Messrs. Hardy and Dummett, of Zurich who have been engaged for some years in butchering there, have sold out to Messrs. A. Bousberry and S. Motter, and purchased the tannery of the late J. F. Moriz, and are now pushing that business with their accustomed energy.

Arch. Matheson, formerly of Clinton, has entered the militia field in the northwest, commencing his duties on Sunday last. He is a man of strong religious convictions, a good, forcible speaker, and that he may be abundantly successful in his labors is the wish of his many friends here.

We are pleased to learn that two more of those who wrote at the late non-professional examinations at Clinton, Messrs. B. Stanbury and J. W. Shaw, were only granted third-class certificates, have, on re-consideration of the papers, been awarded grade B. certificates.

We are called upon to record the decease of an old resident of Morris, in the person of James Purvis, who died on Monday of this week after a brief illness, aged 60 years. He had a lame knee that got inflamed and it got worse and worse until mortification set in, and death soon relieved him from suffering.

A boy named Geo. Birch was arrested in Bluevale on Sunday, on a charge of stealing a watch belonging to Henry Miller, of Wingham. On being arrested the boy confessed to having stolen the watch he had sold for $2. Birch was committed for trial on this charge, and also on a charge of having stolen a $50 bill from a man in Howick.

THE COUNTY TOWN.—In the interim between two days and Indian summer it would be in order for the Clinton News Era to tell the people of Huron who intends moving the county buildings to its hamlet. Don't be particular as to the exact date—any time between a day and century will do.—[Seaford Sun.]

We would like to gratify our cotem, but to publish the information asked for would be to put Goderich people on their guard, and they might go to work and chain down the buildings. No, no, the exact date for this lulliputian undertaking cannot be made public.—[Clinton News Era.]

TO BE DISCONTINUED.—Some people have hitherto been under the impression that letters, if unsealed, could be sent from one post office to another, for one cent, and many letters have been mailed that way. Instructions have been issued to postmasters that hereafter all such letters, if not prepaid, are to be sent to the Dead Letter office. The same remarks apply to accounts for parties in other places. Of course letters and accounts mailed for delivery at the same post office go for one cent. People should bear these things in mind, and they would save themselves much trouble and loss.

CATTLE.—The Sarnia Observer thus refers to a former resident of Stanley:—"Mr. John Laut, formerly of the county of Huron but now of Winnipeg, purchased ninety-two well bred heifers, 2 years old, and three thoroughbred short horn bulls, at a handsome price from Mr. J. Smith and H. McGurk, breeders, township of Moore. Most of the heifers were raised in balance in Sarnia, Enniskillen and Plympton. The aggregate cost was over $4,000, and the animals were delivered to the purchaser in Sarnia on Wednesday of last week. Mr. Laut is commissioned to procure these animals for the establishing of a cattle ranch in Manitoba."

LAST NEWS.—Chief McCrimmon has shown us a handsome cap ornament presented to him by D. E. Cameron. The ornament, which is of solid silver, is in the form of the MacCrimmon crest and was manufactured in Inverness, Scotland. The crest is inscribed with the words "Pernette, Getera Davis," leave the rest for the Gods.

BOYS ACROSS.—Mr. D. E. Cameron, banker, arrived from Europe on Tuesday evening last looking well after his long trip. Mr. Cameron travelled extensively through England, Scotland, and France, and is a most interesting man to the world, and as regards manner, beauty and historical anecdotes. A young man who visits the "Huron" for health and "sluggish" can easily understand the enthusiastic love and devotion entertained by Scotsmen for their picturesque and historical country. Mr. John McCain, who has likewise been on a visit to his native land.

HOME AT LAST.—The late Mrs. J. B. of the place, who was a resident of the county of Huron for many years, was buried at the station on Monday last. A number of friends who had been hearing of her illness, were glad to see her home at last.

THE FINEST.—The finest of the kind not fill the measure. Dr. J. B. of the place, who was a resident of the county of Huron for many years, was buried at the station on Monday last. A number of friends who had been hearing of her illness, were glad to see her home at last.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Mrs. Baldrow Killed by a Railway Train.

On Saturday, Sept. 15th, Mrs. Mary Baldrow, of London, mother of the wife of George Merritt, residing on the South Line, Kincairdine township, was killed by the midnight train at two o'clock. She was accompanied by her grand-daughter, who, as soon as the train stopped, left the car to see if any friends were in waiting at the station. She returned in a moment and saw that her grandmother had left the car on the lake shore side. She at once went to her assistance, and taking her by the hand, was crossing the track at the rear end of the train when the cars were backed up. Mrs. Baldrow was struck by the car, and the grand-daughter was unable to pull her off the track in time to prevent the wheels passing over her body. Death was instantaneous, as the wheels of the truck crossed the body at the abdomen. The grief of the grand-daughter was heart-rending. Deceased was aged seventy-nine years, but was hearty and vigorous. The relatives were at once notified and the body was taken to the residence of Mr. Merritt. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon, and the very large number who followed the remains to the Kincairdine cemetery showed the sympathy felt for the bereaved ones. From enquiries made, we think that no blame can be attached to the railway employees, or any person else in connection with the unfortunate occurrence. The husband of deceased met his death a few years ago by being thrown off a wagon.—[Reporter.]

A Bear Killed in Kinloos.

On Monday of last week three of Wm. McNeice's daughters were some distance from their father's house, on the range S. D. R., in the vicinity of Black Horse, township of Kinloos, when they observed three large bears. The girls at once ran home and narrated what they had seen. Two young men, John McNeice and Hugh Taylor, secured a shot gun and revolver with a dog and started in pursuit. In a short time two of the animals were overtaken. Taylor fired one, and McNeice with his dog was soon engaged in a hand-to-hand conflict with the other, he having found that something was wrong with his revolver, which prevented it from being discharged. Taylor observing that McNeice was in great danger in the fight at close quarters ran to his assistance and using his gun as an Irishman would a bludgeon, soon killed the brute. During the fight the bear that Taylor had freed made its escape. The young men certainly exhibited great pluck in attacking the bears single handed. Taylor completely ruined his gun in striking the bear, breaking the stock and bending the barrel.

