Petroleum, the Salt of the Bible.

It seems to be frequently referred to in the Bible, though Biblical Chemistry is much obscured by bad translations. . . Many things become comprehensible if we take the generic term salt, and apply it to petroleum and its residue, asphalte. Lot's wife, if converted into a pillar of 'You are, sirrah, for you don't seem to know who I am, or remember who pillar of asphalte, even as a memorial of her, would have been an enduring monument, and might have been seen by Josephus and his contemporary, Clemen You are a grandson of a cobbler of Rome, both of whom declare that given way to the first impulse of his rage who died in a poor house, and I am your the latter would have had the venomous uncle, Ralph. Now, what do you think with fire and every one shall be salted with fire and every sartice shall be with fire, and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt," I see a meaning only when I recollect that, in regions contain ing petroleum, sacrificed fires were fed with this fuel to aid the burning In like manner, when Matthew likens the blessed, first to salt, and immediately afterwards to a lighted torch (for candles, as translated, were then unknown) I see the connection in his mind. He just said that salt which had lost its savor was only fit to be trodden under the too leaded. 'For her sake and my own self respect he had resolved to follow Ralph's sug-savor, and is never fit to be trodden under the toot was only fit to be trodden under the toot of men. ERIE, Pa., April 19.-The marriage festivities of George Bacon and Miss Eva Estes, of Wattsburg, were interrupted by a shocking accident last night. Short-ly after the ceremony, a number of enthusiastic young men dragged the town cannon opposite the house for the purpose of firing a salute in honor of the bride. At the first discharge, the field. piece burst, tearing off the arm of Wm. Cooper, blinding and otherwise terribly injuring George Weed and John How-

At the time of his father's death young Petrie was attending the High school at Clin ton, but that sad event necessitated his return home to assist his mother in the management of the farm. Soon after his return he was prostrated by a severe attack of scarlet fever, from which it seems, however, that he had veer-esti-mated his strength and went out too seems, however, that he had over-esti-nated his strength and went out too soon, catching cold and causing a re-lapse, which he only survived a few days. He was a most estimable and promising, young man, and his death will prove a sad blow to his already se-verely afflicted mother, who will receive the most sincere sympathy of all. An only daughter was also prostrated with the same fever, but is, we are glad to learn, recovering. HORSE SALES. — John McMillan, Reeve

The discontent in Manitoba with the policy of the Dominion government has at length driven Premier Norquay into a position of open antagonism to Sir John, and led him to take a firm stand for provincial rights. Norquay has been so long regarded as a thick-and-thin adherent of the Dominion ministry that his outspoken announcement of his determination to invoke the interference of the Imperial government, if necessary, to uphold Manitoba's interests has naturally creat-ed a considerable sensation. Partizan as he has always been, however, he could not acquiesce tamely in the arbitrary course of the Dominion towards his province. It is only in Ontario that party men are to be found so shamelessly subservient as to sacrifice both honor and the interests of their constituents at the
