NORTHCLIFFE DEMANDS HEADS OF ARMIES

UKRAINE, "PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC" AND CENTRAL POWERS AGREE TO TERMINATE THE CONFLICT AND WITHDRAW THEIR ARMIES

Negotiations Between Teutons and Rebel Russian State Culminate in Pact to Call Off War and to Resume Economic and Consular Intercourse.

Amsterdam, Jan. 21.—The negotiations between the Central Powers and the Ukrainian "people's republic" at Brest-Litovsk, have resulted in an agreement on the principles of a peace treaty which is to be concluded and the war be declared terminated, according to advices from Brest-Litovsk today.

On the conclusion of peace, the troops of both sides will be withdrawn and it is provided in the agreement that arrangements be made in the peace treaty for the immediate resumption of economic intercourse and consular relations as soon as possible.

As both the delegations considered it necessary to make a verbal report to their governments, it is stated, a short adjournment was agreed on.

EASTERN STATES ARE IDLE TODAY BY GOVT. ORDER

Only Food and War Plants East of Mississippi in Operation.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Business activity generally east of the Mississippi River was suspended today for the first of the series of ten "idle Mondays" ordered by the federal administration to conserve coal for private consumption and trans-Atlantic shipping.

At the same time manufacturing plants throughout the east were idle for the fourth successive day in compliance with the administration's five-day closing order, effective last Friday, and designed also to save coal and assist materially in relieving the traffic condition.

Fuel officials declared there had been a radical change of feeling in the country regarding the order. Industries were co-operating fully, they said, and virtually complete acquiescence was expected.

At least 5,000 "battalions" and hopelessly over capacity ranging from fifty to twenty-two, railroad officials estimate, are strung out along the main trunk lines. The railroads hope to break the congestion by the end of the week.

Both the Pennsylvania and Reading railroads gave coal trains the right-of-way over passenger traffic yesterday. The Lehigh Valley road canceled all Sunday passenger traffic on branch lines.

GREAT CONGESTION IS BEING RELIEVED.

Pottsville, Pa., Jan. 21.—More trains were started for tide-water in the last 35 hours than was moved in a single week of the coal shortage, according to railroad men. All railroads tapping the Pennsylvania and anthracite fields, by retooling locomotives, crews and loaders, have made headway in reducing the number of loaded coal cars, which has been jammed in classification yards and on sidings.

Washington, Jan. 21.—President Wilson has served notice on Democratic leaders in the Senate that he will use all his influence and power to beat the bill to create a war council.

"The president will fight to the finish" was the word brought to the Capitol today.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Establishment of a war cabinet of three distinguished citizens of demonstrated executive ability, is provided in the Senate military committee bill, as introduced today by Chairman Chamberlain.

The war cabinet, the bill provides, shall be appointed by the president with the consent of the senate, and is to have the following jurisdiction and authority:

"To consider, devise and formulate plans and policies, general and special, for the effective conduct and prosecution of the war and to direct and procure the execution of the same.

To have full power.

To supervise, co-ordinate, direct and control the functions and activities of all executive departments, officials and agencies of the government in so far as, in the judgment of the war cabinet, it may be necessary or advisable for the effective conduct and prosecution of the war and to direct and procure the execution of the same.

Another section would give the war cabinet power to use the services of any of all executive departments.

PROPOSAL TO CO-ORDINATE CIVIC BODIES, TO REDUCE TAXES, STRIKES A POPULAR NOTE

Heads of Independent Municipal Bodies Lining Up With the Mayor in Effort to Cut London's Heavy Financial Burdens—Boards Being Called Together to Effect Schemes of Co-operation and Mutual Assistance in Chopping Off Needless Expense.

Proposals made editorially by The Advertiser today that civic co-ordination should be put into effect at once without waiting for the approval by the slow-going Legislature of the commission form of government, have struck a popular note.

The proposal is to have the heads of independent municipal bodies lining up with the Mayor in effort to cut London's heavy financial burdens—boards being called together to effect schemes of co-operation and mutual assistance in chopping off needless expense.

It is a perfectly in accord with the desire of those who favor a commission form of government is simply to reduce the expenditures, prevent overlapping of the municipal functions, and make all bodies efficient. This can be best done by co-ordination of all departments of the city.

Each of them would know what the other was doing, and what each could do for the other. This would be a great saving of money, and we can do this without any legal machinery, so long as there is some co-operation and support. The problem does not seem difficult to me, and I think it presents any difficulties for business men, who have the interests of the public at heart.

Need Not Worry Over Law.

"As I mentioned before, this is purely voluntary, but so long as the results come in, lower tax rates and in decreased expenditures, there is no legal machinery, so long as there is some co-operation and support. The problem does not seem difficult to me, and I think it presents any difficulties for business men, who have the interests of the public at heart."

ALIES READY FOR ANYTHING SAYS BAKER

Washington, Jan. 21.—In his weekly review of the war, Secretary Baker says the British and French have greatly strengthened their defensive dispositions, reorganizing their tactical arrangements, which, in many instances, are as they were hitherto, chiefly of an offensive character, and are now prepared for every eventuality.

The recent events in Russia, which have removed from the theatre of active operations over 900 miles of front in the east, the invasion of Italy and the consequent shortening of the battle line in this zone by nearly 150 miles, have resulted in greatly increased strategic freedom for the central empires.

NORTHCLIFFE WANTS ROBERTSON, DERBY, REMOVED FROM THE BRITISH WAR BOARD

London Daily Mail Charges That a Military Clique Has Hushed Up Cambrai "Blunder" And Failed To Fulfill Expectations and Promises On Western Front.

London, Jan. 21.—The London Daily Mail today demanded the removal of Earl Derby and Sir William Robertson from the British higher command.

THE WAR SITUATION

Russia's Constituent Assembly had been in existence but a few hours before it was dissolved early Saturday by the executive committee of the Congress of Workers' and Soldiers' Delegates. It is reported it will be succeeded by the Workers' and Soldiers' Congress which has been supporting the Lenin Government. Dislocation came after the Bolsheviks had been defeated in an attempt to gain control of the assembly.

Bolshevik troops now guard the deposed assembly meeting place, and Premier Lenin announces he will not permit the delegates to reassemble. Whether the Social Revolutionist majority will submit to the Bolshevik order without protest is not yet clear.

