Wolfville, Nov. 14th, 1895.

You haven't given me a kiss; has Wolfe left me a kiss one?"
Winning, but frowning a smile, Constance bent her head for the sharp, hard peck, and Lady Ruth took herself off.
There was an air of excitement throughout the house, and the duchess was in her element, seeing dresses tried on, and making preparations for the evening day.
"If it should rain I shall cry, my dear," she said, solemnly.
"And I shall cry in any case," said Lady Ruth. "I always do at a wedding."
"It will be too awful to have to walk from the church to the porch under umbrella," remarked Lady Kate, pointing.
"One can't very well wear water-proofs at a wedding."
A chorus of horror greeted this remark, but Constance smiled unmoved.
What did it matter to her that the sun shined or the clouds frowned, so that she married Wolfe?
"He was very quiet, almost silent, all the morning; in truth, she seemed to be moving in dreamland, so great was the happiness which suffused her as the hours flew by.
"Most girls are in a terrible state of fidgets the day before their wedding," said Kate, with that air of vast experience which very young girls display on such occasions; "but Constance is as calm and self-possessed as if one of us were going to be married instead of herself."
"Constance is what is called 'very good form,'" remarked the duchess, approvingly. "I have never seen her fidget, and I don't think that she ever will be."
Lady Ruth smiled as she best over her eternal tattling.
"Constance is all that is good and clever and admirable," she said; "and Wolfe is the luckiest man in the world."
Lunch was got through rather hurriedly, for, as is always the case, there were several things to be done, little finishing touches to be given to the all-important dresses, and Constance went up to her room, where Mary, the maid, was arranging the last piece of lace,
and making the final preparations.
Constance offered to help her, but Mary refused any assistance, and drawing a chair to the fire, estimated pretty plainly that she would be best pleased if her beloved mistress would recline in idleness.
Constance took a book, but it was a mere pretence of reading, and she leaned back and looked at the fire with happy, dreamy eyes.
At eight o'clock Wolfe would be there. She wouldn't see him at dinner, and spend the evening with him, would be able to see his handsome face, and hear his well-loved voice, and then he would come to her, never to part from her more.
She went over this delightful prospect again and again, never wearying of it, and the afternoon passed, and Mary, looking up from her little heap of millinery, remarked, in an undertone, that she must ring for a lamp.
"I'll get you a cup of tea up here, if you like, miss," she said, shrewdly suspecting that Constance would rather continue dreaming before the fire than go down to the others in the drawing-room.
"Will you, please?" said Constance, jumping at the offer; and Mary left the room.
A few minutes afterward Constance heard her re-enter, as she thought, but, looking round, she saw that it was Lady Ruth.
She had her hat and jacket on, and,
in a casual way, Constance thought that she looked pale.
"I thought you were up here, dear," said Lady Ruth. "I have been in the garden. It is so nice and fresh, and such a lovely gloaming!"
It was not like Lady Ruth to talk about the gloaming, and Constance looked at her with a faint surprise.
"Do you care to go for a turn?"
continued Lady Ruth; "you are not busy, are you?"
"No," said Constance; "I am doing nothing, and have been doing nothing all the afternoon. Mary will not let me help her."
"Then, come into the garden, Maud!" exclaimed Lady Ruth, with a laugh that sounded rather forced.
"We will not stay long, only a few minutes; but it really is very nice out there."
Constance rose, and fetched her outdoor things from the next room.

POETRY.
Work as Best We Can.
We would have inward peace,
Yet will not look within;
We would have misery cease,
Yet will not cease from sin;
We want all pleasant ends, but will use no harsh means.
What was the wise man's plan?
Through this sharp, fell set life,
To work as best he can.
And win what's won by strife—
But we an easier way to cheat our pain have found.
It is so small a thing
To have enjoyed the day,
To have lived light in the spring,
To have loved, to have thought to have done;
To have advanced true friends, and beat down baffled foes!
I say: Fear not! Life still Leaves human effort scope,
But sin's life teams with ill.
Nurse no extravagant hope;
Because thou must not dream, thou needst not then despair.

