WEDDED AT LAST.

CHAPTER XL.

"Oh, yes, nurse, I am quite well! But things will go wrong sometimes, you know!"

"What is going wrong with you, Miss Madge dear? You were born to live in the sunshine."

"Ah, but it is not always sunshine for any of us!" Madge said, sighing. "I suppose we have to put up with clouds sometimes. It is all sunshine which makes the desert, nurse."

"Lor, is it now?" said Mrs. Ford, in amazement. "Well, I should like a little more sunshine, Miss Madge. But what has vexed you lately, my dear?"

"Two or three things, nurse. One is that Major Stuart is going away to-morrow morning."

Shirley started and glanced up quickly. The girl's face was full of the most unfeigned regret; but she spoke without a shade of embarrassment or constraint.

"Going away, Miss Madge—soon?" exclaimed Mrs. Ford.

"Yes—going abroad for six months—for the whole winter. You know he was very ill last winter, nurse; and the doctors say now that he must not risk spending this winter at home."

"But he does not look ill, Miss Madge," said Mrs. Ford consolingly for the girl's eyes were full of tears.

"Not very ill; but papa says he is dreadfully altered, and I think so too. But I hope this winter abroad will do him good."

"And he will come back with the spring, Miss Madge, my dear," said Mrs. Ford.

"Yes, with the spring," echoed Madge sorrowfully. "Do you find the air too cold, Mrs. Grant? I am sure you shivered."

"Oh, no—oh, no!" Shirley said nervously, as she shrank back from the window, thankful for the semi-darkness in the little room which prevented her changing color and trembling hands from being noticed.

"And Major Stuart leaves to-morrow, Miss Madge?" said Mrs. Ford harking back to the subject which interested her most.

"Yes, by the early express; so you must say good-bye to him, nurse, when he comes presently to fetch me. He will be here very soon now I should think. Mamma was tired," she added, turning toward Shirley as she sat in her corner, "or she would have come in to see you, Mrs. Grant."

Mrs. Ford hurried away to get her lamp ready for lighting; and, as soon as they were alone, Shirley said hastily and tremulously—

"Miss Oliphant, will you allow me to change my mind? If I can perform the duties Lady Oliphant requires from me, I will stay."

"Oh, you dear good girl!" Madge cried delightedly. "I am so glad. Perform the duties? Of course you can. I'll coach you up. Oh, you have made me so glad!"

"I am afraid there is not much cause for gladness," remarked Shirley; but, before Madge could answer a firm, rather heavy step sounded on the graveled path without, and Gus Stuart's well-remembered tones fell upon Shirley's ear.

He was standing outside, and spoke through the open window.

"Madge, are you there, dear?" he said; and Shirley shrank back, trembling and powerless to move in the terror and agitation.

"Yes, I am here," Madge answered. "I am coming. I won't keep you, Guy; but nurse wants to say good-bye to you."

"Does she? We must not linger!"

Madge. Your mother is anxious about you, and I have brought you a shawl.

"A shawl on this lovely night? I really do not need it. Nurse," she added, "here is Major Stuart. Command speak to him. Take care of our tall head, Guy."

Major Stuart entered, stooping a little as he passed under the doorway. Mrs. Ford came in hastily from the kitchen, but without a lamp, for she had not had time to light it. Oh, how thankful Shirley felt! And yet seemed as if the terror and anxiety of the moment must kill her.

"I am sorry to hear you are going away, sir," said Mrs. Ford, courtesying to the tall figure which stood in the threshold of her little sitting room.

"Thank you," Guy's grave voice said. "I am sorry to go; but I can't be helped, you know. I hope to find you looking as well when I see you again in the spring," he added, shaking hands with her cordially.

"Must take Miss Oliphant away now, it is getting late. Here is your shawl, ladie."

He placed it round her carefully, the white fleecy shawl which made such a pretty frame to the bright aquant face. Mrs. Ford had lighted a candle, but its rays did not penetrate to Shirley's corner, although they lighted up Guy's dark gravise and Madge's sparkling eyes and golden hair with its soft covering.

