WILL LISTS POSSESSIONS AT $206,795.31

T. W. Scandrett Is One of the Executors-Holdings in Russia Worth 570,000 Rubles Are Listed in the Estate.

London charity receives the largest donation in the history of the city from the late Albert MacGarvey, who has left practically his entire estate of $206.795.31 for the erection of a home in this city for poor children.

T. W. Scandrett, local solicitor, who is the only Canadian executor of the estate, will have charge of the spending of the money, according to the will filed for probate at the court house.

Although not specified in the will, it is more than likely that the home will be named after Mr. MacGarvey's wife, who prede ceased him, and will be called in all probability the Lucinda Mac Garvey Memorial Home for Children.

Estate Is Divided.

Mr. MacGarvey's Canadian estate totals $54,781.90, and is mostly made up of real estate. English assets total $152,013.41, while valuable oil concessions in Russia are valued at approximately 570,000 rubles, the will stating that the exact assets in Russia are not ascertainable.

CIGAR ASHES NOW USED FOR SALVE

Aged London Lady Advocates New Cure For Eczema.

Recruiting of cigar ashes for the front line battalion of healers to rescue people afflicted with diseases of the skin, is advocated by an aged East London lady. There is no reations of the skin of son to doubt the statement of this highly-respected lady, nor the claims of one of London's most responsible municipal workers.

Valuable aid has been derived, either by direct application or co-incidence or supreme optimism, through the use of cigar ashes by those afflicted with eczema. The cure was outlined to Dr. H. W. Hill, formerly dean of the institute public health, before he left the city last week-end.

"Well, now, the ancient Hebrews weren't so backward after all, with their sackcloth and ashes!" he ex-claimed. Dr. Hill had never heard of cigar ash as a cure for skin disease, but he saw no reason why it should not be practicable. Of course, cigar ashes may not be specifically mentioned as a necessity, but it is this type of potash that has been used with effectiveness.

"Just drop the ash from the cigar you smoke upon the back of your hand and rub the skin lightly. The skin absorbs the fine ash. Postules are closed and the skin is able to stand the ravages of the extreme heat and light of the sun. The pigment is not returned, but the skin is healed and strengthened." That is the statement of a prominent citizen.

Cigar smoking, in itself, will not cure the skin trouble. It s only a means to an end. One young lady had to find a confirmed smoker before she could make use of the remedy, but she is reported to have found the cure effective.

A well-known London doctor is now working on an electrical treat-ment which will replace pigment of the skin. It is expected that results will be highly successful.

Realistically Told. It seemed very easy to see the whole scene, the crowd on the shore starting to disperse after the sermon, the fishermen tugging at the nets, and then Dr. Meyer brought in Peter's wife. She knew he had been out all night and had probably come down to the shore to see how he had got along and tell him that a meal was ready for him at the house. "I think she'd probably heard about the great catch of fish, too, so when she saw Peter he probably said, 'Glad to see you, wife,' and they had a little consersation like this:

COUNCIL BLAMED FOR CLOSED POOL

Said To Have Failed To Consult P. U. C. on Annual Outlay.

Failure on the part of the city ouncil last February to consult with the public utilities commission regarding the Thames park swimming pool when the commission presented its estimates for the year, is the cause of the whole present misunderstanding which has kept the pool closed to date, according to General Manager E. V. Buchanan.

Commenting this morning on the charge that the commission was attempting to "pass the buck" by asking the council to assume responsibility for the opening of the pool, Mr. Buchanan stated that in submitting their estimates to the council mitting their estimates to the council for the year the commission had definitely pointed out the situation which was likely to arise in connection with the pool. In the face of such information, he declares, the council, without consulting the commission in any way, cut down the playgrounds estimate from $29,500 to $20,000 and thereby made inevitable the present situation.

The Estimates.
The commission's estimate for playgrounds expenditures dated Feb.
19, this year, contained the following clause:

"Six thousand dollars for a filter plant and scum gutter at the Thames park swimming pool. This is made necessary by the new regulations of the Ontario board of health. Unless the filter plant is installed the less the filter plant is installed the pool may have to be closed on the order of the board of health."

order of the board of health."

