CHAPTER XV.

She ran up to her room. Her cheeks were burning, her heart was beating tumultuously; she felt as if she were still in the embrace of Jack's strong arms as he had lifted her down from the saddle. As she went to the glass to do up her hair, she shrank from the reflection of her own eyes; for they seemed heavy with her heart's secret, half confessed. In the glass she saw Jack's face almost as plainly as her own. For the first time since she had known him, it had been stern and angry, the tones of his voice rang in her ears; there had been something startling in their anger and rebuke. But now there was something precious to her in this exhibition of his masculine command of her.

How anxious he must have been, how much he must have cared for her safety, that he should have lost that easy, pleasant temper of his and been forced to speak to her so harshly! Yes, his anxiety on her account was very precious to her, and she dwelt upon it with a commingling of emotions, for it revealed to her something of her inner self.

And suddenly she knew how much he meant to her. That she should be grateful to him for all he had done for her was inevitable, but now she knew that there was something warmer in her heart than mere gratitude. She knew why she felt so contented, so happy when she was near him, why there seemed to be always something wanting when he was absent, and why this lacking in her life was fully supplied when she heard his step and his voice in the hall. Her heart sang its psalm of praise of him. He was just her idea of what a man should be—so strong, so full of that strength of body and mind which a woman admires.

On his good looks she bestowed scarcely a thought, for with Nora, like most women, man's beauty did not count for much; but, all the same, she was proud of his handsome face, of the powerful, lithe figure, with its perfect ease of movement, its unconscious youthful grace. Then suddenly, as she allowed her mind to dwell

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

CHAPTER XVI.

A WEEK later, as Jack was walking from the station to the Hall, he saw Maud Delman at the corner of the lane; and it was evident to Jack that she knew the train by which he usually travelled and that she had been waiting for him. There was a blush on her pretty face, and an eager light in her expressive eyes, as she greeted him.

"I thought you would come by this," she said, in her low and vibrant voice; "and I wanted particularly to see you. I've been to London and had an interview with Mr. Telby." Jack had given Telby her address. "It's all right. I want to tell you all about it. Will you come up the lane, out of the way of the houses? Oh, I'm so happy, Mr. Chalfonte!"

"So it's all right?" said Jack, walking beside her.

"Yes, I think so," she responded, her colour coming and going, her eyes glancing up at him gratefully, her voice thrilling with suppressed excitement. "Of course, I was terribly nervous, and Mr. Telby didn't help me much; he would insist upon telling me of the shoals of girls who fancied they had a gift for the stage, and who, most of them, turned out failures—utter rotters!—were his words. He almost took away what little courage I had; but when I'd started, when I'd got through my first lines, I forgot everything, just as I did the other day with you; and I suppose I must have done fairly well; for, when I'd finished, he said, 'Not so bad for a novice, young lady; I fancy there's something in you.' And, oh, Mr. Chalfonte, what do you think he has offered me?"

"The part of Juliet and fifty pounds a week!" ventured Jack, with smiling irony.

She laughed up at him brightly. "Oh, no, no. That only happens in novels. No, he hasn't offered me Juliet, but he has promised to give me a small part—a very wee, tiny part—in his new play, By the Wayside. I've only got about twenty lines or so; but it is a speaking part, and at the Theatre. And now here's the most wonderful thing: Mr. Telby's going to give me three pounds a week."

"Enormous sum!" was Jack's comment.

"Not to you, Mr. Chalfonte. I dare say; but it is to me," said Maud, smoothly. "How many gloves do you think I should have to sew before I could make three pounds?"

"I dunno," replied Jack; "but it seems to me that glove-making is pretty regular, while this stage business—or, well, there's a good deal of 'resting' about it, you know."

"I know; but I don't think I shall have to 'rest' long," she said, with a confidence that staggered Jack. "If I can convince such a hard man as Mr. Telby, and repeat my lines with him staring at me with bulging eyes and half-smiling, half-jeering lips, I'm sure I can acquit myself on the stage, with the help of the excitement and the hope of applause. And now, Mr. Chalfonte—oh, I seem to be always asking favours of you—I want you to see my mother and tell her, and persuade her that I'm 'doing' the right thing in going on the stage."

It was what Jack would have called a "pretty tall order"; but "in for a penny, in for a pound." He laughed and shrugged his shoulders, complying with the words:

"Oh, very well; but I imagine I'm going to have a bad quarter of an hour. Where and how are you going to live in London? Mrs. Delman will want to know that."

"I've taken a room in Chelsea—No. 106, Garden Street. I did it directly after I left Mr. Telby's office," replied Maud, rather shamefacedly.

"You're a pretty prompt young lady," remarked Jack, not a little astonished by the girl's readiness. "You've burned your boats with a vengeance."

"What's the use of hesitating?" she said, with a toss of her head. "Mr. Chalfonte, I don't believe that you quite realise how serious I am about this business. I mean to go on with it, and I mean to succeed."

"Pon my word, you certainly do, and 'pon my word, I think you will," said Jack; then, with a sigh, "Well, let's go and see your mother; the sooner it's over the better."

They turned and walked towards the village, Maud talking all the while, eagerly, with the same suppressed excitement, her pretty face now and again turned towards him, her expressive eyes bright and eager, uplifted to his; and Jack listened,

GIRLS' PAINS AND WEAKNESS

Yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of Girls Benefited

St. Louis, Mo.—"When I was only fifteen years old mother had to put me to bed every month for two days because I suffered such pain. I also suffered from a weakness and mother took me to a doctor but he did not help me. Finally mother made me take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has made me strong and healthy. So when mother or hear any woman complaining we tell them about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it did for me."—Mrs. JOHN FRAMES, 1121 N. 18th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Girls who suffer as Mrs. Frame did should not hesitate to give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial, as the evidence that is constantly being published proves beyond question that this grand old remedy has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine.

with a full appreciation of her capacity, and nodding now and again. At the bend of the road he saw a little cavalcade approaching them. It consisted of Lady Blanche, lying back in her pony-phæton, and Lord Ferndale and Nora on horseback on either side of her. It seemed to Jack as if he could never be in Maud's company without Nora happening on them. He told himself that there was no earthly reason why he should not be seen walking with Maud Delman, but, notwithstanding this assurance, he felt uncomfortable and there was a certain expression of embarrassment on his face as he raised his hat. He did not pause; but the cavalcade stopped, and there was nothing for Jack to do but to approach it.

"Excuse me a moment," he said to Maud, hurriedly.

She walked on slowly, and Jack strode up to the waiting group. Ferndale regarded him as impassively as usual, and Nora's face was almost as expressionless as Ferndale's, but Lady Blanche smiled and held out her hand with evident pleasure at meeting him.

"Isn't it a beautiful morning, Mr. Chalfonte?" she said, in her soft, subdued voice. "We have had such a delightful ride, and we are going home with Nora for lunch. What a very, very pretty girl you are walking with! I've seen her once or twice before, but I don't know her name. Who is she?"

"A Miss Delman," said Jack, as casually as he could; but he was conscious that Nora's eyes were regarding him with a strange coldness. "She is one of Miss Norton's tenants."

He wanted to add, "I am helping her to get on the stage, and am going to break it to her mother"; but he remembered his promise, and withheld the information.

"Oh, well, we shall see you at lunch, I suppose?" said Blanche, innocently; but Jack shook his head. He did not fancy a luncheon with the present party.

"I'm afraid not," he said. "Got business at the other end of the estate."

He stood for a moment; not awkwardly, but finding a difficulty in getting away. Nora came to his assistance with a murmur of "We shall be late," touched her horse with her heel, and the cavalcade went on towards the Hall.

Shattered nerves are the source of greatest suffering to many a returned soldier.

The doctor can give something to relieve physical pain, but when the nervous system breaks down and you are sleepless, nervous and mentally worried, real cure only comes when the exhausted nerve cells are nourished back to health and vigor by such restorative, upbuilding treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

LaFere Reports Germany's Wilson's Up

Unconditional Surrender Line

WAR REVIEW.

The German battle line in France continues to bend under the attacks of the Entente Allies, but nowhere has it been broken. The enemy almost everywhere is in retreat towards new positions, but his retreat is orderly and the British, French and Americans are being compelled to fight their way forward slowly in the face of enemy machine gun detachments acting as rearguards. Highly important strategic positions have been wrested from the enemy by the British and French, while on their sector of the front the Americans have further advanced their lines on both sides of the Meuse, obtaining the objectives they sought. The British advance after days of hard fighting has brought them at last to the gates of Douai which long has held back the British forces from closing in upon its great bend in the line which has little as its centre and which has been considered by the military experts as the keystone to the German defense system through Northern Belgium to the sea. To the south the French have blotted out both LaFere and Laon and the greater portion of the St. Gobain massif standing in the elbow where the line runs eastward toward the Swiss frontier. Here also the Germans for weeks had stood fighting desperately, realizing that a successful advance by their foes would shatter all their military plans in the south and probably compel a swifter retirement than now is being carried out and possibly make untenable the entire Meuse line to which it is believed they are gradually making their way along the Aisne. In Champagne the French have forced their way across the Aisne at various points and are almost upon the important railway town of Rehel, whence it is only a step to Mezieres, while north of Vouziers they are continuing to battle their way forward toward Sedan. In the bend of the Aisne more than thirty-six localities have been liberated by the French and several thousand civilians freed from bondage. Since the offensive began 21,567 Germans have been made prisoners and 600 of their guns captured. With the situation in France and Belgium highly satisfactory to the Allies, the operations in Serbia and Albania likewise daily are being carried forward successfully. Nish, the capital of the little kingdom, after the invasion by the Austro-Hungarians, has been recaptured and the enemy driven to the hills.

