NATIONAL SERVICE

Up and be doing, all who have a hand to lift, a back to bend. It must not be in times like these that vulgar lingo be to air our wants and hopes; and leave our land untended as a wild of weeds and sand. —Say, then, "I come!" and go, O women and men of peace, ploughers, sowers, sowers, sowers, it will erry your names to dates unspaced. Would years but let me stir as once I stirred Almany a dawn to take the forward track, And with a stride plucked on to enterprise, I now would speed like yester wind that whirred Through/breaking pines; and serve with never a slack, So loud for prompness all around outcries!

THOMAS HARDY.

"NO FISHING ALOUD"

There never was a real fisherman that could pass the Deep Pool at the foot of Buttermill Run without a quickening of the pulse and a tendency of the lips to form the word "Trout." Nobody that ever fished a cast of flies over water could look at that place and not see a Silver Doctor or Farmachene Belle or a Coachman, or maybe all three, alighting feather-wise at the foot of the rock, just where the rush of water coming round from the Run changes from foam to dark green; and being snugged, you can fairly see the whisk of silver and pink, the up-flung splash of spray; you can almost feel the quick tug on the line and the springsy give of the rod as you strike! You fancy the last line cutting the water, and all but hear yourself mutter hoarsely: "Got one! And it's a real fish! Easy, now, old chap; hang on and I'll give you a run for your money. I've got a few more, old fancies, all of them—like those the golfer has in winter, when he stands at the first tee in a foot of snow, and knows that the next time he drives a ball from there it will be his only one, same sort of stuff. Nothing in it. In the first place, there stands the sign:

NO FISHING ALOUD

In the next place, there are no trout in Deep Pool. I know, because I have fished there scores of times, with every known bait and every known fly. Moreover, I have whipped the old Copper-crown Mountain to where it empties seventeen miles below into the sewage-reeking stream they call Crystal River. And so have others, like some desirable person who uses nets and dynamite in Deep Pool and other pockets of the stream. Plenty of eels, plenty of dace and chub and bullheads, and other plebeian fish; nothing about in the stream now, for it has passed into the hands of the City, and become the lower end of the Park. If you should try to fish there now, for trout or anything else, my friend Sergeant Klopkiwsk, or Officer Klopkiwsk, would pounce upon you and call your attention to the sign. For the sign is still there—the Park Commissioners regard it as an historic relic. And so it is. Old John Stevens told me about that sign, only a few days before he died. It was his death that brought Buttermill Run into the City's possession, for there had been some sort of contract between his father and the City Government, that the old farm should not be taken into the city limits until after the death of his last surviving child.

My old father painted that sign for a joke," John Stevens told me. "Oh, yes, he understood about the spelling. You see, the boys used to go there at night, fishin' for eels, and sometimes they'd be afraid of gettin' bit by a snake or some-thing else. So he painted that sign for 'em, and to take overmuch precautions, and so get pretty noisy. The house used to stand right back there on the knoll, and you could hear 'em. One night they caught a lot of eels, a whole bag of 'em, and somebody got the brilliant idea of sendin' 'em to the market. So they poured 'em all out on the bank there, and set to work to count 'em. And when they got through, they had—just one eel!"

Naturally, they were, and you might say, disconnected, and got to wonderin' what had become of all the eels they had when they began countin', and whose fault it was. It was some rumour. Next mornin', Father put up that sign: "No Fishing ALOUD!" It's been the joke of the neighbourhood for forty years. And strangers have took it seriously, and kept away.

"Yes, it's a trouty lookin' place, but there ain't never been a trout into it. Not in my time." Well, old John Stevens died without issue, and under the terms of his father's will Buttermill Run and Deep Pool passed over to the Park Commissioners. And so then my friend the Malefactor of Great Wealth invited me to join his trout-fishing party in Canada. I was a poor hand at fly-casting and I knew it. I had just eight days for practice, and with realization that fact came to me thought of Deep Pool. If by assiduous rehearsal I could learn to flick my tail-ly just under the edge of that rock, with the droppers settling softly between, I need not disgrace myself between, I hereby notified the westward, where I had woven myself in my first back cast. Next time I had better luck, and whipped cast straight out over the Pool, and splash! Splash! You know the feeling, as the line tautens, you find you've hooked—something live or fightin'.

"Was a three-ounce chub; the pool seemed full of them—another evidence, if any were needed, of the absence of game fish. A full dozen of them I caught, was throwing back the twelfth when a stern voice from behind me broke the stillness of the morning. "You have not looked at the sign?" Officer Klopkiwsk it was. I learned

PROGRESS OF THE WAR

[April 12 to April 18]

NO week of the war has produced results more satisfactory to the Allies than the period under review; and it would almost seem that the beginning of the end of the conflict was coming in sight. That another nation, Bolivia, has entered the war against Germany is not very important otherwise than in showing further the widening isolation of the Central European Powers.

