When our "cute' devised the plan of laying it on the shoulders of certain young men, and thought by trying to ridicule them to make the public think it a laudable answer, he was a long way off his eggs and as far from hitting "It Is So" as the youth who sallied forth gun in hand in search of game and on returning, when asked where his game was, replied that he thought he saw some game, but the first time he fired he missed it and the next time he struck it in the same place. This is "May Be So's case. In his first letter he thought he saw me and fired, but it was a miss shot and before he has finished reading this letter I don't doubt but he will call his second production, a miss shot, also, for if he knew my real name, he would find me a very different person from the one he suspects. But if "May Be So" wishes to come out like a man and throw off his nom de plume and scribble over his real name, I will also sign my real name to my communications and dare say that he would be, as he often is, at his favourite game, again "euchred."