READY TO ACCEPT WILSON'S TERMS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12. Germany's reply to President Wilson, inquiry intercepted as it was being sent by the great wireless towers at Neuen, and forwarded here tonight in an official despatch from France, declares Germany is ready to accept President Wilson's peace terms, evacuating the invaded territory as a prerequisite to an armistice, and that the bid for peace represents the German people as well as the government. Although on its face the text of the German note seems to be a complete acceptance of President Wilson's terms, the people of the United States and the Allied countries should be cautioned against ac-

Highly important strategic positions have been wrested from the enemy by the British and French, while on their sector of the front the Americans have further advanced their lines on both sides of the Meuse, obtaining the objectives they sought. The British advance after days of hard fighting has brought them at last to the gates of Douai which long has held back the British forces from closing in upon the great bend in the line which has little as its centre and which has been considered by the military experts as the keystone to the German defense system through Northern Belgium to the sea. To the south the French have blotted out both LaFere and Laon and the greater portion of the St. Gobain massif standing in the elbow where the line runs eastward toward the Swiss frontier. Here also the Germans for weeks had stood fighting desperately, realizing that a successful advance by their foes would shatter all their military plans in the south and probably compel a swifter retreat than now is being carried out and possibly make untenable the entire Meuse line to which it is believed they are gradually making their way along the Aisne. In Champagne the French have forced their way across the Aisne at various points and are almost upon the important railway town of Reims, whence it is only a step to Metziers, while north of Vouziers they are continuing to battle their way forward toward Sedan. In the bend of the Aisne more than thirty-six localities have been liberated by the French and several thousand civilians freed from bondage. Since the offensive began 21,567 Germans have been made prisoners and 600 of their guns captured. With the situation in France and Belgium highly satisfactory to the Allies, the operations in Serbia and Albania likewise daily are being carried forward successfully. Nish, the capital of the little kingdom, after the invasion by the Austro-Hungarians, has been recaptured and the enemy driven to the hills.

READY TO ACCEPT WILSON'S TERMS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12. Germany's reply to President Wilson, inquiry intercepted as it was being sent by the great wireless towers at Nauen, and forwarded here tonight in an official despatch from France, declares Germany is ready to accept President Wilson's peace terms, evacuating the invaded territory as a prerequisite to an armistice, and that the bid for peace represents the German people as well as the government. Although on its face the text of the German note seems to be a complete acceptance of President Wilson's terms, the people of the United States and the Allied countries should be cautioned against socepting it as a compliance of the President's demand as will mean immediate cessation of hostilities. As President Wilson was in New York to-night and reserved comment on the note, his views cannot be stated now, and none of his official family here in Washington cared to speak for him. Without any attempt to discount what appeared to be at a casual reading an acceptance of the terms the President has laid down, officials here were very positive as not accepting the German note as a document, which means the end of the war. It needs to be examined and fully considered before the views of the American government can be stated. Schmidt, President Wilson's final secretary, said there is enough sincerity in Germany's proposal to transmit to the Allies as the German Chancellor requested, it should be borne in mind that Great Britain, France and the other Entente nations must be taken into consideration for decision as to whether an armistice should be granted or whether discussion should be undertaken to carry out the details of the application of President Wilson's peace terms. The text of the note follows: In reply to the questions of the President of the United States the German Government hereby declares the German government has accepted the terms laid down by Pres. Wilson in his address of January the eighth and his subsequent addresses on the foundation of a permanent peace of justice. Consequently its object in entering into discussions would be only to agree upon practical details of the application of these terms. The German government believes that the governments of the Powers associated with the government of the United States also take the position taken by the German government in accordance with the Austro-Hungarian government for the purpose of bringing about an armistice declares itself ready to comply with the propositions of the President in regard to evacuation. The German government suggests that the President may occasion the meeting of a mixed commission for making the necessary arrangements concerning the evacuation. The present German government which has undertaken the responsibility for this step towards peace has been formed by conferences and agreement with the great majority of the Reichstag. The Chancellor supported in all of his actions by the will of the majority government and of the German people.—Berlin, Oct. 12, 1918. Signed Bolf, State Secretary of Foreign Office.

REACHED LONDON.

LONDON, Oct. 13. The text of the German reply to President Wilson's note reached the British Foreign Office this morning from the British Minister at the Hague, Foreign Secretary Balfour and Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, immediately left with it to confer with Premier Lloyd George who is spending the week-end in the country.

UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER.

LONDON, Oct. 13. While the London public to-day seemed generally disposed to await an-authoritative lead before forming a definite opinion on the German reply to President Wilson, expressions of suspicion of Germany's purpose were heard on all sides. "Unconditional Surrender" as the Allied response seemed to be rapidly gaining in popularity with the average citizen as the note was discussed.

ENEMY RESISTANCE STIFFENED.

WITH THE ANGLo-AMERICAN FORCES ON THE VALENCIENNES FRONT, Oct. 12.—The British again attacked southwest of Douai this morning, stormed and took Brebieres and passed through to the eastward. They are now within slightly more than a mile of Douai itself. A stiff rearguard resistance of enemy machine gunners is being overcome. The resistance of the enemy throughout the whole area north and south of Le Cateau has stiffened appreciably and this morning he put down a thin but determined barrage over the entire region. It is evident the Germans intend making a stand on the line from Valenciennes to Le Cateau and southward. It is not believed, however, that the resistance will last longer than is necessary to cover the retreat which apparently has begun west of Douai.

LA FERRE CAPTURED.

PARIS, Oct. 13. The German stronghold of La Fere, together with a great part of St. Gobain Massif of which La Fere was a northerly outpost at the Oise, has been captured by the French, to-day's official war office statement announces. The La Fere-Laon railway lines has been crossed on the high ground between Dainzy and Versigny, about two and a half miles east of La Fere. The northern and eastern sections of La Fere are burning. Notable progress has been made by the Italians and French along the line to the east where the French have reached Amfontaine, which is fifteen miles north of Rheims. The French have cleared the last nests of the German resistance in the bend of the Aisne.

WITHIN SEVEN MILES OF VALENCIENNES.

LONDON, Oct. 13. The Ridge Lieu St. Amand, three miles south of Denain, has been reached by the British in their push up the easterly bank of the Scheldt Canal southeast of Douai. They have captured in this sector the town of Montrecourt, a scant seven miles from the outskirts of Valenciennes and almost directly south of that city. The text of the statement reads: East of the Scheldt Canal we gained possession of Montrecourt village and reached the outskirts of Lieu St. Amand. In the Douai sector our troops are now within a few hundred yards of the town and have captured the Poubourg Des Querchins, the Douai prison and the greater part of Fiers. East of Amay we have progressed along the south bank of the Haute Deule Canal towards Courrieres.

NUMEROUS VILLAGES CAPTURED.

LONDON, Oct. 13. British forces east of Lens captured the villages of Montigny, Harnes and Annay, Field Marshal Haig reported in his official statement tonight. The German rear-guards suffered severe casualties. Northwest of LeCateau the villages of St. Vaast, St. Aubert, Villers, Encauchies and Avesnes Aesce have been cleared of the German rearguard while on the west bank of the Sonsee canal, Arieux and Corbehem have fallen to the British.

ITALIANS BREAKING ENEMY TRENCHES.

ROME, Oct. 12. Italian infantry parties at the confluence of the river Assa with the Chulpec yesterday broken into the Austro-Hungarian trenches on Cima Tarpezz, says the official statement issued to-day by the War Office. The Italians inflicted heavy losses on the enemy and took several prisoners. The total number of prisoners taken by the Italians on the Asiago front yesterday was 491, including ten officers.

GERMAN ADMISSION.

BERLIN, via London, Oct. 12. German forces west of Douai yesterday retired from their positions to lines in the rear says the statement issued to-day by the German general staff. The enemy followed slowly and in the evening occupied the line of Vondin La Veil, Harnes, Honin, Letard and to the east of the Beaumont-Brolieron railway.

ENEMY DIGGING IN.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 11.—The enemy today began an attempt to slow up the Anglo-American advance on the main battle front. All the bridges across the river Selle from LeCateau southward were blown up and the Germans seem to have been digging in furiously along the line of the high ground some two thousand to four thousand yards east of the river.

NISH CAPTURED.

BERLIN, Oct. 13. Nish, the capital of Serbia, has been occupied by Entente forces, the war office announced to-day. The official statement follows. Southern theatre: There has been fighting in the region of Nish. In the face of strong attacks our troops retired in accordance with orders to the heights north of the town. Nish has been occupied by the enemy.

MUST WITHDRAW TROOPS.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 13. The Finnish Government has asked Germany to withdraw her troops from Finland. The request was recently delivered to General Von Der Goltz, the German high command on Finnish territory. The republican and socialist papers of Finland have begun an agitation in favor of an approach by Finland to the Entente Allies, alleging that the recent policy of the Government in connection with Germany has been unneutral.

SPAIN TAKES OVER GERMAN SHIPS.

MADRID, Oct. 13. The Spanish government has decided to put into immediate service 62 German ships lying in Spanish ports, as equivalent in tonnage of Spanish ships torpedoed.

FEARFUL FOREST FIRES.

DULUTE, Minn., Oct. 13. More than five hundred persons are dead or missing and at least twelve thousand have been made homeless by five fearful forest fires which have spread across Northern Wisconsin and Northern Minnesota during the past thirty-six hours. The towns of Cluquet, Brookston, Brevort, Corona, Adolph, Thompson, Arnold, Mopse Lake and Wright have been wiped out. According to refugees, scores of hamlets and hundreds of settlers' homes have been destroyed. The property and timber loss which will total many millions will surpass that claimed by any in the historic fires which have swept this section.

ADVANCE RESUMED.

PARIS, Oct. 13. General Mangin's army operating in the vicinity of Laon resumed its advance this morning. The French fifth army which yesterday drove in several miles on the Champagne front north of the Retourne is continuing its progress in the direction of the important railway junction of Reims. The German resistance to these advances is reported to be slackening.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT NOT YET DEFINED.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12. The official text of the German note had not been received here at a late hour to-night. It was announced there would be no official comment at least until it arrives. Conceding it possible the proposal for an armistice might be accepted and that the German acceptance of President Wilson's peace terms might be satisfactory, the question in the opinion of the officials and diplomats here would center in who is the present German Government. If the present German Government is the Government of Hohenzollern there seems no doubt here that the German reply will be unacceptable.

NEARING DOUAL.

LONDON, Oct. 13. The British are within a few hundred yards of Douai, Field Marshal Haig reports to-day in his official statement. They have captured the Faubourg Desquechrin, the Douai prison and the greater part of Fiers close to Douai on the northwest.

CONSERVATIVES NOT YET REPENTANT.

