CHAPTER II.

In an English Palace.
"They parted. It was very sad, and very disappointing. But—what would you have? Life is too short to permit of two persons spending it in quarrelling." He shuddered palpably.

"But—but your daughter?" said Lord Ferndale.
"Ah, yes, pardon me, I had forgotten! Yes, I have a daughter, born after the separation; consequently I have not seen her"—he said it as if it were quite a matter of course. "But her mother and her nurse and, I believe, most attached and devoted servant being dead, her care devolves upon me."

There was a pause. Everybody tried to find something to say, and failed, though Lord Ferndale did murmur, inaudibly, "Poor girl."
"I may say," said the earl, quite pleasantly, "that I have not seen her yet, and that I am sharing your curiosity. She arrived this afternoon."

The men exchanged glances, all but Gulliford Berton, who kept his dark eyes fixed on the floor.
"I cannot even tell you what she is like, but I trust you will find her charming," and he spoke the words as if he had added, "and I am quite sure you won't."

There was a painful silence, broken by the entrance of Mr. Petherick. The earl looked at the clock.
"We will not wait," he said, suavely. Mr. Petherick coughed.
"I expect Lady Norah is too tired," he stammered.

The earl smiled upon him, and motioned Lord Ferndale to lead the way. They entered the dining-room, and the earl walked straight to the bottom of the table, waved his guests to their seats, and the rector said grace.
He had scarcely resumed his seat, when the two footmen ranged themselves on either side of the door, and Norah entered.

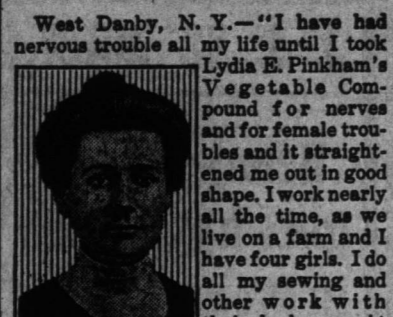

She wore the soft, white dress with the black sash and shoulder ribbon, in which Mr. Petherick had first seen her; her face was pale, but that and the faintest quiver of the beautiful lips were the only signs that she felt the ordeal which her exquisite father had compelled her to undergo.

The men started and rose, looking at her in breathless silence. The earl was the first to gain his feet, and he, too, stared for a moment, as silent as the rest.
He had expected to see a shy, timid, underbred girl, half dairy maid, half—she scarcely knew what. At any rate, something that would try all his self-possession and immovable serenity.

Instead—!
For a moment a faint color rose to

WOMAN HAD NERVOUS TROUBLE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her.

West Danby, N. Y.—"I have had nervous trouble all my life until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my nerves and for female troubles and it straightened me out in good shape. I work nearly all the time, as we live on a farm and I have four girls. I do all my sewing and other work with their help, so it shows that I stand it real well. I took the Compound when my ten year old daughter came and it helped me a lot. I have also had my oldest girl take it and it did her lots of good. I keep it in the house all the time and recommend it."—Mrs. DEWITT SINCEBOUGH, West Danby, N. Y.

Sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, headache, dragging sensations, all point to female derangements which may be overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

his face, and all his boasted impassiveness broke down before this graceful young creature with the lovely face and wealth of red-gold hair, who stood waiting like a princess for homage. Then he left the table, and taking her hand with a bow, turned to his dumfounded guests.
"Gentlemen," he said, slowly, and in his sweetest voice, "permit me to introduce you to my daughter!"

And still holding her hand, he conducted her with stately, but ice-like courtesy, to the head of the table.

CHAPTER III.
Lady Norah.
FOR a moment or two Norah felt giddy and almost faint. Surely no girl had ever before been placed in so extraordinary and trying a situation. Opposite her sat the father she had never seen before; the guests were all strangers to her. The magnificent room, with its air of mingled grandeur and refinement would have been alone sufficient to overawe a young girl accustomed hitherto to the small and simple rooms of a country cottage.

But Norah possessed a spirit not easily cowed. Somehow or other she divined that the stately, patrician old man facing her at the bottom of the table, expected her to display some confusion and shyness, and she resolved that he should be—well, disappointed.

So, though the room seemed to spin round, and she saw the faces of the guests and the footmen through a kind of haze, she made no sign of the emotions that swept across her young heart.

The gentlemen, with true delicacy, carefully avoided looking at her for some minutes, and talked together with the kind of vivacity which is so palpably forced; and it was evident that though they talked of the coming hay harvest and of current politics, they were one and all thinking of the girl who had been introduced thus suddenly and strangely to her father and her home.

The footman brought her some soup, the butler filled her glass with wine, with countenances as expressionless as if they had been in the habit of waiting on her for the last twenty years; and Norah got through her soup and sipped the costly wine in silence.

She knew that they were all thinking of her, and she felt the keen, gray eyes at the end of the table glance toward her now and again; but though her heart beat tumultuously, and her face was pale, her hands did not tremble nor her lips quiver. An Indian at the stake could not have behaved better.