With the aid of the German military ascendancy in Germany, there are serious strikes in Austria. More than 100,000 workers have quit work in the vicinity of Vienna as a protest against Germanism and in favor of peace. The Vienna correspondent of one German newspaper says the Austrian strike has been a large number of morning, and has grown too strong "to be stemmed by force."

British warships finally have evened the score with the German warships. The British battleships, in an action at the entrance to the Dardanelles Sunday, the Breslau was sunk, and the Goeben, suffering serious damage, was beached. The British losses were two monitors, one commanded by a nephew of Earl Kitchener, and whose fate is unknown.

A Good Bag.

The former German ships have been the mainstay of the naval defence of Constantinople since they found refuge there from pursuing British and French vessels at the opening of the war. Much damage had been done to Russian troops and supply ships in the Black Sea by the two vessels.

Increased artillery and aerial activity on the western front has been accompanied by more frequent raids by both sides. There have been no attacks in the south, however, and the little to indicate any serious breach in the winter activity. On the Italian front there has been only artillery fighting, most marked in the Monte Aesone sector and along the Piave.

Sixteen German airplanes were brought down Sunday in France by French and British airmen. Entente warships have bombarded the coast of the important German submarine bases on the Belgian coast.

Republic.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
PARIS, Jan. 20.—Within a few months Brazil will have an army of several hundred thousand men ready to take their places in France beside the allies, and by the end of this year she will have assembled an army of two million men.

This was the statement made by the Brazilian senator, Dr. Meil Machado, in a recent interview published in the Petit Journal. Brazil has a population of 25,000,000. An army of 2,000,000 men would bring it to service at least one-sixth of the male population.

It is a question of honor," declared Senator De Meil Machado, "for my country to come to the fighting front in France in order to take part in the defence of the world's liberty."

London, Jan. 20.—The Russian Constituent Assembly was short-lived. Convening Friday in the Tauride Palace in Petrograd, during street fighting, it was dissolved early Saturday morning by the Bolsheviks after a vote had shown them in a minority.

Thus, for the moment, at least, has passed away the hope that the legislative body through which it had been hoped order would be brought out of the anomalous situation that has existed in Russia since the revolution which reduced in the imperial family and the bureaucracy being thrown out of power.

Likewise, the delegates to the peace conference at Brest-Litovsk again are at sixes and sevens and the negotiations have ended. As on the other occasions when they ceased, the stumbling block is the Germans' demands and their refusal to withdraw their troops from the occupied portions of Russia.

TURKISH CRUISER GOEBEN DRIVEN
ON BEACH, HER SISTER SHIP IS SUNK*BRITISH SINK THE BRESLAU
AND SEND GOEBEN ASHORE
IN BATTLE AT DARDANELLES;
BRITISH LOSE 2 MONITORS

In Sharp Naval Encounter on Sunday in East Mediterranean,
Two German Cruisers Operating Under the Turkish Flag
Were Put Out of Action—Both Vessels in the Limelight
Since Opening of War.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—In a naval action between British and Turkish forces at the entrance to the Dardanelles the Turkish cruiser Midulla, formerly the German Breslau, was sunk, and the Sultan Yavuz Selim, formerly the German Goeben, was beached.

This announcement was made by the admiralty tonight.

The official statement says:
"The Goeben and Breslau—Turkish names Sultan Selim and Midulla—with destroyers were in an action with the British forces at the entrance to the Dardanelles this Sunday morning. The Breslau was sunk. The Goeben escaped, but has been beached, evidently badly damaged, at Nagara point in the narrows of the Straits."

"The Goeben is now being attacked by naval aircraft."

"Our losses reported are the monitor Raglan and a small monitor, the M-25."

Both Vessels Notorious.
The German cruisers Goeben and Midulla were in the Mediterranean Sea at the outbreak of the war and fled into the Dardanelles, seeking safety from the British and French warships that sought their destruction. Since then their activities in the Dardanelles, at the Black Sea, and in the Aegean have brought them fame for their audacity and the skill of their commanders.

Reaching Constantinople in the middle of August, 1914, the British Government immediately protested against the German warships being accorded refuge, and Turkey promised that they would be interned and placed out of commission until the end of the war. Later, however, it was announced that Turkey had purchased the cruisers and given them the new names Sultan Yavuz Selim and Midulla.

Often Reported Damaged.
Then followed frequent reports of the activity of the warships in the Black Sea, bombarding land positions and engaging or being engaged by ships of the Russian Black Sea fleet. Although the Turkish Government frequently announced victories for the warships, the British Government was skeptical. It was reported that the Goeben had been damaged by a mine in the Black Sea, and that the Midulla had been damaged by a mine in the Aegean.

GENERAL STRIKE ON IN DUAL MONARCHY;
WAR SHOPS TIED UP
AT SEVERAL PLACES

Strikers Are Openly Anti-
German, and Insistent Upon Early Peace.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—A general strike is on throughout Austria-Hungary, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Paris today, which reports that the strike is being carried out in Austria, and in many places, at which hostility towards Berlin for trying to force the Austrians to continue the war was voiced.

The strikers are described as openly anti-German and the movement as both political and economic, and especially aimed at securing peace.

Public demonstrations, it is added, have been held in many places, at which hostility towards Berlin for trying to force the Austrians to continue the war was voiced.

NOT A MANDATE FROM THE PEOPLE.

HERE is a good deal said just now about the mandate given the Unionist Government by the people. Why not tell the truth about it, and call it the mandate given by the voters?

It cannot be pretended that the Borden Government was returned to power by the people. It got a majority of the votes cast by its hand-picked electorate, and that is all. In London, in most of the constituencies of Western Ontario and in many in the West, the woman's vote elected the Borden candidate. There would be no ground for complaint in this had every woman had the franchise, but it was only the near relatives of soldiers who were so honored. Had the voting been general, there is reason to believe that many of those who are receiving the congratulations of their friends would now be recipients of sympathy.

The manufactured mandate held by the Government is not and could not be under the winter election act a mandate from the people.

HOLLAND REBUKED.

HOLLAND'S neutrality does not appeal to Hon. A. J. Balfour, Britain's foreign minister, as of a genuine brand and in his reply to the claim for damages presented by the Netherlands to the British Government he takes no pains to hide his opinion. Under the circumstances he is not to be blamed.

The claim was made because two Dutch vessels, being convoyed by British warships, were sunk by German submarines. It was not made on the country responsible for the sinking but on that whose warships were attempting to save the victims from the pirates. By what peculiar twist of reasoning the Netherlands has been able to absolve Germany and blame Britain is a mystery; at least, if Holland is as neutral as she claims to be.