The same animals were seen a few days before while they were endeavoring to secure some of John McGregor's pigs. Mr. McGregor and Jos. Stafford took the pigs squealing and went to see what was wrong. As soon as they saw the bears they set their dog upon them. The bears turned upon the dog and a lively race at once ensued, with the men leading for home. Stafford fearing that he was being followed, made for a small tree and was soon safely ensconced among the branches. It is said that he was not afraid of the bears; he only wanted to secure a good position to watch the race between McGregor, the dog and the bears. McGregor won on a canter.—[Kincairdine Reporter.]

Voyage of the Proteus.

New York, Sept. 14.—A Herald's St. John, N.B., special, giving details of the loss of the Proteus, says that on July 16 it entered a false lead in the ice and continued until stopped by the ice on July 19. Retreat was begun by way of favorable leads in the ice, and an effort made to force a passage. This was abandoned on July 21 and another lead entered, which promised to reach open water, but before the opening was reached the lead closed and the Proteus was unable to force a passage. The ice continued to close, and at 2 a. m., on July 23, the vessel was stopped. The ice was spongy, and after two hours pressure opened again. The Proteus steamed forward only to find that the open water had disappeared. It appears the vessel steamed back for Cape Sabina and nearly reached open water when a heavy ice-pack began to close upon it. Every effort made to saw through it was unsuccessful, and a quarter before 3 p. m. the vessel was again nipped. The hatches were opened and necessary articles were thrown upon the ice, and transferred to a safe place. The ice was breaking through the starboard bulwarks, and crushing in the vessel's side, and the engine boiler was expected to explode every moment. The hold was fast filling with water before the cries of "come off!" she is sinking!" were heeded by the wreckers on board. At 6 p. m. the ice slackened and the vessel sank rapidly. The masts were stripped of their yards, and as she sank through the ice, the dogs and pigs were scrambling among the general debris, and the whole presented a most horrible picture of a wreck. The ice floe on the port side was drifting rapidly down the Sound, and threatened to carry away everything they had. Several boat-balls were hauled to the floe and the remaining line abandoned. The ice at the time was slowing and packing between us and the shore, and the loaded boats could not be risked in the water. The expedition effects were piled together as soon as possible, to get away against the probability of some one finding the wreckage of the Proteus by the coast of Labrador. The drifting floe was abandoned by the worn-out party about 3 p. m., and all reached Cape Sabina safely.

Physicians are often startled by remarkable discoveries. The fact that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and all Throat and Lung diseases is daily curing patients that have given up hope, is startling them to realize their sense of duty, and examine into the merits of this wonderful discovery, resulting in hundreds of our best Physicians using it in their practice. SCIPPO, N. Y., Dec. 1, 1879. I am the Pastor of the Baptist church here, and an educated physician. I am not in practice, but am my sole family physician, and advise in many chronic cases. Over a year ago I was afflicted with a severe case of Catarrh of the Bladder, and was cured by Dr. King's New Discovery. I have since cured many others of the same disease by its use. We have both recommended them to our friends, many of whom have also been cured of their various ailments by them. REV. E. R. WARREN.

The Children's Watches.

Yesterday, an old man entered a Little Rock store, and taking from his pocket an old buckskin pouch, he emptied two coins on the counter, and then, after regarding the silver for a few moments, said:—"Mister, I want to buy some goods to make a dress."

"That money is mutilated old gentleman. This twenty-five cent piece has notches filed in it, and this fifty-cent piece has been punched. You see they have been abused. I can't take them."

"Abused?" said the old man. "Abused" and he took up the fifty-cent piece and looked at it tenderly. And you won't take it on account of the holes? Heaven grant that I did not have to offer it to you. Years ago, when my first child was a little girl, I punched a hole in this coin and strung it around her neck. It was her constant plaything. At night when she went to bed we'd take it off, but early in morning she would call for her watch. When our John— you didn't know John, did you? No? Well, he used to come to town a good deal."

"Where is he now?" asked the merchant, not knowing what to say, but desiring to show appreciation of the old man's story.

"He was killed in the war. I say that when John was a little boy I strung this quarter around his neck. One day, his watch got out of fix, he said, and he filed these notches in it. He and his sister Mary—that was the girl's name—used to play in the yard and compare their watches to see if they were right. Sometimes John wouldn't like it because Mary's watch was bigger than his, but she would explain that she was bigger than him and ought to have a bigger watch. The children grew up, but as they had always lived in the woods they were not ashamed to wear their watches. When a young man came to see Mary one day, she forgetfully looked at her fifty cents. 'What are you doing?' asked the young man; and when she told him she was looking at her watch, he took it as a hint and went home. After this she did not wear her watch in company. Well, Mary and the young man married. John went off in the army and got killed. Mary's husband died, and about two years ago Mary was taken sick. When her mother and I reached her house, she was dying. Calling me to her bed, she said, 'Papa, lean over.' I leaned over, and taking something from under her pillow, she put it around my neck and said, 'Papa, take care of my watch.' The old man looked at the merchant. The eyes of both men were moist. The Refined Conversation. Who's one is at a Loss for Words.

[Enter Thomas and Charles.] Thomas and Charles—"Good evening, Kate—" "How do, Charley, Tom? Where have you been this age?" Josephine—"Sars enough! Henry Brown was in just now.—Did you meet him?"

Thomas—"He is a great fellow, ain't he? Did he give you a lecture on metaphysics, or a dissertation on frogs' legs as a remedy for the unsettled condition of the labor market?"

Kate—"Oh, Tom! you're too hard on Henry. You shouldn't have said that before me. But his conversation is a little tedious sometimes."