Presently Lord Ferndale, who sat next to her, turned to her.
"I hope you had a pleasant journey, Lady Norah?" he said, in as ordinary a tone as he could command, but which was gentle, and, as she felt, almost pitying.

She raised her dark eyes, and the peer, who had seen many beautiful women in his time, experienced the thrill which Mr. Petherick had felt when she had first looked at him.
"Yes, thank you," she said. "It seemed rather long, but it was pleasant."

"Let me see," he said, as he thought, "A lovely young creature, with a sweet voice!"—"You came from—"
"Norton, in Devonshire," said Norah.

"Ah, yes; a very pretty place. I hope you will like Santeleigh. I suppose I ought not to say that it is as pretty; but of course I think so. My wife will be so pleased to show you all our lions."

"Thank you," said Norah, simply.
"I am one of your father's oldest friends," he went on, "and I am sure you and Lady Ferndale will get on together."
"Are you fond of riding, Lady Norah?" asked Squire Parfett, in his bluff, good-natured voice, wishing to say something to the lovely young creature in her trying position.

"I have never ridden," she replied; "but I think I should like it."
"Of course, of course!" he assented, gently. "I must find a nice horse for you; eh, Arrowdale?"
The old earl bowed and smiled.
"You are very good, squire," he answered, in his courtly fashion. "One can always rely on your judgment in horse-flesh."

The rector gave a little cough; it was his turn now.
"I'm afraid you'll miss the Devonshire ferns, Lady Norah," he said. "We have few, or none, in Santeleigh, but we must hope that our roses will make up to you. I think you will say that there are some fine ones here at the Court—and a few at the rectory," he added, with due humility.

"There are roses in Devonshire," murmured Mr. Petherick; "are there not, Lady Norah?"
Norah smiled at him as at one whom she knew better than the rest, and also liked.

One person only had not spoken to her—Gulliford Berton, and she chanced to glance at him. The dark, penetrating eyes happened to be fixed on her, and their gaze met. In that moment a strange feeling took possession of Norah, a feeling difficult to describe. It was not exactly repulsion but a singular sensation, as if she felt that he was trying to read all that was passing in her mind, and she must at all costs thwart him.

She ought, by all ordinary rules, to have been attracted by the young man's handsome face, but there was something in it which jarred upon her, though she could not have told what it was.

For a space in which one could have counted twenty they looked into each other's eyes; then Gulliford Berton withdrew his gaze and returned to his plate, without uttering a word.

The dinner proceeded. To Norah the courses seemed endless. She had gone to one or two small dinners at the clergyman's at Norton, but the magnificence of this, her first meal in her father's house, as far surpassed them as a corporation feast surpasses

Quackery and Corns

Hundreds of treatments have been offered for corns. Some were sedatives to quiet pain. Some were acids, harsh and risky. Some mere quackery.
But one man—a famous chemist—studied corns for 25 years. And finally discovered Blue-jay.
That is now the standard treatment, gentle, certain, scientific. It is used on a million corns monthly.
It has stopped the corn pain instantly, 70 million times. It has ended the corns completely within 48 hours, in 91 per cent of the cases. The others take a little longer.
Stop paring corns. Stop treating them in wrong ways. Use Blue-jay, and that ends them in a gentle, easy way. Prove that tonight.

a two-and-sixpenny ordinary. But through it all she made no mistake. If the earl had expected to see her eat with her knife, or commit some similar vulgarity, he was disappointed—or relieved.

If she had presided at the lordly table for years, instead of for the first time, her manner could not have been more perfect.
Every now and then Lord Ferndale or the rector spoke to her, and her sweet, low voice made instant reply.

The costly dessert appeared, and Lord Ferndale helped her to some hothouse strawberries, and, after she had eaten them, she knew that she could make her escape.
The butler entered, carrying a cobwebby bottle in a wicker cradle, and Norah rose. Instantly all the gentlemen rose also, and Gulliford Berton went and opened the door for her. He raised his eyes for a second and fixed them on her as she passed, then dropped them to the ground again, still without a word.

A footman stepped noiselessly before her, and threw open the door of the drawing-room, and Norah went and stood by the window and looked out at the far-stretching lawns and flower gardens, and for the first time—now that she was alone—her eyes grew dim with tears.

It is also the opinion of the German soldiers, if the views of prisoners count for anything. Before the grand offensive started a high authority informed the correspondent of the Associated Press that the German lines would not be broken by summer, and that slow operations wearing down the German would be inaugurated, and would probably last through another summer. REASSURING NEWS.

LONDON, Oct. 19. To-day's news from Roumania is reassuring. With the help of Russia, which is credited with sending formidable reinforcements to the frontiers, the offensive has been vigorously renewed by the Roumanians. Austrian forces have been driven back to the Ruffj Valley. The bulk of the remaining German forces is now confined to a limited area in the southeast portion of the Colony, of which all ports, the coast and the main lines of the Delta are held by the Entente forces. The entire Ruffj Valley, and Delta are unhealthy and malarious in the highest degree, and declared likely to become untenable after the lesser rains during October.