Mr. Balfour has not only informed Holland that she is applying to the wrong office for compensation, but has added to his reply this warning, for so it must be interpreted: "Indeed, it is not easy to characterize such an action by a professedly friendly power with due regard to the amenities of diplomatic correspondence."

Such unmistakable verbal chastisement in diplomacy is rare, and is not administered on the spur of the moment, or without due consideration of its probable results. It is equivalent to informing Holland that her attitude towards the Allies is understood to be anything but friendly, and that they have no intention of trying to buy her friendship by paying for her losses at the hands of Germany.

The Netherlands has been a thorn in the Allies' flesh for a long time. Without her aid, legal and illegal, Germany's food problem would have been much more acute than it has been, and the struggle would have been nearer to its finish, if it had not ended. It is probably true that the masses of the Dutch are pro-Ally, but the ruling classes seem to have a sneaking affection for Berlin. German money has tempted the people to sell provisions for shipment across the border, and to aid in its transport, even against the law, and in this way they have aided the Teutons materially. Most of the unfriendly acts are known and noted in London, and have had their effect.

It is significant that, according to Amsterdam, the United States is preventing a shipment of 1,000 machine guns and 100,000,000 cartridges to Holland. The Dutch press says such treatment amounts to a cool denial of Holland's good faith. Perhaps the press is correct, and that is the exact meaning. The Allies have ceased to play into German hands through "neutrals" and Holland may take it that Washington's action has the indorsement of the other Allies.

CIVIC CO-ORDINATION NOW.

AT THE RECENT municipal election the voters indicated by a large majority that they wished to change the form of civic government in order that a commission would have control of all spending bodies. The movement was advanced very largely through the effort of Controller John M. Moore, who went into the details of commission government thoroughly, and devised a plan for co-ordination. The people were impressed with the need for a change, and emphatically registered their approval. But the vote was no more than an expression of opinion. In order to make the system a part of the lawful machinery, it will be necessary to petition the Provincial Legislative Assembly.

Should there be any need for such a step, when the will of the people has been given, such definite and enthusiastic expression! Mayor Somerville has announced his desire to have conferences of the various spending bodies in order to bring about all possible civic combination work. In his effort to bring about economical government, the mayor wishes to enlist the sentiment of "team play" among the various boards.

Co-ordination may be achieved without delay, if the various bodies, such as the utilities commission, the hospital trust, the London and Port Stanley commission, the board of education and all the organizations which spend a portion of the tax rate will come forward voluntarily and effect an arrangement whereby the unity of action sought by Mr. Moore's plan will be achieved without delay and without the necessity for going to the Legislature. These various boards have the expression of the people upon which to act. In fact there would be little excuse for any of them refusing the suggestion once it had been formally advanced by the mayor. It would appear that something must be radically wrong if any of these boards would not join the movement. The conference held at regular intervals might accomplish quite as much as a commission; in fact the sympathetic co-operation of all spending bodies would bring about the fulfillment of many functions desired through commission government.

The city has a chance to work improvement without waiting for the red tape to be unwound by the Legislature. It is quite likely that the slow-moving Legislature will in time bring about the changes necessary to place civic government on a definite basis. The Advertiser has long urged the necessity for a municipal portfolio at Toronto. The Legislature is the mother of the municipalities, but little attention is given to their problems. A bill has been passed providing for a bureau of municipal research, but up to the present no action has been taken.

With such leadership and such confidence as Mayor Somerville can inspire in the various boards, there should be no difficulty in the way of bringing about immediate co-ordination, without much formality. A connected-up, working organization for the whole city rather than a disjointed and separatist form of government is the need, and there can be no good reason why the will of the people should not be given force and effect at the present time.

THE OLDEST INHABITANT.

THE Oldest Inhabitant is in a bad way. His mood is gloomy, as he stands before the bulletin board and chafes and fumes and glares while the tabloid stories of the storm are offered to the public by the newspapers, by way of a news sample. He is dumb before the staring black ink that cries at him: "Worst storm in the history of Western Ontario," and "London stormbound, cut off from the outside world."

Usually the Oldest Inhabitant can sniff at the bulletins and go back to 1873 or 1847. But with the city heretofore of train service, of milk, of coal, of all things that come from outside, for a few days, he is struck dumb—or almost dumb. He cannot make us moderns feel small by going back to live in the tragedies or abnormal conditions of the past, and telling us that this storm was nothing as compared with the January blow of the year after he was married. He can tell us that the wolves howled around the schoolyard when he was a boy, and that he knows all about the big floods on the Thames—but he seems to be unable to find anything in his archives that will compare with the storm of last week in all its particulars. All he can say is: "Shucks, it was only 12 below zero!" And he is mad clean through.

THE PRICE OF PEACE

Written for The Advertiser by Victor Lauriston, Chatham, Ont.

When Kaiser Bill let loose his hordes and shattered Europe's peace his dream was that he'd dominate clear through from Spain to Greece. He'd witter France inside a week and Russia at a glance, and England would his friendship seek and to his tune would dance and fawn upon him for a smile and tremble when he frowned, and he, the lord of land and sea, with laurels, would be crowned.

But England murmured mildly: "If you don't stop it, Bill, I rather think I'll have to fight."

By now really: "When Wilhelm, like a lion bold, through little Belgium tore and bathed the fields of France with blood and wallowed deep in gore, and, driven shattered from the Marne, dug in—and thought of peace, and said, 'This fight was none of mine. I think it's time to cease. If I have failed to vanquish you, you cannot vanquish me. The lord of war I surely am. The lord of peace I'd be.'"

Said England, "You should think of that before you start a row. I've got a looking here for you. Stand up and take it now!"

The Kaiser in his war for peace drove Russia hard and fast. O'er Poland, trampled by his might, the heel of conquest passed. Through Serbia his legions swept, and Montenegro too and the Gallipoli sands were moist with bloody dew. "What is the use," urged Kaiser Bill, "of keeping up this game? I'm willing now to quit the fight. Why can't you do the same?"

Said England, "I've a job on hand, and it must finished be. If you're so desirous of peace, you first must conquer me."

Romania, the brave and free, next felt the conqueror's tread, and at Verdun the noble blood of France was freely shed. Russia went reeling when his blows fell thick as April rain. The Kaiser said: "It's surely time to bid for peace again. Why that could be! Let's make peace, and now they'll give me ear. I've got these English scared at last and shivering with fear."

