CHAPTER III.

"Yes—oh, yes," responded Diana quickly. "We shall be very grateful, shall we not, Aunt Mary? You have been so kind, so considerate. Yes, pray help me; pray tell me what I ought to do."

"Well," he said, leaning forward, and looking at her with a curious expression, as if he were on his guard, "if you are so good as to allow me to advise you, I should say: Don't launch out just at first. In fact, if I were you, Miss Bourne, I think I would say nothing about this sudden—good fortune of yours down at Wedbury. There is no need to make this sudden acquisition of wealth; would—er—

—rake up—I mean, allude to your father's long absence." He did not look at Mrs. Burton, but he saw her hand grip the chair tightly, and her lips write. "In fact, you would become public property, and as famous—I was going to say as notorious—as the fashionable beauty, or a popular—actress. And, I am sure, you would not like that kind of fame; would not care to see your portrait in the society journals, with some such line as this under it: 'Miss Bourne, who inherited over a million of money from her father, whom she had not seen since childhood.'"

Diana winced, and shrank back. "Oh, no, no," she said, in a low voice. "I would rather—"

"Not possess the money," he said, with a nod of approval. "Quite so. Now, I would suggest that you—and Mrs. Burton"—he nodded to the elder woman reassuringly and encouragingly, as if he should say: "There is no need for alarm; all is well—take a trip abroad for a time. You can go round the world, if you like. You have almost enough money to construct a railway to the moon. Go where you like, stay as long as you like, enjoy yourself. While you are away, I will look out for a nice little house to which you can come when you are tired of globe-trotting. Then you yourself shall choose a larger place, an estate suitable to so wealthy a young lady, a house in town, and the rest of it. Oh, but forgive me"—he broke off, with an air of apology—"I am taking it for granted that you will wish me to remain in the position of your solicitor and adviser."

"Yes, yes," said Diana eagerly. "Of course I do. I shall be only too grateful if you will be my friend, as you were once that of my dead father, and will take care of this money, and will look after Aunt Mary and me."

Mr. Fielding smiled. "The latter will be the pleasantest part of my duty, believe me, Miss Bourne," he said, with a smile. "I have your late father's affairs in hand, and I will go into them, and watch over your interests. You will stay in town for a time, of course; I should recommend—"

He mentioned one of the grandest and most expensive of the London Hotels.

Diana's face fell, and she looked at her aunt wistfully.

"Oh, must we?" she said hesitatingly, and with evident reluctance. "I—I should like to go back to Wedbury at once. I may have so short a time to stay there; and I want to see as much of the children—before I leave them forever."

Mr. Fielding laughed, and for quite a minute his keen eyes softened, as they dwelt upon the beautiful face of the great heiress, whose eyes were dim at the thought of leaving a parcel of children.

"Very well, then," he said. "Go back by all means. But you must write to me; come and see me whenever you want to do so. Please do not forget that you may have as much money as you want. Ah, yes; we will open that account. I'll go down with you to the bank at once."

He rose, and rang for his hat, which the clerk brought and offered to him, with an air of one performing a religious ceremony. Mr. Fielding drew on his gloves, looking under his eyelids, and smiling at the two timid women.

"Come, then," he said. "The bank is not far; we will walk, shall we?"

He opened the door for them to precede him, and Diana passed out. Mrs. Burton was following her, but paused, and, going back to the room, picked up a glove which she had let fall from her nervous hands. Mr. Fielding waited for her, and she drew near to him, and beckoned him to approach. Her lips moved for a second, but silently, as if the words she wanted to speak would not come; then she said, in a whisper that was almost audible:

"You will not tell her?"

He raised his eyebrows, and regarded her with faint surprise, as if he pretended that he did not understand her.

"Tell her? My dear lady, what is there to tell Miss Bourne?"

Her lips quivered, and she plucked at them, with a shaking hand, her eyes fixed imploringly on his.

He shook his head at her rebukingly.

"My dear Mrs. Burton, let the dead past bury its dead. Why should you and I disinter it? Not only shall I not tell this charming and beautiful girl that which you and I know, but I shall forget it. I have done so already. Let me advise you to do the same. We shall only be following the example of the world. Everything is forgotten. Tell her! It would be worse than cruel—it would be foolish. We lawyers are obliged to be cruel, but, believe me, we are never fools—if we can help it. You have found your glove, Mrs. Burton? Right! Then come along. Sorry to keep you waiting, my dear Miss Bourne. Your aunt dropped her glove. What lovely weather! The sun is shining on you, my dear young lady! May it long continue to shine!"

CHAPTER IV.

Dalesford rode home quite quietly—for him; and much to the surprise of Jess, who was accustomed to going hard when her master was on her back, especially at night.

A groom came across the stable yard to take the horse, and Dalesford signed to him to lead the mare under the lamp, and passed his hands over her forehead. There was a little had been partly erased by the demon washerwoman.

"Till ask—I must call—"

His pale face colored, and he frowned, for it had suddenly occurred to him that to meditate a flirtation with this girl, who had, in all probability, saved his life, was a mean way of requiting her heroism. The kindest thing he could do would be to refrain from intruding upon her; the world does not approve of friendship between the heirs to earldoms and young and beautiful schoolmistresses.

It was an unusually virtuous resolution for Dalesford, and he registered it with a certain amount of reluctance, for Diana's face and voice haunted him pleasantly and invitingly. He went to bed, at last, and slept the sleep which comes so readily to him of the sound constitution; but, when he was awakened in the morning by Gordon, he was annoyed to find that his face was disfigured by a bruise across the temple, and that the edges of the wound had swollen.