The letter transmitting the estimates to the council stated very definitely, Mr. Buchanan says, that members of the commission would be glad to appear before the council in the event that there was any question regarding any of the items. But without consulting the commission, he charges, the council knocked $9,500 off the estimates, although the total of $29,500 asked for included a sum of $4,363, representing an accumulated overdraft of five years standing on the previous operation of the playgrounds, Faced by this situation the commission could do nothtion the commission could do noth ing towards complying with the provincial health board's order, and hence feels that it is strictly to the council to find a way out of the Then came more about the story of Peter, especially when Christ first asked Peter to do something for him. He wanted to use Peter's boat for a pulpit, so He said, "Peter, I want you to run your boat over and tie it up to that little rock out there, just off the edge of the shore, because I want to preach." And I guess Peter sat on the bottom of the boat with his two elbows propped against his knees. And after this came the conversions of Peter. "I think it was one of those old-time conversions," and the fire of other years flamed up as Dr. Meyer stopped to say, "I tell you I like those old-time conversions." And all Peter had to say was "Lord. I'm not good enough for the likes of you," but Christ, I guess, just stroked Peter's rough hair, and he said to embodied in our character."

New York, June 19.—I have been involved in many heated arguments as to the advisability and value of women taking their place as jurors, and have for many years been told over and over again how sentimental women are, how easily influenced by mitigating circumstances. Therefore, I watched with great interest (as undoubtedly have many other women), the evidence given in the recent case of a girl who shot and killed the man with whom she shad lived for five years, a man who had seduced her with the shot and whom a sentiment is a quiet wedding took place at the Wellington street United church parbonals on the wedding took place at the Wellington street United church parbonals of St. Thomas, where Mr. Endicott will resume his duties as missionary of the United church in Szechewane.

An invitation was extended to the Presbyterian ladies to join with them, and over thirty were present. The meeting was opened with a hymn, and prayer by Mrs. Colgrove, after which the president called for a brief report of the Methodist convention in Sarnia. After another hymn, Mrs. Boyington declared their meeting closed, and Mrs. Bannatyne was asked to preside for the business of the United society. Mrs. Bannatyne after expressing the general feeling of pleasure at the splendid number out and the spirit of unity prevailing, proceeded with the election of officers and general discussion of business. Following the election of officers it was voted to hold the regular monthip meetings on the second Thursday of each month, and a committee was appointed to arrange the programs for the different meetings. Mrs. Alvin Blacklock extended an invitation for the July meeting to meet at her home. The meeting was then brought to a close, after which Mrs. Potter served lunch.

THREE TERMINALS IN USE NOW

Chamber of Commerce, Police Commission and City Council All Favor Steps To Centralize Transportation Lines.

With the increasing popularity of highway transportation, passenger ouses have grown to be one of the leading factors in connecting London with Western Ontario points. Seven lines now operate out of London, and so important has this branch of transportation became that the need of a central terminal is becoming more pressing each day.

The seven machines at present leave from three different posts in th lowntown district. While these are within a five-block radius, the efficiency and convenience of the transportation systems would be increased materially if the facilities of a central station were available.

Realizing that a central terminal is inevitable if London is to benefit from the seven bus lines, the chamber of commerce has taken the initiative in urging the immediate designation of a station that all lines may call their

Many businessmen favor the use of the federal square as the terminal, and this proposal is now receiving the earnest consideration of chamber officials. On the other hand, bus line operators have suggested that a section of the south side of King street, nearest to Richmond, be reserved for buses. The police commission has approved this plan, and as no hindrance to traffic is seen if such a scheme was adopted, the operators' plan may Clarendon. This list, if cut out, would serve as a handy reference to bus line patrons.) "I should think that in a city the size of London the provision of a bus erminal is a most important consideration," Managing Secretary W. H. Wood of the C. of C., asserts. "Hamilton has a large bus terminal close to the union station, and this has brought the establishment of other bus lines, which also bring shoppers to the city.

"London merchants could greatly extend their selling radius if we had a fast and frequent service in and out of the city such as a bus line is able to provide. Shoppers would be much more inclined to make trips to London if we had an adequate and attractive terminal. It would also be an encouragement to bus owners to provide better service.