SELECT STORY.
Wolfe the Ranger.
CHAPTER XXVIII.—Continued.
"He is so wonderfully popular," said Lady Ruth. "I'm quite in love with him myself, and really, I have half a mind to set my cap at him. You see," with a laugh, "we poor girls will have a better chance when the bells is quite out of the way!"
Constance tried to think of some light and careless response, but the words would not come at her bidding. Rawson Fenton was too grave a subject for her to joke about.
"What exquisite taste you have got!"
said Lady Ruth, replacing the things in the box. "When you come back and settle down I shall come and see you, and get your advice about my frocks; I'm positively led by the nose by my tailor. Oh, I forgot to ask you, what time you expect Wolfe to-morrow night?"
She put the question with studied carelessness, and did not turn her eyes from the litter, but she stopped in her task and listened intently.
"At eight," replied Constance, concisely.
"I ask, because the duchess would put off dinner for him."
"There is no occasion," said Constance, "He will be here at eight," and she repeated the words to herself.
"How nice! He will fly back on the wings of love, of course; they will send a carriage for him. Let me see, Berrington will be the nearest?"
"Yes," assented Constance. "Perhaps," and her color rose, "I might go and meet him."
Lady Ruth looked up quickly.
"Oh, my dear, you can scarcely do that, I think. Can you?"
Constance checked a sigh.
"It will be so—so noticeable," remarked Lady Ruth, with a short laugh.
"It was only a thought," said Constance, biting her lip.
"I'd wait till he reached the house.
After all, it is not far."
"No, it is not far," said Constance, mechanically.
"Well, now I'll go and send your maid," remarked Lady Ruth. "You will come and see our dresses presently;
they look so much better by daylight.
It will be a lovely wedding, I'm sure, and you will be the prettiest bride we have had in the family for many years.

"I see you have everything packed," said Lady Ruth.
"Yes, I think so," assented Constance. "Mary has been very busy all day."
"Ah, well! it is only a few hours now, my dear," laughed Lady Ruth.
"I do hope it will be a fine day. It has cleared up during the afternoon.
Are you ready?" she asked, glancing at her watch with a suppressed impatience.
"Quite," said Constance, as she came out of the other room. "Did you say it had cleared up? Why, it is raining a little!"
"Only a very little," said Lady Ruth, with almost feverish eagerness. "It will not hurt us; we are neither so likely to melt with a few drops of rain; besides, it is scarcely anything to speak of."
"Oh, I am not afraid," responded
Constance, with a laugh.
They went down the stairs, Lady Ruth talking as she went, and passed out on to the terrace.
"Let us go toward the shrubbery," she said. "There is no wind there, and it is quite warm and sheltered."
"Very well," assented Constance, wondering a little at Lady Ruth's persistence.
They went toward the shrubbery, which ran from east to west, and completely hid the broad, evenly graveled walk from the many windows of the great house.
"I hate being shut up all day," said Lady Ruth, "and I was getting terribly bored. I suppose you will not come back to England until the summer has quite set in?"
"I think not," replied Constance dreamily, for the words had called up the happy prospect before her.
"I hope you and Wolfe will have a good time," said Lady Ruth. "I have often wanted to winter in Italy, and—oh, dear!" she stopped short, with a gesture of annoyance.
"What is the matter?" asked Constance, awakening from her dream.
"Why, I have done such a stupid thing! I wrote a note to papa, and forgot to put it in the letter-bag; and the man is just starting with it."
"Let us go back at once," said Constance.
"No, no! I will go back. I left it on the writing-table in the drawing-room. I can run in at the side door there, and get it in a minute or two.
Don't you come, it is so nice out here.
Go on to the arbor and wait for me. I shan't be two minutes at the outside."
"Very well," said Constance, and Lady Ruth ran off.
She did not go farther than the house before she stopped—stopped panting, as if she had run a mile; and leaning against the stone coping, looked toward the shrubbery, her face white with excitement and suspense.
Constance walked along slowly and reached the arbor. She had not intended going in, but as it began to rain steadily she entered for shelter.
It was almost dark inside, and for a moment she did not see that she was not alone; but suddenly a voice said
"Constance!" and she saw Rawson Fenton standing before her.
She started, and turned to leave at once, but, unseen by her, he had glided between her and the door, and stood barrying the egress.
"Do not be alarmed," he said, and his voice sounded cold and strained, as if he were trying to keep it under control. "Why should you fly from me, as if I were something to be feared?"
"Let me pass, Mr. Fenton!" she exclaimed, haughtily, trying to keep her voice steady.
"Please wait," he said. "I have wished to see you; I have something to say to you."
"You can have nothing to say to me," she said, quietly. "Stand aside, if you please."
He stood immovable.
"Constance—"
"You have no right to address me by my Christian name, Mr. Fenton," she broke in upon him with an indignant flush. "I do not wish—I will not—listen to you. Once more, let me pass!"
"Not yet," he returned, his voice low and hard. "If, when you have heard what I have to say, you still desire to leave me, I will let you go; but—"
"Do you mean that you will keep me by force?" she demanded, amazed at his audacity.

