GENERAL TOWN GREETINGS

SICK HEADACHE

Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Canker Sore Mouth, Cured by Mi-o-na

Sick headaches are caused by indigestion and a general disturbed condition of the stomach.

Cure the indigestion, and the headache, nausea, heart-burn, sour stomach and "all in" feeling will vanish.

Mi-o-na tablets will cure indigestion or any other stomach trouble. They will relieve almost instantly, J. Sutton Clark has so much faith in them that he will give you your money back if they don't.

Mi-o-na cures by making the stomach strong enough to produce enough gastric juices to digest all the food you want to eat. It promptly puts new life and energy into the over-worked and played-out walls of the stomach.

Use Mi-o-na for a week, and you can eat what you want any time you want it, and take pleasure in doing it.

Your blood will be richer, redder, purer, after taking Mi-o-na, and it only costs 50 cents a large box.

Adherents of the anti-cigarette movement should be pleased over the statistics which show that the students of the University of Michigan smoked only 33,180 boxes of cigarettes last year, as against 132,210 cigars. The figures are no doubt authentic.---Exchange.

A jury in the Supreme Court, New York, Friday, awarded $3,000 damages to Mrs. Frieda Lazarovitz, who sued Dr. Philip Sussman, of St. Mark's Place, to recover damages for the death of her son Abraham, sixteen years old, who died from the effects of an overdose of chloroform administered in August, 1909.

When you are offered something for nothing, look for the invisible string. Be up and doing—but be careful what or whom you undertake to do.

New England's Population

(New York World)

New England is the first section to make a complete report under the new census. The six States have a combined population in 1910 of 6,554,000 against 5,594,000 in 1900 and 4,700,000 in 1890. The increase for the decade just concluded is 964,000, against 890,000 for its predecessor.

For more than half a century Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire have been growing very slowly, but the increase in the other three has been invariably large. Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, with a land area of only 14,000 square miles, have 5,024,000 inhabitants. Rhode Island has more than 500 people to the square mile of land area, a density equalled by only three countries of Europe—England, Belgium and Saxony.

It is significant that while these three old and comparatively crowded States are growing so much, Missouri and Iowa, with a combined area of 125,000 square miles, comprising one of the most fertile bodies of land on the globe, have increased only 168,000, this narrow margin being supplied, chiefly by St. Louis and Kansas City, while Iowa itself has suffered a small loss. Missouri has been passed in rank by little Massachusetts, less than one-eighth its size.

It is already evident that the present census is going to make greater changes than any other in the presentation of the States in the lower house of Congress. The Northeast, the South and the Far West are going to gain, while the great agricultural States of the Upper Mississippi and of the Mississippi River Valleys are going to lose.

"Wonder, is there anything between you and the pretty Miss Spaulding?" "Ee-eyes; von mussn't say anything about it, old chap, but every time I've called at the house lately there's been a savage bulldog."

This is a tale of Alaska, a bleak land where men and women fight each other and the relentless elements for the precious gold that lurks beneath the icy soil. Here is told a story of wild ambition, of uncontrolled passion, of men who know no law other than that of their own making; a story of a girl whose beauty and purity plunge her into deepest peril; a story of big men, big events, big thoughts and big hopes. Read of Macia, the fascinating heroine, who loves and is loved; of O'Connell, the man of mystery; of Stark, the killer of men; of Bannon, prince of scoundrels; of "No Creek" Lee, who comes into his own at last; of simple soldier, big hearted Polson Donat; of Lieutenant Burrell, the gallant Kentuckian who carries law and justice into the Yukon wilds and forces desperate men to recognize him as their master.

CHAPTER I.

THE LAST FRONTIER.
MANY men were in debt to the trader at Kamboon, and many counted him as a friend. The latter never reasoned why, except that he had done them favors, and in the north that counts for much. Perhaps they built likewise upon the fact that he was ever the same to all and that in days of plenty or in times of famine his store was open to every man, and all received the same measure. Nor did he raise his prices when the boats were late. They recalled one bleak and wintry autumn when the steamer sank at the Lower Ramparts, taking with her all their winter's food, how he eked out his scanty stock, dealing to each and every one his portion month by month. They remembered well the bitter winter that followed, when the specter of famine haunted their cabins and when for endless periods they clinched their belts and cursed and went hungry to sleep, accepting day by day the ration doled out to them by the grim, gray men at the log stores. Some of them had money belts weighted low with gold washed from the bars at Forty Mile, and there were others who had wandered in from the Koyukout on the great tundra, frowsy and drugging, the legs of their skin boots eaten to the ankle and the taste of dog meat still in their mouths. Broke and dejected, these had fared as well through that desperate winter as their brothers from up river and received pound for pound of tannin flour, strip for strip of rusty bacon, lump for lump of precious sugar. Moreover, the price of no single thing had risen throughout the season.

He mixed in no man's business. He took and paid his dues unflinchingly. He spoke in a level voice, and he smiled but rarely. He gazed at a stranger once and weighed him carefully; thereafter his eyes sought the distances again, as if in search of some visitor whom he knew or hoped or feared would come.

