenses of the exhibition had been cleared by Wednesday evening, leaving Thursday and Friday to

In point of attendance this has been one of the three best years in the history of the Western. The gate receipts last year and the year before alone were larger. Last year is not a fair comparison, however. The railroads were giving much cheaper rates then, and although they carried more people they did not make as much money as this year. In 1897, the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen came to see the Western, and their presence attracted an unusual crowd.

Yesterday there were about 5,600 people on the grounds, and a splendid opportunity for viewing the various exhibits without the inconvenience of the crush that prevails on the big days was afforded. The special attractions were all repeated in front of the grand stand, and the races were exceptionally interesting. The little charges of the Children's Aid Society, who were present in care of Inspector Sanders, through the generosity of the directors, were very much in evidence on the grand stand, and manifested unbounded delight at the wonderful feats of the vaudeville artists.

THE RACES. The finish of the race between teams owned by Mr. George McCormick, of this city, and Dr. Routledge, of Lambert beth, was the racing event of the day. Dr. Routledge succeeded in getting two of the three heats run on Thursday, and there were many people who con-sidered his the likeliest team. Admirers of Mr. McCormick's speedy pair neld the opposite opinion, and they were right. The doctor's were not fast enough. Sibella and mate worked much better than on Thursday and won the two heats easily. The time for the first was 2:191/2, and the second 2:181/4.

The running race was hotly contested, Frank Nichols and Yellow Jacket being almost tied for first in the second heat. Summary: Running race, half-mile heats, best two in three:

In the 2:30 trot and 2:35 pace, Lewis Wigle's promising little bay mare Texas Jessie added another first to her string of wins since the Fair began The Learnington horse had an easy thing, and Donovan held second place comfortably. Summary: Trot and pace, best three in five:

THE HORSES. Notwithstanding the fact that the Ottawa Fair was in progress at the same time the live stock show at the Western this year was one of the finest ever made in Canada. Among the horses the breeders show wonderful improvement. The heavy Clyde and Shire classes showed many new importations of high breeding. Belshazzar, a shire stallion, just arrived, and shown at the West-ern for the first time in Canada, was pronounced one of the best shires ever seen in Canada.

The Clydesdales were a strong class. and hackneys were better represented than in any previous year. Miss Baker, the unrivalled brood mare, was present with a string of color winning youngsters. The carriage class was well represented. In the roadster class three aged stallions were shown. The colt sections were light, but the three-year-olds; filly or gelding were particularly good. There were nine entries in the harness horse class, and of single drivers, over 151/2 hands high, there were 17. The saddle horses were particularly good, and the carriage harness classes were well filled.

THE CATTLE. The judges declare the cattle show this year to be equal to the product of any country in the world, and superior The Shorthorns were the feature of the whole exhibit, both in number and shires were a strong class and showed in some particulars improvement over in some particulars improvement over last year. There were only three ex-hibitors of the Polled Angus variety. The Hereford formed the largest and best collection of the breed ever shown in the Western. The Golloways, of which there were only three exhibitors, were not well prepared. Jerseys led numerically in the special dairy breeds, though the Holsteins and Ayrshires were both well represented.

LIVE STOCK COMMENTS. The editor of the Mitchell Recorder says in his last issue: There is no disputing Toronto's claims to first place for its great hippodrome vanity fair: but for its genuine agricultura feature there is none to dispute London's title. Farmers go in thousands to Toronto to see the sights; they go to London to see the agricultural ex-hibits. Many of the latter were at Toronto unseen by hundreds who admire them at London. We know this to be a fact, having both seen farmers on the grounds, and heard them talk on the homeward bound trains to confirm it. London this year has a finer show than ever before, and the management are getting their grounds into better shape every year."

The Toronto Telegram says: Mr. F. Hodson, who will take charge the Dominion Government's live stock bureau, returned today from London Fair. Mr. Hodson is enthusiastic over the swine exhibited there.
"The animals were of a much better class than I ever saw exhibited there." "The American-breds are disappearing and more bacon animals

AN ATTRACTIVE DISPLAY. The Carling Brewing and Malting Company's display added very largeto the attractiveness of the main building, in the center of which it towered, a huge pyramid 25 feet high and 12 feet in diameter. It might be mentioned in this connection that the Carling Brewing and Malting Company have been awarded special diplomas and medals for general excellence at every exhibition where they have displayed, including the World's Fair at

More than half a century ago the late Thomas Carling started a brewery in London on a small scale. The business grew steadily and rapidly from the first. Today it has no equal in Canada. The Carling Brewing and Malting Company's plant on Talbot street north is a handsome five-story, fire-proof building, covering a ground area of 38,-600 feet. It is fitted throughout with the most modern and costly machinery. A feature is the ice-making plant, which is a natural outgrowth business. The water used by the Carling Brewing and Malting Company, in the manufacture of all their beverages, is supplied from springs on the premises. These springs produce 60,000 gallons daily of water that has been shown by chemical analysis to be the purest in Canada.

Sir John Carling, who has been con nected with the business for 50 years, is president of the company. The management is in the hands of Mr. T. H. Carling, who has had many years' experience. Mr. J. A. Carling is assistant manager, and Mr. Fred W. Car ling, manager of the Ottawa agency

Big Run on Genuine Heintzman & Co. Pianos-Eloquent Facts.

Mr. J. A. Croden, London, manager for Heintzman & Co., the well-known piane manufacturers, in speaking of the Western Fair, just closed, said he considered it one of the most successful in the history of the association. He could only judge from the numerous sales of Heintzman Pianos, as he had been too busy attending to customers from all over Western Ontario to pay much attention to the rest of the exhibition. "I am more than pleased with the success of the Fair," added Mr. Croden.

The sales of the genuine Heintzman & Co. Pianos during the week are the best possible guarantee of the superiority of the instruments. A few instances might be mentioned. Mr. H. Miss Nellie Myers, one of Stratford's leading musicians, and a planist and vocalist of rare gifts, has bought a beautiful Baby Grand Heintzman & Co. Piano. She was for three years a pupil of Mrs. Norman Reynolds Reburn, a graduate of the Toronto College of Music, of the New York Conservatory of Music and a pupil of Haslem. Myers studied theory under J. Humphrey Anger. Miss Myers bought a Heintzman & Co. Next Year Likely to So. a Reduction in the Public Debt, Which Is a Rare Occurrence.

[Special to The Advertiser per C.P.R.] Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 16.-The finance department has prepared a statement of revenue and expenditure for the financial year ending June 30 last. It includes all accounts received for that year up to the 31st of August last, and there will be no further change of any As already predicted the consequence. surplus will be over $5,000,000, which exceeds the estimate of the Finance Minister in his budget speech by nearly $500,000. The revenue is $46,796,368, and the expenditure $41,760,342, leaving a surplus of $5,030,000. The revenue of 1899 exceeded that of 1898 by 36,-500,000, and the expenditure increased by about $3,000,000. There was added to the public debt $1,770,000, as against $2,779,000 last year. Next year it is safe to say that the public debt will be reduced something, which has only happered twice since confederation. For the two months of the present fiscal year ending Aug. 31, the revenue has slightly increased over the same time last year, and this, too, despite the great rush of imports of July of year, so as to get the advantage of the reduction in duties before the denunciation of the Belgian and German treaties. There is also a small decrease in the expenditure of both ordinary and capital accounts.

A WASTE OF TIME.

"It's a mighty strange thing," said Jackson savagely, but I always feel sleepier getting up in the morning than I do going to bed at night. I have to as if it were a waste of time and money to go to bed at all, to say nothing

"It does seem extravagant," said Wilikns.

"Yes, sir," continued Jackson, "I will feel as spry as a grasshopper at bed-time. Well, sir, in the morning, after a good night's rest, I'm as sleepy as an owl and as tired as a car horse."

"H'm," said Wilkins. "I'm more dead than alive until breakfast time, half-dead all day, brighten up at supper-time, and just begin to feel lively and brisk when it's time to go to bed."

"You should get a job of night-work," suggested Wilkins. 'I'll have to get something," said Jackson, "It's just like as if I had been out on a small tear the night before; frowsy, tired, sleepy, bleary, nasty taste, and all the rest of it." "And don't you know what you want for that?" asked Wilkins. "What?" "A Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablet before going to bed. Then you wake up fresh and hungry. You want to whistle and sing in the morning, you feel so good. Just like a blooming bird, eh?" said Jackson. "Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are 50 cents a box, aren't they?" "That's all," said Wilkins.

THE PROCESS OF

Would Precede and Follow Hostilities

In Case the Transvaal Trouble Is Not Peaceably Settled.

Dreyfus Excitement Subsiding-Esterhazy in Hiding.

The Queen Dragged Into the Church Controversy-Duke of Manchester Attends a Fall in a Bathing Suit.

[Special London Cable Letter.] London, Sept. 16.-Speculation regarding the events that would immediately precede and follow hostilities with the Transvaal continues to occupy public attention. It appears that no declaration of war is necessary. The process, according to good authority, would be a proclamation by the British high commissioner, Sir Alfred Milner, stating that the convention was annulled and that Queen Victoria had resumed the government of the country, known as the South African Republic. The general commanding the British expeditionary force would then be instructed to occupy the Transvaal and hold it until fresh government should be estab-hed. When the country should be lished. pacific a commission, doubtless in-cluding all classes of the inhabitants of the Transvaal, would be appointed to draft a new constitution. That all this is easier said than done is quite palpable, even to the most enthusiastic Englishman.

THE BOERS' STRENGTH. Estimates of the strength of the Boers widely diverge. Mr. John Morley referred to them as able to put an army of 50,000 men in the field, while the war office officials seem to think that 25,000 is all they could muster. As a matter of fact, their strength entirely depends upon the assistance they receive from the Orange-Free State and the natives, which it is impossible to gauge.

The present atmosphere of war has enormously stimulated army recruiting. Crowds of young men surround the offices and daily large batches take the Queen's shilling.

THE DREYFUS EXCITEMENT SUB-SIDING.

The indignation over the Dreyfus verdict seems to have somewhat subsided. This is doubtless due to the rumors of his probable pardon. Esterhazy is staying at a hotel in the Island of Guernsey, practically in hiding, for he spends his days in his room, only venturing out at night. It is said that the feeling of the Channel Islanders towards him is by no means friendly.

In Belgium the Dreyfus excitement and even reproductions of the hand-writing of Dreyfus and Esterhazy.

THE QUEEN AND THE CHURCH. The Queen has been dragged into the church fight. She is quoted as saying to a clergyman, regarding the archbishop's decision: "Surely if incense is illegal now it must have been so 40 years ago. Why did they not discover it sooner?" This enunciation by the head of the church delights the Ritualists.

LORD PAUNCEFOTE'S SUCCESSOR. Commenting upon the difficulty experienced in finding a successor, as ambassador at Washington, to Lord Pauncefote, a weekly paper says it is more than likely that Sir Thomas mer King Milan, is disclosing a terrible Henry Sanderson, K.C.B., parliament undersecretary for foreign affairs since 1894 will receive the appointment to Washington as a reward for his long service in the parliament undersecretaryship.

GOSSIP.

The Duke of Manchester has created considerable talk and some scandal by appearing at Mrs. Hughes-Malletts' fancy dress ball at Dinard, in an abbreviated bathing suit. Mr. Andrew Carnegie's yacht Sea

Breeze, with himself and several titled commoners and their wives on board, broke down off the coast of Scotland several days ago. Distress signals were made, and the party was eventually taken off and landed by a fishing smack, and had to spend the night at the little town of Cromarty. The Fifes have now got the big steam yacht for Mr. A. J. Drexel, designed by Watson, in the framing stage. It is said that it will equal any I do going to bed at night. I have to pay for board and lodging, and I feel yacht affoat in speed and equipments. F. T. Harvey, of Chicago, who made a fortune recently in the chewing gum, combination, has been staying in Ireland, where he was born. A section of the Irish party has offered him one of their sure seats at the next tion. Mr. Harvey will not make a decision until he returns from his forthcoming visit to America.

Mr. William O'Brien's newspaper, the Irlsh People, made its first appearance in Dublin this week. The self-described organ of reunited Ireland maintains that all the Irish forces must be recast and recreated to insure sticcess. THE ESQUIMALT DEFENSES. Referring to a Halifax dispatch regarding the strengthening of the Esquimalt garrison, the Globe says it is gratifying that it is beginning to receive the appreciaton as a strategical position to which it is entitled. "One of these imperial coigns of vantage which have suffered from syste-matic neglect." The paper also says that a couple of years ago a British engineer officer was sent to Esquimalt to investigate the place, and adding that it was evident that he saw the futility of strengthening the fortifications unless manned by thoroughly efficient troops.

"The Canadian militia," says the obe, "is as useful as such a force is for local purposes, but only unless they receive sufficient training in gunnery can they be trusted with custody of such a valuable strategical

No Steps Backward

Frequent advices from our Mine Superintendent and others show that the Lardeau in general, and our property in particular, are going steadily forward in many ways.

Railways are being built, trails are being cut, new properties opened up, and an era or great prosperity is in sight.

At our own mine matters are being steadily and vigorously pushed. This week's daily papers showed a clipping from the Trout Lake Topic, of Sept. 2, evidencing the fact that our vigorous and telling work is causing comment up there. We have a great mine!

A letter received this morning from the superintendent says in regard to the large nugget daily expected: "I very much regret not being able to get the ore to you. I arranged with the packer to bring it in, but he made a failure. It was too heavy. I will divide it when I go up tomorrow and send at once."

Only until the end of September will we sell stock at TEN CENTS. Oct. t you will pay the advanced price.

At the Manchester peace meeting, last night, Right Hon. Leonard Henry Courtney, Liberal, formerly deputy speaker of the House of Commons, read a letter received from Mr. Herbert Spencer, protesting against the idea that the national honor would be enhanced by attacking a weak nation, mentioning that age and ill-health prevents him from aiding the peace move-ment, declaring it is undeniable that the Jameson raid was an attempt to usurp the Transvaal, and asserting that what the outlanders' bullets failed to do, they hope to do by votes. Continuing, the letter read: "It is said that our government is backing those whose avowed policy is expansion, while this less politely expressed means aggression, and for which there is a still less polite word, which is readily guessed."

THE BOYCOTT MOVEMENT. While many individual decisions to boycott the Paris Exhibition continue to be announced, there is no sign of any has resulted in the issuing of pictorial official action upon the part of any postcards, bearing portraits of the prominent figures in the Rennes drama, and even reproductions of the handhibition, which is impossible, because it implies interference in the internal affairs of an independent state, and they also threaten to withdraw their own exhibits, which is futile, for their competitors will immediately accept the vacant spaces." M. Meline, the former premier, continues his agitation for the convocation of the French chambers He has not yet obtained sufficient adhesion to effect his object, but the support obtained seems to point him out as likely to head the next government.

A TERRIBLE PICTURE. The treason trial now proceeding in Servia, in which nearly thirty members of the radical party are accused of conspiring to assist Knezevich to kill forpicture of governmental corruption. No tenable evidence has yet been given against the radicals, and evidently the trial is a mere pretext to destroy the radical party by imprisoning its chiefs. There is no doubt but that for the interference of Russia and Austria several of them would have been executed.

