Good material in the hands of good workmen must necessarily produce an article of exceptional merit.

Matchless Paint

is made of the very best material obtainable. Our workmen are Newfoundlanders (and as the Newfound-lander in foreign countries has proven himself equal to the best), it therefore follows that Best material

Germany Still Sending Notes -- Wilson's Message to Congress.

WILSON'S MESSAGE. PARIS, May 16. President Wilson's message to be read at the approaching session of Congress will make approximately 3,000 words. It is being sent forward to Washington to-night. The message deals entirely with domestic questions. Some space in it is devoted to woman suffrage.

CARDINAL PROTESTS. COLOGNE, May 16. Cardinal Hartmann, Archbishop of Cologne, has requested Pope Benedict to intervene in the situation between the Allied Powers and Germany in order to protect Germany from the complete breakdown which menaces her. In his appeal the Cardinal asserted that the peace conditions would mean the utter ruin of Germany and be a cruel violation of the rights of seventy million inhabitants of the country.

STILL ANOTHER NOTE. PARIS, May 16. It became known to-day that the German peace delegation was preparing to send another note to the Allied and Associated Powers concerning the Peace Treaty. The note, which has not yet been completed, is said to be in relation to Alsace and Lorraine.

WAR COSTS. LONDON, May 16. The Chancellor of the Exchequer states that the total amount received from the Dominions for the repayment of loans of twenty-seven million pounds sterling, mostly in respect of interest and from the Allies is twelve millions. These figures are exclusive of adjustment under which, by special arrangements, eighty million pounds sterling was set off between the Imperial and Canadian Governments.

ATLANTIC FLIGHT. DOUBTING EXPERTS. By Cecil Gray in Daily Mail.

"I do not think that a flight across the Atlantic will be made in our time, and by 'in our time' I include the youngest of your readers," wrote the late Hon. Charles S. Rolls to the editor of a well-known magazine in May 1909. "yet all the same I have a strong notion that if at some future time after I have been laid to rest beneath the daisy roots I could return for an hour or two's stroll down Bond-street or a trip in a car round Brooklands, I should be intensely surprised if, during that short 'second time on earth' I did not see quite a lot of aeroplanes sitting hither and thither in cloudland."

Poor Rolls was "laid to rest beneath the daisy roots" less than thirteen months after these lines were written. To his mind the main difficulties to be overcome were the carrying of fuel, and the carriage of a sufficient number of operators to relieve each other. "Indeed," he wrote, "such a flight as a journey across the Atlantic will only be possible when aeroplanes are constructed on such a scale, that they can have a large quantity of fuel, a number of operators with facilities for resting when off duty, and a reserve set of engines in case of a breakdown."

Another "doubting Thomas" of the time—ten years ago—was Major B. F. S. Baden-Powell, the inventor of man-lifting kites and, for many years, secretary of the Aeronautical Society. "I think," he wrote whimsically, "that a flight across the Atlantic is one that can only be regarded as a flight of fancy, for up to date no sufficiently advanced strides have been made to the conquest of the air to render any confident statements at all justifiable. Still," he added, guardedly, "I may say that I am a great believer indeed in some form of aeroplane machine soon becoming of much practical value."

Another voice from the grave comes through the mouth of the late Sir Hiram Maxim, who, when asked if a flight across the Atlantic would ever be possible, replied to his interviewer: "This intensely interesting query calls to my mind the days when steamships were first invented, and when many of the leading English mathematicians wrote to prove that it was quite impossible to cross the Atlantic, 'because,' they contended, 'ships could not carry coal enough.' Then, sharing the opinion of Mr. Rolls, but with more optimism, 'I should say that something less than a thousand miles will be the limit of flight. But if someone could invent a machine, or motor, that would not waste over half the energy in the fuel, then, and not till then, can the Atlantic be crossed with the flying machine. A man, a bird, a horse, and many land animals are able to develop the full theoretical power of the food they consume, so that if we could only do half as well as Nature we should make light of a journey across the Atlantic.'"

Turning from the less hopeful prophets to those with more enthusiasm we find Mr. Percival Spencer, in the same year—1909—stating that, "It is quite a feasible project to attempt a flight by aeroplane across the Atlantic. The distance, I take it, may be reckoned approximately, at 3,000 miles, and as the flying machine can progress at a speed of 40 miles an hour, the journey could be performed in 75 hours. 'I hope, and think, that English aeroplanists, 'birdists,' as I heard them called the other day, will be able to keep abreast with foreign competitors in the art of flying, and if an Englishman is the first to make a flight across the Atlantic in an aeroplane, may I be the first to shake him by the hand!'"

And again—still only ten years ago—Captain W. G. Windham, founder of the Aero Club, stated emphatically: "The only thing that will prevent an aeroplane and aeroplanets from ever making a flight across the Atlantic will be fear of—well, a watery grave in the briny. But as, fortunately, adventurous spirits are always to be found who will dare anything for the sake of progress, I venture to predict that this stumbling block will not prove a formidable one."

Cause of Early Old Age

The celebrated Dr. Michaleff, an authority on early old age, says that it is "caused by poisons generated in the intestine." When your stomach digests food properly it is absorbed without forming poisonous matter. Poisons bring on early old age and premature death. 15 to 30 drops of "Seigel's Syrup" after meals makes your digestion sound, so

NOT WORTH IT. To have granted Italy's demand for Fiume would have been to plunge the Italian people into another war; for it is inconceivable that the nations that must depend upon the Adriatic port to reach the Mediterranean would ever have consented to see themselves strangled to death economically. They would have been obliged to fight for their very existence. A peace that gave Fiume to Italy could have been only a paper peace, and the work of the congress would have been nullified before the ink was dry on the parchment.—New York World.

Syria During the Great European War.

Interesting Article on Conditions in the East.

(By John K. Noah.)

By the request of some of my friends and for the benefit of those who are interested in Syria as a factor in this world war, I shall endeavour to give as far as possible some of my experiences together with the outcome of the general economic forces that have acted upon every individual inhabitant of Syria in some degree or other.

A little about the country and its geographical position in the east, along with the prevailing conditions before the war, might help to bring out the economic situation of Syria during the war as an inevitable outcome.

Syria proper, in which we are chiefly interested, is bounded on the north by Asia Minor, on the south by Palestine, on the east by the Euphrates river and Mesopotamian valley, and on the west by the Mediterranean Sea. Its length is almost 500 miles, its breadth is about 130 miles, and it extends along the coast for about 90 miles. Damascus, one of the oldest cities in the world, called by the Arabs the "Pearl of the East," is the capital of Syria, and is the chief market of the interior. The capital is connected with a railway line about 90 miles long to Beirut, the chief port on the Mediterranean.