BASEL, Switzerland, Oct. 13. A despatch received here from Berlin says the Conservative Party in the German Reichstag have published the following declaration concerning the German reply to President Wilson's peace terms: Our armies are still far in enemy country. Before an honorable peace and integrity of the empire's territory is guaranteed, all abandonment of German soil may be fatal and is irreconcilable with German honor. Numerous patriotic societies await with us a declaration from the German Government, saying it will not yield upon these points. The German people are resolved to defend the sacred soil of their country to the last man.

Big Steamer Sunk in Collision.

A Canadian Atlantic Port, October 9.—Late last night a large steamer limped into this port with a huge hole in her bow above the water line, and reported a collision with another steamer, in which the latter had been sunk and six of her crew lost.

Few details were ascertainable, but it was gathered that the steamers had jammed each other in one of the dense fogs which hang over these coasts. The one which was sunk remained above the surface for only a short time. The other ship sent out boats and took the survivors on board. Neither the number nor the names of the lost can yet be obtained, but there were not more than six or seven. Several of the men were slightly injured in the crash. All lost their personal belongings and were obliged to borrow from the crew of the more fortunate ship. Coming from Southern waters, the frosty night air was far from welcome, and one sailor asked if the heavy Canadian winter had set in.

The ship which reached here last night was not disabled, but quite badly damaged, and she made the nearest port as rapidly as possible. An evidence of the fact that her course did not lie here was that one of her crew asked what the name of the city was, and said that he had never heard of it before.

The collision occurred about two o'clock on Monday morning during mist and a heavy rain. The steamer which went down had a cargo valued at three million dollars.

Three Deaths.

Pts. Chas. Burton, of Twillingate, died at the Military Hospital on Friday night, of bronchio-pneumonia. The remains were confined by Undertaker Oke, and forwarded to the late home of the deceased for interment by yesterday's express. No soldiers attended the funeral, as a result of the quarantine regulations now in force.

Pte. Ernest Brown, Tack's Beach, also passed away on Saturday morning at the General Hospital, of influenza. Deceased was a returned soldier, and had been in hospital upwards of twelve months, suffering from a form of tuberculosis.

Pte. M. Dobar, Marystow, died from influenza at the Military Hospital at 10 o'clock Saturday night. The body was conveyed to Oke's mortuary rooms, awaiting instructions as to its disposal.

Country and Golf Clubs

NOT ALLOWED FUEL IN WINTER. Ottawa, Oct. 4.—Regulations to restrict the fuel consumption of private country clubs, golf, yacht and canoe clubs, have just been approved by order-in-council, at the instance of C. A. Magrath, fuel controller. During the period from December 15, 1918, to March 15, 1919, no country club, golf, yacht or canoe club is to burn or use fuel of any description or to use power derived from any such fuel for purposes of heating or cooking.

There is no restriction, however, on the use of wood or peat by any such club when such wood or peat is available. A further clause states that where it is established, to the satisfaction of the fuel administration of the province within which the club is located, that any fuel can be spared and that its use is not contrary to the point, a permit may be granted by the fuel controller. Penalties are provided for contravention of the regulations.

MONDAY, October 14, 1918.
The Week's War.

The beginning of the week saw Germany knocking at the door of the Allies, bearing peace proposals, which were submitted via the President of the United States, who, however, promptly turned them down, as not being of sufficient data to form a basis for negotiations. Since then much has been heard from but nothing has been done by Germany to bring her note up to the point from which a provisional acceptance for discussion might be made. Late despatches from German sources received on Saturday are more than conflicting and there is, apparently, no perfect accord in Hunland, on the question of the peace terms. Each party and faction appears to possess and adhere to its own opinions.

In the meantime there has been no diminution of the Allied blows on the defenses of the Hindenburg line. Day after day finds the British, French and Americans steadily advancing and pushing the enemy forces farther and farther back to the border. St. Quentin and Cambrai, both, have been taken, and the "bluff" that the Hindenburg line was merely the front of a great German fortified block, extending for miles back has been exposed. That there was no satisfactory lines of retirement available for the Huns has been abundantly proven by the despatch with which he clung to his old front. Captured documents have supplied the Allied commanders with the information that it was the fixed intention and object of the German command to spend the winter in the elaborate and comfortable trench and dugout systems of the Hindenburg Line, but the Allies had made other arrangements, and the German is not to be allowed to remain in comparative ease in his carefully prepared quarters. With the taking of St. Quentin by the French, the early surrender of La Fere must of necessity occur. Afterwards there will be no great obstacle to the envelopment of Laon from the north and a compulsory retirement of the enemy from that town. In fact this retirement might be regarded as having commenced as recent advices tell that, as well as to several villages south of it. With the canal system from the Oise to the Scarpe Rivers in the Allies' hands, there is at once removed what was at one time a serious barrier to progress, and French troops have already crossed the former stream. At St. Quentin, the distance to the Belgian border is but a short forty miles, through which run the railway lines which supply the forces of the enemy. This rail head is now no longer of service to them. Cambrai, to the north as well as Douai, is another railway centre and the latter place is as closely associated with Cambrai as La Fere is with St. Quentin. It cannot therefore be expected to remain in the possession of the Germans much longer, it being now outflanked by the latest British operations, with the Americans in the sector between Cambrai and St. Quentin chasing the retreating enemy further east. Early this week we shall not be surprised to hear that Lille and Douai, to the north, La Fere and Laon, to the south, have all fallen to the Allies. The Americans are driving up and clearing the left bank of the Meuse north of Verdun and as far west as the Aisne, with the French keeping well abreast of their advance on the other side of that river and in the Argonne forest. These forces are directly threatening the main German railway communications through the Duchy of Luxembourg, to the west, with the French within a few miles of the iron fields of Buley. The enemy in many sectors is fighting with a courage born of despair, but he is fighting a losing battle everywhere. No one can say at the present juncture whether Foch has decided that the time has come to strike the decisive blow. All the same his thrusts are most effective and are gradually wearing down the strength of the enemy. The figures given during four days' fighting, from September 27th, by Sir Douglas Haig, show the extent of the German wastage and the rapidity with which his reserves are being wiped out before the Allies' onset.

Should the La Basses salient and the extreme northern section of the Hindenburg Line give way, the western road to Belgium will be opened once more and the valleys of the Scheldt and Lys rivers to Ghent free of access to the British, who are now appearing around Courtrai, which is less than thirty miles from Ghent. The coming week will doubtless be prolific of events.

No review of the past week's activities would be complete if it failed to note the heroic deeds of the Canadians through whose gallantry, in holding, what was in military language, an untenable position, the fall of Cambrai was brought about. The story of their tenacity and doggedness has been told in glowing language as well as in the bald terms of military dispatches, but they are both epic. The men of the sister dominion have staggered and beaten the picked regiments of the Kaiser and have stimulated the entire Allied line by their fearless conduct in action, and like their brothers from Australia and New Zealand, not forgetting our own men of the line, have saved the day in some of the most trying engagements in the great struggle. Turkey has followed, as anticipated, Bulgaria's surrender and has announced that she is ready to accept President Wilson's peace terms. This means, as in the case of Bulgaria, unconditional surrender and immediate withdrawal from occupied territory and cessation of hostilities. This leaves Austria-Hungary absolutely unprotected against invasion from the East, and unless threatened with the consequences by Germany, the capitulation of the dual Empire cannot be much longer staved off. The capture of Beirut and other towns of importance by General Allenby's army in Palestine removes from the Turkish yoke another considerable portion of the Holy Land, and the surrender of numerous troops further enfeeble the resistance of the enemy. With Turkey now a peace suppliant the army of occupation in Syria will be able to enjoy a well earned and longed for rest. From Mesopotamia there is nothing new. Neither have there been any startling happenings in Russia or Siberia. The attention of the world has been directed towards the Western Front and operations in the minor battle theatres have not been occupying public thought greatly. The blood-stained hand of the Hohenzollern, while holding out the olive branch of peace, is still busily engaged in the congenial work of murdering helpless women and children. The sinking of the Japanese passenger ship Hiranu Maru, by a piratical Hun U-boat, and the death list of passengers, must be added to the inhuman deeds of the enemy, while the torpedoing of the Holyhead Dublin mail boat Leinster and the awful holocaust of lives resultant therefrom is another crime against civilization which will be placed in the final reckoning with the mad dog of Potsdam. "Brutes they were," said the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour in a recent address, "and brutes they remain." And as brutes, and brutes only, the German people from the Kaiser down, must be treated. There can be no peace with Germany in her present unrepentant and homicidal state of mind.

Late cable despatches indicate that Germany is ready to accept the peace terms offered by President Wilson, but whether in the amplified form of Wilson's reply last week, is not definitely stated, the German reply thereto, apparently only providing for an acceptance of the fourteen points laid down by the President in his address of January eighth last. London, particularly, appears to be very suspicious of Germany's purpose and public opinion demands as in the case of Bulgaria and Turkey, unconditional surrender. The capture of La Fere and Laon and the imminent fall of Douai will serve to strengthen the hands of the Entente refusing to accept anything in the form of a negotiated peace. As forcibly expressed by J. A. R. in the Daily News this morning, "the master key is unconditional surrender, and any other key is not to peace, but to war renewed, war more awful than even after these long years of suffering it has entered into the brain of man to conceive."

Prohibition Case

The hearing of the Prohibition case, having been postponed until the afternoon, was resumed at 3 o'clock Saturday.

The first witness called was C. James, an employee of Franklin's. He did not know of anything unusual being carried on on the wharf. He did not know of any conversations between Mr. Levitt and Mr. Cox, manager of the United Coal Co., as regards the presence of the "oil barrels." In fact he knew nothing whatever of the landing or taking away of the oil cases.

C. Cox, manager of the United Coal Co., sworn, could throw no new light on the case. He did not have any conversations with Levitt, and knew nothing whatever of the presence of the oil barrels. His evidence finished the case for the prosecution.

Mr. Higgins, K.C., asked for a dismissal of the case, on the grounds that the prosecution had failed to prove that his client had obtained possession of the liquor illegally. The burden of proof rested with the plaintiffs, and they had brought in no substantial proof to justify their case. Mr. Higgins quoted from the Prohibition Act, and the old Intoxicating Liquors Act in support of his motion.