Said England, very grim and stern: "Twice you this fight began. And now your pious heart is due. Please take it like a man."

The Kaiser whined: "There's still a game that I've been loath to play. I'll loose my herd of submarines if England still says nay. I'll starve these stubborn British boats if they don't give me peace. A generous peace, a German peace, the sort of peace I pray. Go forth, my blessed submarines, and sink and starve and slay."

But England, lightning her belt, "You're kidding, go to it. Although I did start this fight, I'm not the one to quit."

When Russia quit the Kaiser thought he caught a glimpse of dawn. If Italy were pouted hard, dare England still fight on? Surely the peace for which he'd prayed to devil and to God would now be his and with it all the plunder war had brought. He whimpered that he wanted peace and would be good and nice. "This poor old world is pummeled sore. Pray, England, what's the price?"

"The price will pay in British blood, But peace is never for thee. War—lord and Kaiser have no place. In any world set free."

"THE CALF."

[By Jessie M. Robinson.]

Bob Marston verily haunted the library rooms of the state university. Not that he was avid for learning. The library's dark wood paneling and the librarian's desk was the magnet that drew him. Notwithstanding that Clara Brownlee was a college graduate, that she was a girl, and that she was a girl, he was drawn to her.

Nichols, A.B., and that Bob felt that she was as far above him as the God-damn Minerva statue on the pedestal. Bob, who still aspired to become her chosen one. Bob was a hero on the quadron. He had won the football game and the university had failed to bring out any great material brilliancy. He was a hero on the campus he had been dubbed "The Calf" because of his mooning proclivities, his love to loiter and his love to loiter and his love to loiter.

This morning Clara's brown eyes met his. She was looking at him and she smiled at the tall, gangling youth, with his shock of black hair, came toward her desk.

"Miss Brownlee, I should like to find something about the casteopology," he said bravely, while consulting his notebook.

"You asked that yesterday—don't you remember? It is in volume II, page 536, third shelf. Encyclopedia Britannica," was the curt response of his lady-love.

Bob sheepishly stumbled over toward the shelves. He had looked up another question for today, and read the wrong one, but it mattered not. He hurriedly pretended to write in his notebook. After what seemed to him ages and ages, he sauntered casually back to Clara's desk.

"He paid me a visit," he said, and as there were other students asking for books, but finally they had all gone but Bob, and she turned to him rather impatiently.

"Miss Brownlee, you get every other Saturday afternoon, don't you? Won't you—go out with me in the car 'tomorrow afternoon?' he half-stammered.

"I'm sorry, Bob, but I must go to a librarian's meeting in the afternoon, and in the evening I have promised to go to a lecture on Ethical Culture with Professor Nichols."

"Hang Nichols!" thought Bob. "Well, make it two weeks from tomorrow!" persisted he.

"That is a far time ahead, but," seeing his keen disappointment, "I will try to go then."

However, fortune favored Bob, for at a coveit that evening he was called to the phone, and the liquid voice of Miss Brownlee thrilled over the wire.

"The librarian's meeting has been postponed, so if we can get home early and you still wish it, I shall be glad to go with you tomorrow."

As the big car chugged away from the curb the next day with its pretty passenger in white linen, Bob was supremely happy. Whirling about the boulevard, Bob could hardly wait to tell her his news.

"Well, I'm going to quit the university, Miss Brownlee. No use trying to plow away any longer. Mother wanted to make a lawyer of me, but dad said as I last decided to take me into business and so I am going into partnership with him this week now. Clara."

But Miss Brownlee was smiling and nodding in the opposite direction. Bob turned the big machine just in time to avoid running over a tall, pale-faced young man with large horn-rimmed glasses, who frowningly lifted his hat to the pair in the auto.

"Now the professor is mad, and I'm glad," giggled Clara. Evidently she considered this ride but a schoolboy and schoolgirl escapade.

"What's your song with me today got to do with Professor Nichols?" queried Bob, visibly ruffled.

"No more than that he thinks I should not be dealing with anyone but him, I suppose."

"Oh, I see; you're engaged," commented Bob, bitterly rude. "But Clara, Clara, Clara, and the silence that fell among them was appalling, especially to Bob, who liked vivacity and conversation. She was nothing but a great, fat, great, fat, could not help loving her. He formed a wild scheme. He would elope with the lady."

"Bob, Bob Marston, you're the silly calf they call you on the campus," he finally concluded. "If Clara is unwilling, what's the use, I suppose the old highbrow is more to her taste."

"We're going to enjoy the afternoon together, now," he said aloud, with little spirit, and inwardly resolved to travel as many miles as he dared.

"Of course we are, you foolish boy. I am so glad that you are going into business, Bob," said she, resuming the former conversation. "I am sure you will be a success."

Bob shut his lips together and gazed staring ahead.

"Where are we going?" asked Clara. "To the end of the world, I hope," he replied glumly.

Bob turned the machine off the boulevard into a forest road overhung with immense pines, and for miles they sped through the evergreen wilderness.

At last Bob spoke. "My Aunt Mary lives down this road. It can't be far from here. Shall we stop and see her? She may have some strawberries and cream for us."

"I'm sure I should be delighted," responded Clara, in a tone which indicated that any digression would be a relief.

"By the way, my aunt married a college professor. He is retired now on account of poor eyesight."

It seemed to Bob as they stopped at his aunt's gate that her modest home among the pines was more of a little paradise than he had ever known it to be before, and he hoped it might not seem so to Clara. But undoubtedly it while the calf went bawling off into the woods. Clara, half laughing and half crying, clung frantically to Bob, but to their mutual astonishment they had both remained in their seats.

"My darling are you hurt?" futilely questioned Bob, who was well aware of those soft arms clinging about his neck.

"No, dear, are you?" half echoed Clara.

The "dear" did not escape Bob, and he proceeded to shower the little upturned face with kisses. He was in heaven for a few moments, and then woke up.

"I forgot. Can you forgive me? You are engaged—"

"To Bob Marston," completed Clara. "Bess the calf—I mean the four-legged one!" ejaculated Bob.

And Clara Brownlee was too late to attend the lecture on Ethical Culture that evening.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Fats Other Than Lard Needed For a Life-Sustaining Diet

BY DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG
A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins University.)

Perhaps there is no nation more necessary to human health and happiness than the United States. It is a nation of many persons, and it is a nation of many needs. The diet of many persons is not a diet of many needs. The diet of many persons is not a diet of many needs.