The home industry of Syria is agriculture. The Lebanon mountains, or "white mountains," are chiefly covered with mulberry trees for silk raising and vineyards. Cereals and vegetables are only grown in small quantities to supply the local market. The chief exports are raw silk, wool, tobacco, hemp, gums, and date fruits, etc. The whole export trade does not come within 30 per cent. of the whole import trade. In other words the influx is 70 per cent. a continuous importation, making the country wholly dependent on the outside for its material needs. The advantages of its climate, soil, and ports, appropriate for agriculture, its ports, Tripoli, Beirut, Jaffa, Caiffa, afford it natural outlets for foreign trade. Damascus and Aleppo, the chief cities of the interior, are two great resources of the country which the middlemen for trade with the Mediterranean. Furthermore, Syria is rich in natural resources. Under modern methods the country could yield more than twenty fold its ordinary output and manufacture its raw materials for immediate consumption. Such advantages as given above would seem to the outsider ample opportunity for any country to become economically independent, but Syria has first the disadvantages of a poor credit system which stunts her local trade. Modern business methods and simple commercial transactions are to the speculative and risky. There is no business organization, and capitalists invest their money outside the country. The presence of different religious denominations inevitably cause fanaticism to exist, which is another sort of economic retrogression. The principal lever upon which trade works is confidence, and when you have a country like Syria with so many different religious sects, trust would spell ruin to them. There is also a poor railway service, and throughout the country the means of transportation are so few and the roads, some of them mere mountain paths, that one will not wonder that Syria during the war was greatly handicapped. And last but not least, Syria had the great disadvantage of having had to make progress on her hands and knees under the heavy yoke of the Turkish Government. The whole machinery of the Government was the greatest demoralizing factor that influenced the Syrian population. Lives could be bought and sold under Turkish regime. Judges and government officials were prerogative at will, releasing criminals under the pressure of a paltry bribe offered by the defendant's relatives or friends. Laws and orders were only relative terms to be discussed in drawing rooms and colleges. Economic progress was an impossibility under such conditions. I said that was an "impossibility" because I can foresee now under the change of government a brilliant future for the country, Syria, although historically old, is still young, and if put to its maximum producing point, will, under good economic and industrial methods, participate as a factor in the world's commerce.

The Political Situation in Syria During the War.
The American College of Beirut City was our domicile during the war. At the outbreak of the war martial law was enforced almost immediately, and Djemal Pasha, Minister of Marine, and Commander-in-Chief of the Fourth Army of the Empire, was the chief administrator of Syria. He had absolute authority and conducted his policy under very strict military orders.

The first remarkable event that aroused the hatred of the Syrian population was the hanging of sixty French and British captives who were French, and were apparently discovered to be members of a political party in the interest of France. Most of the condemned were hand-picked, and under martial law in those days a rumour was sufficient evidence to hang a person. The second remarkable event that took place showed us that Djemal Pasha meant business. He had already by his first stroke ordered the cessation and suspension of both French and British carried out every policy without the least disturbance from any quarter of the country. His next move was to occupy the Lebanon mountains, made an independent province chiefly through the interference of France since the persecutions of the Christians in 1860. There was not the slightest attempt made to rebel him. He simply dismissed the members of the Lebanon Parliament and appointed a Turk as governor, who in turn appointed his own staff. This move upset the whole political situation; if there was any secret movement on foot to start a revolution, this last event furnished proof that the Government was too strong to be overthrown. The Turks held every one down with an iron rule. The deportation of belligerents was the next step. British and French families were transported into the interior of the country. Belligerents, who were students, were allowed to resume their studies, and those of us who were at the American College were confined to the College grounds and were prevented from going to the city. To discuss politics means deportation. Spies were roaming all over the city. The mere mention of the word England or France might cause a court martial. Everybody had to be very careful, as even at College some students were acting as spies in the service of the Government. The American College itself, in view of its position as an Educational Institution, had to be very cautious. In one instance the Principal of the College High School was deported because he allowed a geography to be used as a text-book which contained a description of the Turkish Government and its despotism. On the whole the American College was perhaps the only place to live in Syria. Our President, Dr. Howard S. Bliss, a very able man, kept the College running throughout the war, with the exception of a couple of weeks in 1917, when diplomatic relations were ruptured between the United States of America and Turkey. During those two weeks of suspense, the whole student body and the College officials were in constant fear of being deported. It turned out, however, that the action of the United States was not a declaration of war, and at the end of two weeks the President succeeded through his influence with Djemal Pasha to open the College and resume studies once again. Through Dr. Bliss' acquaintance with Djemal Pasha, the College was re-opened with a limited amount of flour and other provisions at Government rates, and had it not been for the American College, hundreds of students as well as College professors and their families would have found it exceedingly difficult to subsist during the stressing periods of the war.

Perhaps one of the most depressing events in the history of the American College students at Beirut was the enforcement by the Faculty, through the order of the Government, that the Turkish language should be taught and made a required subject. Belligerents were not included, but Egyptians, who were not considered by the Turks partly Ottomans, and the Syrians were forced to learn the Turkish language. They were sufficiently "fed up" as our boys would put it, with Turkish and Turkish Government, and the Syrians were not inclined to learn the Turkish language. It was wonderful how students kept up their studies in the midst of such conditions. The first two years of the war which sent them all wild. It was wonderful how students kept up their studies in the midst of such conditions. The first two years of the war which sent them all wild. It was wonderful how students kept up their studies in the midst of such conditions.

The Economic and Sociological Situation in Syria During the War.
The first two years of the war were slightly felt and, economically, only the poor suffered. In the year 1918 one could subsist daily and maintain a fair standard of living on sixty cents per day. It was only, however, during the winter of 1918 that the country felt the first miseries of the war. It was then that deprivation and destitution began to creep slowly over the whole of Syria, particularly in the Lebanon mountains. Although Syria was not a great war factor as European countries were, its history during the war is parallel to that of Belgium in its suffering from disease, starvation and economic stress.

During the winter of 1918 the price of wheat began to rise to almost double its ordinary price. The cause of this was mostly due to the damaging of all crops by the past seasons, ravaged and swept over vegetation in millions. I remember in the early part of the war the Government ordered that all citizens and students should volunteer to help in the locust fight which was to place locust volunteers (which term some of our College students were pleased to call ourselves) through the streets of Beirut and down into the pine groves, situated at the south of the city, upon millions of locusts, handicapped from flying on account of their wings to stick and left their struck out and soon the fields were strewn with harmless bodies. It was a great harvest for the poor. The Government, under the Red Crescent Association, corresponding to our Red Cross, bought the locusts by the pound, and those who supplied them with bags soon had them filled with locusts.

