The St. George granite industry, we are told, is not making the progress that it should, considering the opportunities for development. This may be due in some respects to the effects of the late strike, but there must be other causes. These should be enquired into diligently, and if it is possible to provide a remedy for them it should be applied. We have heard it frequently stated that the freights charged by the railways are too high. If this is the case it should be possible to procure a reduction. At the recent conference of N. B. editors with the St. John Board of Trade, the suggestion was made that the I. C. R. should be asked to quote a low rate on stone to Upper Canadian points. We have a county board of trade, on which St. George is represented, why not get the Board to take this question up?

Note—We are glad to see the Beacon take an interest in the progress of our town. This is indeed pleasing. Yes, if our freight rates are too high our County Board of Trade should get to work and take the question up. There is no reason why a reduction should not be secured. The granite industry is our principal one and we must do all in our power to maintain it.

"A St. George business man pays us the compliment of saying that 'whatever has been done so far towards securing the nationalization and development of the ports of Charlotte is due to the efforts of 'The Beacon.' It is always pleasing to know that one's efforts on behalf of the public are appreciated."

"In the 'Port Directory' issued by the marine department, and which purports to contain a 'List of Sea Ports,' we find references to a lot of insignificant ports but no mention whatever of the port of St. Andrews, the port of St. George, or the port of Letang. Some of these government officials have a great deal yet to learn about the provinces down by the sea."

And the Beacon man couldn't see the irony—Courier. We agree with our town business man that "the Beacon man" is strong in his efforts to better conditions in Charlotte Co., although perhaps others are striving to push Charlotte Co. to the front also. If our Charlotte Co. ports have received no mention in the "Port Directory" whose fault is it; surely not the fault of the Beacon.

The Government of Nova Scotia is certainly to be congratulated upon the advanced step it has taken with reference to prohibition. The criticisms indulged in are various. The ultra partizan in opposition, led in many cases by the paper representing his strict party views, will find any amount of fault with it, and see no good in it whatever. But the people of modern views, and there are many such, will be willing to give credit where it is due, and will see in this change of base an honest desire on the part of the Administration to meet the wishes of the people who have been asking for many years for prohibitory legislation. It may not meet the fullest expectations of the most ardent prohibitionist, but it is the entering wedge which will finally overthrow the liquor traffic; and should this effort on the part of the Government to finally bring about Provincial Prohibition be turned down by the N. S. Temperance Alliance, we venture the assertion that such a step will tend to retard the carrying out of the very principle for which the Alliance is contending.

Hon. C. W. Robinson, John T. Hawke, Editor of the Moncton Transcript and the Editor of the St. John Telegraph seem to be a trio in advocating that road making in this province should be "divorced absolutely from politics." This divorcing question from politics is a new thing for New Brunswick surely. The Telegraph even suggests that a non-political commission should be created. This is indeed worthy of consideration not only in our province but in several others. It is a hard thing to do—to kill political patronage. There is a great deal of work ahead of those who would attempt this but when men like Mr. Hawke and Mr. McCready join the ranks of the reformers things look more promising.

We have some people in this Canada of ours who are calling the new tariff agreement with the United States a "surrender," some again are thoroughly satisfied but the great majority neither understand nor care. Canada has made concessions to the United States but the general impression is that the concessions were not too great considering the circumstances. All peaceful settlements of disputed questions involve mutual concessions. When a country of eight million people have a dispute with a country of eighty million, it is only natural that the smaller must yield as much or just a little more perhaps than the larger. That is the usual result of successful diplomacy.

Jeffries is receiving nearly 300 letters a day from all parts of the world. Some are from persons who offer advice. Others ask for money and tickets for the fight. Manufacturers of patent medicines, shoes, cigars, pipes, lotions and other things request the use of his name. A few scoundrels threatened the boiler-maker with bodily harm if he whips Johnson. Berger opens and reads the communications, few of which are handed over to the pugilist.

That the use of tobacco is a preventive against cerebro-spinal meningitis, or spotted fever, as it is often called, is the view of Dr. Rene de Kermabon, a French army surgeon, who has just published the results of his observations, which cover a period of two years, during which he has treated forty-three soldiers suffering from that disease. Of these nineteen were non-smokers, thirteen occasional smokers and only eleven regular devotees of tobacco. Of the nine men who succumbed to the malady four were non-smokers, four smoked very little, and only one was a confirmed smoker.

Thus far, 325 free rural postal delivery routes have been established in the Dominion. The work is progressing on well defined lines with the object of securing the best results at the smallest cost, and of not being compelled to halt and reorganize.

It is hoped to make the system one of steady growth and expansion.

NO EXCEPTION.

Pat was being shown the sights of the United States. His Yankee guide, after showing him numerous wonders, brought him to a statue of Washington.

"I guess," he said, "there's a man, and a lie never passed through his lips."

"No," said Pat, "I expect, like the rest of ye, he spoke through his nose."

At a London board school the teacher had explained to the children the meaning of the word "ability." "Now, children," she went on, "what word would express the opposite to ability?" A sharp faced little boy at the end of the end form bobbed up his head and exclaimed, "Please, teacher, nobility!"—Work and Play.

If one-half of the money that has gone out of Charlotte County to be sunk in holes in the ground in the United States had been invested in home enterprises how much better this county would be off than it is at present.—Beacon.

NORR—We might add and how much better off the investors would be.

Some of us might just as well attempt to turn back the hands of a clock as to kick against progress. If a town is going ahead it is going ahead in spite of any and all efforts to hold it back.

She—April, beautiful April! I wish it would last forever.

He—So do I.

She—You, too, are fond of nature then?

He—Not especially, but I have a note coming due the first of May.

Great Britain and Germany have started things going in the building of battleships. Italy is building more warships and Brazil has placed big orders with British builders for more war vessels. It seems to be the style now among the nations.