Gordon respectfully suggested the doctor; but Dalesford laughed.

"Nonsense! You used to be rather good at black eyes and cuts, Gordon; surely, you can cope with this!"

IOWA WOMAN TELLS OTHERS

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Carried Her Safely Through Change of Life.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—"At the Change of Life the doctor said I would have to give up my work and take my bed for some time as there was no help for me but to lie still. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and kept up my work and now I am over the Change and that is all I took. It was better for me than all the doctor's medicines I tried. Many people have no faith in patent medicines but I know this is good."—Mrs. E. J. RICKETS, 354 8th Avenue, West, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, back-aches, dizziness, nervousness, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, spots before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

her shoulder, and Dalesford pointed to it, and bade the groom bathe it.

"A fall, my lord?" asked the man, looking up at his lordship's stained forehead—the bandage had long ago been transferred to Dalesford's pocket—whether a spot or two of blood was showing.

Gordon, his man, was waiting for him, and as he took his master's hat, at once saw the wound. But he was too well trained to make any remark, or to ask any questions; and, having valeted Dalesford, respectfully bade his lordship "Good night." Dalesford responded courteously, but absently, and as the man reached the door, called him back.

"I met with an accident this evening, Gordon," he said. "Call me a little later, will you? And, Gordon, there is no need to mention it, please."

"Certainly, my lord," responded Gordon, with a slight air of surprise, as if the injunction was quite unnecessary.

After he had gone, Dalesford lit a cigar, sank into an easy chair, and smoked and thought hard.

"I suppose that fellow would have settled me if she had not come up," he said to himself. "A plucky girl. He very nearly struck her, the hound!—and beautiful, too, I think! I wish I could have seen her face distinctly—a musical voice—a lady, evidently. What's she doing in that cottage? Ah, yes, the school cottage. That is, it, of course. She is the schoolmistress. I should like to see her again. I wonder what her name is."

He took the handkerchief from his pocket, and examined it. There was the faint trace of some initials, which

An Old, Family Cough Remedy, Home-Made

It overcomes the usual coughs, throat and chest colds in 24 hours—relieves even whooping cough quickly—and is excellent, too, for bronchitis, bronchial asthma, hoarseness and spasmodic croup.

Get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-ounce bottle, and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and tastes good.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. It quickly loosens the dry, hoarse or painful cough, and also heals the inflamed membrane. It also has a remarkable effect in overcoming the persistent loose cough by stopping the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes. The effect of pine on the membrane is known by almost every one. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with glycerol and other natural healing pine elements.

There are many worthless imitations of this famous mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else.

GERMANS IN BRITISH UNIFORM ATTEMPT TO LEAD CONVOY INTO AMBUSH.

Paris, Oct. 23.—Watching each and every move in order to take advantage of the slightest weakness at any point, the two great armies continued violent attacks and counter attacks throughout last night and today, according to statements made by officers and men reaching here from various parts of the battle line.

These assaults did not effect any noticeable change in the positions, although the allies were compelled to give way a little at La Bassee, thirteen miles southwest of Lille.

At Armentieres also the fighting was very stubborn, and the allies gained some more ground.

Two officers in British uniforms today brought to a halt the motors belonging to an ammunition convoy as it was pushing to the British lines at Armentieres with supplies.

"Halt! You are running right into German trenches," was the command given to the convoys.

The captain in command went and spoke to the two officers, who were driving a British auto. After a few words passed, the captain noted the men who issued the order spoke with a slight accent, whereupon he drew his revolver and shot both his supposed comrades.

At the same moment a squadron of German cavalry appeared a short distance away.

The British captain then ordered his truck drivers, most of whom were London motor bus chauffeurs, to dismount with their rifles and take a position in a ditch beside the road in order to defend the convoy. The Germans were about to charge and a detachment of German infantry had arrived on the scene, but from the other side a French battalion appeared. A sharp fight ensued and the Germans retired with heavy losses. The ambulance had been well prepared.

Textile Industries Will Be Kept Busy.

Ottawa, Oct. 22.—Canadian textile industries will be kept busy all winter supplying orders from the British War Office for immense quantities of sweaters, socks, woollen underwear and blankets, for which orders are being placed by the British purchasing agents now in Canada.

They are asking Canadian firms to supply if possible, one million sweaters and coats for army purposes, 1,000,000 pairs of socks, 40,000 blankets and large orders for underwear and sheepskin coats. The prices and quality are fixed according to standard regulations by the British War Office.

A large number of contractors are now in Ottawa conferring with the British agents in regard to taking at least a share of the orders to be placed. One difficulty is that the War Office regulations provide for inspection of the finished product in London, instead of in Canada, and on request of the Canadian manufacturers it is probable that arrangements will be made for having the goods accepted here.

Another difficulty is in regard to getting sufficient supplies of raw wool in Canada. British manufacturers are also looking for wool and there has been a rush to secure supplies from the United States. As a result prices there have been advanced twenty per cent. in the last few days. Canadian supplies of wool are said to be very much below present requirements.

Now is the time to lift the heart on high. Now, when the sun is darkened in the sky. Now when the fair, long-cherished hope departs. Lift up your hearts!

The glad feet of the messengers of peace Turn from us, and the sounds of laughter cease, and the sounds of Death strides across our path and shakes his darts. Lift up your hearts!