HAS MOST BICYCLES. Denver, Col., has more bicycles in proportion to its population than any other city in the country. Imagine 40,000 wheels in a city of 160,000, or one to every four persons, whether men, women or children, and you have an idea of the extent of the bicycle in dally service. They are used in every line of business, and the street car com-panies claim they lose traffic valued at $1,000,000 a year since the general application of wheels to business. In fact, one company went into the hands of a receiver two years ago, alleging that the universal wheel had impaired its earnings to such an extent that it could not meet its interest demands. The open weather and fine natural roads are largely responsible for the popularity of the wheel, as it is conceded that ordinary riders can use their wheels daily for 50 weeks out of the 52 and not suffer any annoyance from mud or snow. Add to this the fact that neither lights, brakes, or bells are required, and the agility required of the non-rider in taking care of himself can be appreciated. Denver is also said to be the only city in the country where the bicycle vote controls elections on municipal issues.

NEW YORK CARPENTERS ON STRIKE.

New York, Sept. 16 .- At noon today 8,500 carpenters and joiners in this city will lay down their tools with the understanding that they shall not return to work until their employers have consented to grant them an increase of wages from $3 50 to $4 a day, and a half-holiday on Saturday, all the year round. Notices of the demands were served on builders and constructors some time ago.

CAN SUIT THEMSELVES. New Haven, Conn., Sept. 16.-The final business session of the annual convention of the United Typothetae of America was held yesterday. The heated discussion expected in connection with the anti-union resolution did not materialize. This resolution urged the employment of non-union foremen and superintendents only. It was very quietly dropped, C. W. Edwards, of Philadelphia, offering the following substitute: "Resolved, that the members of the United Typothetae of America, in convention assembled, reserve to themselves the right to employ whosoever they see fit in the management of their respective offices." This was unanimously adopted. Kansas City, Mo., was chosen as the place of meeting of the next conven-

A freight train, known as the "Cannon Ball" passes through here daily from Stratford to London, following usually the noon passenger train, and owing to the pressure of Western Fair traffic, it has been common the past week for all trains to be delayed.

It was near 4 o'clock when Conductor Bright and Engineer Moore, of Stratford, got their writings from Operator Downs, at the Junction station to proceed to London. The train was a long one, and it was found impossible to climb the grade a mile south of the town. To get out of the difficulty Conductor Bright broke his train, taking the greater number of the cars ahead to Kelly's siding, three miles away, at the same time leaving a brakeman to flag any trains which might come up. gineer Walker, received orders at the Junction to proceed to London East, "avoiding all regulars." The signal of the brakeman from Bright's train went unnoticed until it was too late, and the rear end of the "Cannon Ball" was crashed into by No. 167.

At this point the track is built up, being between two hills. The engine and about ten cars of the latter train were totally destroyed. The locomotive lies down the bank, while the cars are piled high on the track. The caboose of the "Cannon Ball" and a passenger car which was at the rear end are total wrecks.

Auxiliary crews from Stratford and London are now working on the de-

Three boys, thought to be from Stratford, were stealing a ride on Conductor O'Neil's train. Two of them lost their lives, being crushed under a ton of stone. The third lad escaped uninjured, and ran away before he could be identified by any of the trainmen. The crew of train 167, by jumping, miraculously saved their lives. None of them are bruised even. The dead bodies were removed to T. T. Gamer's undertaking rooms and the coroner notified. An inquest will be held here today.

London, Saturday, Sept. 16.

The Western Fair.

The Western Fair has come and we once more, and it is satisfactory to be able to say that, on the whole, it has been a great success. The attendance, all things considered, has been very gratifying. Only on two former occasions has the attendance been greater. One of these occasions had the attraction of the Governor-General and Lady Aberdeen; and there all always be many who have a pardonable curiosity to get a peep at personages whose names are promthently before the public. This year, there were no drawing cards in the way of "big guns." As for last year's attendance, that was too exceptional to afford ground for ordinary comparison. The Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific were in the midst of a rate war, and one could travel all the way from Toronto to London for a dollar, and from any of the towns of Western Ontario for a fraction of that amount. When the stiffened rates of this year are remembered, the large attendance of those who came by rail is a splendid tribute to the attractions of the Western Fair as an exhibition, and of London as a city.

While the Fair, as a whole, well maintained its prestige, there have been a few criticisms which no doubt will be considered by the management. It is complained that the exhibits in the main building might have enhanced and dignified; that there were too many fakir shows and flim-flam devices permitted on the grounds; and that the "attractions" might well be made to cover a wider and more educative range, especially if the duration of the Fair were extended.

There is another complaint the management might consider, namely, that the "attractions" are kept up, without intermission, all afternoon, and all evening, thereby imposing a sort of fine, in the way of the fear of missing something, upon many who would otherwise like to spend a portion of and visiting the stores. This would be equally agreeable to outside visitors and London merchants.

Once more, we must express satisfaction that our splendid annual exhibition has this year made so good a record. It is not too early to begin now to plan ahead for next year. With a 'big gun" or two secured; with a little infusion of new blood in the directorate from time to time; with a study of the best means of awakening more enthusiasm on the part of the citizens; with a rigid suppression of fakirs; and the judicious extension of features calculated to attract, educate, and refine—there is no reason why next year's and succeeding Western Fairs should not eclipse each previous record. But it will not do to

Technical Education in Toronto

A sub-committee of the Toronto City Council has come to an agreement with the Minister of Education regarding the establishment of a technical school in Toronto. The Minister promises a provincial grant of $3,000 toward the maintenance of the school. provided the site is suitable and that $100,000 is spent on building and equip-

Courses of instruction must be supplied for daily classes during the ordinary public school hours, and night classes for artisans, workingmen and others. The day pupils should have passed the entrance examination or shown that they had obtained a good English education, and should have attained the age of 14 or 15 years. Pupils to the evening classes should be taken, irrespective of age, sex or educational status. Mr. Ross further requires that courses should be provided for a good commercial education, for instruction in drawing, in its relation to decoration and the mechanical arts, instruction in the principles of the mechanical powers, the use of steam and electricity, instruction in chemistry, commercial arithmetic and commercial geography, with particular reference to the countries with which Canada carries on an import and export trade; that provision be also made for training in the use of tools and machinery; that classes be ppened in the afternoon and evening for instruction in domestic science; that teachers of well-known fitness in the various courses of study be appointed; that the classes be opened to e reasonable number of pupils from every part of the province on payment of moderate fee. "It is not the desire of the Education Department, or of the Government," the Minister continues, "that the city should establish a Trade School, as the artisan and workingmen of Ontario already possess a praiseworthy skill in their various departments of industry. No doubt, however, the special and scientific training of such a school as the Government desires to establish would still further increase their usefulness, and add to their income, as well as to the value of the products of their industry. It is admitted on all hands that a knowledge of the principles underlying any trade or calling is the best way to get the most satisfactory results for both employer and em-

Hugh John's Dilemma.

The Opposition leader in the Manitoba Legislature has fallen into a heap of trouble, from which it seems impossible for him to extricate himself. At Neepawa, speaking to an exclusively English assemblage, Mr. Macdonald

"I will have added to the next fran-chise act an additional clause cutting out every man who cannot sign his name in English and who cannot read the Manitoba Act in English." This was a clear declaration. Mr.

Macdonald is now kept busy trying to get out of the hole into which he deliberately crawled. It will be observed that in this statement he made no exception as to nationalities. But finding that there are worthy and industrious settlers who, though they have been in the country for years, cannot meet the qualification he has prescribed, and, finding, also, that many votes are involved, Mr. Macdonald has written to an Icelandic editor to say that he did not mean what he said-that his disfranchisement would only extend to Galicians and Doukhobors, who have recently come to the country. It is easily seen that this is a clumsy evasion, because the Galicians and Doukhobors who have recently come to Canada cannot, under our laws, qualify as British citizens for years to come, and cannot therefore have their names on the voters' list, to be erased as Mr. Macdonald threatens. It must certainly be voters already qualified to whom Mr. Macdonald had reference. That he should be compelled to turn such an their time down town seeing the sights undignified somersault shows a lack of political discretion and a fluidity of political principle which mark him as an unsafe leader.

Another faux pas of Hugh John's was his statement to this effect: "At an election, if they (the Galicians) ever become entitled to vote, what would it mean? They will be influenced by money. They will be influenced by the church—they are Roman Catholics. That condition of things is not desirable. The people here do not want to be swamped by a lot of ignorant foreigners."

Hugh John was sharply taken to task for this virtual insult to the Roman Catholic community. He saw his blunder and immediately tried to rectify it by saying that he meant no invidious reference to the Catholic Church, but was opposing the general principle of enfranchising foreign sects who would vote as they were commanded by their particular church, Protestant or Catholie. This kind of squirming deceives nobody and Hugh John stands convicted of trying to apto religious and racial pre-

Our Lesson From Glasgow.

Hon. Thomas Eallantyne, former Speaker of the Ontario Legislature, has returned from an extended trip to Great Britain. Mr. Ballantyne was much impressed by the overflowing prosperity of the mother country. He had many opportunities to converse with mechanics, and they informed him that wages were never so high nor work so plentiful as at present. In Glasgow It is exceedingly difficult to get men for any kind of employment. The scarcity of farm laborers has put many farmers in a quandary, although the wages of this class of help are double what they were when Mr. Ballantype first left his native land. The honorable gentleman while in Glasgow made a thorough study dits municipal system, and tells the Stratford Herald his conclusions,

"The municipal management is the best I have ever seen. Its street car service, gas and water and parks are about perfect. The street cars were being changed from horse to electriwhen I was there. The horses work only three hours a day the men nine. The road bed is so perfect that you can easily jump on the horse cars when they are going at a moderate You can go almost any disyou would require for one trip for a half-penny, and over the city for a pen-The result of low fares is seen in the splendid service and receipts. The latter are now £1,000 per week in adthe manager, receives a salary of £1,250, and has refused an offer of £2,000 to go to London in a similar capacity. The secret of the whole successful municipal management is efficient heads of departments and continuing men in office as councilors who have proved themselves efficient and Gas, the best 22 candle-power, 2s 2d per M. The parks are numerous and well supplied with music, so that there is no individual who cannot reach one of them at a cost of a cent and enjoy fresh breezes with the music. "The Wheat Lands of Canada" is he title of an important contribution to the wheat controversy which is announced to appear in the October num ber of Appleton's Popular Science Monthly. The author, Mr. S. C. Ropes, brings out in a very striking manner the enormous possibilities of Canada as a wheat producer, and dispels the last vestige of reason for any uneasiness over Sir William Crookes' statement that the time was not far distant when wheat would be a luxury.

The Buffalo Times has given a fresh proof of its resources by issuing Pan-American Exposition edition, which is very ample and attractive. The frontispiece is handsomely designed, representing Columbia crowning the various industrial arts, the picture being set in a frame made of the national emblems of every American country. The edition is a ver-Itable portrait gallery of leading Americans, the half-tones being especially fine. There is a great deal relating to Ruffalo in general and the coming Exposition in particular. The people of Buffalo have taken hold of the Exhibition scheme with enthusiasm, and are already pushing preparations for 1901. If the Times' edition is an example of the energy and enterprise which is being put into the project it cannot fail to be a triumph.

The Nelson, B. C., Board of Trade with true western enterprise, has issued a pamphlet setting forth the claims of Nelson as "the largest and busiest inland city in British Columbia." The pamphlet is handsomely illustrated with views of Nelson. The city is superbly situated on the shore of the western arm of Kootenay Lake, surrounded by mountain grandeur. Looking at the massive brick blocks and well-ordered streets, it is difficult to realize that ten years ago only a few log huts stood on the same site. Nelson is the center of the Kootenay district. It has railway connections with the C. P. R. and the Great Northern, and is the chief port of the Kootenay Lake trade, in which several steamship lines are engaged. The pamphlet leads one to infer that not the least factor in Nelson's success has been a live board

For the Tupper Attack on Mr. Sifton and Major Walsh.

Recent Events Shed Light on the Subject

Ottawa, Sept. 16 .- During the late session of parliament it was a matter of common remark that the attitude of Sir Charles Tupper and his son, Sir Hibbert Tupper, toward Mr. Sifton, and particularly toward Major Walsh, could not be explained upon political grounds. There was a spirit of virulent personal animosity manifested by the Tuppers, father and son, but particularly by the latter, which ordinary political motives did not adequately account for. It was noticeable that Tupper, jun., went out of his way to mak a scandalous and unprecedented personal attack upon Major Walsh, and every reference that gallant officer indicated most extreme personal hatred. The explanation of this fact was not appar ent at that time, but it was eviden to close observers that there inter something behind what was stated to A recent event throws a flood of light upon these attacks, and shows that so far from being actuated by public motives, the hostility arose from the most ignoble reasons. Notice wit has lately been served upon Major Walsh on the part of the Hon. Edgar Dewdney, formerly minister of the interior, later on lieutenant-governor of British Columbia, and later still the manager of Sir Charles Tupper's Klondike company. Dewdney procured a permit to take 3,000 gallons of liquor into the Klondike last year from the governor of the Northwest Territories. This permit was issued without the knowledge of the department of the interior, and it appears that Major Walsh, who was trying to prevent the importation of the liquor into the Yukon caused the liquor to be seized. the department of justice, decided that the permit was valld, the department of the interior so advised Major Walsh, and he released the liquor, but in the meantime Dewdney alleges that the price of whisky had fallen, and he claims that he lost a portion of the profits which he otherwise might have made. He now sues Major Walsh for The government, of course stands behind Major Walsh, and will defend the action.

It is noticeable that Sir Hibbert's firm are Mr. Dewdney's attorneys in bringing the action.

We therefore have the ex-minister of the interior, Mr. Dewdney, manage of Sir Charles Tupper's company through his solicitor, the ex-minister of justice, suing for damages because he was prevented from making as much money as he wished to make out of a whisky deal in the Yukon. The damages claimed are $35,000.

In view of the above facts, it is not difficult to account for the bitterness of the attack on Major Walsh. It seems that disappointed greed over a whisky transaction, and not public spirit has been the ruling motive. Sir Hibbert has again shown his total lack of ordinary judgment, and has let the cat out of the bag in a most ummistakable manner The fact of the matter seems to be that the whole crusade on the Yukon question has been pushed on by a set of men whose grievances seem to be that they were not permitted to ex-ploit the Yukon Territory, and its resources and opportunities for their own personal aggrandizement.

My second child got eozems when seven months old. Three months later my first child got is, and following him, the last one, two years old, feil a victim. For twenty months they suffered faarful agony. Their whole bodies, especially their faces, were so sore and raw that the little ones were blind half the time. No words can describe the suffering of my second child, whose whole body was one bloody mass. He was constantly crying, could get no sleep, and he actually did not look human. I tried doctor after doctor, but none afforded the slightest relief. I decided to try CUTICURA. The first application prought relief in each case, and after fourteen days' treatment with CUTICURA SOAP and CUTI-CURA (ointment), the worst case was cured, and the whole neighborhood is surprised at the wonderful effect of CUTICURA. I continue the use of CUTICURA SOAP for the children, because it makes the little ones look splendid. Nov. 28, 1898. Mrs. ANNIE RING, 515 E. 13th St., New York City.

American Markets. CHICAGO, Sept. 15.-Trading in wheat today was marked by weakness of September and comparative firmness in deferred futures. Elevator interests were willing to sell September, and disposed of enough to cut %c off previous prices. December was helped by firm Northwest markets and good export demand, and closed %c higher. Corn advanced %c for December, and %c for September. Oats wavanced about %c. Provisions of 2½c to 5c lower. Northwest receipts were 1,022 cars, against 821 last week and 1,099 a year ago. Chicago receipts were 133 cars, 11 of contract grade. Total primary receipts were 1,245,000 bushels, against 1,308,000 a year ago. The Northwest predicted heavier receipts next week. #### A GLIMPSE OF GOTEBURG

A City of Gardens and Conservatories -A Traveler's Impressions of Sweden.