Although Chicago does not rank high as a moral centre, it has some redeeming features. A recent twelve day campaign raised $350,000 for the Y. M. C. A., bringing the total contributions for this purpose, within the past two years, to the handsome total of $1,182,622.

Both Dalhousie and Campbellton voted the saloons out of business on Election day. The St. John temperance forces, however, failed to carry the day in the two wards in which they brought on local option fights.

You can tell pretty nearly the character of a man by the kind of people who are his enemies.

Not only has the cost of living gone up, but it is just as expensive as ever to die.

The suffragette has decided to bury the hatchet. In whom?

Mrs. Jones (at five o'clock)—Mrs. Brown I have only one fault to find with that delicious tea you are serving.

Mrs. Brown—"What is that?"

Mrs. Jones—"It has a moreish taste." (of course Mrs. Brown served Red Rose Tea)

General News.

Boston, April 22—Fred L. Cameron, of Amherst, N. S., winner of the recent Marathon race, was given a complimentary luncheon at the City Club today by the Canadian Club of Boston. Congratulatory addresses were made by President A. F. Graham, Mayor Hatfield, of Newton, John F. Masters, Henry W. Patterson, A. Byron McLeod, James Bewick, Thos. F. Anderson, George W. Cook, Dr. J. Dewis, J. W. Moore and Cameron's trainer, Mr. Trenholm. Mr. Cameron expressed his thanks in a modest speech.

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 24—Three persons lost their lives and half a dozen others are believed to have perished in a fire which practically destroyed the Hotel Thomas shortly before midnight last night. Two of the dead have been identified as Walter G. Cameron, lawyer, and Harry Lawrence, proof-reader on a morning newspaper. The third body has not been identified. The hotel was situated at Walnut and sixth street, in the retail district. The names are supposed to have been caused by crossed electric wires.

London, April 16—Theodore Roosevelt will arrive here May 16, and on that day, will dine at Dorchester House with Ambassador and Mrs. Reid and the staff of the embassy. He will be received by King Edward the following day and at the conclusion of the audience will proceed to Oxford, where he will be entertained by the vice-chancellor, T. C. Warren, president of Magdalen College.

Ottawa—The members of the Senate of both political parties will tender a banquet to Sir Richard Cartwright on Tuesday evening next in the Parliamentary restaurant, in recognition of his long and distinguished public service, and of his position as Government leader in the Senate.

Lake St. Charles, La., April 23—Fanned by a high wind a fire which broke out here late today, swept over twenty or more blocks, several hundred buildings were destroyed and a property loss estimated at about $3,000,000 was sustained. Two thousand persons have been rendered homeless.

Halifax, April 24—All hope is now given up the rescue of the three Prince Edward Island fishermen who have been missing since last Tuesday. Steamers have been searching for the men for days but no trace of them can be found. If their frail craft is still afloat it is hardly likely that the men are alive as they were scantily clad and without provisions.

New Haven, April 23—The pole vaulting of Robert Gardner, the sophomore, who is the national golf champion, was the only feature of the spring track meet held at Yale this afternoon. Gardner did 12 feet 4 inches apparently without effort and did not try to go higher as no one approached that mark.

PLEURO-PNEUMONIA AND BRONCHITIS

Brought Mrs. Baker to Death's Door. Father Morrissy's No. 10 Saved Her.

Of the many hundreds of cures wrought by Father Morrissy's No. 10 (Lung Tonic) few are more remarkable than the saving of the life of Mrs. John S. Baker, of 104 Rockland Road (North End), St. John, N.B. She wrote on Oct. 10, 1909: "I wish to express my gratitude that I am living to-day, saved from the grave by Father Morrissy's No. 10 (Lung Tonic). This time last year I had pleuro-pneumonia and bronchitis, and had been given up to die, and had my lungs tapped in the City Hospital, and never expected to walk again; I was continually getting worse every day. I came home from the hospital, and everyone was watching for me to die. I tried everything but there seemed to be no cure for me. "I began taking Father Morrissy's No. 10, and the second day I could eat without pain. I used 22 bottles of No. 10, as I was run down right into consumption, and for six months was just a shadow until I began to use it, and now I am in good health, and surprised most of my neighbors by gaining so quickly. I feel it my duty to publish it everywhere I can, as with all I can say I cannot recommend it too highly—it was a life saver to me, and I am very thankful to recommend it, as it is worth all it is said." "Father Morrissy's No. 10 is very different from the many preparations that simply relieve a cough. No. 10 relieves the cause of the cough, restores the membranes of throat and lungs to a healthy condition, and tones up the whole system, giving strength to resist future attacks. Trial bottle 25c.—regular size 50c. At your dealer's or from Father Morrissy Medicine Co., Ltd., Chatham, N.B. 92

A Laugh all Around.

And as Usual Those Who Laughed Last Laughed Best.

'Common decency is cheap abroad,' said the man who had just returned from his first trip to Europe. 'During all the time I was on the continent I was subjected to discourtesy in but one instance, and I don't think I got away with it then, at that.

'We were crossing one of the Swiss passes by diligence, or coach, and stopped off for luncheon at some little town. It was hot, and I suppose I made rather a comical sight in my shirt sleeves and black glasses, with a handkerchief over my collar, as I stepped out of the vehicle to the road. I suppose, too, that the brand of French in which I tried to ask questions was pretty ragged.

'Anyway, a group of young French men waiting in a carriage while their team was changed saw in me their long lost original scream, and the way they laughed was convincing; if not flattering. They weren't backward about pointing out the real, ray bits in the picture either, and they laughed harder when I glared at them mildly. Another American and I trudged off for lunch, and when we came back there was the bunch ready to take up the bowl at me again. I looked at my companion and he at me. I don't think either of us put the idea in words, but we began.

'We began to laugh. We fell into each other's arms and laughed. We held each other up and laughed. We laughed till the tears rolled down our cheeks. We laughed till we couldn't stand. We rolled into our coach, still laughing, taking inspiration for each other's from a glance at the Frenchman.