As British subjects, I assure this kind of killing did not afford my brother and I, and many other anti-Turks, enough comfort to relieve us of the anxiety to do our "little bit" with the Allies.
The chief causes that were directly responsible for the misery and starvation in Syria are similar to those of any other war-torn nation. (Syria as a part of the Turkish Empire would fall under the category of a war-torn nation). In the first place, the Government starts to mobilize and soon all the labouring classes and young men of the country are following the colours—and as Syria is an agricultural country—most people could not utter the word "labouring class." Those of the Lebanon who were not called for military service were traders of some sort, found themselves out of employment. Building and construction work stopped and very little call for manual labour was asked for. The Lebanon farmer who had tillable soil began now to utilize it to its utmost. They could not afford to leave their fields.

ford to employ any of the "out of work" traders who were not farmers, as the productive output of the soil was not sufficient per capita to guarantee a subsistence. Communications with the wheat-fields became very difficult. The transportation of wheat could only be accomplished by camels and pack-mules. The only railway line was occupied by the Government for military purposes. There was no Government tariff which regulated prices of food stuffs. Those who could afford to purchase wheat had to pay for it as well as the heavy prices of transportation. Imagine then for yourselves what would happen. The poor class could not afford to buy bread; the middle class just found enough to scrape along, and in some cases kept up a meagre existence after having mortgaged every piece of property they had. The poor became poorer, the rich, richer through the latter class found themselves sometimes drawing heavily on their resources. Who was going to help the poor man? The Americans started a Red Cross relief committee, which, however, did not get off to a sooner had they begun, when the Turkish Government stopped them, stating that all relief work should be done by the Government and not by private persons, and especially not by foreigners. The argument was a selfish one, and an appealing one to the feelings of the natives it only created bitter hatred. The Americans started a relief organization because they felt that the Government was starving the people outright. Their policy was to acquire a sphere of influence, but what prestige could they have had in a country whose people hated them and their tyrannical rule. Like every other Turkish enterprise their relief associations in Beirut and Aleppo were soon after they were exposed, like highly volatile chemicals. Practically all the proceeds of the relief work were confiscated. Individual members of the Government who were the chief exponents of the relief committee, retaining enormous salaries for themselves. The Ministry in Constantinople granted them permission to obtain wheat and other provisions from the interior at military prices, very moderate in comparison with the market prices. The upper class, a few of the selfish rich citizens found in Beirut, associated themselves with the Government and purchased wheat at Government prices and sold it to the poor at high market rates.

In the beginning of 1917 one loaf of bread weighed about one half a pound, was sold for 50c, and was eaten by everybody, but wheat, flour and starvation prevailed everywhere and was horrible to look upon. People could be found dying of starvation in the streets of Beirut. The poor was not helped, but a quarter of a pound of bread to the poor, half-starved woman or child on the cold damp streets of Beirut was no comfort. Their days were over—their cases were hopeless. Hot soup, comfortable bedding and good nourishment were what they needed, but who was going to give it to them? The Turkish Government? They could not and who were justly prevented from helping the clergy who had nothing for themselves? No, the poor and half-starved wretches were left to their fate, helpless victims of starvation and disease were a burden on society. For the health and comfort of the better classes they must die, and they died, and disease generated by them was creeping over the country.

Financial and Other Conditions.
Readers, those were the thoughts that came to most of us who looked starvation in the face, who were driven to take care of themselves as best they could and who were justly prevented from helping the clergy who had nothing for themselves? No, the poor and half-starved wretches were left to their fate, helpless victims of starvation and disease were a burden on society. For the health and comfort of the better classes they must die, and they died, and disease generated by them was creeping over the country.

Lack of specie currency was another cause of misery. In October, 1915, paper money of the first issue began to circulate. It amounted to about Lq.20,989,000 (Turkish pound notes), or $55,585,850, and was issued by the Government. The purchasing value of the Turkish treasury bonds in the Turkish treasury, this series is perhaps the only issue that was safe during the war, and likely to be redeemed, and during the latter part of the war most individuals kept as much of the issue as they could. The purchasing value of the lot was fairly circulated, another amount about as large was issued with some kind of Turkish war bond security, and during the war these issues were of large denominations, consisting of twenty pound, ten pound, five pound, and one pound notes, and rarely were large denominations (pound) depreciated to ten per cent. of its face value. It was then that Gresham's law began to work. (Bad money drives out good money). All the gold and small subsidiary coins began to flow out of the market. The money press began to work, and as fast as the Government could print the money they began to circulate it until the whole issue amounted to about Lq.150,000,000 or $66,666,666. The money began to depreciate gradually year by year until in November, 1918, it depreciated to 25.75% of its face value. The purchasing value of articles then, was regulated both by the law of supply and demand and by the fluctuation of the paper currency. Shopping was a very interesting sight in Beirut. Imagine, if one wished to make a purchase of a complete outfit, one would need to have with one's person, or more preferable on the person of a hired porter, a big pile of bulky Turkish notes which rarely were in large denominations and very dirty to handle. A suit of clothes cost between Lq.40 and Lq.50 or $200; boots or shoes a pair, I am wearing a suit of clothes at the present moment which cost me $180, and a pair of boots which cost me $50.

The Government used many devices to stop the depreciation of paper money, and issued orders making it legal tender at face value for all transactions, but all in vain. Some citizens were deported for changing gold for paper and carrying on a trade in the exchange market, but even this step could not stop it; economical laws had to work. The officials themselves traded with the money—and I know from very reliable sources that some of the Government of Beirut, and Djemal Pasha, Minister of Marine and Commander General of the Fourth Army of the Empire, all their rotten paper money into gold. Both were far-sighted men, as well as very many other officials who took the example and seized the opportunity to secure for themselves a gold reserve whereby they could retire after the war in some far section of the world, or in some neutral country, and live at ease on blood money taken from the Syrian population.

To recapitulate, I would say that the chief reasons for the depreciation of Turkish paper money were:
First—Lack of confidence in Government treasury, and the distrust grew in proportion to the amount that was printed and dumped on the market.
Second—The paper currency, as against gold, became a piece of merchandise, and was bought and sold on the market at prices regulated by speculators.
Third—Lack of confidence in the Local Government, which, by the constant attempts, the face value of its notes.
Fourth—The example of some representatives of the law, who brought about the corruption of paper money by their secret speculations on the money market.
Fifth—The poor quality of paper on which the exchange value of the money was printed, made it deteriorate quickly and after a few months became so dirty that no decent person would finger it.

The causes of the high prices of food articles and other materials in Beirut and Syria were:
First—No foreign importations into the country, due to military blockade.
Second—Immense exportation of wheat to Germany.
Third—Influence on the market through the constant demand for food stuffs for the Army, and the demand for luxuries by high officials for elaborate receptions.

Such were the conditions of Syria during the war. The whole country has become a total wreck. The generation that came into the world during the war has been practically wiped out, but the future, a brilliant one lies before it. The change of Government that will take place now as a result of this war, will be a welcome one to the Syrians of Syria as well as the Syrian emigrants of this continent and elsewhere. For over four centuries Syria has suffered under the Turkish yoke, but now the future, a very prosperous one, is in store for it, and under sound economic principles and worn methods of organization, the country will in a few decades put all its resources into play, and the beautiful Lebanon mountains and the Lebanon coast, a summer resort and will help to add to the national income of the country.