The difficulties of the present situation are illustrated by an incident at a recent meeting of No. 2 committee of the city council, when a letter was received from a firm operating a line of buses, stating that it had established a temporary terminal, but was experiencing trouble with parking regulations. Other bus owners have hit similar snags, which adds to the inconvenience of the scattered terminals. A central station, recognized by the department of public safety would eliminate these troubles, which decrease

The two men were crossing ice, which suddenly opened right under their feet. They were plunged into the icy water up to their neck, and were almost dragged under by a whirling current. Amundsen and Riiser-Larsen rushed to aid them but found themselves on the wrong side of a widening lane in the ice. They tried to launch their canvas boat, but were prevented by the masses of drift ice. Meanwhile Ellsworth rushed to the other side of the lane, and, risking his own life hanging precaripusly to the rim of the ice, himself half-submerged, he pulled up first one and then the other of his exhausted comrades.

What he had on now was a double-breasted navy blue sack coat, grey tweed trousers, a semitiff collar and a diagonally striped tie. It was a neat, agreeable and modest ensemble, and having selected it for himself the buyer should have approved it for others. But he only said, "Heaven alone knows what women are coming

Over in the dress department, the 1926 outfit predicted by the buyer had, to all intents and purposes, arrived-a navy blue flannel sack coat, double-breasted, and a short straight white flannel skirt bifurcated by an inverted pleat in the front. It hung on the rack in the centre of the French room, together with some fifty other two-piece costumes in kasha and flannelcostumes designed as though by the aid of a carpenter's square, without a curve, without a compromise—the sports costume of 1925.

Those of us who were old enough to contemplate clothes some fifteen or twenty years ago will remember the summer girl who reigned when the art of Mr. Howard Chandler Christy and Mr. Harrison Fisher was approaching its height. She was a lovely creature, curved like a violin, and dressed always in chiffon ballgown that billowed and frothed about her feet, as though she had risen from a bowl of soapsuds. She knew Kasha then under its ancient name of Cashmere, as material which other ladies, older than herself, but still looking wistfully towards romance, fashioned into rose colored tea gowns trimmed with cream lace; and flannel as something which still other and older ladies, now no longer hoping, used to comfort their rheumatism.

Well, she has vanished, that lovely young woman, as completely as though she had indeed risen out of a soap bubble and the bubble had been pricked. "We aren't selling any of the 'garden party' frocks any more, except to brides," said the saleslady, "Even to dances, they wear nothing but tailored two-piece sports costumes."

Femininity is passing, passing. The tail of ner skirt is already fluttering about the corner. Presently it will have vanished for ever.

About three years ago, I met the petticoat buyer in the same store, walking among his petticoats, and in a state of considerable excitement and indignation. Someone had written an uninformed article in the paper announcing that the petticoat was over with and done for. No one would buy them, no one would wear them

"What price petticoats now?"

He spread his hands in a melancholy gesture. "The petticoat is dead," he said. And then

I knew that the petticoat was dead indeed. In the women's sport department three racks were hung thick with breeches-linen breeches, crash breeches, breeches in khaki rep and Done gal tweed. There was a pair in blue and yellow squared flannel and another pair in self-patterned grey, in a bold design that would have looked very well developed as vestibule wall paper.

"The wilder they look off, the better they look on," said the buver. Well, perhaps, perhaps. But those older, from its modish and feminine setting, you recognize at once that the turtle necked sweater was the garment worn exclusively by college freshmen fifteen years ago; the most conspicuously rah-rah garment of the 1910's. Later it became the sign by which you could recognize the cocaine-eater, or (when ostentatiously striped) the king of the underworld, in the movies. But always until now, it has been a masculine prerogative. To-day a man cannot wear a turtle-necked sweater without looking like a female impersonator. This year when the Muskoka steamers stop at the wharfs of the fashionable hotels in the north, the passengers looking down from the top rail will see young women sitting cross-legged on the dock, in their breeches and turtle-necked sweaters, their rolled woollen stockings and crepe-soled brogues. Or they will see them sauntering down in their double breasted flannel coats and brief white skirts with the inverted pleats in front that make them look like running

Twenty years ago they would have come down in muslins, their arms wreathed about each other's waists, and looked up shyly at the second rail from under leghorn hats that drooped with water lilies. Such hats may still be found in ancient attics, but muslin is never used any more except to bind the backs of books.

Cutting It Shorter and Shorter

N the hairbobbing department of another store, sixteen chairs are kept constantly

"Are you cutting many heads of hair this year?" I asked the head bobber.

"More and more," he said.

"And are you cutting them very short?"

"Shorter and shorter," he answered cheerfully.

Last year he had ten chairs. The year before that he had six. Next year he expects to have twenty-five.