Goteborg, Sweden, Aug. 25 .- Sweden is flatter and less wild than Norway, lacking the rugged grandeur of the latter; still, it is pretty, though monotonof calves was fair, and the demand ous-marshy pastures, wooded hills, active enough to readily absorb the glimpses of blue fjords, hundreds of ous-marshy pastures, wooded hills, still blue lakes, and now and then you come suddenly upon a rushing Niagara in miniature. Norway and Sweden are united under one king-the present Oscar II.—the ideal king of the age, I am told; an eloquent orator, a remarkable linguist, a man of striking and magnetic presence, and possessing a splendid memory. His queen, Sophie, is also well-beloved in both countries, though Norway is now chafing under the bond of union.

> The Swedes are called the French-men of the north. Their politeness is overwhelming, embarrassing. Through the car windows we watched their greetings. The men always raise their hats to each other most carefully, and after separation we saw one husband raise his hat with an elaborate sweep to his wife, then kiss her hand, and finally embrace her. The porters on the trains bow and receive bows from those on the platform when the train draws in, and again as it leaves.

> A custom peculiar to Sweden is the serving of various hors d'oeuvres as appetizers. Sometimes one helps oneself from a side table; at others, before you commence your dinner, eleven or twelve small dishes containing anchovies, radishes, sardines, cheese, etc., are placed before you. You are expected to taste all, using one little plate only. "Swedish punch," the national drink, is made of rum, lemon and sugar, and is very sweet and not very palatable.

> I have found a hint from an old traveler in Scandinavia extremely useful. Supply yourself with safety pins to fasten the four corners of the sheet in your bed to the mattress, otherwise they will assuredly part company. "Making beds" is not one of the strong points of the Scandinavians.

Goteborg possesses most levely betan-ical gardens, with conservatories full of rare palms and exotic plants. The fuchsia, red and blue, and pink and white varieties, are especially beautiful. In the gardens is a pretty build-ing used as a cafe. We dired one night on the balcony, listening to some very good music, and watching the crowds promenading below. It was all very foreign and interesting,

Goteborg is a busy port, with little of interest to the visitor except its numerous gardens and an extensive park. The front streets are broad, and end in wide squares. Down the back streets Minard's Liniment ourse garget incows

The method employed by the Goteborg licensing system is very interesting, and I am told it has done much since It was introduced several years I ago to diminish drunkenness. A company is empowered to buy up all licenses and existing rights, and to open a certain number of stores for the sale of pure and unadulterated spirits, the salaried managers of which have no interest whatsoever in the sale of the spirits. The company, which is controlled by the municipality, after deducting interest at the rate of 5 per cent on the capital expended, hands the surplus profits to the civic authorities, affording much relief to the ratepayers, and causing those who impoverich themselves by intemperance to bear some of the burden of the maintenance of the poor.

Pickell's First Wife Admits Suing for a Divorce.

No Evidence so Far to Show That the Decree Was Granted-Pickell Sent for Trial, and Released on Bail-Police Court Happenings.

Jordan Pickell, who was arrested yesterday on a charge of bigamy, appeared before Magistrate Parke this morning, and was sent for trial at the assizes. Mrs. Esther Pickell, the complainant, was the first witness. Mrs. Pickell is apparently about 40 years of age. She wore a neat brown suit, and gave her evidence calmly, without any visible emotion. In her erms she carried her fourteen-months'

ried to him?

Witness—On Nov. 20, 1881, just eighteen years ago, near the town of Norwich, in the township of Burford, by Rev. Mr. Law, of the Burford church. She and her husband then went to Tilsonburg, she said, and lived there some months, after which they moved to the residence of Pickell's father in Dorchester. Later they moved to London, and from here went moved to London, and from here went to Detroit, some twelve years ago.

They lived together until a year ago last April, when Pickell left for parts unknown, taking their boy, Herbert,

She also acknowledged employing a solicitor named Collins to institute the divorce proceedings. Two other documents signed by the state attorney were produced in court, showing that Mrs. Pickell had asked for a divorce. Mrs. Pickell said she was taken to court by neighbors, and the reason she applied for a divorce was that Pickell had the ambulance at the door of the house to have her taken to Wayne County Asylum.

Mr. Essery—Did you not go to a house where Mr. Pickell was lying sick in bed and break open a desk with an axe and take some papers away? Witness-No, sir, I did not.

Witness could not remember the wear in which this occurred, but thought it was in 1897, before Pickell left her. She had not been in the asylum since.

Mrs. Annie Pickell, who was Miss Annie Smith, said she was married to the prisoner on March 29 last, at her father's residence, con. 1, Bosanquet, by the Rev. A. E. Hannahson, Presbyterian minister at Arkona. They had lived together ever since.

Pickell was sent for trial. He was released on bail. Bail was fixed at $600 personal and two other securities of $300 each.

STONE-THROWING CASE.

George Pethic, non-union motorman, out South Africa."
sworn, was on car 72, and when he was passing Clarence street, shortly after 10 o'clock, he saw a union 'bus running just ahead of him. The prisoner was acting as conductor on the 'bus, and he saw him turn round and deliberately throw a stone at the car, which struck pulses as no other band has been able him in the pit of the stomach. He (Pethic) fell up against the side of the vestibule and the car shot forward as his hand dropped from the con-troller. He was completely helpless for a block, and the car instead of stopping at Richmond street, as is cus-tomary, continued west. When just west of Richmond, Chas. Tolmie, another employe of the company, boarded the car and reversed the lever, bringing it to a stop. He had been suffering from the blow ever since. Witness recognized a large stone produced in court as the one that struck him. If the stone had missed him it would have struck some of the passengers in the car.

Chas. Tolmie was on duty at the corner of Richmond and Dundas streets. He noticed the car not stopping at the usual place and got aboard to find the reason of this. He found Pethic leaning against the vesitbule window. He He reversed the motor and stopped the car, and picked up the stone produced in court.

Mr. Essery stated that he had a number of witnesses present to prove an alibi. His instructions were that the prisoner was not on a 'bus that night, and he thought it would be an easy matter to prove it a case of mis-taken identity. The prisoner, he underfriend that night, and the sick man, his mother and sister would testify to this fact.

GREAT RECORD FOR FAIR WEEK

Many Articles Restored Through The London Advertiser's Influence.

Actual Circulation Brings Results Every Time-The "Old Home Paper" Has It.

Some people become very careless of their property when in crowds, such as are brought together by the Western Fair, and as a result many valuables are lost, some of which fall into honest people's hands, while others never make an effort to find the owner. This week has been a record-breaker, and The Advertiser has done splendid service in restoring property to owners who thought they had parted with it for ever. Nine articles were found through the medium of the Daily Advertiser the past five days, three coming in today.

The Western Fair directors lost a brass register and advertised for it in all the city papers on Friday. Mr. J. Lewis, 731 York street, returned the article shortly after the evening paper was issued. He saw the ad. in The Advertiser.

A purse belonging to Mrs. C. Edwards was found and returned to this office and advertised. Mrs. Edwards called this morning for her property. A silk bag containing valuable papers and money was lost by a lady visiting with Col. Culver, American con-bil here. This morning Mrs. J. O. Hayes, of Windsor, called to say her son Arthur had found the property. A telephone message brought Col. Culver to the office. This record is very gratifying to The Augustiser. The Advertiser has earned the repu-tation of being the hest meaning for tation of being the best medum for advertising in all branches, because its subscribers are scattered thickly over the city and through the surrounding country in such numbers that it is the most widely-read paper.

The Strange Metamorphosis.

On a certain Monday evening late in January, 1881, Paul Bultitude, Esq. (of Mincing Lane, colonial produce merchant), was sitting alone in his dining-room at Westbourne Terrace after dinner.

The room was a long and lofty one, furnished in the stern, uncompromis-ing style of the mahogany age, now supplemented by the later fashions of decorations which, in their outset original and artistic, seem fairly on the way to become as meaningless and conwentional. Here was no skillfully contrasted hades of gray or green, no dado, no distemper on the walls; the woodwork was grained and varnished after the nanner of the Philistines, the walls prepared in dark crimson, with heavy curtains of the same color, and the deboard dinner-wagon, and row of tiff chairs were all carved in the same nassive and expensive style of ugli-The pictures were those familiar presentments of dirty rabbits, fat white horses, bloated goddesses, and isshapen boors, by masters who, if younger than they assume to be, must have been quite old enough to know

Mr. Bultitude was a tall and portly erson, of a somewhat pompous and rbearing demeanor; not much over but looking considerably older. He a high shining head, from which had tair had mostly departed, what the fremained being of a grizzled au-little, prominent pale-blue eyes with buryy eyelids and fierce, bushy, whitywn eyebrows. His general exof this, his big underlip dropped rather weakly and his double-chin slightly receded, giving a judge of character reason for suspecting that a certain obstinate positiveness observable in Mr. Bultitude's manner might possibly be due less to the possession of an unusually strong will than to the circumstances that, by some fortun-ate chance, that will had hitherto never met with serious opposition.

The room, with all its aesthetic enough, and Mr. Bultitude's attitude he was lying back in a well-wadded leather arm-chair, with a glass of claret at his elbow and his feet stretched out toward the ruddy blaze of the fire seemed at first sight to imply that happy after-dinner condi-tion of perfect satisfaction with one's self and things in general which is the natural outcome of a good cook, a good conscience, and a good diges-

At first sight; because his face did not confirm the impression-there was a latent uneasiness in it, an air of suppressed irritation, as if he expected and even dreaded to be disturbed at any moment, and yet was powerless to resent the intrusion as he would like

At the slightest sound in the hall butside he would half rise in his chair and glance at the door with a mixture of alarm and resignation, and as often as the steps died away and the Goor remained closed he would sink back and resettle himself with a shrug

Habitual novel readers on reading thus far will, I am afraid, prepare themselves for the arrival of a faithful cashier with news of irretrievable ruin, or a mysterious and cynical stranger threatening disclosures of a disgraceful nature.

But all such anticipations must at once be ruthlessly dispelled. Mr. Bultitude, although he was certainly a merchant, was a fairly successful one-in direct defiance of the laws of fiction, where any connection with commerce seems to lead naturally to failure in one of the three volumes. He was an old gentleman, too, of irreproachable character and antecedents. No Damocles' sword of exposure was swinging over his bald but blameless head; he had no disasters to fear, and no indiscretions to conceal. He had not been intended for melodrama, which, indeed, he would not have considered a respectable thing to be con-

In fact, the secret of his uneasiness was so absurdly simple and common-place that I am rather ashamed to have made even a temporary mystery of it.
His son Dick was about to return to school that evening, and Mr. Bultitude was expecting every moment to be called upon to go through a part-ing scene with him; that was really all that was troubling him.

This sounds very creditable to the tenderness of his feelings as a father for there are some parents who bear such a bereavement at the close of the holidays with extraordinary fortitude, if they do not actually betray an unusual satisfaction at the event. But it was not exactly from softness of heart that he was restless and impatient, nor did he dread any severe strain upon his emotions. He was not much given to sentiment, and was the author of more than one of those pathetically indignant letters to the papers, in which the British parent de-

He was one of those nervous and fidgety persons who cannot understand their own children, looking on them as objectionable monsters whose next movements are uncertain—much as Frankenstein must have felt towards his monster.

He hated to have a boy about the house, and positively writhed under the irrelevent and irrepressible ques-tions, the unnecessary noises and boistrous spirits, which nothing would subdue; his son's society was to him simply an abominable nuisance, and he pined and yearned for a release from it from the day the holidays be-

He had been a widower for some years, and no doubt the loss of a mother's loving tact, which can check the heedless merriment before it becomes intolerable, and interpret and soften the most peevish and unreason-ableness of rebukes, had done much to make the relations between parents and children more strained than they might otherwise have been.

As it was, Dick's fear of his father was just great enough to prevent any cordiality between them, and not sufficient to make him careful to avoid offense, and it is not surprising if, when the time came for him to return to his house of bondage at Dr. Grimstone's, Crichton House, Rodwell Regis, he left his father anything but inconsolable.

Just new, although Mr. Bultitude was so near the hour of his deliver-ance, he still had a bad quarter of an hour before him, in which the last farewells must be said, and he found it impossible, under these circum-stances to compose himself for a quiet half hour's nap, to retire to the billiard room for a cup of coffee and a mild cigar, as he would otherwise have done-since he was certain to be dis-

And there was another thing which harrassed him, and that was a haunting dread lest at the last moment some unforeseen accident should prevent the boy's departure after all. He had some grounds for this, for only a week before a sudden and unprecedented snowstorm had dashed his hopes, on the eve of their fulfillment, by forcing the doctor to postpone the day on which the school was to reassemble. and now Paul sat on brambles until he had seen the house definitely rid of his son's presence.

All this time while the father was fretting and fuming in his arm-chair, the son, the unlucky cause of all this discomfort, had been standing on the mat outside the door, trying to screw up enough courage to go in as if nothing was the matter with him.

He was not looking particularly boistrous just then. On the contrary, his face was pale, and his eyes rather redder than he would quite care for them to be seen by any of the "fellows" at Crichton House. All the life and spirits had gone out of him for the time; he had a troublesome dryness in his throat, and a general sensation of chill-heaviness, which he himself would have described—expressively enough, if not with academical elegance—as "feeling beastly."

The stoutest-hearted boy, returning to the most perfect of schools, cannot always escape something of this at that dark hour when the sands of the holidays have run out to their last golden grain, and when the boxes are standing corded and labeled in the passage, and some one is going to

Dick had just gone the round of the house, bidding dreary farewells to all servants; an unpleasant ordeal which he would gladly have dispensed with, if possible, and which did not serve to raise his spirits.

Upstairs, in the bright nursery, he had found his old nurse sitting sewing by the high wire fender. She was a stern, hard-featured old lady, who had systematically slapped him through infancy into boyhood, and he had had some stormy passages with her during the past few weeks; but she softened now in the most unexpected manner as she said good-bye, and told him he was a "pleasant, goodhearted young gentleman, after all, though that aggravating and contrary sometimes." And then she predicted, with some of the rashness attaching to irresponsibility, that he would be 'the best boy this next term as ever was, and work hard at all his lessons. and bring home a prize"-but all this unusual gentleness only made the in-terview more difficult to come out of with any credit for self-control. Then downstairs, the cook had come up in her evening brown print and clean collar, from her warm, spicescented kitchen to remark cheerily that "Lor' bless his heart, what with all these telegrafts and things, time flew so fast now-a-days that they'd be having him back again before they all knew where they were."

And this had a certain spurious consolation about it, until one saw that, after all, it put the case entirely from her own stand-point. (To be continued.)

With a Giant Moose in Lake Edward, Que.

It Befell an American Colonel and

His Fishing Guides.