The vitamins or life-sustaining substances present in butter-fat, yolk of egg, cream, cod liver oil and such animal fats as goose skin, beef fat and the like seem to be absolutely wanting in olive oil, corn oil and other vegetable fats.

The proof of this is obtained by the production of a catastrophe among animals, fed experimentally upon rations with all fats of animal origin completely eliminated.

Such animals cease to grow or thrive. They fall swiftly victims to malnutrition and wasting diseases and die a lingering death of fat starvation.

Olive oil and the other vegetable fats are not the only greasy foods which lack this life-sustaining substance. Lard, pork and fat of a similar nature do not suffice to maintain health and vigor.

Professor L. B. Mendel of Yale discovered in 1913 that lard was about the only animal fat wholly deficient in this needed vital element.

It is evident from this that it is neither cheap nor economical to use lard as the sole fat supply for the table.

The various butter substitutes, have recently come under investigation by physiological chemists and food chemists. These products are so much in demand because of their cheapness that it has become necessary to know whether they will really sustain life.

Where there is every assurance that the oleomargarines have originated from animal fats there may be doubtless a same expectation that vitamins are contained in them. The more expensive butter substitutes are to be numbered among these.

Cocunut oil, peanut oil, olive oil, cottonseed oil, maize oil and sesame oil are, however, the sources of many of the margarines. These lack the vital requisites of real butter, as do peanut butter and other nut pastes.

The vitamins in the animal oils are called "fat soluble growth substances." They behave as true fat and help to nourish the living tissues, add to their growth and repair and maintain the vital principle called life.

Butter and cod liver oil are particularly rich in vitamins. Fats not of animal origin are sometimes responsible for grave nutritive disorders, such as rickets, scurvy, beriberi, pellagra, and other physical distempers blamed on almost anything but the need of animal fats and their vitamins.

Q. M. C. Q.—Kindly tell me what to apply to the hair to make it reddish brown.

A.—Place an ounce of henna leaves in a jar with a quart of boiling water overnight. Then strain and heat again to a boiling point. Add two ounces of henna powder (first dissolved in water), and stir and strain again. Brush this into the hair after it has been washed. This is effective and easy to apply, also cheap and harmless. But why not be content with your hair as it is now?

Adele Garrison's New REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

What Madge Read Into Lillian's Praise of Her.

When Lillian returned to Katherine and me in the library after her hurried expedition to the house next door her face was troubled, and I saw the little fine lines around her mouth that always betray to my eyes her mental suffering.

She sank into a chair opposite us, and it was characteristic that with no immediate task confronting her, she put herself and her own worries into the background and began to fuss over me.

"Are you sure Madge is all right, Katherine?" she demanded, and without waiting for an answer turned to me. "You plucky thing!" she said warmly.

I flushed with happiness at her approval. Katherine glanced at me mischievously as she answered: "If you had heard her doing a Sherlockian deduction stunt just now you'd be sure she's all right."

Lillian glanced at me sharply, then at Katherine. "Let's hear it," she said.

I forestalled Katherine's reply. "Don't mind her nonsense, Lillian," I begged. "She's exaggerating an idle remark."

"Did I ask you to speak?" Lillian returned with mock severity. "Now, Katherine."

There was an almost imperceptible note of command in the last two words, which told both of us that the personal note was dropped from our conversation for the moment, that our superior officer wished information, and that it behooved us to give it to her.

Katherine, whose intuitions are wonderfully quick, changed her manner instantly. "Madge believes that the disturbance downstairs was a ruse to draw our attention from this effort to get into the library through the closet door," she said quietly.

"Of course it was," Lillian returned promptly, and then with a resumption of the playful personal note: "Good little Sherlock! Do it again!"

I read more into the words, perhaps than Katherine did, and my reading comforted me. That Lillian, although she loved me dearly, had been secretly a bit doubtful as to my fitness for the secret service in which she had enlisted me as her aid, I was sure. Her manner now, together with her exclamation of pleasure at discovering the way in which I had thwarted the man who was trying to effect an entrance into the library, reassured me, took away a tiny gnawing at the cords of my self-esteem.

The First Attack.
Lillian didn't speak again for two or three minutes. With her chin cupped in her hands—her accustomed attitude when thinking deeply—she stared straight before her, and I sat quietly awaiting her word.

The affection and admiration with which I watched her was tinged with something akin to fear. Katherine had told her that when the men posing as officials sent to take out her electric light meter had disregarded her warnings not to batter down her kitchen door, Lillian, standing on the inside of it, had not hesitated to shoot through the door with her silencer pistol. She had purposely shot low so as not to hit any vital part, but that her aim was good the groans of two of the men testified. The others made a hasty exit, supporting their wounded comrades. Lillian had counted upon the fact that the men would be anxious to avoid any meeting with the police, and that their bluff having failed they would lose no time in getting away from the vicinity of her home.

What Happened Next Door.
The old obsession of mine which the thought of Lillian's silencer pistol a ways brought me seized me again. A premonition crept over me that sometime, somewhere, her skill with the weapon and her readiness to use it when her work was endangered would involve her in tragedy.

I tried to shake the thought off, but the sight of Lillian's sombre face with its lines of suffering about the mouth, and the thought of her possible fate, became vocal she looked up at Katherine and me.

"Fardon me, girls," she said contritely. "Of course, you're eager to know what I found out next door. The heat of the establishment and I checked in the operatives, and the only one unaccounted for had but a moment before left the building hurriedly, saying he had to get a certain tool before he completed some work he was doing."

"He's a skilled artisan, and was ostensibly engaged in making repairs in a room opposite the one adjoining this. He was a trusted man, however, and it so happened—or what was more probable, he had ingeniously timed his work, or seized his opportunity—that he was alone on the floor, to make his daring attempt on this room, which you so cleverly foiled, my dear."

She smiled at me, and the expression of her face compensated me for the horror I had felt. He is one of the trusted operatives of the service, and has just returned from South America. It is vitally necessary that he be captured at once."

But her next words gave me the key to her own deep concern.

"It's a splendid thing you were able to mark him, Madge," she said. "He's a dangerous man, the only one of the trusted operatives of the service, and has just returned from South America. It is vitally necessary that he be captured at once."

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of success, prosperity and achievement. A child born on this day will be brave, generous, enterprising, and will rise rapidly in life through these qualities, if well taught.

Practical Suggestions on Individual Ways to Help Win the War

By ALBERT BARRETT SAYRES

Helping Solve the Sweater Problem.

