CHAPTER LIII.
THE SECRETARY'S SECRET.

"If this should meet the eye of H. D. he is earnestly entreated to return to D., where he will find changes that call for his presence. "Any person or persons knowing anything of the present or late whereabouts of H. D., who left the village of D. in the year 18—, will do him an inestimable service by communicating with R. G., care of C. A., 27 White-brace Street." John Stanfield read this over thrice, carefully, then pulled the string that communicated with the coachman. "Drive me to 27 Whitebrace Street," he said, and the vehicle was hurried hitherward. Some brains are gifted with a peculiar knack of solving a problem, or arriving at a conclusion, at a glance. John Stanfield's was such. No sooner had he read the advertisement than he had decided upon a course of action in respect to it. On the way to Whitebrace Street, he had taken this new feature in the complex case and put it in its proper place. "This is Whitebrace Street, sir." "Very well," said the secretary; "drive to that shop opposite." Here he alighted, and, entering, purchased half a dozen pocket handkerchiefs, and asked if he might take a seat; he was waiting for a friend, he said; and receiving permission, sat down near the counter in such a position that he could see No. 27, opposite. "Very warm, sir," remarked the shop-keeper. "Very," said the secretary, pleasantly. "Not much air in this street." "The houses are so tall, you see, sir." "Just so; old houses, too, some of them. That's an old house opposite. Now, who lives there? Lawyers and such folk, I suppose?" "Yes, sir; lawyers' chambers over there. Messrs. Bardell & Perkins, eminent solicitors." "Oh, plenty of fashionable people stop opposite, I suppose?" "Oh, yes, sir; certainly! Messrs. Bardell & Perkins are very eminent solicitors—have most of the aristocracy for clients. Now the Duchesse of Asleyford, Sir John Roche, Sir Charles Anderson—" "Ah!" said the customer, with a yawn; "I'm afraid my friend won't keep his appointment. If a gentleman inquires, will you tell him I have started some moments? Thank you, Good-morning." And the secretary rose. "By the way; I think I should like to write him a note. Can I write it here?" "Certainly, sir," said the shopman, placing an inkstand and pen before his affable customer. The secretary, taking one of the recently purchased sheets of paper, wrote in a crabbed, feigned hand very unlike his usual neat one: "A well-wisher would earnestly advise R. G. to desist from advertising for H. D. By persisting it will awaken suspicions. R. G. should follow up the track through the well and leave the rest in the unseen hands that are even now helping in the same case." This he put in an envelope, addressed it as the advertisement directed, and in a few minutes paid a boy a penny for dropping it into the letter-box of No. 27.

CHAPTER LIV.
A MISSING CONGRATULATION.

Some that smile have in their hearts, I fear, Millions of mischief. — SHAKESPEARE.

"Count, you do not congratulate me." The speaker was Reginald Dartmouth, the addressed Count Vitzarelli. The two gentlemen were seated in the smoking-room of Captain Dartmouth's town house, the captain smoking a strong Bengal cheroot, the Italian twisting up a cigarette with thin, nervous fingers and avoiding the dark eyes of his companion. He had just been announced, and Captain Dartmouth, after his usual greeting, had put the remonstrance. "You do not congratulate me, my dear count; possibly the countess has left the delightful task of communicating my unspeakable happiness to me?" He spoke with that soft, subtle, half-sarcastic tone that always irritated the Italian, and kept his eyes still fixed upon his face as if enjoy his embarrassment. "—Lucille has spoken to me; but a few words only."

"Enough to convince you that my confidence was not a vain one," put in the captain, silkily. "Yes, count, I am a happy man! Fortune has conferred upon me her best and most glorious favor. I am, I may say, comfortably wealthy, and I have won the most beautiful woman in the world!" "You have obtained her consent?" said the count, half-interrogatively. "That is so," replied Reginald Dartmouth, with a smile. "Your niece, my dear count, has consented to be my wife."

"Unreservedly?" asked the count, with a slight flush. "What condition should the countess make," retorted the captain, "save the acquiescence of her guardian? And I have that, as you will no doubt remember, my dear count," and he nodded toward the bureau in which was locked the document the count had signed.

"Yes, you have," said the count, throwing off his gloom, as if with an effort. "And I congratulate you, my dear Dartmouth. It would ill befit me to speak in praise of Lucille, but all that so near and dear a relation could say in her favor I would say. It is sudden—very sudden. I—I did not think you would gain her heart so quickly."

"Love at first sight!" murmured the captain, with still latent sarcasm. "Ah, my dear count, such passion as mine could not but waken its like! But as I see you did not come to congratulate me, let me hear the why and wherefore of your visit. Was it to smoke a cigarette, with a little gossip or have you any news?" He spoke lightly, enjoying the troubled look upon the Italian's face. He knew all the news the count came to tell, and took a savage pleasure in assuming an easy, confident air, and thereby making the communication more difficult and unpleasant. "News, ay; ill news!" said the count.

"Not bad news! Oh, count, count, I begin to despair of our cause!" said Reginald Dartmouth, with an assumption of despondency. "Despair! Who talks of despair?" said the count, with a ghastly smile. "No, no; do not speak the word. We must win! We have right on our side," he added, frenziedly, rising and pacing the room.

"But not might, it would seem; and that's the winning quality, my dear count," retorted the other, with an undisguised sneer. "Right goes for little in these times, or in any other. Might is the thing, and I had hoped that by this time you had got it—if not, my poor money has been thrown on very barren waters."