[Quebec Telegraph] Some extraordinary stories of adventures with giant moose in New-Brunswick and Maine have appeared in print, but none that for interest can exceed the recent experience of a party of men on Lake Edward, in this province, who, having lassoed a large moose in the water were towed ashore in their steamer by the moose, which finally gave them the slip after an exciting contest. Lake Edward, which is 22 miles long, and one of the most picturesque and most richly stocked trout lakes in the Province of Quebec, is 113 miles from Quebec city, on the line of the Quebec and Lake St. John Rail-On Tuesday, June 20 last, Col. Blair, a banker, of Scranton, Pa., was proceeding down the lake with two guides on board the steamer Grace, a screw vessel 28 feet in length. With him were his two fishing guides-Jos. Dechene and his brother-in-law, Loni Muir. When they had gone about four miles down the lake and had almost reached the old cabin still known as Adirondack Murray's camp, Joseph who is half an Indian, noticed a moose swimming in the lake, about a mile ahead of them. He signaled the en-gineer, George Grenier, to shut the steam off, and pointing the animal out to Loni Muir, he tifted his bark canoe off the steamer into the water, and started out to intercept the moose. Col. story of the adventure, as reported in Quebec by people who claimed to have had it related to them by him, was of so remarkable a character that having failed to find him, I ran up to Lake Edward and took it down from Joe Dechene's recital of the facts, rattled off by him in very intelligent Canadian French, with the usual gesticulations, in the presence of his brother-in-law, Loni Muir, and of his employer, Bob Rowley, the lessee of the lake. The remarkable story to which I listened fully confirmed all the stories of the adventure attributed in Quebec to Col. Blair. Its author, Joe Dechene, looks and acts more like a Frenchman than an Indian, though his father was a halfbreed Montagnais and his mother a full-blooded Abenaqui. He is noted as being one of the strongest guides in the country, being of athletic build, some five feet nine inches in height and weighing 155 pounds. When asked to relate what happened when

with his brother-in-law to hunt the moose, he told this story: As the animal was apparently bent upon crossing the lake in front of the steamer's bows, we dropped back, and by a circular course contrived, unobserved, to approach it from the other side, thus getting in rear of the beast, and between it and the shore from which it had set out to cross the lake. The moose was thus hemmed in by the steamer on the one hand and the canoe on the other. The latter gained rapidly on the animal, and the more fatigued it became the harder it was driven by us towards the steamer. I signaled the steamer to come up on the other side of the animal and head it off. The engineer did so, but when we closed in upon it the moose, which had hitherto paid all its attention to the steamer, charged at us in the cance, striking out with it fore feet and endeavoring to hurl itself upon us-its eyes glaring and as large as my fists. Meanwhile I had called to George Grenier, the engineer, to throw a rope from the steamer over its head, and as he tried to tighten it there, the moose promptly turned from us to attack Grenier, raising itself in the water in a most extraordinary fashion and striking out at the steam launch with its fore feet. As he gave the animal rope, the engineer made an effort to climb up on the awning of his vessel thinking that the moose was about to come aboard, and declaring that he was afraid of a beast that used its front legs so freely. I gave the canoe a turn with my paddle and leaped aboard the launch, fearful that Grenier would let go the rope. We pulled on it together, and when Loni joined us and took hold with me, the engineer put on steam again and away we went towing the moose in the water at such a rate and with the rope so tightened around his neck that after a little while he was in danger of drowning. We hauled him in close to the steamer, and I took hold of his big ears to keep his mouth and nose above water. At times I tired of this, and put one hand right under his nose to keep it out of water. In spite of this I feared that he would choke to death and called to the engineer to go ashore so that we might secure him in some other manner. Loni, my brother-in-law, was op-posed to running ashore with the animal, but I felt that we could not tow him back to the station alive, and we headed for land. As the vessel slowed a little we managed to tie his forelegs together and almost succeeded in binding the hind legs, too. As we neared the shore I saw that I had made a mistake and that the moose was more than we could control. As his feet touched the ground where the lake gradually shallowed towards the shore nearly a quarter of a mile before reaching it, the captive brute went forward by great leaps and bounds, fifteen feet at a time. Three of us hung on to the rope that held him and pried out our feet against the steamer's side, but he quickly towed us ashore in spite of all our efforts. Meanwhile the engineer had tied the end of the rope to the vessel's anchor and thrown the latter overboard. Having succeeded in grounding the steamer, the moose tore away from us, smashing the threequarter inch rope that bound his limbs as if it had been twine. He leaped for the woods, but the anchor caught up a sawlog that lay on the shore. This he dragged behind him, apparently with the greatest ease, until it caught upon for at least three or four feet, and seeing that the animal had brought to a standard, three jumped into the water and ashore after him, my idea being to the him securely. As we approached him, the moose charged us ferociously three different times, twisting his rope around a tree as he did so. He was a horrible sight. With his mouth wide open, howling with rage, he bounded towards us, his ears thrown back upon his neek like those of a hitlage here. his neck like those of a biting horse, while the hair upon the back of his neck stood up like bristles, several inches high. His continued efforts to reach us very nearly strangled him and he fell exhausted to the ground. I rushed forward and secured his forelegs with a stout rope, and was about to fasten his hind legs, when he startto fasten his hind legs, when he started in to kick so vigorously that I had to get out of his way in order to avoid being killed. He got up on his feet, but not before we had unwound his tow line from the tree and taken the end of it and the anchor aboard the steamer. The engineer had now got up eighty pounds of steam, and we decided to tow him up the lake. The boat had been got well affoat, but it was all we could do to overcome the desperate resistance of the powerful brute and tow him again into the water. Before we could get him into deep water, however, he had succeeded, by a series of jerks, in shaking the rope over one of his ears, and the next moment was free, his new and short stumpy horns being insufficient to re-tain the line. His first act on finding that there was no longer any strain upon him was to turn round to see if he was really free. Finding that the rope was no longer suspended from his neck, he shook his head gaily and trotted off into the wood. As he disappeared among the trees we noticed that he had about thirty feet of rope dangling from one of his front legs. We put the steamer about again and leaped ashore to follow the escaped prisoner, but without success. A little later he came out of the woods 200 yards below and again took to the water. He did not swim far enough from land to enable us to get between him and the shore, but had evidently come down for a bath to escape from the myriads of flies that clung to his eyes, his nose, and the dreadful sores upon his neck where he had been chafed by the rope. His tongue was hanging out, and he gazed curiously at the steamer until it had disappeared from view around a neighboring point, on its way home to its dock. There is no doubt, said Joe, that if we had kept the brute in the water when we first had him there we should have succeeded in keeping him a prisoner. The whole adventure was of so remarkable a character that all the men who participated in it agree that they would not have believed it had they not seen

Joe Dechene undoubtedly owes his life to the fact that he followed his brother-in-law's advice when engaged in chasing the moose in the canoe. They gained rapidly on the animal, and Colonel Blair declares that he seldom saw a prettier sight than the manner in which the two French-Canadian guides made the birch-bark canoe leap and dart over the surface of the water as if it were itself a thing of life and action. As they approached the moose, Joe wanted to catch it by the tail and thus compel it to tow them ashore. Loni Muir objected, saying that he was not yet ready to be killed, and Joe saw quite enough of the brute's strength and strange antics later to make him thankful that he is alive and well to-Lake Edward Hotel. It towed ashore two men, who chased it in the lake, and when they reached shallow water one of them leaped upon the animal's back and brought him down; when he was secured with ropes and brought up to the station in the canoe. He is rretty animal, about three years old. with horns in the velvet about a foot long, and was secured by Frank Bignell, a well-known land surveyor. Joe Dechene was his canoeman, and was this experience that suggested the same method of capturing the moose.-

WIVES OLDER THAN HUSBANDS

Some Notable Instances Where Ma ture Women Have Wedded Young Men.

Mrs. Lily Langtry, aged 47, has married Hugo Gerald de Bathe, aged 28, who has not much money, but will one day be a baronet, in spite of all an irate father can do. Lady Randolph Churchill, aged presumably 45 at least, is engaged to marry Lieut. Cornwallis-West, who is exactly two weeks older than her oldest son. It is said that Cleopatra longed to wed the young Augustus for his youth as well as his power.

In the days of good Queen Anne,
Mr. Joseph Addison, remarked through the mouth of Will Honeycomb that many a man who had wasted months sueing for an icy girl of 15, a little later made his fortune by running away with her grandmother. That was, perhaps, in part the wisdom of experience. Addison himself married a titled and wealthy widow, the Countess of Warwick. He had been engaged as tutor to her son, the young earl. Before the tutoring ended he married the earl's mother, a lady with a temper to match her rank, so it is hardly necessary to add they lived unhappy ever after.

Samuel Johnson was more fortunate. He married a woman twenty years older than himself, fat, simple-minded and much given to gaudy frocks, but to the day of her death he worship-ped his "dear Titty," and thought the world never held such another beauty. Disraeli, it is likely, married through interested motives, but it is unquestionable that he became passionately attached to his wife, although she was very much older than himself, and almost painfully insignificant-looking.
but she had tact enough and money enough, to help him become three times Prime Minister of England. He paid her only a deserved tribute in her own right, Countess of Beaconssumed the title, but solely as a mark of deference to her wishes.

Lady Salisbury, wife of the present premier, is older than her husband, the marquis. Like the Countess of Beaconstield she has been a very present help throughout her noble husband's career. Theirs was a love match, contracted in the very face of sandence. There were several ex-

Plenty of notable women have mated themselves unsuitably in age.
Baroness Bourdett-Coutts, for example, who, when she was young and only Miss Bourdett-Coutts, yet the greatest heiress in England, refused the Iron Duke of Wellington, and 40 years later lost the favor of her Queen by marrying a brisk young American, William Ashmead Bartlett, exactly half as old as herself.

Dinah Maria Mulock married a man whom she had fondled as a baby, whom she had fondled as a baby, when she was herself a woman grown. He was very badly burt in a railway accident, lost a leg, indeed, and came near dying. Miss Mulock nursed him, and in the end married him, in spite of the disparity in years.

George Eliot is another of the literary lights. Her "Scotch marriage" to Mr. Lewes-which in England was no marriage at all-neither astonished nor grieved her world half so much as did her later legal union to Mr. Cross —who might easily have been her son.
Elizabeth Stuart Phelps is said by those who should know to be just one year younger than the mother of her husband, Herbert D. Ward.

There have been plenty of such marriages among America's social leaders. Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont has several years the advantage of her husband. So has her new daughter-in-law, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, jun. The number is variously stated at from four to ten—with odds on the latter figure. Mrs. James Speyer is more than 20 years the senior of her banker husband. The pair are said to have been drawn together by mutual love of good works. As all the world knows, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, jun., born Wilson, is so much older than her husband, the difference in age, on the wrong side, was at first the ostensible reason parental opposition to the match.

A Ratepayer Protests.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: As I passed along Dundas street yesterday afternoon to the corner of Richmond my attention was attracted by a street car striking one of the union busses, which I consider a most cowardly act on the part of the motormar, who evidently was back-ed up in this wilfulness by the street car company, as a group of its officials and non-union motormen and conductors, who were making the scene ridiculous by their outcries to induce patronage, simply smiled at each other and signaled the motorman ahead when they saw that the 'bus was blocked by other vehicles and could not get clear of the car. I also noticed that the city police, who are dependent upon London's citizens, turned their back to the affair and commenced jostling respectable and lawabiding citizens who chanced to be eye-witnesses of the disgraceful act, and as I passed over to the southeast corner of Dundas and Richmond, my gaze met a big police officer jostling some ladies with small children away from the corner, who told him they were waiting for a 'bus. He simply insisted on them going, saying he did not care—they must move on—and crowded them on away from where day, and that Loni interposed an ob-jection to the original plan of captur- noticed that the police paid no ating a live moose. That plan was not tention to the recklessness of the original with Joe, however. It had been motormen and a bunch of the direcworked upon the same tors who kept several empty cars lake ten days earlier, with a caribou, standing on both sides of Richmond which was, however, successfully secured, and is now in a corral at the them, and apparently when the streets were most crowded by 'busses, delivery wagons and other vehicles, the valuable property of city business men and ratepayers; but the drivers and conductors of the 'busses were made to toe the mark to the smallest degree, being continually annoyed by being held back or made to move when passengers were getting on or off the busses, subjecting them to great danger of being injured. It seems to me that this kind of conduct is disgracing the city far more than the affair of July 8 last, as it was a com-mon thing to hear strangers in the city, who did not understand the true state of affairs, ask, "Are the police working for the street railway company?" Now, sir, it seems to me that the time has arrived when the ratepayers should demand some measures from the city council to end this trouble, and let the street railway company fight their own battles, and the police guard the property of those who pay for protection, thus preventing any further house-breaking and robberies, which have recently occurred in the city. Trusting this will be granted space in your valuable paper, I am, yours respectfully H. J. HEATH,

A WELCOME HOME

Pleasant Reception to the Rev. W. J. Clark and Bride.

A reception was given last night to Rev. W. J. Clark and Mrs. Clark, after their return from their wedding trip. The reception took place in the lecture room of the First Presbyterian Church, London, and was under the direction of the ladies of the congregation. The local Presbyterian ministers were all present, with the exception of Rev. Thos. Wilson, who was unavoidably absent. Rev. Dr. Milligan, of Toronto, and Rev. Mr. Scott, of Hespeler, also dropped in. The incidental pro-gramme was quite informal. Miss Hutchinson and Miss Templeton each contributed a song. Mr. Barron gave the wedding march on the organ. The orchestra from a corner in the lecture hall filled in the interstices of conversation with subdued harmonies. The lecture hall had been metamorphosed into a drawing-room, with rugs, draperies, easy chairs, palms, etc., with admirable effect. Refreshments were served on the floor above, Mrs. Clark being taken in by Rev. Dr. Milligan.

Itching Piles.

False modesty causes many people to endure in silence the greatest misery imaginable from itching piles. One application of Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment will soothe and ease the itching, one box will completely cure the worst case of blind, itching, bleeding or protruding piles. You have no risk to run, for Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment is guaranteed to cure piles.

FAGGED OUT-None but those who have become fagged out know what a depressed, miserable feeling it is. All strength has gone, and despondency has taken hold of the sufferers. They feel as though there was nothing to live for. There, however, is a conlive for. There, however, is a cure-ene box of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills do wonders in restoring health strength. A Thorndale correspondent writes: In answer to inquiry as to how the Western Fair can be improved, I suggest as follows: Better train service from Thorndale. For instance, the early train announced for 9:25 here Thursday morning went flying through, while there was evidently plenty of room. The consequence was a number did not go at all; and on Wednesday morning no early train arrived, and the regular was away behind time. Thus a number who were already tired returned home."

CHOIR COMPETITIONS SUGGESTED A musical citizen says he would like to see some attractions added to the Fair of a different sort from those now in vogue. For example, he says, singing competitions are very popular in Wales and in England. He would Boers Adhere to the Seven Years' Franchise Law.

Alleged New Convention Drafted for Adoption by the Republic.

Noisy Proceedings at a Peace Meeting in Manchester.

London, Sept. 16. - A special dispatch from Pretoria says: The Transvaai's reply will be on the following lines: The Transvaal adheres to the seven years' franchise law, but is willing to consider, and, if necessary, to adopt any suggestions Great Britain may make with regard to the working of the law. In regard to the other points of Mr. Chamberlain's dispatch, the Transvaal boldly stands by the London convention. It is said the reply is

State Secretary Reitz, in the course expressed some doubt of an interv ny alteration would be as to whell made in the easting franchise law, out said he believed a way should and could be found o establish an arbitration court. As to suzerainty, the least said the soonest mended, remarked the state secretary.

The Globe, commenting on this letter, expresses the greatest regret at such language, and trusts Mr. Greene's words do not represent the attitude at the colonial office. The Globe adds: The blue book gives little encouragement to the belief that the Boers will show themselves reasonable.

The British high commission has issued a proclamation, prescribing several penalties for inciting the natives of Basutoland and other districts to rebellion.

THE DREYFUS CASE.

M. De Blowitz, the Paris correspondent of the Times, says: "I learn that Capt. Dreyfus will shortly withdraw his appeal for a revision of the Rennes trial, which will leave the ground clear for the government to take immediate steps to pardon him. This pardon will not annul the civil and military consequences of the verdict, and he will therefore belong no longer to the army. Therefore there is nothing to prevent him from applying to the court of cassation to annul the Rennes trial whenever the new fact required by law is produced. When liberated he will settle in the south of France, as the members of his family do not wish to expose him to such demonstrations of sympathy abroad as might be used against him by his adversaries at home.