Why You Say It.
"At Sixes and Sevens," or "at variances," is probably traceable to the fact that if you write the numerals 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, you come to six and seven, the former of which goes above the other figure, the latter below.
"Hip, hip, hurrah!"—Few of those who raise the English cheer are aware that they use a phrase associated with the persecution of the Jews. "Hip, hip" was originally a war-cry adopted by German knights in the olden days when they were engaged in a duel. The place of refuge being sacked, they were all put to death, amid shouts of "Hierosolyma est perdit!" (Jerusalem is destroyed), the initials of which form "Hip." Hence "Hip."
"The Baker's Dozen," or commonly known as thirteen, originates from Italy, though there it is called "a cobbler's dozen." There is a tradition that in Italy there was formerly a law compelling cobblers to put twelve nails round the edge of a boot heel, and that when the nails were cheap a thirteenth was driven in the centre for luck.
"In a Trice" comes from the Spanish "trix," or "trix." A trice is the sixth part of a second of time. The hour is divided into sixty minutes, the minute into sixty seconds, or the second into sixty trices, or "Not Worth a Straw" means to imply that a thing is worthless, but the original saying was "not worth a rush." In the days before acetyls it was the custom to strew the floor with rushes. When guests of rank were entertained fresh rushes were spread for them; but folk of lower degree had to be content with rush-strewed floors. ### No edge without stropping

Provide a barber with a number of the highest-priced razors obtainable and stipulate that he must use a new razor on every individual customer and he would refuse if he valued his trade.

Stropping, you see, is needful because it removes the roughness of the new blade and re-aligns the saw-like edge that shaving produces; because it keeps the blade free from rust; and because it is the only means that will provide you each morning with a keen edge for shaving.

You don't take the blade out to sharpen it; nor do you take the AutoStrop Razor apart to clean it. From first to last—stropping, shaving and cleaning—you never need to remove the blade from the razor.

You can get an AutoStrop Razor anywhere—razor, strop and 12 blades, complete, in attractive case, for $5.00.

What People Say

By RUTH C...

Do the things which people say under the stress of excitement indicate the true in war days of their characters?

This subject came up the other day about a story which one of our friends told of a woman whose character was being discussed.

She—the friend—once took this woman into her home as a paying guest for a winter. Partly to make the guest more comfortable and partly to keep the privacy of her own breakfast table inviolate she used to serve the guests' breakfast in bed.

The Tray Went Crashing Down The Stairs.
Now one morning when the little maid was carrying the breakfast tray upstairs she stumbled and fell. The tray went crashing to the bottom of the stairs breaking a goodly part of the hostess china, the maid herself cut her hand on a broken tumbler and bruised her knee. Whereupon the paying guest came to the door in her pajamas and seeing the accident cried out, "And now I shan't have any fresh egg this morning" (the hostess was in the habit of procuring two absolutely fresh eggs from a neighbour to the guest's breakfast.)
Not a word of anxiety for the poor little maid, not a word of regret for the broken china, just a thought for her own comfort.

The Hostess Was Indignant.
Naturally the hostess was indignant. Who wouldn't be?
And naturally she was inclined to regard that as a revelation of character.

At first I grieved with her. But afterwards I wondered.
And the basis of my wonder was this. Sometimes in moments of excitement I have heard myself say things that I didn't mean at all; things that surprised me; trivial things that really bore no relation to my true emotions.
Haven't you sometimes had that experience?
And wouldn't you hate to be judged thereby?

What People Say in Excitement.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Do the things which people say under the stress of excitement indicate the true inwardness of their character?

This is a subject which came up the other day at a story which one of our friends told of a woman whose character was being discussed.

She—the friend—once took this woman into her home as a paying guest for a winter. Fairly to make the guest more comfortable and partly to keep the privacy of her own breakfast table inviolate she used to serve the guests' breakfast in bed.

Now one morning when the little maid was carrying the breakfast tray upstairs she stumbled and fell. The tray went crashing to the bottom of the stairs breaking a goodly part of the hostess china, the maid herself cut her hand on the broken tumbler and bruised her knee. Whereupon the paying guest came to the door in her pajamas and seeing the accident cried out: "And now I shan't have any fresh egg this morning" (the hostess was in the habit of procuring two absolutely fresh eggs from a neighbour for the guests' breakfast.)

Stecher Defeated Zbyszko.

Louisville, Ky., May 10.—Joe Stecher, of Nebraska, defeated Wladislaw Zbyszko, of Poland, here last night in 145.15. Stecher used the body scissors and bar arm holds. It was stipulated that one fall should decide the wrestling match if it continued more than an hour and thirty minutes. The contest was advertised for the heavyweight championship.

Stecher was on the offensive virtually the entire time. He obtained several scissors holds on Zbyszko before the one that brought him victory, but the Polish wrestler broke them with apparent ease. Stecher was in real danger only once, when Zbyszko obtained a toe hold after breaking one the Nebraska man had applied. Zbyszko weighed 220 pounds and Stecher 215, it was announced from the ring.

World's Oldest Folk.

In the extreme north of the Russian province of Archangel, where thirteen thousand British soldiers are just now fighting for their lives, dwells one of the queerest and least known races of mankind.

These are the Samoyedes, the wandering tribes of the vast frozen marshes which extend in these regions from the forest belt to the shores of the Arctic Ocean.

Like the Bedouins of the Sahara, these people owe allegiance to no master. Civilization has passed by them in its stride, and they live to-day pretty much as our forefathers here in Britain lived twenty centuries or more ago.

They worship idols and their sole wealth consists in reindeer. Indeed, but for these hardy animals existence in the icy solitudes would be impossible.

Living, the reindeer draws the sledge which transports the Samoyede and his belongings from spot to spot in search of the game and fish, which constitute his principal sustenance. Dead, it provides him with meat in times of scarcity, and with skin for his family tent.

With its sharpened bones he tips his wooden fishing harpoons and hunting spears. Its sinews he uses to sew together the shirt, breeches, and boots of sealfish, which are the attire alike of the Samoyede men, women and children.

Just a few that come to play Some to joke and some to sing Till the old walls fairly ring. How the minutes slip away When you're loving people so. Oh how soon they have to go.

Give me six or eight old friends Now and then when day is done Full of mirth and honest fun And when that convention ends I'll declare with joyous sublimity That I've had a real time.

The sports skirt and hat frequently are of the same material. White silk braid is used as trimming for crepe de chine underwear. Brilliantly colored capes are excellent for daytime or evening wear. A pretty frock of Legion blue cotton crepe is hemstitched in brown.

The Power of the Press.

The day is assuredly at hand when the trite subject, resolved that the pen is mightier than the sword, will no longer be available for debates in country schools. A little reflection on the steadily increasing influence of the printed page is now a very definite force, and that by virtue of its peculiar advantages over other agencies, it is likely to arrogate to itself in future much of the authority now being exercised by individuals, societies, and business institutions over the motives and actions of mankind.

Printing was discovered by John Guttenberg in 1450. He had cut the letters of his name from the bark of a tree, and was spreading them to form his name, when one of them fell into a pot of boiling dye. Quickly he plunged his fingers in to rescue the letter; but finding it very hot, he turned it loose. It fell upon one of the white skins which were waiting to be dyed, and when John lifted the block he saw a beautiful purple white "H" smiling up at him. That was the first letter ever printed on the continent of Europe.