Charles—"Hen's a muff."

Josephine—"What's the news?" Thomas—"Ain't any. Charley, who was that girl you was sweet on in the car's this afternoon?"

Charles—"Didn't I smash her, though?" Josephine—"Oh you naughty boy!" Thomas—"Charley gets the bulge on all of us."

Charles—"Where did you get those cigarettes, Tom? I saw one in New York. Can't get a decent cigarette in Boston. Have tried 'em all. By the way, Charley, you want to try Snigglefritz's beer. Beats anything in town. Drank six glasses there last night."

Charles—"Who beat's this afternoon?" Thomas—"The Long Stockings—six to nothing—regular whitewash. Catched 'em in a awful muffer, and Sluck pounded the Yellow Legs all over the field. But we must be going, Charley. Good-by Joe; good-by Kate."

Charles—"Good-by girls." Kate and Josephine—"Good-by! Should think you might stop longer though." [Exit Thomas and Charles.]

Kate—"Tom's a nice fellow, isn't he?" Josephine—"What a splendid conversationalist!"

Kate—"Oh, yes; Tom can talk on any subject."

Josephine—"He isn't much like Henry."

Kate—"No, I hope not. No matter what comes up, Tom's never lost for a word. He's so entertaining! And then one learns so much talking with him."

A Good Geographical Boundary. Judge Ryan, of Minnesota, and an excellent authority, speaking of the boundary question, says to a Winnipeg reporter:—"I have studied it, and am well satisfied that Mr. Mowat is right. When last in Ottawa I argued the question at length with a political and personal friend of Sir John A. Macdonald's, a man of the very highest standing in the Empire, and he would say, and upon finally putting the question, 'is it not a good geographical boundary?' he replied, 'it is, but a bad political one' meaning, evidently, that it did not suit Mousseau, Masson, et al, as they themselves declared.—[Rat Foreign Argus.]

AYER'S Hair Vigor restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured. It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the Vigor is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882:—"Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair for the first of my life, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Old) Engraver, says:—"AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most reliable preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. It is used to promote the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGE'S FAIRBANKS, leader of the celebrated Fairbairn Party of Scotch Volunteers, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880:—"Ever since my hair began to give I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESOTT, writing from Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says:—"Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, the falling about a month. It has continued to grow, and is one bottle of the Vigor. I regularly used but one bottle of the Vigor, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

The old folks visit to leave the young and Hubert, sense, and good Mrs. W.

"Oh yes," said Hubert, "buggy rattled, it is jolly evening, and sit up as late as going to have."

"I knew it," you would as Marion, standing gazette after the fellow who sees his dinner as y. I shouldn't have the folks are a.

"Oh!" cried whose tendered, ragged. But s his sister's eyes, Marion! What? You should ma come, "est ramp steak find any fault."

"Very well," said Marion, "now!"

It was a can by a stop-face. He stayed, brought out while he cut thickness, and ions.

"We'll have the boy, as to the house, couldn't wait world! What eleven!"

"I've no oven," "Or eleven, hungry reflect will be any to."

"Or half past, you would be at the usual h."

"That would Hubert. "I should like allow a margin follow must day half past supper."

"With a pic his sister."

"Of course going down to you wouldn't b home some time."

BY J. T. TROWBRIDGE.

IN TWO CHAPTERS.—CHAPTER I.

The old folks had gone off on a three days' visit to their married daughter, leaving the younger children, Marion and Hubert, to keep house in their absence, "and look after things," to quote good Mrs. Warner's parting words.

"Oh yes! we'll look after things!" said Hubert, merrily, as the old family buggy rattled away up the street. "Won't it be jolly! We'll have company this evening, and make as much racket and sit up as late as we like. What are we going to have for dinner?"

"I knew it wouldn't be long before you would ask that question," replied Marion, standing in the doorway and gazing after the buggy. "I never saw a fellow who seemed to think so much of his dinner as you do. I thought perhaps I shouldn't have to get any dinner, now the folks are away."

"Oh!" cried out Hubert, like a boy whose tenderest feelings had been outraged. But seeing a laughing light in his sister's eyes, he added, "No nonsense, Marion! What is life without a dinner?"

"You should say, when the provision-man comes, 'A nice piece of your juiciest rump steak,' I don't think I should find any fault with your choice."

"Very well; rump steak it shall be," said Marion. "There comes the cart now!"

It was a canvas-covered wagon, driven by a rufous-faced man in a white apron. He stopped at the gate, and Marion brought out a platter which she held while he cut slices of steak, of medium thickness, under Hubert's careful directions.

"We'll have dinner early to-day," said the boy, as they returned with their prize to the house. "It seems to me as if I couldn't wait till noon, any way in the world! What do you say to half-past eleven?"

"I've no objection," said Marion. "Or eleven," he added, after a little hungry reflection. "I don't think that will be any too soon."

"Or half-past ten—or now," she suggested, with playful sarcasm. "Then you would be ready for another dinner at the usual hour."

"That would suit me exactly," said Hubert. "There's only one arrangement I should like better; and that would allow a margin for three dinners. But a fellow must draw a line somewhere. So say half-past eleven, and then an early supper."

"With a pie before going to bed," said his sister.

"Of course!" he replied. "Now I am going down to see some boys; and you needn't be at all surprised if I bring home something nice for dessert."

"A watermelon, for instance."

Marion was fond of watermelons. But she knew he detested them, and she would have thought the happy millennium dawn about to break, if she had seen any such unmistakable sign of it as his coolly deliberating, voluntarily sacrificing his own taste and appetite to hers.

Not that Hubert Warner was any more selfish than most brothers. But he was the youngest of the family, and the pet. And it is not usually the sister, in such cases, who is trained to make small sacrifices, and the brother who grows up imperious and tyrannical, especially in the vastly important matter of what he shall eat and drink? What do you think, boys?"