"Good-night," Madge said, going toward Shirley and taking her hand kindly. "How cold you are, Mrs. Grant! You have stayed up too long. Take care of her, nurse."

"Trust me, Miss Madge," said Mrs. Ford, smiling. "She'll do nicely, now."

"I hope so. Good-night, nurse! Come, Guy!"

She slipped her hand within Shirley's arm, with a gesture which had become very common with Shirley herself during the time of her engagement to Guy, and they went out together. Mrs. Ford going to the door to watch them walk down the drive, while Shirley put her hands to her eyes to shut out, if she could, the sight of the grave changed face. Ah, when she saw it again, what wonderful thing had come to pass?

"They make a fine couple," Mrs. Ford said complacently, coming back to the room. "Don't you think so, Mrs. Grant?"

"He's too old for her, I fancy; but I dare say he will make her happy."

CHAPTER XL.

Major Stuart left Erindale the next morning, never dreaming that the woman whom he had caught a glimpse of in the little dimly lighted room was the woman whom he had loved and lost and sorrowed for with an intense sorrow. Just that trivial circumstance that Mrs. Ford's hand had been a little refractory for a moment had prevented her from seeing Shirley from detection, for she had been too startled and unnerved to attempt flight, even if she had had the opportunity of escape.

So Guy went away, taking with him that heavy headache which was always present with him now, and which would cease, he thought some times, only when life's troubles were ever altogether for him; and Shirley, Lynn, or Mrs. Grant, as she was called in the village, became the vicar schoolmistress, and took up her abode in the little red-brick cottage built beside the school-house—that comfortable little dwelling in the wide low-ceiled sitting room and a little kitchen and a bedroom; and above two little sitting rooms, one of which was devoted to the lumber, while in the other she kept a teacher's youthful handmaiden's little darning of fifteen.

This was a humble home truly; but Shirley it seemed a haven of rest after the stuffy London lodgings, the sitting room, with its polished woodwork and bright windows, and clear, comfortable, old-fashioned furniture, was very pleasant, while Madge herself had superintended all the arrangements for the comfort of the new teacher, for whom she had contrived so deep a love. A little cottage piano—Madge's own property—had been sent down from the Hall and a little book-case with some volumes of the girl's own selection—Dickens and Thackeray chiefly—filled the shelves.

Shirley's duties were not very onerous. The children were well taught and well drilled, and after a time her duties became sufficiently familiar not to be very wearying. Certainly they were irksome at times; and such duties can hardly fail to be so; but as she grew stronger she felt it less, and the disinclination to exertion ceased.

Her life, although necessarily monotonous, was not a lonely one. Almost daily Madge Oliphant paid her visit at the cottage. Sometimes the girl was walking alone, her only attendant being a great black retriever called Rover, a present from Guy Stuart; at others she was riding, and she would leave her horse with the groom and come in smiling and radiant, looking so bright and pretty in her close-fitting habit and quietish riding-hat that Shirley always felt a pang of regret at the thought that Guy was not there to see her.

Sometimes too she would walk down in the afternoon and have tea with Shirley in the low-ceiled sitting room which looked so bright and home-like when it was lighted by the lamp and fire; for the winter began early that year. October was a cold month, and at the end of November there was snow, which made Madge's visits not quite so frequent, although she still came as often as possible, for her enthusiastic admiration of Shirley had settled down into a deep, steadfast affection, as sincere as any Shirley had ever received.

