AUCTION SALES!

"Stella Maris."

Sentiment, one of the characters says, is everything in life. Without it no heroic action would ever be performed, no self-sacrifice shown; everything would be just miserable. Mr. Locke can certainly not be accused of losing sight of this most pleasing human attribute. Stella Maris, with her delicate thoughts and fancies, is thoroughly charming. Risen and Herrold are both quite captivating. The story as a whole is well worthy to rank with Locke's best and most successful novels. Special Colonial Editions—paper, 50c.; cloth, 75c.

The Cake that's worth the Candles

Take off the candles. Cut into generous pieces. Now the feast's begun!

The delicate texture, the honey-gold color, the rare flavor—all join to make the finest treat that ever took the form of cake.

They won't let you wait 'til another birthday to make another cake like this.

Rainbow Flour certainly does help in cake-making. Yet that's not surprising when you consider that it is the quality leader among flours. Only the rarest nutriment of the high-grade Manitoba Spring Wheat is eligible for Rainbow Flour.

Every cake will be worth a celebration when you begin the use of Rainbow Flour. Just try some.

In using Rainbow Flour for pastry, more water (added slowly) is required and less flour.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

WEAK HANDS, BUT STRONG.

My baby is a week old! I hold him in my jealous arms all day and all night—much more the nurse says, than is good for either of us. But I will not suffer him to be moved. I watch the washing and dressing operation as eagerly and narrowly as if I expected some one would steal him away from before my very eyes. I am so terribly afraid of Adrian's asserting his right to him. I am never tired of watching the tiny, placid face; he is going to be very fair, so nurse says—and she is, or ought to be, a competent judge. I find an unceasing charm in stroking his soft, flaxen hair, and comparing his wee hands with my own.

"Daddy," I say, one day, when my father comes in to see me, "don't you think baby takes after Loys?"

"No, dear," he answers; "I don't indeed."

"Don't you?" I say, doubtfully.

"Well, whom is he like?"

For my part, I don't see the faintest resemblance to Loys; but, then, I am not going to say so.

"Like?" repeats "daddy," with a laugh. "Like his father, to be sure—like as two peas!"

"Oh!" is all I find breath to say.

"What is he to be called?" asks "daddy," after a while.

I look at him; but he finds something of unusual interest out of the window, and will not help me out of my difficulty.

"He ought to be called Adrian," I say, hesitatingly. "The eldest has always been an Adrian."

"I daresay his father won't mind," he says, pleasantly, laughing.

"Wouldn't you like any other 'better'?"

I lay my face against the baby's head, without speaking.

"Eh?" says "daddy"; "don't you think you would?"

I feel I am growing scarlet; but why should I try to hide such a blush as this?

"No," I answer, boldly. "I don't think I should."

"Then Adrian it shall be," says he. "And now I must go. I've half a dozen things to do, and very little time to do them in. Good-by, both of you."

When he is gone, I lie back in a very doce far niente kind of mood. At last I am perfectly happy. I tell myself so with a kind of glee which betrays a little doubt on the subject. Oh, yes, at last that aching void in my heart is filled up, and I want for nothing, not even that love of Adrian's I made so much fuss about so short a time ago! Ah, is that quite true, Audrey Charteris? I think not. I want it just as badly as ever, only I do not make quite so much fuss about it.

So I lie back and watch the dusk growing outside, and the cheering firelight flickering and deepening on the walls. Before long that tiresome nurse, with her rules and her worry, will be coming back, and then—heigho for quietness! I can hear her step now in the corridor—and yet it sounds too heavy a tread for even her. It cannot be "daddy" coming back; I heard him ride away down the avenue half an hour ago. Is it—is it—I hardly dare ask my heart who it is.

I close my eyes, and lie quite still, holding my breath and lugging the baby closer than ever. Sure, Adrian would not be so mean as to take advantage of "daddy's" absence to steal away the child?

I cover my eyes with my left hand just as the door is pushed gently open. I peep between my fingers. Yes, it is Adrian! He must know I am awake by my wildly beating heart; I can hear it throbbing and knocking like a wild bird imprisoned in a cage. He looks much as usual—not ill and haggard, as when I saw him last, but just as he used to do when we were first married. He comes to the side of the bed; but it is evident that baby stealing is not his object. He stands with his hands in his pockets, quietly regarding his property.

At last he breaks into a laugh—laugh neither nervous nor awkward.

but just such a one as he might give if we had been parted but for an hour.

"When you have quite done playing bo-peep with your fingers," he says, taking my hand in his and bending down, with a dangerous light in his eyes, "perhaps you will say something to me."

But I utter never a word; my eyes drop before the passionate ardor of his, and he continues:

"You've kept me away for a long time; but now you're in a fix. You can't get up if you try. I've bribed the nurse to keep away for an hour, and your father's gone out, and won't be back for ever so long; so what do you mean to do?"

How can I speak? What have I to say? Nothing. I lie flushing and paling beneath his gaze, troubled, yet happy—happy, yet doubtful—clutching my baby much as a drowning man is supposed to clutch a straw.

"Do you know?"—in a tone of mock severity—"that you have kept me at bay for five whole months?"

"Yes," I say, meekly.

"Well, and what have I done?"

I must look as I feel, infinitely distressed. Adrian comes yet closer to me, and lays his head on the pillow beside mine.

"Tell me, baby," he says, persuasively, "what had I done so very dreadful?"

I try to speak, but I cannot; I only lie crying quietly—seeing which, he takes me, baby and all, into his arms and draws my head close to him.

CHAPTER III.

"I beg your pardon," he said, with a short laugh. "I think I must be half dazed still. You say you sent to warn me—sent direct to me?"

"You are the 'cisman'?" she said, but with a tone of doubt.

"The what?" he demanded.

She rose, her dark eyes fixed on him.

"You threatened us," she said, half fiercely, half sullenly.

Vane looked at her with a bewildered expression.

"I think there must be some mistake, or else I am delirious and don't know what either of us is talking about. You seem to know me, or think you do. What did you say I was?"

She shraked the question.

"Tell me your name?" she said.

"Tempest—Vane Tempest," he replied.

The color rose to her face, and she bit her under lip.

"That isn't the name," she said, as if to herself. "And—and—you are not the new 'cisman'?"

"Cise?—oh, excise-man, you mean?" he said.

He dropped on the ground and laughed grimly.

"No; I certainly am not."

"Is that a lie?" she demanded, in a low voice. "Are you tricking me? If so—"

Vane was wet and cold, and very much shaken, and his laugh was rather a rueful one.

"I don't in the least understand why you should suspect me of deceiving you," he said. "I am not only not the excise-man; but I scarcely know what an excise-man means. I was never in this part of the world before, and the whole business is a perfect mystery to me. Won't you explain what it is you are driving at?"

As he spoke he was conscious of a buzzing in his ears and a peculiarly inconvenient throbbing at the back of his head, and he felt himself growing pale and faint.

She came toward him and touched his arm with a curious mixture of shyness and command.

"I won't talk any more," she said. "Come with me. Give me your hand. You'd better close your eyes, or you'll be riddy and fall."

"No—no," he said, with all a man's dislike to being led about blindfolded—and by a girl!

"You'll fall for certain, and drag me with you," she said, with almost stony calmness.

Tempest put out his hand, and her own closed over it. He noticed that hers was small.

"Where are you going to take me?" he asked, not unnaturally.