To recognize the real significance of this situation, we will have to go back again into the past. Half a dozen years will be enough. Half a dozen years ago most of us would no more have thought of cutting our hair than Jackie Coogan would think of cutting his. The ones that did get theirs cut wept and sometimes fainted in the barber's chair, to the distraction of the barber who wasn't accustomed to femininity and hadn't any restoratives at hand except hair restoratives. Even two years ago, women went into the barber shop with a timid of a grain-was sufficient to start movement and curious air, like feminine visitors to a men's club on ladies' day. And they always The pitcher plant may be seen rearing its asked to have their hair back, just in case. brick-red flower high above the moss and

To-day they never dream of asking for it back. It lies round on the floor and is finally swept up by the janitor and put into the rubbish heap. It doesn't even rank as a by-product. And the customers, waiting their turn, sit about in that state of profound and apathetic boredom that is never to be found except in barber shops. Bobbed hair will never be replaced by long hair now; because it has continued to be popular even after it has ceased to be interesting.

It is a long road that women have traveled since the days when they were curved and curled like the hand carved whatnots that were their deplorable contemporaries until to-day, when they look as though they had been turned out by a planing mill. Year by year they have been shedding their femininity, losing a curl here, & curve there, half a width last season, half a length this. Little by little, they have been discarding decoration, training themselves down-for what?

Nobody can exactly say; but it is time for the masculine part of society to take alarm and form a committee and elect a chairman. For women do what their clothes tell them. If a woman has side pockets, she has to put a latchkey into them, and if it is the only latch-key in the family so much the better. The hand that wears one of the new open-back mashie gloves isn't going to take kindly to rocking the cradle, and a lady in khaki breeches isn't going to stay as contentedly in a bungalow as a lady in a bungalow apron. Femininity is passing, without a doubt. But this may be only a sign that the female is coming into her own.

NTARIO has two plants which are as different from the ordinary variety as it is possible to imagine. The very word plant suggests something that is deeply rooted in the soil and secures its nourishment from that point. The Sundew and the Pitcher plants completely upset this theory. The myriad of specimens in the botanist's lists can enjoy the substance offered by the mineral world to the complete enjoyment of their souls. The two plants mentioned require insects for their dinner and not only catch them but actually digest

Throughout our entire field of nature the law that requires a specific form of life to gain its nourishment from some phase, lower in order than it moves in, is rigidly maintained. Canada's Woman M.P. Tells New York Exactly What She Thinks of the Dominion's Politics, and She Has Certainly Been Doing a Great Deal of Thinking

ISS AGNES MacPHAIL has stepped forward and told the population of the United States what she thinks of Canadian poli-She has spoken quite bluntly and frankly and her terms can in no way be considered highly complimentary.

Miss MacPhail herself needs no introduction. Since she became the dominion's first woman M.P., she has been consistently and continually active. As a member of the ginger group in the House of Commons she is prepared to criticize anything or support anything. She acts somewhat as a political free agent.

It was through the medium of the New York Times that Miss MacPhail presented her outspoken views to the great public. In a lengthy interview, she declares, among other things, that the two-party system of government is practically a cat-and-dog fight. She begins by promptly pointing out that she is not sitting in parliament as a representative of Canadian women. "I do not represent women. I represent farmers," she says. "That is the most important fact I can state concerning my presence in the House."

But she qualifies her assertion: "Although I was elected as a direct representative of the United Farmers of Ontario, I must needs, I think, represent them in my peculiar woman's

"I mean by that just this-whereas men in politics place business values first, we women place the emphasis upon human values. So I wish to push human values to the forefront in politics, with human welfare as the goal. I believe that this is to be the fundamental effect, the larger and more useful result, of the political enfranchisement of women. But eventually this result will not be limited to women. Has not woman's most difficult task, since the race began, been to humanize man in order to make civilized living with him possible? So our work in this generation is not new. It is only a new aspect of a job which is very, very old."

Analysis and Dissection

ND having dealt the male of the species a A well-directed body blow, the doughty warrior in their behalf proceeds to analyze the agricultural situation. And that is where she proceeds to caress the two-party political system with a broad-axe.