And it proved the depth and unselfishness of Shirley's love for Guy Stuart that she loved this young girl with a warm and true affection, which was all the deeper because she thought her Guy's chosen wife. There was a pleasure for Shirley in her study of Madge's character, in her little timid attempts to teach her something that she fancied it would please Guy for her to know. She coaxed Madge into taking some music lessons from her, and into practicing at home. The young girl was but an indifferent performer; and Shirley knew what a lover of music Major Stuart was; and Madge's steady progress under her tuition pleased her greatly. Few as the years between them were—the one was eighteen, the other five-and-twenty—Shirley's seniority gave her an excuse for petting and scolding and remonstrating with Madge in a pretty and motherly way which the girl enjoyed and laughed at, but which had its effect nevertheless. Not that there was much to alter or improve in sweet, blue-eyed Madge Oliphant; for Shirley owned to herself frankly and sincerely that Guy could not have made a wiser choice. She was just the right, sweet girl who would steal into his heart and nestle there and make him happy, and help him to forget all the past bitterness and sorrow. And, when such thoughts as these crossed her mind, Shirley would thank Heaven that strength had been given her to go away, to resist Guy's entreaties, and to leave him free. With her, deeply as she had loved her, and passionately as she had returned that love, he would never have been able to forget the past; but Madge had no connection with it; it was not she who had made him suffer such an agony of pain and misery, and she would brighten his life as she—Shirley—could never have done.

It became one of the schoolmistress's greatest pleasures in the long winter evenings, when she sat alone in the little sitting room, to wear after the day's work to employ herself or to do anything but lie back in the comfortably cushioned American chair which Madge's care had provided for her, to picture Guy's future with Madge.

Her love was great enough and in itself enough to be perfectly unselfish; there was no touch of jealousy in her heart against Madge; she did not envy her the love she had won, the position she was to fill. Perhaps she envied her a little the power to make Guy happy; but she wished at happiness with too sincere a wish to mind the means by which it was procured. And such a wife as Madge would make him happy; there was no doubt of that.

They would be as happy a couple as Ruby and Oswald, she thought sometimes—as happy as only a married couple who had perfect love for no faith in each other can be. She recollected sometimes that, once or twice after she had known Lucie Grey, she had wished that Guy might be made happy with such a wife; but Madge would suit him better; her brightness would relieve the gravity of his character and give him back the youth which had been so cruelly marred.

And, when such thoughts as these crossed her mind, Shirley would thank Heaven that strength had been given her to go away, to resist Guy's entreaties, and to leave him free. With her, deeply as she had loved her, and passionately as she had returned that love, he would never have been able to forget the past; but Madge had no connection with it; it was not she who had made him suffer such an agony of pain and misery, and she would brighten his life as she—Shirley—could never have done.

It became one of the schoolmistress's greatest pleasures in the long winter evenings, when she sat alone in the little sitting room, to wear after the day's work to employ herself or to do anything but lie back in the comfortably cushioned American chair which Madge's care had provided for her, to picture Guy's future with Madge.

Her love was great enough and in itself enough to be perfectly unselfish; there was no touch of jealousy in her heart against Madge; she did not envy her the love she had won, the position she was to fill. Perhaps she envied her a little the power to make Guy happy; but she wished at happiness with too sincere a wish to mind the means by which it was procured. And such a wife as Madge would make him happy; there was no doubt of that.

They would be as happy a couple as Ruby and Oswald, she thought sometimes—as happy as only a married couple who had perfect love for no faith in each other can be. She recollected sometimes that, once or twice after she had known Lucie Grey, she had wished that Guy might be made happy with such a wife; but Madge would suit him better; her brightness would relieve the gravity of his character and give him back the youth which had been so cruelly marred.

for her enthusiastic admiration of Shirley had settled down into a deep, steadfast affection, as sincere as any Shirley had ever received.

And it proved the depth and unselfishness of Shirley's love for Guy Stuart that she loved this young girl with a warm and true affection, which was all the deeper because she thought her Guy's chosen wife. There was a pleasure for Shirley in her study of Madge's character, in her little timid attempts to teach her something that she fancied it would please Guy for her to know. She coaxed Madge into taking some music lessons from her, and into practicing at home. The young girl was but an indifferent performer; and Shirley knew what a lover of music Major Stuart was; and Madge's steady progress under her tuition pleased her greatly. Few as the years between them were—the one was eighteen, the other five-and-twenty—Shirley's seniority gave her an excuse for petting and scolding and remonstrating with Madge in a pretty and motherly way which the girl enjoyed and laughed at, but which had its effect nevertheless. Not that there was much to alter or improve in sweet, blue-eyed Madge Oliphant; for Shirley owned to herself frankly and sincerely that Guy could not have made a wiser choice. She was just the right, sweet girl who would steal into his heart and nestle there and make him happy, and help him to forget all the past bitterness and sorrow. And, when such thoughts as these crossed her mind, Shirley would thank Heaven that strength had been given her to go away, to resist Guy's entreaties, and to leave him free. With her, deeply as she had loved her, and passionately as she had returned that love, he would never have been able to forget the past; but Madge had no connection with it; it was not she who had made him suffer such an agony of pain and misery, and she would brighten his life as she—Shirley—could never have done.