Are there no footprints in the road we tread? No voices of the forgotten dead Bidding us stand like men and take our parts? Lift up your hearts!

Ice in the Baltic and North Sea.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Would you mind giving me the following information through the Evening Telegram:
1. How much of the Baltic Sea freezes over, and when? Would it interfere with naval engagements?
2. The same about Kiel Canal.
3. Does the water between the main land and Helgoland freeze over?
If you could manage this you would oblige many of the general public. I may also say I enjoy very much your editorial and other matter you are writing up on the war.
Yours truly,
BULL DOG.

Oct. 24, 1914.
[We can find little about the matter. We believe, however, that the Gulf of Bothnia freezes over from side to side in severe winters and that the ports of the Gulf of Finland also are frozen up from November to March.

As to the Kiel Canal, we have no knowledge, but we do not believe it is ice-bound.
As to the third question, we have never heard of the sea in the vicinity of the British Isles, Germany, Holland or Belgium freezing over. Nor does Arctic ice drift down these waters. So far as we know there is nothing in the way of ice in winter to prevent naval manœuvres around Helgoland, off the Kiel Canal, in the North Sea or Baltic.—Ed.]

From Grates Cove.

A very pretty wedding took place here last evening, when Mr. Thomas Martin and Miss Katherine Stringer, a popular young couple of Grates Cove, were united in matrimony, the Rev. Mr. Higgin officiating. The bride, charmingly dressed, was attended by Mrs. Abandon Holder, Misses Maude Avery, Virtus Benson and Jane Noel; Messrs. J. Hodder, C. S. Benson, E. Martin and E. Stanford acted as groomsmen. After the nuptial knot was tied a short address was given on behalf of the bride and groom by the Pastor, then the bridal party proceeded to their future residence where a reception was held and the health of the bride and groom enthusiastically toasted. Mr. and Mrs. Martin were the recipients of many useful presents evidencing the esteem in which they are held among their friends.

Rebellion Crushed.

The news that the rebel, Lieut-Col. Maritz has been completely defeated will be read with satisfaction. The scene of his defeat was Gordon's district in the north of Cape Colony, above the Orange River and to the East of German South West Africa. The fact that Maritz had wounded German territory gives point to the defeat. We have no doubt the troops of the Union will now be satisfied with the smashing of the Maritz rebels but they will follow the victory up in due course by attacking the German forces in South Africa, which fomented this rebellion and the invasion of British territory. Sufficient time has now elapsed to allow of developments in the rebellion if such developments were likely, and the fact at the Maritz rebellion remains an isolated affair, show that there is no further development to be feared. Botha and Smuts have lived up to their duty and they seemed to have the support of the overwhelming majority of both British and Boer in South Africa. The Boer has tried free institutions under the British Crown. He has no hankering after the Kaiser and his Yunkers.

A Contrast.

To-day is the anniversary of the surrender of Metz by Marshal Bazaine in 1870. This anniversary is a date for a contrast of the situations now and then in the Western theatre of war. True it is that the campaign opened almost a fortnight later this year than in 1870. But time was not as important a factor in that war as it is in the present war, so that the fortnight may be passed by as a negligible factor in the fight. In 1870 by October 27th, the French resistance was generally speaking, destroyed. On October 27th, 1914, French resistance has established a line from the borders of Switzerland, through a part of Germany, along Northern France to the Straits of Dover. The French resisting force is changing in character and turning from a defensive force into an offensive force. By October 27th, 1870, France had suffered many disasters of a decisive character. At Weissenberg and Worth severe defeats had been sustained. The eight French Corps after these defeats had been consolidated into two armies; one under Bazaine with headquarters at Metz, and the other under MacMahon with headquarters at Chalons. In the battle of Colombey-Neuilly, Von Moltke prevented the junction of these two armies. On Sept. 1st MacMahon was overwhelmed and surrendered at Sedan and Bazaine surrendered Metz on Oct. 27th. In this campaign there have been no decisive disasters to the French. They have the assistance of the British, with their ever increasing strength, and the Belgians. Moreover the Germans and their allies the Austrians have their hands full in the Eastern theatre of war, where the Russians appear to be able to meet any force they can advance to the fighting line, which the Russians are able to choose themselves. With the French army intact, with the Russian forces steadily pushing to the Eastern front, with the British mounting new armies, the outlook is distinctly favourable for the allies. Not only have the Germans failed to live up to the strategy the year 1914 demanded of them, but they have not in any way approached their deeds of 1870.

For those who suffer from sudden and acute headaches they are of especial value. Price 25 cts. a box.

St. Pierre Bulletin

OFFICIAL, Midnight 26th.—During yesterday our front has been maintained. The crossing of the Yser Canal by the Germans between Nieport and Dixmude was effected, but the Germans have not progressed at all since. Our front extends along from the north to Roulers, Armentiers, Lille. The Germans have had very heavy losses in recent engagements. In Russia, the Russian offensive is continuing, the latter captured prisoners and war stuffs. Germans have been thrown back at several points and the Russians crossed the Vistula River. South of Prmysl the battle is continuing favorable to the Russians.

MAY WINTER IN THE AISNE.

LONDON, To-day.
A correspondent of the Morning Post, writing from a point near Rheims on Saturday, discussing the situation in the Eastern part of the Aisne Valley says it is possible that the Germans intend to hold this line all the winter, and if they fortify their positions it is quite possible that they can do so. It is certain that they can make no further move forward in the French territory.