"Don't speak of money!" exclaimed the count, passionately. "It is the want of money that has crippled us, Dartmouth. I must have some more. I came to-night for some; I must have it!"

Reginald Dartmouth's cunning eyes hid themselves behind their drooping lids and he remained silent, slowly shaking his head.

"What do you mean?" asked the count, excitedly. "You can not refuse! Remember our bond!" and he bit his cigarette in his intense excitement.

"Softly, my dear count," remonstrated Reginald Dartmouth. "You are jumping to conclusions. I have not yet refused."

"You have not yet consented!" retorted the count, fiercely. "Why do you remain silent? Why do you shake your head? I say I want the money; you have agreed to give me for—"

"For your consent to your niece's marriage—ah, my dear count?" The Italian flushed.

"Put it how you like," he said; "I only ask my bond."

"And you shall have it, never fear."

We Englishmen are shop-keepers, you know. We don't break our words, least of all, our written engagements. But you must tell me how much you want, my dear count."

"Twenty thousand pounds," replied the Italian conspirator, promptly.

"That is beyond the sum agreed—"

"How?" broke in the count—"how? Did you not agree to give me fifty thousand?"

"No," replied Reginald Dartmouth, with a quiet smile. "I did not agree for that sum, but I don't refuse to lend it. I merely hinted that it was in excess of the amount set down. Twenty thousand pounds! And by what time do you require it?"

"Tonight—to-night—this hour!" said the count, sinking into a chair opposite his tormentor and wiping the perspiration from his heated face, that formed a well-defined contrast to the pale, calm one before him.

"To-night! It is impossible," said Reginald Dartmouth, quietly puffing a column of smoke high into the air and watching it with calm attention.

The count turned white.

"Impossible, my dear Dartmouth? Do you know to what a pass we have come? We have been repulsed—beaten—thruashed! Our men are dying in heaps, dead and wounded, at the city gates. Mazzini has fled. The French are marching upon the rear. All will be lost if we do not succeed them!"

"So!" muttered the arch plotter, inaudibly. "The game is up, indeed!"

Then aloud:

"I understand the emergency, my dear count, but I say again—impossible! I have not a thousand pounds in the house—may, more, I have not that sum in bank. You must remember that my money is almost entirely wasted, and that what little I have has been broken into pretty heavily by the late campaign at the Hall. Twenty thousand pounds! My dear count, with as much reason you might demand twenty million."

RESOLUTE'S CREW

SCANDINAVIANS. SANDY HOOK, July 26. Charles Nicholson, the Shamrock's designer, insists that the present races are a little more than a trial for the challenger. He thinks that in all future American Cup races contenders should be manned entirely by crews from the public they represent. The Resolute's crew is largely Scandinavian. If the Shamrock falls to-day he thinks she should be entered against the Vanitie and Resolute in the remaining fixtures of the New York Yacht Club.

QUIET IN BELFAST.

BELFAST, July 26. The week-end having passed in comparative quiet here, a feeling prevailed to-day that the troubles caused by clashes between Unionist and Sinn Fein factions were over for the time being. Further confidence in the maintenance of continued quiet was given by the action of local organizations in Belfast and other towns in forming volunteer patrols to assist the police and by the fact that the population in general was displaying no sympathy with the disorderly element.

NEGOTIATIONS NOT ON.

LONDON, July 26. PLUNKETT ON IRELAND.

LONDON, July 26. Sir Horace Plunkett, writing to the Times says, until recently anyone putting himself in the position of peace-maker between the government and Sinn Fein would have been summarily jailed without charge or trial, and that the Irish people have lost all faith in the promises of the British Government.

WHAT IRISH WOULD ACCEPT.

At a reception given last night by Eamonn De Valera in honor of Archbishop Mannix of Australia, the Irish 'President' said he believed the Irish would be willing to make peace with Great Britain on certain terms, such as agreeing to a stipulation like that of the first article in the Platt Amendment. NOTES OF TRAVEL:
 And Reminiscences of a Pleasant Tour

I. C. MORRIS.
 CHAPTER XXXIV.
SIR OLIVER LODGE AND HIS THEORIES.

Several important personages were on the move during our tour, and their names were prominently before the public. In the Church there was Cardinal Mercier, in the State President Wilson, and in the Army General Pershing; and, as if to complete the list, there was the Prince of Wales. To all these dignitaries the people did their duty, and much could be written upon what we saw and heard. In addition to these distinguished men there was one other person, and though he did not have any official standing, he seemed to have attracted the people, and to have aroused a personal interest in his presence among them.

This person was Sir Oliver Lodge, the noted authority on present day Spiritualism. I did not hear Sir Oliver Lodge. The hall, in which he delivered his series of "lectures," was not large enough to accommodate the people, and because of this only about four thousand at a time could attend. But Sir Oliver's lectures were reported in the papers, and his photo was also inserted, so that his views and personality were well advertised, and it is upon these reports that this chapter of my notes is based. As to Sir Oliver himself, he is evidently a kindly man, as he came across the ocean to tell the people of America not to be afraid of death; that all was well, and that it was possible to hold converse with those who had departed this life; and that he himself was able to converse with his son, Raymond. Truly, this is of great interest to the children of men; and no doubt Sir Oliver was actuated by the purest and highest motives, and he meant to be a comfort to those who through the war had lost some of their loved ones.

