LOCAL AND OTHER ITEMS.

Extensive repairs and alterations are in progress in the parliament building at Ottawa, partly on account of the approaching visit of the Duke of York, and partly to secure much needed additional accommodation.

A British warship damaged struck a rock in the Gulf of Mexico, and was wrecked. The vessel was considerably damaged. She reached St. John's looking. This is the third time the Buzard has met with a similar accident.

H. M. S. INDEPENDENCE, arrived at Georgetown on Saturday. The Indefatigable is a second-class steam-tug, capable of 2,000 tons and 9,000 horse power. She paid a visit to Charlotte two years ago in company with the Crossed and Thames. She left for Sydney on Monday.

On the arrival of the steamer Orion, at Halifax last week, a passenger named Edward Hooper, of Bermuda, was arrested by Detective Power, charged with the theft of government stores from the naval dockyard at Bermuda. He has made a confession and several prominent officials of the dockyard are said to be implicated.

The schooner Marie Josephine, has returned to Quebec from her search at Seven Islands for the bodies of the unfortunate victims of the ill-fated steamer St. Olaf. No further signs of human bodies were found than those reported some time ago, and it is now certain the body of Capt. L'Amour and the remainder of the victims must have been washed out to sea or buried by waves in the drifting sand. A large part of the hull of the vessel still remains where it grounded. The Marie Josephine brought up boilers and some other portions of the wreck, and will shortly return to endeavor to secure the engines and other parts of the steamer which was wrecked.

The latest man in the United States has just been buried. He was 92 years old and never had done a stroke of work. He was supported by his parents as long as they lived. A legacy was left which was doled out to him. His money was in time all gone, and he was left to eat the bread that was given to him; and he died in 25 years, and was buried in a pauper's grave. He was too lazy to use a pistol or a rope.

The remains of King Edmund the Martyr, the last King of the East Angles, who reigned from 855 to 870, have been returned to England after being in France more than seven hundred years. They reached London July 29th in charge of Montague Dalrymple, Archbishop of Niassa, and were placed in the private chapel of the Duke of Norfolk, pending burial in the shrine being prepared for their reception in the new Chapel of St. Edmund in Westminster. The body, after burial at Here, was again buried at Bury St. Edmund's, whence it was carried off to France by Louis VII. Through the good offices and personal intervention of the Pope the body is now returned to England.

A sad drowning accident occurred near Georgetown on Friday, by which Fredrick Hinton, a young man twenty-one years of age, son of Thomas Hinton and brother of Sergeant Hinton of the first Canadian Contingent, was the unfortunate victim. He was a number of younger companions were bathing in a place called McPherson's Beach, on the Cherry River. The water was not very deep and Hinton went out further towards the edge of the channel where he was seen to suddenly sink. The other boys, who were all very young and in, it appears, expert swimming, could not save him, they however, in the alarm but when assistance arrived it was too late. The body was recovered several hours later by Mr. John McDonald who brought it to the surface by diving. The funeral was a popular young man and his untimely end cost a full gloom among his friends and relatives.

Mr. LATOUCHE TUPPEN, arrived here Saturday evening for the purpose of inducing young men to go to Madagascar to work at the harvest. The excursion trip leaves here on Friday and Saturday and costs $10 going and $10 to come back. The lowest pay is $25 per month, and from that to $50, according to the man's skill in farm work. A good strong man, accustomed to farm work as it is in the east, is said to ask $10 to $15. If he is a machinist capable of keeping a machine in order, he is worth $15 more. As to the length of time there should be three months' work for those who wish to stay that long, taking in the harvesting, threshing and fall plowing. 45,000 men will be required to gather in the wheat in the colony in 1901. He is to surround the Colony 1,000,000 acres, for which he receives $800,000. The railway is to revert back to the Colony at the end of fifty years, for which Mr. Tuppen is to be paid at once $1,000,000. The railway line, which was given to Mr. Tuppen in the original agreement, is also to revert back to the Colony under the new contract, excepting one mile which Mr. Tuppen retains for his own use. The contract is a joint stock company, with abundance of capital to develop the resources of the Colony and give employment to thousands of men. Newfoundland is rich in lumber, and one of Mr. Tuppen's main schemes is to establish large pulp mills. A sister ship of the Bravo will open to be placed on the North Sydney route, and one of the Bravo's is to be sent from Newfoundland to be by this route. Hotels will also be constructed by Mr. Tuppen, and in a few years Newfoundland will become the greatest resort on this continent for people.—North Sydney Herald.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

COLUMBIA AND INDEPENDENCE. The Columbia and Independence had great contest on Saturday, the former winning by one minute and twenty seconds.

CARRIE NATION LOOSE AGAIN. Mrs. Carrie Nation, having a sentence in jail for one month, has been pardoned by Governor Stanley, of Kansas. She would not at first accept the pardon, because the fine and costs were not remitted, but afterwards decided to do so. The county commissioners will allow her to pay the fine and costs amounting to $100 in instalments of $5 a month.