Mr. Morin, K.C., followed, and pointed out that in point of fact the prosecution had fully proved its case. They had traced the liquor from its landing point to its possession by Levitt, and the burden of proof had been shifted to defendant. He also quoted from the Prohibition Act, which he said was "rotten." (In this Mr. Hunt and Judge Morris fully agreed.)

Mr. Hunt also addressed the Court, asking that the case be dismissed. He pointed out that the burden of proof was on the plaintiffs, and they had failed. In fact the plaintiffs had admitted failure when they asked for adjournment in the forenoon to get further witnesses.

Judge Morris agreed with Mr. Morin that the burden of proof had been shifted to the defendant. It would be for him to show when he came in possession of the liquor, and why it was being shifted from place to place.

Mr. Higgins remarked that he would probably ask the Magistrate to state a case for the Supreme Court, to decide on the point of law in question, and in the meantime asked for an adjournment, Wednesday next being set down.

A Simple Remedy.

In view of the prevalence and almost daily increase of Spanish Influenza and the qualification as such is appropriate because the epidemic was "made in Spain"—may I suggest a preventive remedy, easy to apply and inexpensive. Gum Camphor—Cinnamonum Camphora—in two small bags of muslin, carried about, one in the inside breast pocket of the coat, and the other in one of the side pockets of the trousers or overcoat, will prevent catching the disease. The bag near the breast is to serve as a permanent disinfectant of the breathing air before it enters the lungs, and the other bag is to be taken out occasionally and applied to the nostrils. This easy, agreeable and inexpensive preventive of several infectious diseases—Gum Camphor—was used by Cuban physicians twenty years ago, when visiting patients afflicted with these diseases, and its disinfecting power in the mucous membrane of the nose, which is the entering door of many microscopic germs, may be scientifically explained.—Dr. A. M. Fernandez De Ybarra, in the New York World.

N. T. A. Annual.

The annual meeting of the Newfoundland Teachers' Association was held at the Board of Trade Building, Saturday, at this meeting the recent increase for the teachers came up for discussion. There was quite a debate as to whether this increase should not be allocated by grade and years of service. It was decided that it would be better for all the teachers to participate as at present outlined, and place the teachers in the same class as the civil servants.

The Secretary reported an increase in the membership and subscription to the Journal. At the same time he deplored the fact that so many teachers are indifferent to the work of the Association. It has been asked what the Association is doing. During the past year the Executive held several meetings in the interests of teachers. At the time of the 20 per cent. increase by the Government, the Executive, by a deputation tried to have that increase come direct from the Colonial Secretary's Office. They impressed upon Sir E. P. Morris and Hon. J. R. Bennett, that if the money were given to Boards many teachers would not receive any increase, or, if any, then not the full amount. This prediction has been justified, and the Secretary has received many letters from teachers who did not receive a cent. increase, and many more who only received 5, 10 or 15 per cent.

The Association was glad to learn that the present increase on the whole of the Teachers' salaries will come direct from the Colonial Secretary's Office and not through Boards. If it had to pass through the hands of Boards, many teachers would not receive a cent.

The Association has not yet finished with the Boards who failed to pay their teachers the 20 p.c. It is hoped that many teachers who failed to re-

New Substitute for Leather.

As the great and growing scarcity of leather, experiments to find a substitute, which were known in pre-war days have multiplied like the proverbial green bay tree. Most of these substitutes have more or less unsatisfactory. A cent, however, has just been filed in and by Mr. Rudolph Obrist-Dios, Lucerne, Switzerland, who for the two years has devoted himself to the discovery of a good "waterproof" leather substitute. After a thorough study of all existing methods he came to the conclusion that, without the aid of animal tissues, it is impossible to obtain any good "waterproof" material. Mr. Dios has succeeded in making a composition which, although it has been found to be fully equal to leather, it is perfectly waterproof, and durable and corresponds to the requirements made of it. Use made of the bladders of animals, white raw, are stretched in a line and dried. In this way they are a smooth surface on which dyed colors can be applied. By means of a special process (tanning with vegetable tanning materials), they are so prepared that they become perfectly pliant and proof. After this treatment the pieces of bladder are, by means of a suitable adhesive substance, so pressed upon one another that the leather thus obtained can be of any degree of thickness. Several pieces can also be pressed together, without or with felt, so that their thickness can be obtained. Scientific American.

German Nature Does Not Change.

JOHN N. QUINN.
German patriotism is not to be decried by what he says, but by what he does. What a person does sounds loudly in the ears of his fellows. It shows completely his words and words and action are not in agreement.
German boasts of "culture," but German actions demonstrate that "culture" is not even on a par with that of those whom we call barbarians.
High Clark Ridpath, in his "History of the World," Vol. IV., page 417, says an interesting glimpse of the barbarians of the sixth century. Writing of the downfall of the Roman Empire, Ridpath thus describes the Germanic invasions.
At this juncture, however, an army of twenty-five thousand Germans, led by two dukes of the Alemanni, came upon central Italy. The change of climate, however, and the wine-growing glut of the Teutonic warriors combined to bring on contagion and decimate their ranks. Nerves weakened with an army of eighteen thousand men and met the foe on the banks of the Volturnus. Here, in 554, a petty chieftain inflicted on the Germans a defeat so decisive as to reduce the status of Italy. The greater part of the Gothic army perished either by the sword or in attempting to cross the river.
When the Teutonic "barbarians" of present war reached the wine cellars of France, they again demonstrated their "wine-swilling glutty," which became a large factor in their defeat of 1914, as it did in 554. "Let us not forget," it will be well to keep us the righteousness of German "culture."
Lola Fuller, an American returned from a several months' stay in Europe, much of which time was spent in Roumania, according to a dispatch in the Post (Washington, D.C.), June 1917, p. 3, "tells harrowing tales of human atrocities perpetrated in various parts of the kingdom by Teutonic and Bulgarian invaders. Some of the greatest outrages perpetrated by invaders," said Miss Fuller, "took place in Bucharest shortly after the arrival of the Germans and their groups of soldiers at the command of officers entered the homes of the wealthy classes, stripped the clothes from the girls and women, drove them naked into the streets, and were at the mercy of the unadorned soldiers.
The scenes which followed are too terrible to describe. The most unspeakable outrages were committed upon these gentlewomen, and death was the fate of some of them. The atrocities which appal the imagination were committed. They were men, they were but beasts with an ingenuity to commit crime. Some of the victims were crucified, children murdered."
Are you the name mentioned west from geography then? Rheimus a Meuse and memorials seen now of 2000 years ago? The soldiers have changed of some of them. The atrocities which appal the imagination were committed. They were men, they were but beasts with an ingenuity to commit crime. Some of the victims were crucified, children murdered.

German Nature Does Not Change.

JOHN N. QUINN.

A man's patriotism is not to be defied by what he says, but by what he does. What a person does sounds loudly in the ears of his fellows and it drowns completely his words and words and action are not in proportion.

Germany boasts of "kulture," but German actions demonstrate that German "kulture" is not even on a par with that of those whom we call barbarians.

John Clark Ridpath, in his "History of the World," Vol. IV, page 417, gives us an interesting glimpse of the downfall of the Roman Empire. Ridpath thus describes the Germans:

"At this juncture, however, an army of seventy-five thousand Germans, led by two dukes of the Alemanni, came from the Rhaetian Alps and waded to burst like a thunderbolt upon central Italy. The change of climate, however, and the wine-drinking gait of the Teutonic warriors combined to bring on contagion and decimate their ranks. Nerves went with an army of eighteen thousand men and met the foe on the banks of the Volturnus. Here, in 554, a petty enmity inflicted on the barbarians a defeat so decisive as to restore the status of Italy. The greater part of the Gothic army perished either by the sword or in attempting to cross the river."

When the Teutonic "barbarians" of the present war reached the wine cellars of France, they again demonstrated their "wine-willing gluttony," which became a large factor in their defeat of 1914, as it did in 554.

"Just we forget," it is well to keep before us the truthfulness of German "kulture."

Miss Lole Fuller, an American returned from a several months' stay in Rumania, according to a dispatch
from the Post (Washington, D.C.), June 1917, p. 3, "tells harrowing tales of human atrocities perpetrated in various parts of the kingdom by Teutonic and Bulgarian invaders.

"One of the greatest outrages perpetrated by invaders," said Miss Fuller, "took place in Bucharest shortly after the arrival of the Germans and Hungarians. Groups of soldiers at the head of officers entered the houses of the wealthy classes, stripped the clothes from the girls and women,
and drove them naked into the streets,
where they were at the mercy of the passing soldiers.

The scenes which followed are too horrible to describe. The most unbearable outrages were committed against these gentlewomen, and death critically ended the shame and sufferings of some of them.

Deviations which appeal the imagination were committed. They were men, they were but beasts with human ingenuity to commit crime.
Humans were crucified, children murdered."

Due to the great and growing scarcity of leather, experiments to find a substitute, which were known ready in pre-war days have multiplied like the proverbial green bay net.

Most of these substitutes have been more or less unsatisfactory. A recent, however, has just been filed in England by Mr. Rudolph Obrist-Dooz, Loerne, Switzerland, who for the past two years has devoted himself to the discovery of a good "waterproof leather" substitute. After a thorough study of all existing methods he came to the conclusion that, without the use of animal tissues, it is impossible to obtain any good waterproof compound. Mr. Dooz has succeeded in producing a composition which, on being treated, has been found to be fully equal to leather; it is perfectly waterproof, light and durable and corresponds to all the requirements made of it. Use made of the bladders of animals such as sheep, while raw, are stretched in a machine and dried. In this way they acquire a smooth surface on which various colors can be applied. By means of a special process (tanning with vegetable tanning materials), they are so prepared that they become perfectly pliant and waterproof. After this treatment the pieces of bladder are, by means of a suitable adhesive substance, so pressed upon one another that the leather thus obtained can stand any degree of moisture. Several pieces can also be pressed together, without or with felt so that great thickness can be obtained.

Liberty's Fight.

[For The Evening Telegram.]
By A. T. KEATS.

Cheer up, my anti-German friends,
we'll win the fight is won,
Bulgaria has laid down the sword,
and parted with the Hun—
On Balkan soil where British smile,
floats far beyond the seas
"The flag that braved a thousand years
the battle and the breeze."