"All governments, provincial as well as federal," she states, "may best do one thing for the farmer. That is to take the political and legal obstacles out of our way. But I shall return to that presently. For a moment, I want to talk about what we in Canada have called economic group representation. By this we do not mean class representation. class is always going to fight other classes in Canada, properly represented in parliament, are here not to fight all other groups but to co-operstance, there is a labor group and, under the oxen, was burned in the public square. old party names, the manufacturers' group, the railroad group and the shipping group. We can co-operate with each of these groups in so far as they are seeking the general welfare of the country. It is only when they seek privilge for special interests which are opposed to our interests as farmers that we must fight them on the floor of the House. "Economic representation is the only natural political representation in this age. The party system is now an antiquated form of governmental organization. The single-minded purpose of the party in power is to stay in power. Likewise the sole purpose of the opposition is to break the power of the ruling party and so take its place and its pelf. Our present party system makes a cat-and-dog fight of the whole task of government. "When we have economic representation all this will be changed. We shall conduct the public business in a business-like way and in the interest of the people we openly represent. People who make their living in the same way are naturally drawn together for mutual aid. This has to do with political life as well as other fields of social endeavor." At this point Miss MacPhail's New York interviewer deftly attempted to discover if the first lady in politics had leanings toward Socialism. He remarked that her arguments sounded that way to him, but Miss MacPhail brushed

"We farmers are not interested in isms of any sort," was her retort. At best Socialism is a theory of society. I don't know what it is at its worse and I don't much care." So, having promptly driven this matter into the ground, Miss MacPhail advanced on the general question of policy. "The first thing for us to do is to work toward free trade," was her all-inclusive announcement. "Protection is the greatest sham of our age. It robs the country people, supposedly to enrich the cities. In the long run, it robs everybody but a very few. The whole discussion of the Canadian tariff has been submerged in more chicanery and fraud than any other question with which we have to deal. As a matter of fact the issue in Canada is as simple as picking up potatoes. For instance, we farmers wish to trade our crops for cheaper British cloth and cheaper American farm machinery. At our point of entry stands the protectionist highwayman with a dark lantern, a bludgeon and a smile. He says, 'I won't let you trade with other countries. You must buy only of me.' That exactly what he pleases. What is there left for us poor farmers to do?"

Sacrificing the Farmers

HERE is more in the same strain. Whatever one may think of Miss MacPhail's opinions on the tariff, and there is a great deal of thinking being done on this question at the moment, no one can doubt that she has certainly attacked the matter with a tremendous degree of courage and developed to an unusual degree the faculty of speaking her mind.

"We are driven to desert our farms," she continues, "and compete for wages in the factory towns. The result is that 200,000 young people have emigrated to the States in a single year. something more than rubbish and cant."

very foundation of our economic system is agriculture. If we build our national system on the farm, we shall build solidly. By sacrificing the farmers we injure in the end our normal and useful manufacturers. "That brings us to the next immediate economic issue—a positive issue—that of financing the farmers and the general question of credit. Our financial system to-day, or, rather, our lack of system, is a crazy jumble. The farmers should be financed by a co-operative credit system. We are beginning to pool our crops to great advantage in selling. Why not form credit unions for the purpose both of financing our seasonal overturn and our long-term loans?

"The very last thing the farmer should ask for in politics is governmental paternalism. The greatest gift that life holds out for us is our freedom. To lose that is to lose all. The way to slavery is not slavery to the state. The way to freedom is the straight highway of voluntary co-operation. We grow strong by doing for ourselves, not by leaning on the government."

Having sifted the matter from an economical and political point of view, Miss MacPhail turns to the cultural side of things.

"The child of the farm," she comments, "feels that he is inferior because of his educational and cultural limitations. When he goes to the town high school, he is looked down upon. He is made to feel that he is awkward and intellectually backward. The development of cultural life in the rural districts is the second step. We farmers must develop a larger, broader social

"As regards this part of our work, I am an enthusiast. Our farm community has at present beginning to develop the essential rural institutions. We still have to learn how to work and play together.

