The Council and the Bonus Question.

The Herald takes exception to our remarks on the action of the Council in regard to Mr. Massie's motion for granting a bonus to Mr. Rainer, and it does so in its usual very unfair way. It makes assertions and assumptions for which there is not the slightest foundation, and then proceeds to argue from them. For instance it states that our strictures were directed against the Council for not granting a bonus of $3,000 to Mr. Rainer. Now, there is not a word of truth in this. We simply stated the facts of the case, that Mr. Massie's resolution proposed to grant such a bonus, but we did not say that the Council should have granted him that bonus; on the contrary we held that the Council could not legally give a bonus in the manner proposed, and even if they had the power, they would not have been warranted in doing so without proper investigation as to whether the enterprise was worthy of the encouragement asked. But what we did blame the Council for was, that after voting down Mr. Massie's resolution as out of order, they did not give some expression of opinion as to their willingness to receive Mr. Rainer's application, if sent in due form, and give it the consideration which it merited. This would, at least, have convinced him that the Council were sincere in holding out encouragement to manufacturers to come to Guelph; whereas, by their action on Monday night, he left with the impression on his mind that the resolution passed by the Council, and published in the Toronto papers, was a piece of humbug and that the Council had no intention of assisting or encouraging manufacturers in any way. Such a course as we suggested would only have been a simple act of courtesy to a stranger.

The Herald justifies the Council in refusing to grant money when they have no power to do so. So do we. And yet at times they can ignore the law in this respect, as witness their vote of $50 to the school children for the Queen's Birthday, which is illegal. Some will say this is a very small matter, but then the school-keepers for strict adherence to rules should be consistent. The Herald says the Council never offered any other encouragement to manufacturers except remitting the taxes. Pray, what did the Council mean when they adopted the report, that in addition to exemption from taxation, they would give any other encouragement which they might deem desirable to offer. The Council should not have held out promises to manufacturers which they could not legally, or were unwilling, to fulfill. If this does not look very much like stultifying themselves, then we are very much mistaken.

With regard to the larger question, as to whether it is prudent for a Corporation to grant bonuses to manufacturers, we did not in Tuesday's article express any opinion at all, although the Herald assumes that we did, and that we were in favor of bonuses being given to all and sundry who applied for them. It is equally unfair in this as in its other assumptions, for we are not in favor of granting bonuses to any individual unless he can give a satisfactory guarantee that the advantages accruing to the Municipality from the establishment of his manufacturing enterprise will be commensurate with the money given.

As will be seen by the concluding portion of the Herald's article, it makes this subject a text for its perpetual fling at the Reeve, whose designs and efforts to advance the interests of the town in every possible way seem to annoy it very much. It has never yet got the better of his triumphant election over his opponent, and we suppose never will as long as he holds the office. We can understand the Herald's feeling, but we can't sympathize with it in the petty jealousy and spite it manifests. The unmanly side-thrust made in this article at one of our largest Sewing Machine Factories in town is also deserving of the severest censure, and is most discreditably for a paper which affects to take so much interest in our existing manufactures, and in the town's prosperity. It is hard, indeed, to reconcile its hit at this establishment with its recommendation to the Council, a few days ago, that in their proposal to aid new manufacturing enterprises, they should not forget those now in operation in the town. But then, no one expects anything like consistency in the utterances of the Herald.

The Guelph "Herald" and Mr. James Young.

From the Reformer.
It would be interesting, if it were possible, to enter into a man's heart and search out the motives which impel him at times to pursue certain lines of policy. For instance were the editorial mind of the Guelph Herald man as easily dissected as the editorial matter which emanates from it, there would be curious revelations at times. His series of attacks upon Mr. J. E. Young, M. P., during the past few weeks, have their origin somewhere else than in a desire to uphold the cause of Conservatism or stiffen the backs of the faithful, and the animus which pervades every line is a pretty sure index to the impelling motive. The other day he indulged in another of his fanciful sallies on Mr. Young, this time accusing him of inconsistency. The charge is based on an article written by Mr. Young on "The Growth of Canadian Commerce" in the Canadian Monthly for

May, as expressing opinions entirely opposite to the remarks made by him on the floor of the House in a speech on the Budget. To make the inconsistency appear more glaring, the Herald studiously avoids giving the connection in which the remarks in Parliament were made, and thus Mr. Young is denounced for having said in Parliament that "he looked forward to the future (of the country) with considerable alarm," while in the Canadian Monthly he is jubilant over the steady and satisfactory increase in our commerce, its rapid expansion, &c., which he said "points hopefully to the future." As this contrasted the remarks are made to appear contradictory, but they are only placed in this position by the Herald man for purposes best known to himself. The animus of the writer crops out in every instance, and in this more than in any former attacks does he show his unscrupulous character. Mr. Young in his speech on the Budget took occasion to say that the "expansion of revenue was abnormal, but yet the Minister of Finance was branching out into the most prodigal expenditure." He also alluded to the extravagance of Sir Francis Hincks before leaving Canada, and hoped "that similar disastrous results would not follow when he left the country again." In view of the rapid increase which is taking place in the liabilities of the country, any thinking man might well express "considerable alarm" lest the future should show the evil effects of such lavish expenditure for public undertakings. The commerce of a country might be expanding, prosperous and encouraging, while at the same time the prodigality of a finance minister would give good cause for alarm. As a friend remarks "an idiot might see the difference."