Hubert laughed good-naturedly as he went off with a "sk." He knew very well that "his was jolly." And yet he felt in a peculiarly generous mood towards her that day; partly, perhaps, because he expected an uncommon number of favors from her during the brief joint sovereignty of the household. So he resolved to surprise her.

To this end he selected for her a handsome watermelon; and after first however, picking out a fine, large cantaloupe for himself.

"Won't she clap her hands and call me a lovely brother though!" thought he, enjoying in anticipation quite as much as he, the satisfaction of him as her joy over the melon. Hubert liked particularly to give pleasure to people who would reflect back a large part of it upon himself. Natural—don't you think so?"

He placed the purple melon on the table, and called for it on his way home, after seeing the boys he was in search of; in good time for dinner, for dinner, you may be tolerably sure.

covered ready coals in the stove; and there, too, was the empty gridiron on the table, and a broken plate on the floor. But no steak anywhere, broiled or raw.

Alarmed at the aspect of things, particularly at sight of the shattered crockery, Hubert put away his basket and ran out, in time to see his sister coming around the trellis, from the little garden behind the house. She was pale and breathless, consternation was in her face and a broom in her hand.

"What is the matter?" said Hubert. She could only articulate, "Nero."

"What has he done now?" he demanded, with kindling fury.

"The steak!" gasped Marion.

"Oh!" was the boy's angry exclamation—something between a groan of anguish and a roar of rage. "My dinner!"

She now found breath to make a hurried explanation.

"He came in just as I was going to place it on the broiler. I tried to frighten him away. He growled and snapped at me—then made a dash—broke the plate, and ran out with the meat. I followed him with the broom. But he came at me again, and drove me again, and drove me back!"

"He won't drive me back!" said Hubert, desperately. "I've had enough of that brute's mischief. Where's the axe?"

"Oh, don't, Hubert!" she pleaded.

"I will!" he cried, impetuously. "I'll follow him, if I have to walk right into Cripsey's house and take vengeance on him there."

"Oh! you know what sort of a man Mr. Cripsey is; and what father has always said," she expostulated, while he was looking for the deadly weapon.

"I know all about it. But father is away from home now. I'm man of the house; and I take the responsibility. Now!" Hubert grasped the axe-handle with both hands, and there was a blazing fierceness in his looks. "Let him try to drive me back!"

"He'll bite you, surely!" she warned him.

"Oh, will he!" he laughed, excitedly, as he marched to the attack. "Has he gone back over the fence?"

"No," said Marion; "I wish he had! He's in the garden there now, eating the meat."

It is time to explain that Nero was a dog belonging to their nearest neighbor, a teamster, named Cripsey. He was a great, haggard, gruff, ill-natured fellow—I mean the dog, not the owner; although the description would apply to one about as well as to the other. You will seldom find, in a quiet inland town, a more uncomfortable man and his dog to live next door to than the man Cripsey and his dog Nero.

The Cripseys, husband and wife, had no children, and they made a pet of the quadruped. A strange sort of a pet you would have thought. He could not have weighed less than one hundred and fifty pounds. He was black; you could scarcely see his eyes, for the long, coarse hair tangled over them; he was always showing his fangs and growling and snapping at strangers. And by strangers I mean eve, body except his master and mistress.

They had had trouble, on his account with nearly all their neighbors. They kept him pretty well fed, yet his appetite was insatiable, and he was an exasperating thief. Not a swell tub in all the suburbs which he did not visit and upset, if it was not protected against his depredations; not a panty or larder which he would not boldly invade, if a neglected latch gave him opportunity.

Many were the remonstrances and rebuffs uttered by indignant citizens; and once in a while, rather to protect the dog, than to oblige the neighborhood, Cripsey had made a pretence of keeping him chained. But he was more intolerably than the devil itself. The ululations of that direful beast, when confined in the back-yard—the whining, the barking, the incessant running of the shrill canine gamut of howls and yelps—were the cause of horrible days and still more hideous nights to everybody in the vicinity—excepting, perhaps, Mr. and Mrs. Cripsey.

Cripsey, especially, looked as if he rather enjoyed that sort of thing. He would go out in the morning, after Nero had been particularly noisy, and pat and caress him, and say approvingly—loud enough for any attentive neighbor to overhear—

"Well, you make it lively for 'em, has that dog, didn't ye, of feller? Don't blame ye. I'd let 'em hear from me, if I was you. They might tend to their business, an' let an honest man's dawg tend to his'n. Good feller! good feller, Nero!"

Then the exemplar quadruped would get his reward—lying loose for a day or two.

He had more than once helped himself to some of Mrs. Warner's house; and on one occasion he had called off a whole lot of 'em. I been bewitched and left cool in the woodshed. I can't manufacture any romance; what I say is no exaggeration; the garden is a fact. He ate what he wanted of it, and what was left he left where do you suppose —in Mr. Warner's own garden where he was discovered.

Mother and daughter had lost all patience with the brute, if, indeed, they had any remaining at the time; and Hubert was hot for having him shot, or otherwise put out of the way of doing further mischief. But Mr. Warner was a conciliatory sort of man; and he repeated the old, stale formula—

"No, no, boy! I don't want to kill the dog; and I don't want to have trouble with a neighbor, particularly with such a neighbor as Cripsey. I'll go and have a talk with him."

The result of which talk had been that Cripsey laughed at first with prodigious merriment at the joke of Nero's stealing a whole ham and burying it in the owner's garden; and then said, more soberly—

"I'm sorry for your folks, Mr. Warner; I'm sorry they left the meat exposed. Nero will take what's left in his way! they ought to know that, of this time."

"In his way!" exclaimed the other, with difficulty keeping down his righteous wrath. "Do you call it leaving things in his way, when we set out a ham to cool in our own wood-shed?"

"No, not without he makes it in his way," replied Cripsey, with a grin. "But, honestly, neighbor, I don't go for to have my dawg do such things, and if you ketch him at it, I wish you'd give him a good box on the ear."