With Turkey, too, she'll soon be through, and take her sue for peace,
And rue the day she didn't say, we'll clasp the hand of Greece Whose soldiers brave stood near their grave at mercy of the Huns,
When England's aid the Germans stayed—brave boys with British guns.

Proud Italy's wave of soldiers brave
was next when in the fight, Fair freedom's cause and British laws
they hailed with much delight.
With worth and fame she's linked her name, long live her noble race
For Allies all she'll stand or fall, her fight is a fight for peace.

Brave Serbia, too, has e'er been true
and Belgian deeds will shine.
But German sway has seen its day,
'twill fade beyond the Rhine.
O'er mountain top and granite rock
the Allied flag now waves,
'Tis a glorious fight waged for the right for Freedom can't be slaves.

In Frenchmen's praise our voice we'll raise, no braver men than they Have e'er got birth on mother earth
they're plucking it to-day
The Hunnish hordes fall by their sword
—'twas valor gained the day.
At fair Verdun where Frenchmen won
and kept the foe at bay
When Russia fell 'twas hard to tell what would the outcome be,
But France and Britain held the line
and fought for Liberty.
Tho' booming guns came from the Huns flying round our heroes
graves,
The Frenchman shroud is floating proud and Britain rules the waves.

In land of Free across the sea, a righteous spirit rose
To join the fray and show fair play,
the great Republic chose.
She seeks for naught, for Freedom
fought in days long past and gone,
But in the breach she's now to teach and tame the lordly Hun.

Where glory waits and fame glazes the name of Wilson stands,
In future days we'll sing his praise in fair and foreign lands.
Great "Stars and Stripes" for British rights and Justice is unfurled,
'Tis a fight for peace for the human race and Freedom o'er the world.

Names and More
(From the Boston Herald.)
Are you looking sharply enough at the names of these towns and rivers mentioned in the dispatches from the west front? They look like mere geography; but there are stories in them. Names like Soissons and Rheims and Verdun, Aisne and Marne, Meuse and Moselle, are our closest memorials of men and communities
seen now but dimly through the haze of 2000 years and more.

The sound and the spelling may have changed. Why should they not, when Celt and Roman took them
from each other, and when Visigoth and Burgundian, Frank and Norseman took them in turn from both?

Some of the names have been shortened. Verdun, for instance used to be Verodunum, just as Noyon has been compressed from Noriodunum, and as Metz, or Mettis, has kept but a hint of Mediomat ices. Some have been smoothed. Thus the Aisne used to be that Axona in which Caesar's trained legionaries washed their tun-ics. And the Marne, by which At-tilia's Huns watered their sweating horses fourteen centuries ago, was still earlier the Matrona. Most of the names have taken on disguise.

Rheims, for instance, when Caesar knew it, was simply Remi; and Ais
in those days was Aquae, the Latin word for springs.

The River Meuse, of course, was the Mosas, and the little Moselle—the Mosella—is to-day the Moselle. Just as all Provence was Rome's "Provincia" or province, so Cologne was a Roman "Colonia" or settlement.

Soissons, the old throne-city of the Merovingian kings, perpetuates the tribe of Suesones, quite as Paris keeps alive the memory of the riverland days when it was Lutetia—
or "Lutetia"—of the Parisii. Collenz, covering now in the dread of the allied armies, used to be known to the Roman traders as Confluentes,
the place where Rhine and Moselle flowed as one. Compiegne is another Latin name that has taken on a letter 'g. For all its region Compiegne was the Romans' military depot, or Compendium.

How strangely these memorial names have come through the turmoils and whelmings of twenty centuries, surviving not only fleeting generations but changing dynasties and disappearing peoples! To-day the names from Napoleon, who had them in turn from Louis XIV; who had them from Philip Augustus, who had them from Charlemagne; who had them from Clovis; who had them from Caesar. Wherever, the French have crossed the seas, whether as colonists or as exiles, they have carried these home-names with them.
Pittsburghers doubtless know whom their city's name commemorates and for what reason the honor was done;
but how many Americans in New Orleans see in that historic name the ancient tributes to Marcus Aurelius, who rebuilt an old town on the river
Loire and called it Aurelianum?

REMOVED AT HOSPITAL.—Mrs.
Edmond, who underwent an operation at the General Hospital a few days ago, is now much improved.

Market Notes.

CODFISH.—Last week's prices
were: Labrador Soft, ex schooner, $11.
50 to $11.65; Large Merchantable was strong at $13 and some specially well cured lots brought $13.50; Small Mer-chantable, $12.50; Large West India, $6.50 to $7; Small, $5.50 to $6. Labrador Shore, on arrival, will bring $12.75. The above prices will maintain, if not advance. Competition for Labrador soft will be very keen.

COD OIL.—Recent rumours of peace have had a strong tendency to shake up the oil market and prices in consequence have softened. Late last week the best offer on Water Street was $380 per ton, with most buyers refusing to pay more than $375.

HERRING.—Last Spring's Split
pack are in brisk demand, as high as $8 having been paid. From Green Bay some thousand barrels are expected in by schooners, this month. By December it is thought that the market will be clean and ready for the new catch. Big prices from the nets are likely to be asked by the Green Bay fishermen.

LOBSTERS.—The total catch for 1918 is estimated at 4,780 cases, a decrease of 1,720 cases. The price in the city is now $22.50 to $23 per case of 48 one pound Hais.

PROVISIONS.—The Food Control
Board Regulations published last week
fix a maximum price on Sugar, Flour,
of all grades, and Molasses, and provide severe penalties for selling above the prices so fixed. At the same time there is nothing to prevent dealers
from selling under the regulated figures. War Standard Flour is selling now at $14.50 wholesale. Imports are 70,000 barrels less than last year to date. Pork and Beef prices have not undergone any change, but indications point to an advance in the latter article, which may take place at any time. Molasses is quoted, per puncheon at 98 cents, with holders not anxious to sell. News comes from Charlottetown of a big crop of P. E.
I. potatoes, but no export prices have yet been fixed on either potatoes or oats. Local tubers are still bringing $4 which price may be maintained
during the balance of the present month.

Obituary.
ALLAN SCYVOUR, R.N.R.
The death of seaman Allan Scyvour
at the General Hospital on Saturday removes one more of those who responded to the call of Empire in 1914.
Deceased spent some time on a mine sweeper and in the performance of duty, contracted a heavy cold and was sent to hospital, coming home on furlough in the fall of 1915. Returning from leave he was again sent to hospital, being subsequently given another furlough. Just before his leave expired last autumn he contracted pleuro-pneumonia and was taken to the hospital here, where he passed away on Saturday. To his father, mother, sisters and brothers
the Telegram extends sympathy which will be joined in by the whole community.

MARJORIE JONES.
Word was received by Mr. J. W.
Jones, Stipendiary Magistrate at Boznie Bay, from Everett, Mass., yesterday, of the death of his daughter Miss Marjorie, who succumbed to pneumonia. The late Miss Jones had been training for a nurse at one of the hospitals in Everett, and her passing will be a heavy blow to her parents, a blow which will be felt by a large circle of friends here and in Evan's Harbor, T.B., at which place
Miss Jones was born. In the expression of general sympathy to the beloved parents, relatives and friends,

King's Gift of Cup.
King George has presented a beautiful gold and silver tankard to the British Red Cross "gold and silver" appeal. The cup is of great value and unique historical interest. On the bottom is inscribed: "This cup was presented by the Dowager of Charles X.
of France to Charles XI and his Queen upon the birth of Charles XII.
in June, 1682. Charles XII. lost it at the battle of Poltava, and when Peter the Great showed it to Count
Piper, his prisoner, Count Piper acknowledged his acquaintance by kissing the cup and shedding tears upon it. The Czar gave it to Areskine, his favourite physician, a Scotsman.
After passing through various hands
it finally came into the possession of Robert Vercaen, of Kalkin Street, Grosvener Place, who presented it to the King in June, 1851."

The tankard is about six inches in diameter and stands on three, richly embossed gold balls. The lid is inlaid with gold, and bears the heads of Charles XI. and his queen, Ulrica Eleonora, in the centre. Inside the lid is a raised design of the sun shining upon the globe. The King has also sent a chased gold ring with a miniature portrait of Charles XII. of Sweden to be sold with the cup.

Pity the Poor Rich Man

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

A friend of mine claims that the people of the rich and the upper middle classes do not deserve any special sympathy for the war sacrifices they make voluntarily or under the stress of taxation. Judged from one point of view I think he is right. Judging from another, totally wrong. Of course they are not in the class with these people who made a bare subsistence before the war and who, now that the war has skyrocketed the cost of living and their wages have not kept pace, are driven to desperation by the impossibility of making both ends meet. Few in all this mad mix-up, deserve more sympathy than they, to my way of thinking. But, judging from the point of view of the financial class of the critic (he probably makes between two and three thousand a year) I think these people are making a very definite sacrifice. She has Given Up Her Maid. I know two women of large income who have cut down their service. One is a woman who lives at an apartment hotel and who has always had a personal maid. She has given her up. The other has a large and beautiful home. She has shuf up part of it, curtailed her entertaining and cut down from twelve servants to six. One's first impulse is to smile at the idea that such a change in habits represents any real sacrifice. Isn't it Hard For the Rich Man To Change His Scale of Living? But stop a minute and think. These things represent their normal way of living. To give up anything which one has gotten into the habit of having whether it costs two dollars a week or two hundred, is hard. You know how easily, as you made a little more money, you adjusted yourself to a little more luxurious way of living and came to regard the things which had once seemed luxuries as necessities. You are finding it hard to give up some of these things to-day. Why not give the rich man credit for finding it hard to change his scale of living. Cutting Down to Forty Thousand A Year. A writer made the statement in a recent magazine that the poorest man he knew was a man with an income of two hundred thousand a year who has had to cut down to forty thousand a year. For a moment I felt a flash of indignation and then I saw his point of view. What one needs for happiness is simply a question of the point of view. A man who is happy on the barest necessities of life we could be. Read Thorstein Bunde Veblen's "The Theory of the Leisure Class" sometime if you want to get a brand new point of view on this matter. In the meantime pity the poor rich man. Doubtless it will all do him soul good. But you must admit it may seem hard at first. Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Household Notes

A regular potato knife enables one to peel vegetables with great speed, yet the peeling will always be of the same thickness. In sweetening anything use half syrup and half sugar. This is patriotic and at the same time more practical than using all syrup. For scraping food from dinner dishes and for getting every bit of batter from a mixing bowl, small squares of pasteboard are excellent. To make stewed carrots, take some new carrots, 1 ounce fat, a little stock, 1 teaspoonful chopped parsley, 1 teaspoonful cornflour, salt and pepper to taste and 1 tablespoonful milk. Clean the carrots and put them into an enameled saucepan with the stock and a little salt; simmer gently till tender, add the cornflour and fat (blended together), and stir till thoroughly mixed. Add pepper, milk and parsley. Cook for a minute or two longer and serve. If liked, a little chopped onion may be added.