Proposals of the Peace Commissioners to the Filipinos.

New York, Sept. 16.--A special to the World from Ithaca, N. Y., says: Your correspondent is able to say on authority that the Schuman commission offered every possible inducement short of absolute self-government to Aguinaldo and his followers. Aguinaldo was promised, as the price the restoration of peace in the Tagalos tribe a bonus of more than $5,000 a year while the Tagalos remained peaceful. He was told that he could chose men from his tribe for the minor municipal offices. The commission went so far as to promise Aguinaldo the moral support of the United States Government if such the Tagalos thoroughly secure, With all these inducements, tempting as they must have been, Aguinaldo, as the recognized head of the insurgent movement, declined to yield. He in-sisted upon immediate self-government, and as his insistence was so firm as to make an agreement impossible, the American commissioners ceased negotiations.

Mr. Schuman favors giving the various tribes the largest possible measure of home rule at the earliest moment. He thought that the several tribes could administer their local af-fairs, elect their municipal officers, establish courts and penal institutions, judiciary, etc., but he did not believe it possible to allow the natives to participate in the general government. "How could they govern the islands in view of the heterogeneity and multiplicity of tribes?" he asked. SOLDIERS SENTENCED TO DIE.

The Manila papers assert that Corp. Damhoffer and Private Conine of Company H, 16th Infantry, have been sentenced to death by courtmartial, and that Private McBennett has been condemned to twenty years imprisonment for having criminally assaulted a native woman in Manila a month ago. The papers state also that Gen. Otis has recommended that President McKinley approve the sentences, and that he desires a public execution of men sentenced to death, as a warning against the repetition of the crime.

BISHOP IRELAND ON THE BOYCOTT

Opposes an American Protest Against the Dreyfus Verdict as Untimely.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 16.-Archbishop Ireland, when asked for his opinion on the meeting to protest against the verdict of the Rennes court-martial, said: "It is my belief that public meetings The in America, such as it is proposed to hold for the purpose of protesting against the sentence of the Rennes court-martial are untimely, unfair to France, and likely to breed regrettable ill-feeling between that country and our own

"I shall not deny that I have always and hoped that the sentence of the court would have been one of acquittal. But it is another question to face the verdict of the court the moment that verdict has been declared with the assertion that it is plainly against truth, and that the court from which it issues is guilty of base injustice and sacrilegious perjury. And it is still more so another question to lay upon France the crime of the verdict, if crime there be in it, and to throw at a whole people and at their government

THE ODDFELLOWS'

Important Propositions To Be Dealt With by the I. O. O. F Sovereign Grand Lodge Next Week.

That there will be an enormous crowd of people in Detroit during the I. O. O. F. sovereign grand lodge convention next week is beyond peradventure. Every arrangement has been made by the Detroit brethren for the comfort and amusement of their guests. The grand sire, Bro. Pinkerton, arrived there yesterday, accompanied by a delegation from Massachusetts of 350 Oddfellows. Quite a large number of Canadian brethren have signified a desire to take part in the proceedings, among them many Londoners. From advance sheets of Grand Secretary Grant's report, the following interesting statistics are obtained:

There are 55 grand lodges, 52 grand encampments,11,419 subordinate lodges, 2,616 subordinate encampments and 5,-053 Rebekah lodges. During the year ending Dec. 31, 1898, there were 65,588 lodge initiations, 10,459 encampment initiations and 51,671 Rebekah initiations-brothers 19,703 and sisters 31,968 The total membership is 1,020,968, an increase during the year of 30,225. The total of relief bestowed was $3,422,-986 50, an increase over the preceding year of $58,357 09, while the re venue aggregated $8,766,393 56. The total of invested funds is $27,185,241 40, while the total of expenses was $4,- 159,726 46, an increase of $194,572 76. The following amendments to the constitution of the sovereign grand lodge will come before that body during the convention, but it is not considered likely that any of them will be adopted:

To hold biennial sessions.
 To pay only absolute expenses of representatives. 3. That a grand representative must be a member in good standing of a grand lodge, a grand encampment, a subordinate lodge, and a subordinate encampment, each of such bodies being in good standing.

4. That a grand representative must be a past grand and have received the royal purple degree, and a mem-ber in good standing in all the branches of the order.

5. That Indians, members of the five civilized tribes, residents of the Indian Territory, may be admitted to membership; that no person having African blood can become eligible to membership. 6. That by unanimous consent a viva voce vote may be taken on an amendment to the constitution. The proposition to establish an Oddfellows' Chautauqua, laid on the table last year, will probably come up again for consideration, as will also the similarly disposed of proposition that "all subordinate and Rebekah lodges were needed, to make his leadership and encampments instituted after Jan. 1, 1899, shall purchase their regalia through the grand secretary," be sold to subordinates at a price not to exceed 25 per cent above cost.

Capital City of Canada One of the Strongholds of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Cures Made by Dodd's Kidney Pills in Ottawa Are Legion-No City in Canada Has More Reason To Be Grateful for Dodd's Kidney Pills-Mr. Aubichon's Letter.

Ottawa, Sept. 15 .- Ottawa is one of the many places where Dodd's Kidney Pills have long prevailed over doubt and skepticism. In no city in Canada do the citizens believe in and know the value of Dodd's Kidney Pills more thoroughly than in Ottawa.

Many is the case of Bright's disease "the incurable"—that has been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills in Ottawa. Mr. G. H. Kent's case is still remembered and discussed.

Many and many a cure has been made by Dodd's Kidney Pills in Ottawa of Diabetes, another so-called incurable disease. Innumerable are the Ottawa cases of Backache, Rheumatism, Heart Disease, Sciatica, Lumbago, Dropsy, Bladder and Urinary Troubles, Female Weakness and Blood Disorders cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

No one in Ottawa any more than in any other city in Canada has ever reported that Dodd's Kidney Pills have failed to cure any of the above diseases. And the simple, unchangeable reason of this is that Dodd's Kidney Fills HAVE NEVER FAILED to cure any disorder resulting from unhealtny kidneys where they have been used. Mr. N. Aubichon, of Ottawa, says: " can recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills. I suffered severely with pains in kidneys and liver. After using three boxes I find great relief, and continuing I confidently expect to be completely cured.'

She was knew how, when and where he had the best craft of her kind on the lake, proposed, and all about it. and Pedgers fairly lived in her. He cept at meal times and to sleep.

He had been a guest at the summer hotel for a fornight, and in all that time had ever sat on the piazza with the rest of us, or played golf, or tennis, or danced. He had done nothing, in fact, but caroe. So we were surprised when, one morning, he came down to breakfast, boating rig. And when, during the whole forenoon, he never once went near his little boat, which lay on the float in front of the piazza, we considered that an explanation was due saken your love?" "No," laughed Podgers, "only I don't feel like going out today. I thought I'd try the land a bit, before I got so used to a canoe that I wouldn't know how to walk."

And then he got up and strolled over to the tennis courts, and like a flash Podgers' real reason for staying ashore Had Podgers been anyone else, we might have guessed it before; but he was so quiet, so much of the recluse, it had not occurred to any of us that there could be a woman in the case. Now, however, as he glanced across the courts to where a tall girl In white flannel was playing tennis, there came into his eye a look that told far better than words, the whole story. Podgers was smitten with love.

The girl in question was a Miss Oliver from New York. She was exceedingly pretty, extremely vivacious, and, though she had been one of us only a 1ew days, had already established herself as the most popular girl at the ho-

Had it been the olden times, the young knights who now contested in goodnatured rivalry for Miss Oliver as a partner in the dance, on the tennis court, or the golf links, would have been prodding each other with lances over the girl. But it seemed absurd to think of Podgers entering the lists.

However, we saw him vault the piazza-rail as lightly as could be, and stroll across to the courts. We watched him as he was introduced to Miss Oliver, we held our breath when we saw her shak-ing her head on being asked by Tom Nelson to play another set, and we stared in dumb amazement at each other when she strolled over to the shade trees with Podgers, and chatted with him, to the exclusion of all others, till lunch-time.

Podgers entered the dining-room with his face aglow. Insignificant as had been his conquest of the forenoon, it had occasioned comment. And then, directly after luncheon, he and Miss Oldirectly after luncheon, he and Miss Ol-liver strolled down to the boat wharf. PRINCE AND and he showed her his canoe, and she appeared interested. Podgers had made an impression, it was plain. In the afternoon Miss Oliver had an engagement to ride into the country with a bicycle party.Podgers did not go, but stood on the piazza and watched Lind a Song-A Pretty Anecdote. the wheels disappear down the road with regret in his eyes. Then he went upstairs to his room and brought down a little package and his paddle.

He said nothing to any of us when we railed him about his inability to keep away from his boat, but hurried down to the wharf, jumped into the canoe, and was off down the lake, paddling

"I saw Podgers with his canoe hauled up on the bank of Shady Cove," said Frank Lithgoe, paddling up to the wharf half an hour later. "He was scraping away with sandpaper at her bow, and didn't answer me when I called him. I passed him again later, he was painting something on her. Wonder what he's up to?" Podgers did not get back until after dark, and the bicycle party, including Miss Oliver, had already returned and were sitting on the piazza. After hauling his boat in, he came up to the hotel, d as he stood near me I noticed that his fingers were marked with gold

Next morning we had a still further surprise. Miss Oliver and Podgers went canoeing together. It all happenpaint. ed so quickly that we scarcely believed our eyes till we saw the canoe, with the girl in the bow and Podgers in the stern, push off from the wharf and move rapidly away.

But when it returned we had a deputation at the wharf to meet it. Mrs. Delaware was the deputation, and her news was startling.
"What do you think?" she panted.

"You know he called his canoe 'Zephyr?' Well, it's got a new name that he painted on it yesterday!" What is it?"

"Tennie!" It took us two minutes to find out that Miss Oliver's name was Jennie. Of course, after this the other men about the place rather gave up all chance in Miss Oliver's direction, and Podgers was looked upon as the lucky man. Podgers got most of her dances, played the most tennis with her, was her partner at everything, and we began to look upon them as engaged.

Podgers seemed very happy. No one, however, ventured to say a word to either of them about it. If they

In the middle-class and poorer families the always disliked task of washing dishes is generally relegated to the children. In large households it is almost the first work given into childish hands, and I have seen little ones, so small that a good-sized box had to be provided for the baby feet to stand on in order to bring the worker up to the proper height to see the contents of the dishpan slopping out—one can-"He came down at sunrise this morn-in'," said Michael, "an' scraped off the name an' painted this one on." not call it really washing the dishes for an entire establishment, without regard to anything save getting through the hated job as soon as may be.

Even in houses where servants are kept and paid for rendering honest service to their employers, there is rarely to be found one who looks upon the care of dining-room and kitchen with the right feeling of interest and personal pride; and even where the personal pride; and even where the dishes appear on the table in a condition which is not offensive to the eye, a tour of investigation in the kitchen would often reveal a condition of things in regard to the disheloths, dishnad been out for a moonlight stroll, came home with the news.

"I didn't mean to listen," said Nellie, "but we came upon them so suddenly, out in the summer house, that we coudn't help hearing them. First we wrong way.

To thoroughly appreciate the possibilities of making a fine art of this generally despised portion of our household duties, one should have the privilege of observing a grande dame of the old school sitting in state, after a small social function where she has been the gracious hostess, and with her own delicate hands carefully and lovingly washing the cherished china and silver which she deems too precious to be trusted to the care of even the most devoted of attendants.

I have seen this inspiring sight more than once, and it has been not only a lesson to me, but the memory of it has made even the simplest refection served on or in those tenderly cared for treasures seem like nectar and ambrosia in comparison with the richest and rarest repasts furnished forth on dishes in which the care-taker feels no special interest, and which are treated, therefore, as disrespectfully and unjustly as are the majority of their course everyone knows-even Of those who are too indolent, too careless, or, according to their own ideas, too busy to take the trouble to arrive at the desirable end—that not the slightest spot or speck or hint of fogginess should mar the shining surface of silver, glass, china, or even humble crockery; that not only should every dish and utensil used in the preparation and serving of the food be bright and shining to the eye, but perfectly smooth and dry to the touch, without the faintest hint of stickiness, greasi-How Kaiser Frederick Taught Jenny the faintest fill de song as any other form of uncleanness—soapiness.

There is but one way in which to attain the height of perfection in regard to this very important matter, The memoir of Kaiser Frederick, just and that is to have the dishes washed by some person who is intelligent esting anecdotes about the kindly monenough to obey certain rules, and who can be depended upon not to deviate arch whose reign was cut off in such from them under any pressure of cirease of the throat which caused his death. Among them is one in which cumstances. In the first place insist upon perfect cleanliness of every thing used in connection with the dishes. The usual metal or crockery pan should be used with care, as delicate crockery and glass are apt to become nicked and scratched by contact with the bottom and sides, however careful the worker may be. The old-fashioned Southern wooden "biggin" or keeler is an excellent dishpan, but needs scrupulous care to keep it sweet and dainty. Wash and rinse it out carefully after every using, and place it where the sun and air can have free access to it, and once a week, at least, have it scrubbed inside with sand soap and scalded with boiling soda water, that is water in two quarts of which a lump of sal soda as large as an ordinary egg has been dissolved.

less than three dishcloths should be provided: one for the glass, cups and saucers and dessert china, another for the greasy dishes, and still another for the tins and stoveware. All these cloths should be made preferably of cheesecloth doubled. A good size is about eighteen inches square, the raw edges turned neatly in and run around, as well as the selvedge edges which should be fitted carefully together with soft darning cotton, making the stitches as small as possible.

Old tablecloths divided into convenient sections, not too large, and neatsat down at the piano on the veranda hemmed, make good wipers, but crash, unless you purchase the special absorbent kind, must be washed and boiled and scrubbed hard several times before it will be found satisfactory. A special cloth should be kept for wiping up the table or the sink, and none to know it," said Jenny Lind, when the student, whom his comrades called of the pieces of fabric used about the dishes should ever be permitted to come in contact with anything "The Swedish nightingale wishes to It may seem unbelievable, but I am learn a German song? Ah, that is su-perb!" cried Fritz. "If you will persorry to say that I have seen women in other ways scrupulously neat wash mit me, I will repeat the words for your their dishes with cloths which were benefit until you know them by heart. actually gray-made so by the house-The melody, I dare say, you have maswife's slovenly habit of "wiping up around" with the same cloth wherered already." And for a full hour, Fritz and Jenny sat side by side at ever the preparation of the meal had the old piano singing together, repeating verse after verse, once, thrice, ten times left a spot or stain. After your cloths and wipers have been made and put into commission, see that they are kept absolutely for their different uses, and never neglected for a moment. Wash the dishcloths and towels in hot suds and rinse them in clear water after using and dry them in the fresh air, if possible, and see that they all go into the weekly wash regularly.

Never use the common yellow soap or ammonia in your dish water. If the water is very hard use some of the white soaps with a little borax in them, or keep a large bottle full of the saturate solution of borax near at hand and cour a tablespoonful into the water when needed.