Any Woman's Struggle For Good Health Quickly Rewarded.

A SIMPLE HOME TREATMENT NOW ADVOCATED THAT GIVES FINE RESULTS.

When a woman's face grows haggard and pale, when she is tired all day and ready to cry when night comes, she ought to know something is wrong.

Putting off only make matters worse. The best advice we can give any sickly woman is to let out the following treatment.

At the close of every meal, with a sip or two of water, take two chocolate-coated Ferrozine Tablets. This seems to be the best thing going for folks that are tired out, run-down and in need of a strengthening, building-up medicine.

Ferrozine's action aids the three principal functions of the body—digestion, assimilation, elimination. By strengthening digestion it forms an abundance of rich, red blood—this gives strength, vim, stability. Elimination is assured because Ferrozine quickens the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels—this guarantees the maintenance of vigorous health.

Mr. Grace Notes.

Miss Lillian Ward returned from the General Hospital on Monday. Miss Ward contemplated training for a nurse, but found the work at hospital too trying on her constitution, so she was compelled to resign.

A severe gale of wind from the S.W. raged here last night and early this morning. No damage other than a few fences blown down, reported so far. The wind veered in the early morning to W.N.W., which will give the Labrador schooners on the way a chance to get along.

Mr. L. Pippy who has been working at Sydney for some years arrived here on Monday. He will likely remain for some time.

Mr. W. H. Kennedy of the Postal Staff who has been very ill of late is sufficiently recovered to-day to be able to go out for a drive. This his friends will be pleased to hear.

Miss Mary Thomey who had been to St. John's on business, returned by train on Monday night.

King Edward Brigade is again on the up-grade. The 64 volunteers from its ranks seemed for a time almost to knock the life out of it. But a revival of interest has taken place, and we hope to see the Brigade on the street again ere long with quite a good muster.

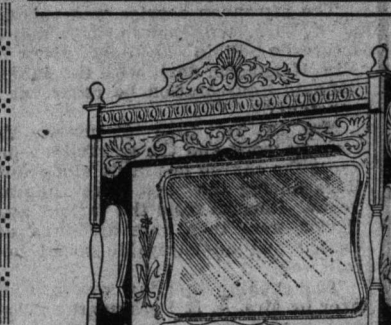

Our citizens will no doubt help along the boys in every way they can. Many of our people say "How can I help them?" The boys are paving the way and as they are holding their annual jumble sale about the end of the present month, every citizen will have a chance of showing appreciation of the lads, and give a little encouragement to the officers as well.

The Water Company has a number of men employed taking up the old water pipes on LeMarchant Street. A larger size pipe will be put down in place of the ones removed.

The rotten fish being removed from the sea, Dorothy is being carried through the town and taken to a farm in the suburbs there to be used as manure. The stench is almost unbearable. If the carts were covered and a little lime thrown in on the top of the load the purchaser would save a lot of goodness of the stuff that now escapes.

Uncles or Aunts?

By RUTH CAMERON.

"Which do you like best?" I heard one youngster say to another the other day, "Uncles or aunts?" "Oh, uncles!" said the other. "They give you more pennies and don't try to make you do things." Does that awaken echoes from your childhood? It does from mine.

Uncles and aunts, though they occupy similar positions on the family tree, are as totally different in flavor as any two relationships could possibly be.

They Know They Could Bring You Up Better.

Aunts, as the youngster said, always want you to do things; they were sure they could bring you up much better than your mother, and they fairly itched for a chance. And with some queer sixth sense possessed by childhood, you could feel them itching.

Each aunt usually had some particular hobby. My memory of one severe old great-aunt is entirely summed up in one phrase, "You love your mother and like your food." Every time I said I loved ice-cream or candy, or new gingerbread, that descended upon me. Poor lady, she was old and dyspeptic, and I suppose my enthusiasm for the things she couldn't eat didn't particularly appeal to her.

I'm Grateful Now But I Wasn't Then. Another aunt used to say, "Throw your shoulders back!" every time she saw me. Whereat I jerked my abdomen forward in a position that must have been a little less attractive than my former slouch. Fortunately I possessed still another aunt who counteracted this by saying, "Keep your stomach in," every time she saw me. It was to her that I owe the reasonably good carriage I ultimately attained, and I am grateful now, though I am afraid I wasn't then.

That's the difference between aunts and uncles. You may be grateful to aunts afterward, but you enjoy uncles more at the time.

The Spirit of All Uncles Concentrated In One.

Perhaps my own feeling towards uncles is tinged by the fact that I was particularly happy in mine. I only had one, but the spirit of all uncles was concentrated in him.

"Here comes Unkie!" was a cry that could make the dullest day bright. He was always ready for a romp or a game of some sort. His pockets were full of those hard old-fashioned peppermints. I buy them sometimes now, just for oldtime's sake. Pennies I don't remember, but it needed no pennies to make "dear Unkie" our most-beloved guest.