In cold weather like this there is nothing more stimulating and appetizing than a glass of Hot Malted Milk, or a cup of Hot Bovril or Oxo. It will supply just what is needed to keep out the cold without overloading the stomach between meals, or having the inconvenient effects of alcohol. During this week while the glass has kept in the neighborhood of zero many have availed themselves of this same method of keeping the body warm; up to normal. If you feel chilly just step in and order a hot drink; tasting's believing. Price 10 and 15 cents each.

Dry harsh winds play havoc with the complexion and make sore the hands and wrists. Use Cream of Lillies to keep them soft and smooth. It is quite the best thing of the kind. Price 25 cents a crock.

All The Tired Nervous Woman

CAN FIND A CURE IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Madame Perreault Tells How She Cured Her Kidneys With Dodd's Kidney Pills, and Found Health and Contentment.

Verner, Ont., Feb. 13. (Special).—"I am very content. Dodd's Kidney Pills have made me well." Those are the words of Madame Eugene Perreault, a highly respected lady of this place, and mother of a large family. For twenty years she was a sufferer. But, let her tell her own story.

"I was always tired and nervous," she states. "I felt heavy and sleepy after meals. My limbs were heavy, and I had a dragging sensation across my loins. My skin itched and burned at night. I had a bitter taste in my mouth, especially in the morning. In twenty years I hardly knew what it was to have a well moment. Then I commenced to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Six boxes cured me."

Madame Perreault's system was those of kidney disease. They are the symptoms of mine out of ten of the nervous, run-down, pain-racked women of Canada. Madame Perreault found a speedy and complete cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills. They simply cured her kidneys.

Obituary.
MRS. J. SKELTON.
Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Lucy H. Skelton, wife of the Hon. Dr. Skelton, passed away to her eternal rest. A succession of severe bronchial attacks were brought to a head on January 3rd, when she took to her bed, from which she had not left since that time and during the last three days she has been unconscious. Mrs. Skelton was the daughter of the late Richard W. Wills, and a sister of Mr. Wills, who for many years was foreman of the Royal Gazette. Mrs. Skelton was born in 1839, and married Dr. Skelton in 1859. One sister survives, Mrs. Thompson. To her sorrowing husband, we extend our sympathy. The funeral will take place on Monday.

BIG MATINEE TO-MORROW AFTERNOON.

At the House

Mr. Kent presented a petition for a well at Pouch Cove; Mr. Downey asked for a bonus for clearing land for people of Highlands and Crabbes and Mr. Morris petitioned for telegraph extension at St. Josephs.

The Bill to amend the Consolidated Statutes respecting the storage and carrying of gunpowder and other explosives passed with some amendments. The House then went into Committee on the Bill for the Protection and growth of partridge berries. The Bill provided for a date to be fixed in the Autumn season between Sept 1st to 15th, for the picking of berries. The Premier complimented the hon member for Bay de Verde in bringing the matter before the House, and a statistical form stated the amount and value of berries exported from the Colony the past decade, showing $23,545 barrels, valued at $1 per barrel or $23,545. He then referred to the Cape Cod Cranberry Industry, and fully dealt with by Mr. Hickman some little time ago.

Mr. Jennings was glad to see the measure before the House, and hoped it would become law. He pointed out that the ripening of berries fluctuates early on a dry season and late on a wet season, but if a fixed date was going to be made the 10th of September would suit the District of Twillingate.