'Well, sir, that bunch of Frenchmen just walked. First they closed their mouths; then they lost their grip; then each one began squinting at the other, trying to make out what was wrong. Before we'd been at it ten minutes they all discovered they needed a drink and smacked off to the little hotel. We laughed till we saw the last of them, and then we laughed at the way we had turned the trick.—Chicago Tribune.

The Prince

A gray suited young man plodded along the country road. He was a good walker and the end of his tramp was in sight. He had noted the white steeple of the village church from the high ground he had just quitted. The village was beyond the next ridge and he would soon be there. He put a little more spirit into his swinging gait.

Then his attention was attracted by a clear young voice, the voice of a child, a sweet voice, although thin and penetrating.

The Prince

'When birds make nests and rose leaves fall,
And skies are blue above us all,
Then let us go where brooklets flow,
Then let us go where fairies call.

The voice ceased as the young man peered about, and then a merry laugh started him.

'Can't you see me?' cried the voice. 'Here I am.'

Then he saw her. She was perched on the low limb of a tree at the roadside. She seemed like a child of twelve, with long, fair hair—a pale child, with deep blue eyes.

'Can it be possible,' he said, 'that I am addressing the queen of fairies?'

'The child gave a delightful scream and clapped her thin hands.

'Oh, oh, you know me!' she cried. 'Then of course you are the prince?'

'Will your majesty deign to invest me with supernatural powers?' he asked. The girl had a slender twig in her hand. She smiled as she waved it above his head.

'I give you,' she said, 'strength and courage and faith.'

He raised his head.

A faint sound had caught his ear. 'With the gifts you have bestowed upon him the prince should overcome every obstacle. Just now he desires a chariot to bear the queen to her home in the village.' He clapped his hands three times. 'See,' he said, as he stepped into the roadway. A big touring car was coming toward them. It was close at hand. When the chauffeur saw the figure in the roadway he drew close and stopped.

The girl clapped her hands.

'You are a prince!' she cried and laughed again.

'Will your majesty enter?' he said and bowed as he handed her in. He then took the seat beside her.

'Straight ahead, George,' he said, and the car glided away. 'Your majesty will point out your palace when we near it.'

'There's Evelyn now,' the girl cried. 'You'd know her by her envious looks, wouldn't you?'

A girl was coming down the pathway, a pretty girl, slender and sunny haired like the roadside fern. The young man took off his hat.

'Oh, Evelyn,' cried the fairy, 'I've found him! He's the prince.'

The pretty girl shook her head at the child.

'You should have been home long ago, Elsa. You worried your sister. See, you have torn your frock. There run in the house.'

The fairy child turned as she ran up the walk and shook her clenched hand at her sister.

'You see, prince,' she cried. 'The young man, hat in hand, came near.'

'Perhaps I am a little to blame in this matter,' he said. 'I talked with your sister by the roadside. She seemed to take me for somebody else he hesitated.

'I thought she was a child.'

'Seventeen years, in mind she is only ten.'

His look changed to one of respectful inquiry.

'The effect of illness?' he asked. 'Oh illness and a fall. When she was 10 years old she had a fever and one night she slipped from bed while my mother dozed, and fell down a flight of stairs. She hurt her head and had a relapse and almost died. Our doctor says she will always be a child.'

She drew away with a little bow, as if having satisfied his curiosity there was nothing more to be said.

'Pray let us detain you a moment more,' he cried. 'I am interested in the child. That hurt to her head—can nothing be done? Modern science accomplishes such wonders, you know.'

She shook her head.

'We have every confidence in our doctor, he says my sister cannot be helped.'

He looked his sympathy.

'Will you let me come this afternoon and take your sister and you for a ride? I have nothing else to do. It would be a pleasure for me to give her pleasure. She seemed delighted with the brief ride she has just taken, I am Richard Bennett. Here is my card.'

The girl hesitated. Her clear eyes turned from the card to the man.

'It seems to me,' said the young man quickly, 'that there are times when a common humanity overrides the social requirements. All I ask is an opportunity to please your afflicted sister.'

The girl's face softened.

'Elsa has few pleasures,' she said. 'You may come if you will.'

He smiled as he rode away.

That evening Richard Bennett sent a long letter to a man he had met abroad, a man with whom he had become very friendly, a man who had professed a desire to be of service to him.

He hoped that this man could help the stricken girl. What a blessing it would be to awaken that sleeping mind.

On a third day he drew a telegram from his pocket.

I am going to bring a visitor tomorrow he said. He is coming here to look at Elsa. I sent for him.

The girl flushed.

'I told you that nothing could be done for her' Dr. Arnold had said so many times.

'I hope that Dr. Arnold will change his mind,' said Richard gently.

Old Dr. Arnold drove up to the Gordon home at almost the same moment that the car with its two passengers stopped there.

Richard Bennett introduced the tall, dark haired stranger to the old doctor, and the latter looked him over with wondering curiosity. A moment later they met Evelyn and after the introductions the doctor drew the girl aside.

'I told you nothing could be done for Elsa, my dear,' he softly said, 'but to this man nothing is impossible. I don't understand how you got him here.'

'Mr. Bennett sent for him, said the girl. The old man looked around.

'Bennett must be a prince in disguise,' he said.

The great surgeon caught the old doctor's eye.

'I must ask you to let me see your patient, doctor,' he said in his quick sharp way. 'This is necessarily a flying visit, as I explained to Dick here.'

The two medical men and Evelyn passed into the house, leaving Richard seated on the rustic bench under the old apple tree.

Presently the girl returned to him.

'If your friend is successful, she murmured, how can we ever pay the debt we owe you?'

'I have thought of a way,' said Richard Bennett. Then he suddenly passed.

'But that would be imposing on our gratitude. It was exactly 40 minutes from the time the two medical men entered the house until they reappeared again.'

The tall surgeon caught Richard's anxious eye and nodded.