Now, having all your implements at hand begin to wash your dishes. Do not make a pyramid pile of them in your pan, pour boiling suds on them and wipe them out of it as fast as the burning heat will allow you. Have two keelers, or pans, side by side, one of them half full of clear hot water in which to rinse the dishes, and the other half full of suds not too hot to bear your hand in comfortably. I do not advise the use of a dish mop for two reasons; one, because the temptation to use too hot water when the hands are out of danger is almost irresistible, and too hot water means ruin to delicate china; the other because it is almost impossible to keep a mop in a cleanly condition—

no matter how carefully it is washed out there is still a hiding-place for serms and impurities around the handle, and it is far more trouble to keep it in good order than it is to keep a plain white cloth absolutely above

Allow no slops or bits of food to get into the dish water. Rinse out cups and glasses under the sink fawcet, and wipe off plates and all greasy dishes with soft paper, which should be burned immediately. Begin with the glasses, using a soft brush to thoroughly cleanse out such as are fluted or engraved. Rinse them quickly through a clear water, and put taem to drain on the groove shelf which should be at the right hand of your sink. Change both the washing and the rinsing water, at least, twice, where there are many dishes to care for, and work rapidly but carefully until all have been attended to.

Now as to the wiping, which is Now as to the wiping, which is quite as important as the washing, since badly wiped dishes will be streaked and cloudy no matter how went they were washed. Use two dish towals at a time one in each hand, and towels at a time, one in each hand, and do not let your fingers touch the dishes at all, since finger marks will mar the brightness of the loveliest ware and make it look common and un-clean. With a little practice you will do not put them in the closet until they are quite cold.

Personally I do not approve of washing silver in soapy water, as I think that such a proceeding makes it dull and pewter-like; hot water softened, if necessary, with a little borax, will cleanse it nicely, and make the regular fortnightly polishing very learn to use the towels easily and the results will be more than satisfactory. Place the dishes as wiped on a large waiter covered with a cloth, and Steel knives should be scoured with powdered bath brick after each meal, and if spotted may be restored to their pristine brilliancy by the application of a small quantity of emery powder of a small quantity of emery powder and a drop of oil, rubbing the spots firmly and patiently until they disappear and then polishing the article afterwards in the usual way.

The cleansing of stove ware may be greatly facilitated by filling each utengil with cold water as soon as the sil with cold water as soon as the food therein is dished up. Greasy articles should be wiped out with paper while they are hot, and every iron or tin dish should not only be carefully wiped after washing, but should be dried on the back of the stove, or in a sunny window, before it is put away. By following the above simple di-rections every housewife may have the proud consciousness that her china and kitchen closets are places to be proud of, and however plain may be the food which she sets before her family a special attractiveness and grace will be added to it by this knowledge.-Table Talk.

The Fetch (Abridged.)

What makes you so late at the tryst-What caused you so long to be? For a weary time I have waited From the hour you promised me."

"I would I were here by your side love. Full many an hour ago, For a thing I passed on the roadway All mournful and so slow."

"And what have you passed on the That kept you so long and late?" "It is weary the time behind me, Since I left my father's gate.

"As I hastened on in the gloaming By the road to you tonight, There I saw the corpse of a young maid. All clad in a shroud of white."

Or was she a sister dead, That you left thus your own true lover Till the trysting-hour had fled?" "Oh, I would that I could discover, But her face was turned away, And I knew I must turn and follow Wherever her resting lay."

"And was she some comrade cherished,

'And did it go up by the town path, Did it go down by the lake? I know there are but the two churchvards Where a corpse its rest may take."

They did not go up by the town path Nor stopped by the lake their feet, They buries the corpse all silently Where the four cross roads do meet.

'And was it so strange a sight then, That you should go like a child, Thus to leave me wait all forgotten, By a passing sight beguiled?"

'Twas my name that I heard them whisper, Each mourner that passed by me; And I had to follow their footsteps, Though their faces I could not see.'

'And right well I should like to know, now, Who might be this fair young maid, So come with me, my own true love, If you be not afraid."

FLEETEST OF SEA FLYERS

A Sea Train the Latest of Inventions for Ocean Travel.

The sea train is the name of the most striking of late inventions for the ocean. It is the work of Guiseppe Michele Mangone, of New York. He is now negotiating with Italian government for a test of its merits. Dry bat-teries will be used, and the electrical propelling machinery is especially constructed for lightness of weight and tensile strength. The shell will be of the finest steel and aluminum, each part being weighed carefully before being fitted into place, to secure exact results. The displacement will thus be placed at a minimum, the idea prevailing through the construction that lightness will conduce to speed fully as much as power, for great power in the usual ship indicates great weight and a corresponding retardation. But Mr. Mangone says he will sacrifice any needed power by reducing the weight of the propellers. A deep centerboard will give steadiness to the craft in all kinds of As a passenger ship the vessel have a speed of from 60 to 100 miles an hour, floating easily on the surface and utilizing all its energies for speed. Safety is secured in the use of two pilot houses, one above the other. The lower one is for the navigator and the upper one for the lookout. The construction will provide for an inside promenade and quarters which will be impervious to the attack of the heaviest seas.

OUT OF ORDER.

That which is out of order is not always out of place. A certain old gentleman, who at a synod of the Dutch Reformed Church desired to speak, was surely out of order, but before he had done talking nobody thought him or his speech out of place. The story, as told by Christian Work, belongs to the year 1841. While the general synod of the Dutch Reformed Church was sitting in New York, a quaint-looking old man, with a broad-brimmed, round-crowned hat in his hand, walked calmly up the aisle to the president's seat, bowing as he came.

"Mr. President," he said, "I want to talk.

Nobody knew the speaker, and the president asked, "Are you a member of this body, sir?" "No, sir," replied the old gentleman

'but I want to talk." The president reminded him that none but members had a right to speak, but an aged minister who had just come in recognized the would-be talker, and said, "I move that the Rev. Elias Van Benschooten have leave to

The motion was carried and the old man went up to the president's table and drew from his pocket a roll of bank-bills. These he counted—eight hundred dollars in all. Then he drew out another package of securities am ounting to thirteen thousand, eight hundred and forty dollars, and counted them out, afterward, in a few well chosen words, presenting the whole sum to the synod for educational purposes.

It was the first endowment made in the Dutch Reformed Church for theological education. The old gentleman's speech was certainly out of orbut everybody felt that it was distinctly a speech in the right place.

Character of Isaiah

Sermon by Rev. Samuel Horton-Preached in the Primitive Methodist Church, Victoria Terrace, Edinburgh.

Amos, which he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem, in the days of Uzziah, otham, Ahaz and Hezekiah, kings of Judah."-Isaiah, I., 1.

The true empire-makers are the men who see visions and dream dreams. The statesman is but the expression of his own time; the poet and prophet of the centuries still to come. The one is of today; the other belongs to tomorrow the greater tomorrow, stretching through all the years yet unborn.

The world knows but little of its greatest men. It sees from afar the andle burning in the garres of the hinker, and wists not that it will throw its beams right down the ages. The man who lives in the realm of thought instead of the realm of action, is genrally overlooked while he lives. It is when his thought has become ranslated into deeds, perhaps centuries fter he is buried, that the world cares ask who the thinker was, and eagersnatches at every detail of his peronal history. Is there a more pathetic scene in all the biographies of great souls than that of the poet Burns dying neglected by the patrons of his happier days, and yet, with the hopefulness which made his genius so winsome, saying to his weeping wife, "Dinna greet for me; I shall be thought far more of a hundred years hence than I am now. Of Shakespeare, "the myriad-minded man," we have only a few scraps of history, which may or may not, be true. Of Milton we know but little, and of Homer still less. The same is true of Isaiah, the sweetest and most impassioned of all the Hebrew poets. THE DEBT TO ANCESTRY.

In our text we are told that he was the son of Amos. This is not Amos the inspired herdsman, the lowly bard, who like our own Caedmon, suddenly burst forth into song, in obedience to the call of heaven, and who came straight from the cattle stall to utter words of doom, which seem like the crash of thunder among the mountains. This Amos has no such honor; it is his glory simply that he was the father of Isaiah. Like many another he lives in the reflected thing to being a great man is to be the father of one, an honor we all hope to have to whom God has given sons. Does it matter who a man's fa-ther was? Yes, it matters much; so much that modern science is trying by a thousand examples to bring home to men's minds the portance of parentage. If some of you are stronger, physically and morally, than the rest of us—if you have a larger endowment and keener spiritual perception, you owe it to a godly ancestry. You come of a good stock-piain, homely folks, perchance, but with no taint in their blood, no abnormal craving after things evil. God help the man who has a vitiated ancestry! You can only understand a man when you they always make the parent share the glory or shame of his offspring? If they place a man on the throne of honor they hang the parents' picture behind him. If they put a miscreant in the pillory of shame they write in letters of fire the parents' name above his head. Here is Isaiah, the bold, brave prophet of God in a degenerate age. Read then he was "the son of Amos." When an Ahab disgraces humanity, and stains the steps When an Ahab of a throne by his deeds of cowardly cruelty, three times, in about as many lines, the Bible tells us that he was the son of Omri. Surely we have here more than a hist at parental responsibility. It is a great thing to give to the world a Moses, an Isaiat, a Paul; it is an awful thing to be the father of a Jezebel, a Nero, a King John, who, according to the ruthless chronicler of "defiled hell itself when he went to his own place."

Mothers and fathers, I charge you look well to the training of your children. From your home may come a prophet, or from your home may come criminal. And your name may be spoken amidst the princes of the people, or covered with curses in the prison's dark cell.

THE PROPERT AS AN EPOCH MAKER.

"In the days of Uzziah, Jotham, and Ahaz." It was in the last year of the reign of Uzziah that Isaiah commenced his mission. The curtain drops upon the funeral of a king, and rises again at the appearance of a prophet, utter-

Wife-hood brought with it debilitating drains, and the trial of motherhood left an inflamed and ulcerated condition of the womanly organs. Then followed the slow decay of body and mind; the one tormented with pain; the other irritable, or despondent.

"The vision of Isaiah the son of ing words which pierce like barbed arrows. Uzziah disappears, Isaiah appears. The star dies out in darkness, the sun rises in its refulgent glory. The death of a king is nothing compared to the advent of a prophet. The reformer is of far more importance than the monarch. "Beware!" exclaims Emerson, "when God lets loose a thinker mercy of a new generalization." And so this new thinker comes on the scene to denounce and to inspire, comes with one big word burning on his lips by which he hopes to regenerate society, and turn a sinful world again into a parawhere God and man walk dise and talk familiarly together, where there are no wrongs to be avenged, no starving poor-it is the word righteous-

> Why does the Bible tell us so particularly the time when Isaian prophesied? Because you can only judge either a man or his message by knowing the circumstances of his time. The best men not only help to make them. He is molded entirely by his surroundings is a human jelly-fish-of no account. He who is not influenced at all by "the play of popular passion" -the set of public opinion-is an anachronism, a living corpse.

What the social and moral condition of the nation were in Isaiah's time may be gathered from this first chapter, which has been called the "Great Arraignment." Dr. Adam Smith says: "Wickedness and worsnip went hand in hand," Sinners were these of Jerusalem of the worst kind, for they threw the cloak of religion around their nefarious practices. They prayed and cheated, they knelt at the throne of mercy and justice with the price of blood in their bond. blood in their hands. Their justices took their seats with the gold jingling in their pockets with which they had been bought; their princes were corrupt and their merchants robbers. In the graphic language of the prophet, "the whole head was sick and the heart faint." Read the history of those times stained by unnameable crimes, with a weak and wicked despot on the throne; with the politics rotten; with trade and commerce devoid of all lofty ideals—a glory of his offspring. The next best game of get and grab-with the life of the common people shorn of the one ennobling and vivifying influencespiritual religion-and you will with the slightest exercise of the imagination realize to some extent the world of meaning which is behind the words, "in the days of Jotham and Ahaz." In telling us that Isaiah prophesied in such days, the Scripture indirectly tells us that Isaiah was a hero.

RELIGIOUS COWARDICE. Look, young men, at that brave, fear-less figure of this young prophet stand-see of the travail of His soul and be ing out against the backgrounds of his- satisfied. If we dream we dream in tory; listen to his scathing denunciations, his imprecations hurled against the throne, his attack upon the ritualists of his time; his courageous defense of the poor, and his stirring apfather lived. Have you not observed peals to all who would listen to "turn fire into your testimony, into your will, to live for the right, aye, and suffer for it if God so will. What would you have done if you had been in Isalah's place, and had lived in the days of Ahaz? Nay, what will you do now? It was no easy thing for this prophet to stand alone a witness before God. It cost him much, But today religion walks in silver slippers and is clothed in purple. Today the rich and the mighty and the learned bow at the feet of the crucified Nazarene. It is easy to witness for God today. Is it? Have you found it so? I tell you there are thousands of men hanging about the skirts of the altar who would be Christians but who have not courage enough. Is it always easy to speak for the right and against wrong? Why is it, then, that sin goes unrebuked, that tricks in trade are practiced unblushingly, that bad men, men who make no pretense to virtue, and whose vices are notorious, are frequently sent to municipal and parliamentary chambers to make laws for our cities and our nation? Why is it? I will tell you. Because we are so cowardly, so afraid to testify, so supine and indifferent to all but our own sense of comfort. I have met many young men who have told me they wanted to be fol-lowers of Jesus, but dared not. One stood before me the other Sunday evening and acknowledged with tears in his eyes that he was convinced of the truth, that he longed to give himself to Christ; but because he was the only one in the workshop who attended any place of worship, and he dreaded the taunts and laughter of his workmates, he dared not. I pleaded with him, but he went away with the pitiful whine on his lips, "I dare not." Dare not! Dare not, and he a man! And so he went away from the cross with a white face, and his knees smiting together, scared by a laugh. Five feet eleven of moral cowardice! A lost man, with no more backbone than a feather bed. If a man dares not do right in the days of Victoria, what would he have done in the days of Jotham and Ahaz?

"Dare to be right, dare to be true, Other men's valor can never save you.

Stand by your conscience, your honor, your faith. Stand like a hero and battle till death.

And now, I want to speak a few words about Isaiah as a poet, a reformer, and a preacher.

THE POET OF THE POOR. As a poet, Gilfillan declares, he was the most eloquent, the most dramatic, the most poetic, the most complete of all the bards of Israel. He had not the austere majesty of Moses; the gorgeous natural description of Job; Ezekiel's rough and rapid vehemence, like a red torrent from the hills seeking the Lake of Galilee in the day of storm; David's high gusts of lyric enthusiasm, dying away in wailings of penitential sorrow: Daniel's awful allegory; John's piled and enthroned thunders. His power is solemn, sustained and majestic; his step moves gracefully at the same time that it shakes the wilderness." His power lay in the fact that he was a singer of the people; he understood their sorrows; their wrongs had burned themselves into his heart. No dilet-tante poet this, espousing the cause of the poor as a passing whim, singing of poverty while he reclined on silken cushions His words smote like javelins hurled by the hand of a giant; his cry is the cry of one who had suffered. An inspired mystic, borrowing his imagery from the very heavens, dreaming with his eyes wide open in the daytime, seeing cherubims with six wings, uable advice in Dr. Pierce's Common Sense and listening to the chanting of seraphims, he was, nevertheless, a man of stamps to defray cost of customs and mailaffairs. making for the ports of Tyre and Sidon. An open-eyed, wide-awake man this prophet, who saw everything from the intrigues to a woman's crimping pins. He had the power of looking right into the heart of things, and of dissecting men's motives with the skill and ruth-lessness of a modern vivisector laying nerve and muscle bare with his knife. The new woman was troubling Jerusalem in the time of the prophet. No modern denouncer of forward women ever spoke more scathingly than does Isaiah in the third chapter. At every point he touched life, and at every point he saw what caused him pain and sorrow.