This day he stood in the door of his post staring up the sunlit river, absorbing the warmth of the arctic afternoon. The Yukon swept down around the great bend beneath the high, cut banks and past the little town, disappearing behind the wooded neck below, which masked the approaching steamers till one heard the slight labor of their stacks before he saw their smoke.

The sound of shouting caused him to turn his head. Downstream, a thousand yards away, men were raising a singular racket from the trunk of a slender fir, from which the bark had been stripped, leaving on their tackle as they sang in unison. They stood well upon the river's bank before a group of well made houses, the jared timbers of which shone yellow in the sun. He noted the symmetrical arrangement of the buildings, noted the space about them that had been smoothed for a drill ground and from which the stumps had been removed. He noted that the men wore suits of blue and noted in particular the figure of an officer commanding them.

The idea of the trader's mouth deepened, and his heavy brows contracted.

"That means the law," he murmured half aloud.

He stood so, meditating solemnly, till the fragment of a song hummed lightly by a girl fell pleasantly on his ears, whereupon the shadows vanished from his face, and he turned expectantly, the edges of his teeth showing beneath his mustache, the corners of his eyes wrinkling with pleasure.

The sight was good to him, for the girl approaching down the trail was the same wood sprite, light footed, slender and dark, with twin braids of hair to her waist framing an oval face colored by the wind and sun. She was very beautiful, and a great fever surged up through the old man's veins till he gripped the boards at his side.

"This rush to the upper country has brought in all sorts of people, good, bad—and worse, and the soldiers have been sent to prevent trouble and to hold things steady till the law can be established. The Canadian mounted police are sending all their worst characters down river, and our soldiers have been scattered among the American camps for our protection. I think it's fine."

"Where did you learn all this?" "Lieutenant Burrell told me," she replied, at which her feet regarded her keenly. She could not see the curious look in his eyes, nor did she turn when, a moment later, he repeated sharply at the pipe between his teeth.

"The salmon berries are ripe," she announced, "and the bite back of the village are pink with them. I took Constantine's saw with me, and we picked quarts and quarts. I ate them all!"

Her laughter was like the tinkle of silver bells. Every note of her graceful body was unstrained and glowing with a hint of Indian freedom about it. Heedful and triumphant a native princess, her garments manifested an ornament that spoke of savagery, yet they were neatly cut and held to the pattern of the whites.

"Constantine was drunk again last night, and I had to give him a talking to when we came back. Oh, but I bid him out! He's frightened to death of me when I'm angry."

She furrowed her brow in a scowl—the faintest, most ridiculous nicker of a brow that ever man saw—and drew her red lips into an angry pout as she recounted her temperance talk till the trader broke in, his voice very soft, his gray-blue eyes as tender as those of a woman:

"It's good to have you home again, Macia. The old sun don't shine as bright when you're away, and when it rains it seems like the moss and the grass and the little trees was crying for you. I reckon everything weeps when you're gone, girl, everything except your old dad, and sometimes he feels like he'd have to bust out and join the rest of them."

"I missed you dreadfully, daddy," she said. "It seemed as if those days at the mission would never end. Father Bartram and the others were very kind, and I studied hard, but there wasn't any fun in things without you."

"I reckon you know as much as a priest now, don't you?" "Oh, lots more," she said gravely. "You see, I am a woman."

He nodded reflectively. "So you are! I keep forgetting that!" Their faces were set toward the

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

Did you ever hear any one say they could not get good coffee except in the States?

I have heard it, scores of times, and it's one of the reasons that made me decide to go into the Coffee business.

Of the Americans who visit us in summer, hundreds take home a supply of Red Rose Tea because they have never tasted such good tea before. I determined to put up a coffee that would make for itself just as good a reputation. It has not been easy, but I am sure I have succeeded.

Estabrooks' Red Rose Coffee, put up in sealed tins is—well, it's good coffee. You and your American friends will say so.

Estabrooks' Coffee for breakfast and Red Rose Tea for other meals.

PUBLISH MY LETTER THE WORLD OVER

The Words of Harold P. Bushy, Who was Permanently Cured of Chronic Lumbago by 'Nerviline.'

"Three years ago I discovered that a man subject to lumbago might just as well be dead as alive." These words open the sincere, straightforward letter of H. P. Bushy, a well-known man in the plumbing and tin smithing business in Portland.

"One attack came after another, and lumbago got to be a chronic thing with me. I could scarcely get in a day's work before that knifing, cruel pain would attack my back. I used a gallon of liniments; not one of them seemed penetrating enough to get at the core of the pain. I read in

The Montreal Witness about Nerviline, and got five bottles. It is a wonderful medicine—I could feel its soothing pain-relieving action every time it was applied. When I got the disease under control with Nerviline, I built up my strength and fortified my blood by taking Ferrozone at meals. This treatment cured me permanently, and I urge everyone to give up the thick, white, oily liniments they are using, and try an up-to-date, penetrating, pain destroyer like Nerviline.