"Home," she replied, after a pause. They ascended the narrow track.

the girl taking the outside, and as they rose, she said:

"Close your eyes now."

Vane glanced down and obeyed. As they got higher and higher he asked himself if he were really awake, or asleep and dreaming.

Only two nights ago he was in London; had dined at his club, and gone to a dance afterward; and here he was—if he were really awake—clinging to a girl's hand and climbing a hill in a wild spot which suggested Corsica, the Rockies—any desolate, man-foraaken region, rather than mild, prosaic England, and being led whither he knew not.

In the midst of his speculations and wonder, he was conscious that the small hand which inclosed his had grown warmer. The sensation of the firm, soft fingers was a strange one, and should have dispelled any apprehension that he might have felt. The sweep of a colder wind told him that they had reached the top of the hill.

"You may look now," said the low, clear voice.

Vane opened his eyes and looked round. Before them was the wide expanse of sea; the waves ran high, their crest shining in the fitful moonlight, their dull roar mingling with the wind.

"Is your house up here?" he asked.

"No," she said; "down below;" and she pointed to a cleft on the opposite side of the hill to that which they had left. "Follow me, and mind how you come; it is not so bad as the other path, but a false step—"

She paused.

"I'm a pretty good climber," said Vane; "but hadn't I better go first, in case I should fall and knock you over?"

She shook her head and began to descend, springing quickly from point to point. Then she appeared to remember that he was not so familiar with the road, and slackened her pace.

The track gradually wound round toward the shore, and Vane caught glimpses of the sea now and again. But suddenly it turned inland, and the girl, stopping at the door of a rough cabin built of the debris of wrecks, knocked twice, and, as it seemed to Vane, in a peculiar way, he heard a sound as of the shifting of an iron bar and the click of a heavy lock, and the door was opened by a woman.

"Is that you, Nora?" she asked, peering out at them, the light of a huge wood fire making a red background behind her. Then she caught sight of Vane, and added something in the local dialect, and so quickly, that he could not distinguish a word; then her hand went up mechanically to the door as if to close it.

The girl made some reply, unintelligible to him for the same reason, which appeared to reassure the woman, and she stood aside. The girl signed to Vane to enter, and he stepped in.

The interior was of the roughest description, but looked snug and comfortable enough. Great fogs burned on the stone hearth and afforded more light than the single oil-lamp, which hung from the low rafter formed by the middle of the upturned fishing-boat that served for a roof.

Vane took off his drenched cap.

"I am very sorry to intrude—" he began.

But the girl's voice broke in, and in clear, rapid tones she gave some account of the adventure to the woman.

Vane caught a word here and there but that was all.

As the girl proceeded the woman fixed her eyes searchingly upon Vane then she clicked her tongue with an expression of annoyance and turned to him.

"You've had a narrow escape," she said.

Solving the Servant Problem.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

"We'd like to go to a house-keeping in a home of their own instead of boarding. But this puts a new light on the matter. Isn't it a startling situation when you think of it? That and the servant situation together combine to give me courage to outline a plan which I have long favored, and which I am told has been tried in some parts of this country—and that is, the co-operative kitchen. Since it is necessary that some men must have millions of dollars while the rank and file earn scarcely enough to bring up a medium sized family, we must do something. That it costs less to board than to keep house proves that co-operation will help a great deal. Well, then, why couldn't any dozen families, or so have a co-operative kitchen? The meals could be served at separate family tables in a co-operative dining room, or delivered at the homes as seemed best. Being relieved of the burden of meal getting, almost any woman could easily dispense with a maid, take care of her own home, do her own sewing and possibly some congenial outside work. I know most of my readers are saying that this is all nonsense and impossible, that boarding house food is unhealthy, etc., and so on. But I am not talking about a boarding house run for profit, mind you; I am talking about a co-operative kitchen run to please its owners. Perhaps it may be visionary, but I'd certainly like to see it made less so by being put to the test. Myself, I'd be more than glad to be one of the pioneers.

That and the servant situation together combine to give me courage to outline a plan which I have long favored, and which I am told has been tried in some parts of this country—and that is, the co-operative kitchen. Since it is necessary that some men must have millions of dollars while the rank and file earn scarcely enough to bring up a medium sized family, we must do something. That it costs less to board than to keep house proves that co-operation will help a great deal. Well, then, why couldn't any dozen families, or so have a co-operative kitchen? The meals could be served at separate family tables in a co-operative dining room, or delivered at the homes as seemed best. Being relieved of the burden of meal getting, almost any woman could easily dispense with a maid, take care of her own home, do her own sewing and possibly some congenial outside work. I know most of my readers are saying that this is all nonsense and impossible, that boarding house food is unhealthy, etc., and so on. But I am not talking about a boarding house run for profit, mind you; I am talking about a co-operative kitchen run to please its owners. Perhaps it may be visionary, but I'd certainly like to see it made less so by being put to the test. Myself, I'd be more than glad to be one of the pioneers.

opened my eyes. For this woman said that she could not keep the house and pay for rent, food, fuel, ice, light, the telephone and the hundred and one little extras that will come up even in the best planned household budget, for less than $17 a week. Board and lodging in a congenial private family for her husband and herself cost them $15.50 a week. Moreover if she had kept house she would have had to devote all her time to that or else have increased her budget about $10 for a maid's board and wages. In boarding, of course, she practically received the services of a maid, and in her leisure time she was easily able to do enough embroidery—a kind of work she infinitely preferred to housework—to add $5 or $6 to the family income. Therefore it would have cost those two people at least $5.50 more a week to keep house than to board.

These figures as I say, sounded unthinkable to me at first, but figures which I have since received from other people have backed them up pretty consistently. Now I have always said that I thought young people were infinitely

Capt. Koch's Story of His Greenland Trip.

Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 14.—The story told by Captain Koch, the Danish explorer, of the crossing of Greenland in company with three hardy companions, shows that the dangers and hardships he encountered on the great inland ice field have not decreased since Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary and Dr. Fridtjof Nansen made their journeys over a portion of the same desolate waters. The Danish leader and his three companions, Dr. Wægele, a German, Larsen, a sailor, and Sigurdson, a native of Iceland, were reduced during their journey to eating a pet dog, the only animal left.

After landing from their ship on July 24, 1912, the first mishap encountered by the expedition was the loss of a number of ponies. Shortly afterward their motor boat disappeared through the thin ice, and the explorers were obliged to wait until nearly the end of September before the ice was sufficiently thick to carry their sledges and horses. When they were ready to start, Dr. Wægele fell with the result that one of his ribs were broken.

The expedition arrived at about ten miles to the east of Queen Louise Land on October 13, and went into winter quarters there.

Cannibal Ponies.
The shortness of fodder necessitated the slaughtering of all the ponies with the exception of five, which were gradually trained to cannibalism by being fed on the flesh of their brothers.

During a sleeping trip, Captain Koch fell forty feet into a crevasse, breaking his leg. The accident kept him helpless in the hut throughout the winter in a temperature generally fifty degrees below zero.

On April 20, this year, the four men broke camp, and with five sleighs, each drawn by a pony, started on their seven hundred and fifty mile march to the west coast.

During the last forty days violent blizzards raged practically without cessation. The ponies became snow blind and so exhausted that the men were obliged to kill three of them. Later the sun's rays tormented the travellers and burned the skin from their faces, which soon had the appearance of raw beef, while the temperature at night was thirteen below zero.