BRITISH WARSHIP LOST. The British torpedo boat destroyer Viper struck a rock off the Island of Alderney, in the English Channel, a few days ago, and is a total wreck. There was no loss of life. The Viper was the only vessel of the British navy fitted with turbo-engines. During her speed trials in May and June she attained 30 1/2 knots, and was pronounced capable of doing 31 knots. At that time she was on her way to the Mediterranean, and her hull was damaged when she struck a rock.

TESTIMONIAL TO LORD "BOBS." In the Commons last Wednesday the proposed grant of £100,000 for his services in South Africa came up and Balfour warmly praised his services, comparing him to Collingwood, Nelson, Malborough and Wellington, and asked for a unanimous vote. The Liberal leader, however, Mr. Dillon objected. He complained of comparing Robert to Malborough, and declared Robert has shown great humanity in South Africa, had employed barbarous methods and proved a dismal failure.

EMPEROR FREDERICK DEAD. The Emperor Frederick, of Germany, died of cancer of the throat at Kronberg, on Monday at 6:15 p. m. He was the eldest child of Queen Victoria and another of the present German Emperor. She was born at Buckingham Palace, November 21, 1840, and was married to the late Emperor Frederick William of Prussia, when he was Crown Prince of Prussia in January, 1863. She bore him three sons and three daughters before 1873. She was Empress of Germany in 1888, in which year she was also a widow.

THAT IS OUR OLD FLAG. A Rochester, N. Y., despatch of the 3rd says: John McBride, of Adam's Basin, Elm County, one of the dignitaries attending the annual parade of Western New York at Albion, County, became seized at the British flag flying among the decorations on Main Street. As the company arrived under the flag McBride left the ranks, mounted the shoulders of companions and cut down the banner. Just as the flag fell in the gutter the band played the "Star Spangled Banner," and intense enthusiasm prevailed. A man's was applied and the flag burned.

A WEEK-OLD RECORD BROKEN. Says a Columbus, Ohio, despatch of the 2nd inst.: Cresson, champion of the trotting turf, added more laurels to his fame today, by trotting a mile in 2:02, reducing by half a second his week-old record of 2:02, made at Cleveland last Friday. The first half was made in 1:02, the first time that the distance has been covered in less than one minute by a trotter. The time by quarters was 59, 59, 1:30, 2:02. Only a stiff wind blowing directly at the stretch kept Cresson from stepping faster than 2:02.

More than 12,000 people jammed to the driving park to see the great trotting action. At noon a few drops of rain fell, but the track was in excellent condition. About 10 o'clock the sky cleared, but the wind did not decrease. A great deal of money went into the box at odds of $25 to $15 on time against the trotter. At the track, owing to the heavy wind, the odds against the horse increased $25 to $5, but the backers of Cresson took the short end as long as pools were sold.

George Ketcham appeared with Cresson a little before three o'clock. The trotting began at 3:30, and was over in 2:32. An hour later he came out again and after serving several times, stopped a mile in 2:32. Still later he worked out for the last time in 2:15. He had great power in running.

At 5:40 the station was brought out for the last time. Tim Martin, his trainer, was ready to accompany him with a runner, and Dan Laban waited at the half mile pole to take him on from the start. Cresson was in the lead, and the 2 1/2 score Ketcham dodged for the word, but Cresson was not in his stride and he pulled up at the first turn to try again. Down to the wire he ran, the runner two lengths behind, and this time it was a go.

Gamey facing the breeze, the champion moved with apparent ease and at his greatest speed. The runner caught him at the quarter and a shout went up from the throng as the time went up, a quarter of a second less than thirty. Now the wind was at his back, and realizing the advantage, Ketcham kept him at his great clip. The half mile pole was passed in 59 1/2 seconds, a record never before attained, and here the second runner caught him up. The three quarter pole was reached in 1:30. As Cresson turned into the stretch, the bitter wind beat him in the face and he pulled back by force. For the fraction of a second he seemed to falter, but his driver's voice encouraged him, and he came on. He plunged toward the finish with unweakened stride, and in spite of weariness and the buffeting of the breeze, he finished under the wire a winner against time.

But for the wind it is believed that his time would have been a second faster. As soon as the horse had passed the wire the crowd rushed on the track to greet the champion and a huge wreath of flowers was hung around his neck. Mr. Ketcham, owner and driver, was carried to the judge's stand, and in a few words he expressed his appreciation of the interest taken in the attempt. Cresson half an hour later seemed ready for another mile.

LOVE AND SCORN—A BALLAD.