"By force of reason and argument
—yes," he said.
"You planned this!" she exclaimed, as there suddenly flashed through her mind the pale Lady Ruth had taken to get her into the garden, and the ruse by which she had been induced to enter the arbor. "You planned this,
and Lady Ruth was your accomplice!"
He smiled as if it were not worth while to deny it.
"Do not be angry," he said slowly;
"all is fair in love and war. Yes, I arranged this interview, and Lady Ruth was good enough to assist me." Constance drew herself up to her full height.
"It was worthy of you both!" she said; "but you can not force me to remain. Stand aside at once—at once!" He leaned against the opening and folded his arms.
"If you are wise you will remain for the few minutes I ask, for my sake and your own."
There was something in the tone, rather than the words, that struck a chill to Constance's heart.
"Say what you have to say quickly," she said, haughtily. "You do not need me to tell you that I shall not regard anything you may say."
"I think you will," he retorted, quietly. "You know me well enough to be sure that I should not have forced this interview upon you unless for strong reasons. I am not a man to waste my opportunities recklessly. Constance, I have serious news for you."
She turned her face from him with a proud, indignant indifference and contempt.
"You were to have been married tomorrow—"
"Were to have been!" She did not move, but her lips wreathed with a smile of scorn. "Were to have been!"
His face darkened.
"Do you think I speak idly?" he demanded. "Do you know me so little?
Look back, Constance. Do you think I am a man to try and frighten you by the use of big words meaning nothing?
I say you were to have been married to-morrow, and I have come to tell you that it cannot be!"

The Dark Night!
If You Would Avoid Its Terrors and Sufferings
Be Wise and Use Pain's Celery Compound.

The dark night of sorrow, suffering and suffering comes to many a man and woman in our midst, and hope has almost fled from the troubled and anxious heart.
The shadows and small clouds, or in other words, the symptoms of disease that were noticed and felt some time ago, were disregarded, and the sufferer now finds themselves completely overwhelmed, and are calling for succor and relief.
To the disease-burdened we would say, despair not. You may renew life and establish a condition of health that will cause your friends amazement and wonder. Pain's Celery Compound will do the good work for you. It restores lost vigor and vitality, gives new, fresh blood, braces up the nerves, and builds up flesh and muscle.
Pain's Celery Compound—the century's wonder—is no new and untried remedy. It has been tried and tested for years, and has proved triumphant in the most obstinate cases. It has saved life after all other medicines failed, and has the approval of the best medical men on this continent.
If the shadows of disease are hovering over you, if you are not as bright, energetic and full as you were some weeks ago, a few doses of Pain's Celery Compound will tone up your whole system, cleanse the blood, correct indigestion, sharpen the appetite, and give you a vim and vigor that you will thoroughly appreciate.
By all means give Pain's Celery Compound a fair and honest trial at this season, and you will be compelled to sing its praises as thousands of others have done. Get the genuine "Pain's," as there are vile imitations.