Snowshoes for Ponies.
Snowshoes were fitted to the feet of the two remaining ponies, and proved a wonderful assistance to them in the loose snow. But for the ponies the expedition would have been in a worse plight.

Unfortunately for the explorers, it was found necessary to kill another pony on July 11, this year, because the fodder had given out. Next day the last pony was killed, much to the distress of the members of the expedition, as a few miles further on splendid pasturage was found.

The rations of Capt. Koch and his companions had been meanwhile gradually reduced, and on July 13, their provisions were finished.

Caught in Blizzard.

A howling blizzard came up on top of this misfortune, and for thirty-five hours the four men were compelled to take shelter under a projecting rock, where they remained without a morsel of food.

On July 15, they tried to push on to the coast, which was now visible, but they were so exhausted with hunger, cold and wet that they were scarcely able to move. Their only chance for life was to kill the pet dog, which had tramped with them for about 800 miles. This was done and its flesh was cooked and eaten. The meal was hardly finished when the explorers sighted a sailing boat in a fort to the east of Proeven on the west coast of Greenland.

By means of shots and signals, the explorers succeeded in attracting the attention of those on board the vessel, and Pastor Chemnitz, who was on the ship, soon, with the assistance of the crew, had the famished and worn out explorers in safety.

Stomach Troubles and Weakness of Kidneys Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.
There is an enormous amount of suffering from liver and kidney derangements and stomach troubles that could easily be avoided by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. If you could only realize the scores of everyday life that arise from a sluggish condition of the kidneys, liver and bowels you would not be long in giving this medicine a trial. Mrs. Edward Stewart, New Richmond, West, Que., writes: "I want to tell you how thankful I am for using your Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for stomach troubles and backache caused by weak kidneys. I was unable to wash any clothes for over two years on account of my back being lame. I read the Almanac and began using these pills. They have made a complete cure. I can do my own washing and other work now, and want to say to lady friends that they do not know how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. It costs a box all dealers or E. C. How They Propose in Holland.

A curious old custom still exists in many provinces in Holland. If a young man is in love with a girl, and wishes to ask her hand in marriage, he goes about it in the following manner:

He buys a small, sweet cake, and wrapping it up in soft paper, proceeds to the house of his innamorata. Upon his arrival he is ushered into the midst of the family circle. Without a word he walks up to the young woman he wishes to make his wife, and he lays the cake on the table before her.

If she accepts his offer, she takes up the cake and eats it. Sometimes, though Dutch, she is squeamish, and tortures the young man by turning it over and playing with it before she declines to bite it, and then enraptures him by eating it to the last crumb.

If, on the other hand, she wishes to have nothing more to do with her admirer, she quickly wraps the cake in its covering and puts it back on the table. In this case the young man takes up the cake, satisfied with his refusal, and with a "Yankee's lizament!" leaves the house. The matter is then kept a profound secret by all the members of both families, and the outer world never hears of it.

If, however, the affair progresses favourably and the suitor is accepted, the father takes him on one side to ask about his business prospects and if he can afford to take his wife for a wedding journey up the Rhine, the ideal wedding journey of all Dutchmen. The girl, in a case of this sort, does not go into society for about six weeks. At the end of that time she reappears at balls and parties, and is not thought any the less of or shunned by young men who wish to marry.

Odd Ways of Keeping Fit.

The case of a Smithfield caspeler, whose death from heart disease was accelerated by pedestrian exertions designed to keep him physically fit, is not likely to deter men of sedentary occupations from the vigorous physical exercises which they feel their systems need.

A City athlete stated recently that the case reminded him of the odd ways in which thousands of men in offices take exercise. "A large number of men," he said, "are in the habit every morning of sprinting from their homes to their suburban stations, not because they are late for their trains, but with the deliberate purpose of a 'pump-uper.' It is wrong, of course; no real athlete would do it immediately after breakfast and without the possibility of the subsequent rub-down."

"Then there are the men who make a practice of running up the steps at the Tube stations under the mistaken notion that in such an atmosphere it does them good. They had much better take the lifts."

"I know one man who has an exercise of his own that he calls following a stone." He walks across the park, casting a stone in front of him, picking it up when he comes to it, and throwing it forward again. He declares it does him a great deal of good, and I dare say it does. A friend of mine digs in his garden every morning before breakfast, not for gardening purposes, but for the exercise of excavating.

"I have heard of a man who climbs the Monument stairs (311) regularly at luncheon time. All these little crazes are good in their way, but of course the value of any form of exercise depends on its regularity of practice and its all-round demand on the muscles. But far stranger than the variety of ways in which a number of men try to keep themselves fit is the enormous number of men who take no exercise at all and yet manage, apparently, to keep fairly fit—at all events, until they reach middle-age."—Daily Mail.

The Ministry of Talents.

Did anyone ever think that Morris was intended to be a creature of circumstance? Why should he bother himself about matters "where capitalists are concerned" if that were so? And not only capitalists but look over P. T. McGrath's back files where you will find a long list of the amounts of money which Morris got out of the Government of this country.

Mary Attends the Races.

She Thinks 'Twas Mean not to Give the Premier Three Cheers at the Harbor Grace Regatta.

Editor Evening Telegram: Dear Sir, Well, we had our races on Wednesday of last week, and as the day was a very fine one, Tom and myself decided to close up the house and go to the races. The races were not so interesting as formerly; they seemed to drag, you know; no vim in them. But all the same I enjoyed the day. Capt. Ed. Dawe, accepted an invitation from the committee to be present, and he drove down from Bay Roberts early in the day, and he received a good welcome.

Mr. Piccott was there, and what do you think, but I saw my Tom in deep conversation with him. It was nice of Tom to speak to him, and assure him he was welcome, but I hope Thomas held out no inducements to Mr. Piccott to stand for this district again. I like straight forward dealings, and if I was speaking to that gentleman or any person else who had such a poor chance, I'd just tell him so and not fill his mind up with wrong impressions. Well, Piccott is a fine fellow, and he is not tied to a few dollars as I saw him myself taking ten dollar bets for fun. Of course he was pretty sure not to lose as he would bet two ways. He said in a joky way that he won the money playing poker, whatever that is; I've heard of a "rod in pickle," but I cannot see how people can play poker; perhaps it is to try and see how often a person can escape the smutty end.

But I must say I never thought Harbor Grace people were so mean. Why the Premier took the trouble to come over from St. John's to attend our regatta, and he arrived just in time for his dinner. The committee did their best, and he no doubt appreciated their efforts. His speech at the dinner was a revelation, whatever that is, so Tom heard a prominent member of the committee say. But you are no doubt wondering why I called the Harbor Grace people mean. Here it is: When Sir Edward and Mr. Parsons got in the carriage to leave the course, I got as near as possible, and I told Tom that as soon as the cheer would be called for, to open his mouth good and wide and cheer for our Premier. But what do you think, why in all the crowd there was only one, a pedler, who taking off his cap went towards the carriage with the words, "I kindly give you a cheer, Sir Edward," and that was the only man who had principle enough to recognize the present Governmental chief of Newfoundland. Shame on you men of Harbor Grace. It is not because you are dissatisfied with the way things have been handled that you should let your mind be known at this time. Of course you are going to vote against the Premier's Party this fall, but you might at least have forgotten that for one day—Regatta Day—and made the poor man feel happy. This little incident cannot be denied, as it is quite true, and I challenge contradiction.