Mr. Hickman thought that the matter of fixing a date to begin picking berries should be left in the hands of the Minister of Agriculture. He suggested that the Government experiment and find out if the berries could be cultivated and expressed the opinion that the partridge berry industry could be a profitable and valuable one to our people and to the country if properly carried on.

Mr. Kent in supporting the measure said that the protection of our partridge berries was very desirable and that the thanks of the whole community was due to Mr. Hickman for his attention he gave to the matter and for bringing in the Bill. The industry may look small at the outset, but if properly carried out as outlined by Mr. Hickman, it will be the foundation of a great industry. It occurred with the hon. member for Bay de Verde that from Sept. 1st to the 15th would be the proper time to fix, and incidentally expressed the hope that a new Minister of Agriculture will be appointed before the time comes round.

Messrs. Clapp, Targett, Coaker and Leveaux also spoke in support of the Bill. The Bill passed the Committee, to be read a third time on Monday. The House then went into Committee on the Sealing Bill. Mr. Coaker, the introducer of the Bill, dealt exhaustively with the sealing industry from its early history to the present time, quoted figures showing the number of the different kind of seals brought in, but the Prime Minister would deal with the protection of seals in his resolutions, he was satisfied to see the Bill go to the Committee. The Committee rose at 6.30 to sit again on Monday.

The Meaning of St. Valentine's Day.

By RUTH CAMERON.

I have often wondered what was the exact origin of our celebration of St. Valentine's day, what St. Valentine's connection with it was, and why the information on this subject which usually appears in our magazines and newspapers about this time of year is always so vague and unsatisfactory.

This year, for your sake and mine, I took the radical step of looking the matter up, and as my valentine to you, let me tell you a few things about Valentine's Day.

In the first place, the reason no one ever tells us clearly about the origin of the celebration and why it is called St. Valentine's Day is that no one knows.

There are two Valentines for whom this honor has been claimed.

The first is Saint Valentine, a pope of the early church. He was a most holy and austere man, and was cast into jail for his faith during the Claudian persecutions. While he was there he cured the jailer's daughter of blindness; subsequently he was beaten with clubs, then beheaded.

The other Valentine was a bishop. The chief thing known about him was that he choked to death on a fish bone. For some reason people afflicted with epilepsy pray to him.

Any possible reason why either of these men should be chosen for the patron saint of lovers no one has been able to find out.

The celebration itself probably comes down to us from the old Roman times, for in the month of February festivals were held to Juno and Pan, and one of the customs was for the boys to draw the names of the girls from a bowl, just as the young folks of to-day sometimes do at their parties.

The Christian fathers disapprove of this custom and tried to induce the men to draw the names of saints instead. The idea was that each young man was to imitate the virtues of the saint whose name he drew. In connection with this custom, it is supposed that Saint Valentine somehow got mixed up with the day which now bears his name.

There are many traditions connected with the 14th of February. One is that it is the day on which birds choose their mates. Hence the drawing of names by the young men.

According to an old English custom the man or maid who greeted a member of the opposite sex by being the first to say, "Good morning, 'tis St. Valentine's Day," could claim a gift.

Another idea was that the first woman seen by a man on that day—and vice versa—was to be his valentine or sweetheart.

Of course, the immortal Pepsys has some interesting little side lights to contribute. Valentine givers will be interested to know that this middle class gentleman gave his valentine a dozen pairs of gloves and a pair of silk stockings. Quite evidently the cost of living could not have been what it is now.

Again, he tells us how Will Bowyer came to be his wife's valentine. "She having (at which I made good sport to myself) held her hands all the morning, that she might not see the painters that were at work gilding my chimney piece and pictures in my dining room."

Doesn't that bring a hundred years ago close to us?

Pension Totalled $210,000.

Viscount Cross Drew $10,000 a Year for 21 Years.

London, Jan. 31.—A record in state pensions is established in the case of Viscount Cross, former Cabinet minister, whose death occurred recently. He drew a pension of $10,000 yearly or twenty-one years, his total of $210,000 in pension money having been approached only by C. P. Villiers, who established the former record of $150,000 at his death in 1898.