There are many disadvantages in being a woman, and one is that one can never be an uncle.

Britain and Her Allies Will Fight to a Finish

REITERATES MR. LLOYD GEORGE.

London, Oct. 11.—The Minister of War, Mr. Lloyd George, met with strong criticism in the House of Commons on account of recent public utterances to the effect that the European war was to be a fight to a finish, and that Great Britain would tolerate no outside interference in the direction of peace. Several members took part in the discussion, and Charles P. Trevelyan, formerly parliamentary secretary for education, wanted to know, if the government blocked mediation, how the Allies were to discover Germany's terms of peace. "We are ignorant of the commitments on the question of annexation of territory," he continued. "Must we continue the war until Russia is in possession of Constantinople?" Mr. Trevelyan complained that the government had ignored the important speech by President Wilson on international mediation.

Mr. Lloyd George, replying declared that the answer to all criticisms could be found in the Prime Minister's thrilling peroration to-day. After all, he said, this was a military, rather than a diplomatic affair. As a matter of fact Viscount Grey had anticipated President Wilson's statement.

There was a great difference between intervention to secure an international combination after the war to enforce world peace, and intervention at a moment like the present. Intervention now would be a military triumph for Germany and military disaster for Great Britain, and he claimed the right, as secretary for war, to express his opinion on such a matter. He did not intend to withdraw a single syllable of what he had said. It was not merely the expression of his own opinion, he declared, but the expression of the opinion of the cabinet of the war committee and of the military advisers of every ally.

Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Leader, commented briefly on Premier Asquith's declaration. He said that the operations the Premier had detailed demonstrated that they need have no fears of the valor, courage, persistence and success of the army, which had been tried against the best German trained troops and found superior. Sir Edward said the fight would be carried to a finish, but declared there was no use in concealing the fact that the task before the army was an herculean one.

The whole nation, he declared, is determined to gain a decisive victory. The question, he asserted, of more man power, especially from the reserve power of Ireland must be raised and debated before long.

The House agreed to vote the credit asked for by Premier Asquith, virtually no criticism being offered to the Premier's statement.

The Irish Unionist members of the House of Commons have passed a resolution declaring that the Government should extend the military service act to Ireland, and expressing their readiness to assist the Government in this and all other measures which are necessary to increase the strength of the armies in the field.

The Zeppelin A Military Failure.

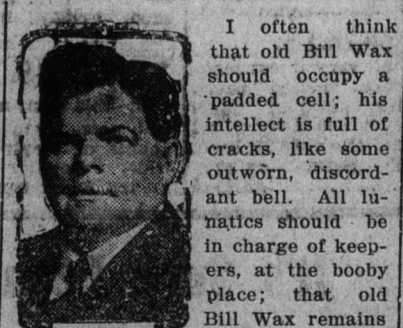

(Philadelphia "Enquirer.")

For many years the militarists of Germany prepared with great care for the war which they had at last forced upon a goodly section of the civilized world. Leaving aside all questions save that of their preparedness, there must be admiration for the great work they accomplished in the way of getting ready. Their siege guns were astonishingly effective. Their trench building was marvellous. But in one thing they have fallen far short of expectations. Their Zeppelins have proved to be a rank failure. When we say failure we mean from a military point of view. Of course, a Zeppelin can drop bombs upon unfortunate cities or upon villages and kill men, women and children in their beds. But that is not war. That is pure murder, and of a particularly atrocious kind, akin to the drowning of the passengers of the "Lusitania."

Much had been anticipated of the Zeppelins. In fleets they were to attack England, blow up its defences and its ammunition plants and open the country to invasion. Two years and more have gone by, and the highest accomplishment of the Zeppelin has been murder. So far as is known there has been no important destruction from a military viewpoint. It is apparent that there can be no such destruction based upon any preconceived plan. The bomb must be dropped aimlessly, and if it hits anything it is by chance, and chance only. Not only that, but the fact that two of these airships were brought down in the recent Saturday night raid proves that schemes of defences can be highly organized.

Germany has expended untold millions upon this sort of craft, millions that are worse than wasted, for all that the Zeppelin has amounted to has been to increase the detestation that civilization holds for all atrocities.

THE BOOB.

I often think that old Bill Wax should occupy a padded cell; his intellect is full of cracks, like some outworn, disreputable bell. All lunatics should be in charge of keepers, at the booby place; that old Bill Wax remains at large, you will admit, is a disgrace. I talk with him from day to day, no word of mine to him I say, he makes me hot, from head to heels. When I explain that Charley Hughes is, as a statesman, truly great, old Bill hands out his moldy views, indorsing 't'other candidate. When I rebuke the Kaiser's course, and say his conduct is a shame, old Wax will argue, till he's hoarse, that Nicholas must bear the blame. Whatever argument I make, whatever words of truth I say, old Bill the other side will take, and chew the rag for half a day. And I have heard that he explains to those who'll listen for a spell, that I have weevil in my brains, and should be in a padded cell!