Waggles—I'm hungry enough to eat a dry crust, good woman.
Good woman—Sorry I have none.
Shut the gate when you go out.
Contentment is a pair of great paws and whoever procures it at the expense of 10,000 dollars, makes a wise and happy purchase.—T. Baileys.
To do what seems right may involve an extra struggle sometimes but one may be sure that in the long run it will bring the most happiness.

Big ads. are needed to boom bad medicines. Manley's Celery-Nerve Compound has merit alone to commend it.
Dear Sirs: I cannot praise Manley's Celery-Nerve Compound too highly, and I think its name and restorative qualities cannot be over-stated. I was feeling poorly for some time through overwork and before I had taken one I felt completely better.
Yours truly,

WOLFVILLE, N. S., AUG. 23, 1896.

Editorial Chat.

The Liberal-Conservatives have selected Sir MacKenzie Bowell for their leader in the Senate.

The elections in North Grey and Sunbury Counties which took place on Tuesday resulted in the election of both ministers Blair and Patterson, by large majorities.

Senator Hill, probably the most influential Democrat in New York state, who has hitherto been a sound money man, has signified his intention of standing by Bryan in the coming presidential election in the U. S.

The debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne which was moved by Mr. McInnes on Monday is being carried on with considerable brilliancy by both the Government and Opposition.

The House has listened to very able addresses by Sir Charles Tupper, Mr. Laurier, Geo. E. Foster and Sir Richard Cartwright. A motion will be made to day that Government orders have precedence on Wednesday after 6 o'clock and on Thursday thus shortening the time for private bills.

Notice has already been given for thirty-six private bills and four divorce petitions.

The Winnipeg board of trade is anxious for the Halifax board of trade to co-operate with a view to the appointing of agents in northern Europe for the purpose of encouraging immigration to Canada.

Several classes of immigrants as any part of Canada, and we hope something practical will be done to bring the right immigrants to this country.

There are 144 Aid Societies in Nova Scotia, with a membership of 3,694; in New Brunswick 80 societies, membership 1,600.

Reports from all directions were very encouraging, with a great advance on last year. The officers elected for the last year are: President—Mrs J. W. Manning.

Vice-President—Mrs Curry, Wolfville; Mrs Alward, St. John; Mrs Mockett Higgins, P. E. I.

Secretary—Mrs Everett, St. John. Treasurer—Mrs Smith, Amherst.

This afternoon the institute listened to an eloquent paper by Rev. J. D. Freeman, of Fredericton, on "Conviction, as an Element of Power in Preaching."

George McDonald, President, was in the chair. After singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers" and reading by Rev. Mr. Dykeman, prayer was offered by Rev. J. D. Freeman, of Fredericton.

A cordial address of welcome was read by Miss Lottie Parker. After a stirring address by Mr. McDonald, Rev. Dr. Steele gave a report of the Milwaukee Convention.

Rev. Mr. Dykeman spoke on the benefit of the B. Y. P. U. to the church. A number of ministers then testified as to the beneficial character of union.

SATURDAY'S PROCEEDINGS. The weather is delightful, which is extremely fortunate for the large number of delegates quartered for miles around in this hospitable valley.

Prayer meetings were held at 6.30 and 8 o'clock on Saturday morning, and from 9 to 10 on Sunday morning, the minutes of the B. Y. P. U. After reading the minutes of last year's proceedings, the secretary, F. H. Beak, presented his report, which was of a very encouraging nature.

The Baptist Convention.

The Convention of Baptist churches in the Maritime Provinces opened at Berwick on Friday of last week.

The Baptist institute held its meeting on Friday afternoon. Rev. J. A. Gordon, St. John, was elected president.

W. Brown, Rev. E. C. Covey and H. C. Creed, Vice-Presidents, and Rev. B. Nobles Sec.-Treasurer.

The matter of organizing a summer school of theology was brought before the institute by Rev. J. G. C. White on behalf of the governors of the college.