'I demand for the farmers the best schooling, the best music, the best preaching, the best books and the best homes and home life. Producing better crops and dairy products is all very well. But we farmers must get paid for them in terms of the best things life has for anybody anywhere. Then the cry 'Back to the farm' will be

Lord Leverhulme's Death Recalls the At Least, It Should Be Compulsory to Rumpus He Raised in Italian Art Circles

HE death of Lord Leverhulme, the soap manufacturer and promoter of many industrial reforms, has recalled an incident which caused a great stir some years ago. Lord Leverhulme commissioned a portrait by the English painter, Augustus John, but was so displeased with it that he returned it to the painter with the head cut off. News of this spread among the artists throughout Europe and was the cause of violent incriminations against Lord Leverhulme, and a number of indignation meetings. In Florence the Italian portraitists declared a strike of twenty-four hours, in which "Group representation does not imply that our they were joined by the colormakers, canvas weavers, frame makers and models, and the politics. Broadly speaking, this is based on the idea that the worker and his employer should both benefit by the reduction of costs due to joint effort of all engaged in the plant. If the plant showed a saving in costs, for example, of $20,000, and there were 20,000 workers, each worker should be credited with $1 and 5 per cent. interest, and for every pound saved should share in the profits.

Barbeau the Canadian Receives High Honors

Young Esthete, Working to Preserve Dominion's Folk Lore, Recognized by Noted U.S. Society

VERY year the American Institute of Graphic Arts selects fifty books as the "best books of the year," and this year Canada is represented in the selection by the inclusion of "Folk Songs of French Canada," by Marius Barbeau, of Ottawa, the clever young Canadian writer who is doing so much for the preservation of Canadian folk-lore.

Canada may well be proud of Mr. Barbeau, who carries in his heart the dream of a new awakening of art and beauty in his country, based upon the old traditions and tales which he is trying so hard to preserve. Canada may well be grateful for the fact that he is not content to keep the records of his discoveries in the archives at Ottawa alone, but uses his spare time in getting the most fascinating of them into book form for the delectation of the general reader.

He has recently undertaken to bring the folksongs directly to the attention of the Canadian public by giving a series of lectures, illustrated by the singing of the songs by a real, genuine "habitant" singer named Jean Bedard, who has endeared himself to his audiences by his quaint presentations of the songs in conjunction with Mr. Barbeau's explanations of their history and GENTLE little flutter has been caused by the news that Princess Mafalda is going to marry Prince Philippe of Hesse.

She is the second daughter of the Italian king and queen, which is not to say that she will ever sit on the Italian throne. All princesses do not grow up to be queens any more than all princes grow up to be kings. In fact, some of them are an exceedingly great way off. It is said that a certain imperious young man, swaggering under the name of Prince Fritzenheimonowaki, was taken for a coming

BALFOUR THE ARISTOCRAT TO-DAY, YESTERDAY, EVER

Man of a Past Generation-Startled by the Recent Demonstration Against Him

T was Horatio Bottomley who said of Balfour that his proper position was sitting on the top of a refrigerator playing chess. It was indeed a wonderful sight, to see him in his characteristic pose, in his seat at Westminster, his long legs outstretched, his head on the back of his seat, looking up into space, apparently dead

It has been said that the British House of Commons is the most democratic place on earth: that he who comes within those walls must leave outside all pride of race or possessions. That may be true, but one thing is certain, Balfour never forgets that he belongs to a family. Once when he was in the cabinet he had occasion to refer to the number of the members of parliament. He turned to the speaker and said, "How many of THEM are there?" "Them," not "us." He was not one of the crowd.

One of the most extraordinary things in Eng-1ish political life is the friendship of this brilliant son of an ancient and noble family for that amazing plebeian, Lloyd George; so dissimilar physically and mentally; Lloyd George, short, alert, humorous, affable, every sentiment and emotion showing in his speaking face; Balfour, long, lean, languorous, remote.

Balfour and Lloyd George were once on the platform together, united for the time being in a common cause. It had something to do with hospitals. Lloyd George started his speech like this: "Mr. Balfour and myself do not always see eye to eye." That made the audience laugh, for there is, or was, prior to the war, hardly one subject on earth in which Balfour and Lloyd George saw eye to eye. The explanation for the friendship of Lloyd George and Balfour may be that each thinks the other too formidable a foe to tackle, both being afraid of results; it would be foolish to waste time and energy in personal warfare; besides which, Lloyd George can say very nasty things. He is an adept at it. He sometimes speaks out of a savage bitterness of venture, decided to enter politics, he approached Balfour, who had been his father's associate. He seemed to think that Balfour would receive such a precocious celebrity as Winston Churchill with open arms, and at once hand over the leadership of the Conservative party to him. Palfour, however, didn't see it at all that way; he was not nearly as impressed with Winston Churchill as that gentleman was with himself; he had lived a long time and had seen too many brilliant people, and Balfour didn't consider himself in the least "passe."

