AT GLOUCESTER, VIRGINIA, THE OTHER DAY.

At a coloured church, just as the preacher had got under weigh, the gallery cracked, and an old woman cried out: "Blessed God the judgment day has come." Then ensued a scene at which human nature shudders. Strong men and weak women leaped from the gallery upon the dense crowd in the middle of the lower floor.

IT IS RELATED OF CAPTAIN HALL.

It is related of Captain Hall, that after infinite toil and hazard in his great sledge journey in search of relics of Sir John Franklin and after unparalleled success in tracing the lost explorer, he returned to his home and kept locked from human eyes the saddest record of the lost, intending it should never see the light until after the death of Franklin's aged and mourning widow. He kept his resolution well, taking the papers with him on the Polaris so they might be always near him.

Guelph Evening Mercury

THURSDAY EVENING, OCT. 9, 1873

Town and County News.

Mount Forest was visited with a slight flurry of snow yesterday.

Thursday, November 6th, is to be the Thanksgiving Day for our bountiful harvest.

Mr. J. Hewer, of Guelph, has sold the well-known stallion "Guelph Hero" to Mr. Charles Stovel, of Walkerton, for the handsome sum of $800.

It is said that Mr. J. Gordon Brown, the Editor-in-chief of The Globe, will leave Toronto shortly for a few months' sojourn in California or the West Indies, in which case Mr. A. H. Dymond will probably act as managing editor.

Y. M. C. A. - The regular weekly literary meeting of the Association will be held this (Thursday) evening in the rooms at 8 o'clock. The reading of a manuscript magazine, composed of original contributions from the members and choice selections, will form a very interesting feature of the programme. All are invited to attend.

The Rockwood social in aid of the Sunday-school library, held in the Town Hall last Friday evening, was peculiarly successful - thanks to the untiring efforts of the lady teachers, the kindly assistance of the Rev. Mr. Reeve and the Rev. Mr. Jones, the efforts of the singers, who so ably furnished the programme, and of the ladies who contributed baskets so cordially and abundantly.

On Wednesday a sad accident occurred near Little Germany, a place about twelve miles from Hespeler. A man named Geo. Messner, while working at threshing, by some means or other got into the machine and had his legs broken and his body seriously injured. Dr. Bowley, of Berlin, was called, but thinks there is very little hope of his recovery.

SHEEP WORRIED. - George Gray, Mount Forest, had six sheep worried to death by dogs on Monday night. He lost two previously, and on Monday night, he and another man came upon the dogs while committing the deed. They fired at them and followed them across to a neighbour's house. Several in the same neighborhood have lost sheep lately from the same cause.

ANOTHER DEPARTURE. - On Wednesday night an oyster supper was given by members of the Maple Leaf Base-ball club to Mr. W. S. Smith, the well-known pitcher of the club. From 25 to 30 persons partook of the supper, which was served up at the Queen's Hotel in Mr. Bookless' usual efficient style. A very pleasant social evening was spent together by the party after the cloth was withdrawn, and the guest of the evening was heartily toasted. Mr. Smith leaves for the old country to-day, accompanied by Mr. Alfred Burrows, via New York, whence they will sail on Saturday for Liverpool. "Billy Smith" will be a great loss to the Maple Leaf boys, as it is uncertain whether he will return to Canada. "Billy" has our best wishes for his welfare.

FOXHUNT. - Considerable fun has been had during the past two nights by some of the residents of the West Ward in endeavoring to catch a fox, which, no doubt, has escaped from the custody of some of the neighbours in the vicinity. On Tuesday night Reynard made his appearance from behind a wood-pile. A hue and cry was at once raised, and a number of juveniles, accompanied by some of their elders, gave chase, armed with an assortment of broomsticks, ropes, and garden tools. The fox got clear off, however, but on Wednesday night he made his appearance again, munching the apples of a peaceful resident, and another halibut was raised. After much running and fence climbing, the fox again got off; but this morning he was found by a little boy in a shed, who shut the door upon him, and the capture was at last effected.

RAILWAY GUIDE. - We have received from the editor of copy of the International Railway and Steam Navigation Guide for October. This excellent and useful publication is now in its tenth year, and has increased in size and merit until it may fairly claim the title of the "Canadian Bradshaw." From an almost purely local guide, the "International" has grown into one in which are represented the whole of the Canadian railways, the leading railroads of the United States, and also numerous steamboat lines in both countries. With this increase in the number of railways represented there has also been a steady improvement in the general appearance and arrangement of the Guide. More especially is this the case in the map department. Every effort and attention has been given to maintain the "International" as a correct and reliable railway guide.

Guelph Evening Mercury

WEDNESDAY EVENING, OCT. 8, 1873

More Tampering with Members.