The first newspaper, however, was the Peking Tchingpao (News of the Capital) in the year 713 of the Tang dynasty in China. Daniel Defoe started the first newspaper in England. The first American newspaper was "Public Occurrences," begun in Boston in 1690. In 1900 the United States published forty per cent. of the newspapers of the world, that is out of the 50,000 newspapers then published in the United States. All the newspapers in America now publish about 15,000,000 copies per year.

Only a few days ago the prime minister of England took pains to hurl his most caustic invective against the Northcliffe publications, having determined, no doubt, to destroy their prestige before they could begin to turn the tide of public opinion against him. Last week, in the Canadian Parliament, Mr. Mackie, of Edmonton East, in the course of a long and bitter complaint, declared that a Winnipeg reporter had almost ruined him politically by maliciously wiring a highly falsified interview to Edmonton. There was not a reliable reporter in the press gallery, he declared, except Ford, and he was reliable only because he sent nothing west. He exhorted the press gallery men to be fair and honest in their reports. These charges were consonant with those of Mr. Lemieux, who emphasized the vital importance of an unadulterated public opinion expressed through the newspapers of the country, as well as the peril of publications controlled by powerful and

Fads and Fashions.

Nacre buttons are new. Long lace sleeves are graceful. Jewels are very much in vogue. The draped collar is much worn. Once more we see the real girle. Prospects are bright for draped veils. Beaded girdles are much in evidence. The new three-buckle oxford is smart. Flame colored tulle is much in evidence. Organdie frocks in two tones are fashionable. Black Chantilly is among the old laces revived. Jet tassels possess much decorative quality. Dove-gray is popular for the traveling suit. One picturesque train ended in a huge satin rose.

THE DRY TIMES.
When thirst has made us faint and weary, and sore and on the blink, we always have such lakes as Erie, at which to get a drink. Some look with dire and dark misgiving, upon the days to come, and say there'll be no joy in living, without the demon rum. I hold said demon in abhorrence, I'm glad he has to flee; I'll blow the foam off the St. Lawrence, and drink it down with glee. One half of all the old world's sorrow was brought about by Booses; and I am glad that on the morrow his number he will lose. I've never seen a man the better, more worthy of his salt, for carrying inside his sweater a load of liquors matt. The world will multiply its splendors, and homes will be made glad, when diamond studded Rum Hole tenders can't sell their goods to Dad. The joint still stands with all its gilding, but soon its graft 'twill lose, and wages then will go home. To talk of thirst is vain and dippy; why yearn for liquids pink? We always have the Mississippi, three thousand miles of drink.

General Sympathy.

There is no doubt that the feeling of general sympathy which is being freely expressed for our American Cousins is both deep and genuine. Having been so successful in the flight of their dirigible airship from Montauk to this point, a flight which will be ever memorable in ballooning history, it is keenly disappointing to them that disaster should so suddenly have overtaken their craft, within such a short period after arrival, thus preventing them from carrying out whatever projects they may have contemplated with regard to further continuing the air voyage across the Atlantic, or of flying back to the starting point.

It must also be a cause of regret and disappointment to our English brothers, that adverse conditions, (not altogether local) have militated against their getting away on their long distance flight from Newfoundland to Ireland. They too have been waiting and hoping, making a virtue of necessity, and daily expecting the good word which will send them humming through the ethereal spaces in the greatest adventure upon which man ever set out. Their disappointments are reflected in our people, who are as much interested in the aerial journey, as are the aviators themselves, and are keenly in sympathy with the courageous men who are patiently, though anxiously, watching all the weather reports from the various meteorological bureaus, in momentary expectation of the favorable opportunity. We trust that the omens will soon be propitious and that the signal to start may not be much longer delayed.

Our American correspondent makes the statement that Newfoundland is acquiring an unenviable reputation for bad weather, because all the stories of the air flights published in the American press, emphasize that atmospheric conditions in this domain are responsible for the delay in hopping off, and that we are constantly shrouded in dense fogs, drenched with rain, and blockaded with ice. All these stories are gross libels on our climate. Far from being adverse, the weather about St. John's and along the coast has been most fair, considering the season, and therefore the blame for the holding up of the aviators must not be laid on Newfoundland. True April and May are not considered summer months by any means, neither do we expect summer weather in them. Nevertheless it is remarkable that this season everything has been uncommonly fair, with pleasant breezes and clear skies. The fault, if fault there be, does not rest with this island. So far as local conditions were concerned the flights could have taken place on most any day since the machines were in readiness, and it is grossly unjust of correspondents to lay on the fair fame of Newfoundland and her ideal weather all the blame for the nonstarts of the transatlantic air voyage.

All that we hope is that the time will soon be opportune and that the most wonderful feat in the history of the world will be successfully accomplished, not only by one, but by all who are now preparing to undertake it.

Man Drowned.

The Deputy Minister of Customs received the following message this morning:
"John Cluett, Geo. Gilbert and Wm. Cluett fishing at Woody Head, near Dantzic, Fortune Bay, left for St. Pierre on Wednesday, May 14th, in motor dory, without a clearance, arriving back at Woody Head the same evening. Wm. Cluett fell from the engine house into the water and was drowned."

Cochrane Street Centennial Church.

At this Church, to-morrow has been set apart as a day to be devoted to the consideration of the Mission Work of the Church, and an objective of $2,000 has been put down as the congregation's contribution in this great cause. The services will be of a special character, and the Rev. W. H. Barraclough, B.A., of Moncton, has been invited to place the problems of this great question before the people. At the morning service he will speak on "The British Empire—The Light Bearer of the Nations," and in the evening his subject will be "The Oriental in America—A Peril or an Opportunity." At the evening service also, the congregation will have the privilege of hearing Mrs. Pilsent, our own Missionary from Japan, speak of her experiences. Hon. R. K. Bishop has kindly consented to take the chair. The choir will provide special music. Visitors will be welcomed.

Stranded Schooner Floated.

Special to Evening Telegram.
ST. LAWRENCE, May 16, '19.
Schr. Aviator, stranded here early in February last, after fruitless attempts to tow her out as Kliscoe and Ethie, and given up by the Insurance Companies, after an expenditure of about $15,000, was then purchased by the Bay of Islands Fisheries Co., and was successfully taken off last evening. J. F. Barry, of Bay of Islands superintended the job. The Aviator leaves for St. Pierre to-night.

Last Night's Lecture.

Rev. Barraclough Says, "Lack of Education in Western Provinces Constitutes Serious Menace to Future Well Being of Canada."

The Lecture Room of the Cochrane Street Centennial Church, last night, contained a representative gathering of the members of the different Women's Missionary Societies of the City, who listened to an inspiring address by the Rev. W. Barraclough, B.A., on "Women's Work in the West." The address covered a short review of the work of such pioneers of Missionary endeavour as Emma Crosby, Miss Lee, Thomas Crosby and William Duncan. It also dealt with the work now being carried on through the assistance rendered by the various Women's Societies, showing how well the money was spent and how great was the need for still more help, if the Christian Church was to fulfil its duties to the foreigners within our gates. Touching upon the Alien problem, the rev. gentleman said it was of the greatest concern, both to the Church and the State. There were 800,000 non-English speaking people in Canada, a large portion of whom came from Southern Europe. Many of them were living to themselves, and this constituted a serious menace to the future well-being of Canada. Lack of education facilities were one of the causes for this condition of things. In the Province of Alberta alone 900 schools were short of teachers, and 15,000 alien children were without a teacher. That meant the children would preserve the ideas of their fathers and grow up in an atmosphere, the result of which will be the reaping of a whirlwind, unless it is immediately grappled with.