Once when Churchill was in the Liberal cabinet he got up to speak. At the same moment Balfour, somewhat ostentatiously, rose to go. Churchill called out: "The honorable gentleman needn't go; I am not going to refer to him." There was a shout. Balfour looked round, his face livid with anger. He essayed a retort. The words wouldn't come. He evidently had brain storm, hesitated and stuttered, and the day was lost. Churchill remained in triumphant posses-

Balfour is an old man now "weary with the storms of state"; he belongs to another generation. Another crew is in possession of the ship of state. Under the same name, it is true, but actuated by very different sentiments. They have to deal with a very unruly crew, whose bump of veneration for ancient families has gone. They have to make concessions, which Balfour, in his day, would never have dreamed of granting. The recent exhibition against Balfour no doubt startled him. Could this thing be true? Were the masses really refusing to take off their hats to him any more? Why, very soon, they would refuse to bow the knee to the Almighty Himself.

Well, Sic transit gloria mundi.

EXTRA PROCESS at no extra cost to tire

Many people who nearly three years ago saw the first sets of balloon tires ever made, which were designed and developed by Firestone and were being tested on factory cars, doubted that such thin-walled tires would stand the hard usage demanded of pneumatic tires.

The important thing these people overlooked, was the distinct advantage Firestone possessed in its extra process of treating cord fabric-Gum-Dipping-which insulates every fiber of every cord with rubber and gives to the thin walls the extra strength needed to withstand the extra flexing strain.

Gum-Dipping impregnates the cords with rubber so that friction is minimized, which explains why Firestone Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords keep so cool even in extra hard service. Since heat is so destructive to tire life it becomes apparent why Firestone Balloons give such unheard-of mileage, making them the most economical tires to use with the added factors of safety and comfort. It also explains why race drivers trust their lives to Firestone tires while breaking all records for speed and endurance.

Begin now to enjoy the greater advantages of these wonderful tires. Let the nearest Firestone dealer equip your car-he will do it quickly and at low cost.

The game was balled on account of rain in the first talf of the eighth with one man out and no runs scored, so that the score trands as at the end of the seventh. Borchert went the route for Strathroy and was able to make St. Thomas "hit hem where they are" all through. Ariein for St. Thomas was touched for 14 alts, and in one hectic inning, the second, had them bunched for seven hits and seven runs. He was in difficulty later, but weathered them by good steady pitching, allowing only one run. Seven hits in a row, the last a double by McCandless, with Mills hit by a pitched ball, kept the scorers busy till they counted seven runs for Strathroy. Then Conkey fanned, B. Swales was caught out by Roberts, and Crawley speared Newton's drive to throw him out at first and end the locals' rampage. A walk to Conkey in the sixth, followed by B. Smales' double, gave the locals another run. St. Thomas got its two tallies when Udell and Vaughn both doubled, Hogan sacrificed and Oliver singled. Black also singled, but a gnappy assist, Wilkie to Collins to B. Swales. Cut him down at second, and Sterling flied to Wilkie.

Crawley had a big day all round. His Fielding was brilliant, with a climax when he jumped and caught a drive by Conkey labelled two bases at least. AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT Should the average player attempt By BOB CRUICKSHANK, One of America's greatest players.

In my opinion, the average player's game would be much improved if he would cultivate the use of the baffy or spoon in preference to so much play with the brassie. In the first place, due to its increased loft, the baffy is the much easier of the two clubs to play. The distance lost over a shot with the brassie is only a matter of a dozen yards, and there are so many more shots that can be are so many more snots that can be played with the baffy than with the brassie. It is always advisable to sacrifice distance for accuracy, and the baffy meets these conditions ad-mirably. Time and again I have found that players who complain of the limitations of brassie play could improve their games to a remarkable legree through the use of the baffy

THE GREAT TAKU GLACIER. There are many notable sights to be seen by the tourist who has the opportunity to visit Alaska, but none ore impressive than the famous Taku Glacier, which lies between Wrangell and Juneau. This is one of the largest ice fields in the world Where the ice breaks off in great bergs that fall into the sea with a roar like a peal of thunder, the glacier is one mile wide, and from there it extends ninety miles back into the heart of the mountains that girdle this rich and beautiful land. It is one of the few great advancing glaciers left in North America, and it is a sight which impresses itself deep ly upon those who are privileged to view it. That number will be greatly increased this summer by the inauguration of a steamship service by the Canadian National Railways from Vancouver and Prince Rupert as far north as Skagway, Alaska, with ports of call en route at Ketchikan, a typical Alaskan town built at the foot of the mountains; Wrangell, a city where jeweled ladies of the Russian court danced in rustling silk when other belles were threading the mazes of the minuet in towns on the Atlantic coast; Juneau, the modern and attractive capital of this northern outpost of the United States and Skagway, the portal to the fame Horse Pass, whose name is linked forever with the great gold rushes where men gambled their lives for the sake of hidden gold.