THE MEANING OF THE AGE.
No greater drama ever held life's stage. It is the birth of better things to view. Now from the dust and mold of ancient age, Men march into the glory of the new. The sun of freedom rises o'er the hills, The joys that dreamers visioned are to be. With hope and faith the pulse of mortal thrills, The souls of men are shortly to be free. Behold the ending of all tyrant ways, Witness the passing of all conjoined kings. The children that shall come in happier days Shall be the heirs to all life's treasure-tured things. Justice and truth and not the chance of birth Shall mark the man wherever he may dwell. Integrity alone shall prove his worth, And power be his who learns to use it well. Ages have come and swiftly passed away And tried to smite though burdened down with wrongs. Few eyes have caught the vision of to-day. Dead poets left but glimpses in their songs. Dead sages, daring grim oppression's blade, Vented to tell their dreams of liberty. Yet those who heard believed not, were afraid, Or thought it vain to struggle to be free. Now fall the chains and now the king depart. The despot and the tyrant stand at bay. The fires of freedom glow in every heart. And real become the dreams of yesterday. This is the age dead poets told in song. This is the age dead sages said would be: Mankind is breaking down the walls of wrong. The souls of men are shortly to be free.

Milady's Boudoir

There used to be a time when our dresses, or at least the dresses of our mothers, reached to the floor, or so nearly so that a brush braid of coarse binding to preserve the fabric. In these days if the tiniest bit of ankle showed it was a cue for a woman to blush. Now we have become quite accustomed to showing our ankles and woman's right to them has been fully recognized, consequently pretty ankles are greatly desired and add much to our beauty. To improve the shapeliness of ankles, exercises and massage will do wonders. It will be found that most ankles which are unattractive, or not quite as shapely as the possessor might wish, either lack sufficient flesh or are too fleshy. If your ankles are a little stout you can reduce them in a month, by means of a little exercise morning and night for ten minutes. Remove the shoes and stockings and cross the knee so the support is removed from one ankle. Thrust out the foot and move it around from the ankle in a twisting motion, then bend it up and down, making sure that all this is done with the ankle bone. When one foot becomes tired shift position and exercise the other ankle. For the thin maid who wants to be plump there is nothing so good as rest. Take ten minutes every little while and in a loose lounging robe sink into a chair and let out every ounce of energy. Relax the fingers, wrists, arms, feet, ankles and legs. Drop the head heavily to right, left and down and try to be as limp as the proverbial dish rag.

"Hound of God."

A tribute was paid to the British Navy by Rev. Edward T. Sullivan at St. Paul's Cathedral, Boston, on a recent Sunday, when he preached a sermon on "The Hound of God: the British Fleet, Guardian of Our Liberty." Mr. Sullivan traced the history of the British fleet, and said twice before has the British Navy been called upon to defend the seas when Britain's safety was threatened by the Spanish Armada; and again by Napoleon, when Nelson led his men by sleepless vigilance and bulldog tenacity to save England and Europe from the invader, and finally gave his own life at Trafalgar Bay. "England's control of the sea was threatened for the third time in this war, but within twenty-four hours after war was declared and both France and Britain taken unawares, the hound of Heaven had its stranglehold on Germany's throat, and has since been tightening its grip and throttling the very life of the despot. More than 20,000,000 men have been sent back and forth in safety because of Britain's naval power. Her achievements are unparalleled, stupendous in conception, mighty in scope. Her silent sentinels of the North Sea have made it possible to land troops everywhere. To this power and to our own wonderful navy, man to man and ship to ship, we pay our tribute and jola hands across the sea with those who serve." At the close of the sermon Mr. Sullivan read "Nelson's Dying Prayer at Trafalgar Bay."

AUTUMN CHILL.

The chilly wind begins to sing. It's been on ice, I trow; the overcoat I soaked last spring would be a blessing now. But it will have to stay 'in pawn; the cost of living's high, and all my bank account is gone, there's not a kopeck left. The walling winds across the sea; gone southward is the dicky-bird that used to sing to me; the gentle flowers are in the hole, o'er their dead stalks I weep; and in the elm tree's hollow hole the sari-yark lies asleep. The night wind has a dismal note, a sort of piercing whine; and I bewail the overcoat my uncle has in brine. The clouds are hanging low to-day, there is a threat of rain; the trees are gaunt and bare and gray, and in the blast complain. The leaves are flying everywhere, they soar and swoop like bats; and all the chill October air seems full of dust and bats. As though it had a human throat, that cold wind pipes its tune; alas, the good old overcoat I soaked the tenth of June! Oh, other men may face the storm, the biting, arctic breeze, and keep their slats and inards warm, but I must shake and freeze. In my sad grange that has no moat, all winter I must stay, and wish I had the overcoat I soaked one vernal day.

"The Land of the Twenty-five Lashes."

Terrible Punishments With Whips of Rhinoceros Hide Inflicted on Natives of East Africa for Trifling Offences.
Edinburgh, Oct. — At the annual general assembly of the Church of Scotland the moderator, presenting the report on foreign missions said that great issues hung on the fate of German East Africa. He asked his audience of clergymen whether it was to be German again, and was answered by loud cries of "No." "Is it to be international or British?" he asked. Cries of "British" came from the whole assembly. As a result of his correspondence and contact with those most experienced in East African affairs, the moderator said he had become convinced that it would be a real calamity if this territory should revert to Germany. It was well understood what the German methods were, and their East African colony was known as the "land of twenty-five lashes," because of the terrible punishments with whips of rhinoceros hide inflicted on the natives for trifling offences. Now, said the moderator, the natives were singing a new chant around their village fires, of which the refrain was: "The twenty-five lashes are gone, are gone." "What is gone," the moderator added, amid applause, "is gone for ever." To boil cauliflower, take 1 good-sized cauliflower and 1/2 pint of white sauce. Wash the cauliflower, after cutting off the outside leaves, and allow to lie for 1/2 hour in fresh cold water, to which a little vinegar has been added. Rinse and drain. Plunge into a saucepan of boiling salted water and cook until tender; drain, place on a vegetable dish, pour over the white sauce and serve.

Spanish Influenza.

The medical practitioners met again Saturday to formulate their plans dealing with the Spanish Influenza. The seriousness of the epidemic which now threatens us, was recognized by all, and it was agreed that urgent measures must be immediately adopted in the attempt to limit spread. The following points were noted: The cases that have so far appeared are of the same character as those reported in Canada and the U.S. It is already established as an extremely contagious disease, spread contact from one to the other. Experience proves that the mortality during an epidemic is alarmingly high, particularly when it attacks poorer classes who can so ill-afford special nursing. Benefiting by the experience of Boston, Montreal and Halifax, it is deemed advisable to close all places of public resort, and it has been so ordered. It is earnestly hoped that all will co-operate with the authorities in the effort to save ourselves from this very silent disease; and, to this end it is advised, that where the disease exists, the householder shall strictly observe the decision and orders of the doctor carrying out the directions to prevent its spread. Let us keep our houses, yards and streets clean, avoiding any accumulation of filth anywhere. Let us avoid spitting, and when a cough occurs, cover our mouth during the act. And let us avoid late hours and over-indulgence in eating and drinking. A healthy body will throw off infection. Therefore let us carefully study our health. PUBLIC HEALTH OFFICER.

Mr. Goodison was necessitated to take the position he holds as Censor of the Press. Thanking you for the notice, I remain, Yours respectfully, VOX POPULI.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES. NOON.

THE ONLY WAY TO PEACE. SYDNEY N. S. W. Oct. 13. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency)—A number of Union Secretaries, who have been interviewed, have expressed the hope that German proposals be not accepted, and that the Allies will continue until the enemy is crushed, and a lasting peace has been imposed upon him. GERMAN TORIES OBJECT. AMSTERDAM, Oct. 13. Serious objection to the acceptance of the conditions laid down in President Wilson's reply to the German note was communicated to Imperial Chancellor Prince Maximilian on Thursday, by the Conservative faction of the Reichstag, according to the Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin.

COMING AT LAST. NEW YORK, Oct. 13. Dr. W. F. Lloyd, President of Newfoundland, who has been in London since last June, arrived here yesterday, on his way home. Dr. Lloyd was called to England to attend the meetings of the Imperial War Cabinet and conferences relating to colonial matters. MAXIMILIAN GOING. LONDON, To-day. The resignation of Prince Maximilian, of Baden, as German Imperial Chancellor, is probable, according to reports from Holland to-day. They quote the Berlin National Zeitung as saying the Chancellor's retirement is regarded in certain circles as inevitable. 6500 CIVILIANS LIBERATED. PARIS, To-day. Sixty-five hundred civilians were liberated when the French troops entered the City of Leon, it was officially stated to-night. The statement issued at the War Office says that the French have passed far beyond the town of the whole front between the Oise and the Ailette River. The text of the official statement reads, "The sunning the enemy, our troops resumed the advance this morning over cut up roads, which the enemy evacuated in hot haste, leaving quantities of military stores, shells, hand weapons and railroads intact. At 10.35 o'clock, our advance guards reached the Leon-Lafere railroad, where they were met by a violent machine gun fire, coming from Besny Et Loisy and La Montagne, which were occupied by enemy rearguards. At 11 o'clock the British Gobaïn Forest was cleared of Germans and the French flag was floating on the Leon cathedral. Our soldiers found over 6500 civilians who welcomed them with joy. Continuing their advance our troops debouched from the Leon forest at Samoussy which was taken. The machine guns also occupied. Towards two o'clock the enemy machine gun reaction became most severe. At two-thirty o'clock an Italian brigade had passed the town of Montaigne. At about 3 o'clock the advance continued. There is heavy fighting with rearguards, which have fired upon us, principally from Vivian, Couvron et Amencourt, and dropped shells on the roads and railroads. We passed into Samoussy Forest and continued the pursuit.