BELGIAN ARMY'S BRAVE STAND.

PARIS, To-day.
To-day began another 24 hours of waiting for news from the north where the fiercest fighting of the war is now going on. Concerning the progress of the Allies, the announcement that the Germans had been unable to make headway after their costly crossing of the Yser Canal brought keen satisfaction to the people of the capital. Previous to this statement the movements of the enemy in the north had awakened disquietude in the public mind. Unofficial explanations following this news, namely, that in an attempt particularly violent by an adversary powerful and tenacious, such affairs were inevitable.
It was said that at one point where the Germans were able to gain momentarily, this could not exercise much influence on the operations generally; stress also was laid on the difficult ground which the enemy had to traverse; that a similar movement which turned out unsuccessful was the attempt recently made by Germans on the River Meuse, at St. Mihiel. These constant violent attacks which were so costly would also, military men pointed out, manifestly wear down the Germans little by little. Theories regarding the exact purpose of the movement of invaders varied, but the allies seemed sure today of further maintaining their positions.

News from Furnes on route to Dunkirk which presumably is objective of the Germans tells of the heroism displayed by the Belgian army which withstood the violence of the German cannonade and the mass attacks of infantry without flinching.

EARTHQUAKE AT FLORENCE.

Wreckage Found.

SUPPOSED TO COME FROM H.M.S. NIOBE.

Mr. R. G. Reid received the following message from Robinson's Head, yesterday afternoon:

"They are picking up wreckage at Bank Head with Niobe marked on a door. The people at Heatherton heard guns, and explosions two or three times on Saturday night. It was pieces of doors. They also say they heard a ship blow on Saturday night."

After communicating with the Premier, Mr. Reid instructed the agent at Robinson's Head to investigate and wire fuller details, and this second message came to Mr. Reid:

"It was William Young who picked up the boards on yesterday at Middle Bank and James Harry picked up some this morning at Fischells. They saw a good many pieces."

Superintendent Stott, of the Postal Telegraphs received the following message from the operator at Robinson's Head:

"A man here from Bank Head says he saw wreckage and described it as two pieces of panel partition 8 x 5, painted white on one side. The reverse was black with electric wire running along it, and one board 7 x 1 painted white, with the letters Niobe painted across in black."

The foregoing messages have given rise to an unnecessary amount of anxiety, as it is believed by many that H.M.S. Niobe has been in action. The fact of the ship being in the vicinity of Robinson's Head on Saturday last naturally strengthened the theories expressed regarding her. From various reliable sources we have made enquiries, and find that no particular importance need be attached to these reports of war in a common practice in war time to throw all movable matter from the decks. The necessity of this is obvious because of the danger to life that would result from splinters from these moveable articles, if struck by a shell from the enemy. In the battleships of the older type no boats are carried and when preparing for action the decks are stripped of everything that may cause unnecessary danger to life or limb, or to the ship itself, by furnishing material for fire that may be caused by the explosion of a shell amongst this matter. In the modern battleships the same precautions are taken in a different manner. They carry their boats but the ships are specially laid out for that in the building, and when ready for action the boats are filled with water, so as to prevent them taking fire. Then in case of an emergency they may be used by simply letting out the water. The Niobe belongs to the older class, as also the French cruiser Friant. Thus we should not become unnecessarily alarmed when material of this sort is picked up on the coast, as we understand that when H.M.S. Niobe was being sunk she was not completely ready for action, and the wreckage alluded to in the foregoing messages, is without a doubt some unnecessary woodwork that was voluntarily thrown off from the ship.

Three Germans Arrested.

AT HARBOUR GRACE.

Sergt. Benson and Const. Farly arrived by late train last night from Harbor Grace, bringing along three German prisoners of war named Otto Rasch, aged 26; Tobias Floerpack, 16, and Wilhelm Lembeck, 16. These three Germans were arrested at H.R. Grace yesterday and were members of a crew of a vessel that arrived there recently. This morning they were transferred to the Penitentiary.

No particulars as to the origin of the fire was received.

THE SWING OF DEATH.
The circus performers at Rousley's are a very wonderful pair, and attract large audiences. This is a very novel act and shows what training can do. The frog man or the horizontal bar and rings, and Serpenteo on the Swing of Death. This clever little act appears to be just as much at home on her dizzy perch as on the stage. Last night hundreds could not gain admittance on the first show. But as those wonderful people give two complete performances each night it gives all a chance to see this very novel act. The moving pictures are certainly up to the standard of high class pictures now seen at the Rousley Theatre. A very large audience gathered with the most interesting slides ever seen and one of the finest model machines ever brought into the country.

BRITAIN AND CONTRABAND.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26. The British Ambassador, by instructions of Sir Edward Grey, has issued a warning to American shippers, through the State Department, to consign all cargoes for neutral countries to neutral governments, or to a specific consignee. Two notes addressed to the Acting Secretary of State say that British cruisers will not interfere with neutral commerce when shipments are properly consigned. With respect to mineral oils and articles listed as conditional contraband, the notes say that the British will seize no cargoes, if the papers of the ship show their ultimate destination to be neutral. Only in cases where cargoes have been consigned to order, the note points out that the British Government has been exercising scrutiny.

AN OPTIMISTIC REPORT.

PARIS, Oct. 26. Advice this morning indicate a general advance by the Allies in the region between Nieuport and Ypres, as well as east of Arras.