But somehow the good man failed to establish his claim in the minds of the people, and when he had finished his lectures, he had not given them anything new; nor had he thrown any light upon the future, nor upon the whereabouts of the dead. Perhaps Sir Oliver thought he did; but if the reports were correct, and the present criticisms of equally learned men were correct, then he failed, and very signally failed. But after all, what could Sir Oliver Lodge, or any other man tell America about the unseen conditions of life, that America did not know? In every city the Christian Churches tell the people of life everlasting, and every chime of the Church bells tells of immortality, and all the people know that the Son of God, the Author of Salvation, gave to the world the promise that in "His Father's house there are many mansions," and that "He brought life and immortality to light," and that for some nineteen centuries the problem of the future has been relieved of its dread.

Colour and the Cause.
 ORIGIN OF FAMOUS EMBLEMS.
 The Bolsheviks, like all other revolutionaries, have achieved victory or defeat beneath the folds of an oriflamme of red. In doing so they are following the great tradition of Russia's former allies on the other side of the English Channel. In their great Revolution of a century and a quarter ago, which began with the execution of a king and ended with the enthronement of an emperor, they sanctified for ever an indissoluble tie which binds the Red Banner and the Revolutionaries.

The red, however, which is the Welsh national colour, has a very different origin and a much longer history. When the old Britons rallied in the misty folds of the Welsh hills against the Saxon invaders they marched beneath a flag emblazoned with a red dragon, "the dragon of the great Pendragonship." From then till now red has been their colour, the dragon their emblem. The Royal purple has an even longer history than the Welsh red; that takes us back only to the Saxons; for the connection between purple and Royalty we must go back to the Emperors of Rome.

THE 'VARSITY' BLUES.
 They decreed that this colour be reserved for the use of themselves and their consorts, and their lead was followed throughout Western Europe, whilst in Japan it is not even allowed in the colour schemes of their floral decorations. The imperial Roman sumptuary law turns up rather curiously in the original charter of the H.A.C., in which Henry VIII granted them the right to wear "any man's of Imbrodery or any Cognissance of Sylver . . . and any man's of Sylks . . . the colours of Purple and Scarlett only expected."

We have to go back only a few decades to find the absent-minded Cambridge cox who forgot to bring the colour, then a very definite pink. An Etonian, thinking it better to have some colours rather than none at all, fetched the light blue of his own school. Cambridge got home first, attributed their change of luck to change of colour, and very naturally stuck to the colour which had brought them the luck. Their rivals' dark blue was adopted partly because of its strong contrast, and partly to mark the close connection which then subsisted between Oxford and the Navy.

OTHER TABLETS NOT ASPIRIN AT ALL
 Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Genuine Aspirin

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, you are not getting Aspirin—Remember this! Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" are now made in America by an American Company. No German ingredients, whatever, all rights being purchased from the United States Government.

During the war, acid imitations were sold as Aspirin in pill boxes and various other containers. The "Bayer Cross" is your only way of knowing that you are getting genuine Aspirin, proved safe by millions for Headache, Neuralgia, Colds, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis, and for pain generally.

Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761), of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacid-ester of Salicylicacid.

The Scorer Slept.
 R. Kilner is known to cricket enthusiasts in Yorkshire as "Roy." His recent score of 206 not out against Derbyshire is his highest in first-class cricket.

Kilner is regarded as one of England's most promising batsmen. It is probable that he will figure in the forthcoming Test Matches against Australia. He tells the story of two batsmen of the stonewalling type who for an hour gave an exhibition of how cricket ought to be played. At last one of them made a hit that nearly resulted in a run. Derisive cheers came from the weary spectators.

"Keep your head, George; keep your head!" one of them yelled. "If ye get so bloomin' reckless we shall hev to wake the scorer!"

"The Man Who Won't Be Killed."
 (Morning Chronicle.)
 London, July 19.—H. G. Hawker, the airman and motorist, who has earned the title of "the man who won't be killed," had a wonderful escape at Brooklands while he was testing a 400 H.P. Sunbeam motor car. Travelling at a terrific speed, it dashed off the track, tearing a gap in the corrugated iron fencing the size of a house. The nose of the car was smashed but Mr. Hawker coolly alighted, stood beside his damaged car, and invited the photographers to "snap" him.

In the afternoon he won a race at 99½ miles an hour.

Mr. Hawker can now count more thrilling escapes than almost any other man. Here are some of his adventures:

August 1913. When he made his gallant attempt to win The Daily Mail "Round Britain" Flight prize he met with an accident in alighting of Dublin.

October 8, 1913. While flying at Brooklands a sudden gust of wind caused him to crash, and he was taken to hospital.

March 5, 1914. Fell again while flying at Albury, South Wales, escaping without injury.

June 27, 1914. Fell into the trees at Brooklands from a height of 500 feet while looping the loop. Unhurt; machine smashed.

Feb. 27, 1916. At Brooklands the cow of his engine blew off in mid-air. Again unhurt; machine damaged.

May 18, 1919. Mr. Hawker's famous rescue, with Lt. Com. Mackenzie Grieve from the Atlantic, while making the flight for the Daily Mail £10,000 prize. From the moment the machine passed over the coastline no news was heard till seven days later, when a Danish steamer reported their rescue.