When the average housekeeper adds the knitting of sweaters for the soldiers and sailors to her work and considers the time it requires to complete even one, she sometimes wonders whether it's the most efficient way to solve the problem. True, the work of the countless sweater knitters has solved one angle of the big task of keeping the men warm, but—asks many a knitter—is the solution the most practical one? Answers have come from every quarter of the compass. They run somewhat like this:

The application of countless hands to one particular work might well be done by machinery, but for which there aren't enough machines available, does solve the problem to a degree. That there aren't enough hands at work to supply all the sweaters needed doesn't condemn the broad method of solution, only the particular application of that method.

The sweaters are fine-aida; the work of the women who are knitting them shows admirable spirit, but they cannot make all the sweaters urgently needed in brief enough time. In many cases the knitting method is at fault because it takes too long.

Making Warm Waistcoats.

If you aren't good at knitting, and if you know of several "boys" who could be made warm and happy with special waistcoats that you can make in the same time you could knit a sweater, why not make those waistcoats and forget the more common sweater?

The tops of long gloves sewed upon a canvas back is one solution. An old fur coat or a discarded muff or scarf, cleaned, ripped apart and fashioned into a waistcoat is another way. Pliable leather from furniture or scraps sometimes cast away in manufacturing leather goods and neatly matched into a waistcoat is a third solution. Eider-down thinly distributed between the upper and the lower layers of a double waistcoat and sewed so there may be no slitting is a fourth answer. A longer list might be given—you can solve your own problem by giving it a little thought in the light of the warm materials you have on hand that a little ingenuity will turn to waistcoat uses.

Nothing that has been said should be construed to mean dissatisfaction with the sweater as a warm-over. The wonderful work of the Red Cross. It is only the personal problem of the woman who wishes to help but has little time to knit that these suggestions are designed to aid—and to bring to the solving of the problems the busy, eager hands of those who cannot knit or who have so many friends for whom they'd like to make sweaters that time is a disturbing factor.

Using More Nuts for Protein.

The nutritive value of nuts is too well known to require discussion. But many of us forget the things that are at hand when striving to solve problems that seem less simple than perhaps they really are. If you wish to save the cost of meat on more days than are provided for in your usual program, turn to the recipes you've selected and collected and may have tried out as novelties in the past. Serve one of them in place of meat on a "saving day."

Remember that any nut—even the peanut—gives more protein for the money than any meat, and in addition supplies the body with growth, repair and regulating substances that meats do not contain. Nuts, of course, are not perfect substitutes for meats. The suggestion is made for application every day, only for one day when they may be eaten in place of meat to great meat-saving and fine health-giving advantage.

that you sang," and Bessie called her mamma and asked for the Red Rose. Bluebird few back to his friend and told her what he had done, and Red Rose was very happy. She carefully unfurled her velvet petals so as not to shake off the dew drops.

"I think it's too bad you're so very busy," whispered Red Rose to Mr. Spider, as Bessie's mamma came toward her, but Mr. Spider would be frightened at you."

Mr. Spider wiped a tear from his eye but when Red Rose wasn't looking he quickly crawled among her petals, and when Red Rose was carried into the house Mr. Spider went with her.

It's a Dear Little Spider!

Bessie was so happy over Red Rose that Red Rose's heart swelled with pride. "How glad I am that I'm beautiful!" she sighed. "If Mr. Spider could only see me now!"

Mr. Spider could stand his perfume prison no longer and peeked out at Bessie. "She's beautiful, too," said Mr. Spider.

Then for fear of frightening Bessie

he hurried away to the window sill and spun his beautiful web across the corner of the window. The sun tangled his sunbeams in the silken mesh and it sparkled like a piece of golden fairy lace. Bessie saw it and gave a happy cry.

"It's a dear little spider!" she cried, calling her mamma to see the beautiful web.

"The bluebird's song is beautiful, and Red Rose has a wonderful color and perfume, but Mr. Spider can weave me beautiful fairy webs," cried Bessie, "and therefore I like him best."

Mr. Spider stored his spinning long enough to wipe his eyes. After all, what did it matter if he was ugly, he could still give someone happiness. And long after Red Rose had departed for his winter home, Mr. Spider still remained to cheer Bessie by spinning webs in the sunlight for her to see.

You never had a headache when you were well.

To keep well is to keep clean, inside.

To relieve headache, and to prevent it, keep the liver active and industrious and the bowels as regular as a clock.

"Let's Ask Mother"

FLORENCE HOWARD

"On dear me, just look at that ugly grease spot on my new serge dress," wailed Loid. "And I've tried to be careful. What will take it off?"

"Wait a minute and let's ask Mother. The wrong thing may spread the stain rather than remove it," said Grace.

"Cold water and white soap will remove the grease from woollens," said Mother. "Wipe a clean cloth with cold water, rub well with soap, then rub lightly on the stain and the stain will disappear without trouble."

Writes About "THE SURENESS OF YOUTH."

Copyright, 1918, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Did you ever see a concocted old man?

Did you ever know him?

Did you ever know an old woman who thought she was wiser than anyone else on earth?

Were you fond of her?

Youth—oh, you expect youth to be concocted!

I don't care much for a boy who doesn't think he's going to be the greatest general or the greatest writer, or the greatest artist or the greatest merchant in the world.

And I have no use for a girl who isn't just a little bit of a fool when she thinks of men who make failures and of women who haven't the faculty of success.

External Fitness of Things.

I heard a boy the other day—how furious he'd be if he knew I called him a boy!—but that's all he is, really, too young to exist without his mother's consent, and too old to have sense enough to do as he is told, and say no more about it—I heard this boy in his mother's living-room the other day tell two middle-aged women and an old lady and two old men and a middle-aged man just exactly what he thought of them, and why they were all such failures.

It was lack of initiative, he said, and no comprehension of the eternal fitness of things.

They meant well, and they had fairly good minds, and not such bad education, but they lacked executive ability. They'd never learned to be efficient.

He had a great deal to say about supply and demand, and laws of nature and the survival of the fittest. "Was quite interesting to hear him,"

One of the older men is a judge on the bench, rather celebrated in a modest way for his level-headed justice.

One of the old men is a doctor—not a great specialist, by any means, but a good, honest, practical doctor, who has saved at least two or three hundred lives, and has perhaps two thousand people through severe illnesses.