There are rumors in certain circles of holding an indignation meeting to protest against Harrison and Beatty, members for East and West Toronto, for having voted for the Treaty. It is not likely that Harrison will again present himself for election as he feels his chance of success very poor.

HELEN MOIR

LOVE AND HONOUR.

A TALE OF THE CLYDE.

CHAPTER XXXII. Here the scene of the battle then progressing burst on his sight in all its dreadful grandeur, revealed through the darkness by the flashes of cannon, the fiery course of rockets, the hurrying forth of exploding shells, and blazing houses which accident or design had wrought in conflagration.

As Edwin drew nearer to the front he encountered flying horses and flying men—some helping the wounded along, and others rushing at headlong pace as if in a panic.

But now it was that the well-known tactics of the Germans came again into play, and with the same successful result. At the last moment reserves were brought up in immense numbers—hosts of men, thousands upon thousands, fresh and unexhausted—and these were hurled with restless might against the weary worn-out French, causing them to turn and flee with all speed in the direction of Metz.

Thus at nine o'clock at night the long and bloody battle of Gravelotte was ended. The French had retired to the heights of Mont St. Quentin and Plappeville; the Prussians held the heights beyond the Bois de Vanx—heights which commanded the surrounding country up to the limits of the gun ranges of Metz. The battlefield was canopied by a long earth-bound cloud, with two vast fire-burning houses—at each end of it. The day had been beautiful, and now the star looked down with splendour, except where the agony and death had clouded the glow of Heaven.

The further Edwin made his way into the region of the strife, the more the doleful were the accounts he received of the frenzied slaughter which had taken place. Whole regiments had been cut up, and some of the shattered remnants were altogether without officers.

"The 33d," gasped Edwin, to one of his informants—"know ye how it has fared?"

"Badly enough, I should say, for it and the 69th were in the hottest of the fire."

"Where was that?" asked Edwin with a quaking heart.

"In the valley of St. Hubert, just below Mosencamp. Take the road to the right; go on for a mile and you will reach it."

Away dashed Edwin, his heart beating fearfully as he rushed on past the groups which were moving about with anxiety and excitement, and never stopping till he came to the vicinity of several houses standing near the wayside. Lights burned brightly in all the windows, and numerous soldiers moved about the doors, while large groups lay here and there upon the ground—groans and cries of pain giving the sad intimation that these were wounded.

Edwin ran breathlessly into the first gleam of light which streamed out upon the road, and the first person he came against was a man of the 33rd leaning against the wall.

"What of your regiment?" he eagerly demanded.

The man sadly shook his head. "Ah, Herr Allerton," he replied for he was one of Herman's Company, and knew Edwin—"it is sore cut up, sore cut up."

"And Lieutenant Rheinbach?" faltered Edwin, his tongue scarcely able to form the words.

"He fell before dark. I saw him go down."

"Dead!—oh God, is he dead?"

"No; I don't think so. I saw them carry him past, and I did not think he was quite dead."

"Where have they carried him to?"

"Into the big house there, most likely. A great many have been brought there, and the doctor and nurses are attending them."

Hardly waiting to hear the last words, Edwin, with a wild gesture, bounded to the open door of the building which the soldier had indicated, and flew along the passage to a long room, on the threshold of which he met a doctor coming out.

"Lieutenant Rheinbach is among the wounded—is he here?" he wildly enquired.

"Yes, he is here—on the pallet in your corner. A nurse is attending him."

Pale and bloody and form lay in rows upon the floor, and between these rows Edwin walked to the far end of the room, where Hermann had laid.

As he drew near he saw him lying still and unconscious, and a woman was bending over him in tender attitude, bathing his white brow with her snowy handkerchief.

All at once Edwin stood still, transfixed with amazement, and ready to doubt the evidence of his eyes, for the beautiful form which bent with such loving ministrations over the wounded one was the form of HELEN MOIR.

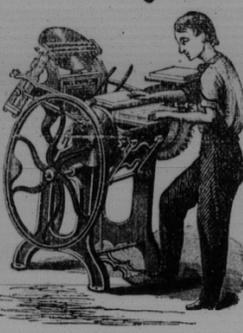

They have a sensational way of doing things in Chicago. A few days ago, a young, handsome and respectably connected lady entered the city jail accompanied by a Justice of the Peace, and producing a marriage license insisted on being married to a notorious hotel thief, a prisoner awaiting trial. The ceremony was duly performed, and the strange wedding over the bride returned to her parents' home and the bridegroom to his lonely cell.