Well, my sakes alive, it is laughable to see all the work that is going on now just before the election. Sewers everywhere, and concrete sewers, if you please. All the old Tory dirt will be washed away, and when Sir Robert Bond takes the control of affairs and straightens matters out a bit, all that will be required will be to turn on the water and wash away for ever the relics of a party that was unclean in its actions. The workmen are laughing up their sleeves at this halt, but they will take it off the back of the hook, and thus not be caught. The people are looking forward to Sir Robert Bond making his stand, and they are ready to back him up, and to down the party who has misruled Terra Nova for the past five years.

I will likely have a few more particulars to write on again next week. Tom heard a sketch of something, and he is out to-day visiting the haunts of the "Sons of Rest," and other likely ground for the information he is gathering, information I will pass along to your readers.

Yours truly, MARY.

My Garden Must Be Beautiful.

My garden must be beautiful; for when the shadows play in lengthening shapes along the wall, And comes the cool of day, Perchance my Lord might come to see The place where roses bloom for me. And if he asked to come within This house of mine to rest, How fair and sweet the rooms should be. For such a wondrous guest 'Twere better far to keep them than, Least He might come before I know. And if He stayed for friendly speech As fell the light of day, How should I know to talk with Him Of holy things to say. Unless my soul acquainted be With some of Heaven's mystery!

DUBUQUE, Iowa, August 21. Henry Sternweis, wife and three small children, were burned to death to-day.

LLANBERIS, Wales, August 21. Suffragettes to-day destroyed the historic altar-cloth in the Parish Church at the foot of Mount Snowdon.

SHERBROOKE, August 21. Lawyers for Harry Thaw won some advantage to-day by delaying his appearance in the Supreme Court on a writ of habeas corpus. It was hoped he would be produced at 10 a.m. and discharged on defective commitment, and so fall in the immigration officials' hands for deportation. Thaw remained in the hospital ward chatting with his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie. The court held that Thaw's lawyers were within their rights.

LONDON, August 21. The Admiralty is developing on the east coast aerial defences, with considerable energy. Extensive naval works are going forward, and the aerial defence committee are working in close co-operation with the naval authorities. Stations will also be established at Cleethorpes, Scarborough, Dundee and Dover. There are over 400 dunes at Haine's air depot. The experiment of sea-planes attacking warships will be attempted to-morrow on the east coast stations.

LONDON, August 21. The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Constantinople sends a three-column report by Russian officials, who were sent by their government to investigate the charges of atrocities by Bulgarians during the occupation of Adrianople. The reports confirm the alleged massacres. The Bulgarians murdered Turks and Greeks, assaulted women, looted and defiled mosques, looting among others the library of the Mosque of Sultan Selim, and plundering the homes of wealthy Turks, Greeks and Jews. The spoil is said to have been sent to Sofia. This indictment by the Russian officials includes the allegation that 20,000 Turkish prisoners were locked up without food, and that of them 10,000 died of cold and hunger.

LONDON, August 21. London papers contain caustic editorials on the Thaw case. The Express says that if American justice should not succeed in the recapture of Thaw, the heaviest blow yet received will be struck at the insecure foundations of a judicial system, undermined by corruption and sentimentality. The common course of American justice amidst the people in this country. The ease with which rich men escape the meshes of American law strikes Englishmen as a humiliation to the public conscience of a great country. In America there is no law for the rich and another for the poor. Millions mock at the laws here. Thaw would have been promptly hanged or sent irrevocably and indefinitely to the Bunker's Asylum for criminal insane. In America he escapes and defies the justice he has outraged.

Hymenal.

The residence of Mr. William Wilkinson, Hamilton Avenue, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday afternoon when his daughter, Jessie, was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. Victor Hellyer, of this city. The bride looked beautiful in a charming costume of white silk, and carried a magnificent bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaid was Miss Margaret Wilkinson, sister of the bride, and she was very becomingly attired. Miss Marguerite Roberts acted as flower girl. The groom was supported by his cousin, Mr. John Hellyer. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. F. R. Matthews. The bride was given away by her father, Mr. William Wilkinson. The bridegroom presented to the bride a handsome gold bracelet, and to the bridesmaid and flower girl valuable gold brooches. After the ceremony a reception was held at which the happy couple received the congratulations and good wishes of their many friends, in which the Telegram is very glad to have been included. The reception was held in the parlour, and the bride and groom were seen by their numerous friends. The honeymoon is being spent at Manuels.

OTTAWA, To-day. After negotiations which extended over lengthy periods, the agreement has been reached between the Canadian and the British Governments, approving of the latest draft of the proposed Bill, creating a uniform Imperial Naturalization and will be passed by the British House next session. In all probability concurrent legislation whereby Canada will adhere to it will be passed by the Canadian House.

CARACAS, Venezuela, To-day. General Jurado, Governor of the State of Falcon, in co-operation with General Marschal Sere, attacked and completely defeated the rebel followers of General Castro, former Venezuelan Dictator, yesterday at Core. According to an official announcement here all officers commanding the rebel forces are captured and are now on board a Venezuelan warship. The prisoners include General Castro, brother of General Bello, the ex-President's two nephews, Julio Castro and a few hundred other rebels. The whereabouts of General Castro remains unknown here. Important invasions of Venezuelan territory continue to be made by rebels across the Colombian border, and a few hundred bands of them are operating near Coro. News of the victory of the Government troops in the State of Falcon served to re-establish business confidence at the capital.

"And Morris Heaved a Sigh."

Editor Evening Telegram. Sir—Since the very important political announcements were made in The Telegram recently a rumour has been current around town that P. F. Collins is getting into the Morris party will be defeated and that, therefore, he is bothering Morris for more pickings whilst there is yet time. In fact the rumour says that McGrath contemplates "hanging" her down until he is satisfied. Of course it is not likely that McGrath will take the people into his overicious confidence, for when he went to Sydney about the Bell Island tax the people were left to infer for themselves that he was gone on a $2,500 picnic.

Rumour further says that McGrath's watchful for conducting rubrics has played out since Mr. W. F. Coaker told us in Mack and what sort of a crowd McGrath is and still another rumour is to the effect that even Morris will want to despise him after the election.

The mystery now is how Morris and McGrath tolerate each other after all those "scraps" that McGrath served up to Morris, and all the contemptuous remarks that Morris curled in Patsy's face.

It is rumoured, however, that Morris does not go to see Patsy until after the dark, and that he likes to be seen in the day-time with C. H. Emerson in the East End and J. Alex Robinson in the West End, and the Reverend This and the Reverend That anywhere. He does not always talk politics with these gentlemen, perhaps, but he does like to be seen with them—in the day-time, so rumour says.

At the Broad Cove races, nevertheless, Morris was seen heaving a sigh. Yours truly, HARBOUR BUOY.

E.S.—Rumour says that Patsy McGrath says cowardly tactics and that "rumour" says patented or copyrighted for his own protection.