"Please publish my letter the world over. I want all to hear of Nerviline."

Don't be cajoled into receiving anything from your dealer but 'Nerviline.' In two sizes, 50c. and 1.25. Sold everywhere or The Cataract Zone Co., Kingston, Ont.

All the World to Meet

One of the most remarkable congresses ever held in London, England, is to take place next year soon after the coronation. It is to be a meeting of East and West, and will be known as the "First Universal Races Congress." It was originated as far back as 1906 by Dr. Felix Adler, professor of Social Ethics of Columbia University, and the responses to the appeal have been so numerous that up to the present more than fifty nations have intimated their intention of being represented.

There are thirty presidents of parliament, a dozen British governors, nearly the same number of prime ministers, 130 professors of international law, more than forty overseas bishops, 120 members of the permanent Court of Arbitration of the second Hague conference. The general secretary is Mr. G. Spiller of Hampstead, England.

The object of the congress is to discuss, in the light of modern knowledge and the modern conscience, the general relations existing between the peoples of the West and those of the East—between the white and the colored people—with a view to encouraging between them a fuller understanding, the most friendly feelings and a heartier co-operation, political questions being subordinated to this comprehensive end.

Fashions in England

It would be interesting to trace the progress of fashion in England from the days of King Alfred, when commerce having extended the arts and sciences and opened up communication with the rest of the world, men began to grow rich and women to study the art of dress. For some centuries England set her own fashions; indeed, it would appear that it was not until after the French revolution, that Parisians began to set the fashions for English women. Once more the signs of the times seem to point to a growing desire in this country to originate our own modes—a desire which the leading London firms are happily in a position to encourage. The Gentlewoman.

A brass chandelier from the ill-starred steamer Portland, lost with all hands in 1898, has been landed at T wharf, Boston, by a fishing schooner. The fixture was hauled up on middle bank, midway between Cape Ann and Cape Cod, on a trawl hook and has been sold for junk. The location where the find was made bears out the oft expressed theory that the Portland went down in that part of the bay.

A Change
"We must economize," he said peremptorily.
"I'm so glad!" his wife exclaimed.
"You take the announcement more good naturedly than usual."
"Yes; it's pleasant to hear you use the plural pronoun. Ordinarily when there is any economizing needed you expect me to do it all."

Waiting for Christmas
(Edgar A. Guest, in Detroit Free Press)
I need new shirts and need 'em badly.
The socks I have are thin and worn;
But wife declares she'll darn 'em gladly.
If I won't buy till Christmas morn,
My collars now are frayed and spitting.
Of gloves I've not a decent pair,
But she declares it wise and fitting.
To wait, I may get things to wear.
My neckties all are torn and tattered,
My slippers out at toe and heel.
My fancy vest is gray spattered,
I think it's pork or lamb or veal.
To buy such things just now she warns me,
Is simply throwing away,
And so, though ragged stuff adorns me,
I'm hanging on till Christmas Day.

An Invitation
A good story is told of an elder in an English church who on one occasion had to take the pulpit in the absence of the minister at the last moment. He got through the first part of the service all right, but on getting up to give the sermon he found his difficulty then. He started with, "Brethren (pause)—b-b-brethren (pause)—b-b-b-brethren, if any of you wants the concept taken out of you come up here."

Disappointing
Bill—Did you say, his first song was disappointing? Jill—Yes. He sang "I Am Going Far Away, Far Away to Leave You Now," and he didn't go.

SUNFLOWER VALUABLE
Both Seed and Stock are Extensively Used in Russia

Americans do not regard the sunflower, which is said to be one of our own native plants, as being of much practical service, but in Russia it is utilized in many ways.

There the seeds are eaten in immense quantities, raw or roasted, as peanuts are in America, and the oil obtained by pressing the seeds is an important article of food. The frequent religious feast days in Russia restrict the use of meat and lead to a large consumption of vegetable oil, and the manufacture of sunflower oil has consequently grown to considerable dimensions in that country. The best seeds yield an oil that compares favorably with olive oil for table purposes.

Even the upper classes in Russia, it is said, eat the seeds, the larger and finer ones being quite equal to most nuts in respect of palatability and wholesomeness. The stalks and dried leaves are highly prized for fuel, being in some parts of the empire almost the only available substitute for wood. An acre of sunflowers will yield many cords of good fuel.

The oil appears to have more of the general properties of olive oil than has any other known vegetable oil. It takes about a bushel of seeds to make a gallon of oil, and fifty bushels of seeds can be grown on one acre of land. As the oil sells at about a dollar a gallon, the profit is large.

At one time purified sunflower oil was used quite extensively to adulterate pure olive oil. It is of a pale yellowish color and decidedly palatable.

In addition to the oil from the seeds, the stalks when green and the oil cake make excellent fodder. The fiber of the stalks, which is fine, silky and strong, also has a value. In China it is woven into beautiful fabrics, and it is believed that by the use of proper machinery it might be used most profitably in this country.

Deafness Cannot be Cured
—by local applications, as they can reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sent for circulars free.