Dr. Schultz, M.P., for Lisgar, Manitoba, was one of the members who signed the memorial to the Governor-General against prorogation, but on the same evening he attended the dinner given by the Ministers to celebrate their questionable victory. Since then it is reported he has secured two contracts from the Government, directly in the face of the Independence of Parliament Act. The first is that for supplying the provisions needed along the Dawson route, which was announced as given to him and Dr. Brown. The second is one which is now being ventilated by the Manitoba newspapers. It seems that the Doctor, who is described as always having a keen eye to his own interests, started a brickyard, but the clay not being of the right kind the quality of the bricks was very poor and they would not sell, as another yard which turned out a first-class article had also been started. The Government came to the relief and purchased 200,000 of the bricks at $15 per thousand for the public buildings which are about to be erected in Winnipeg. The Free Press, the Opposition journal, says no one there would give more than $7.50 for the bricks, so that Schultz's profit on the transaction would be $1,500; but the Gazette, a Ministerial organ, has a still worse opinion of the bricks, and suggests that the Government should compensate Schultz, take the bricks at $2 to $3 per thousand, break them up and put them on the roads, as they were fit for nothing else. The public will be interested to know how many more such contracts have been made with members since the late prorogation, and how many of those who will assemble at Ottawa on the 23rd, will vote with commissions or written promises of appointments in their pockets. The Pope McDonald letter and this brick contract are, we are afraid, not exceptional cases, but only samples of the maneuvering which the postponing of the meeting of Parliament was intended to afford time for. In for a penny in for a pound. The Ministry seem determined that the corruption which saved them by the skin of their teeth at last election, and has kept them in their place ever since, shall continue to be their main staff of reliance.—Witress.

Newfoundland. An election is pending in Newfoundland, and from the addresses of the various candidates it seems that Confederation is again one of the chief questions at issue. The Premier of the Province, Hon. F. C. Bennet, is out strongly against Union, and alleges as the reason of his opposition to coming into closer relationship with the Dominion that our Government is "the most corrupt in the world." As the Bennet Government have as a rule administered the affairs of the Islanders to their satisfaction, it is to be inferred that in the contest now imminent they will succeed without difficulty in retaining their majority. In such an event the question of Union in Newfoundland will again be cast aside, and the completion of the British American Confederacy indefinitely postponed. There is very little hope of the triumph of Bennet's opponents under the circumstances. The finances of the little Province are in a satisfactory condition, the people lightly taxed and in a more than usually flourishing state. In such a case Newfoundlanders are very apt to adopt "the rest and be thankful" policy and let well enough alone. And especially are they likely to do so with this country laboring under the stigma of the greatest scandal of modern times.

The Coming Struggle in France. As the time for the meeting of the French Assembly draws near, the political excitement in that country seems increasing. Thiers was urgently summoned by the friends of the Republic to Paris, where he has arrived, and is to take the lead of the Left, all sections of which are uniting with one accord to oppose the Monarchists. The Comte de Chambord, the claimant to the throne is also in motion; he was expected to arrive at Geneva on Saturday, from his castle of Frohsdorf, Lower Austria, and it is stated will issue a manifesto this week. The friends of the Monarchy seem confident of success, while the upholders of the Republic appear fully alive to the momentousness of the great issue now before the country. They are redoubling their efforts to defeat the Monarchists, and by petitions to wavering Deputies, opposing Ministerial candidates, etc., are doing their utmost to strengthen their position. It is to be hoped the crisis will pass over without civil war or bloodshed, and that the Republic may be preserved. The Bonapartists, it will be seen by the telegrams, had made arrangement for the enrollment of persons desirous to form a Bonaparte League, but the authorities have forbidden the carrying out of the project. What part Deputies of this stripe will take in the pending crisis is not very clear. Their own cause looks quite hopeless, and they can only hope to affect the issue by taking one side or the other. They many consider an alliance with the Monarchists to secure the success of the latter advantageous to themselves as affording another chance for their cause in the downfall which the lessons of history give too much reason to expect probably awaits the renewed setting up of Monarchy in France. On the other hand such a course might deepen their unpopularity and diminish the slight hold they have still left upon the nation. Changes of opinion are very frequent in France, and as there are still some weeks before a final decision can be taken there is fair opportunity for the friends of the Republic to evoke such an expression of national feeling in their favour as may fairly secure them the support of the wavering members of the Assembly, and overawe those who are too eager for monarchical restoration.

CHAPTER II.

TIMELY ARRIVAL.—RECTOR AND FLORA PUBLISHED BY IAN AND THE M'KENZIES. "It was fortunate that my father's corpse for the moment attracted their attention until I was enabled to give Angus a sign to go for assistance. As M'Leod was right; the M'Kenzies will be here before many minutes have passed. But he did not know all; he did not know that, instead of being insensible, I was lying in wait to their every word, and would be able to follow them when assistance arrived. Ha, ha, fortune seems to be on my side yet. The arrival of Angus shortly is all that is required. With such a road and on such a night they will not be at Kinloch-Ewe for hours, and ere then other arrangements will be made for them. Evidently have been crowding upon me for a day or two back; but I seem to be nearer the solution of some of my difficulties than I thought. Donald Cameron, Flora's uncle, cannot know of her being here with M'Leod at present; my opinion is that he has carried her off—with her consent, of course, but not with his. If I can obtain knowledge of that I may be enabled to strike home, retrieve my fallen fortunes, and make my connection with Cameron, and the secrets of his which I possess valuable indeed. But I'll think of this after. But, hist, there are surely parties without. It must be Angus returned."