The Philosopher

When dire misfortune comes and knocks the other, and says all wrong, I'm always in good form; I tell him that his face should shine, that it is wicked, to yield before the stern. But when the ball comes down, alas! and ruins all my garden, I am too sore to talk; and when my neighbour comes to say that I should dance and sing all day, I chase him round a block. Old Bulger came to spring some dope, through his frame the pink pains whizzed, and so he sits and groans: "brace up, brace up, be a man, and be as joyful as you can," I say, in cordial tones. But last week, when I broke my shin, I did not parolade and grin to any great extent, and when old Bulger came to spring some dope, advising me to sing, I cursed him till he went. It's easy for the gaffer wise to sit up and philosophize over other people's woes; but can he keep his smile on straight when an unkind, remorseless fate shall bash him in the nose? It isn't hard to calmly view the grief that makes our neighbour blue, and of his duty talk; but it requires of an grit to stand when on an orange peel we step and fall a block.

SIR ROBT. BOND

'Man of the Hour.'

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—We see from time to time in the Government organs articles asking the people to compare the work of the two leaders, Sirs R. Bond and E. P. Morris. This is not a hard task. Take for instance Sir R. Bond, whom the editor of the Herald now tries to make us believe is inferior to Sir E. P. Morris as a leader, but who in his famous Chicago letter stated as follows:—
"The Hon. Robert Bond, an able and honest colonial statesman, sufficiently independent in point of wealth to be able to resist the inducements of rich capitalists like Reid, has undertaken to do battle against this northern Goliath, and the young and patriotic elements in public life are rallying to his standard for the battle of the ballots in November next, which will decide the destinies of the Island. Reid is a fighter, the more so as his methods are those of the manipulator rather than of the leader, and he accomplishes his object best from behind the scenes, moving his agents like pawns upon a chessboard. The outcome of the contest is therefore uncertain, though everything indicates a victory for Bond."
The above was written by P. T. McGrath the present editor of the Herald. To-day he is eulogizing the very men who are band and glove with the Reids and tells us that the Government should be on friendly terms with them. Why this change of front? If Reid moved his agents like pawns at that time how is it that he has become so important now to the welfare of the country that the Government should be friendly towards him?
Poor Morris! If the people do not soon take pity on him and turn him out he will be worn thread-bare, worrying over the people's interest and Reid's also. It must be very trying for him to have to discuss the best methods to be adopted for the welfare of the people of the country, with never a thought of their own. Such disinterested patriotism should not go unrewarded.
Just to show you, Mr. Editor, how Sir E. P. thinks of us first, himself last. Over four years ago we elected his nominees. They promised lots of good things. Amongst the rest was telegraph communication all over the bay. The latter is being done now in many places, but I fear it is too late. Had this been done two or three years ago we would be inclined to believe that Morris was in earnest by trying to better our condition. But now on the eve of a general election we know it is not ours but his own welfare he is thinking about, consequently we will pay him off in his own coin by forgetting to vote for his nominees as he has forgotten us for the past four years. We consider this trying to cod us, a deliberate insult, one which we will resent when our turn comes in November next. Does the present lot of Incapables imagine that the outthorow (Bay people as they call us) are fools, or that we cannot see through their hypocrisy? Ever since Morris took the reins of Government we have been asking for public improvements, but asking in vain. The excuse was no money, although millions could be found for the Reids, but now at the eleventh hour when our votes are wanted money can be had for telegraph extension, consequently we do not thank him for it nor will we vote for his candidates, for we have decided to vote for Sir Robert Bond's nominees in the coming election. Morris must quit and make room for the man who is incapable of deceit. During over a quarter of a century of public life there is not a blot upon his escutcheon, therefore he is the man of the hour. Our country is in danger and her freedom threatened, so will one united voice we call upon Sir Hon. Sir Robert Bond to come to our assistance in this our hour of need? he is the only man who can save the colony from bankruptcy and ruin. The people cannot stand this strain much longer. Millions upon millions are being expended on branch railways to accommodate the Reids, whilst our roads and bridges are impassable and not a dollar to repair them although the public debt is piling up to an enormous extent on which the people will have to pay interest for all time. No wonder that our people are leaving the country to seek a living elsewhere for it is becoming almost impossible to live here now. Still P. T. tells us that Morris is making good. If Morris had to work with the pick and shovel all day up to his waist in water, like some of the men who work on the branch railways are obliged to do, would Patsy say he was making good? Ah, Morris, your day is done; Reids cannot save you neither can ex-Governor Williams' love shield you from the wrath of an outraged people.

I remain, Mr. Editor,
Yours truly,
VOTER.

The Nickel Theatre was crowded again last evening although the pictures were a repetition of the previous evening. The films were splendid, each being very favorably received. The comedies were bright, causing the merriest laughter. Mr. John W. Myers, the great baritone, whose visit to St. John's all will regret to hear is drawing to a close, had prepared a programme which he felt certain would please his admirers, and he was not mistaken for his songs were very favorably received. His first number was the famous ballad "The Yeoman's Wedding" which has such high and pleasing qualities that it becomes more attractive the oftener it is heard, especially when sung by such a celebrated soloist as Mr. Myers. Its rendition last night was all that could be desired and the singer won new honors from his enthusiastic admirers. It is a song which every one should make an effort to hear. The second song was the beautifully illustrated song "The Curse of an Aching Heart," which is one of the most popular picture songs ever presented in the States or Canada. Mr. Myers certainly did it full justice. Many of the round trippers of the Stephano were in attendance last night, and they spoke in the most flattering terms of the Nickel. The songs will be repeated this evening and to-morrow night, but there will be a new programme of movies.

Last of the Clearance Season is Here

Whatever you want, whatever you are going to want in the future, you can certainly get cheap, right now.
Every good storekeeper is going over his stocks with a fine toothed comb.
He is looking over his fabric and saying to his Managers "How much have you got left of this? How many yards are there of that? Put a price on it. Clear it out. Get the money. Turn it into new goods. Better fifty cents in cash on an old piece of silk than a dollar in stock."
He is going over his lines of suits and dresses, of shoes and hosiery, of muslin underwear and he only has one sentence for every buyer. "Put a price on these things. Get them out."
Of course there are some merchants who think that if they just keep on keeping certain stock, it will probably hatch out a lot of little stocks. But most merchants know that the oldest thing is, the less saleable it is. And that is why they do not hesitate to cut their prices and to keep on cutting them until all the old goods are gone and the store is ready for its new Fall lines.
You have no idea what remarkable bargains you can get right now unless you follow this advertising day by day. Every issue of this paper brings new surprises. And every ad brings new crowds to the merchants who are really eager to lower their stocks.
Why, you can buy things right now for so much less than at any other time of the year that it seems a shame not to get your share. There is no other way in the world that so much money can be saved.
Try it. Look over the advertising in this paper now. Check off the things you want. Get down early to the stores that are offering these things.
Remember there is no such thing as a complete stock now. You will have to be early to get what you are looking for. For other women are just as eager as you.
Advertising news is certainly most interesting news at a time like this.

One to Mary.

Mrs. Smart and Mary Jane had arrived at the parting of the ways, and the mistress thought that she could with safety indulge in a few caustic remarks.
"Now that you are going, Mary Jane," she said, "I hope you will leave in a respectable manner. You remember when you came your box was brought in a wheelbarrow. I would not have mentioned it, but I am afraid some of our friends might see you."
"That's all right, mum," answered Mary Jane serenely, "my new master and missus are waiting for me in their motor car down the street."
"Why don't they drive up to the front door?" asked Mrs. Smart.
"Well, mum," said Mary Jane, "I expect they don't want people to think they are visiting here!"

Prospero Back.