"Catch him at it!" Mr. Warner repeated, ready to boil over with anger, but restraining himself. "I can't catch him at it. He keeps shy of me. But he'll march right up to the women-folks, and snarl if they attempt to drive him away."

"Haw! haw!" guffawed Cripsey. "You don't say so! Wal, Nero's a saasy dawg, that's a fact! Haw! haw! haw!"

"It's no laughing matter to our side," said the neighbor, sternly.

"Wal, I s'pose not," said Cripsey; "and I'll try to keep him to hum in future."

"I wish you would," said Mr. Warner, "or else open your pocket-book and pay for the damage he does. That ham cost me two dollars, Mr. Cripsey."

"Yes, no doubt; hams is awful high, and I hope you won't let Nero git hold of another," was Cripsey's not very satisfactory comment. "Come here, Nero! here, you fellow!"

Nero got the chain again for a couple of days and nights, which he took care to make remarkably unhappy for his enemies; and that was all the satisfaction Mr. Warner obtained by his remonstrance.

"A box on the ear!" said Hubert, when he heard the conversation repeated. "A sight of good that will do! Unless I give him the box with something besides the flat of my hand. As I will sometime, if I get a chance!"

And now he had got the chance. Nero was growling and tearing his viand under a pear-tree, when the boy with brandished axe walked up to him. He thereupon set his paw on so much of the meat as was not yet reduced to a swallowing condition and turned up at his assailant so fierce a look under his banded forehead, accompanied by a savage snarl and a formidable show of fangs, that something happened which I am almost ashamed to relate.

CHAPTER II. Hubert's head failed him; he lowered the axe and drew back. He had come to scare the beast, and the beast had scared him.

"If I shouldn't f'ell him at the first blow," he prudently reflected, "he would tear me as he is tearing that meat."

But he was careful not to make any such observation aloud, mind you.

"Well, if you say so," he replied to his sister's continued entreaties—even trying to convince himself that he was desisting in deference to her—"if you think I'd better not—I'd like to cut his head open, but—there any of that steak left?"

"I had cut off a little for your breakfast," said Marion in the back-ground. "It is in the refrigerator."

"Then I won't stirle 'em," said Hubert.

Frightened as she was, she couldn't forbear a laugh.

"Lucy for 'em he left something for your dinner! He hadn't, he would have had to die."

"You think that, why, I'll go and send a notice-heat of 'em!" cried Hubert with the greatest courage, now that he was at a good distance from the dog. "I meant something different. I'll show you."

Returning to the house, he went to her bringing out the reserved steak, from which he sliced off the thinnest possible slice. Then he took down a box from a cupboard-shelf.

"Then if the animal—I won't mention any names—for I don't wish to be personal—but I say, if the animal worse than rats goes home and dies in about half an hour, who will know where he got his physic?"

"Or, even if it is known," said Marion entering into the grim humor of the idea, "can't we just say, 'It is just possible Nero?'"

"You don't mean Nero; for we are not going to call any names," he interrupted her. "We can say, 'It's just possible he got hold of some of our rat-medicine.'"

"He being an unknown quantity," she rejoined, "like the x in algebra."

"Exactly. Now, if we make no mistake in working the equation—he carefully wrapped up the "rat-medicine" in the slice—"maybe we shall find out the unknown quantity before many hours. Give us a needle and thread."

Do not infer from these rather jocose remarks that Hubert and Marion Warner were at that moment in a cool and amiable state of mind. The is a levity which comes from nervous agitation; like Hamlet's strange jesting over the subterranean ghost of his father.

CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.

To Cure Pain. The means which may be readily and successfully employed to relieve pain is important and should be known by all. We give you the name of the best remedy in the world for pain, and the information that a 10 cent sample bottle may be purchased at Wilson's drug store.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Times says O'Donnell, the avenger, is 45 years old and a native of Monaghan, county Donegal, Ireland. He has been to America several times, and served in the American war. He lived in Philadelphia at one time and kept a public house. He invested in silver mines and Fenian bonds, lost all his money, returned to Ireland last May. He frequented the company of Irish-Americans in London, carried revolvers, and was considered a strong Nationalist, but opposed the Invincibles. When Carey turned informer O'Donnell declared he would "burn him by inches." He went to the Cape to work because he considered America "played out." He had never seen Carey before taking passage, and had no idea that the informer was on board. His defence will probably be that Carey tried to shoot him.

A Run on a Drug Store. Never was such a rush made for any drug store as is now at J. Wilson's for a Trial Bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. All persons affected with Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Severe Coughs or any affection of the Throat or Lungs, can get a Trial Bottle of this great remedy free, by calling at above Drug Store. Regular size $1.

A Torturer Gone. Mr. D. C. Dunn, Silver Creek, Ont., writes: "I sent for a bottle of Dr. Dow's Sturgeon Oil Liniment and had it applied for lumbago, with which I had been troubled for some months. A few applications cured me and I have not felt the slightest return of the disease which tortured me so long." Dr. Dow's Sturgeon Oil Liniment has power to banish lumbago and all kindred complaints out of the system. It is very powerful, being too strong for internal use.

Cured Free. Any reader troubled with Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Headache, Liver Complaint etc., should call at Geo. Rhynas' drug store and secure a free trial bottle of McGregor's Speedy Cure at once, which will convince you of the merits of the medicine. It cures permanently where all other medicines have failed. As a blood purifier it has no equal. Remember, it costs nothing to try it. Regular size, fifty cents and one dollar.

A World of Good. One of the most popular medicines now before the American public, is Hop Bitters. You see it everywhere. People take it with good effect. It builds them up. It is not as pleasant to the taste as some other Bitters, as it is not a whiskey drink. It is more like the old fashioned bone-set tea, that has done a world of good. If you don't feel just right, try Hop Bitters.—[Nunda News.]

A swarm of bees has located in a Kingston confectionary store and cannot be driven out. The bees chase the customers out of the shop. The proprietor and his entire family have been stung.