NIUEPORT BOMBARDED.

PARIS, Oct. 26.—(Official.) In Belgium, Nieuport has been violently bombarded, and the effort of the Germans has continued on the front between Nieuport and Dixmude without, according to latest advices, any result whatever having been reached. All the front between La Bassée and Somme has been equally the object of violent attacks by night, all of which were repulsed. On the remainder of the front there is nothing to report.

'BRINDELLA' RELEASED.

LONDON, Oct. 26. The British Government, satisfied after examination, of the innocence of the destination of her cargo, has ordered the release of the American oil tank steamer Brindella, which will now be permitted to proceed from Halifax to Alexandria.

SHACKLETON GONE SOUTH.

BUENOS AYRES, To-Day. The British Antarctic Expedition, headed by Lieut. Sir Ernest Shackleton, departed southward to-day.

CASUALTY LIST.

LONDON, To-Day. The casualty list issued last night, dated Oct. 25 and 26, reported 15 officers killed, 42 wounded and 17 missing. Among wounded is Lieut. Philip Lee Brocklehurst, who accompanied the British Antarctic Expedition in 1905.

CAPTURED TWO GUNS.

LONDON, To-Day (Official). The situation continues satisfactory. Fighting is severe and continuous, but ground has been gained and many prisoners have been taken. One of our divisions has captured two guns.

MARITZ DEFEATED COMPLETELY.

CAPE TOWN, To-Day (Official). The rebel Lieut.-Colonel Maritz and his forces have been defeated completely at Kakemais in Gordons district by Union of South African troops. Maritz was wounded in the engagement and fled to German territory.

RUSSIAN SUCCESSES.

PARIS, To-Day. The Havas Agency received from Petrograd the following official communication issued at the Russian capital: Combats on the routes leading to Petrokoff and Radom have assumed the character of a great battle of which the front extends over 100 versts (versts is two-thirds of a mile), from Rawa to Norwemlasts, on the River Bzanka. On the evening of Oct. 24th at North Rawa we attacked the Germans at the point of the bayonet, inflicting on them considerable losses. In the village of Marchld alone we buried over 700 Germans. In the bayonet combat in the village near Mahemarjoff we captured two batteries of machine guns. Our troops command the forest of Nenglove, south-east of Rawa, where we took over 400. In the forest between Radom and Kozentiz a tenacious combat continued. We have progressed along the routes from Nova Alexandria where we captured numerous prisoners and cannons. The stubborn resistance of the Austrians in Galicia is weakening and our troops are making vigorous progress in the region south of Sambor and Staromlasto, where we took 11 cannon and many caissons. The entire valley of the River Sprynie is covered with bodies of the enemy and aggregate 5,000. All attempts by the Germans to resume a partial offensive on the Eastern Prussian front have been repelled.

11.00 A.M.

NOT WORTH WHILE.

LONDON, To-day. The British Government has not given a direct ruling on the question of taking reservists from neutral ships and is not expected to do so, until the number of reservists becomes so great as to constitute a real military menace. Meanwhile the Government feels that the number of reservists is so small that their detention is not worth the friction which it might cause.

LONDON, To-day.

The Government has been so successful in cornering the sugar supply and accumulating large stores that it is announced the gross wholesale price will be reduced 60c. per hundred weight which will make a maximum retail price of seven cents per pound for good granulated and eight cents per pound for good cube.

30 PEASANTS DROWN.

DOVER, To-day. The steamer Admiral Catesman was sunk to-day by explosion just outside Boulogne Harbor. Thirty were drowned owing to a panic which prevailed as the passengers were being transferred to the steamer Queen which rushed to the assistance of the sinking vessel. Most passengers were peasant from Pas de Calais who had been taken aboard at Calais to be transferred to Boulogne.

GALLANT ACTION OF INDIAN TROOPS.

LONDON, To-day. A despatch to the Daily Telegraph dated Northern France, gives the first instance of British Indian troops coming into action. It was at La Bassée last week, says the despatch, when by a great effort, the Germans carried the British trenches and the position looked dangerous. An avalanche of the enemy poured through, evidently supposing that the way was open to the coast. They had a rude awakening. The supports of the British line were Indian troops who had been striving to prove their quality. It was a bayonet affair and the German advance was beaten and broken. The Indians ran through them, using steel in their own workmanlike fashion, and thrusting the foe back to receive the right and left fire of British infantry who awaited their coming. Not only did the Indians regain the lost trenches, but they pursued the enemy down hill until their officers thought it prudent to recall them.

ITALIANS OCCUPIED ALBANIA PORT.

"The Badge of Policeman O'Roon,"

An American Standard 2 reel feature. The Earl of Ardsley casts off his son, who goes to America and as a volunteer takes part in the Spanish-American war, and later becomes Policeman O'Roon of the New York Mounted.

"OUT OF THE PAST" is a pathetic melo-drama produced by the Crystal Company, featuring Pearl White.

"MRS. LACEY'S LEGACY" is a very funny comedy. Mrs. Lacey is left $5,000.00. How she loses it and finds it again is comically illustrated in this picture.

FREDERICK KNIGHTS, Tenor, sings "The Message of the Violets" from the great New York operatic success "The Prince of Pilsen."

Bearing Other People's Discomforts.

By RUTH CAMERON.