Very interesting was the description of work among the Orientals, and the heroism of self-sacrifice and devotion of the Missionaries wives, and of the nurses engaged in hospital work showed a loyalty to the King of Kings and to the State that may well be emulated by Christians everywhere.
The rev. gentleman is a pleasing speaker, one of the best informed Canadians on the alien problem, gained by experience and study, and may be ranked as one of the leading statesmen of the Methodist Church of Canada and Newfoundland.

Two Weeks More.

Boys and girls who wish to enter our Free Competition have still two weeks more in which to send in their letters. Already we have received a large number of letters from all over the island, and expect many more. The conditions of the contest are extremely simple and it costs nothing to try.
Just write a short advertisement in the form of a letter, of not more than seventy words, showing why the Waterman Fountain Pen is superior to all others.
Please say which school you attend. Envelopes should be marked—Waterman Fountain Pen Advertis., and the first three such letters opened at 3 p.m. on Saturday, May 21st, will be entitled to the following cash prizes:
1st prize for 1st letter opened $5.00.
2nd prize for 2nd letter opened $3.00.
3rd prize for 3rd letter opened $2.00.
We will also award three other prizes of the same amounts—$5.00, $3.00 and $2.00 respectively for the three letters we consider the best composed.
In addition to these six prizes we will also present a Waterman Fountain Pen to each successful contestant, and lastly we will pay fifty cents for every letter we make use of in an advertising way.

Personal Mention.

Detective Sergt. P. O'Neill leaves by the express tomorrow enroute to New York where he will shortly marry Miss Jessie O'Neill sister of Rev. T. O'Neill and niece of His Lordship Bishop March. The bride-elect recently left Harbor Grace for Brooklyn, where she has resided for some years. His Lordship Bishop March of Harbor Grace diocese will also go out by tomorrow's express and will likely perform the marriage ceremony.
The Orchestral Score of the "Mikado" has been hired from Mrs. O'Doyle Carte. The costumes are coming on the "Adolph." A spectacular and delightful performance assured. Secure your tickets in time. may17,11

IMPORTANT CAPTURE.

(Reuters Ottawa Agency.)—It is learned that General Barret's troops occupied Dacca, in Afghanistan, on May 15. This is a most important operation and the British are definitely stopped the menace to Kandahar. The movement is regarded as showing that the movement will Fizele out. Dacca is situated at a very important point on the Kabul River and its loss will greatly damage the Afghans prestige.

CAPE RACE, To-day.
Wind light and variable; weather fine. 13 icebergs in sight. The steam launch Tommy passed west at 3.30 p.m. yesterday. No shipping in sight today. The three American Seaplanes that left Trepassay yesterday evening for the transatlantic flight, passed about 3 miles west of this station. These majestic airbirds were certainly a beautiful sight, as they moved with great speed through the air. From the time when first sighted until they were hidden by the horizon, was seventeen minutes. We also saw the first destroyer flashing signals, to the Seaplanes as they disappeared from our view. Everything could be distinctly observed by our large telescope. The Seaplanes, along and the noise of their engines was plainly heard. The evening was perfect, being clear and calm, which added considerably to this great sight. Bar. 29.75; Ther. 48.

To-day's Messages.

TROUBLE EXPECTED.
PARIS, May 16.
An extensive allied naval concentration has been begun at Smyrna, in connection with a mandate to Greece to administer the city.

ARRANGING SETTLEMENT.
PARIS, May 16.
Negotiations are pending for the adjustment of the Adriatic controversy. They contemplate a direct settlement between Italy and Jugo-Slavia, through American mediation.

LEFT BUDAPEST.

VIENNA, May 15.
All the Allied representatives have left Budapest, and Redguards are digging trenches about the city. Since the apparent failure of the Czecho Slovak-Romanian offensive, the Anglo-Americans are less popular with the Soviet. Ten days ago the Soviet adherents were in a panic and were prepared for flight, burning official papers.

THE CORRECT POSITION.

VERSAILLES, May 16.
A distinct impression among some of the subordinate members of the German Peace Mission, that the Germans will sign the Peace Treaty, is reflected in the remark of one of the secretaries, who is quoted as saying "that when we do our best, we are on the ground and your knees are on our stomachs, and your thumbs are in our eyes."

PEREMPTORY ANSWER.

PARIS, May 16.
A peremptory answer to the German Note, registering objection to the proposed territorial affairs, it was reported this morning. The reply, it was expected, would be submitted to the Council of Four to-day.

CHURCHILL AND REBATES.

LONDON, May 16.
(Reuters Ottawa Agency.)—The Right Hon. Winston Churchill, Secretary of State for war, said he did not consider the proposal to give the dominions a rebate on taxation, raised the general free trade issue. Recalling his phrase "The door is being bolted and barred against taxation on foodstuffs," he said he always considered that a rebate of different kinds, if it removed taxation from food, it would certainly add to the cost of living, or in any way burden our people. It should not be treated as a question of principle, but as a measure of imperial diplomacy, designed to express the warmth of our gratitude for the dominions in the war. The dominions wanted this rebate and we would be wise to concede it, while keeping the great body of doctrine and practice intact.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Detective Sergt. P. O'Neill leaves by the express tomorrow enroute to New York where he will shortly marry Miss Jessie O'Neill sister of Rev. T. O'Neill and niece of His Lordship Bishop March. The bride-elect recently left Harbor Grace for Brooklyn, where she has resided for some years. His Lordship Bishop March of Harbor Grace diocese will also go out by tomorrow's express and will likely perform the marriage ceremony.
The Orchestral Score of the "Mikado" has been hired from Mrs. O'Doyle Carte. The costumes are coming on the "Adolph." A spectacular and delightful performance assured. Secure your tickets in time. may17,11

OBITUARY.

THOMAS HYNES.
There passed away on Thursday evening, at his residence, Cross Roads a well known and respected resident of the city in the person of Mr. Thomas Hynes (ex-soldier) and an old Crimian veteran. He was a fine type of a true British soldier and was amongst the first to be stationed here in the early garrison days. His family will miss him sorely, as he was a kind and loving parent, but to them he leaves the memory of an honorable, quiet and peaceful life. The funeral took place this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The PLANE

"Nancy" One, The Trepassay 7.45

At last, after days of anxious waiting, the American Navy Seaplanes One, Three and Four have set out on their great journey to the Azores, a distance of 1800 miles. At 6.16 the Seaplanes slipped their moorings and Commander Teters was the first to make his "take-off." Shooting along the surface of the harbor at high speed, the sprat dashing on all sides, she took the rise as graceful as a swan. Five minutes later Bellingier, in the One, followed Commander Read, in the Four, was the last to leave. Teters in the Three, lifted open the harbor to the mouth of the Reach. Having risen beautifully he circled around Powell's Head, across Mutton Bay to the Cape and then back to the harbor, and reported conditions for the flight to be ideal. Almost instantly One and Four got going the Three being first, Four second and One third to get away.