It is interesting to know that in all the generations there have been a few optimistic souls who have believed in the future of the race, and that the final goal, though perchance a long way off, is nevertheless good. Isalah saw clearly enough that his dream of a regenerated earth lay behind a cross. is, after all, God's world, and This some day He will claim His own, belief in the omnipotence of goodness lies at the heart of all things. Right must prevail. The golden age is not past, it is still to come. We are marching toward the daybreak. Already the first gleams of the coming dawn touching the mountain-tops, and the long dark night of the world's sin and sorrow is fast passing into the bright-er day when "the Lord our Righteousness shall reign." We. too, have had our dreams. We have caught far off the strains of the angels' song, "Peace on earth, good will to men.'

We have seen a vision which on dark days cheers us on. It is that of the Carpenter of Nazareth directing and controlling all the activities of the world, uniting the peoples together in one great brotherwood, making one church, one faith, one baptism; stilling the cry of woe, placing His hand on the sword, and fastening it in its scabbard so that no ambitious monarch can ever draw it forth again; unshotting the cannon, and sinking the last torpedo boat in the depths of the He shall touch the lips of the drunkard, and his blasphemies shall be transformed into songs of praise. He shall overthrow the altars of Bacchus, and tear the crown from the heated brow of lust, and overthrow the temples of Mammor. It is coming, good company. Isaiah saw the time. God lives, and because God lives evil shall be overthrown.

ISAIAH THE PATRIOT. And now let use take a look at Isaiah as a reformer. Isaiah was a Jew of Jerusalem, and it is over Jerusalem that he pondered and drew tures in blood and smoke. It was Jer-usalem, corrupt and defiled, that he dreamt of making a city of God. With all the eager patriotism of his race

Isaiah loved Jerusalem. If Isalah had not been foremost as a prophet, he would have taken first gaged in the droving and butchering rank as a reformer. And, like every other man who aspires to lift his fellows to a higher platform, he had to Strange, is it not, pay a big price. that the world has always persecuted the men who have tried to make it better, and make the name of martyr and reformer synonymous? For the Baptist there was the grim headsman; Jesus Christ the cross; for Paul whips and chains and dungeon horrors: for John Huss the fiery fagot: for Bunyan Bedford goal.

Truth for ever on the scaffold, wrong for ever on the throne.

For Isaiah there was a dreadful death, for if tradition is to be trusted he was sawn asunder. Well, if it were so, what more fitting end to his heroic career? His work was done, his message delivered! And when a man's work is done and done well, it matters but little by what method he reaches the gates of heaven.

But the lesson remains that if we would make the world better, if we would reform one city, one village, ay, one man, we must be prepared to suffer. Every follower of Christ must go to Gethsemane and to Calvary. The bitter outcry of the lost in our cities is going up continually into the ears of God. It is still as true as when Tennyson wrote his "Locksley Hall" sixty years after "that little children soak and blacken soul and sense in city slime." It is still true that thousands of young girls in their teens are driven on to our streets to sell their soul for bread, and to die they reach twenty. It is still a fact that the respectable sweater lives in a mansion, while his victims die in dark cellars and wretched garrets. It is ever before our eyes that thousands are born in conditions where it is easy to do wrong and hard to do right, and that legalized temptation is constantly in the path of the weak and the fallen. who have tracked crime to its hiding-places, and hunted its victims into the slums and alleys where the atmosphere seems tainted with moral pollution, have seen sights which have almost made us exclaim with Cleg Kelly, Mr. Crocket's hero of the Edinburgh slums, "God Almighty's dead!" No, we could not believe that either, or we should have gone mad. But in the name of that God, whose children we all are-in the name of the common brotherhood of man-we protest against the apathy and indifference of the churches, against the callousness of our municipal authorities to the condition in which the poor for city reformers, for some Isaiah to take up the cry against the jerry-builders, against the rich monopolist who grinds the face of the poor, against the conscienceless companies caring for nothing but big dividends, against the licensing authorities grant licenses to sell intoxicants by the score for the districts where the poor dwell, but refuse them at their own park gates, or near their own suburban residences, against the gambling lord, against ministers who fill their purses with gold taken from big brewery companies. This is no time for smooth speech, for pretty compli-ments. We need men with some steel in their blood, of passionate speech and of sympathetic heart who will say.

"No matter what becomes of me, I will speak for the oppressed, I will plead the cause of the poor, I will harken to the cry of the widow." We bearing the full trade mark. THE TRUE PREACHER.

Lastly, let us glance at Isaiah as a preacher. God called him and then fitted him for his work. Even he could not speak aright until his lips had been touched with a live coal from the altar. It is the old lesson, we "must not run till we are sent." We must not run till we are sent." We must tarry until we are endured. All reform must have its beginning at the altar. It is at the throne of grace we shall learn how to save the world. Who are the men who have permanently in-fluenced the world for good? Have they not been those who lived near to the heart of God, and who understood the Divine art of waiting for him? We must wait before we can work. A young Welsh minister, whose sermons suddenly began to grip his congrega tion with a new power so that they became the talk of the countryside, was asked by a friend "where he got those sermons." And he took him into his study, and pointing to a threadbare patch on the carpet, where he spent many hours in prayer, he replied, "There I get my sermons." "One man," says George Fox, "who has come up in the spirit of the apostles shall shake the country for tan miles round."

the country for ten miles round." The great need of the pulpit today is the Divine anointing. Oh, to be a living voice, and not the mere echo of voices whose message has lost its freshness! To be a prophet and not a parrot repeating a few respectable orthodox phrases called a creed! To be a living minister of God, and not a man made, and man ordained, preach-

Richter said to Luther "that his words were half battles." That is the kind of man to lead a revolution. Some preachers go on pattering their petty commonplaces, their smooth complacencies; they pat the devil on the head and say, "Now, do be good, or, at least, don't be very bad," and all the time they shut their eyes and wink very hard at the evils which are crushing society, and then they wonder the churches are half empty. We preachers have talked about sin with so much gentleness-lest we should shock those in our congregation of sensitive nerves—that nobody takes any notice of us. Half battles, clarion appeals are what we want, words that will stir good men up to righteous indignation, and that will send wicked men away from the house of God with knees smiting together, and a face as white as though they had seen a ghost. So Isaiah preached, so the Baptist preached, so Paul preached, so Wespreached. To speak for God is highest of all vocations; to speak until he sends us is presumption; to be silent when he bids us speak is guilt:

God's true priest is always free, Free the needed truth to speak, Right the wrong and raise the weak.

A PIONEER'S STORY

William Hemstreet's Health Renewed at Seventy.

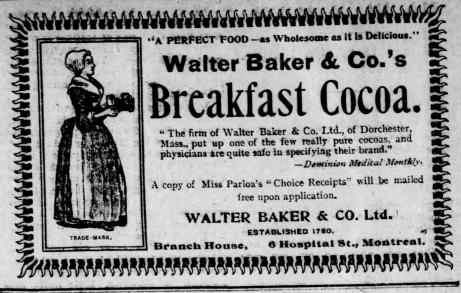

He Was Afflicted With Illness for a Long Period, and Thought His Days of Useiulnes Were Past-He Is Again as Hearty and Robust as He Was Twenty Years Ago.

[From the Free Press, Acton, Ont.] No man is better known to the people of the counties of Halton and Wel-William Hemstreet, ingten pioneer and much esteemed resident of Acton. Mr. Hemstreet is a native of this county, having been born in Trafalgar township in 1817. In his younger days Mr. Hemstreet conducted a tanning business. He subsequently enbusiness, and some 25 years ago, owing to his superior knowledge of the value of live stock, he took out a license as an auctioneer. In this calling he be-came at once popular, and he was constantly on the road, driving in all kinds of weather, holding auction sales several days a week. Although possessing a strong, healthy constitution, the continued exposure and hard work of selling some days for six or eight hours at a stretch, he gradually lost his strength and vigor, and about three years ago found himself a coland about lapsed and worn-out man. In conversation with a reporter of the Free Press he said: "I felt that my days of usefulness were over. My strength had departed, my voice was gone, I was too weak to do work of any kind. and I was undeniably useless to myself or anyone else. My symptoms were peculiar and baffled several of the best local physicians, who differed very much in their diagnosis. I took their medicine faithfully, but no improve-ment resulted. I did not suffer much pain, but was a very sick man. Had no appetite, no strength, could sleep, and both myself and friends con-cluded that my days on earth were numbered and that my worn-out system would in a very short time lie down in eternal rest. I had to give up all my business interests." When Mr Hemstreet's condition was most serious his attention was attracted by the published testimonial of Rev. Mr. Freeman, a minister, with whom he was personally acquainted, relating to his restoration to health after using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He was particularly impressed with this testimonial, and concluded that these pills must possess singular merit and healing power, or Rev. Mr. Freeman would not lend his name to their approbation. Mr. Hemstreet then decided to give them a trial; he first got one box, then three, then half a dozen, and took them regularly. No very marked effects, he says, were noticeable, but with characteristic persistence he purchased a further surply. By the time twelve or thirteen boxes had been taken, he felt that new blood was coursing through his veins; that he possessed renewed vigor and was able to perform all the duties his business calls de-manded. "For a year I continued to take the pills," he said. "I knew I was regaining my old-time strength and good health, and I was determined the cure should be complete and permanent, and I give them the credit for making me the new man I am today. As evidence that my recovery is complete I have only to state that this spring I have conducted a number of auction sales in the open air with perfect ease and with entire satisfaction to my clients.

"I am as much averse to making personal matters public as any one could possibly be, but my long-continued illness was so widely known and my recovery has been so marked and satisfactory that I feel that I owe a debt of gratitude to the simple but effective remedy which cured me, and this is why I acknowledge it, as well as to show to those who are up in years and in ill-health what Dr. Williams'

Pink Pills did for me."

interviewing in the Saturday Evening How the British Got the Egyptians Post of Philadelphia, says:

Into Fighting Shape. Crowfoot, the last great redskin chief f Canada, the head of the Canadian branch of the powerful Blackfeet tribe. was once interviewed in my presence by a deputation of ladies. He was a ples of the benefits of the white splendid man, kingly in every respect. He looked like the portraits of Julius Caesar. He had commanded his na-tion in the days when the red Indians were the undisputed rulers of the best and biggest part of a continent, and against incessant, everincreasing odds, until, at last, his vasignorant, of the valuable uses to which these finest savages the world has known could easily have been put. But to the last he was never less a king in spirit and bearing than when his tribe was exterminating its only rivals. When the white women came to interview him he was seated in a railway sleeping car upon a spotless white blanket stretched over a bed. He wore white, with a blazing sun worked upon its back and an elaborate design in colors upon its front. His two halftrousers were also of white beads, as rich as ivory or silver, patterned in blue and red. His moccasins were such that a collector would give fifty dollars for them today. It was all I could do to lift this royal suit of clothing when I saw it afterwards lying upon the ground in his tenee.

As the three white women advanced toward him he threw from his face the sober expression which he usually wore, and smiled his welcome to them. I have always said, since I knew the red man in the waning splendor of his glory, that no more perfect gentleman has ever been created, and this little anecote will help to prove my words.

"Are you married, Crowfoot?" one change.—Harper's Magazine. dote will help to prove my words

"What? Not married? Did you never They take a man, no matter who, have a wife?' "No; not any wife." "Oh, do tell us why! Is it possible so brave a man does not like women?" Crowfoot had always been a womanmater, but far from saying so rude a thing, he replied, after a moment's thought: "Never any woman have me." Some days later I interviewed both Crowfoot and a zealous old Catholic missionary and scolar, Pere Lacombe who, besides spending his long life with these romantic people, had written an authoritative dictionary of the parent tongue of the Western Canadian In-The priest and the chief conversed in the Greek tongue, and what became my surprise to see them warming up, in time, and laughing and nudging one another like two schoolmates who meet after a long separation and rehearse the adventures or the mischievous pranks in which they have taken part. This proved to be what!

"What is ft, Father?" I asked. Then the noble old priest told me that he and his warrior friend were recalling the days when the priest was missionary to both the Crow nation and the Blackfeet-tribes at such enmity to each other that the world was not large enough to hold them both. They recollected how one night, when the priest was ministering to the Blackfeet, an attack on the camp was made by the Crows. It was pitch dark, and along with the first notice came the rush of the enemy, the firing of their guns, the screaming of Blackfeet squaws, the clamor of the startled dogs, and all the hubbub of primitive warfare. The priest thought to restore peace by his presence, and so rushed into the melee crying: this wickedness! Go to your wigwams you Crows: do you hear me? I am your priest." He might as well have scolded a hurricane or tried to command a volcanic eruption. Bullets whistled by his ears, and warriors rushed headlong upon him. Then his manner changed. He saw that it was to be a fight to the death and that the only part of wisdom was to counsel strong elf-defense. "Here," he cried to the Blackfeet.

'give me a gun. Rouse yourselves. in 1862. Save your women and children and a gun and let us drive these mad people back to where they came from."

After that, side by side with Crowso stirred the braves behind him that that time the gentle scholar, who came among them to preach love and mercy and faith in the true God, had gained a hold upon the hearts of those rude warriors such as no other priest upon the continent has or perhaps ever pos-

DEAN STANLEY'S PECULIARITIES Dean Stanley was one of the most absent-minded men in the world, and many anecdotes are told about trait of his, of which this is one of the funniest. He was once driving through Palermo with a friend, when he complained of feeling cold. As he had his traveling bag with him, the friend suggested he put something extra on. Both were reading and the friend paid no attention to Stanley's wrap until he heard the loud laughter of some boys, and, looking round, discovered that Stanley was arrayed in his night shirt, which he had put over his coat in sheer absence of mind. His cousin, Mr. Hare, relates, also, a good story about his lack of the sense of taste. "Arthur, you know," said said Mr. Hare, "was quite devoid of either taste or smell. He was breakfasting one morning with Jowett, who was exactly the same. For some reason-inexplicable under the circumstancesthey were both inordinately fond of tea. On this particular morning they had drunk eight cups, when suddenly, as Jowett rose from the table, he said: Good gracious! I quite forgot to put the tea in!' An oyster and a big bun were the only things Stanley cared for in the way of food. 'He could feel them going down,' he said."

MADE THEM GOOD SOLDIERS

The experience of the British occupation gives few more noticeable examman's training for native troops. The fellah soldier in the days of Ismail was just about as bad as possible to bear the name at all. He was makereated, impressed, and discharged indiscriminately; seldom paid, and more seldom pensioned. His name became such a byword for cowardice and incasals had been pauperized by the gov-ernment of the whites, careless, if not own bad reputation; for when, under Arabi, he arose against the government in 1882, he was as worthless as when serving it. In the early days of the occupation the mere talk of plans for reconstructing the Egyptian army was subject for international jesting. And even when it was began, when British officers led the fellah in the tragic Sudan campaign of 1883-3, threw down his gun and ran, before the smallest force of the enemy, in coat was a huge bit of jewelry, being entirely covered with beads—snow er than fight. The result of training, shown by the record made by Egyptian troops in the Sudan since 1890, is too well known to require specification. For patient, steady, quietly brave service the fellah now has few superiors. He has neither the dash of his black Sudanese comrade nor the intelligent quickness of his associate, Tommy Atkins. But he stands his like a man against the most recklessly enemy known. It is due alone to his long, patient fight with nature, with the desert and the cataract-ribbed Nile, that the Sudan has been regained and the former awful tragedy avenged. The confidence and respect, even affection, which the white officer has inspired in his black men may be

LIFE OF A WASP

If Solitary It Is One Thing, if Social It Is Another.