The old man is an arithmetician, quite a celebrity in his world—but, perhaps, what had any one of them done with their lives?

Where were their decorations? How much did they live in the bank?

The women—oh, the women weren't even worth considering seriously at all! One of the women has fought for years a losing fight against a malignant and cruel illness, and she has never let one green escape her lips.

Latest Advances Show Enemy Intends to Leave Country a Desert.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—Speaking at a Canadian Club luncheon in the Chateau Laurier today, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, former British ambassador at Washington, who is now on his way home to England, told how an intense desire for peace, which he found on his arrival in the United States five years ago, had been turned into a united determination to support the Allies in the great war. There was only one reason for this tremendous transformation, said the former British ambassador, and that reason was Germany. He well remembered the memorable night when President Wilson rose in the United States Congress and renounced, word by word, deed by deed, the history of Germany's crimes. The president concluded his famous speech by saying that there was one thing that the United States would never do, and that was submit to atrocities. The moment had come for the great nation to the south of us to act. The die was cast, and the United States entered the war.

The luncheon, which was largely attended by members of the cabinet and other prominent men, was presided over by Chief Justice Duff, president of the Ottawa Canadian Club.

Why We Are Here Home.

In opening his address Sir Cecil referred to the fact that thirty years ago he spent some time on a farm in Alberta. At that time he had operated a sawmill. This was, he said, the last speech he had delivered before the Canadian Club, and it was the last he would make as British ambassador. The

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless 'Syrup of Figs.' It moves its delicate taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of 'California Syrup of Figs,' and follow the directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeiters sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by 'California Fig Syrup Company.' Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Complexion Lotion! Use Fresh Lemons and Strain Juice

Any grocer will sell you two fresh lemons and your drug store will supply you with three ounces of orchard white. Put these in a bottle and shake well. Here you have a whole quart of the most wonderful lemon lotion at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold cream.

Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan, and is the ideal skin softener, smoother and beautifier.

Used by day, this sweet, fragrant lotion protects the skin from the evil effects of the weather and prevents redness, chafing and smarting. At night it works in the pores while you sleep, and is intended to bring a freshness and peach-like beauty that wins envy and admiration.

DEMONSTRATIONS IN ENGLAND OVER POOR FOOD DISTRIBUTION

Faulty System Leads to Great Inconvenience.

LONG QUEUES WAITING

In Many Cases Long Standing in Line Brings Only Disappointment.

London, Jan. 20.—Demonstrations to demand a better distribution of food were held at Brighton, at Epsom, at Kent, and at other places in England on Saturday, while men, women and children stood in queues, in many cases in vain, for a Sunday roast, margarine, butter or tea.

At Epsom 3,000 workers from one of the big war factories formed a procession and marched to the local food committee's office to protest against their wives and children having to wait long hours outside the shops of the grocers and butchers, and then being obliged to come away empty-handed. The men were unable to work, and the percentage of sickness has been high.

Meanwhile the butchers' shops were closed and the grocery stores were virtually sold out this morning, and the men were waiting in the streets for the food committee to take some action.

Food demonstrations and queues in London and in many other parts of the country were larger and more numerous than ever on Saturday. Everywhere in London crowds gathered at the butcher shops at an early hour, there being at least a thousand persons at 9 o'clock waiting to be served in the retail section of the Smithfield market.

Most of these got limited portions, and were luckier than the people in the suburbs, many of whom were unable to get any meat, the retailers having received only a fraction of their supply.

This was due not so much to the shortage of cattle and meat as to the hoarding of food, which made it impossible in many districts to bring live stock to the market, and to the faulty distribution of meat available.

The supplies of margarine are also increasing, but here again distribution is complained of some sections being well supplied, while others had only the scantiest of allowances.

CANADIAN SOLDIERS ARE OPTIMISTIC ON THE FIGHTING LINE

Sir Edward Kemp Finds Men in High Spirits.

PRAISE FROM GEN. HAIG

British Commander-in-Chief Speaks Highly of Achievements.

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Jan. 20.—(By W. A. Williams, special correspondent of the Canadian Press.)—Sir Edward Kemp, minister of overseas military forces, has paid a flying visit to the Canadian corps in Belgium, and has found here a spirit of optimism and a conviction of eventual success.

In an interview granted to the Canadian Press correspondent, Sir Edward said:

"I must come to France to find out how the Canadian corps is doing. I cannot speak too highly of the morale of the Canadian forces. Their spirit is splendid, as is their manhood. Canada would be worthy of them. The fine record of the corps, which has been under strength for two weeks since its formation, will be maintained. With the men now in training and those available under the military service act, the Dominion has quite enough men to keep its glorious divisions up to strength."

Haig Praises Men.

Sir Edward on his trip to the front visited two Canadian general hospitals. He was later, the Canadian Press correspondent learned, the commander-in-chief of the British army, who spoke highly of the Canadian military achievements. On his arrival at the corps where Sir Edward was the guest of Gen. Currie, he made a hasty trip to the front. Next to the splendid report of the men, Sir Edward Kemp was most impressed with the achievement of winning Vimy Ridge. Only those who have seen the ridge and have studied the German positions can appreciate the magnitude of the battle and the courage of the Canadian soldiers.

The greater part of our line is high, however, and the trenches in good condition, whereas the Boche having lost the advantage of position, which he held so long in this area, has been driven to the lower levels and is enduring conditions worse than ours. Our patrols have heard the enemy walking through water and mud, and their trenches.

The front has been generally quiet since the raids of a week ago. There are numerous barbed wire entanglements on our own and the enemy's side, in which we had the best of the argument. The light trenching of the Boche, however, has been a source of trouble to our own and the enemy's side.

We were forced to take cover. He sent two runners back for help, both of whom were killed. The Boche sent a S.O.S. in reply, our trenches were subjected by the enemy to an artillery bombardment. The minutes of the battle with no casualties to us, while the Boche had at least eight killed or wounded.

BRITAIN AND JAPAN ASKED FOR EXPLANATION

Smolny Institute Queries on Cruisers at Vladivostok.

Petrograd, Jan. 20.—The authorities at the Smolny Institute have sent a note to the Japanese and British embassies asking information concerning the entrance of British and Japanese cruisers into Vladivostok harbor. The note says the Smolny Institute was not asked for permission for foreign cruisers to enter the harbor.