An 'Abit.
 A schoolmistress had been discussing to her class on the subject of miraculous happenings. At the end of her lesson she wanted to see if the boys had clearly understood the drift of her remarks. "Now, boys," she said, "suppose that one day you were walking along the street and you saw a painter fall from a ladder, crash down into the road, alighting on the top of his head." There was an instant stir of excitement in the class. This was something like business. "Suppose," the teacher went on disappointingly, "you saw the painter get up quite calmly and walk up the ladder again, what would you call that?" Silence. Disgust written large on each boyish countenance. One voice answered, "An accident!" "No, no," the teacher frowned impatiently. "Remember what I've been saying. I'll put it more strongly. Suppose that a second time this man fell from the ladder, headlong into the street and rose uninjured and went back to his work. What would you call it then?" The boys exchanged furtive glances, but there was a dead silence. "Miracle" never occurred to any of them. "Think," the teacher employed them. "Suppose that a third time the man fell into the street, and a third time arose to his feet and ascended once more. What would you call it then?" But still the magic word eluded them. At last one boy, blushing to his ears, stammered out, "P-please, Miss, I should call it an—'n' abit."

HOW THE PLAIN GIRL WON OUT.

A very plain looking young girl, who is a neighbor of ours, has recently become engaged to one of the nicest men in the neighborhood. I know her but slightly, so I asked a mutual neighbor who has known her since a child, how she did it (it really was quite a feat, for there is reason to believe that several charming girls would not have been averse to becoming Mrs. R.)

"Is she so awfully fascinating?" I asked.

"I don't know as I would call her that," said the mutual neighbor, "but she's a lovely girl. I think if I had to use just one word to say what makes her so lovable, I'd say she was understanding. She always seems to understand the way you feel about everything."

We Crave to be Understood.

That is a high tribute, isn't it? No wonder the prettier girls, who (presumably) weren't so understanding, were left behind.

For understanding really is a wonderful quality when you stop to think of it.

Every human being loves to be understood (or to think he is.)

She Saw Me Do It.

Here's a little incident that happened to me the other day. I had been shopping with a pair of pumps having higher heels than I like. They are pretty shoes, while my common sense ones are not, and before every shopping expedition I have a mental struggle while I decide which to wear—and this time vanity had won the day. My feet were tired and aching, I had to stand while I was waiting for a bundle which I had checked. I was in an obscure corner where I did not think I could be seen, and while I waited, I surreptitiously slipped off one pump, and eased my toes.

Suddenly I was conscious of eyes upon me. I looked up and met a young girl's smiling eyes. If the smile had been superior, I would have been ashamed and irritated, but it was such a dear, human, understanding smile. It seemed to say, "I know just how you feel." And at once I felt a wave of liking for that girl go over me. I felt as if we were friends for life, even if we never should meet—which we probably never shall.

Of course understanding must be mixed with sympathy to be pleasant to the recipient. There is no one we hate more than the person who understands us through and through (or thinks he does) and dislikes us.

We Want to be Liked, Too.

You know the old definition of a friend, "Someone who knows all our faults and likes us in spite of them." Say what you will about the allure of mystery, I think the happiest marriages are often founded on that kind of an understanding. Each tenderly understands the other's faults and virtues, and loves both in spite of and because of them.

Can one cultivate this quality of understanding, might be asked. Yes, if one can cultivate the habit of thinking less of oneself and more of others and of caring more for others. For that is what makes people able to understand.

Fads and Fashions.

Dyed laces will have a great vogue. Cross-stitch embroideries are featured. Ribbon-trimmed hats are now in vogue. Round necks are generally preferred. Charming fascias are made of jade organdie. Embroidered nets are used for negligees. The long apron effect is highly approved. The tuck-in blouse is losing popularity. Black costumes are smart and conspicuous. Black lace is smart for afternoon gowns. Pleated and plain chiffon is replacing nets. Capes are still worn for afternoon and evening. Even suits will be trimmed with pleated frills. French and Chinese fllets are used for blouses. The latest fad is the tying of the sash in front.

More Than Brave.

Jenkins and his best girl were motoring a considerable distance to see one of the last-round Cup-ties, and the margin of time was very short.

With about twelve miles to go, he bade defiance to all police traps and, turning to the girl of his heart, exclaimed: "We're going at fifty miles an hour. Are you brave, dear?"

The girl, as she swallowed a quantity of man who has lost his right "Yes, dear; I'm full of grit!"

This is to certify that fourteen years ago I got the cordis of my left wrist nearly severed, and was for about nine months that I had no use of my hand, and tried other Liniments, also doctors, and was receiving no benefit. By a persuasion from a friend I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and used one bottle which completely relieved me, and have been using MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family ever since and find it the same as when I first used it, and would never be without it.

TACKS.

A man must work like blazes to earn his gas and oil; no stock of fancy phrases will take the place of toll; the worker is the winner who has an ample dinner; the dreamer is the sinner who has no hen to boil. Our sacred rights are precious, and should not be a wreck, and grievous wrongs enmesh us, and soak us in the neck; but if we quit our hewing, to stand around rag-chewing, there will be nothing doing when pay-day is on deck. We cannot squelch the tyrant by quitting work to spiel; or trim the ghastly high rent by putting up a squeal; it's best to cut out jawing, and do our daily sawing, the humble stipend drawing, however sore we feel. For no amount of ranting will get the boons we need, or windsmiths, hot and panting, with whiskers gone to seed, would long ago have gotten relief from evils rotten, and they would all be trotting in Easy Street, indeed. Oh, work, and let the others with fiery zeal attack the incubus that smothers your soul and breaks your back; cut out the long vacation, for work is the salvation of this hornsogged nation that whoops around the track.