GOOD AIR WORK. LONDON, Oct. 13. (British Wireless Service)—British arm and gunners on the western battle front destroyed 383 German air-planes in September. During the last seven days of the British air force have destroyed 39 German machines and driven down 27 out of control. The figures take no account of French, American and Belgian successes. Fifty-three British machines were reported missing during the past week.

OF NO BENEFIT. LONDON, Oct. 13. (British Wireless Service)—It is understood that the Germans no longer are attempting to use the Flaners coast for operations by sea of any description. They have stripped their bases there of all vessels and have left virtually no regular traffic. The harbor at Ostend has been blocked by the Germans, and there is little doubt that similar steps will be taken at Zeebrugge.

ITALIANS CAPTURE TOWN. ROME, Oct. 13. Kavaya, a town in Albania, twelve miles southeast of Durazzo, has been captured by the Italians, according to an official statement issued by the War Office to-night.

RUPTURE WITH FINLAND. PARIS, Oct. 13. France has broken off the semi-official diplomatic relations which have existed with Finland. It is officially announced that this action was taken because the Finnish Diet, having by a coup d'etat substituted a monarchy for a republic called a German Prince to the throne. French interests in Finland will be in charge of a consular agent at Helsinki.

2.30 P.M. BULGARIAN ATROCITY. SALONIKA, Oct. 13. Jewish and Mohammedan subjects in Eastern Macedonia suffered terribly during the temporary Bulgarian rule of that country. It has been proven by investigation that most of the Jews in Seres were deported and many died from hunger. Mohammedans who were uncoöperated during the stay of a Turkish regiment, which garrisoned the town for five months, suffered worse treatment after its departure for Asia. When the Allies entered the town they were met with enthusiastic demonstrations by the people. Jews and Mohammedans here have subscribed to a fund for the relief of the people of Seres, and the Great Rabbi at Salonika went to Seres to survey the conditions there.

FRENCH AGAIN CROSS THE OISE. WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 13 (by the A.P.)—Reports received from British headquarters from the French front to-night show the French across the Oise River, north of Origny, seven miles southwest of Guise. They are holding the railway on the eastern side of the river on a front of about a third of a mile. APOSTOLIC DELEGATE IN NEW YORK. NEW YORK, Oct. 14. The Right Rev. Pietro Di Marcia arrived at an Atlantic port yesterday from Rome. He has been sent by Pope Benedict as Apostolic Delegate to Canada and Newfoundland. He will succeed the Most Rev. Francis Stagni, the Delegate for the last eight years, who was recalled to Rome and promoted. Bishop Di Marcia who was head of a small Diocese in Italy, was a month getting to America encountering many difficulties. He was met at the pier by a committee from this Diocese, sent by Mgr. Joseph F. Mooney, the Administrator, and driven in a Saratoga to the residence of the late Cardinal Farley. Here he is stopping for a few days, on side. Mgr. Thomas C. Carroll, his host entered the Diocese, Monsignors at dinner to meet the Bishop.

McMurdo's Store News MONDAY, Oct. 14, 1918. The health authorities are taking the possibility of our having an epidemic of Spanish Influenza seriously, and taking proper measures to prevent it by closing schools and places of entertainment. But to back up these measures the individual should do something in the way of disinfection of the home and in the way of personal hygiene. We can help you to choose the most suitable disinfectants, and supply you with the most effective preventives for personal use—Gum Camphor from Cinnamon—Camphora, Antiseptic Throat Lozenges, Gargles and mouth washes, etc., all of which are more or less valuable to prevent the spread of this serious trouble.

Marshals of France.

A high degree of interest and approval has been aroused by announcement that Ferdinand Foch, generalissimo of the Allied armies on the Western front has been made a marshal of France. The title denotes the highest rank in the French army, and Foch is the only other officer who now holds it; but these facts do not suffice to account for the impression made by its bestowal upon Foch. The truth is that the Emperor Napoleon made the title famous by the great soldiers upon whom he conferred it; so that it has since come to be synonymous with all the attributes of supreme military leadership.

The marshals appointed by Napoleon were twenty-six in number, and the names of some of them—such as Ney, Murat, Soult, Lannes, Massena, Davoust, and Macdonald—are familiar as household words. Two of them became monarchs—Murat, King of Naples, and Bernadotte, King of Sweden. Two were tried by court martial and executed—Murat and Net. Two were murdered—Briane and Mortier. Two lost their lives in combat—Bessieres at Lutzen, and Poniatowski at Leipzig; while a third, Lannes, was mortally wounded at Aspern. After Waterloo, Grouchy visited America and was kindly received at Philadelphia by Stephen Girard, the merchant prince and founder of Girard College, who was himself a Frenchman by birth. Grouchy was not only a count of the empire, but a marquis under the royal regime; hence, he was ultimately enabled to return to his own country and regain his previous rank and station.

Under the Second Empire, the marshals of France varied greatly in character and success. Saint-Arnaud, the first French Commander in the Crimean War, had been an actor in early life, and owed his advancement largely to the assistance which he rendered to Louis Napoleon in the coup d'etat of 1851; nevertheless he was a brave soldier, and displayed heroic conduct at the battle of the Alma. Peleisser, Duke of Malakoff—so entitled after the principal fortification at Sebastopol—was chiefly known for having smoked six hundred Araba to death in a cave where they had sought shelter, in Algeria.

Between the two marshals who figured most prominently in the Franco-Prussian War there was the greatest possible contrast—Bazaine, discredited and disgraced for his too-ready capitulation of Metz and its garrison; and MacMahon, honored and esteemed for his administration of the presidency of the new French Republic, during a critical period when a misstep might have been fatal.

The lives of all the men who have been marshals of France would make an instructive series of biographies. For us, however, none compares in importance with the life of the newest marshal, as it is being lived from day to day.—Munsey's Magazine.

mon in Africa, innumerable legends have gathered, and all because it walks aloft upon four of its six slender ambulatory legs, with its head up lifted and its two remaining forelegs outstretched.

From very ancient times it has been believed, that these insects indicated, by the gestures of their fore limbs, the road that a lost wanderer in the desert ought to take. Hence they were called Mantes, or soothsayers. But a still commoner view is that these insects are very religiously inclined. Hence they are known as praying or preaching insects, and are supposed to be habitually engaged in praying to or praising the Deity.

According to a very ancient legend, St. Francis Xavier, on seeing a Mantis moving slowly along with forelegs raised as if in devotion, desired it to sing the praises of God, which it immediately did in a beautiful canticle. The ancient Greeks invested this insect with supernatural powers; and the Turks and Arabs insist that it always prays with its face towards Mecca, and so is a devout Mohammedan.

Among the Provencals of southern France it is known as the Prie Dieu, and Hottentots regard its alighting on a person as a sure sign of saintliness. In other parts of the world it is variously known as the nun, the preacher, and the saint; but these wonderful notions have no foundation in fact. On the contrary, the Mantis is an exceedingly voracious creature. The forelimbs are merely extended in readiness to seize its prey. Once seized, the victim has no power of escape. What those long arms enclose they hold. Their power is great and they are used not only for grasping prey but for fighting their own kind. One well-directed blow will often remove an adversary's head.

Fashions and Fads

Pliet collars are particularly attractive on dark one-piece frocks.

The heavy silk girdle is an interesting solution to the waist line. Solid bead bags and bead-trimmed bags becomes more and more fascinating.

A striped cloak with an immense collar is of gray on a darker gray ground.

Unsung Heroes.

In these days we hear much of the military exploits of armies from different portions of the Empire and high praises are given to officers and men. This is natural and right, but there is a class of heroic men who brave the greatest dangers with a calm courage that is amazing but concerning which we hear but little. These are the men of the engine-room and stokeholds both of our merchant and military marine. Down in the bowels of the ship working in comparative darkness, exposed to intense heat, often amid escaping steam, and disabled machinery, while storms rage with such fury as to threaten to engulf the ship, these dauntless heroes work wonders in repairs which save ship and crew from destruction. Exposed to danger and death from mine and torpedo, these men, whilst all others in the ship have a fighting chance for life, in case of the ship being struck, keep on with their arduous work in confined, under deck, spaces from which escape in case of disaster is almost a miracle.

The captain of a great liner on the Pacific relates the following as an instance of the courageous daring of these unsung heroes: A certain steamship had been sent out from her home port with some of her boilers out of commission. In mid-ocean one of the few boilers capable of being fired got leaky tubes, and it became necessary, in order to keep the ship under any sort of headway in a hurricane-swept sea, to repair the boiler immediately. The fire was pulled out from under it, the manhole lid was unscrewed and removed, and the first engineer, wrapped from head to foot in a thick coating of asbestos, crawled into the red-hot boiler, and with chisel and hammer began tearing out the defective tubes. For two minutes he worked, and as he worked held his breath, for a single gasp of the fiery air in his lungs would have killed him. Then he crawled to the manhole, and was pulled out by the stokers. Five minutes later he again went into the boiler. This time, after nearly two minutes' work, he succeeded in cutting away two tubes. On the third entry he removed three, and after that he spent another five minutes resting. Then came the task of reaming in new tubes, and to do this he was compelled to enter the boiler five times. In each case he stayed inside nearly two minutes, and as he crawled out the last time he barely had breath and strength enough left to say to his chief before he fainted clean away, "It's done, sir."—The Wesleyan.

The Heart of Rachel.

(Manitoba Free Press.) There is a beating in the air these days; it is the beating of the wings of the Angel of Death. Hard beside is another beating, that of the heart of this nation in great sympathy with those who mourn. It is a grief and sympathy that knows no creed, no caste, no necessity of personal acquaintance.

