Is the Scott Act a Failure? IF the report of the Examiner is cor rect, His Honor Judge Peters, in his address to the Grand Jury at the opening of the Supreme Court session here, on the 26th inst. made use of the following words: "Heretofore it was usual for them (the Grand Jury) to enquire into the working of the license law, and hand over the names of the parties who violated it, for prosecution; but owing to the admirable working of the Scott Act. that matter was taken out of their hands," We cannot say if the above quotation is correct, or if it is, whether His Honor used the language of irony or not. One thing certain, however. that the Scott Act does not work admirably, that it does not work at all. admirably or otherwise, that, in fact, it is a dead letter. The letter of the Rev. Edward Whitman, which appeared in Thursday's issue of the paper we have the announcement of His Honor; but if the resources of the country, and a vawhat need is there of quotations or tribute from Ireland to England. The references when every man in Charlotte town knows of his personal knowledge that the Scott Act is laughed to scorn. The daily proceedings in the Magistrate's Court go to shew beyond doubt or cavil that drunkenness prevails now to even a greater extent than it did two years ago. It is evident to the most casual observer that men are seen drunk on our streets ave and women and boy for that matter, that they are ar rested by the police, and punished b such facts do not point to the selling o liquor, and consequent breaches of the Scott Act, we are at a loss to understand what breaches really consist of as also how it is that the Act is so admirably worked. The questions that remain to be answered are, who sell the liquor where is it obtained? and who gain benefit from the sale? Wherever there is smoke it is said there must be fire and where there is drunkenness there must have been liquor, for, as a rule, even the most excitable of natures do not get drunk on spruce beer. The authorities did indeed put on a spurt a few months ago and a few illicit vendors were fined, but there the matter dropped, and either the energy of the parties was exhausted or circumstances arose which discouraged them in further prosecutions. Perhaps both causes operated to bring about the present collapse and the reducing of the Scott Act to a farce; but, however this may be, we emphatically assert that liquor is sold, and men are arrested for drunkenness, while there are no arrests of illicit vendors who pursue their traffic quietly and ostentatiously to their own ring hither are paupers taken from th profit, the disrespecting of the law, and the demoralization of the public generally, but more especially of our young men and boys. It is well known that they are sent here penniless and helpless, the last class obtain the vilest kind of refused point blank by respectable Act was not in force, or rather when i was not the law, for it is at present nothing but a shield for hucksters who rob the revenue and demoralize the community at leisure. As we observed in a former issue of the HERALD, there is but one remedy for the disease which is gnawing at the vitals of the body-politic, and that is to abandon the Act, and make an honest attempt to take advantage of the provisions of the new License Ac soon to be in force throughout the Dominion. Two good objects will b subserved by such a course: We shall have decent liquor substituted for poison if people will persist in drinking, and we shall remove the hypocrisy which delegation has been engendered by framing a law that cannot be enforced. Experience in other places, both in the States and Canada, shows that absolute prohibition is impracticable and fosters a demoraliz ing evasion of law; and not only that, but it begets in a great many a con tempt for the fundamental laws of the land, for if one is violated with im punity, why not others, why not all? The Scott Act is a dead failure.