The PLANES ARE OFF

"Nancys" One, Three and Four Left
Trepassey 7.45 Last Evening.

TREPASSEY, To-Day.
At last, after days of anxious waiting, the American Navy Seaplanes One, Three and Four have set out on their great journey to the Azores, a distance of 1200 miles. At 6.15 the Seaplanes slipped their moorings and Commander Townes was the first to make his "take-off." Shooting along the surface of the harbor at high speed, the spray dashing on all sides, he took the risks as graceful as a swan. Five minutes later Bellingier, in the One, followed Commander Read, in the Two, was the last to leave. Towers Four, was the last to leave the harbor in the mouth of the Reach. Having then beautifully circled out around Fretwell's Head, across Mutton Bay to the Cape and then back to the harbor and reported conditions for the flight to be ideal. Almost instantly One and Four got going, the Three being first, Four second and One third to get away.

The last that could be seen of them, five minutes after their departure, showed them in triangle formation, two miles distance being between them. The weather conditions were perfect a N. W. breeze blow from early in the morning at the rate of 15 miles an hour, and the Trepassey-Azores line of ships reported conditions in the Atlantic to be good.
Each seaplane carried its crew of 6, the full oil supply, however being less by 150 gallons. This reduction was made as a result of the planes failure to take-off on Thursday, when the weight was found to be too great. Confidence that the planes will make the voyage successfully and safely is felt here.
U. S. S. Aroostook is to sail to-day for Plymouth, possibly via the Azores. The Prairie will sail for New Port, R. I. The Hiko, fuel oil tanker, will sail for the Atlantic to refuel the destroyers Four second and One third to get away, posted along the route.

THE FEAT ACCOMPLISHED!

NC-4 Makes Sensational Flight.

FLASH—N. C. 4 arrives at Azores.

The apparently impossible has been performed with the crossing of the Trepassey-Azores leg of the trans-Atlantic flight by the American Navy Seaplane Four shortly after ten (Azores time) this morning. This would make the flight one of approximately 12 hours. To the Yanks we proffer sincerest congratulations. N.C. 1 and 2 have not been reported up to press hour, though the experts on the Chicago anticipate that they are not far behind commander Read.

No information that would lead to the finding of the Balloon C-5 has been forthcoming, and the belief that she has sunk has grown and is now firmly established.

The Ice Cream Fiend.

(Inspired by a Visit to the Palm Room Annex of the Blue Puttee.)
In a gaily lighted parlour, on a marble table top,
In a corner where the Palm seclusion shows,
Will be found a bright collection which surpasses "Ginger pop,"
And eclipses New York's famous "Lemon Snows."
It's a mixture with a "Sundae" and a touch or two of fruit,
And chopped Walnuts spread alluringly around;
But the joy it gives the palate is far "better" than a "root"
And you pay a "bit" although its worth a pound.

So cheer-oh, my comrades, if you want to taste the prize,
In an atmosphere as healthy as can be;
Have a "Merry Widow" Sundae or some "Orange Float" supplies
At the dainty annex to THE BLUE PUTTEE.

Forty Years in the public service—The Evening Telegram.

College Extension.

The initial work of the College Extension Campaign has been well organized during the past week, and all the committees are beginning to find their work; and after a while the entire machinery of the enterprise will be in full operation. This movement is one that all our people, of all classes, will watch with interest; and every citizen who believes in the improvement of St. John's will extend his sympathy to its success. But the movement is wider than St. John's, and is intended for the benefit of the whole Dominion, and it will establish a bond of unity with many of our people, which otherwise could not be effected. Therefore, to make the most of this opportunity, the committee in general, or we had perhaps better say, the executive, have begun their work with excellent system; and while each department will push its own special work, due care has been taken, so as to avoid anything like overlapping. It is meant to begin well, for "well begun is half done."

When we bear in mind that this movement is for the cause of Education, we at once see its importance, and begin to comprehend its worth. Much has been done by all the religious denominations towards the promotion of education, and many good and worthy men have devoted their lives to its welfare. They were enthusiasts in their calling, and were masters in what they did. Devoted and holy women have also left their impress upon this great cause, and in their ranks to-day are to be found a noble army of valiant teachers. These teachers mould the thought of the scholars, and they rank next to the clergy in the importance of their calling.

The present age owes a big debt of gratitude to those who were instrumental in bringing our educational system up to its present status; and one of the best means of expressing this gratitude is by adopting the most up-to-date facilities for the furtherance of the work. This is what this extension campaign intends to do, and it is for this purpose that it has been inaugurated. Having made this point, we have, for the present, said enough.—I.C.M.

 2-round Boxing Match—U.S.S. Chicago's men.
 Song—Leonard Burke.
 Recitation—P. Halley.
 Song—R. Boggan.
 3-round Boxing Match—Two of the crew.
 Step-Dance—M. E. Mallowney.
 Dance—Mt. Cashel Boys.
 Song—C. J. Fox.
 Sport—Gunner's-Mate Raymond.

During the evening the splendid full band of the U.S.S. Chicago rendered several delightful selections, charming all with their perfect rendition of beautiful music, and closed the evening's entertainment with the American and English National Airs. Hearty cheers were given for the U.S.S. Chicago's men, Bro. Ennis and Mt. Cashel boys and Terra Nova Council.

The hosting bout was among the most interesting items of the programme, the contestants giving exhibitions that won much applause. Notes of regret at their inability to be present were received from Admiral Wood, Capt. Kurtz, Commander H. T. Keys, and others of the staff—His Excellency the Governor being the guest of Admiral Wood at dinner on board the Chicago. During their stay in the city the crew of the cruiser have had the use of the K. of C. rooms as far as desired, a kindness much appreciated by them.

Times Dull in U. S.

By recent letters received in the city we learn that times are rather dull in parts of the United States, particularly Boston, where little or nothing is being done in the building trades; and it is hard for carpenters and others to get any employment at all. Soldiers are arriving in large numbers every day and it is only now, that they are coming back, people are beginning to realize the immense number that went over seas. Our informants say that everything is in an unsettled condition at present; but hopes are entertained that in a little while things will come right and conditions assume their pre-war activities.