CALISAYA, THE BEST VARIETY OF Cinchona or Peruvian Bark, first came into general use on account of a remarkable case reported by it on the Countess of Chinchon, at Lima, who, after her recovery, distributed a large quantity of it to the Jesuits, in whose hands it acquired a great reputation, that charitable practice, Cardinal de Lugo having purchased it at an expense of five hundred dollars for the relief of the sick, and the medicinal properties of it are well known. It is combined with aromatics in a delicious cordial in Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elix. of Phosphates and Calisaya, a remedy of extraordinary efficacy in all acute and chronic fevers, and in all cases of nervous debility, and is superior to any other medicine for the relief of prostrating diseases.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.
The Rev. F. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:
"I was afflicted with a most tormenting itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a general run-down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorder. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good."
Yours respectfully, F. P. WILDS.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

You know the French traveller, Macrois, who explored the source of the River Amazon, found a tribe of Indians so infernally fat that having eaten up all the four-footed animals in their reach, including parrots and monkeys, snakes and creeping things, were reduced to living solely on bugs and insects. These Ottomacs are fully as bad. They live upon mud-halls when the river is high and fishing ceases. It is a sort of unctuous clay of a peculiar kind, which they find upon banks of streams. It is soft to the touch, like putty. In its natural state it is of a yellowish gray color, but when hardened before the fire it assumes a tinge of red, owing to the oxide of iron that it contains."

The Typical Chinese Soldier.

The Chinese troops are by no means unprepared for the difficulties of a long campaign in Tonquin. The Chinaman, who has spread all over the countries adjacent to his own during the past few years, works joyfully from the first thing in the morning to the last thing at night, never stopping except for an hour or so to eat, and as careless of the hot sun as though it did not exist. He will carry teak, saw wood, chop bamboo, all the heaviest work imaginable, and this in the presence of such a temperature as to the natives of the countries themselves is almost unbearable. This, no doubt, is the reason that the Chinese coolie is fast edging out all the other inhabitants of the lands that border upon the Gulf of Tonquin. In order, however, to labor in this fashion he does not clothe himself very elaborately. A single rag round his waist completes his toilet, unless occasionally he may wear a huge sun hat, which gives him the appearance at a distance, of a walking mushroom. But for all practical purposes he may be said that the linen strip is his whole and sole clothing. His brother of the army is not so very different accoutred. In the north of China, during the cold weather, he wears certainly a great deal of clothing, and his comfortable jacket and very serviceable boots have been made the basis for many a foolish caricature. But in tropical countries, and in the great heat, the Chinese soldier wears a light and airy uniform, which consists solely of a cap, a thin linen jacket, and a gauzy pair of pants. He knows that with more clothing he even, capable as he is of braving the sun, would be at a serious disadvantage; and having this knowledge, he goes to war clad suitably for the climate he has to encounter. The Frenchman who proposes to fight him, on the other hand, is attired very much in the same way as at home. A good, thick blue uniform, with solid red trousers, and, of course, a strong, thick shirt, with hard leather boots, go to make up his costume. A Chinaman would faint in such a dress. Is it at all surprising if the unaccustomed Frenchmen feel the heat? If any proof of the difficulties which the French are about to meet were, however, wanting, one has only to cast his eyes across to the northern end of Sumatra, where in a much cooler because hillier country than that in which the French are about to operate, the Dutch have year after year found themselves absolutely unable to make any headway against the Achinese. Shut up in a really very small tract of land bounded by the sea, unable to obtain succor from any source, the Achinese people have managed without much difficulty to hold back all the forces which the experienced Dutchmen have been able to bring against them. Thousands of Dutch bones whiten on the soil of Achi, thousands of Dutchmen have been buried from the effects of fever and exposure to the sun, but yet the Achinese are as free as ever. The French would have probably done well had they studied this problem before beginning war in Tonquin.—[Ex.

A French Ambassador. On a certain occasion an ambassador, whom the Emperor Charlemagne had sent to an eastern monarch, while sitting at the table of the latter, quite thoughtlessly moved a dish that was near him. It happened that the king had issued a law that if a guest touched a dish before he himself was served, he should be put to death. Therefore, most naturally, every eye was turned towards the envoy, and some of the courtiers proclaimed his offence and loudly demanded his immediate punishment. The king was in a dilemma. On the one hand, he dreaded to excite the displeasure of so great a ruler as Charlemagne by putting his messenger to death; on the other he was unwilling that subjects should find him lax in the duty which he had imposed on himself. Of the two things, the latter prevailed to him the worst; so he quitted the ambassador with the law of the land and told him he must die. "I am ignorant," said the man, "of the law, but I am sure I have not violated it. Your every decree must be carried out to the letter, and I am the last one who would wish you to relax from your rigor in my behalf. I only implore your highness to grant me a single favor before I die." "It is not my desire, but the law, that renders the death necessary," replied the monarch, "and I promise to grant whatsoever thou asketh. My word is that."

"I only ask," replied the Frank, looking around with a grim smile, "that the eyes of all who saw me touch the dish be pleased" my hand." Hearing this, the courtiers gazed at one another with fear and trembling, and even the king was dismayed; but the promise had been given, and the singular request must be complied with. So he said: "It shall be done." On this, however, not one was to be found among the courtiers, nor the servants, who was willing to acknowledge that he had witnessed the act; and the king confessed that he had not seen it. "If no one saw me commit the deed, there is no evidence to prove me guilty," observed the ambassador, "and certainly there can be no reason why I should suffer death." "That sayest wisely," returned the monarch, who was so delighted at the ambassador's cunning, that he not only pardoned him, but bestowed upon him many presents of great value.

A Merchant's Story.

A member of a large mercantile firm recently gave a portion of his early experience in this wise.