A little cold may not seem a dangerous thing—you may feel inclined to let it go on hoping that to-morrow it will be better—but can you afford to take chances? MARTIN HARDWARE Co., Ltd.

On Behalf of the Caribou.

Editor Evening Telegram:
Dear Sir,—I read with a great deal of pleasure your plea for the Caribou, and your editorial endorsement in last night's Telegram.

I thoroughly agree with the sentiment therein expressed. The pot-hunters must be protected against themselves; the experience of ages shows that they will every time kill the goose that lays the golden egg; if stern measures are not resorted to.

The Bison and the Buffalo in early days on the Western plains roamed in such prodigious numbers that it was said that a stampede of them used "to shake the continent."
The poor sciver came and slaughtered them by millions for their hides—now the only specimens extant are a few in Reserves or Zoological Gardens.

The passenger pigeon flew in flocks so great that their passage obscured the noon-day sun; prizes amounting to $15,000 are now offered to anyone who can produce a single living specimen. The pot-hunter netted and shot them and sold them for 25 cents per barrel.

Our own Labrador Caribou used to resort to Northern Newfoundland and Labrador in hundreds of thousands. They have been exterminated.

The story about the Penguins, and the sweeping of eggs on the Falk and other islands, reads like a fiction. Hunters in passing would land and sweep a space, and in an hour's time go back and get a boat-load of fresh eggs laid in the meantime, while the humane hunter would pass the time by killing the nesting birds with their oars and gaffs.

These birds are now extinct. A few years ago mackerel were so plentiful around here, that thousands of tons of them were used as manure. They are now extinct.

All this destruction came because the ignorant, greedy "poor settler" had his own sweet will on bird and beast. He was not encouraged by those who ought to know better.

The Government, some years ago, imported several Moose in order to increase the stock of moose, and to add to the wild life in the interior of the island, a useless puppy, shot a four-year-old bull, a couple of years ago, and when discovered hastened to confess and said he did it in self-defence. What can be done when poachers like this are allowed to roam at large, with shot guns firing at everything in sight.

These same people net the salmon on the spawning grounds, and spread them to fools in St. John's, who do not know that they are unfit for food. Now they want "British fair play" to exterminate the caribou.

Hughes Says He Would Have Gone to War With Hun

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 13.—Charles E. Hughes last night, before a great audience here, declared unequivocally that he would have broken off diplomatic relations with Germany when the Lusitania was sunk if he had been President then.

He made this declaration in impassioned tones in answer to a Democratic heckler.

The declaration caused a tumult in the hall, and it was several minutes before Mr. Hughes could again make himself heard.

He shouted that he would have made it clear that when he said "strict accountability," he meant what he said. He asserted further that when the notice was published by the German Embassy warning passengers of the Lusitania he would have made it known that to sink the Lusitania would mean a break in friendly relations, and that with the sinking of the ship he would have made good his word.

The crowd was on its feet demanding that the heckler be put out. There was a din of cheering for Mr. Hughes and shouts of "You're right," and "That's what we would have done."

Mr. Hughes waved his hands high above his head to quiet the crowd, but it was some time before he could continue.

James Gear, of Salmon Cove, B.D.V., previously reported missing, has since turned up safe.

Weekly Meeting of Municipal Council.

Last night's weekly session of the Municipal Board went off with the utmost unanimity. All the members were present and Mayor Gosling presided.

F. Maynard who asked permission to make repairs to house on Lime St. must submit plan.

I. G. Sullivan was not satisfied with the lights shown by the Council employees while testing the water mains at night. The lanterns will be covered with some kind of pasteboard in future, as the testing work is important and has to be continued.

Mr. E. S. Pinsent, on behalf of the Masonic Hall Joint Stock Company, asked leave to make repairs to a retaining wall. Referred to Engineer, as was also P. Malone's request to have an embankment at the foot of Kennas Hill, near his home, removed.

G. Hatcher, Pleasant Street, complained that a resident of the street threw slop water in his doorway. The Inspector will inquire into the matter.

Widow Field, whose husband was in the employ of the city for over thirty years, asked for financial help. The Council can do nothing in the matter but individual members can if they please.

S. G. Collier, undertaker, asked that a few loads of gravel be spread near the West End Cemetery. It will be attended to.

The Standard Manufacturing Company objected to importation of paints for use by the Council, and pointed out that they had to pay taxes, also their employees who are paid by the Company about $20,000 yearly.

The Council will see that the Company is not overlooked in future, and an order at present in the hands of a foreign concern will be cancelled.

G. Knowling can build concrete sidewalk on Duckworth Street, subject to the approval of the Engineer.

J. Connolly and C. Pretty, Battery Road, asked permission to repair houses. Referred to Engineer.

Plans of double dwelling, Theatre Hill were approved.

Tenders were asked for the removal of the "cotton house." There was one application from Mr. Richard Sutton, who asked that the Council pay him $50 for the removal of the structure. The affair elicited much laughter and it was ordered later that Mr. J. Brennan be given the building to tear down.