'An interesting depression,' he said in his quick way, 'but not as bothersome as I expected. The doctor here will do the rest, now Dick, you may send me back. Good by all. As he stepped into the waiting car he looked around. You're a good fellow in spite of your money, Dick he said.'

Richard was smiling as he went up the pathway to the house. He found the old doctor talking volubly to Evelyn.

It was the finest bit of work I ever saw and the nervous, he was saying. And if all goes well, as it surely will, our little maid will come out of fairyland and begin her schooling anew—well, let us say in fortnight hours.

Two days later Richard Bennett was taken into Elsa's room by her sister and permitted to speak to the girl.

She looked at him wonderingly.

'I seem to have seen you somewhere, she faintly murmured. 'Let me think where it was.' She slowly smiled. Was it in a dream?'

He nodded.

'Yes, and you—you were a prince. Yes, yes. She softly laughed.

Her face grew grave.

'An I sister Evelyn was in the dream, too—you and Evelyn. You were a prince but was Evelyn a princess? Her face grew troubled. 'I can't remember.'

'Don't try, dear,' said Evelyn softly. 'But if you were a prince and Evelyn a princess then you should have married—in the dream.'

The older sister suddenly drew back. But Richard Bennett caught her hand and held it fast.

'Never mind the dream, Elsa,' he said.

'That's all past. This is the reality. Do you understand? See. He drew Evelyn closer and slipped his right arm around her waist.

The child smiled up at them.

Yes, prince, she said. 'And I'm very glad.'

Ask for Clean Money.

The other day a Free Press man was taken in to look at real money in a bank. The manager took him into the vault where an inner recess was opened and then there was unfolded to gaze what looked like enough money to retire on. However, there wasn't so much, comparatively speaking. The packages were mostly composed of ones, twos, the bills mostly handled on.

But to come to the point. It wasn't the amount of money that caused the surprise. It was the filthy state of it arose from those packages of bills, caused the wonderment. It was an indescribable odor or rather a combination of many odors. Probably each of those bills had an odor of its own, coming from some particular kind of microbe. They were by no means new bills—just plain, bills that we handle every day in business.

'And I suppose that those dirty, filthy, odoriferous bills will be sent away for destruction?' asked the newspaperman.

The bank manager laughed at such ignorance of finance.

'Why, no, we'll just slip those over the counter tomorrow or this afternoon. They're real tight.'

And before those odors and microbes will have been scattered through a city. Perhaps more odors and microbes will be added by now.

This story of the bills was told by The Free Press to officials up in the Finance Department. They laughed louder than the bank man.

Part of that odor, one of them said, and perhaps the greater part, was from the ink and paper used in the bill.

That was a hard sentence to swallow. If printers' ink and paper had that odor few would be in the business.

'Don't you think that these bills are unhealthy?' the official was asked.

'Unhealthy, no, W.W. we have a staff of women handling these discarded bills that come in to be destroyed, and some of them have been working thirty years on the job, handling these old bills, and I don't remember of anybody being sick or catching a disease.'

However, the official was fair enough to admit that these women took some chances.

'Of course, the public need some education on this question of clean money,' he went on. 'We don't have to have dirty bills. If people only demand clean ones, they can get them. The storekeeper will then get after his banker, and the bankers will get after us, and we can keep well ahead of the game—Ottawa Free Press.'

The old fashioned way of dosing a weak stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's first pointed out this error. This is why his prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed entirely to the cause of these ailments—the weak insular or controlling nerves. It isn't so difficult, says Dr. Shoop, to strengthen a weak Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys, if one goes at it correctly. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerve. When these nerves fail, then these organs must surely failer. These vital truths are leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Test it a few days and see! Improvement will promptly follow. Sold by all druggists.

ANNOUNCEMENT

TODAY, for the first time here, the new medicinal preparation—"ASAYA-NEURALL"—is offered for sale, and may be obtained from the undersigned.

"ASAYA-NEURALL" represents the latest conclusions of medical research in the effort to supply the nervous organization of the body with the elements required to restore normal nervous health, in a form capable of being assimilated by the weakest digestive organs.

As is well known, every effort of the mind and every movement of a muscle uses up a part of the tissues of the nervous system, the waste products of which have been found by chemical examination of the excretions to consist largely of mineral phosphates.

In health, when the nervous forces are not over-exerted, certain foods, such as fish, eggs, milk, etc., supply sufficient of the phosphatic principle to restore this loss.

But when a person, young or old, through over-work, worry, intense excitement, grief, alcoholic or other excesses, over-exerts the nerve powers, accelerating the using up of nerve tissue and the consequent loss of the phosphatic principle past the power of recuperation by the ordinary channels of the food, the condition of nervous exhaustion results.

These facts have long been known, and physicians have for years endeavored to aid the system to regain its normal supply of the vital phosphatic element by the giving of phosphorus compounds of many kinds.

The preparation—"ASAYA-NEURALL"—may be described briefly, as the latest advance in the art of phosphatic medication, suitably prepared for general public use. In it phosphorus is supplied in practically the same form as it exists in the human system, thus enabling this nerve building element to be easily assimilated even by those whose digestive powers have been so weakened by disease as to make it impossible for them to retain and assimilate phosphorus preparations of any other kind. It is a safe, home remedy, immeasurably superior to any preparation proposed for similar purposes, and should be taken by persons suffering from ... nervous despondency frequently experienced by women when recovering from child-birth and for all conditions of nervous derangement resulting from the causes named above.

"ASAYA-NEURALL" checks the night sweats due to extreme nervous debility, and, under the physician's direction, will be found of great service as a reconstructive tonic in the treatment of wasting and debilitating diseases, especially Consumption, where it is of prime importance to maintain the nervous strength, and during the convalescence from acute diseases, such as Pneumonia, La Grippe, etc.

FREE TRIAL SAMPLE OFFERED.—BENEFICIAL EFFECTS ALMOST IMMEDIATELY EVIDENT.