The most conspicuous field of the week's activities was the Western front, where from Dixmude to the Meuse the British and the French made most important advances and secured large numbers of prisoners and much war material. The British operations extended from Dixmude to a point northwest of St. Quentin.

The Russian campaigns in Europe and in Asia provided but little news during the week, and it is probably correct to say that the week's close left positions pretty much as they were at the close of the week preceding.

News was received of the Mesopotamian campaign to the effect that the British continued to press the Turks between the Dniala and the Tigris, having reached a point on the latter within ten miles of Samarra; about seventy miles above Baghdad. The extent of the co-operation of the British and Russians was not announced.

DOMINION JUBILEE

WE are not aware that anything is being done in St. Andrews to prepare for a public celebration on the First of July next of the fifteenth anniversary of the formation of the Dominion of Canada. Capt. George Lowery sailed on Saturday last with Capt. N. M. Clark.

Mrs. G. Skiffington Grimmer is visiting her parents up-river.

PURE REASON

In his essay, "Perpetual Peace," published in 1795, Immanuel Kant published that we can never have universal peace until the world is politically organized, and it will never be possible to organize the world politically until the people, not the kings, rule.

WORTH THE MONEY

A woman in Ithaca wrote to an insurance company: "April 25 my husband took out an accident policy and in less than a month he was accidentally drowned. I consider it a good investment."

OLD GENTLEMAN

Old Gentleman (engaging new chauffeur)—"I suppose I can write to your last employer for your character?"

Local and General

Capt. N. M. Clark has resumed command of his vessel which will be in harbor throughout the winter.

On Saturday last he sailed for St. George, where a cargo was taken on board the vessel.

Don't throw away your OLD RUBBERS. The Young Women's Patriotic Association are making arrangements for the collecting of all old rubber goods, from the sale of which they hope greatly to increase their Memorial Fund.

The Association will announce at an early date the plans it has made.

The Ladies of the Presbyterian Missionary Society have recently presented two of their number with life memberships as a token of respect and high esteem.

Last month Mrs. W. J. McQuoid was the recipient, and on Tuesday Mrs. Glenn was constructed by the late Frank Gilman.

The occasion was doubly memorable being Mrs. Glenn's 80th birthday.

"SEEING IT THROUGH" is easier with a Remington Typewriter as it gives you a better grasp of your business by relegating unimportant work to your employees.

A. Milne Fraser, Halifax, N. S.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Edwin McCoy was held from the residence of her sister, Mrs. Edwin Odell, on Saturday last.

The service was conducted by the Rev. W. W. Odell, of the Methodist Church, and the Rev. Geo. H. Elliott, of the Church of England, assisted by the Methodist Choir.

Many beautiful floral tributes were received from friends in York and Boston.

The pall-bearers were her four nephews, Dr. E. S. Elliott, Robert Elliott, William Elliott, and Percy E. Odell.

Miss Mabel Elliott gave a much enjoyed birthday party on Monday evening.

Each guest represented a book, and the two prize-winning costumes were worn by Elaine Greenlaw, "24th of June," and Frazer Keay, "Pickwick Papers."

Other guests and their costumes were: George McLaren, "Chip of the Flying Egg"; Robina McLaren, "Silver Maple"; Mabel Elliott, "Miss Billy"; Teddy Boone, "The White Alley"; Charles Anderson, "Under Two Flags"; Helen Boone, "Bunch of Cherries"; Rupert Greenlaw, "The Tale of Two Cities"; Gladys Horsnell was unable to present.

Many games and competitions completed the programme.

RED CROSS SOCIETY

The Red Cross Society wishes very gratefully to acknowledge the receipt of $6.50 from Miss Adeline Kerr.

The price of material is so great that the Society's funds are kept at a pretty low ebb, and donations are most acceptable.

The case of hospital supplies which was shipped last month has arrived quite safely in St. John, and the Secretary of the Provincial Branch writes that the case was very welcome.

And asks that special thanks be given to the ladies of Bocabec for their contribution.

The congestion of freight traffic was responsible for the delay in arrival of the case of supplies.

EASTER MEETING, ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

Held 16th April, 1917

In answer to the appeal for Maple Sugar for the soldiers, she asked the views of the Club, and a vote of $10 was made.

The Secretary, Mrs. Everett, read a letter of thanks from Mrs. E. M. Hewitt for sympathy expressed by the Club.

The Treasurer, Miss A. Richardson, reported a balance on hand of $3 after payment of $10 just voted.