A maiden stands at her father's gate. At her father's gate in the evening gloom, All earth is fair, and everywhere The roses are in bloom. A knight rides up on a milk white steed, A milk white steed, his lance at rest. Careless his song; as he rides along Sparkles his golden crest. Admiring his glance as he gallantly stoops, Admiring his glance as he gallantly stoops. Admiring his glance as he gallantly stoops, Admiring his glance as he gallantly stoops.

Blandine of Betharram.

BY J. M. CAVE. (American Messenger of the Sacred Heart.) (Continued)

Now, with St. Anselm, Margaret may well exclaim, "O, Thou my Light! my eyes bless Thee, for Thou permittest my soul to contemplate Thee, and not to be blind to the beauty of Thy face!" O blind eyes! created to look upon the beauty of that face, cease not to weep true tears of sorrow for the blindness of the past! Cease not to weep tears of joy for the mercy and the loving kindness of the present!

And the King has taken possession of His own. His seal is upon the heart of the orating woman, that she may love Him. It will be upon her arm Lancelot, that she may work for Him. Margaret arises after that visit, a new creature. Now, she can lift up her drooping head; she has partaken of the Bread of Angels. She can defy the past. He has obliterated it. He has consecrated the present; the future, please God, will ratify that consecration, for in the newly-born heart there is written a great word: "Reparation."

And because she has written the word "Reparation" on her heart, when Antony urges her to give him the right to bear her away with him to England, she answers, "I must first go back whence I came, I must return to the one who made me what you saw me, Antony, when you thought me worthy to be your wife. If I can obtain her forgiveness, her sanction and her motherly blessing, and if you still wish to burden your life with a wife so helpless, I will no longer refuse, though believe me, Antony, it will not be even then, without fear of doing you an injustice, though I know you love me, and I return that love."

And not even Sister Christina could shake this resolve, though she found many plausible pretexts for so doing. How will you travel to England, my dear Margaret?" she urged. "A way will be found," was the reply.

"There may be some of your nuns going in that direction who would be willing to take charge of me. As to that, my Blandine herself could guide me were it necessary." There was, of course, a general protest against this risk. "Other help will be found, fear not," continued Margaret. "We shall loiter on the way, that we may both gain strength, shall we not, Blandine? We shall kneel at many a shrine between Betharram and London."

"Well," said Father Francis, "since we have yet a whole month in which to terrify you with the real as well as the imaginary dangers of the road, we will not say the last word to-day, but make the most of these bright summer days."

There is Lourdes to be visited for a novena of prayers before the Holy Grotto. There is St. Savin and Notre Dame de Puy and Buglose, the cradle of St. Vincent de Paul. There are the many old churches and ruins of the valley of Argeles, to say nothing of the world-famous Gavarrie, the Beach of Roland, and the countless mineral springs that attract the tourists of the whole world. All these are so easily accessible, so delightful in aspect as well as edifying for their miracles that the world has not yet wearied of telling, that we shall have an uninterrupted feast for soul and body. On every step of this land Providence has set a mark of its bounty in the shape of a healing spring or hermit's cell. Although God's free gift to His people has been monopolized for individual gains, syndicated, turned into the hands of companies and speculators, who pay men of science to set their mark above the sacred sign with which the servants of God marked those places centuries ago, yet the Lord is still long-suffering and very patient. He does not withdraw or nullify the gift of healing from the waters He once blessed. Does it not seem an abuse of the rights of mankind to surround springs like Cantarel, Bagneres de Bigorre, Luchon, Eau Bonnes and the others with barriers of private ownership? And if this proprietorship is really justifiable, why not make some return to Him for His wondrous gifts by surrounding them with cloisters and sanctuaries where the soul may be healed as well as the body, sanctuaries instead of gambling houses, casinos instead of casinos and dancing halls? And why, above all, why set the mark of 'Dr.' or 'Prof.'? So-and-so above the legend of the saints that sanctified the ground, above the story well proven, the record well attested, of the cures wrought so marvelously by prayer, and not by science?

But this is trenching on the ground of Messieurs les Cures and Father Francis, and they are, needless to say, advocates of free mineral baths with holy surroundings for fashionable watering places. It is a little hard for the curate who allows a famous preacher to preach a charity sermon in his church in the height of the season, hoping thereby to mend the roof or the breach in the old wall of the church that is closed for some eight or nine months in the year, and to be blind to the beauty of the "Republique" to have his salary stopped. (1)

But with the coming and going of tourists we have little or nothing to do. With the coming and going of Margaret and Blandine is another matter. God angels will surely guide their steps. Let us follow them this pleasant morning. It is early dawn. Two figures are by the villa gate. One, a tall, slender woman, draped in black; the other a remarkably beautiful little girl of ten, or thereabouts. The child holds the lady's hand, and looks up into her face. Pale, beautiful, serene is that face, now raised to heaven. There is a slight air of uncertainty in the lady's movements, a little hesitation, that indicates some infirmity. At first glance we would tribute it to lameness rather than blindness, for the eyes are large, fine and clear, and appear to be studying some distant object. They droop now, as the lady and child stop before the church door. Too early to enter, so after a little prayer we may follow them to the Fountain of St. Roch. The prayer, we may well believe, pierced through the triple and quadruple barriers of stone and iron, and the little halt by the fountain, and the invocation to the Patron Saint of the Pyrenees, while sprinkling the sightless eyes with the clear water, gave courage to mount higher. The child clasps the kind hand trusts to her guidance, while it sounds the dear lady's face to see if our Lady has heard the prayer that pierced the great closed door, or if St. Roch has washed away the veil of darkness that covers the dear eyes.