Pauper Immigration

THE steamer Furnessia, now lying outside Castle Garden, in the harbor of New York, has on board a large number of Irish emigrants who desire to be "immigrants," but who, by order of the American Government, are to be sent back to Ireland whence they eame. At first glance this seems an ssarily harsh proceeding, and impolitic as well; unjust to the intending immigrants, because it prevents them improving their condition in a country where there is ample scope and room for all; and impolitic if it is true that every able-bodied immigrant landing on the shores of the Republic i equivalent to an increase in its wealth to the extent of one thousand dollars. There are, however, matters underlying this Irish emigration question which such it must be examined and criticise It is well known that within the past years an agitation, approaching in ame to a revolution, has been carried nd, assisted by the millions of rishmen on this continent who think it ary to their own status that affairs

attend to their own business and be no longer handicapped in the struggle for existence by having to make enormous annual disbursements, which, though nade to relieve their kindred they are beginning to look upon as a tribute to the landlords. Irishmen on this continent are aware that Ireland can support double—nay, treble—its present mantities of choice provisions are ex orted from it yearly, though its people are for the most part in a state of semistarvation. They are also aware that whether the population be two millions five millions as in 1883, famines ar always on hand, famines not natural bu artificial arising from had government This is speaking roughly. But there are other causes for Irish poverty and famine. Ireland has to pay far more money the people receive for their absentee landlords in the shape of ren accord with which, in fact, means a vast drainage of has been a tribute of love from America but one of stern necessity from Ireland and both branches of the Irish race ar squally anxious that it should cease is a fact that out of twenty million res of the land of Ireland-seventeer of which are arable—there are now bu three millions under cultivation, the other fourteen being dedicated to stock raising for purposes of tribute. Now the absentee landlords, naturally enough would like to see the surplus popu o be fed in some way, and besides they help to swell that terrible agitation which threatens the extinction of land lordism altogether. They think about two millions would be a nice population would be just sufficient to raise stor n the rich pastures of the land when with to pay rent, and all trouble would end, and their system would be perpetu not trouble the landlords; they forget the love of a race for its country strong—indestructible—and that the Irish dislike leaving the land of thei tathers, of a hundred generations back in possession of strangers, although they might really do better elsewhere. This is where the Irish in America step in nd use their powerful influence. Their deat Arthur last week and said to him in effect :- " The British Government, shores; the emigrants they are "assistworkhouses for the most part, agains their own wishes, they are being forced across the waters by the landlord system many of them are incapacitated for whiskey in the dens where it is sold labor. England has great colonies of her Scotia, and was born there on the first of own, why not send there the paupers she raise a prosperous population?" This in substance what the delegation of Irish eaders said to the President, and acting upon their suggestions, instructions wer given to inspect the assisted emigrants This has been done, and the result i that a portion of the unfortunate people will be sent back, and heck given to the benevolent i entions of the Imperial Govern nent in so far as assisted-mea ing forced-emigration is concerned No one can cavil at the action of the American Government in the remises; it was just what might ave been expected, even if the Irish

WHILE agreeing with much of wha ur correspondent "Conservative" says we think he places too much stress the religious aspect of the case. It seldom the Dominion Government mak appointments of their own knowledge of the fitness of things. Except in matters of the very highest importance, men bers of Parliament have the disposal of local patronage. That is the general rule, to which, however, the Pope appointment is a remarkable exception Why the patronage was taken out of the hands of Mr. Breeken, in that instance is what we cannot understand, perhap he does not understand it himself; per haps when he does, we shall all be en ightened, and an intrigue exposed which has been only the last of a great many and which has militated against a cer tain element to a greater extent than most people are aware of. The deceased clergyman was the fifth Gillivray, of Antigonish County, Nova May in the year 1847, on the Gulf shore to the local school, and even in thoigns of intelligence. He next spent term in St. Francis College, Antigonish after which he studied at St. Dunstan Charlottetown. Although apparently of good constitution, young McGillivray was always delicate, even in boyhood and was, for that reason, sent to differ educational reasons. After leaving St Dunstan's, he taught school for a year or so in his native place, but he heyer divested himself of the idea that he was alled to the Church. We find him ne n Frederickton, near Baltimore, Mary and, studying with the Jesuits with th riew of entering that Order, but agai Il health destroyed his prospects, and h left the Jesuit College, with regret, for home and relaxation. Finding his health onsiderably improved, he went to the Quebec Seminary where he studied theo-logy with great assiduity, until once more the state of his health drove him reluctantly home to his friends. His ext essay was at the Trappist College, racadie, N. S. where he remained on rear. He realized the darling object on is ambition on the 6th of June, 1875 when he was ordained at Arichat, C. Three months add be quite long enough for courtship. A property of intalligance should be able to the political millenium has come, and if pointments are to be made by ballot, rue happiness, no matter how rich the arties may be. If a young man felt an in lination for a strictly religious life, if he fel hat he was called to the sacred office of the that be was