A group of people were planning a pleasure trip. One of the women in the group said, "I don't like to go, but I'm afraid they would be late getting home and it would be uncomfortable for me." "Of her two most intimate friends who were of the party, one urged her to come, assuring her that they would get back early, and it couldn't possibly be cold at that time of year. The other friend was silent. When the party had started without the hanger back, the friend who had urged turned to the friend who had been silent. "Why didn't you urge Gertrude to come?" she demanded. "Don't you think she would have had a fine time if she had just made up her mind to come?" "Yes," said the other woman. "I think she would have, but I didn't want to feel nervous all the time for fear she wouldn't. I don't think it can possibly be cold, but if it is, I don't want to have to suffer her discomfort as well as mine, and that's what it would mean if I urged her to go. I've had too many experiences of that kind, and I don't like that kind of responsibility. I used to urge people to do things I thought they would enjoy, but now I let them choose for themselves. There's nothing in the world more uncomfortable than to feel you're being blamed for another person's discomfort. I can stand my discomfort, but I can't stand other people's."

What do you think of this woman's philosophy? Despite the fact that when you boil it down, it has a little selfishness in the residue of motives. I must say it has a good deal of common sense, too. When you urge any course upon a person you take upon yourself a certain responsibility for the desirability of that course. He becomes privileged to feel aggrieved towards you if he is disappointed. Can you afford to grant such a privilege? Aren't you pledging your peace of mind too freely when you endorse any line of conduct with your promise of happiness or success?

I verily believe that this is the reason the average wife gives in to her husband so much,—because it is easier to give up her way than to have her way and be responsible in case things do not turn out right. The instinct to blame someone for everything is especially strong with men and peculiarly so with husbands, and when you consider how meekly women have always permitted this, you cannot blame the men any more than you can blame an engine for blowing off steam when the outlet is given it. Put of course that makes it the line of least resistance for a wife to permit her husband to have his way rather than to risk an avalanche of blame and aggravation when she has hers.

To have one's own way and to help shape the course of one's friends and relatives is pleasant and desirable, but there are many times when peace of mind and freedom from responsibility for untoward events is better.

Patriotic Concert at Channel.

A concert under the auspices of the Ladies' Patriotic Committee, was given in the Parish Hall, on Thursday and Friday evenings last, the net proceeds of which, amounting to a substantial sum, being devoted to the objects for which the Committee was formed, viz., Patriotic Purposes.

A most interesting programme had been prepared, which was presented to a crowded house, and carried through in a highly satisfactory manner. A most amusing incident occurred on Thursday night during the rendition of the Army marching chorus, "It's a long way to Tipperary" and one which the audience thoroughly enjoyed, though it was no joke for the performers, and was, perhaps, on the whole, the sole un-rehearsed item in the bill. Either the Germans had been at work sowing mines beforehand or their emissaries had been tampering with the stage mechanism, for during the march to the chorus of the "Tipperary" the centre sections of the stage collapsed, and those who were standing on that particular portion went below. Notwithstanding the surprise, all hands soon got on deck, or at least on as much of it as was left standing, and the work of rescue commenced. Not being able to restore the stage again the next best thing was done, and the "Tipperaries" took it completely down.

Advantage was taken of the momentary stay of proceedings to serve tea to the audience, during which time first aid to the wounded was rendered; injuries being more to the mind than to the body, which gave an admirable opportunity to the swains to administer consolation to the startled but by no means daunted, fair ones. So soon as matters were straightened out the company formed up again, and the call "Are we downhearted?" was responded to by a thunderous NO! And we weren't, and reached Tipperary without further accident.

At the conclusion of the programme a Tableau representing the British Empire was set, which pleased and delighted the audience.

Great praise is due all the ladies who assisted in the arrangements, especially Miss E. H. Edgar to whose initiative most of the success of the whole affair was due. The gentlemen as well must not be forgotten. They rendered valuable assistance which contributed much toward the desired end. Lastly, to the general public who so liberally patronised both nights, the thanks of the Company are given.

Repetition on Friday night was held to be even a greater success than was made Thursday; the singers being repeatedly encored, and the "Tipperary" corps had to respond three times and even then the audience like the late Mr. Oliver Twist, wanted more.

Joint and Muscle Pains Banished by Nerviline.

IT CURES RHEUMATISM.

Thousands of people, chock full of the joy of living—happy, glad, bright people, that Nerviline has cured of their pains, all tell the same wonderful story of its power to drive out the aches and tortures of rheumatism and kindred ills.

"My goodness, but Nerviline is a miracle-worker," writes Mrs. Charlotte Chipman, mother of a well-known family residing at Mount Pleasant. "Last month I was crippled up with sciatica and muscular rheumatism as to be almost unable to do a bit of housework. My joints were so stiff and the muscles so frightfully sore that I even cried at times with the pain. For years we have used Nerviline in our family and I just got busy with this wonderful good old ointment. Lots of rubbing with Nerviline soon relieved my misery and I was in a real short time about my work as usual."

No matter where the ache is, no matter how distressing the pain you can rub it away with Nerviline. For forty years it has been curing lumbago, sciatica, backache, colds, chest trouble and all sorts of winter ills. Keep a large 50c. family size bottle handy and you'll be saved lots of trouble and have smaller doctor bills. Small trial size 25c. at dealers everywhere.

If Catarrh Keeps You Hawking Use 'Catarrhzone'—The Quickest Cure

NOTHING KNOWN SO SURE FOR THROAT WEAKNESS, BRONCHIAL TROUBLES, ETC.