Mrs. Gardner then rendered the solo "Freight Faces" very sweetly, giving as an encore "Sweet Miss Mary."

The Chorus Club were responsible for the next item which thoroughly delighted every member of the audience.

It was entitled "The Bachelor's Dream," and consisted of a series of tableaux each explained by a short reading and accompanied by appropriate music.

The Bachelor sees in the many girls he does marry. The costumes and acting were splendid.

Those taking part were, Miss Margery Babbitt, "Country Girl"; Miss Laura Shaw, "Golfing Girl"; Mrs. Arthur Mason, "Cocquette"; Mrs. Vernon Lamb, "Society Girl"; Mrs. Frank Kennedy, "Quakeress"; Miss Madge Rigby, "Hunting Girl"; Miss Carol Hibbard, "College Girl"; Mrs. A. B. O'Neill, "Soldier's Girl"; Mrs. Sarah McCaffrey, "Tennis Girl"; Miss Viola McDowell, "Winter Girl"; Miss Edna Giberson, "Western Girl"; Miss Carrie Rigby, "City Girl"; Mrs. R. D. Rigby, "Nurse"; Mrs. Ben Hanson, "Sufragette"; Mrs. Gardner, "Yachting Girl"; Miss Phyllis Cockburn, "Widow"; Miss Elsie Finigan, "The Bride"; Mr. Langille, "Bachelor."

The speaker of the evening, Mr. T. T. Odell, was then called upon to give an account of his recent trip to Washington and the inauguration ceremony which he witnessed.

Having fear of stage fright, Mr. Odell explained, he had written his account and would proceed to read it.

He spoke of his two days visit in New York where skyscrapers, with their interior decorations of marble and mosaic; and the exchanges and the curb market, each with their surging and yelling crowd, had been of much interest to him.

On arrival at Washington, the Union Station, the finest building of its kind in existence, impressed him greatly.

He described very vividly the spirit of the chief city of the United States on March 5, 1917, when President Wilson rode through the crowded and decorated avenue on his way to and from the White House and the Capitol.

He described the procession itself, the solemn taking of the oath, and the Grand Parade, to witness which the President remained standing for 24 hours.

The Parade was made up of a large representative body of soldiers, schools, political clubs, and Boy Scouts.

The Boy Scouts also helped to line the route, and were generally useful, even rescuing wind-tossed hats. By far the most important person in the Parade, in his own estimation, was the Bandmaster of the negro regiment.

The day closed with a display of fireworks, which Mr. Odell spoke of as being exceptionally grand and which he said was a fitting conclusion to the "crowning of an American King."

The vote of thanks to Mr. Odell which Miss Nellie Stuart proposed and Mrs. George Babbitt seconded, was enthusiastically carried.

has suffered that weakness and decline of energy which must accompany the great age to which he had attained.

The late George Mowatt was a son of Colonel David Mowatt and was born at St. Andrews on February 22nd, 1826, and had therefore passed his ninety-first birthday; but until near the close of his life he attained in a wonderful degree his mental faculties, and could remember and discuss the early events of his native Town, with a clearness and freedom of which no person now living is capable.

His mother was Miriam Weyer, a daughter of Colonel Thomas Weyer, one of the Loyalists who came to St. Andrews about the year 1784, and Mr. Mowatt was about the last of the direct Loyalist stock in St. Andrews. He spent his long life on Beech Hill Farm, one of the most beautiful spots in or around St. Andrews, and to it he was greatly attached, so much so, that a few years ago when disposing of the property, at a very advantageous price, he made it a condition of sale that he should remain in the home during his life-time. A staunch life long and consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, of which for forty years he was an elder, his life was a striking example of honesty and consistency.

Mr. Mowatt married Isabella Campbell, a sister of the late John Campbell, for many years prominently associated with the Government at Moncton, and she predeceased him eight years. One daughter, Miss G. Helen Mowatt, and one sister, Miss Susan E. Mowatt, survive.

The funeral took place on Friday afternoon, from Greenlaw's Presbyterian Church, where for many years the deceased gentleman was a devout and regular worshipper.

ORDERS will be received at THE WREN DRUG AND BOOK STORE, for copies of the special souvenir edition of the first number of "BREATH OF THE HEATHER," the official publication of the Grand Over Sea Club (The Klites). This edition is on a special deckle edge paper with the cuts pasted in. It contains two supplements, one of the chief of Clan MacLean and the other of Sir General Maclean of the Union Station, the Honorable Colonel of the Klites.

There are only one hundred copies of this special to be printed, they will be numbered, signed by the C. O. (Col. Guise), and the price is One Dollar. The ordinary copies are priced at five cents, but the special edition is something worth having.