Dr. Brehm complained of the unsanitary condition of the C. E. Cemetery grounds. Will be attended to.

Before the meeting closed the City Impounder and his duties came up for discussion. The scene that was enacted in court during the week by the goat-hauler was being talked of when the Secretary-Treasurer reported that he heard the Impounder had "lassooed" his lawyer. Councillor Vinicombe asked that a statement be prepared for next meeting giving the number and kind of animals impounded from the 1st of June last up to the present time and the amount of fees received.

Mamma! Don't You See Your Child Is Sick, Constipated

Look at tongue! Move poisons from liver and bowels at once.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, fretful, nervous, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowels cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again.

All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "instinctive" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Co."

Everyday Etiquette.

"What is the correct way to introduce a person who is going visiting in a city where there is a friend whom you would like him to meet?" asked Jane.

"You should give the person going visiting a note introducing him to your friend. It is always wise to write privately in advance of the presentation of the letter, giving the person to whom it is addressed some notice of its coming and in a general way telling him something about the newcomer," was mother's advice.

Sir James Watson's Opinion Considered Most Valuable.

He says that the commonest of all disorders, and one from which few escape is Catarrh. Sir James firmly believes in local treatment, which is best supplied by "Catarrhose." No case of Catarrh can exist where Catarrhose is used; it is a miracle worker, relieves almost instantly, and cures after other remedies fail. Other treatments can't reach the diseased parts like Catarrhose because it goes to the source of the trouble along with the air you breathe. Catarrhose is free from cocaine, it leaves no bad after-effects, it is simply nature's own cure.

Beware of dangerous substitutes offered under misleading names and meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhose which is sold everywhere, large size containing two months treatment costs $1.00; small size, 60c; trial size, 25c.

Wedding Bells.

BARTLETT-WOODMAN.
On Wednesday-morning, Oct. 11th, a very pretty wedding was celebrated at the home of Mr. O. G. Johnson, Millertown, when Mr. J. W. Bartlett and Miss B. Woodman were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The Rev. T. E. Loder, of Grand Falls, performed the ceremony. The bride was charmingly dressed in white silk crepe de chine draped with white chiffon and carried a bouquet of asters and orange blossoms. She was attended by Miss M. Kneen who was dressed in white silk muslin and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and maiden hair fern. Dr. Lidstone performed the duties of groomsmen. The groom's present to the bride was a gold pendant, and to the bridesmaid a gold brooch. Mr. Bartlett is the general manager of the Royal Stores of this town. The popularity of the young couple was evidenced by the numerous guests present and the variety of the wedding presents. In the evening the happy pair left for Day of Island on a short honeymoon. Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett will be gladly welcomed on their return when they will take up their residence in Millertown.

WISEMAN-LINDSAY.

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, Oct. 18th, at the C. of E. Cathedral, by the Rev. Canon White, the contracting parties, being Florence M. Wiseman, daughter of Mrs. Mary E. Wiseman to Frederick A. Lindsay. The bride wore a dress of white silk with hat to match, and was given away by her brother John. Her bridesmaids were Miss Mollie Wiseman, sister of the bride and Miss Elsie Lindsay, sister of the groom who wore dresses of navy blue silk. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Harold Johns. After the ceremony the party drove to the bride's residence, Hayward Avenue, where a reception was held.

The Eye of War.

(Halifax "Morning" Chronicle.)

In an article in the "Fortnightly Review" for September, Mr. Archibald Hurd throws a little light on the secret history of the fatal days in England just before the war, and there is reason to believe that his statements are correct. He writes:

"Fine and Dry" Windsor Table Salt

"They (the Germans), assumed that the British Government, desirous above all things for peace, would temporize and temporize, and that every hour's delay would be to their advantage. The Germans were wrong. The British Government struggled for peace down to the fatal Sunday night, and then the importunities of Mr. Churchill and Lord Haldane were resisted no longer. On the following Monday morning on the initiative of those two Ministers, the naval and military forces received orders to mobilize, and within a few hours of the expiry of the ultimatum Britain was prepared to take the offensive by land as well as by sea. The British Fleet, in obtaining the initiative, dictated the character of world war which was to follow. The British Army, of about one-eighth of a million only, dictated the character of the European campaign which was to be fought on land in the next few months."

Mr. Hurd, in a footnote, says: "The Prime Minister was technically Secretary for War, but Lord Haldane who had created the Expeditionary Force, acted for him on this fateful occasion."

The London "Chronicle" adds the interesting statement that there never was any idea that the Prime Minister should remain Minister of War, or that Lord Haldane, in the event of hostilities should resume his old position. On the contrary, both came to the conclusion that in the event of war a great soldier should be placed at the head of the War Office, and the obvious man for the position was Lord Kitchener. The Prime Minister accepted the public demand, and "Chronicle" tells us, by offering the position to Lord Kitchener two days before any public reference was made to him in connection with the office, and Lord Kitchener actually attended the Army Council before any suggestion had been made that he should be given the supreme position. Lord Kitchener's appointment was not announced when it was actually made for the obvious reason that war had not then been declared, and if the final efforts to avert a conflict had been successful Lord Kitchener would no doubt have returned to his duties as Governor of Egypt.