No doctor attempts to-day to cure a genuine case of catarrh or bronchitis except by the inhalation method. Stomach dosing has been discarded because useless medicine so taken affects only the stomach—never reaches the seat of catarrh.

The advanced physician recognizes that only air can be sent into the lungs and bronchial tubes. Fill this air with healing medicaments and you solve the problem. No combination of antiseptics is so successful as Catarrhzone. It contains the richest pine-balsams and the greatest healers known.

One breath of Catarrhzone instantly circulates over the area that is afflicted with catarrh. Relief is instant—suffering stops at once—germs are destroyed—every taint of disease is removed. Think it over seriously. Here is a remedy that clears the throat, relieves hoarseness, coughing and bad breath. Irritating phlegm is cleared out, inflamed bronchial tubes are healed, throat and voice are strengthened. Catarrhzone is pleasant and certain. You breathe Catarrhzone—you don't take it. Large 75c. size is guaranteed; smaller size 50c., and trial size 25c. at all dealers everywhere.

Stop Coughing.

Divorced Life

The Doctor of Moods

"What's back of all this sudden unhappiness?" demanded Challoner curiously.

Marian looked into his eyes, and found herself weakening almost to the point of being ready to reveal the whole matter, how she had been duped into becoming the object of the young spender's charity, and the manner in which her discovery of the fact had plunged her into shame and despair.

But she pulled herself together with a sudden resolution. She felt that if she told Challoner she would drop far and hard in his estimation. Perhaps not; yet it was a chance she had not the nerve to hazard. She felt that part of Challoner's interest in her had grown out of his belief that she was selling things to magazines under the stiffest competitive conditions. She lacked the courage to give up this advantage, and perhaps forfeit not only his regard but his interest.

"Tell me," urged Challoner. "What makes you so miserable? It hurts me to see you so. Isn't there something I can do to help you?"

"Nothing," answered Marian with a smile. "It's really nothing. A black devil of a mood, I guess, more than anything else."

"May I walk with you?"

"Surely. Dispel this horrible mood, and I'll deluge you with smiles."

"The promised reward is a thousandfold too generous. It is incommensurate with the trifling task."

"Trifling task! Achieve it, and you will be doing the oceans of service!"

They talked on, fencing with alibi sentences.

At length he said: "I am tempted to eschew the law, and to establish myself in the merry profession of doctor of moods."

"In that case, I fear that I should be unable to see any more of you. Only the wealthy could command your services—unless you decided to conduct free clinics on the board-walk, and could use me occasionally for experimental purposes."

"You would make a wonderful subject. Already you're doing remarkably under my treatment. By the way, I'll be glad to see you again."

Keep Steel Men Back.

At the Crescent.

The patrons of the Crescent Picture Palace were delighted to hear Mr. Frederick Knights again last night after being almost a week laid off with a cold. Mr. Knights sang "The Message of the Violets," the favorite tenor song from "The Prince of Pilsen." This beautiful song is just suited to Mr. Knight's fine tenor voice and it is a pleasure to hear him sing it. The two-reel feature picture "The Badge of Policeman O'Roan" is produced by the Eclair American Standard Picture Co. and like all their productions, the photography is perfect and varied; the English Home and Estate of the Earl of Ardsley, the harbor and city of New York and other scenes are all splendidly depicted. The melo-drama "Out of the Past" is an old story told in a new way by the Crystal Photo Play Co. "Mrs. Lacey's Legacy" is the laughing picture and is going to make you laugh anyhow. The same programme will be repeated to-night and if you want a good hour's amusement go to the Crescent.

Sulphate of Ammonia.

St. John's Gas Light Company. Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works, and I found 20.5 per cent. of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manures. Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

Fishery Reports.

Oct. 21. From F. W. Power (Oderin)—The total catch is 1400 qts. and for last week 50. Three schrs. arrived from the grounds on the 17th. There is very little squid obtainable for bait and the fishery is practically over, almost all the boats, dories and skiffs having given up the voyage.

Oct. 17. From J. E. Long (Jean de Bay to Beau Bois).—Prospects are poor and the supply of bait is very limited. The fishery is fast drawing to a close, and owing to stormy weather and scarcity of bait no cod was brought in this week. Thirty boats but no dories or skiffs, are fishing. The total catch is 5892 qts. but for last week nil.

OUTPORT CRAFT. — Upwards of two hundred outport craft are now in port discharging fish cargoes and loading supplies. Several of them are ready for their home ports, and are awaiting a favorable opportunity to sail.

Look to the food. Eat heartily of hot breads, hot biscuit, hot cakes, made light and tasty with Royal Baking Powder, and snap your fingers at dyspepsia. It is the tasty, appetizing food that aids digestion.

There is a quality in Royal Baking Powder coming from the purity, wholesomeness and fitness of its ingredients, which promotes digestion. Food raised by it will not distress. This peculiarity of Royal has been noted by hygienists and physicians, and they are accordingly earnest in its praise, especially recommending it in the preparation of food for those of delicate digestion.

Three Ways of Doing It.

How To Behave When You Enter a Conquered Town---1. The German Style---2. Russian Style---3. British Style.

Here are three ways of doing the same thing—of behaving when you enter a conquered town in which the townspeople have a greater right to be there than the conquerors. These cases are all quoted from the papers of the day.

(1) THE GERMAN WAY. The French town of Peronne was forced to yield to the Germans after a five hours' fight. "Half the population, including the Mayor, had fled. Just as the Prussians entered, the municipal treasurer carried off the gold and valuables belonging to the town," says the Times.