I was seventeen years old when I left the country store I had tended for three years, and came to Boston in search of a place. Anxious, of course, to appear to the best advantage, I spent an unusual amount of time and solicitude upon my toilet, and when it was completed, I surveyed my reflection in the glass with no little satisfaction, glancing lastly and most approvingly upon a seal ring which embellished my little finger, and my cane, a very fine affair, which I purchased with direct reference to this occasion. My first day's experience was not encouraging; I traversed street after street—up on one side and down the other—without success. I fancied, towards the last, the clerks knew my business the moment I entered the door, and they winked ill-naturedly at my discomfiture as I passed out. But nature endowed me with a good degree of persistency, and the next day I started again. Towards noon I entered a store where an elderly gentleman stood talking with a lady by the door. I waited till the visitor had left, and then stated my errand. "No, sir," was the answer, given in a peculiarly crisp and decided manner. Possibly I looked the discouragement I began to feel; for he added, in a kinder tone, "Are you good at taking a hint?" "I don't know," answered I, while my face flushed painfully. "What I wished to say is this," said he, smiling at my embarrassment; "if I were in want of a clerk, I would not engage a young man who came seeking employment with a flashy ring on his finger and swinging a fancy cane." For a moment, mortified vanity struggled against common sense, but sense got the victory, and I replied with rather a shaky voice, I am afraid—"I am very much obliged to you," and then beat a hasty retreat. As soon as I got out of sight I slipped the ring into my pocket, and walking rapidly to the Worcester depot, I left the cane in charge of the baggage-master "until called for." It is there now, for aught I know. At any rate, I never caught it. That afternoon I obtained a situation with the firm of which I am now a partner. How much my unfortunate fiery had injured my prospects the previous day I shall never know, but I never think of the old gentleman and his plain dealing without feeling, as I told him at the time, very much obliged to him.

TERRIFIC EXPLOSION.

Of War Rockets at Woolwich Arsenal.

The Deadly Missiles Scattered Broadly for Five Miles.—The Number of Dead and Dying said to Reach 100.

London, Sept. 23.—The rocket factories at the arsenal, at Woolwich, exploded to-day. Many buildings were destroyed and the loss of life is serious. The explosion was caused by a fire in the main building, which, including the laboratory building, was destroyed within half an hour. It contained an immense number of war rockets filled with destructive missiles. The latter flew in all directions, many falling upon the other side of the Thames. The explosion caused fearful destruction in property throughout the town and the surrounding district. The fire was extinguished at noon, when the rockets ceased exploding. Old soldiers declare the explosion of rockets was as frightful as an actual siege. Two bodies of victims of the explosion have been found. Some of the rockets were projected five miles. One went through the wall of the arsenal and another struck the artillery barracks.

London, Sept. 23.—The following later details of the explosion at the Woolwich arsenal are given: Rockets fell in Erid, Eildam, Charlton and Eford. One plunged into a school for infants at Plumsted, another entered a draper's shop in Woolwich, another wrecked a grocery. There was the wildest excitement at Woolwich. The principal damage was confined to the rocket factory, which will be $10,000.

London, Sept. 24.—The latest reports from the scene of the terrible explosion at the Royal Arsenal, at Woolwich, show that calamity to have been more horrible than seemed possible from the meagre details which were received early this morning. The number of dead and dying is now placed at 100, and may possibly exceed even that. Explosions still continue at frequent intervals, so that it will be some time before the extent of the disaster can be fully investigated.

The origin of the explosion was a bunch of rockets, in the rocket department. From here the fire spread to the buildings, which were packed to the roof with ammunition of the most deadly kinds. The explosion which followed when the fire reached this part of the building could have been heard for miles, and resembled the sound of the terrific discharge of artillery. A number of the workmen were instantly killed and their bodies blown to atoms. Others were trampled to a shapeless mass by their fellow workmen, who were hurled from the scene of the explosion. It is feared that a large number—how many cannot even be guessed—are under the debris. Every vehicle in the neighborhood has been turned into an ambulance, and all are filled with the dead and dying. The most intense excitement prevails throughout the entire community.

Woolwich is a town of about 44,000 population, nine miles from London, on the Thames. The arsenal is the largest in Great Britain, and contains workshops for making cannon, shells, bullets, etc. The town has extensive dockyards, a military academy and large barracks.

The marriage bells have rung and two youthful lovers have joined their fates and fortunes, for wed or for woe. On the 11th inst. George White, of Belfast, joined the ranks of the bachelors by taking to himself a wife from among our fair daughters, to wit, Miss Lizzie Courtney, eldest daughter of Mr. James Courtney of this place. The marriage ceremony being performed, the happy couple went on their bridal tour to Mount Forest, and upon their return their nuptials were celebrated in grand style at her father's residence. After a sumptuous repast of the choicest delicacies was spread and partaken off, the youthful guests were soon lost in the dizzy mazes of the dance. And still the bells are ringing.

Mr. John Young, theological student, will preach in the Presbyterian church on Sabbath morning next, in the absence of Mr. Pritchard.

The open meeting held by the members of Maitland Temple, I. O. G. T., in the Methodist church, on Friday last, was a decided success. The attendance was large, and the programme interesting. The address delivered by Rev. Mr. Smith, Chaplain of the lodge, was practical, full of interest, and likely to promote the cause of temperance in the village. The choir of the Methodist church furnished music at intervals during the evening. Readings were given by Bro. J. Young and Miller, and a solo by Bro. J. Smith.

Leoburn.

A big owl was shot here last week. Harvesting is not quite finished yet, as all the oats are not in.

W. Stirling, we are pleased to hear, is recovering from a severe attack of illness.

Miss Rachel Gordon, of Ashfield, is visiting friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. John Clutton are the guests of friends in the Royal city this week.

A tramp on Monday evening visited a farm house here, and was given a square meal, which he prefaced by a fervent prayer, and after swallowing the food he began to sweat at a terrible rate, and was ordered off the premises. He then headed for Shepperton.

Webster Brows.