As he spoke he assumed a listening attitude. A slight noise was to be heard outside, as if some one was stealthily approaching the little window of the hut.

There was a grunt, apparently of satisfaction; a whispering followed, and footsteps rapidly approached the door. In a second after three men entered the hut.

"Welcome, my kinsmen!" exclaimed Ian, cheerily, as he appeared to recognize them.

"Honor to the M'Kenzies!" responded the foremost of the three, a tall, brawny, broad shouldered fellow, in a ragged kilt, lifting his bonnet, and gazing furtively round the room as he entered. The others were also dressed in kilts, but were somewhat smaller in stature. All were armed with the claymore, and each had the dirk in his belt, and the skein-dhu in his hose.

"Alas, my kinsmen," replied Ian, "the M'Kenzies who was your Chief yesterday is now taken from us. The dimness of death has come over his eyes, and his silence over his lips. No more will he speak thrilling and cheering words to his clansmen."

"But his son will," responded the other. "You will now become our Chief, and will guide us in our marches and take up our feud. The M'Leods have at present been successful in running us to earth; but we will, under you, rise again and carry death and desolation into their homes. We have seen Angus, who told us of your combat with young M'Leod to-night. We came off to join you at once, while Angus went up the glen for Donald, and Dugald, and Rory."

"Thanks, my kinsmen," M'Leod had said, but we will follow him," replied Ian. "He left here for Kinloch-Ewe, but we will overtake him before a mile of his journey has been accomplished. And now, my kinsmen, in presence of my dead father, your late Chief, swear fealty to his son. Swear it by the Holy Cross, and over his dead body."

As he spoke, he crossed the hut, and standing above the corpse, drew from his breast a small silver crucifix, which he held before him.

Two others approached and took the oath of fealty. Then they knelt down, and their own recognized Chief touched each head with the crucifix. This done, he went to a corner of the hut, whence he brought a large flask, and procuring a quail, filled it with liquor. This he handed in turn to each of the clansmen, and the last was just in the act of drinking it off when Angus, followed by three others, entered the hut.

LANGUAGE OF THE CABLE.—A Newfoundland correspondent describes, in the columns of a contemporary, how messages are transmitted and received through the Atlantic cable: An operator sits at a table in a room very slightly darkened by curtains. On his left hand stands a little instrument named the "reflecting galvanometer," an invention of Sir William Thompson, without which Atlantic telegraphy would be a slow process, not exceeding two or three words per minute, instead of eighteen or twenty, the present rate. This delicate instrument consists of a tiny magnet and a small mirror swinging on a silk thread, the two together weighing but a few grains. The electric current, passing along the cable from Valencia, deflects the magnet to and fro. The mirror reflects a spot of light on to a scale in a box placed on the operator's right hand, where, by its oscillations, the spot of light indicates the slight movements of the magnet, which are too small to be directly seen. The little swinging magnet follows every change in the received current; and every change great or small, produces a corresponding oscillation of the spot of light on the scale. A code of signals is arranged by which the movements of the spot of light are made to indicate the letters of the alphabet. When receiving a message from Valencia the operator watches the movement of the light speck, which keeps dancing about over the scale on his right. To his practised eye each movement of the spot of light represents a letter of the alphabet, and its seemingly fantastic motions are spelling out the intelligence which the pulsings of the electric current are transmitting between the two hemispheres. It is truly marvellous to note how rapidly the experienced operator disentangles these irregular oscillations of the little speck of light into the letters and words which they represent.

The charge of indecent assault preferred against Mr. Young, the late burser of the Blind Institute at Brantford, was brought before Judge Jones in that town last Friday and resulted in a verdict of acquittal. It was shown that the charge was trumped up by interested parties in Brantford, and was utterly unfounded. The woman Burley, who had been induced to prefer the complaint, fled before the trial came on and all efforts to trace out her whereabouts have failed. The Judge commented very strongly on the manner in which the preliminary investigation had been made, and expressed his abhorrence of conspiracies of the nature of that which had brought about so unfounded an accusation against a respectable citizen.

"True Nature's Sweet Restorer, Balm Sleep." But there are times when this "Renewer of Strength" is denied us, times when our minds and bodies have been so over-worked and are so worn out that we "woo the drowsy god in vain." The Peruvian Syrup (an iron tonic) renews our strength and makes our rest sweet and refreshing.