The s.s. Prospero, Capt. A. Keen, returned from northern ports last night, after a quick round trip. The run to Battle Harbor, via intermediate ports, and return was made in eight and one-half days. Beautiful weather prevailed throughout and the round-trippers enjoyed the trip immensely. She brought the following passengers: Messrs. S. Strangmore, A. Rowell, S. Moskovitch, Rev. Parsons, Foots, G. Foots, Rev. Curtis, S. Goodyear, W. Powell, W. Elliott, J. J. St. George, B. Horwood, N. Morris, R. White, S. Morris, G. R. Lilly, A. Mewa, T. Cornick, A. Smelgrove, A. Cummings, T. Lockyer, Master Sinnott, W. Martin, M. Martin, Rev. Babbitt, W. Kelly, R. Maher, J. Hopkins, C. R. Rowe, J. Baggs, L. Griffin, Master Griffin (2), J. Valentine; Mesdames Boone, Herbert, Fidler, Furze, Long, Randall, House, Proud, Bursey, Sparkes, Gillingham, Lewis, House, Humphries, Milligan, Prowse (2), Chisholm, Pearcey; Misses Woodward, Barnes, Parsons, Dyke, Bartlett (2), Randall, Alderdice, Meadus, Penney, Wiseman, House, Cummings, Cornick, Prowse, Marshall, Bartlett, White, Hoper (2), Worsley, Wilkinson, Stott, Elbert, Lipsius, Nurse and 45 steerage.

Fashions and Fads.

Straw hats are small and close fitting.
Large hats have the monopoly at present.
All wraps are semilong, ending just below the knee.
The new hat must be either tilted up at the side or back.
Hat bows, large and small, are used to trim gowns and hats.
For the bouffant the semi negligee gowns are most in demand.
Fur hatters' plush velvet and ermine make the new fall hats.
The waist line may be anywhere most becoming to the individual.
Trims will be fashionable and much braided trimming will be used.
The most artistic gowns are a combination of contrasting colors or materials.
Black is seldom worn at night, but it is extremely smart for the afternoon.
Evening girdles will be wide and draped and worn above and below the waist line.
Plain dresses of serge, with a suggestion of color at the girdle, are very smart.
New blouses are made of fine net, lace and alpaca, blended in the most charming manner.
Transparent fabrics are used for bodices, and the low-cut neckline continues in evidence.
The one-time popular stitch trimming makes its appearance on some of the new outing coats.
The newest sporting coats do not indulge in button trimming, and they allow just two pockets.
The French variation of the lingerie dress—lace tunic and black sailor skirt—is seen daily.
A currant red serge, trimmed with dark blue satin at the cuffs and revers, is chic and becoming.
A delightful and dainty labor fit of sheerserest white linen, the edges embroidered in square scallops.
Most hats have a soft, vague look and some decided outstanding finish, which makes them chic.
The youthful high waist line, women are loath to forego, and it has been retained by many designers.

Wild Miners Making Good Abroad.

Mr. Michael Dunn, who left here eighteen months ago with a contingent of men to work in the mines at Trinidad, returned by the Stephano, yesterday, having completed his contract with the company he was engaged. He reports a our Newfoundland miners doing exceptionally well. All have particularly good jobs, notably Messrs. E. Dohoney, Arthur Lush an old C.L.B. boy and "Phil" Freeman, formerly of the Reid Co's electrical department. These three men are now engaged by a Corporation known as the Canadian Venezuela Ore Company, and are working in the Imataco mines at Castro, Venezuela. Messrs. Dohoney, Lush and Freeman are foremen over a batch of sixty men. Their weekly wage is from $45 to $50. Mr. Dunn says that at present because of the prevalence and by reason of a revolution being expected to take place shortly at Castro, most of the white people are leaving the place.

Kyle's Report.

Capt. Parsons, of the S. S. Kyle, wired the accompanying message from Holton via Fogo, to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries yesterday afternoon:—
"There is no improvement in the fishery from Battle Harbour to Hopedale. The floaters north of Hopedale are doing fairly well in some places. The voyage on the whole is very poor."

A Big Picnic.

Two hundred thousand school children were entertained by the Glasgow Corporation, Scotland. The guests included all pupils within the recently extended city. Fifty-five thousand infants were treated at the schools, while the seniors were conveyed to thirty-three parks, and later amused by Punch and Judy and other shows and sports.

To the People of Nfld.

(Concluded.)

The patient instanced by the deputation was a young girl of twenty-two, she came from LaScie. She had been seized with a serious illness of which she did not know the nature, and the nearest doctor to the south was at Twillingate. (Dr. Smith of that place was at that time at St. Anthony hospital.) She could get to St. Anthony to the nearest doctor by half the time she could get to Twillingate. Life was just as dear to her as to any rich person. She came to St. Anthony to know if her life might be saved. With some fifty other sufferers she was landed on our wharf at St. Anthony and the mail steamer went on her rough trip to Labrador. The staff at St. Anthony hospital was a surgeon in charge (myself), my colleague (Dr. Little), the resident house surgeon (Dr. Hargrick), a specialist on ears and eyes (Dr. Andrews), a specialist on teeth and anaesthetics (Dr. Mallett), a dispenser and electrical expert with an X-ray outfit, which cost considerable over $1,000, and two pathological experts with an up-to-date laboratory, five trained nurses and a staff of outside men to carry stretchers or do other work required. But even with such a staff we are not prepared to diagnose and treat so many patients under twenty-four hours, if we are to render them the efficient kind of modern service which we would consider essential, if we were the sick people, or if we were those we loved from personal relationship. We consider it natural that all those who are going to pay should expect the very best of service to save their limbs, lives and capacities, and alleviate their physical suffering, we further unquestionably think it right for those who cannot pay must be afforded just as much attention.

It is claimed that once our hospital have accepted these patients we have no right whatever to return them on the public mail steamers. As I have said this girl was landed on our wharf. Ought she therefore be kept at St. Anthony to suffer and perhaps die, because she was incurable?

We have done our best to provide modern treatment for the fishermen. We have not been able to send doctors aboard the vessels to see that returning patients were isolated, nor do our doctors accompany patients home. We have after many years experience discontinued sputum cups for travellers.

To meet urgent demands we have spent $2,000 in building a "temporary" wharf long enough and large enough for both Government steamers to come alongside even at low tide, in order that we might save the unfortunate sick from the untold cruelty, which many had previously to endure, of being landed in small boats often in the middle of night. The wharf calls immediately for an expenditure of $5,000, to make it permanently safe and properly efficient. The captain himself states that no wharf which he calls at in all his long cruise between St. John's and Battle Harbor renders nearly so important a public service as this one, yet is it, I believe, the only one that has never received a single cent of Government help in building. This permanent wharf is absolutely essential for the travelling sick people; we do not need it ourselves to land at, and in view of this protest, we are making a demand on the Gov-

Your Duty.

Nothing to do with the Custom House, good friend. Its only reference just now is to yourself. Let us suppose that you are a man of family with sufficient of the world's goods to keep them in comfort. Very well. You did not reach this satisfactory state of affairs without care and labour—few men do. Suppose you are awakened some night with shouts of alarm ringing in your ears. Too late then to talk of prudence; too late then to say: "If I had only, etc., etc." That "If" means too much to many forgetful people. Is it not always the duty of a self-respecting citizen to protect his home and thus provide for those within it. Is it any more than his duty to those depending on him to protect them as far as possible? Can you call your property your own when it is not insured? The answer to this argument is to carry insurance with Percie Johnson's agency, the most popular office in Newfoundland and the least expensive.