YE DISCONTENTED KYNGE.
Ye good kyngs sette in hys castle hall and looked through ye wyndows wide. Whene ye Spirit of Dreams came into ye room and sette hym down at hys side; "Oh, why dost Thou look so sad, good Kyngs, and what dost Thou seem to see?" "I was only thinking that I should like to work with my hands," said he.

"Oh, Thou art wise as the wisest men, thou hast servants to do Thy will, Thou need not dream of ye joys of toil nor sigh for ye works of skill. For Thou hast all that ye heart may crave, ye wealth of ye world is thine." "Ah," said ye kyngs, "but I'd like to build one thynge I could say is mine."

"They look so happy who work with stone and mortar and brick and steel. Their eyes can gaze on ye thynge they do, they are living for some thynge real; Ye man who maketh ye road out there may turn to a chryde and say: "My pretty grandsonne I helped to build ye path that ye ride to-day."

"Oh, I should like to gette down with men and know what they thynke and say. I should like to sup at their tables, too, and join with them in their play. And I am sad as I sit and thynk that never shall grandchylde see One thynge that my hands have shap-ed and carved and builded complete," said he.

Maoris Are Sportsmen.

The Maoris, now showing themselves, not for the first time, the loyalst of subjects, once proved the most chivalrous of enemies. Sixty years ago, when misunderstandings led them into rebellion, the Maori chiefs heard that General Cameron's force, operating against them, while waiting for the river steamers, had run short of food. They were sportsmen of the best kind. No glory, said they, in fighting hungry men, so, under a flag of truce, they sent down the river a little fleet of boats laden with potatoes and milch goats for the British forces. It is doubtful if the whole history of war can show a similar instance of magnanimity.

A Marvel of Science.

When Emerson wrote "it is time for the world to beware when God lets loose a thinker on this planet, for no man knows what is safe or where it will end," he must have been thinking of Signor Marconi, the wireless wizard, whose marvellous discovery of sending messages through ethereal space astonished the world, and whose still more wonderful scientific feat of successfully establishing long distance radio-telephony has amazed everybody. "When God let loose Marconi on this planet," says 'My Magazine,' "he changed the world for everyone alive. Nothing since time began has so amazed mankind, has been so near the miraculous as the harnessing of the invisible forces of space. To mine men out of ten it is the most incredible achievement of our time, and we think of Marconi, the central figure of the Wireless Age, as the Columbus of the new realm into which the human race is slowly entering—the Realm Invisible." A feeling not easily described surely pervaded those who on Sunday and yesterday spoke to and heard men on a vessel six hundred miles at sea. The voice from the land passing through the aerial waves and reaching its objective, uttering the words of welcome to the men on board the great liner, men attuned to the note of the moment and listening keenly with their receivers over their ears for the clear enunciation of the voice coming from such a tremendous distance without any visible carrier. And then their reply, wafted through the air by the power of the electric waves, coming apparently from nowhere, yet heard through the ear phones as clearly as though the speaker were close by. Wireless telegraphy was a marvel. Wireless telephony is a triumph and brings the Realm Invisible nearer humanity.

To St. John's, the capital of this dominion, the outpost of the North American Continent in the Atlantic Ocean, has fallen another honor. In the march of aerial science, our city holds a high position. The first initial letter flashed across the Atlantic from England by the wireless telegraph station at Faldhu, was received at the temporary station erected on Signal Hill, thus proving and demonstrating the value of Marconi's first discovery. What happened to take from Newfoundland the establishment of a big Marconi plant on the historic hill, subsequently erected at Glouce Bay, Cape Breton, is too well known to repeat. The loss to the colony was incalculable, both from a scientific and financial standpoint. Again, through its capital, Newfoundland was chosen as the starting point from which the first transatlantic flights were made, both British and American aviators conquering the wide spaces of the air in their journey through the ether. But the most recent triumph almost even eclipses all previous performances. The human voice has travelled through space, un-directed and in a measure un-controlled, reaching a point hundreds of miles from where the speaker stood, and conversation has been carried on without effort at vast distances. Marconi has again reached out into the invisible realm and brought it perceptibly nearer. The world has had a demonstration and exhibition of the utility of wireless telephony and recognises its value. One can scarcely grasp the fact that this has really happened, but the seemingly impossible has again been accomplished and its potentialities are beyond present comprehension. Other developments and greater perfection of apparatus will doubtless make radio-telephony a formidable rival of radio-telegraphy and the electric cable, and it may be also that Signal Hill once deprived of its geographical right, will yet possess the chief station of the new form of communication and hourly send its oral messages across the expanse of the broad Atlantic.

Imperial Press Delegates

Acknowledge Welcome From EVENING TELEGRAM.

Last evening the following radio-telephone message was received from C.P.O. S.S. Victorian:

"From Victorian to Evening Telegram. The delegates to the Imperial Press Conference warmly acknowledge your welcome and reciprocate your greeting."

Lord Burnham 'Phones the Boy Scouts.

