The Heir?

OTTIE hurried home, her head full of new impressions and ideas; but the deepest impression was that made by the resemblance of the portrait to Geoff. It haunted her; and, of course, made her long for him worse than ever.

Betty dealt out a soft scolding to the truant; but Cottie appeased her by sticking to the gloves most industriously after tea; and while she was at work a boy drove up in a donkeycart to the cottage gate and dumped down a dress-basket.

'From Miss Eve.' he announced. staring open-eyed at Cottie's graceful figure as she sauntered down the path to him. 'From Miss Eva, so you'd better take care of 'em,' he said. 'What's your name?'

'Find out!' retorted Cottie, 'and while you're doing so, carry the basket to the house.

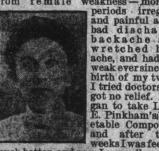

The boy got down, still staring, and in profound silence did as he was told, fixed on Cottie.

'They're the things I've to mend for Miss Eva,' said Betty.' 'I'll take them up to my room,'

'I'll carry them up,' said Cottie: and she lifted the basket in her strong arms and carried it into her own room. She stood and looked at the basket

Another Woman Cured.
Christiana, Tenn.—"I suffered from the worst form of female trouble so that at times I thought I could not live, and my nerves were in a dreadful condition. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me and made me feel like a different woman. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold to suffering women."—Mrs. Mary Wood, R. F. D. S.

If you belong to that countless army of women who suffer from some form of female ills, don't hesitate to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years this famous remedy has been the standard for all forms of female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, fibroid tumors, ulceration, irregularities, backache, and nervous prostration.

for a moment or two curiously, ther she unfastened the hasp and litted the There were one or too dresses some underclothing, and she turned them over with a woman's appreciative touch.

Gradually a strange wistfulness grew out, to look at them more closely. She did so, and laid them out on the bed, examining them one by one.

As she held them at arm's-length and passed her hand over them she plantation, and, seating himself on a was assailed by another desire—the the presence of these, the first woman's clothes that had come under her hand for a long time, the instinct of her sex asserted itself.

She stole to the door and softly shot the bolt into its place, then swiftly took off her boy's serge suit and slipped into one of the dresses, a tailor-made homespun. It was a little small for her at the waist. but in other respects it fitted her exactly, and she moved to the glass almost absently. But when she saw herself she started and the colour rushed to her face; for the strangeness of the figure upon which she looked startled her. The transfiguration was astonishing, bewildering. A moment before she had been an ordinary and rather short boy, I thought.' and now she was a slim and-something whispered - a graceful girl! Her breath came fast and thickly, and she ooked at heaself with the blood burnling in her cheeks and her lips apart. For, perhaps the first time, a thrill of of something like shame ran all through her, and she realised the sacrifice she had made in deserting her sex; and, for the first time, she thought: What would Geoff-what would they all say, if they knew ! 'The thought made her cower be fore the glass and hide her burning face with her hands.

But Betty's voice called up to her telling her that supper was ready; and calling back in a quavering voice that she was coming, she slipped out of dress, and, with slow, reluctant hands, folded it up and replaced it in the basket.

The colour still lingered in her cheeks when sie went down, and she entered the living room with so obvious a shyness that B tty said:

Where have you been so long and what's the matter? Have you been crying, Master Ronnie?'

'No, no; nothing's the matter. -I put the basket in my room; there is more room for it there,' she added,

The days passed, and nearly every day Cattie wandered into the castle grounds and availed herself of the earl's permission to pick the flowers; but she did not go near the house, Since she had put on Eva's dres, a no el shyness had fallen on her, and she avoided meeting people, and kept self at her approach—the sense of her sex was growing upon her and made her nervous and fearful.

One evening, as she was sitting at work beside Betty, the old lady said, with a shake of her head: 'Mr. Sidney Bassington's coming

'Oh, is he? Has he been away?' esponded Cottie, indifferently.

'Yes. He's been in London, so I hear,' explained Betty; 'and for my part I'm main sorry he didn't stop there. It 'ud be better for Sir Ed-

An hour or two later, Cottie leaning on the gate, saw him drive by in the dog-cart from the station.

He pulled up and cast a scowling glance at her; and Cottie noticed that his face was more sallow than when she had last seen it, and that it looked haggard and drawn,

'So you're here still, boy, are you? e said in a condescening tone. Cottie nodded.