called to the sacred office of the priesthood, and had the necessary qualifica-tions, he would be committing a grievous fault if he did not obey what were the promptings of God, and he would be respon-sible for the souls he might have saved in this avocation, but did not, owing to having resisted the Divine Will. The Reverend gentleman concluded by relating an anex-jote of some students out on an evening prometada, ope of whom threw a small stone among an assemblate, of does, whereupen cations acknowledged, then I repeat Mr. Brecken should, as you suggest, "ri glote of some students out on an evening pronosiacila, ope of whom threw a small stone among an assemblage, of degs whereupon a howl was immediately set up by the itylured canine. "Which of them is howling: asked a student. "Why, the one that was struck, of course," replied the stone-thrower. The Heverand Father said he had been throwing stones anongst them during his remarks, and that some person may have been struck. Exception might be taken to this or that portion of his discourse; but you may feel sure, he said, that the one who thus expresses his dissatisfaction has been struck. Discussing this little story outside, ope of the audience forcibly remarked: "By jove, it is not a few stones he threw, but a whole handful of sand, which scattered here and there, and struck everyone of us." Perhaps the most powerful sermon preached by the Redemptorists during their stay, was that on Friday night, by Father Baush, on the sin of remarking or a glave of beer or liquor, he said, if it rested there to but it was the abuse of such that was so strongly disapproved of. Before he came to Charlottetown he had been informed that drunkenness was the prevailing source of mischild here: he had received an eight remember. Charlottetown he had been informed to drunkenness was the prevailing source mischief here; he had received an eight-p-letter in which the word "drunkenness" peaared very often indeed. It was an in-to dumb animals to describe man as in "beastly state of intoxication;" the poor beasts never got drunk, they would turn away from liquor in disgust. The majority of people imagina them. beasts never got drunk, they would turn yav from liquor in disgust. The majority of people imagine they are not drunk so long as they can stand on their foet; but this is a mistake. When a man felt liquor in his load, then he was drunk. Drunkenness in taedf, he said, is a fearful sin, but it is also tised, no said, is a learnul sin, but it is also the fruitful author of most of the crimes that stain our annals. On Saturday night Father Wissel gave an exposition of the Laws of the Church. On Sunday morning, at 10 o'clock Mass, Father Smith preached on the devotion to the Mother of God. Father Wissel preach ed the closing sermon on Sunday evening. Now that the Mission was about to close, he had three requests to make. First, that they pray often in the morning, at night, and when tempted; that they approach the Sacraments oftener. It was the experience, and the experience of all the Fathers of the Church, that young men should receive Holy Communion every six weeks, or two months, which was his escond request; and thirdly, to avoid the octasions of sin, several of which he enumerated. The congregation promised to comply with his requests. He expressed his pleasure at the result of the Mission, and sincerely trusted they would persevere in their good intentions must be the confirmed 458 persons. He was assisted in his labors by the Redemptorist Father Smith and Rev. Dr. Grant. Six,—Your paper to-day will announce to your readers the sad intelligence of my poor brother's death. After thanking God for his beautiful death, there is one other duty which I, in my grief for his early death, may not postpone. I have to thank His Lordship Bishop McIntyre for his great kindness to him in health, and, in his last illness, Doctors-Conroy, McLeod and Jenkins, for their unremitting attention and meal while their skill could be of any service; and I am master of no form of words that can set forth my gratitude to the good Sisters, the Grey Nuns, who like ministering Angels stood by him to the last, alleviated his bodily pains, waited upon his every wish, and comforted his dying moments by their holy prayers. A MISSORTUNE that has brought intense grief to many, and extracted sympathy from all, occurred at Richmond Bay on Thursday evening. The accounts received concorning the calamity are conflicting, but all agree thas six persons, all in the bloom of life, met an untimely death by drowning. It appears that a few young gentlemen of Freetown, organized a boating party. In which from twenty-five to thirty young people, belonging, to some of the most respectable families, of Frostown and vicinity took part. They proceeded without accident to Steol's short about a mile from Annan Station, where they hold a pic-mic, and enjoyed themselves to their hearts content in the usual manner of young folks out on a pleasure oxcursion. After lunching and chatting awhile, it was proposed by one of the party that a few of them should have a row, and this being agreed to, an oyster boat was procured and eight got into it, being respectively: Edmund Reeves, Randolph Arbing, Annie Reeves and Emma Reeves, sisters of Edmund, Mary Jane Drummond, Mary Arbing sister of Randolph, Mrs. James Arbing his sisterin-law, and Margaret Effen George. When the boat was out in deep water, but still full in sight of those on shore, it would seem, according to the account of Randolph Arbing, that young Reeves stood up in the boat and commenced rocking in sport, but, having lost his b.lance, leaned to one side in order to recover himself, causing the ricketty old scow to partly keel over, fill, and sink to the gunwale. It seems also that poor Reeves was the first victim, for he fell overboard and was seen no more, while the others clung to the gunwale for dear life; the boat drifted hopelessly and helplessly down the river, while the near relatives and friends of its occupants had to look on in profound despair, being utterly unable to render assistance. Indeed, come of the party on shore was deright for the resulting to the strong current, could proceed no further, though they heard the agonized ries of those they loved best on earth ringing in thir cars, A WISFORTUNE that has brought intens There is to be a grand Tea at Miscouche on the 19th July.
