It's not of ea that science acknowsider for a moment carefully. ledges herself at fault in an apparently simple matter, but she frankly loes so in regard to the color and ma king of a large proportion of birds' eggs. A reas:n there must be for their infinite diversity-it can ot be an esthetic one; and all we can say with any confidence is that the ever-pervading instinct of distrust is probably exhibited in eggshells as in more important things, and the main idea in their scheme of coloration has been the securing of safety from many enemies by harmonizing them with their surroundings. But it is a scheme full of perplexing exceptions, which any one can study for himself in the spring. To take a very easy instance first. The doves present problem which works out satisfactorly if we keep nature's extreme conservativeness of habits in view, and take the cavern-building rock doves, in this country at all events, as representing the ancestral stock. The color of all pigeons' eggs is white, while the structure of their nests is flim y in the extreme.

Secret.

The original rock-doves laid white egge, in obedience to a law ordairing that color for most species nesting in the dark, possibly with the object of the mother bird readily perceiving their position as she omes into the gloom. And there oliff pigeons made their nests of the most accessible material-namely, dry, hard fronds of seaweed from prehistoric beaches. To suppose that they would use moss or wool, or study compactness in those dusky corners, where no eye fellowed them or winds blew, would be unreasonable. When, for some forgotten reason, the species left their precipice recess, they brought away their old traditions with them. The stock deves which may be found on almost any extensive warren still show their ancient habits by taking to deserted rabbit burrows for the that persistence so often characterizing the workings of nature, to lay white shells and build nests identical in form to the sea wrack of their ever kept alive those noble sentiprimogenitors. These nests were the finest material-namely, dead oves, doubtless for the same reason; breed in the dark. If the coloration of shells were all as simple as this, the matter would be easy enough, but no sooner have we diswe filed the ducke, which have, so far as we know, always frequented the most open places, also laying shells without markings! We may note, however, that there is a great tendency among them to revert to by the beautiful marbling of most of the beautiful beach-breeding plovers and waders; by the russet produce of partridges and pheasants who nest among the dead grass ceitful practices and hypocrisies. and fallen leaves; and by the sage colored eggs of the nightingsle, with loging protestations, in which which, forsaking the bush-building nabits of its kind, instantly forsakes also the generic coloration of their eggs for that of its new grounding associates. Nor can there be a reasonable doubt that protective mimicry is active in the nests of grouse and moor-fowl, where the contents match admirably the brown stems of heather and scales from pinctrees among which they lie. As for the brooding nightjar, both mother bird and eggs are the beau-ideal of protective deceit. Not content with a bare resemblance to her surroundings, the former appears to take into nice consideration the very pattern and shade of her gray plumage, and, choosing for a nesting-place some ed a patch of gorse to charcoal, eggs in the ashes so like the things about her that the keenest eye of Mall Magazine.

This is the crucial point in the whole affair. We are told this company has millions behind it. Now, if that is so why should it ask the Government for a guarantee on a trifle of $150,000 ? Is it in order that it may have the Government so placed that the Company will be able to influence legislation in its own favor? If as is not design this company is merely a wing of the great meat trust of Chicago, its object in desiring a guarantee of bonds is evidently intended to strengthen their hands in completing their monopoly. All rea sonable people in the Province will be glad to see our packing and other industries increased and extended in an independent business way, without Government favor or undue advantage over any genuine straightforward competition. This is the view that almost unanimously prevailed at the meeting of the Board of Trade. The leading business men and legislators who spoke, all favored in a legitmate way the encouragement of business in the company's lines; but with equal unanimity they disapproved of the Gov ernment guaranteeing the company' bonds. It certainly does not look like a sound transaction for the Govern ment to become partners in a concern capable of monopolizing any particular line of trade, and thus placing themselves in antagonism to the peo ple. Does Your Baking Powder Contain Alum?

Prof. Geo. F. Barker, M.D., University of Penn.: "All the constituents of alum remain (from alum baking powders) in the bread, and the alum itself is reproduced to all intents and purposes when the bread is dissolved by the gastric juice in the process of digestion. I regard the use of alum as highly injurious."

Dr. Alonzo Clark: "A substance (alum) which can derange the stomach should not be tolerated in baking powder."

Prof. W. G. Tucker, New York State Chemist: "I believe it (alum) to be decidedly injurious when used as a constituent of food articles."

Prof. S. W. Johnson, Yale College: "I regard their (alum and soluble alumina salts) introduction into baking powders as most dangerous to health."

In view of such testimony as this, every care must be exercised by the housewife to exclude the over and over condemned cheap, alum baking powders from the food.

Baking powders made from cream of tartar, which is highly refined grape acid, are promotive of health, and more efficient. No other kind should be used in leavening food. Royal Baking Powder is the highest example of a pure cream of tartar powder.

The Wizard did her best to avoid the liner but found herself under the Kron Prinz or anything else in the Wilhelm's quarter and collided with her. In attempting to clear the steamer the Wizard listed and much water poured through her ports. Her officers and crew numbering between 50 and 60 men were for a minute or two in the gravest peril but she righted and cleared the Kron Prinz Wilhelm, it was then found that her bows were badly twisted and buckled and that she had sugtained other injuries which necessitated going immediately into dock.

"As you!" he rejoined. what have you to forgive? not through your tale-telling that the old lady turned me out of the house? What were we to do, but to take the law into our own hands ?"

" My good fellow, I assure you upon my honnor, that never a word to your disadvantage did I utter to Mistress Bellamy. It was a servant who reported to the old grandmother your secret meetings in the ruined castle, against which I had already warned you. But let that pass now. At any rate your mode of procedure has caused much distress to all the members of the family at Woxindon. And the fact that at this moment we have, as it is reported, a sword hanging over our heads, is reason enough to ask pardon of all against whom w have offended, and seek mutual reconciliation."

For all his levity and vanity, Bab ington had too good a nature to allow him to barden his heart against this friendly overture. He grasped my hand affectionately: "God bless you, Edward," he said, "I see that I have wronged you and given pain to others, and I will do all I can to make

TO MY GUARDIAN ANGEL

BY FATHER FABER

Dear Angel, ever at my side! How loving must thou be To leave thy home in heaven to guide A little child like me!

Thy beautiful and shining face I see not, though so near; The accents of thy soft low voice I am too deaf to hear.

But I have felt thee in my thoughts Fighting with sin for me; and when my hearts loves God. know

The sweetness is from thee. And when, dear Angel! I kneel down Morning and night to prayer, Something there is within my hear That tells me thou are there. Thy prayer is all for me; And when I sleep, thou sleepest not But watchest patiently.

Whom God has glorified: And one of them,-oh, happy thought! Is ever at my side.