The Situation In the East.

Once again the fortunes of war have claimed attention, and this time reward it, from our point of view, with reassurance. Rumania continues to be the centre of interest and the reports that have come from that quarter, while rather general, have been sufficiently definite to enable our observers to make an optimistic view of the situation. The laconic statement that the tide of battle has turned definitely in favour of Rumania is now followed by brief references to certain localities which show that the fighting is still for possession of the important mountain passes. The enemy succeeded in penetrating the Gyimes Pass, which is far up on the northern boundary. Had they been able to carry their success much further, they might have dealt Rumania a hard blow, for the important railway line which runs southwest, paralleling and feeding the whole border line, lies only a few miles inland from this pass. They appear to be still established there, but it is as the message states the Rumanians can drive them back in the south they may find themselves in a precarious position. It must be noted that the Rumanians have held firmly to their first gains at the southern end of the line, from Orsova to Petroseny, the weight of the Teutonic attack having been delivered in the centre and north. Now we learn that at Predael, which is just below Kronstadt, the Rumanians have again won the ascendancy and are driving the invaders back.

Less to be noted than the fluctuations of the battle are the lessons that each teaches. Rumania has shown the dangers that may attend an invasion in such territory if it is turned back, and the enemy may in turn be taught, if strongly. If this great offensive effort of Germany and her allies is finally brought to naught, it will be a fine achievement for Russia and Rumania, and worth the conquest of much territory. For not merely will it assure that conquest later, but it will demonstrate clearly how impotent Germany now is to compass any great success, however mighty the forces she may muster for the attempt. It seems a little strange that a sudden effort of the Italians in the far-away Carso and of Brusiloff in Volhynia should instantaneously relieve the pressure on Rumania, but so it is. A year ago it might not have been so, when the Central Powers were strong enough, and the Allies 'weak' enough, to permit them to hold any threatened point while they pushed home an attack on which they had concentrated their major efforts. We hear that the Allies are bringing up large reinforcements to defend Monastir. Here we have the same thing again, and it is what counts more than anything. If these reinforcements are being brought from a central reserve it is being depleted and will soon cease to exist. When that happens the only way to merely meet but at hand, the Allies are at last translating the potential superiority they have always possessed into an actual and active superiority. Their object is to engage all the forces of the enemy all the time and they are rapidly achieving it. In respect the insupportable nature of Rumania's intervention has not yet been sufficiently apparent by reason of the desperate measures taken by her to counter it, but with the failure of those measures it will be doubly plain and doubly formidable.

PRO PATRIA MORI.

As we went to press yesterday the sad intelligence reached us of the death in action of Lieutenant Cecil B. Chitt, who was killed on October 12. All will pray that the belief is wrong, and there is fortunately better ground for it than after the fatal first of July, when so few of our men succeeded even in reaching the German trenches. Evidently our men were in the thick of the late heavy fighting on the British front which ended in the taking of Le Sars. If this is so, we may be sure the count was not all on one side, and some at least of the score of Beaumont Hamel has been wiped off the slate.

On our side, however, the count is sufficiently heavy. There is no need to dwell upon it when it contains such a name as that of Capt. J. J. Donnelly, M.C., who gave his life to the cause. Scientifically rigorous in itself, the loss is accentuated by the distinction he had won. We are here far removed from the terrible conflict, and though we have been able to understand the spirit and firm will of Britain to see this thing through, we have perhaps not been able hitherto to feel it in our souls as they do over there. Survivors of Torpedoed Ship Reach Port.

The Newfoundland members of the crew of the R. C. Cross Lines Stepano reached the city last evening from New York. Second Officer James and Second Steward Snow came on the Benar and Engineers Coffey, Kavanaugh and Burton, Boatswain Jackman and a few others came on the cross-country express.

All the survivors lost practically all their belongings when the ship was torpedoed. The ship's documents together with a large amount of money were saved by Steward Snow, who was congratulated by the Stepano's owners.

The survivors tell that the Stepano was 5 miles east of Nantuxet Lightship and 220 miles from Boston on that fatal Sunday evening of October 8th when the German submarine came to the surface and fired. The Stepano was not in territorial waters, but was 47 miles outside the United States three-mile limit. At 6:55 p.m. when 105 miles from Newport, where she had been with a note for the German Ambassador, the underwater craft U-53 let go on the Stepano four torpedoes.

Five minutes later the boats were ordered to be lowered and three minutes after the launching of the lifeboats began. This work was done systematically and promptly. A fortunate matter was that the sea was moderate at the time. All the passengers and crew were in lifeboats and all the crew had left the liner, excepting Capt. Smith, Second Officer James, Chief Engineer Pennington, Chief Cook, Wireless Operator Hansen and Steward Snow. On board still were two lifeboats on the smoking room on the upper deck, and it was difficult for the officers to wait a few moments longer and were taken to the disabled liner by the American destroyer No. 50.