G. W. V. A. Annual.

The annual meeting of the G.W.V.A. was held last night, a large number of members attending. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, H. Mitchell; V.P., L. C. Murphy; 2nd V.P., E. Shea; Secretary-Treas., F. P. LeGrow. Mr. Mitchell was the only nominee for President and was returned unanimously. Three offices were contested, the Vice and 2nd Vice Presidency, Capt. L. C. Murphy and Pte. A. Pratt having been nominated for the former and Corp. E. Shea and Pte. B. Murphy for the latter, and that of Secretary, for which F. P. LeGrow and P. B. Harris were nominated. Pte. B. Harris, who has been Secretary-Treasurer since the organization and who was re-appointed at a previous meeting, was reluctantly obliged to resign owing to business interests, and is succeeded by Sergt. Major F. P. LeGrow, at present attached to the Militia Office. This position has now been made a salaried one, and a suite of offices has been taken in the Martin Building, where the holder will devote all his time to the Association's affairs. The report of Secretary Harris showed a credit balance of $3,200. Several present expressed deep regret at his retirement and eulogized his work in the past. He was asked by the meeting to join the Executive, which was elected as follows: Lieut. C. B. Carter, Corp. P. Mansfield, Sergt. Major J. Brett, Sergt. Major D. Moore, W. O. Chesley Keasley, R.N.R., Sergt. T. Morrissey, Lieut. Stan Dunder, R.N.R., Sergt. Major Lever, Lieut. W. L. Woods, Pte. B. B. Harris and Pte. A. Pratt. After votes of thanks had been passed the retiring officers, Capt. Murphy, Sergt. Morrissey and Lieut. O'Rourke who conducted the election, and the Press, the meeting closed.

A New Laundry.

The newest industry to be established in St. John's is the Star Laundry Co., which opens for business Monday on Pleasant, just off New Gower Street. The building, which is new, contains three storeys, and is equipped with the most modern, up-to-date and efficient machinery made. Among these are three washers, capable of handling from 50 to 100 shirts at a time; a high-power extractor, which wrings 500 pieces in 20 minutes; a neck and wrist band machine, neck-band press, collar seam dumper, a hand collar-shaper, and a tube shaper. The specialty of the concern will be coloring and dry work. The proprietors are two men of ten years' experience each. They have decided to have Wednesdays as visiting days, when the general public is invited to go and be shown over the works. To them we extend the wish that their success will be quick and sure.

Wage Offer Refused.

A largely attended meeting of the L. S. P. U. was held last night, when the deputation appointed to interview the merchants as to the increase of wages, reported that an offer had been made of 27 cents per hour for general work and 35 cents for work at the pack, barrow and screw. The previous rate of pay was 24 and 30 cents and the present demand is for 30 and 40 cents. It was decided to refuse the com promise offer. The increase applies only to those employed on the fish premises and not at steamboats.

Big Ben

An idea was back of every Westclox alarm. That same idea is back of every Westclox alarm—to make good clocks, to make them accurate, serviceable, dependable.

When you find the trade mark Westclox on the dial of an alarm, you have found a quality clock.

It means that the clock has the patented Westclox construction. Needle-fine pivots of polished steel greatly reduce friction.

Before it leaves the factory, every Westclox alarm has to pass several rigid tests and inspections. Your dealer has them. Ask to see the Westclox line. Big Ben is $4.00.

A Queen's Peasant Lover.

The Tragic Story of the English White Rose.

(Pearson's Weekly.)

It was a very evil day for Caroline Matilda, sister of our third George, when, with streaming eyes and an aching heart she saw the coast of her beloved England fade away on her bridal voyage to Denmark and to an unknown husband.

"Why," she had sobbed in the arms of her aunt, the Princess Matilda, "do they want to send me away? I am so happy here—and I am so young."

This child—for she was no more—the golden hair and blue eyes asked nothing better of life than to spend it among the beautiful flowers of her Kew Garden, surrounded by those she loved and who loved her.

It was thus a cruel fate that banished her over the seas to become the bride of Denmark's Crown Prince, a man on whom she had never even set eyes.

When, however, she arrived at Roskilde and was greeted with warm embraces by a youth, little older than herself, comely to look upon, gallant in bearing and courtly in manner, all her fears fell from her; for she could surely find happiness with one so pleasing to the eye and so obviously in love with her.

Found He was an Epileptic.

But the "English White Rose" was not left long to enjoy so fair a dream. Her Prince, it was true, was a well-seeming youth, of brave and courtly exterior; but he was, as she soon discovered, an epileptic, already under the cloud of the madness which was so soon to descend on him.

Almost before Christian's first kisses of welcome were cold on her lips he began to treat her with aversion and cruelty. At his wedding-banquet he was drunk when he took his seat by her side; and, when he saw the tears in her eyes, he declared aloud that he had "no use for a wife who was always weeping." And, at its conclusion, he left her, to spend the night in a drunken orgy with his boon comrades.

Thus, in daily misery and humiliation passed a few years marked by every exhibition of cruelty Christian's disordered brain could devise. Then came for his unhappy Queen, as she now was, a dramatic change, with the coming to the Danish Court of John Frederick Struensee, a low-born adventurer who posed as a physician of wonderful gifts, and who had wormed himself into the favour of the weak King.

Ladies' Blouses Made From Sour Milk.

Remarkable Work of French Scientists.

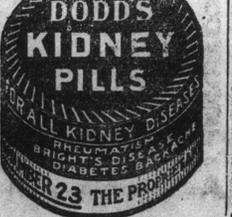

If one or two discoveries which have been made during the last twelve months develop along possible lines, we ought to see some interesting fashion notes in a few years' time. Fancy taking up a morning paper and reading a society paragraph to the effect that "Lady X. looked very chic in a tailor-made costume of fine-spun wood, with a sour-milk blouse, trimmed with very dainty yeast buttons."

Of course, it sounds utterly ridiculous, yet such a thing has passed beyond the realm of fancy; in a few years it may be an accomplished fact. Two celebrated French scientists recently exhibited sets of undergarments made entirely, material and buttons alike, from sour milk. These men found that when they pressed the curds and dried them in the open air, they had left a grey, putty-like substance.

This they treated with acetone, a chemical distilled from wood, with the result that they obtained two new substances, one a hard material from which they could cut buttons, and so on, and the other a soft material which they could draw out into fine silky threads. The weaving of these threads into a soft fabric was a simple matter.

Formerly one of the big waste products of the brewing industry was the spent yeast. A small amount of it was handed over to the baker and a larger amount was utilized for the purpose of making soap tablets and other patent foods.

Now it has been discovered that the material left has a great commercial value. It is a soft grey substance which can be modelled to any required shape and will take both color and grain; it is known to the trade as ernolith.

When dried it yields a powder which can be hot-pressed to any design, and which sets to a hard ivory-like substance. It can be turned, drilled, scraped and filed, and it takes a high polish.

From it countless articles, such as combs, buttons, brush and knife handles, previously made from bone, ivory, or celluloid, can be made and made cheaply. So that buttons from yeast is a certain thing of the future.

SHEDDING THEIR BODIES.

People who lose a leg or an arm feel it to be a great misfortune. But a lobster or a crab does not mind. He simply grows another leg in its place. Even one of the lobster's big claws is no such great loss. A lizard can not afford to lose a leg, but if you seize him by the tail he says, "Good-bye, tail!" and scurries off over the rocks, leaving it in your hand. As for the starfish, the piece broken off in a short time mends matters by growing a whole new body to fit that piece.

Apron fronts and backs are seen on lingerie frocks.