There are now only three former ministers drawing pensions. Lord George Hamilton, who receives $10,000 a year, Henry Chaplin, whose pension is $6,000 yearly, and Lord Balfour, of Burleigh, who also receives $6,000.

These pensions are drawn under an act of parliament which provides that a former member of the cabinet who has no means to maintain his dignity, as an ex-minister, may apply for state aid.

It is understood that the President's idea is to set an example to the Chinese nation, which he thinks needs the moral building influence

Wanted--A Baby Sister.

Little Mollie had hastily undressed and jumped into bed without saying her prayers.

"Why, dearest," said her nurse, "aren't you going to say your prayers to-night, especially when you have had a new baby brother brought to the house to-day?"

"No, I am not," said Mollie. "And that baby brother's just the trouble."

"But why?" asked the nurse. "Don't you like your baby brother?" "What's the use?" queried the little girl. "I've been praying for a little sister every night for six months, and Bobbie, he only began askin' for a little brother yesterday, and he got his right off."

Sleigh Ride Victim in New Westminster.

SUCCESS TO INJURY.

New Westminster, Jan. 31.—William J. Sains, the fifteen-year-old schoolboy, who was injured in Tuesday afternoon's sleighing accident, when six out of five girls and two boys suffered injury on Hospital Street, Sapperton, through their sleigh crashing into the fence, died this morning at 5 o'clock in the Royal Columbian Hospital.

The shock of the accident and the strain of undergoing amputation of his leg yesterday proved too great for the lad to bear.

He was attending the Richard Mc Bride school. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sains, 230 Hospital Street came here fifteen years ago. They hailed originally from Newfoundland.

The Office Boy's Salary

Mr. Louis Heyd, the well known Toronto lawyer, tells the following story at his own expense. He says he was generous in giving advice on legal and general matters to all around his office from his partner down or up, to the office boy. He liked to have things done just right, and he never hesitated to correct an error or make a timely suggestion for improvement or advance—that is until he overheard one day a conversation between his office boy and another office boy from another city office.

"What's yer wages?" asks the other office boy. "Ten thousand a year!" replied Mr. Heyd's boy. "Aw, quit your kidding!" "Sure," insisted Heyd's boy, "I net four dollars a week cash, and the rest in legal advice."—Orilla Packet.

LONDON, To-day. Revelations of an exciting character may be made in the Lords next week, when Lord Selborne will raise a discussion concerning contributions to Party funds and the distribution of honors. Lord Charnwood, Radical Peer, will propose that in view of persistent allegations, implying that contributions to Party Funds have been a consideration with Ministers in recommending names to the King for honors, the House would welcome an assurance from the Government that such allegations are untrue, and that the House urges the immediate appointment of a Royal Commission to enquire how such abuses may be most effectively restrained.

Lectured To Star of the Sea.

The members of the Star of the Sea Society and their lady friends attended a lecture by Rev. Dr. Greene, at their Hall last night.

The reverend lecturer took as his subject 'Rome,' and upon being introduced by the chairman Mr. J. J. Lacey, for over an hour entertained his hearers with an excellent discourse on the Eternal City. The lecture was a scholarly and highly interesting one and was greatly appreciated by the large audience who attended. Several beautiful lantern slides were exhibited during the discourse, the machine being manipulated by Mr. T. Armstrong.

The interval was filled in by songs and gramophone selections. At the close of the entertainment a vote of thanks moved by Mr. W. F. Graham and seconded by Mr. T. P. Hekey, was heartily accorded the reverend lecturer, after which the President addressed the audience and outlined the policy of the Society, and took occasion to congratulate the committee under whose auspices the interesting entertainment was inaugurated.

Girls Draw Moist Cloth Through Hair

Try This! Hair gets thick, glossy, wavy and beautiful at once—Stops falling out.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—That's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every article of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toll counter and just try it. 14

At the City Hall

Yesterday's meeting of the City Council was attended by the Mayor and full board.

The Gas Co. wrote informing the Council that the lights complained of are being attended to.

The Pope Manufacturing Co., coming to be requested to forward plans for George Street. Matter for the police J. R. Johnston asked permission to alter O'Mara's building, King's Road.