The very last person to leave the ship was Capt. Smith. Soon after these officers reached the destroyer, which had on board 64 of the passengers and crew, the other 96 being on board another vessel, which went on to Newport on the morning of the survivors. The destroyer No. 50, which had the Commander of the marine flotilla on board, took by the Stepano until she went down. The U-boat started shelling the Stepano at 9:45 and kept it up for a quarter of an hour. At 10:05 she turned into the starboard side. The size of the shells was alleged to be four inches by the American officers who saw the grunts on the submarine. At ten o'clock that night the Hun stopped shelling and five minutes later the Stepano was supposed to have sunk, as the lights were seen aboard her until 10 o'clock and between then and 10:05 p.m. a torpedo was fired into the liner by the American officers who saw the flashes were seen from the liner. The German submarine, which was issued from the fatally wounded ship and she went down. A number of letters or flashes were sent out by the submarine during the morning, but could not be deciphered by the American officers. It was conjectured that the flashes were meant for another German submarine about the time the American destroyer went to look for the second Hun submarine. That could not locate it. The Stepano survivors watched the movements of the U-53 with interest while they were on board the destroyer and at 7 p.m. on the night of the sinking they saw the German submarine about the time the American destroyer went to look for the second Hun submarine. What Norman Angell Did.

(The New Republic, New York.)

Mr. Wilson's speech of acceptance contained one sentence which overshadows anything that has been said or will be said during the campaign.
In the years to come that sentence will surely gather a significance which has been ignored in the heat and haste and distraction of the moment. The statement that "no nation can any longer remain neutral as against any wilful disturbance of the peace of the world" is a doctrine the importance of which it is hardly possible to exaggerate. The fact that it is uttered now by the president of the most powerful neutral, by the president of a nation which has practiced and preached international laissez-faire, is a reversal of such importance and with such endless consequences that it would absorb our attention if we had a just perspective on our own future. Whether the tariff should be moved up, down or sideways, whether it was wise or unwise to go to Vera Cruz, whether the eight hour bill is right or wrong are questions that will soon be forgotten, but the principle that neutrality is obsolete is the basis of organized peace in the world.

The idea was born simultaneously in many minds in different nations.
It is imbedded in Mr. Asquith's declaration that Britain is fighting for the public law of Europe. It is the residue of truth in Mr. Roosevelt's agitation about Belgium. It is the idea behind the large movements for a league to enforce peace which has the general approval of Viscount Grey, M.
Briand, and, it is said, of certain members of the German foreign office.
The president's utterance was made not into a vacuum, but as a contribution to an international cause.

The particular words used by Mr.
Wilson are worth noting. He speaks of neutrality as no longer possible. This attack on neutrality originated with a man who should have the credit for it.
It originated with Norman Angell, and the words used by the president are
Mr. Angell's own words.

Mr. Angell spent last winter in the United States lecturing and writing, in the weeks preceding the last crisis with Germany over the Sussex he formulated the doctrine that neutrality was obsolete. It emerged after hours of discussion on the basis of memoranda which were recast many times.
The results reached the president, not only directly, but through his confidential advisers, and there can be no doubt that the most important sentence in Mr. Wilson's speech was written by Norman Angell.

The whole episode is interesting for its own sake. It is necessary to emphasize it in view of the report that the British government intends to deny Mr. Angell a passport and prevent him from returning to the United States. Leaving aside every consideration but the success of the British cause, it is a great blunder to keep
Mr. Angell from the United States.

He served his country and ours beyond all Englishmen who have come to us since the war began. Most of the semi-official visitors have hurt more than they have helped by their insensibility to America and their moral pretentiousness. But Mr. Angell quickly and effectively did an incalculable amount to convince leaders of American liberalism of their international responsibilities. He drew us closer to that England with which France died recently in the Derby-ing is possible.

Canadian Hero.

Graceful Tribute on the Duke of Devonshire.

A Canadian soldier wounded in France died this week in the Derbyshire Royal Infirmary, and the loneliness of his death so far from his home touched such a chord of human sympathy that his funeral yesterday with full military honors, proved an event of the greatest public interest.
The streets were crowded with people as the cortege headed by the depot band of the Sherwood Foresters, and accompanied by a large detachment of men with a firing party, passed through the town.

Many wreaths were sent by subscribers to make this last tribute of respect. The gallant soldier's name was William Moses Keddy, of Ontario, and among his papers was a Masonic certificate and a request from his lodge, in English, French and German, commending him to the tender mercies of any member of the craft among whom he might find himself.
This awakened the special sympathy of Derby Freemasons and many well-known brethren were among the mourners. The circumstances were brought to the notice of the Duke of Devonshire, provincial grand master of Derbyshire Freemasons, who at once directed that a wreath should be forwarded in his name and in the name of the province. Coming from Canada, this was an exceedingly graceful act.—Sheffield Herald.