After a thorough discussion of the subject, it was voted that a committee of the institute be appointed to confer with the governors of the college with reference to establishing a summer school.

The committee are: Revs. G. O. Gates, J. A. Gordon, D. Price, T. Trotter, B. Nobles, D. C. McDonald and G. R. White.

On behalf of the B. Y. P. U., Rev. Mr. Beak made a strong plea for more time for the meetings of that body.

The Maritime B. Y. P. U. met on Friday evening, George McDonald, President. The secretary-treasurer, Rev. F. Beak, read the report, from which it appears that there are 182 societies in connection with the union.

Of these 80 reported a membership of 6,307. The Maritime B. Y. P. U. had the honor of carrying off for the fourth time, the banner for the Christian culture course in competition with all the States of the Union.

The annual meeting of the W. B. M. Union took place in the Methodist church, Berwick, the same day. A short devotional meeting was held, presided over by Mrs Nalder, of Windsor.

The president of the Union, Mrs J. W. Manning, presided at the business meeting and gave her annual address. Mrs Smith, of Amherst, Treasurer, reported collections during the year by Aid Societies.

Nova Scotia.....$4,901 New Brunswick.....2,058 Prince Edward Island.....556 Total $8,997, including mission funds, and $500 given by Mrs. T. A. Higgins.

Of this, $6,500 is apportioned to foreign missions, and $1,000 to home missions. There are 144 Aid Societies in Nova Scotia, with a membership of 3,694; in New Brunswick 80 societies, membership 1,600.

Reports from all directions were very encouraging, with a great advance on last year. The officers elected for the last year are: President—Mrs J. W. Manning.

Vice-President—Mrs Curry, Wolfville; Mrs Alward, St. John; Mrs Mockett Higgins, P. E. I.

Secretary—Mrs Everett, St. John. Treasurer—Mrs Smith, Amherst.

A. J. WOODMAN

Wolfville, March 24th, 1896.

The W. B. M. Union held sessions on Saturday. After a meeting of the county secretaries, led by Miss Johnson, Mrs. Manning called the meeting to order, and reports were handed in from the several unions.

In a letter to the Halifax Herald, dated from Yarmouth, Mr. Thomas F. Anderson (now of the Boston Globe staff, we believe) gives a large quantity of advice to Nova Scotians, intermingled with several patronizing puns on the back.

He tells us as to those things we have done and those things left undone and where there is no health in us; those things we must do and those things we must not do if we are to fulfil our highest destiny; become an acceptable people in the eye of "Americans."

It is pleasing to know that Mr. Anderson, from his metropolitan life has gained such wide experience and more gratifying to find that he has prepared to gratuitously let us have the benefit of that experience in such large sized chunks.

Let us not be misunderstood—visitors from the United States are welcome as flowers of May; in summer, winter or any other time. We desire to be on terms of warmest friendship with them and believe the more they visit us, the better they will understand us and the less they will be misled by very superficially-informed newspaper correspondents.

We are glad to see them come among us as summer visitors, and pleased that there is a general hospitable desire on the part of our people in many villages to give up their own summer enjoyment and turn their houses into temporary boarding-houses—in return for rates they certainly cannot become wealthy from—the sake of making things pleasant for the people for whom they have nothing but friendship.

At the same time it might be as well for Mr. Anderson to know that we do not feel obliged to change our mode of life, our language, nor forego our ambitions because a people, who have been coming here for the past half century to enjoy our cool and healthy climate, are now availing themselves of the splendid improved travelling facilities and cheapened rates to come to us in larger numbers.

Surprising as it may be to Mr. Anderson, we have had and still have an ambition to become something more than a collection of summer resorts. We know even where large sums have been expended in the way of providing the very best accommodation, that the great bulk of tourists have not used such facilities, but have preferred the unpretentious and cheaper accommodation at farm houses.