Lord Burnham sent the following 'phone message from S.S. Victorian to the Newfoundland Boy Scouts, this forenoon:

"Delegates of Imperial Press Conference thank the Boy Scouts warmly for their greeting. I especially appreciate your message because I am an original member of the Boy Scouts' Council and am a Silverwolf. I believe the London Jamboree is going to be a great success."
(Signed) LORD BURNHAM.

Talking With Victorian.

Yesterday afternoon the wireless telephone conversations with S.S. Victorian were continued. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Morris, enjoying quite a lengthy chat with Lieut-Col. Dixon. Messrs. J. W. Withers and H. J. Crowe also talked, the latter reporting to Sir Campbell Stewart, of the London Times, on Grand Falls and the paper industry. Mr. R. G. Reid heard Lord Burnham replying to a message from the Montreal Daily Star. Through the courtesy of Manager Mogridge and Assistant Collins, Mr. T. E. Naylor, Secretary of the London Society of Compositors, and who is a guest of the Conference, was put in touch last night with Mr. M. Quigley, President of the St. John's Typographical Union, No. 703. On behalf of the trades unions of England, Mr. Naylor expressed pleasure in getting in touch with fellow unionists of Newfoundland and referred to the recognition of the Union by the invitation to the Conference. He regretted the ship was not calling here but hoped to meet him in person if she touched here later. Mr. Quigley, on behalf of the local printers, intimated the great pleasure it would afford them to welcome Mr. Naylor and hoped the wish would be realized shortly. At 7.15 last evening a gramophone concert given at Signal Hill was enjoyed in the smoking room of the Victorian, and a few hours later a programme rendered on board was distinctly heard here.

The representatives of the Marconi Company, are thoroughly satisfied with the experiments and we understand have learned many things which will prove of great value in the development of wireless telephony. Some delay in the progress of the conversation was caused yesterday by the ship having to get her position from Cape Race by direction-finding wireless, another remarkable apparatus that is now installed on the majority of ocean liners. On the previous trip of the Victorian across, when Mr. Mogridge himself was a passenger, not one of the bearings taken was more than a few hundred yards out from the ship's reckoning. This invention is bound to prove a wonderful asset in navigation. The experiments will be continued, but so far it is not decided if conversations will be extended after the ship reaches Sydney to-day. The gentlemen in charge of the station at Signal Hill wish to thank the Press representatives and others for the manner in which they assisted in carrying out the demonstrations by observing closely all instructions given.

Special attention will be given by the Game and Inland Fisheries staff to reporting the daily catch.

Obituary.

WILLIAM FEASER.

We deeply regret to chronicle the death of Mr. William Feaser, blacksmith, which occurred yesterday morning, after a brief illness. Up to a couple of weeks ago, despite his advanced age, he was feeling remarkably well, and left for Upper Gullies for a brief holiday. While there he was taken ill, passing away yesterday almost unexpectedly, as an hour or two before he seemed to be making good improvement. The late Mr. Feaser was well known and highly respected by a large circle of friends in the city. He was a Free Mason of many years' standing, being a member of St. John's Lodge. To his family the Telegram extends sympathy.

To-day's Messages.

EARTHQUAKES IN SOUTH AMERICA.

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 26. This city was rocked by a strong earthquake to-day and the disturbance was felt throughout the general zone of the country from Serena to Concepcion. Advices from Argentina say an earthquake occurred at Mendoza last night, lasting nearly two minutes.

LLOYD GEORGE HOPEFUL.

LONDON, July 26. Premier Lloyd George, replying to questions concerning Russia in the House of Commons to-day, said, "I am very hopeful of peace and that is what the world anticipates." He also stated that since the Russian Government had agreed to a Polish armistice, Great Britain had withdrawn her objections to a Soviet delegation proceeding to London.

OFFICIAL DECLARATION.

LONDON, July 26. Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland, declared in the House of Commons to-night that troops and police had shown the utmost impartiality in Ireland, and that the presence of troops and warships had saved Belfast from a possible massacre of thousands, and the north of Ireland from civil war.

GREEKS EFFECT LANDING.

LONDON, July 26. Greeks have effected a landing at Medja, on the Black Sea coast of eastern Thrace, and have occupied Vize, about twenty miles inland from that port, says the Exchange Telegraph Company's Athens correspondence, quoting newspaper dispatches received there.

TROUBLE LOOMING UP.

ANGORA, Turkey, July 26. The Turkish Nationalist Congress here adopted a resolution to-day denouncing the Peace terms accepted by the Constantinople Government, and declaring the Nationalists will oppose the terms, militarily, to the bitter end. Observers arriving here from Caucasus say the Bolsheviks are training an army of ten thousand at Baku, on the Caspian Sea, for an invasion of Persia.

CAPTURED PAYROLLS.

CHICAGO, July 26. Two bandits and two express company paymasters were shot, one of the latter probably fatally, and twenty-five thousand dollars stolen, in two daring payroll robberies on the westside, within twenty minutes of each other this afternoon. All the bandits escaped.

YACHT RACE TO-DAY.

SANDY HOOK, July 26. Gentle and variable winds, with light weather, was the weather bureau prediction to-night for to-morrow's yacht race.

Repairs to Wabana.

A gang of workmen was this morning engaged removing the damaged plates from the ore steamer Wabana, which went on dock yesterday. The job of repairs will take about two weeks. The bow of the ship below the draught mark is stove in and the plates for some 15 or 18 feet on the port side are badly dented.

The Commission.