He will be requested to forward plans. The Premier forwarded letters from the President of Truckmen's Union and Secretary of the S.P.A. The former complained of the untidiness of youths of 14 and 15 years who are engaged as drivers of express cars, etc.

Such drivers are responsible for many accidents that would be averted if competent men were in charge. The President of the union suggested that no licenses be issued to those under 18 years.

The S.P.A. wrote along the same lines, and suggested a similar remedy. The matter will be fully considered.

The following letter from the Premier was read:—

Prime Minister's Office, St. John's, Nfld., 11 February, 1914.

Dear Sir,—You will remember my discussing with you a day or two ago the question of the pay of the city firemen. I then pointed out to you that only recently the matter had come before the House of Assembly, when we were discussing the Police votes. On that occasion, as on previous occasions, I explained the history of the Fire Department in St. John's, and how the general Government came to pay out of the public revenues towards its upkeep.

After the great fire of 1892 the representatives for St. John's brought to the notice of the Government of that day the great hardships under which many of the people of St. John's suffered owing to the destruction of property in the fire. It was estimated at that time that the loss to citizens amounted to something like twelve million dollars, whereas the amount of property insured represented only about half of that sum; that in order to reproduce this twelve million dollars' worth of property destroyed very large importations of stocks, building materials and furniture, etc., would have to be made, and by reason of this the general revenue would profit, for a great number of years, by the loss of the people of St. John's, and from that standpoint the Government would be justified in (first) erecting and equipping at the expense of the general revenue three firehalls in the city, and (second) giving an annual grant towards its maintenance.

That grant was fixed then in 1893 at a certain sum, in consideration of the St. John's Municipal Council making a contribution towards it, I think of $1200 or $1400. Since 1893 the Fire Department has been conducted as a sub-department of the Department of Justice, in connection with the Constabulary, and the contribution towards the maintenance of the Fire Department gradually grew from the small sum, first voted in 1893, to $15,000 voted in 1898, and, since then, by small annual increases, it has grown year after year until it had reached the sum of $23,843.75, which was the amount voted by the Government in the session of 1913, and which represents, less the contribution by the Municipal Council, the vote of the General Government to what is purely a municipal service. This session we have still further increased the vote, on the recommendation of the head of the Fire Department, by an additional amount of $218.75. This does not, however, give any increase to the wages of the firemen, and all pay arrangements are no more deserving class in the community than our firemen; and that whilst we are safe and comfortable in our homes, they are keeping watch and ward over the city, and are exposed to wet and cold and danger all the year round.

For these reasons I think the time has come when the salaries of the men should be considered by the Municipal Council, and that a small annual increase should be made year after year until the salaries of the men will have reached a point which would be in keeping with a fair remuneration for the serious and important work in which they are engaged. You will serve with me, I am sure, in fact you always have when we have discussed this matter, that if we hope to retain the present members of the Brigade, and if we are to look confidently to the future for desirable recruits for the service, we must pay them a living wage.

I could be thankful if you would bring this matter before the next meeting of the Municipal Council.

I remain,
Yours faithfully,
E. P. MORRIS,
Prime Minister.

His Honour Mayor W. J. Ellis, City Hall.

Councillor Ryan moved that the Legislature be asked to amend Section 155 of the Municipal Act, whereby the Council would be able to contribute $1500 a year towards increasing the wages of the firemen. The motion was carried. The Mayor stated that according to Capt. Kean the reason for the low pressure at the Colonial Street fire as compared with that at Cochrane Street fire was due to the difference in the temperatures.

The motion of Councillor Mullally re theatrical taxes was deferred.

Tender for hose from the Robinson Export Co. was accepted.

Councillor's motion for increase of salaries was passed.

It was decided to tax Bowling Alleys and Shooting Galleries at the rate of $10 each for year.

The meeting closed at 5.40 p.m.

Personal.

Captain Walter Kennedy of Holyrood, who is at present in the city, will leave for Fortune in a few days to take charge of Lake's new banking vessel, Rostand.