The first effect of this preparation is the lifting of the feeling of depression and the awakening to a more lively interest in things about us. Ability to sleep returns, the digestive powers are roused, the appetite improves, and a general feeling of rejuvenation and renewal of energy is felt. The beneficial effects are evident almost at the first dose. Not due, however, to false stimulation, as in alcoholic preparations, but to real feeding of the under-nourished nerve tissues, while the time to stop taking this preparation is as evident as is the time to stop at meal time, that is, when the nerves have been fed until their normal condition returns and a buoyant feeling of nervous health replaces the depression previously experienced.

SPECIAL NOTICE. Any adult person may, within ten days from the date when this notice appears, obtain a liberal sized free sample bottle of "ASAYA-NEURALL," quite sufficient to definitely establish the value of this preparation in their case, by filling in the coupon below and presenting same to the undersigned. "ASAYA-NEURALL" is regularly sold in large bottles at $1.50 each. One bottle, taken three times a day according to directions, affords treatment for about forty days, all that is usually required for ordinary derangements of the nervous system.

Big Pay for This Woman.

Washington, D. C., April 13.—Miss Estelle Reel was the highest salaried woman in the government service. She is now Mrs. Court Meyers, wife of a Western ranchman and is still in the government service.

The career of Mrs. Meyers has been one of the most interesting of that type of American women who insist upon independence and upon carving out a career for themselves.

She has been a superintendent of Indian schools for the government for some years. There are 279 of these schools every year, she inspects them, 2,423 employees that are connected with them, and she knows them as few women do, and uses that knowledge toward their betterment.

In compensation she receives year and expenses, the highest paid by the government to a woman, 12 years, but before that she served her county and state capacities.

She taught school in Wisconsin when women vote. Her first public term, performing all the duties which she progressed to contentment. Her success was such that she signed for other superintendents. She sought the office superintendent at the time a big fight was necessary for her term, performing the office, including the duties of a superintendent.

Since these earlier days Miss Reel has taken the stump in several campaigns and given a good account of herself. She has succeeded in all her undertakings through the business methods she employs and withal has lost none of her womanliness.

Oil as Fuel for Warships

New York, April 17.—The naval correspondent of the New York Herald writing from London says:—

"Among recent developments of marine engineering there is none attracting more serious attention today than the use of liquid fuel, and particularly its use in the furnaces of the boilers of men of war. By the British Admiralty the matter has been studied closely for several years, and it is no longer regarded as an experimental stage, while the naval department has decided in the past time. It is probably for larger vessels, do not deserting then which have direction and it solution.

"If somewhat decided in the past time. It is probably for larger vessels, do not deserting then which have direction and it solution.

"It was decided to fit the Mars and the Hannibal, battle ships, and the armored cruiser Bedford, with installations in respect of some of their boilers for the more extended trial, both with oil fuel alone and in combination with coal. At the same time provision was made for craft for storing liquid fuel, for the supply of ships and destroyers with furnaces fitted for using this description of fuel. Lord Selbourne said on this occasion:

"The problem which the navy has to solve in the use of liquid fuel is a much more difficult one than that which the with that of coal, the means of transport and storage must be simple and efficient, and there must be no danger of supplies running short in time of war. There is good reason for believing that the solution of these and other problems is near at hand.

By way of introduction a summary of the various stages of trial and progress in the British navy, as told in official documents, should be instructive and suggestive. It was in the Memorandum Exploratory of the Navy Estimates for the year 1901-2 that the First Lord indicated that various schemes for burning liquid fuel had been considered in conjunction with certain manufacturers, and that trials would be begun. In the Memorandum for the following year the First Lord merely reported that experiments were being carried out on shore at Devonport in a boiler which had been taken from the Blonde and at Portsmouth in the destroyer Surly. It was in the latter vessel that the system of combining the combustion of coal with liquid fuel was being tried. A year later the First Lord reported that the trials "had been steadily prosecuted, with constantly encouraging results."

MARS AND HANNIBAL
It was decided to fit the Mars and the Hannibal, battle ships, and the armored cruiser Bedford, with installations in respect of some of their boilers for the more extended trial, both with oil fuel alone and in combination with coal. At the same time provision was made for craft for storing liquid fuel, for the supply of ships and destroyers with furnaces fitted for using this description of fuel. Lord Selbourne said on this occasion:

"The problem which the navy has to solve in the use of liquid fuel is a much more difficult one than that which the merchant marine has to solve, because oil fuel can be of no use to the navy as compared with Welsh steam coal unless the combustion can be brought to such perfection as to render the fuel practically smokeless."

In 1904 it was announced that in the Mars and Hannibal many of the difficulties had been overcome as the result of practical experience at sea, and in these two ships the oil burning system was to be extended so that all their boilers should be capable of burning either oil and coal alone. Another destroyer had her boilers fitted to burn liquid fuel, and it was found that the manipulation of the new fittings required much skill in order to insure the best results. Several boilers were fitted up at Portsmouth for the study of the problems connected with the oil burning system and to give instruction to the engineers and stokers. Next year the First Lord reported that the Mars, Hannibal and Bedford had been in commission for some time, and were free from defects in their oil burning installations. Another battleship was therefore to be fitted in the same way. It was also decided to carry out comparative trials with two destroyers, one fitted to burn liquid fuel and the other oil alone or in combination with coal. The trials made during 1905 were so successful that oil fuel engines were fitted in four more battleships, and orders were given that all the battleships should be fitted or completed accordingly by the same way.