Do not fancy that Margaret does not see the Saint and his faithful hound. Still less, do not fancy that she does not see, and very plainly too, the Virgin and Child above the high altar. The sweet, appealing Mother and the Divine Infant that she has sighted for so many years! But that dash of cold water from the fountain helps her to bear the pang of pain called up by the remembrance, and she allows herself to be led up the slope to the First Station of the Cross. There the two figures kneel. It is passing sweet to Margaret to reflect that she is on Calvary. O, was there every another heart that resisted as hers had resisted, for fifteen long years, the invitation to mount to the Heart of Jesus, by this same road? To follow Him slowly, from the Praetorium to Calvary, there to weep with His Mother, and Magdalen, and John! And lest she should forget again and lose herself in acts of contrition, she asks her little guide to take the manual and read aloud for them both the prayers of the sorrowful, sweet stations of the Way of the Cross. This Blandine does. She knows them nearly by heart already. And how they penetrated the listener's soul as they fall from the lips of the innocent child, were it not for whose presence there, Margaret would have loved to linger long at each station; at each station to die, as it were, with grief at her Saviour's feet, and wait till he raised her to life once more. But these were only passing aspirations. She would not let sorrow conquer her again, though here on Calvary, and with the heart-thrilling words of the prayers falling from the pure lips that uttered them so devoutly, as never before did poor Margaret feel the loss of her lost years. But on and on they went, reverently kneeling before each marble temple, whose stuccoed walls bore in high relief the sacred scenes of the Via Dolorosa, and through the double wall of blindness and weeping tears Margaret can discern the Saviour's face, disfigured for her, disfigured by her, and the mournful eyes that pierce her very soul. She can hear the voice of the Lamb telling her not to weep for Him, the Innocent One, but for herself.

(1) At Cantarel in the summer of '98 the curate had his salary stopped for permitting Pere Byraud, a Jesuit who preaches here in the convents, to preach a charity sermon perfectly free from any allusion to politics.

And yet she does weep for Him, forgetting herself wholly. Sweet tears she weeps for Him; tears of sorrow for the wounds His sacred body bore, even before they stripped Him, to stretch him on the cross. Through the double wall she sees the wounded cheek, struck by the soldier; the black spot oozing blood slowly from beneath the crown of thorns; the torn shoulders and the deep gashes into which the heavy beam sank deeper as he struggled on. A she was one of those who not only would not lighten it, but made it heavier. Is it any wonder that she flings herself face downward on the first step of the Scala Sancta, and in utter abandonment of sorrow for her share in it is suffering, pours out all the tears her heart has garnered since the first hour of her repentance, while Blandine clings to her and whispers, "Dear Mamma Marguerite, do not weep! You will see! Our Lady of Betharram will ask Jesus to let you see!" The child thinks the tears and the prayers are all for the lost vision. But it is not thus.

Are they mount another step Margaret asks: "And what is my little Blandine asking of our Lady for her blind Mamma?" "O, always that my kind Mamma Marguerite may see." "Dear child, Mamma Marguerite sees all that is best for her to see now." "Does Mamma see Blandine?" "Yes, even Blandine; but not with these eyes"—she pointed to the sightless orbs—"but asks no more for their light. I could not bear it against all holy things, the pictures above them. (To be continued.)

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Sustaining Diet.

These are the enervating days, when, as somebody has said, men drop by the roadside as if the Day of Fire had dawned. They are fraught with danger to people whose systems are poorly sustained; and this leads us to say, in the interest of the less robust of our readers, that the full effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla is such as to suggest the propriety of calling this medicine something besides a blood purifier and tonic—say, a sustaining diet. It makes it much easier to bear the heat, assures refreshing sleep, and will without any doubt avert much sickness at this time of year.

THE OBITUARY.

While fixing up a send-off for a citizen who died. The editor laid down his pen and pensively sighed; And o'er his face a thoughtful look like summer cloudlet spread, And one could see his inmost thoughts were yonder with the dead. Deceased was a delinquent in the book there on the desk, And as he scribbled performing the obituary task Made reference to that page from whence no traveller returns. He studied if 'were best for him to spell it "bourne" or "burn."