Arrangement for $2,500, provided we spend a similar sum, the work to be carried out to the satisfaction of the Government engineer.

To return to the case in question this girl was carried to the hospital, she was taught to sleep on the piazza in the open air, and learned all that routine ritual, which if it cannot save the life of a person too far advanced in tuberculosis, can at least enable them to avoid the distressing phenomena attending pulmonary consumption, and afford the sufferer an easier death. It was explained to her that she could not recover. The hospital is not a prison. She had a right to demand to go home and give her last messages and die amongst her loved ones. The "Strathcona" is unfortunately out of condition this year after thirteen years of service. She needs $5,000 for a new boiler, which broke down and was condemned on the very day she was to sail for this season's work. The power yawl "Florida" has been visiting all round White Bay and was dispatched direct to LaScie at the earnest request of the people living there with Dr. Seymour Armstrong on board. There over sixty patients were treated, whose appreciation was best practically expressed in the money paid for the services. Unfortunately the "Florida" has no capacity for carrying sick female patients.

Thirty. Another question of large importance has been raised, viz: what social service ought the hospitals here to render to keep pace with that which is being rendered by those in other countries? The daily papers show large published lists. Every day sick people are arriving here for the Government General Hospital at St. John's. Is the hospital bound to find free shelter and food for every patient and their friends accompanying them, as we are obliged to do for those who are unable to provide it for themselves in the village, until at least there is some chance for them to return home? We have at present no fund to meet the expense of a special social work to see to their comfort until they depart on the steamers, or to welcome them when they come, such as the Government usually pay for St. John's, is it the duty of the General Hospital to provide for the passage home and help out with clothing and to look up the homes, also to find out the circumstances which produce the disease that brought the patient to the hospital? Each patient has cost a considerable amount of money, and it is important economically to see that the environments may be altered and a recurrence of the disease prevented. This is demanded in Boston by the Massachusetts General Hospital. We have learnt at the feet of Dr. Richard Cabot that this is an economic service from the point of view of the hospital itself, to say nothing of the community. This requires serious, strong efforts to try and accomplish. We have tried organizing labor, and where necessary expending charitable grants of food, clothing or money, in proportion to our ability; and such we consider an essential part of the services it is our privilege to render.

Some of our patients die, as some always must; but even for these we also make the final arrangements on our own premises, sending them home to their loved ones if they wish it, trusting to get back the out-of-pocket expenses. This may seem a sentimental rather than a Utilitarian Ministry, yet to many it is a very real message of love.

St. Anthony hospital alone costs over $20,000 a year in cash. If the large part of the professional work rendered was not really given for the love of serving humanity, it would cost probably twice as much. We could possibly purchase the extensive skill which men will freely give. Every portion of the very extensive equipment has been paid for by voluntary givers and has cost the colony nothing. It has a plant to lay which compares favorably with that of any hospital its size. The annual grant given by the Colony towards this large cash expenditure is $1,500, and even this grant is twice that made by any previous Government. It is only right to say that Sir Edward Morris, from the very inception of this work, has been in full sympathy with, and has contributed to its welfare, but the people have not yet demanded an efficient public medical service for the island, have not outlined any definite plan, and he has not felt authorized to do as much as he has plainly told us all through the years he would personally wish to do. This great problem cannot be met by a selfish design. An indefinite number of small and inefficient buildings and staffs of workers all round the island, is no solution. A good medical service at strategic points, such as Bay Islands, Fortune Bay, St. Anthony, and Twillingate, with modern facilities for the means of conveyance, will render far more really valuable service than too great a division of the efforts that can be arranged for, at least in any brief time.

Many realize the purpose we have in view for remaining here, viz: to help those who, exactly like our deep sea fishermen in England, were from their circumstances inarticulate and unable to make their wants known themselves. The calls of humanity are large and invitations are continual. We are perfectly prepared to accept any more efficient service than we are able to offer, if the people desire the Government to take over the whole of this service. We consider the question a far greater immediate pressing necessity than many others in which public money is being spent.

This protest has at least forced into the public eye the need for a better hospital service, and hospitals in other parts of the country besides St. John's, and a decent wharf at St. Anthony to make the melancholy journey of suffering humanity less miserable from the dreaded possibility of being dumped into an open boat crowded and unsafe from the side of a large steamer.

To our friends the critics who started this ball rolling, we have nothing but gratitude to express. We are spending every penny that we can afford to improve our services, but we are absolutely convinced that a much larger proportion must be promptly granted for medical work, if the requirements and demands of the Newfoundland people are to be met and satisfied.

Gas Explosion In Dental Parlors.

An explosion of gas occurred yesterday afternoon in the dental parlors of Dr. Smith on Water Street. As a result several windows in the building were blown out, some of the glass from them being blown to the opposite side of the street. The loud report attracted the attention of citizens, who heard that some grave accident had occurred. The vulcanizer had been lit, not by Mr. Steele, as the Daily News states, but by an operator of another dentist, who had permission to use it. The regulator was defective and the gas turned too high and an explosion followed. Fortunately the operator was in another part of the building or he might have been badly injured by the explosion.

Mr. H. Steele Makes a Correction.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir:—I wish to contradict the statement in this morning's News re my connection with that explosion in one of Dr. Smith's workrooms. The vulcanizer mentioned was not lighted or touched by me in any way, it being operated by a party on behalf of another dentist, who has Dr. Smith's permission to make use of same. I may state that I was not on that flat at any time during yesterday afternoon prior to the accident, being otherwise occupied in the operating room.
Yours truly,
HERBERT H. STEELE.

FOURTH INSTALMENT.

Next morning, August 9th, left early for King's Cove, about 16 miles away. We arrived there in two and a half hours, a good run as we did the distance entirely by motor power. Mr. Dawson, the incumbent, came on board and plans and preparations were arranged and made for the day's work. Mr. Samuel Brown and also Mr. Dan Ryan picked their horses and carriages as well as their drivers at the service of the Bishop, and we drove straight to Tickle Cove where a graveyard was consecrated; on the way we stopped for a short time at Open Hall where Mr. and Mrs. Miles very kindly prepared a meal for us. Then we went on the two remaining miles, consecrated the cemetery, drove back to Redcliffe, held a Confirmation service, and began the journey back to King's Cove, halting for half an hour at Open Hall and drank tea at the house of Messrs. Shears. There returned to the Parsonage which is a new house, well built, nicely laid out and on a good site, but what is more gratifying to both clergymen and people it is practically out of debt. The day was fine and the drive most enjoyable, quite a change from life on board ship and being rowed ashore in boat. Every variety of tree peculiar to this country seemed to be represented along this road, and many wild flowers, especially the dog rose, gave a splash of color to the more sombre greens of the spruce and fir. We all enjoyed the drive thoroughly, and it was dark by the time the work was finished.