Canadians in general are a quiet people. Those left at home read and try to realize the truly wonderful part which their own men are taking in Armageddon. It is right that we should try to realize it. It is recorded that the British troops who relieved the Canadians who held the awful trenches during the first gas attack came on with the cry of "Canadians! Canadians!" That stand of our men has been repeated again and again. It is being repeated now. It can never be exceeded. Yet given as we throbb with pride at the knowledge that these our own men have, proven true to their British breeding, that they have placed the flag of Canada where the glory of the maple leaves forever enshrine it; that it twines its folds on the equality won of service with the meteor flags of our kindred, yet even at that moment of exultation, a whisper comes, "The price, what of the price?" The price is the casualty lists.

Shall the casualty lists do for those who wait what the foe never can do to our men at the front? Do we mourn as those without hope? It is not exactly for the golden youths that we sorrow. We haltingly realize that in their inheritance of the "vasty halls of death," they have come through a great life in that they gave everything for a great ideal, and their passing is more glorious than anything perhaps that the narrow confines of the common round can offer.

Our men had their day of counting the cost. They had also the vision of the entities of freedom and of righteousness which they were to be permitted to buy. And their decision was swift and true. So is the decision of those who wait. No little peace shall dishonor this Canada, whose enduring fame has been bought at an inestimable price.

Mistake not our grief. We would not have our men less heroes. We would grow forward rather and touch their warm, ever-living hands reached out to us from the intimate new eternity. It is but in the trail hours that we cry, "Absalom, my son Absalom, would God I had died for thee!" The rush of the wings of dawn brings the message that they went ahead trusting us.

Football Tactics
on Western Front.

It requires no great stretch of the imagination to establish a parallel between the tactics of General Foch in his victorious assault on the western front, and the methods of a successful captain in the American game of football. The Allies took the ball from the Germans on the 18th of July, and from that day to this they have been backing the center or making end runs with such speed and dash, and such bewilderment as to the next point of attack, that the enemy has been pressed steadily back until he is standing on his goal line, with all the world waiting in breathless expectation to see whether the Allies can tell a touchdown behind the Hindenburg line before time is called by Father Christmas.

We have all known that, considered individually, the Allied team was made up of better material, with keener temper to its courage, a finer faith in his heart, and an absolutely unconquerable determination to win out in the end whatever the odds might be. All that it lacked was a good captain and perfect team work, and just a dash of fresh, young blood thrown in from the side lines to raise the spirit and temper of the team to the high pitch with which it started this great game of war, now some four years ago.

Marshal Foch provided the captaincy, and our gallant young leaders gave the needed inspiration to the tired but unbroken spirit of the veterans of the French and British armies. The result has been magical. When it looked as though the German mass play was going to break through the Allies got the ball, and by a series of team plays that have never been surpassed, surely, in the history of the great game of war, they have kept it and carried it to the German line.

Of course, the French marshal does not talk in the terms of the gridiron; but any one who is familiar with the famous works he has written on the art of war will realize that the fundamental principles upon which he works are not dissimilar to those of the successful football captain. He tells us that the general who has obtained the initiative should carefully nurse the battle along its whole front, and keep it alive until such time as he is ready for his great decisive attack. This is exactly what the Marshal is now doing; and it will be quite in accord with his principles to nurse the active offensive through the whole of the coming winter months, hitting the line now on this wing and now on that, and now at the center, in preparation for an overwhelming break through next spring and summer, when he will have from three to four million American troops at his disposal.

Is the pick of our Army to be utilized as the mass of maneuver, to use a military term, that is to say, as the swift and hard-hitting quarter back of the Allied team? If so, it is a pretty good guess that before the autumn leaves turn brown in 1919, the ball will be carried to the Rhine; and, if Germany wants yet another season's play, that 1920 will see it carried to Berlin—Scientific American.

The Decisive Hour.

(From the Boston Herald.)
King Albert may be right in saying that this is the decisive hour of the war. For him and the Belgian people it is a great hour, as their gallant little army and its British supporters fight their way north beyond Dixmude, at every step regaining land that the Germans have held for more than four years. And for Serbia, the other small nation that had to endure the first rush of invasion, it is a blessed day of deliverance, as Prince Alexander's army, with its Greek, French, Italian and other allies, drives out the savage enemy that boasted he had obliterated Serbia, but now abandons the fight, crippled and begging for mercy. It is well that in those countries some of the heaviest blows should be struck for the defeat of the cruel Germanic confederacy. But not there only does the decisive hour seem to strike with strokes of disaster for the war-makers. Explain it as they may, they are no longer standing up to the light anywhere. They are hurrying out of Russia and Rumania as fast as they can to re-inforce their armies in the north of France, hoping they may yet be able to prevent their being driven back from the French front lines, without which they could not have carried on the war so long. But still along the whole French battlefield the Germans are giving way, absolutely outfought and overpowered by the British, French and American armies and the smaller forces contributed by other Allies. In spite of German officers and troops, Turkey has had her wings broken in Mesopotamia and Palestine. Austria can but try a little longer to stave off defeat by Italy, being afraid to attempt any great movement of her army lest it should fall apart in national divisions, the most of them hostile to the Hapsburg autocracy. See now the advantage of having the forces of the United States and the Allies united as one army under one supreme commander, who surveys all the fronts at once and never ceases striking, letting the enemy have no rest. Germany may yet fight desperately for a time, but it does seem that she is being forced steadily down into the valley of decision from which she will never emerge with dying colors.

"In Sure and Certain Hope."

All that was mortal of the late John Jeans was laid to rest yesterday afternoon, the remains being followed to the grave by one of the largest funeral processions ever seen in St. John's. The deceased was an officer of District Grand Lodge, Registry of England, and the fraternity was represented by the District Grand Master and Lodges of both constitutions, Companions of Shannon Chapter, officers and brethren of St. John's Lodge (of which the late Bro. Jeans was a member) and officers and brethren of sister lodges in the city, perhaps the greatest gathering of masons ever attending a funeral in this country. The Burial Service of the Church of England was read by Rev. Canon G. H. Bolt and W. R. Smith, assisted by Rev. Dr. Jones, and following the Benediction, the parting hymn was sung, the Grand Honors of masonry given and the sprig of acacia—immortality's emblem—lovingly deposited in the grave by each brother. Thus were the last tributes paid to one who ranked high in the esteem of all men, irrespective of class and creed, and whose devotion to masonry was at once an inspiration and incentive to younger brethren. John Jeans has passed from mortal ken but his name will be ever green in the memories of his brethren and friends.

Spanish "Flu."

With the spread of Spanish Flu throughout the city and outports, the authorities are taking every precaution to cope with the epidemic, and have closed the theaters, day and Sunday schools, concert halls and all places of public resort. At Lark Hr., Bay of Islands, sixty-two cases of influenza have been reported and Dr. Fisher, of Curling, has been ordered there to look after the patients. Magistrate O'Reilly wires from Placentia that a number of cases require treatment there, and we understand that the services of a trained nurse Miss Fitzpatrick, of Placentia, have been requisitioned. Dr. MacDonald, went out to Placentia by train and will cooperate with Dr. McKendrick of that town. Some thirty soldiers are at the General Hospital, ten of them having the "flu." Both the Military and Fever Hospitals are filled with patients. In the harbor a number of vessels have been quarantined by the Port Health Officer, among them being the Nina Lee, Florence, Mary E., Mabel and Annie P. Every precaution is being taken to keep the malady within bounds, and the public are requested to observe all the regulations and to assist the authorities in every way. Only by consistent adherence to the instructions will the epidemic be checked.

S. MILLEY.

A Snake Killing Expedition.

(From the Toronto Globe.)
The job which confronts that Allied expedition to Russia is aptly described by The Cleveland Plain Dealer as "the business of killing snakes."

It views the brutal crime committed at the British Embassy at Petrograd as the symbol of Bolshevism. It regards Trotsky, Lenin and their fellow-Reds as a nest of denationalized reptiles operating as a German adjunct. The job is under way. The Allied expedition that has advanced more than one hundred miles south from Archangel is numerically insignificant if compared with the immense armies fighting in Western Europe. Yet these forces steadily advance. The Bolsheviki are running for dear life. In Asia a more impressive expedition is operating, and the Japanese have won several pitched battles. A Chinese force on the border of Mongolia has killed such Bolsheviki as drifted in that direction. The smeared land east of Lake Balkal, where Red Bolshevism made a blot on the map, is largely cleared. And here and there and everywhere are the busy Czecho-Slovaks, removing Bolsheviki with great cheerfulness. The snakes are slinking away. The murderers who were eager to outdo the Germans in every form of atrocity have no stomach for fighting British, or Americans, or Japanese, or Czecho-Slovaks. The clean-up, which a month or two ago seemed a Herculean task, daily appears easier. The Germans, smashed and battered by the forces of Foch, have no men to send to the aid of their sanguinary

Slave and Emperor.

(By Alfred Noyes.)
"Our cavalry has rescued Nazareth from the enemy, whose sperm men described Christianity as a creed for slaves."

The Emperor mocked at Nazareth in his almighty hour. The Slave that bowed himself to death. And walked with slaves in Nazareth. What were his words but wasted breath. Before that "will to power."

Yet, in the darkest hour of all. When black defeat began. The Emperor heard the mountains quake. He felt the graves beneath him shake. He watched his legions rally and break. And he whimpered as they ran.

"I hear a shout that moves the earth. A cry that wakes the dead! Will no one tell me whence they come. For all my messengers are dumb? What power is this that comes to birth. And breaks my power?" he said.

Then, all around his foundering guns. Though dawn was now not far. The darkness filled with a living fear. That whispered at the Emperor's ear. "The armies of the dead draw near. Beneath an eastern star."

The trumpet blows in Nazareth. The Slave is risen again. Across the bitter wastes of death. The horsemen ride from Nazareth. And the power we mocked as wasted breath.

Returns in power to reign. Rides on, in white, through Nazareth. In making up soft materials like silk, it is well to choose Rowing sleeves.

Christmas Parcels

The Christmas rush is great in normal times. With millions of men under arms it is a tremendous strain on all Postal Staffs, and delays are unavoidable.

In the Old Country 75 per cent. of trained Postal Officials are with the Army, and their work is being done by untrained men and women.

For the Home parcels to reach England before Christmas, the sooner they are posted the surer will their timely delivery
be.

To reach our gallant lads in France, parcels should be despatched as early this month as possible.

Please pack securely. Do not use sharp edged boxes. Square boxes should always have their edges padded.

Postmaster General.