Premier Squires, in his evidence to-day before the Royal Commission, went into the details of his connection with the Woodford Affidavit, and also dealt fully with the manner of procedure adopted in the appointment of the Commission by His Excellency the Governor. He denied considerable of Woodford's evidence, particularly in reference to interviews, the last of which he described as a melodramatic performance on the part of Woodford, who came in to his office wringing his hands and saying "it is settled." He denied any promise of a job or salary to Woodford but told him that his chances of a job were as good as Downey's or Gushue's. He made it clear to Woodford that he (the Premier) was not one of the people to whom he could come to for financial assistance. He never made the assertion attributed to him of welcoming Woodford in the public service, but at the interview merely opened the door so that he would take the hint and go out. Mr. Gibbs was asked by the Premier to be present at this interview. Mr. Squires, in his evidence, stated that in the event of the petition against Woodford being withdrawn he was prepared with other petitioners and another lawyer to enter another case against Woodford in the event that he decided to run again for the district of Harbour Main. Mr. Squires also stated that he had intended at the time to immediately open the district and that one of three prospective candidates would contest it for the Government. The session adjourned till Thursday.

Personal.

Miss Angela Harrington, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. J. P. Greene, arrived in Carboneau about two weeks ago on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Harrington. Miss Harrington has resided in Boston for eight years and is one of Carboneau's daughters who has done well in the land of her adoption, holding at present a responsible position with the Hotel Security Checking Co. Previous to her departure for Boston, Miss Harrington taught school for some six years, three of which were spent at Gambo, Bonavista Bay, where her sister Agnes is now teaching. The writer together with many friends wish her many years of continued success and a very pleasant holiday.

A One-Night Stand.

(From London Answers.) Mr. Ponderby had made a fortune during the war, and acquired also a lengthy waist measurement. He was now striving to get a place in society, and with that end in view, volunteered to provide all the funds necessary for a local theatrical performance for charity. The glee of the committee was however tempered when they learned that his one stipulation was that he himself must have a part in the play. "Why, he never can remember where his 't' ought to go!" wept one lady in despair. But Ponderby stood firm, and at last the committee gave way. They arranged that he should appear in the second act, and just exclaim, with dramatic brevity, the word "Silence!" The great day arrived, and Ponderby was in a state of nerves, but all went well until the second act, when he was due to appear. With trembling lips and beads of perspiration on his forehead he strode on to the stage, held up one beefy hand, and loudly exclaimed, "Ush!"

Good Sportsmanship.

(From the Quebec Telegraph.) It was admirable sportsmanship and just like so good a sportsman as Sir Thomas Lipton, to declare that he did not wish to take a race which his yacht had fairly won, because of an accident to the competing boat, notwithstanding the fact that the conditions of the race evidently include such strength of structure and weight of gear as will stand the necessary strain of such a contest, as well as the lightness and swiftness of tackle necessary to speed and fleetness. On a former occasion the cup defender scored a race under very similar circumstances, when the challenger was disabled and had to give up the contest. This fact doubtless makes it easier for Sir Thomas to accept the decision of the judges that the first race of the present contest must stand to his credit.

Either Crazy or Dazy.

(From the Edinburgh Scotsman.) A north countryman, charged with having set fire to a large hay-rick, was defended on the ground that he was not altogether responsible for his actions. One of the witnesses testified to the belief that the prisoner was "wring in his head." "Can you mention any occasion on which the prisoner behaved in a manner to warrant your statement?" he was asked by the learned counsel. "Yes," answered witness. "Once at work he got half a crown too much for his wages, an—"

Regatta Jingles.

How familiar are all the old sights in the landscape: Bennett's Grove, Pleasantville, the Judges' Boat, the ripple on the Lake.

When I see the man with the whiskers who sold cigars on the course for thirty years, I know for a certainty that I am at the Races.

President Hisecock can do no more. Pink, shiny and glowing with enthusiasm, his example of energy is an inspiration to us all. His mind must be a master mind to succeed in getting the committee to carry on with enthusiasm on Lime Juice and Lemonade.

Although there is no "Myrtle" on the pond, I would dearly love to hear again the strains from the band of "The Birds were singing in the morning, the 'Myrtle' and the Ivy were in bloom."

Can anything equal the setting of the final dash in the first race, as the home-coming boats pass the Committee Tent. The crews are spent, but on their mettle. The music of the "Banks of Newfoundland" greet the ear and thrill the nerves of the expectant throng on the bank. All eyes and hearts follow the boats to the finish with various manifestations of excitement, till finally the exultant crew, amidst the shouts of a multitude of admirers, raise their oars aloft in a last gesture of victory, and relax at the last in the supreme satisfaction of having proved their stamina and manhood. And still there will be found men who go out of town this day to boil the kettle.

When did morning ever break, And find such charms around the Lake As that which reigns to-day."

The next and last committee meeting will be on Friday, 30th. No entries after that.

His Excellency the Governor, who returns on the 31st, will stay on the course all day.

There will be no warships here on Regatta Day, and Jack Tar's cheery form will be missed on the Race Course this time, the first for many years.

His many old friends will see the familiar face of Colonel H. B. Robinson at the Lakeside again this year.

All the old-time games will be indulged in at the Head of the Lake.

There is a safe passage way around the Head of the Lake, and bridges have been built over the streams.

By popular arrangement, Mrs. Hisecock has been requested to present the medals again this year.

There will be no refreshments served at the Committee Tent this time. The old custom has been dispensed with.