At the present time the King Edward class battleships, which were nearly completed by the outbreak of the war, were fitted with oil fuel engines. Old Home Week

As intimated in an issue of "Greetings" of recent date, an "Old Home Week" would be a good thing for St. George and community, so, acting upon this hint our Town, ever alive to anything that would "boom" it and advertise its advantages, has been bestirring itself, so a general meeting was held in the Town Hall last Monday evening to receive the report of the "Old Home Week" committee previously appointed. The meeting was largely attended and the report of the committee enthusiastically received. The programme was practically arranged but will not be issued definitely for a few days, it however gives promise of being one of the biggest weeks that St. George has ever witnessed. The formal opening will take place on Saturday evening July 9th, when a grand concert will be held in the largest hall that the town can afford. The proceeds will go towards defraying the expense of furnishing another town pump. It is expected that the pulpits of the different churches will be filled on Sunday 10th, by visiting clergymen formerly associated with the Town. Rev. W. J. Stewart who first proposed "Old Home Week" will probably occupy the pulpit of the Baptist church. "What we can produce? granite—pulp—lumber in various forms—the products of the Eastern Canning Co., Connors Bros, and of the Beaver Harbor Trading Co. will be an interesting feature of the programme and will draw thousands to our town. Our manufacturers are being much interested in this part of the programme and are already making plans for it. There will be some special feature for each day of the week. Such as a polymorphian parade, a parade of "Old Homers," a merchants' and manufacturers' parade, a motor boat parade where visitors may have a trip up the river and out on the waters of Old Lake Utopia a visit to L'Etang where visitors can see the possibilities there, and a motor run down the river where lunch will be served on the beach at the mouth of the river and visitors can view the beauties of the Passamaquoddy. There will be daily excursions from St. John and St. Stephen by the New Brunswick Southern, and from Eastport, the Islands and St. Andrews by boat. In addition to these the afternoons will be devoted to baseball, field sports, and band concerts. There will be three bands in attendance. There will also be three Dramatic entertainments given by the Red Granite Dramatic Club on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings. At these entertainments there will be specialties by visiting "Old Homers." We have only written a brief sketch of what is proposed for this celebration but it is of sufficient length to show that the committees have a big program of entertainment cut out for the citizens, and visitors for this "Old Home Week" from which St. George may justly expect so much—but there the Editor opens his eyes to sadly inquire, "Is this only a dream?"

Why buy at Home

Let us suggest a few good reasons why we should "buy at home." First, we can examine our purchases are all assured of satisfaction before investing our money, we do not have to buy by catalogue. Again, our home merchant is always ready and in all cases willing to make right any error or any defective article purchased by him. Many mail order houses do not do this. Again, when we are sick or for any reason it is necessary for us to ask for credit, we can go to a local merchant and he will always help us out. Could we do this with the mail-order house? Again, it is only fair to give our local merchants the benefit of our trade when he is willing to extend our credit. It is unfair not to. Once more, our home merchant pays local taxes and exerts every effort to build up and better our market, thus increasing the value of both town and country property. Giving him our trade is like "Casting bread upon the waters." The mail-order house does not lighten our taxes or in any way help the value of our property. The mail order house does nothing for the benefit of market or real estate values. Again, the best citizens in our community do patronize home industry, if we patronize our industries we will all be good citizens. Lastly, if we will give our home merchant an opportunity to compete by bringing our orders to him in the quantities we buy out of town, he will demonstrate that, quality considered, he will save us money.

Mark Twain.

Writing some twenty years ago of those authors, who might best be described as inhabiting the border lands of literature, Richardson places Mark Twain among the number. Twenty years ago Mark Twain had written some of his best stories. It is always a difficult matter to define what is meant by a humorous writer, or to mark the confines of his literary territory. Without the essential quality of pathos and an element of truth the most exaggerated humor loses the quality of permanence. Mark Twain whose death it may be said will be heard with international regret, occupied a unique place in the literature of the time. While he has in many of his stories reflected some phase of life among the American people, he has gone far afield and has not hesitated to make a jest of humanity wherever he found the opportunity. Apart, too, from the literary excellence of many of his stories, notably "Joan of Arc," perhaps not as widely known as the immortal "Tom Sawyer," the kindly genial man has won for himself a place in the hearts of those—and they are many—who have a personal knowledge of him. A bit spoiled it may have been by much notoriety, he was yet a wholesome, warm-hearted citizen of the world; his little eccentricities may be regarded most leniently, as they never transgressed upon the privileges of others. He has met sorrow and misfortune, and, indeed, death, with a cheerful optimism that in a man of his disposition was courageous.

Wealthy Settlers Crossing The Border.

Ottawa, April 21—Hon. Frank Oliver received today from W. J. White, Inspector of Canadian Immigration Agencies in the United States, a telegram giving some illuminative information as to the character and extent of the present rush of immigrants from across the line into the Canadian West.

Mr. White notes that yesterday there passed through the St. Paul Office from a single locality in Missouri twenty families, comprising sixty people, taking with them $70,000 in cash and effects valued at $18,000. During the past two days 150 people were ticketed at St. Paul for Canada where they intend to take up land. They had no less than $200,000 in cash and effects.

"This kind of a movement," says Mr. White, "has been going on all spring. Most of the trains for Canada go out in two or three sections, and special trains are going every day."

The province of Manitoba, recognizing the assistance which the Salvation Army with its well developed system of immigration, is in a position to render in the way of bringing people into the province, gives that organization ten thousand dollars per annum. British Columbia gives the Army twenty thousand dollars annually. But the present government in New Brunswick would have nothing to do with the Army, would not allow it even $500 a year; and according to the statement of a prominent Army officer, treated that institution in a discourteous manner. While this conduct on the part of the Hazen government has deprived New Brunswick of many settlers, large numbers of immigrants, who might have been induced to take up some of the vacant lands in the province, have been, under the Army's direction, going past the doors of this province and on to the West. There ought to be some explanation from our rulers at Fredericton about this matter.

How Roberts won the Victoria Cross

Roberts noted that a sowar of the squadron with which he rode was in great danger from a sepoy with a fixed bayonet. The contest of sword against bayonet would have ended disastrously had not Roberts intervened and disposed of the bayonet. That was barely done when he noticed in the distance two sepoy fleeing with a standard. He galloped after the rebels and overtook them, and then he had a close fight for the possession of the standard. He cut down his chief bearer. While wrenching the staff from the man's grasp with both his hands the other sepoy turned his musket on him and fired. The muzzle was within a few inches of Robert's person, and there would certainly have been an end of him had not the musket refused to go off. As it was, he rode away unharmed with the standard, and for those two courageous acts in close succession Roberts got the Victoria cross.—Cobban's "Life of Roberts."