We select the following from Goldwin Smith's quarterly:—

THE WAR OF THE PROVINCES. The Government of Ontario, however, has acted rightly in bringing the question to a practical issue, and it might have taken the step before without incurring the charge of precipitation. Practically, we feel sure that the award would have been accepted and that the necessary measures, whatever they might be, would have been readily taken to cure any technical flaw in it and to give it effect, if party had not intervened. Quebec rules at Ottawa, and Quebec regards with jealousy any extension of Ontario. Justice Ontario must have a shield to support her government in their legal proceedings till she obtains it. If the disputed territory was an acre of bare rock it would be treason to the confederation to let the question be settled against the province by the dominating jealousy of the Blues. That no member of the confederacy shall be allowed to outstrip the growth or rise above the political control of Quebec is a pretension which put forward and put to a decisive test. Under the equivocal compact of confederation Ontario pays for the industrial stagnation and for the political hardship of her partner, and it would be hard if she were to be dwarfed by her partner's jealousy besides.

JINGOLISM IN CANADA. Sending out titled persons from England to regulate the sentiments of the people of this country has long been an absurdity and is fast becoming an impotence.

THE SALVATION ARMY. The salvation army, moreover, coming upon a sceptical age, seems by the grossness and familiarity of its language on religious subjects to have furnished incentives to profanity. Still two notable facts remain. The first is, that in spite of agnostic science, secularism, and all other influences adverse to religion, the pulse of religious life in great masses of the people still beats strong. The second is, that while the ashes of other heroes and benefactors of humanity have long been cold, men in great numbers can still be found to give up their pursuits, their gains and their enjoyments, to lead laborious lives, to brave shame and ridicule for the sake of a peasant of Galilee who died more than eighteen hundred years ago.

TELEGRAPHIC MONOPOLY. A monopoly is an exclusive privilege of trade such as does not exist upon this continent except in the case of the post office, which is in the hands of government. That the telegraph, a swifter post, ought like the post to be in the hands of government is probably true; it would be true at least if government could be trusted to abstain from jobbery, but this is no reason why those who have so far served the public should be treated with injustice. The nearest approach that we have to monopoly is unionism, which indeed is in no small danger of doing by intimidation what was done by iniquitous laws in barbarous times.

It was rather strange. They reverse the usual order of things at Bothwell. There the representative of J. J. Higgins—is not banquipped by the constable, but the constituency—JIM STRENGTH—is banquipped by the representative.—[Globe.

It is said that smallpox and typhoid fever have broken out among the navvies on section twenty of the C. P. Railway, Georgian Bay.

A large number of cotton operatives will be temporarily thrown out of work next week at Montreal in order to stop their production.

COUNTY NEWS.

Clipped from our Local Exchanges.

John Fisher, of McKillop, last week shot a bear that weighed 418 lbs. when dressed. Two young cubs escaped. Wingham had a military concert on Tuesday. The captain with his whisks and all the other fellows were there. Gorrie sneak thieves have a liking for toothsome things. Their latest "lift" was $20 worth of preserves from the cellar of Mrs. Dunlop.

Potatoes are badly injured by "rot" in Howick, and what was thought to be a large crop, will be considerably under the average.

Neil McNair, of the township of Grey, has just passed away at the ripe age of 80 years. He was a resident of the township for 30 years.

The Brussels Post says Jas. Smart, a poor but industrious man of that village, is one of two heirs to whom has been left $1,000 and 320 acres of land.

Mr. Clark, formerly in the office of Mr. B. V. Elliott, Exeter, has passed his examination for solicitor, and has opened an office in Guelph.

Mr. J. H. Wilcox, a former typo of Exeter Times office, has creditably passed his examination in Buffalo, and is now known as Rev. Mr. Wilcox.

The Howick township funds have been swelled by $25, collected from drunken navvies on the gravel train who got on a "bat," at Gorrie, and fell into the clutches of the law officers.

A number of the aged citizens have been dropping off around Exeter lately. Within a few weeks Mr. G. Armstrong, Mr. John Crocker and Mr. Wakeland have been taken to their last resting place. They were among the first settlers in this community.

The funeral of the late Jas Knox which took place on Sunday afternoon, was one of the largest if not the longest that has ever taken place in Brussels. There being fully 2,000 people present. The funeral was conducted by the Orangemen, of which 225 members were in procession being representatives from the following lodges:—Seaforth, Wingham, Leadbury, Walton, Blyth, Belgrave, Sunshine, Bluevale, Ethel, Listowel, and Brussels. The lodges were marshalled by B. Gerry, of Brussels.

We regret to chronicle the death of Geo. A. Powell, druggist, formerly of Wroxter, which took place at his residence on Thursday last, at 9:10 p.m. Between four and five years ago Mr. Powell came to Chatham and opened the drug store business he was engaged in until his death. He was generally very popular, and when a few months ago a long standing ailment culminated in a serious attack of lung hemorrhage and settled into chronic pneumonia, he was extended the heartfelt sympathy of all who knew him. A tour of the Northwest and a trip down the St. Lawrence failed to restore failing nature, and he returned to town just in time to die in the midst of friends. Deceased was aged 33 years and leaves a widow and four children. The funeral on Sunday afternoon was very largely attended. The Masons, of which Society he was a member, turned out in full uniform, to render the last sad mark of respect.—[Chatham Banner.

The MacRae, of Guelph, made 114 entries of live stock on Saturday at the Toronto Exhibition. This is the largest entry that has yet been made in this class.

Conductor C. M. Simpson, of the London, Huron & Bruce road, and Mr. J. Dinsley, of the Dinsley House, Wingham, have gone to the Northwest on a shooting trip.

A South Carolina farmer "went long" on a watermelon, and committed suicide. He planted and raised more than the condition of the market seemed to warrant and lost heavily. Going into the offensive patch he cleared and staked off a comfortable place for a grave, made his will and took morphine.