Next morning, Sunday, we drove to Keels, about four miles away, here—just before the service of Confirmation—the Bishop, Incumbent and Chaplain proceeded to a house some distance from the Church and a poor little pale faced boy too ill to attend the service was clinically Confirmed, then the Bishop and Clergy proceeded to the church where many of the young people of the settlement were present for Laying on of Hands; the congregation was large. C. P. EAGAN, shortly after we arrived at Trinity, the Amazon came in the harbour, but it was found that she was leaking rather seriously and it would be quite impossible to continue the voyage, unless the leak could be located and stopped. This was impossible as it was somewhere near the stern post well under water, so it was decided to wire St. John's for a tug to take her to St. John's. Accordingly, on Wednesday afternoon the tug D. P. Ingraham arrived and safely towed the Amazon to the Capital, while carriages were got ready to convey the Bishop and Chaplain, accompanied by the incumbent of Trinity, to New Bonaventure where it had been arranged to meet the Rev. Hugh Facey, Incumbent of Smith's Sound, and in his motor boat to do the work of that Mission. Mr. Lockyer, formerly of Herring Neck, very kindly drove the Bishop, while Mr. Morris, Church Warden, sent his horse and man with the Chaplain, the Incumbent of Trinity, and the baggage; although the road is somewhat hilly and very rough, the day was glorious and the arms, hills and points of view the beautiful place were grand and beautiful in the morning sun, a drive of two hours and a half brought to New Bonaventure where we found Mr. James Clifford, of Trouty, ready to take us to Burgoyne's Cove, but as Mr. Facey had made preparations and had a small cabin in his boat, we gratefully thanked Mr. Clifford for his kindness, had dinner at Mrs. Miller's and then started for Burgoyne's Cove. Rev. H. V. Whitehouse remained behind to prepare for the Bishop's visit a few days later on. We had a very pleasant run up Smith's Sound, the boat doing excellent work. Upon our arrival we were entertained by Mr. William Tulk who has grown old in the service of the Colonial and Continental Church Society, and was in addition to his own long and faithful service two sons, Priests, working in the Diocese. The Confirmation service was held in the evening, the little church was filled, among the candidates was the youngest child of Mr. Tulk, a sturdy boy of 14.

After service the Rev. H. Facey and the Chaplain started in the motor boat for White Rock, the headquarters of this Mission. We arrived at a late hour and remained at the Parsonage for the night. Next morning rising at an early hour we returned to Burgoyne's Cove, took the Bishop on board and crossed the "Arm" to Lance Cove now called Peley. The little church was nicely decorated and a hearty welcome was extended to the Bishop. The Confirmation service was held soon after our arrival; the service ended we all went to the house of Mr. Edward Gardner, nearly all the members of his family being home, one daughter in New York; another from Burgo; and yet a third from Grand Falls. His son is shortly going to enter the Diocesan College at Montreal to study for the ministry. After saying good bye to Mr. and Mrs. Gardner and family we started for White Rock, a stiff breeze was blowing, but the little boat with the comfortable cabin needed it not and we arrived at our destination in sufficient time to enjoy a delicious cup of tea with ripe juicy strawberries and cream. After the evening meal and at an hour when the tolls of the day were over, in the little church among the trees the children were sung for their Confirmation while their parents and friends filled the church to see their Bishop and hear once more his words of comfort, advice and help. This service concludes the Episcopal work in Smith's Sound, and although there are two places still to be visited on the Mission both are on the railway and can be done from St. John's. The Bishop returned to the Parsonage, the Chaplain was "put up" at the house of Mr. John Frampton, who had given his services to Mr. Facey as a spare man during his journey to Bonaventure for the Bishop.

Rising betimes the following morning and having an early breakfast we said good bye to Mrs. Facey and her charming son, Edward Lincoln, taking Mr. Josiah Frampton, the Chaplain and last but not least the Bishop, the engineer turned the handle and away we start for Ireland's Eye. Three and a half hours brought us to our haven where we found Rev. H. V. Whitehouse. We said good bye to Mr. Facey and his friend, Mr. Frampton, who at once started for home, while we went to the house of Mrs. Cooper. The Confirmation service was held in the afternoon and immediately we walked across the narrow neck to Black Duck Cove and crossed in Mr. Frank's boat to British Harbour. Mr. Arthur Gardner met the Bishop and invited Bishop, Incumbent and Chaplain to his home, there we had tea, and soon after the new Church which is practically finished and well furnished was consecrated. Mr. Eli Gardner read the petition, the Bishop consecrated to the request of the people and by a short but solemn service the Church was set apart to the glory of God and in honour of St. Augustine. The Confirmation service immediately followed, and then we returned to Mr. Gardner's, feeling that a good day's work had been completed, and a rest for the tolls of the mornow needed so we slept.

The Bishop, Mr. Whitehouse and the Chaplain rose with the sun and got ready for an early start; we breakfasted at Mrs. Gardner's, said good bye and then in a large train boat towed by a motor boat belonging to Mr. Miller we started for New Bonaventure four miles away; the Confirmation was held middle day; Mrs. Miller was very kindly provided dinner and then we started for Old Bonaventure twenty minutes walk from the last settlement. The Bishop began his work by dedicating a very beautiful cross, pair of brass candlesticks and an organ, gifts of the Women's Association, then followed the Confirmation, then the address. The Bishop explained every article of the eight, gave a cross and candle sticks and explained their symbolical meaning, gave some sound practical advice regarding worship in the House of God, and followed it up by speaking to the newly confirmed upon the great blessing received in the Laying on of Hands. The service over we had tea at Mrs. Stone's, then started for Trinity. The carriages were provided by the good people of Trinity and we take this opportunity to thank them for their kindness. We arrived after a drive of two and a half hours, the whole party feeling none the worse from the pressure of work, and the Bishop looking exceedingly well.

Sunday, 17th August, began by raining very hard. The services began by Celebration at 8.30. The Bishop officiated assisted by the Rev. H. V. Whitehouse, Matins and Litany at 11. The Chaplain preached, Evensong at 6.30. The Bishop presided, the Chaplain read the Lessons and the Incumbent said the Office. In the afternoon the Bishop held a service at Cuckhold's Cove, now called "Dunfield," while Mr. Whitehouse held Evensong at Trouty.

We have heard that the Amazon has been docked, the leak located, and will be away again in a day or two. The work is drawing to a close and with the exception of the visit to the Episcopal work is finished. The Bishop joined the Ethie on Monday evening at Trinity for Carbonnet where he had the pleasure of seeing the Rev. H. Johnson for a brief half hour. The Bishop called at the Parsonage and enjoyed a cup of tea. Mr. and Mrs. Holland are quite well and pressed us to stay but we must go on to Harbour Grace, so that in the morning we can take the train to Broad Cove to begin work in the Mission of New Harbour. We accordingly started for Harbour Grace and arrived at the Rectory to find Canon Noel at Heart's Content, but a hearty welcome was extended to the Bishop and Chaplain by Mrs. Noel and her charming daughters, so here we are ready for another day's work and very thankful that the weather helped us so much, and the hospitality extended to the Bishop and Chaplain in every place has been generous to a degree.

While at Trinity Mrs. Anbery Crocker made the Bishop most comfortable and Mr. Crocker was always ready to further his plans. The Chaplain accepted the hospitality of Mrs. Crocker, her charming home called "The Haven," it is by the sea in a cosy little nook, and we are very thankful to have had such a pleasant stay in such a charming spot.

Trinity is truly one of the most beautiful places in a beautiful bay. People go abroad for a rest, talk about the scenery, etc. I wonder if they ever realize that almost at their very doors unrivaled in beauty, a combination of mountains, woodland, lake and stream with the ocean in the distance, there for the eye to behold and the heart to feast upon is the desire of one's soul. Have you seen Trinity? Have you driven round the "Arm"? If not, then when you have your next holiday go there and behold for yourself.