A new Norwegian apparatus for the use of ships consists of an electrical device whereby a sound wave is sent to the sea bottom, in relatively shallow water, and upon being reflected back to the vessel is received by another part of the same apparatus. An automatic record is made of the time elapsed between the departure and the return. Thus, the velocity of sound in water being known, the depth is at once ascertained. The apparatus is designed to make a continuous record, and it is asserted that it may be so constructed as to give an alarm when the water shallows to a certain depth.

The Tangle of Tariffs.

Smoke over the navy question having cleared away, the tariff came up. The recent Ottawa-Washington Albany episode had got things moving a bit—shifting the lines of interest away from the cross seas to the parallels of latitude, especially 49. Thursday morning of last week half the men in Canada were talking tariff for breakfast, and on the street cars and down at the office, and then again at lunch; and some of them knocked off work for half a day to get a clear whiff of the thing expressed in Fielding's thirteen articles—which is one of the most practical creeds ever devised by the modern religious needs of mankind.

The man with the Red Tie and the Imperialiser were the other morning.

"What time will the newspapers, said the Red Tie, "is that every one of them looks at the tariff through his party specs—just as they did on the navy question. What we want is a business discussion of the tariff. Business has nothing to do with either sentiment or politics. Now is that clear?"

He blew a big whiff and fanned it away. The Imperialiser sniggered a bit.

"So your anti-Preference then?"

"At forty per cent? I certainly am. In fact I'm not sure that the old preference isn't a frost. Anyway Canadians haven't been buying British goods very heavily since it came into force. Look here," snipping over a little-of-every-thing book. "Two years ago we bought from Great Britain about ninety-five million dollars worth of goods. Last year we bought from the United States one hundred and eighty-two million dollars worth—at a thirty to thirty-five per cent. tariff. How's that for the practical value of preference—leaving out sentiment, mind you?"

"You've missed the point entirely. Look here—at what we sold Great Britain."

"Well how much?"

"One hundred and thirty-five millions."

"Oh! Favourable balance of trade forty millions, eh? But of course that's mainly raw materials and food products, whereas we buy from Great Britain manufactured goods."

"Precisely. But apply the balance of trade to Canada and the United States, and what's the result?"

They chummed it up: result that Canada buys two dollars worth of goods from the United States for every dollar worth she sells to that country under the present high tariff.

"Which is a worse balance of trade than ninety-five to a hundred and thirty-five in our favour, isn't it?" said the Imperialiser, slyly.

"Yes, but it isn't the main fact of the case at that," said the Red Tie. "There's a reason why we buy two dollars worth of goods from the United States for every dollar worth we sell her. We certainly must want the good or we would do it. Now why do we want the goods?"

"It isn't a question of merely wanting the goods."

"But it is. Stick to your text. Ruling out sentiment, mind you; for if you apply sentiment to this you'll discover that the sentiment of Canada favours closer trade relations with the United States more than ditto with Great Britain and I don't think either of us wants to..."

reciprocity with the annexation sting in his tail. But tell me this: Why do I buy an American automobile instead of an English?"

"Merely a matter of salesmanship; of selling machinery. If the English maker would use the same machinery and enterprise in selling to you that the United States manufacturer does..."

The Red Tie took a spasm and in a cloud of American-made cigar-smoke he said:

"Height of absurdity! No salesmanship will ever make an English car go with the Canadian user, just because the British car isn't made for conditions in Canada. I tell you the United States manufacturer studies conditions in this country and the British doesn't care a continental for conditions. 'Conditions be blowed!' is his motto. 'If they don't like my goods they can jolly well go hang—'"

"Or lump it—-to be American."

"And you can apply the same doctrine to everything down the line; to boots and to typewriters; to machinery and to cough drops if you like. You'll find that the American manufacturer not only uses his selling machinery in Canada, but he studies Canada to find out what Canadians want, with the results that he finds Canada wants precisely the sort of goods he is making for his United States market, just because we're similar in geographical and climatic conditions to the whole north half of the United States. There's no sentiment in that."

"But is there anything to prevent the British manufacturer from doing the same?"

"Everything, his own stubbornness; trade traditions; eminent respectability; in short, conditions be blowed! What business have mere colonials telling us how we should make our goods? When did they become so high and mighty? Confound them! Aren't we the leading manufacturers of the world? That's his argument. Salesmanship? The dickens! He could sell his goods fast enough if he'd only make most of them fit to sell to Canadians in the first place, and take the trouble to put themselves in touch with conditions in this country. And there's no more sentiment in that than there is in a monkey wrench. You can't tell me I'm to wear British boots for the sake of sentiment, and get corns on my feet. I want boots that I can wear."

They took a skirmish over the Empire and a scotch over the known world: finding out the balances of trade in the seven seas; discovering where Great Britain buys her three quarters of a million pounds sterling every year and where she sells her seven hundred millions. They raked up reciprocity treaties and the Preference—"

"Yes now I'll give you the real story of that Preference, said the man with the Red Tie. "That whole scheme was hatched up in Toronto just as the National Policy was. The promoters of it argued—that a preference on British goods would knit the ties of the Empire; that sentiment was stronger than mere trade fast as blood is thicker than water. Off went the thirty-three per cent. and up went the tariffs against the United States. Now, we buy forty millions more goods from the United States than from Great Britain and we have two hundred millions of American money invested in Canadian factories to boot. Say, can you beat that for an Imperial Preferential frost? Tell me where you can find six industrial enterprises in Canada that are financed by British capital?"

They managed to rake up three, with a possible fourth; got from that to discussing the ultimate effect of commercial reciprocity; man with the Peucel inclining to think that the general expectations of T. T. ft expressed to Fielding implied somewhat up the Taft sleeve by way of getting the big end of the stick in future.