TROTSKY TELLS GERMANS PEACE TALK CONTINUES

Copenhagen, Jan. 21.—Foreign Minister Trotsky, before leaving Brussels, told Dr. von Kuehlmann, the German minister of foreign affairs, according to a telegram from Berlin, that he was going to Petrograd for a week to report to the German government on the situation in Russia. He is quoted as saying that his departure in no manner indicated a discontinuation of the negotiations, which would continue during his absence.

DEATH OF GEORGE A. NEWMAN

Toronto, Jan. 20.—The death occurred here on Saturday of George A. Newman, treasurer of the Dominion Express Company, and one of the original promoters of the company. He was born in Merrickville, Ont., 66 years ago, but had been a resident of Toronto for about 35 years.

DOWNTOWN NEW YORK IS CLOSED UP TIGHT, AS THE "HEATLESS" DAY GOES INTO EFFECT

Streets and Buildings Almost Deserted in Some Sections of U. S. Metropolis.

New York, Jan. 21.—Almost deserted streets in the downtown business section and shipping districts gave evidence today that industrial New York generally observed the first of the "heatless Mondays" decreed by the national fuel administration.

Sky-scraper office buildings virtually were unoccupied; great department stores closed their doors; hundreds of factories and small business houses were idle. All the transportation lines in the city and commuting service were run on holiday schedules. Food stores were open, as were specially exempted industries, but many of them operated on a restricted basis.

Theaters were allowed to remain open, but they must close tomorrow. The New York Stock Exchange was closed, but business as usual. Saloons were privileged to open, but in these desperate times they did not use either fuel or light. Local fuel administrations even forbade the use of lamps, lanterns or candles as substitutes for gas or electricity.

Enforcing Orders.

To assist the fuel administrators in enforcing the order, a special force of detectives under United States Marshal McCarthy was assigned for duty, assisted by volunteer workers from various federal and city departments. The authorities were prepared to institute proceedings promptly against violators of the orders.

The advent of colder weather had a discouraging effect on the transportation officials, who have been making all the most strenuous efforts to relieve freight congestion and to bring more coal into the city. The increasing ice menace in the harbor has held up hundreds of coal-laden barges from tide-water. To add to the problem, nearly fifty per cent of the tugs in the harbor have been temporarily put out of commission by ice damage. While there has been a steady flow of cars to terminals, much of the coal is frozen necessitating thawing before it can be used.

England To Declare Pope Protector of Palestine Shrines

Men of Irish Catholic Regiment Now Guard the Sanctified Places.

Boston, Jan. 20.—"England will declare Pope Benedict protector of the holy shrines of Palestine," said Monsignor Arthur Stapleton Barnes, Catholic superior of the Irish Catholic regiment at Oxford University, in an address at the Academy of Notre Dame today.

"The Irish Catholic regiment," he continued, "has selected the men of an Irish Catholic regiment as guards of the life and death of Christ, and every sacred spot is in charge of the Franciscans."

HEART WAS BAD, NERVES ALL GONE

Very important it is in this age to have a clear, cool head, a strong heart and steady nerves.

Too much rush and bustle, work and worry, fall to the lot of men attending to their household duties and social obligations. The constant strain under which they continue day in and day out will soon shatter the strongest system. Before long the heart gets weak, flutters and palpitates, the nerves become unstrung, you start at the least sound, the pulse becomes weak and irregular, then there comes physical breakdown or nervous prostration.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the remedy you require to strengthen your heart and steady your nerves.

Mrs. Jackson, 457 Bolivar street, Peterboro, Ont., writes: "Fifteen years ago I was so bad with my heart I could not walk across the house, my nerves were literally all gone, and I was frightened by my shadow. I commenced to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and was soon able to do my own work. I have told dozens of people about them, and they are also doing their own work. If more people would take them there would not be so many weak hearts."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 60c per box at all dealers, or mailed direct, one receipt of price by The T. T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Clogged Nostrils Open, Breathing Made Easy, Catarrh Cured!

New Method Very Successful

It is a new method of treatment, that of medicated air, and cannot fail to be beneficial. It goes wherever air can, thus reaching all the affected parts. It purifies as it goes, simply burning up the catarrh germs.

Catarrh disease is a non-painful and healing agent; it therefore acts upon the mucous tissues of the throat, nasal passages, and bronchial tubes, destroying all microbe life, and at the same time heats up all the mucus in the throat. As a cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, La Grippe, as a strengthening for the throat, Catarrh cannot be equaled.

It is a guaranteed cure, and is highly endorsed by prominent physicians who use Catarrh disease in their practice.

Sufficient Catarrh disease for two months' use, price $1.00; smaller size, 50c; at all dealers.

Pounding over city pavements—tramping on stone and cinders, up stairs and down—so goes the daily walk-work.

Little thought is there of the leather soles on which you walk.

And that little thought, if you please, is usually one of discouragement. Discouragement in leather's failure to meet shoe-sole requirements.

For leather, that sufficed for so long, has faltered and failed in the face of a newer, better sole—Neolin.

Neolin is superior to leather, as leather was to the wooden sole. Neolin has brought to millions of modern people new-day ideas of shoe-value. Neolin has made it necessary for you to think about your shoe-soles, for Neolin's advantages are too great to be disregarded.

So after testing Neolin for over two years—after manufacturing and selling millions of pairs—we say "It is worth while to buy Neolin."

We challenged the nation with our claims for Neolin. Thousands have tested Neolin and found the answer—

—the answer to shoe-costs in Neolin's wear, far more dependable than leather, sometimes making one pair of soles last where two were needed before. Effecting a more noticeable saving where there are little feet to shoe.

—the answer to foot-comfort in Neolin's weight-light flexibility, needing no breaking-in on new shoes, causing no blistering feet, strengthening tired foot-muscles.

—the answer to health in Neolin water-tightness, moisture-defending as seal-skin, foot-dry prevention for sore throats and colds on slop-foot days.

—the answer to modern style in Neolin's smartness and quiet.

Are not these reasons to win you to Neolin?

Shoe-repairers have full-soles and half-soles of Neolin for your present shoes.

To protect you against imitations, every Neolin sole is stamped with the trademark—"Neolin." Look for it.

STABBED IN BACK BY IRATE WORKMAN

Hamilton, Jan. 20.—William Mason, superintendent of the West End Rolling Mills, was taken to his home this afternoon suffering from what Dr. McNichol stated was a wound in the back inflicted by a file in the hands of Geo. McDonald, an employee, who was arrested at the scene tonight.

Dr. McNichol stated that Mason had been stabbed in the back with a file, the instrument passing into a lung.