Those Insects, Dreaded by Humans. Are the Most Intelligent of Their Order of Creation-Some Facts and Stories of Wasps by Scientists Who Have Studied Them Thoroughly.

Wasps, according to their mode of living, may be divided in two groups, social and solitary. In the case of the latter each female makes a separate nest and previsions her offspring by her own labor. The eggs are generally deposited In the bodies of spiders, maggots, etc., caught by the mother and stunned by one or more stings, so as to be not wholly dead, until the young wasp-child has smerged from the egg and has fed upon them to its heart's content.

These solitary wasps, having no knowledge of their progenitors, who die long hefere thheir children see the light, are all the more interesting, because inherited instincts alone determine the course of their activities. But their ways and habits are influenced to a great extent, nevertheless, by so much individual judgment and experience that they offer a wide field for study and experiment.

The female ammephilas and urnarias make their nests in the ground. They lig a short tunnel extending over the surface and ending in a minute cave. There they deposit one or more caterpillars, stunned by one or more stings, lay their eggs in the caterpillars' bodies, close the opening of the tunnel, and

"Just here," say Dr. George W. Peck-ham and Mrs. Elizabeth G. Peckham, who have studied these insects for many ears, "must be teld the story of one little wasp. We remember her as one of the most fastidious and perfect little workers of the season, so nice was she in the adaptation of means to ends; so busy and contented in her labor of love. In filling up her nest she put her head down into it and bit away the loose earth from the sides, letting it fall to the bottom of the burrow, and then, after a quantity had accumulated, jammed it down with her head. Earth was then brought from the outside and pressed in, and then more was bitten from the sides. When at last the filling was level with the ground, she brought a quantity of fine grains of earth to the spot and picking up a small pebble used it as a hammer in pounding them down with rapid strokes, thus making this spot as hard and firm as the surrounding surface.

"Before we could recover from our more earth. We then threw ourselves down on the ground that not a movement might be lost, and then saw her pick up the pebble and again pound the earth into place with it, hammering now here and now there until all was level. Once more the whole process was repeated, and then the little creature, unconscious of our very existence and intent only on doing her work and doing it well, gave one final, comprehensive glance all around and flew away."

One morning the observers noticed one of these wasps which was busy digging her nest on the side of a steny hill. "While in the burrow she hummed away, and in five or six trips a little heap of earth would accumulate, whereupon the animal would lie flat upon the heap and kick the particles away in all directions. She worked on her excavation at intervals during the whole day, and toward evening, after having been caught in a bottle, was brought to the doctor's cottage and made comfortable in a wasp cage during the night.

"On the next morning we took the lady down to her home and placed the month of the bottle so that when she came out she had to enter the nest. This she did, remaining below, however, only a moment. When she came up to the surface she stood still and looked around for a few seconds, and then flew away." In a while she returned, finished her excavation, and again left, reappearing this time after the lapse of an hour with a large, light green meadew grasshopper, which was shoved into the hole, whereupon the wasp laid her egg and left on another excursion.

The sight of a wasp returning to its home without hesitation or uncertainty from some far distant spot is, indeed. marvelous.

Of a certain wasp they tell the following story:

'We followed her easily, and as she was in full view nearly all the time, had no difficulty in watching her movements. She hurried along with her victim (a caterpillar); twice she dropped it and circled over it before taking it again. For 60 feet she kept to open ground, passing between two rows of bushes, but at the end of this division of the garden she plunged, very much to our dismay, into a field of standing corn. zigzagged among the plants in the most bewildering fashion, and keeping a general direction of northeast. It seemed quite impessible that she could know where she was going. The corn rose to a height of six feet all around us; the ground was uniform in appearance, and, to our eyes, each group of cornstalks was just like every other group, and yet, without pause or hesitation, the little creature passed quickly along, as we might through the familiar streets of our native

"At last she paused and laid down her burden. Ah, the power that has led her to not a blind instinct, for she has travelled a little too far. She must ge back into the open space she has already crossed. Nothing like a nest is visible to es. The surface of the ground looks all slike, and it is with exclamations of wonder that we see our little guide lift two pellets of earth covering a small opening in the ground.

The way being thus prepared she hurries back with her wiage quivering and her whole manner betckening joyful triumph at the completion of her task. She picks up the caterpillar, brings it to the meuth of the burrow and lays it down. Then, backing in herself, size lish three times as many books as the atches hold of it and drags is out of Italians.

The Peakbours hold that the old notions of the sets of kees, wasps and ants were all forms of instinct is no more tenable and must give way so a more philosophical view. They maintain that wass carry out their different tasks part-ly through instinct, partly through unmistakable intelligence. Acts of intelligence are the following: Some wasps who catch spiders, using them as food for their progeny, leave their prey on the ground or hide it under a lump of earth until ready for use, or hang them en a forked branch of bean and serrel plants, that they may be out of the way of ants while the nest is dug. Or a queen of some colony of social wasps will occasionally occupy a comb of the previous year instead of building a new one for herself.

Many similar cases are quoted, all proving that individual wasps, which are evidently guided by mere instinct in digging, or building, their nests, may occasionally be placed under conditions where only a higher sense—that of rea-soning—will enable them to choose the right course.

A LUMP OF CLAY

Transformed This Boy-An Incorrigible Criminal Until Mis Genius for Soulpture Began to Develop.

Three years ago a young man was brought into the Boston Police Court on a charge of assault with intent to rob, was convicted and sentenced to the State Reformatory at Concord. It was clearly shewn that this prisoner, although only a little ever 20 years old, was a vicious and apparently hopeless character. The beginning of his life at the Reformatory was equally discouraging. It was soon necessary to discipline him.

In the allotment of classes for the industrial training which all of the inmates of the institution have be went to work with the men studying engraving. It was soon seen that he had an aptness for his work. His designs had truer lines, and were more artistic than those of the other men. The room in which the engravers worked is very large, and in one corner a few boys had done orude work in clay modelling. One day this man took up a lump of wet clay. Almost of itself it took shape in his fingers. He was encouraged to continue, and soon sought the opportunity to do so. It took only a few days to show that he had remark-astonishment at this performance she had able talent as a modeler, and he was dustrial work to this. His success was astonishing, and his designs grew more and more artistic and ambitious.

The superintendent of the Reformatory, Mr. Joseph F. Scott, arranged to have one of the most expert modelers in Boston come to Concord several times to give him instruction in those mechanical details which can be acquired only by practice. Meanwhile, the developments of the man's moral nature kept pace with the artistic. It was not an easy task, for the old instincts were strong. It was as easy as ever for his old passion to flame up, and influenced by them his first impulse was to rebel and fight.

Then, almost as if painted on a canvas, could be seen the progress of the struggle going on in his mind, as he said to himself: "Now, if I let myself go. in word er deed. I shall be disciplined, and that means that my time for this work will shortened, or taken away altogether." And in the end the art nature would

His first life-size figure was a head of the Madonna. When that was finished he took as a model one of the boys in the same shop with himself just as he worked, in inmate's cap and clothes.

His success in reproducing a likeness from life was phenomenal, and the lifesize cast made from his model now stands in the office of the institution.

This head was very nearly completed when word came from the commissioners to the superintendent that this man's time was completed, and he was to be discharged the next day. Ordinarily a prisoner is not notified of such a decree until the day when it is to take effect.

In this case, however, as there were only a few more hours' work to be done to complete the study the superintendent decided to depart from the usual custom. Going down to the room where the young man was hard at work he said:

"H-, you are to go out to-morrow." The prisoner looked up in surprise. Then his face fell as if disappointed. "Why, I can't go to-morrow," he said.

"I can't get this done by that time " The going out from prison walls after three years of confinement behind them was nothing compared to the pleasure of the artist in completing a design. As it happened, though, he went, and still the model was completed. The superintendent himself came down to the room to stay with him that night, and after several hours of hard work the head was completed, and the next day the artist walked out, free. Several months before that time a letter had come to the superintendent from an entire stranger making inquiries about this boy. The writer was the proprietor of one of the largest carving establishments in the United States. "He came to know of him through a lady who had seen the young man at his work. He now wrote that as soon as the prisoner was released he stood ready to give him a place at $3 a day, with the opportunity to study a part of the time in one of the best art schools in the country. The discharged prisoner went directly into that shop, and has been there for eix months, a successful workman and a hard and conscientions student, whose Ram Fighting the Native, Primitive Sport of the Bengalese.

The Element of Chance Keenly Developed in the Natives. Who Will Wager en Anything From the Fighting Partildge to a Birth or Death-How Rams Are Trained.

In their own way the natives of India are sportsmen in that they enjoy wagering on the elements of chance.

Throughout the great Peninsula the natives rarely lose an opportunity of risking their money. Large sums change hands upon the most trivial events of daily life.

Fighting partridges and bulbuls are but a refinement in speculation when it is a common practice to wager on household events, such as a birth or death.

In the Punjab, next to rain and tides, wrestling is the most universal means of betting. But in agricultural Bengal they possess another excitement over which men will mortgage their crops and cattle if a special favorite be in the field. This sport is ram fighting.

But as he takes to his training he backs further and further from the object, until the legitimate distance is arrived at. By this he has begun to put such force into his butts that it takes two men to hold the shield, and a good ram will upset them at every charge.

AN ODD PHOTOGRAPH.

The Ship Scylla's Name as Written by Her Crew.

The British cruiser Scylla has just returned to England and paid off. During her three years' service she has earned an enviable reputation for general serviceability and has been especially noteworthy for the splendid record her crew has made for marksmanship.

Captain Percy Scott, the captain of the Scylla, naturally considered that the name of the ship ought to be "writ large, " and he proceeded to carry out that idea as shown in the photograph here reproduced.

It was taken by Captain Scott during the Scylla's stay at Standia Island, off the town of Candia, in Crete.

Aigrettes for Women's Kats.

A British consul in Venezuela has made a most elaborate report to his Government of the destruction of birds for the supply of aigrettes for women's bats. He estimates that the number of birds killed in 1898 for this purpose was 1,-538,788. No less than 870 birds have te be killed to produce two and a quarter pounds of the smaller feathers. "It is to be feared," adds the consul, "that this waste will within an appreciable time

THREE ACRES AND A COW

Jesse Collings, M.P., Who Carried Mr. Gladstone Into Power With This Unique Phrase.

Jesse Collings, M.P., Parliamentary Secretary of the Board of Trade, whose famous phrase "Three acres and a cow" carried Mr. Gladstone and the Liberal party into power in Great Britain in the elections of 1685, has come to the United States for a pleasure trip. He arrived on the steamer Campania, and will remain in New York a short time before starting across the country. He will also, it is said, visit Canada before returning home. While a rest and recreation are his main objects here, he will make serious observations of American conditions in many tions of the land before returning to

Mr. Collings is one of the interesting figures in Engish politics. His fine face. surrounded by gray, bushy whiskers : ad hair, shows well the warm-hearted, kind ly character he possesses. All over it's land he is known as the laboring man' friend, and especially as the friend of the agricultural classes. Through his mother he sprang directly from the ranks of the farm laborers, and in all his subsequent career as rich merchant, mayor of Birmingham, member of Parliament and Government official, he has kept the interests of those humble people close to his heart.

That phrase "Three acres and a cow," which is usually thought of when Mr. Collings' name is mentioned, was first breathed forth by him as a pieus aspiration when he was campaigning as Mr. Gladstone's lieutenant. It expressed what he wished could be granted by allotment to every propertyless family of agricultural laborers in England. Is was taken by the laborers themselves, however, to express the distinct promise of the Liberal party to them in case of success in the elections. It is hardly too much to say that the same belief was the direct cause of the success that did come to the Liberals.

Mr. Collings was not the man, however, to let the laborers' hopes be disappointed. His famous small holdings resolution soon followed, and it was the foundation of the Allotment Act, which has saved many a rural district in England from ruin. The resolution upset Lord Salisbury's Government and made Mr. Collings an under secretary in Mr. Gladstone's third Ministry.

Mr. Collings is a great friend of Joseph

Chamberlain, and the two have travelled and campaigned and taken their pleasures together for many a year. Both are Birmingham men, and both came to the front through their interest in Birmingham's municipal affairs. Mr. Collings received an excellent education as a boy, and at an early period became a clerk to a big Birmingham firm of hardware dealers. Before long he was their "bagman" or travelling salesman in his own county, Devonshire, and the whole south and west of England. He was pushing and thrifty and saved money. In 1866 he was able to buy up the firm's business. Under his management it increased wonderfully in size. In 1878 he was elected mayor of Birmingham. He started the "mayor's fund," which gave relief to 10,000 families during a period of hard times. He was one of the founders of the agricultural union. "Give the laboring classes education," he said, "and they will help to raise themselves."

STORY OF A POSTAGE STAMP.

To Might Have Become the Mest Valuable in the World. In the year of 1851 a 12 penny black Canadian postage stamp was printed by the Government of Ottawa. The public did not regard this somber issue with favor, so few were issued. One of these stamps was sent to the Hamilton postoffice, where it was sold to an old gentleman, who said it was a shame to print the Queen's picture on a stamp that might be handled by profane hands. Tenderly the gentleman put it on a par-cel, sending it to a friend in the United States. Here, in the waste basket, it lay for many a day, till an errand boy found it. and quickly transferred it to his album. Despairing of getting a good collection, and his fever somewhat abating, he sold them to a dealer. The new owner, on looking at the catalogue, found that what he had paid $5 for was worth $35. Accidentally this stamp was slipped into a 25-cent packet, and sent to a dealer residing in Hamilton. When the latter opened the packet he was astonished to find such a valuable stamp, and, being honest, wrote his friend to inform him of What had happened, offering him $1.200 for it. The offer was accepted and the stamp had increased in value and not a few came from a distance to look at the treasure. One day an English nobleman, who, through a Canadian friend, had heard of the stamp, offered $1,500, which offer was accepted. The English lord. falling in love with an American heiress. and wishing to gain the favor of her brother, presented him with the stamp as a token of his esteem. Here, in its new and luxurious American home, it came to a sad end, for one day the maid, by mistake, swept the stamp, which had accidentally fallen out of the album. into the fire. In an instant the stamp, which thousands had heard of and longed for, went up in smoke to the broad blue sky, leaving not a trace behind.

An Atheist Chief Justice.

Sir Robert Stout, the new Chief Jugtice of New Zealand, is singular among the occupants of high judicial office in being an avowed atheist. He was formerly known as the "Bradlaugh of the Antipodes," and he once presided over a secu-larist congress in Melbourne. He was born in the Shetland Islands 55 years ago, emigrated to New Zealand in his 19th year, became a schoolmaster, studied law after school hours, and secured the right to wear a wig and gown at 27. At 37 he was an M.P., and at 34 Attorney-General in the Government of Sir George Grey. In 1894 he became Premier of a coalition Government in association with Sir Julius Vogel.

JOKE ON HUSBANDS

Wives Weep.

'A couple of ladies in Pana desired to play a joke on the husband of one and got things into a pretty mess before they got through. The husbands were absent from home when the ladies gave birth to children, twins being born to one and one to the other. The single baby was transferred to the bed of the twins in order to make the father of triplets. Then after the joke had been allowed to cause conthe father of the twins think he was sternation for a time in the mind of the supposed father of the triplets the whole thing was exposed, but the mothers were unable to identify their children. One woman took one and the other retained two, but neither is certain she has the right ones. Hysterics and other evidences of excitement are in order; but the complete identity of those children will never be established. The mother of the twins will know that she has one of her children, but which one? While the mother of the one child will never be certain that she hasn't one of the other woman's babies.—Taylorville Courier.