If the landlords and landlords at these smaller houses prefer to charge for their meals and work, instead of giving them away, it is not a business transaction. It would be startling to those who really have had hotel experience beyond a lunch counter, to find any one complaining of being charged 15 cents for a bath as an instance of extortion.

Those who habitually use such conveniences know that the price named is exceedingly moderate. Notwithstanding Mr. Anderson's letter, threatening the withdrawal of patronage, we venture to say that those who come to Nova Scotia get better treatment for their money, clean and wholesome food and better all around attention, and meet with less extortion than they will on any other part of the continent.

Those who desire more expensive places, greater conveniences and are prepared to pay for them here, as they would in their own country where it is "nothing for nothing," can also be accommodated. If Mr. Anderson would only realize the possibility of an enterprise, worthy Nova Scotians than that of being summer hotel keepers, he might find evidence of enterprise in Nova Scotia worthy of being emulated even by "Americans."

Yarmouth Times. Soliloquy over Grand Prix. The sun's last rays were lingering over the drowsy meadow land as I thought how the village suffered in years now past and gone.

The village unmoaned. With a harvest coming yearly And heaps of golden grain. Thanks be to God's world maker, Who ruleth all the world For such a land as Acadia Near Atlantic's misty shores.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., AUG. 28, 1896.

Local and Provincial.

Wolfville Division intends holding its annual picnic on Saturday at Black River Falls.

A young man named Webster was drowned in the Corwallis river on Tuesday while rafting hay.

Rev. R. H. Beattie, of New York, will occupy the pulpit of St. Andrew's (Presbyterian) church on Sabbath morning.

Mr. J. M. Shaw, our enterprising tonorial artist, is about to have a plate glass front put in his shop. John is bound to be up to date.

Contributions toward the building fund of the School for the Blind may be left at the office of the Peoples' Bank where a book has been opened for the purpose.

A carload of fruit baskets (about 6,000 in number) was received by Mr. C. A. Patriquin this week. We understand he is prepared to supply those who are in need of them.

Mr. E. L. Collins has sold his residence and property on Gasperau avenue to Mr. C. E. Starr, of this town. We have not heard the price, but understand it was somewhere between $4,000 and $5,000.

Attention is directed to the adv. of the annual excursion to St. John by the Dominion Atlantic railway, which takes place on Monday next. The excursion promises to be a most pleasant one, and the small price of tickets will no doubt draw a large company.

Grand discount sale at the Glasgow House now on. Call and get bargains in all Summer Goods.

The street commissioners have this week been endeavoring to fill up some of the holes in Main street. Several loads of gravel have been dumped in, and in some cases spread out. None of the stones in it weigh over half a ton but yet we have heard some complaints chiefly from bicyclists, though. Some people want the "earth."

In another column will be found an original poem, entitled "The Editor's Maple," which refers in a touching manner to the death of the beautiful tree in front of our office. We are deeply grateful to the author (who is one of our most promising local poets) for his sympathy. We are however, in a measure, comforted by the fine crop of barbed-wire in our back yard.

Rev. Mr. Trotter, of British Columbia, a brother of the Rev. T. Trotter, of this town, preached in the Baptist church on Sunday morning and evening last. His appeals on behalf of the Baptists of British Columbia, were most eloquent, and made a deep impression upon the congregation, as was evidenced by the liberal contributions, over $115 being taken at the special collection alone, at the morning service.

The Sabbath-school and congregational picnic of St. Andrew's church, this town, and Chalmers' church, Lower Horton, was held at Oak Island on Wednesday. The day was a delightful one and the picnic was most enjoyable. The grounds at Oak Island are the best suited for picnics of any we know of, and the genial owner, Mr. Huntley, was on hand to do everything within his power to make the picnicers enjoy themselves.

We Forgot. She clung to his breast in grief and tears. "We part for awhile," said she; "But neither time, nor force, nor fear, Shall sever me from thee!"

It was not exactly the minister's fault that the sermon which he delivered that morning was not entirely his own. He had copied a part of the original manuscript and had turned the remainder over to an amanuensis with directions to complete the work.