'Yes; I'm here still; and what usiness is it of yours?"

He opened his lips as if to swear at her, but checked himself and drove on, for there was only just time for him to dress for dinner.

He dined alone, and though the meal was as elaborate and perfect as usual, he did not seem to enjoy it but he permitted Yates to fill his upon her a desire to lift the things glass pretty frequently, and after awhile he seemed more cheerful and Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Our Lords have hitherto never enjoyed in estimate is therefore dependent largely on the opinions of the leading lords, expressed recently in the preliminary debate and also on the relations of the two Houses and the resolutions and how far they appear general situation. Rosebery proposes there shall be four classes of lawmaking lords:

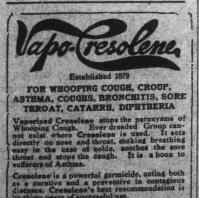

(1) Representatives of hereditary

(2) Peers with a public service qual ification:

(3) Members elected in some way or

(4) Members appointed by the Crown on the advice of the Ministry.

The desnatch affords no information as to the numerical proportions of the four classes but the tenor of the speeches recently delivered in the House of Lords is that the first class shall dominate the other three numerically. Further, Lord Rosebery's committee in 1908 recommended that in a House of 350 there should be 200 members elected by heredftary peers. Unless special provision for the minority is made, this class will be the concentrated essence of Toryism. The recent election illustrated this tendency. South Siders Complain

People of the South Side are loudcomplaining of the condition of the oad over there, especially that porion of it extending from Whitten's to the foot of Ford's Hill. It is filled with mud and impassable and needs mmediate attention. Between Mr. Colton's and C. Wadden's residences night soil is being thrown in the drains by certain persons. This should be put a stop to at once.

Optimism of Mr. Rufus Isaac.

Sir Rufus Isaacs, K. C., the ne Solicitor-General, ran away to sea as a boy, and worked on a three-masted tem at his residence, Military Road, sailing-vessel. Experience showed. however, that a nautical life was not quite so pleasant as the story-writers depicit it, and young Rufus resigned his position after many tribulations Eventually, he gravitated to the Stock Exchange, then to the Middle Temple and quickly came to the front in the legal world.

He tells the story of how, when member of the junior Bar, he had occasion to visit St. Stephen's and marched boldly through the Palace

Yard. He succeeded in getting past the policeman on duty, who, however, detected him a second or two later, and overtaking him, confronted him with the question:

"Excuse me, sir, but are you member?"

"Not yet," was the reply, "but I am going to be soon.' "I hope you will, sir,", said the policeman, "but meanwhile, would you mind going round the other way? "That 'meanwhile," says Mr. Isaacs, 'lasted twelve years.'

Concert Last Night

The Lecture Room of the British Hall was packed last night on the occasion of the concert in aid of Mount Cashel Orphanage. On the arrival of the Governor, Sir Ralph Williams, the C. C. C. band played the National Anthem. The selections were particular. larly good from the first to the last. The songs rendered by Miss Strang and Miss Bates deserve special mention. Miss Carter in "The moon has its eyes on you" scored highly. Mr. T. H. O'Neil carried the audience by storm in "Devil may care." The hornpipe and other dances by the Mount Cashel boys was "the rale thing." The quartette "Shon McLean" was also a great success. Miss Johnson's violin selection was very artistically rendered and won well merited applause. The quartette singers were Messrs. Slattery, Hepburn, Cornick and LeMessurier. Mr. J. L. Slattery's song, "Has anybody seen Kelly," was out of sight and had to be repeated three times. The choruses under the direction of Prof. Hutton were very well rendered. These were sung by the boys of St. Patrick's Hall. The band selections were very fine. Mr. Hutton scored highly in his rendition of "Simon the Cellerer," and Mr. J. n his usual good style. Mr. Mawer in the "Drum Major" pleased the audience very much and received well deserved applause. On the whole the

HOW CAN WE COUNTER-ACT

THE INCREASED COST OF LIVING?

A second's reasoning will supply the answer. Beef and pork are dear and getting dearer all the time, and the cost is out of proportion with their food-

EAT MORE BREAD

There is more nourishment in a shilling's worth of bread than a shilling's worth of beef or pork. But the pro-blem is not done with yet. The shil-ling's worth of bread is not always the same value: Breadmade from contains more nourishment than any other, because it contains the greatest amount of gluten, the health-giving