Special to The Advertiser.

Ingersoll, June 19.—Kenneth
J. Dunstan, vice-president of the Bell Telephone Company in Canada, told Giwanians here today of the early

There were times during this series that the Sagin woutfield looked like a Paddock-Murchison-Bobby Kerr combination. Calbert fills the shoes of Bobby Kerr, who did some years ago, yes some years, hold a world's sprint record. Kerr and Dodson are sure a deer-footed pair who drag in base hits.

Johny Carlin, the well-known tenor, raked in a couple of nice chances yesterday. When Miller was puffing after his double in the ninth Johnny signalled Buemel for a wild peg to second to give Miller more time to recover his wind. The move was called in the press box before Beumel made his wild heave out to centre field, much to the wonderment of the habituees who did not catch the second sacker's signal. Deep stuff.

Increase in Supplies Brings the Figure Down to 27 to 30 Cents Box.

With supplies more plentiful, the price of strawberries showed a tendency to ease on the local market this morning. Thirty cents a box was the average figure asked, though some offered good berries at 27c and 28c a box. Gooseberries were in fair demand at 29c a box.

Vegetables of all kinds were brought to the city in abundance and sales of green stuff featured the morning's market. No changes were noted in the prices of new carrots, beets, radishes, onlons and peas, but spinach was rather scarce and the price was inclined to rise.

Still fearing for the success of this year's oat crop, farmers are holding their supplies. predict a shortage so

FLOUR

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, June 19.—The condition of the flour market was unchanged. The demand for spring wheat grades was again of a very limited character, and, in consequence, the volume of business was small and the market was quiet, with no change in prices to note.

The trade in winter wheat flour showed no improvement, and the market was dull.

The market for millfeed was quieter today, there being a lull in the demand from American buyers, owin the deciline in prices in their market.

The market for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet but steady.

Flour—Man. spring wheat patents, firsts, $9.60; seconds, $9.10; strong bakers, $8.90; winter patents choice, $7.10 to $7.30.

DETROIT TUNNEL BILL THROWN OUT

Ousted in Senate When Border Cities Protest Against Private Company.

> By E. C. BUCHANAN. Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Reporter.

Ottawa, June 19 .- The railway committee of the Senate tonight threw out a bill to incorporate the Detroit & Windsor Subway Company, which sought a charter to construct a tunnel to carry vehicular traffic between Windsor and Detroit. The bill was protested against by a delegation from the Border Cities and Essex county, which claimed that the private tunnel scheme would interfere with the financing of the municipal bridge project which is being pro-moted. Mayor Mitchell of Windsor told the committee that the people of the Border Cities did not want a

The delegation also waited on the prime minister and other members of the government and asked that bonds for the bridge be endorsed by the government in order to give them higher market value, the municipalities to guarantee the governme against loss. Consideration of the

To-day I saw

The plainest of cardboard boxes, drab and gray-looking. The lid was lifted off and as I peeked under I saw many tissue-wrapped parcels just longing to be opened. And when they were! The glory that met my eyes was in striking contrast to the gray boxes and reminded me of the beautiful women of old Roman days who wore the most exquisite jewelry and especially the most beautiful of pearls. Pearls are now the very latest and best in jewelry, it seems, for before my eyes I saw chokers of tinted pearls, golden bronze, blue, pink and mauve, and to go with the mode in clothes there were ensemble sets, bracelets and necklets to match. Then there were Bakalites of black, amber, brown and coral, long strings of them light in weight and novel in design. Last of all I saw three strands of pearls creamy soft in their tissue wrap-Two strands were for around the neck and one to hang down either the back or front, caught with the daintiest of clasps of emeralds and brilliants. Mere words cannot do justice to such as I saw but they will all be shown in the Jewelry Department "To see is to believe."