"Sugar! That thirteen articles in the Fielding-Taft creed are just a sop to Canada, he said. You wait. My opinion the whole Taft attitude was a game of bluff."

"Not a word of it! Not a dollar of it. Taft expressly gave out that under the Payne-Aldrich law the United States would be compelled to apply the maximum tariff to Canada unless Canada made some concessions. We made the concessions. They were a trifle I admit. But they satisfied the ethics of the case. They started off a tariff war."

Bah! I think a tariff war would be better than any concessions. We've had tariff wars before and we always won. We can do it again. The British Preference to my mind was nothing more or less than the determination of the Canadian government to get a whack back at the United States after the throw-down that Richard Cartwright got in Washington. The throw-down was a good thing. It has developed Canadian industries."

"All the same," concluded the Red Tie, with an anti-preferential wink, I venture if there could be commercial reciprocity between Canada and the United States we'd have twenty million people in Canada inside of ten years."

"But not Canadians, said the Peucel. The other shrugged. Well, paying wages and earning dividends in Canada whatever that means. Isn't that a kind of citizenship?"

"Lowest on record. It's up to Canada to build national character; and you can do that by ruling out sentiment or by commercial reciprocity with the United States."

"Hum! It's evident you're an Imperial Sentimentalist. Let's go out and have a drink—Canadian Courier."

HOUSEHOLD NOTES
When boiling fish always water enough to cover it.

Serve apple sauce or fried apples with roast pork or pork chops.

Pies will be soggy if set on top of a hot stove after being baked.

Tooth brushes may be washed in a strong solution of salt and water.

Sprinkle salt on the bottom of the oven and your cakes will not burn.

Kerosene will remove grease from set bowls and porcelain lined sinks.

After cleaning ivory expose to the sun. This assists in bleaching it.

A reliable relief for a mosquito bite is the cut side of a raw onion.

Wine stains on table linen should be covered with salt, wet and rinsed out.

A great many blemishes may be removed from wall paper with the rubber on a lead pencil.

To prevent the umbrella jar from being broken, put a small rubber mat in the bottom.

To lull one to slumber when tired, there is nothing like the odor of lavender flowers.

Dried lemon peel sprinkled over coals will destroy any disagreeable odor about the house.

Linen stained by ink should be immediately dipped in buttermilk. Repeat this until the stain disappears.

A cupful of ripe olives added to a beet stew just before it is taken up, will make an astonishing improvement.

Sealed rasins, cut into pieces, broken nut meats and a small part of celery in this bits make up a delicious salad.

Any brickwork rinsed off with ammonia and water and then carefully dried will be wonderfully brightened by the process.

For aching feet, due to walking, change the shoes at least twice a day. This will give both feet and shoes a refreshing rest.

Bread will keep moist much longer, if kept in a crock, wrapped in several thicknesses of cloth, than if kept in a tin box.

To soften the old paint brushes you used last year put them in a can of coal oil. When soft they can be washed in warm suds.

For a refreshing dinner salad toss white cherries, bits of orange and banana in French dressing, and serve on lettuce leaves.

A good plan is to place pieces of Canton flannel between plates when they are piled in the china closet. It reduces the danger of breakage and prevents rattling.

A clean cloth dipped in hot water, then in a saucer of bran, will speedily clean white paint without scratching it in the least. The soft bran acts like soap on the dirt.

For falling hair, try massaging the scalp nightly with a lotion made of three drams of pure glycerine, four ounces of lime water and half an ounce of tincture of cantharides.

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

FUNERAL OF MARK TWAIN.

New York, April 23.—Funeral services as simple as was his wholesome life accompanied the tributes paid here today to Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) author, humorist, philosopher and citizen of the world. New York City was but a stopping place in the dead author's last journey. His body was brought here from Redding, Conn. where he died, to be taken to Elmira, N. Y., for burial.

The Brick Presbyterian church at Fifth avenue and Thirty Seventh street was the place selected for the services at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and two close friends of Mr. Clemens were chosen to voice the grief of the throng and to speak eulogies of thousands. This honor fell to Rev. Dr. Henry Vandike, formerly pastor of the Brick church, and now professor of English literature at Princeton University, and the venerable Dr. Joseph H. Twitchell of Hartford.

Although the Brick church is a spacious edifice, seating 1,200 persons it was by no means large enough to contain all who desired to see for the last time the face of Mark Twain. Four hundred cards of invitation were issued. Following the seating of these the doors were to be opened to the public. After the services, it was announced the opportunity would be given for those outside to enter the church and file past the plain mahogany coffin containing the body of the dead humorist.

In keeping with the known sentiments of Mr. Clemens on the funeral question there was to be no vocal programme and no pall bearers. Two organ selections, brief prayers and a few words of eulogy were to constitute the services.

After the services the body was to be placed on a train and taken to Elmira, where a second service as simple as the first will be conducted Sunday afternoon. The burial will be in the Clemens plot in the Elmira cemetery where Mrs. Clemens and the children were buried.

PAINT PAINT

INVESTIGATE BEFORE YOU BUY!

In these days of sharp competition, it is well to know that you get what you pay for. There are so many brands of house paints on the market, now-a-days, advertised as "pure" (but little better than "dope"), that a man ought to investigate what he intends to buy. We suggest to those about to paint, to make a practical test and convince themselves. Buy a small can of and one of any other brand with which you may have been favorably impressed, selecting about the same colors, and paint a few feet. Carefully measure the paint, so that you use no more of one than you do of the other. Thus, with the conditions the same, you can determine for yourself which paint has the better body or covering capacity; which is the easier brushing out and has the better finish. If you do not decide in favor of The Martin-Senour 100 Per Cent Pure Paint, we will return the money paid for the can of the Pure Paint used in making the experiment. We have no doubt as to your decision, and are prepared to supply you with the BEST PAINT on the market.