What Happened at Peronne. Colonel von Gotberg, the German Commandant, went straight to the Hotel de Ville and installed himself in the Mayor's seat. "Who replaces the Mayor?" he asked, and was told that it was a cabinet-maker named Line. M. Line arrived at the pressing invitation of the invaders, and was informed that he had to call together a local committee to give effect to the wishes of the new masters. When the residents arrived the German officer told them that the town would be required to pay a war contribution of £12,000. "And it must be here tomorrow morning," he said. "M. Line courageously objected. The municipal treasury had been transferred to Rouen, he said, and the rich population had departed. It would be possible, perhaps, to furnish a contribution in kind. 'Is that true?'" asked the German, turning to the cure. 'C'est la verite, Monsieur,' returned the venerable priest.

"The Colonel then said that he must have £100 in gold the same evening and stores and provisions to the amount of £10,000. 'If you have lied,' he said, sharply, turning to the councillor and the cure, 'I will put a bullet into you.'

Permits to Pillage. "Hostages were taken, and on the morrow under pretext that the requisition was not being complied with, von Gotberg gave his troops permission to pillage the abandoned houses during two hours.

"The Prussians didn't need a second invitation. Furniture, ancient and modern, silver, bronzes, pictures, and personal property were packed up and carried away to trains which were loaded with the product of the operations. After that the soldiers broke into wine cellars, and furious scenes of drunkenness occurred. As a result of one of them an unfortunate woman drowned herself in a well. The invaders also set fire to the Prefecture and to nine houses on the Place de Peronne."

(2) THE RUSSIAN WAY.

The 'Den' of Petrograd, gives an interesting pen picture of the arrival of the new Russian Governor of Bukovina, General Navrotsky, at Tchernovitz, the capital of the province. The governor arrived at mid-day, surrounded by a suite of Russian officers. He entered the Town Hall where he was received by the Mayor of Tchernovitz, Dr. Weisberg, a Jew, by the way, and the leading citizen.

What the General Said. Addressing them in Russian the General said:

"I beg to inform you that I am sent here as your governor. Please instruct one of your leading fellow-citizens to be attached to me as a measure of protection for me. I promise you that the Russian troops will treat everybody with every consideration. I solemnly guarantee you the fullest safety and the protection of your property. I shall expect you to treat our army with respect and consideration."

The Mayor replied by saying that the Russian army could be sure of the most correct attitude of the population. He assured the new governor that no hostage was necessary, as the people of Tchernovitz had already proved their good faith. The governor admitted that the conduct of the people had been beyond reproach, but insisted on the hostage. Then the Mayor made a step forward, and said:

"I am at your disposal."

General Navrotsky thanked Dr. Weisberg, and told him that he might consider himself as free and at his old post, the Mayor remarking: "My honor will be your hostage." After this formal scene the general engaged the Mayor in an informal interview, inquiring about the local situation, municipal affairs, etc., and then proceeded to inspect the city. The civic life went on as if nothing had happened, as if no drastic change had occurred in the administration.

(3) THE BRITISH WAY.

An example of the British way of doing things is furnished by an incident which happened just 100 years ago, when the British Army entered Washington! The 'Observer' reprinted last Sunday this quotation from 'The News' of October 2, 1814:

"On the 19th of August our army landed—on the 24th, 1,500 men totally defeated 8,000 of the enemy—and on the evening of that day the capital of the United States was in the hands of the British!

"And here we cannot sufficiently express the admiration we feel at the humanity shown by Admiral Cockburn and the rest of our brave countrymen. The public buildings alone were doomed to destruction, and the utmost care was taken in performing that unpleasant part of their duty, that private property should sustain no injury. No outrage or pillage took place. The lives of the citizens were sacred, and their persons preserved from insult. It is this generosity in a conqueror that deprives war of its greatest horrors."

Part of Our National Inheritance.

Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood last Saturday at a recruiting meeting cited another illustration of the British way. Speaking of the charges of brutality made against the Germans he said:

"We need not fear that the British soldier will ever descend to making reprisals. Thirty-five years ago I was commanding 1,800 men, who fought against 23,000 brave Zulus for five hours and a half. They attacked with the undaunted courage of savages who did not realize the effect of modern rifles, and the following morning we buried, besides a vast number elsewhere, 834 close up to one face of the laagered wagons behind which our men had stood.

"When the fight was over I desired a few friendly Zulus who were attached to the companies under my command to collect men of every regiment, promising for each uninjured man a 'stik' of tobacco. Next morning there was a group outside my tent of magnificent specimens of humanity. When I had got all the information I required, I said, 'Two months ago, when after a skirmish our doctors cared for your wounded, and a few days later you overwhelmed our camp, killing 1,500 of our men, you did not spare those who had been attending on your own brothers. Will one of you say why I should not kill you?'"

"Said a young giant, 'May I speak O Master! You ask why you should not kill us; I answer, because it is not the English custom.'"

A Test for Britons.

"This is the character our race bears in North, South, East and West Africa, and I hope it may ever continue, for reprisals are not only useless, but would sensibly lessen the grand fighting value of our soldiers. The troops at the assault of Delhi in 1857, when embittered by horrible stories, many exaggerated, and at Jhansi in 1858, were seen deliberately hitting women and little black children out of the line of fire. Such conduct is a part of our national inheritance," added Sir Evelyn.