Mr. A. McNamara, the jeweller, is putting the finishing touches on the medals, and the lucky winners will have something worth treasuring.

Motor cars can drive around the Lake by going down by the Penitentiary side only. The traffic officer will allow them to come up by Hayes' corner, but will not allow them to go down.

The good ladies of the K. of C. will provide luncheon for the committee on the grounds. A large tent is being erected just east of the committee tent expressly for this purpose.

There will be as many tents as last year, if not more, and C. W. Ryan, of the committee, is the landlord pro tem and is now busy apportioning the ground to his tenants of a day.

War Mystery Recalled.

Skeletons of Men of Four English Regiments Found Over a Mile in Front of What Was Late First Line Trench.

London, July 22.—One of the mysteries of the war, the fate of part of a Battalion of an English Territorial Regiment, the 10th Norfolk, in the fighting at Suva Bay, Gallipoli, has at last been solved.

Rev. C. S. Edwards has just returned from a visit to the Peninsula on graves' registration work. He says that on going over Anafarta Plain he found the skeletons of the men of the 4th and 5th Norfolk, the 8th Suffolk and the 4th Hampshire over a mile in front of what was afterwards the first line trench. Apparently the Battalions had advanced in perfect order and to all appearances had been caught by machine gun fire.

WESLEY PICNIC.—Wesley Sunday School annual picnic will be held at McDougall's Field, Blackmarsh Road, to-morrow (Wednesday). Children will leave the church at 11 a.m. The committee would greatly appreciate any help from owners of motor cars or wagons by conveying the children to the field.

Reception for Eastern Prelate.

Sydney, July 23.—His Grace Archbishop Shukurallah Courhi, of Mount Lebanon, Syria, who arrived in the city on Thursday evening in the course of his world-wide tour to Assyrian communities, celebrated Mass at St. Patrick's church this morning and preached a most eloquent sermon to the Assyrian people. His Grace spoke of the duties of citizenship devolving upon his compatriots in the lands in which they have settled, emphasizing the duty which rests upon them to be loyal to authority and to endeavour to serve faithfully worthy causes. It was an admirable sermon, and delivered in the people's native tongue, and was followed by them with closest attention.

His Grace was accompanied to Sydney by Rev. Louis Soab, priest of St. Patrick's parish, who went to Halifax a day or so ago to meet him. At the station the Archbishop was met by a committee representing St. Patrick's people, and, after greetings had been extended, he was driven to Sacred Heart glebe house, where he will be a guest during his stay in the city. The reception committee was made up of A. K. Libbus, H. Joseph, Louis Maroun and Thomas Maroun.

On Sunday evening His Grace will be the guest of honor at a reception in the Lyceum. Other guests will include representatives of the city and other leading citizens. The reception will be tendered by the Assyrian people of the community.

From Sydney Archbishop Courhi will go to Newfoundland. After spending a few days there he will come back to Canada and travel to all the leading cities of the country to visit the several Assyrian communities.

Rev. Father Wakeem, who accompanied His Grace from New York to the maritime provinces, did not come to Sydney, as it was necessary for him to return to the United States.

Accident Repeats.

A somewhat similar accident to that met by the Resolute in the first race of this year's yacht races caused Sir Thomas Lipton to withdraw his first Shamrock in the regatta of 1899. In the second race of that series, with Columbia defending the cup and Shamrock in the challenging role, the British craft carried away her topmast, and was withdrawn. Columbia continued on and completed the race, which was a 10-mile triangular contest, and was credited with a victory. As Columbia won the first race and the third without difficulty, the Irish baronet's initial attempt to lift the cup failed.

Adrift For 10 Days.

SYDNEY, July 19.—After drifting about Cabot Strait for ten days and ten nights in a leaky launch with practically nothing to eat, Captain Sam Swayne and his crew of two, have been landed at North Sydney by the coasting steamer Stella Maris, which took them off St. Paul's Island two days ago.

Captain Swayne, Joseph Snook and Martin Buddin are Newfoundlanders. Two weeks ago they bought a ten-ton launch at Glace Bay and started to sail it to Carbonar, Newfoundland, where they plan to operate a ferry between Carbonar and Belle Island. The route they proposed was to follow the coast from Glace Bay to Cape North, then to Part aux Basques, then down the coast to St. John's. Off Ingonish the launch then commenced to leak but was patched up and voyage continued. In sight of St. Paul's Island, the engines broke down and the sails were blown to tatters.

For ten days they drifted about in the Gulf with but a few biscuits to eat, and the launch leaking steadily. On the tenth day, with the launch half full of water and about ready to sink they again sighted St. Paul's, off Cape North. By super-human efforts they managed to keep the boat afloat until it drifted into Campbell's Cove. Captain Swayne says that ten minutes more would have finished them, as the boat was nearly full of water and the men were too exhausted to swim ashore.

Governor MacLeod fed and housed the men until the Stella Maris came along. Nothing was known of the affair until the arrival of the Stella Maris, because a vessel recently fouled the Cape North-St. Paul's cable with her anchors, and cut the wire to free herself.

Shamrock Crossed Finish Line First, But Lost Race.

Sandy Hook, July 21.—American yachtsmen who followed the trim craft through the four hours, three minutes and six seconds of racing time, thought back over many years of racing without being able to compare up a picture that could compare with to-day's spectacle. It was a real yacht race from the start, and it provided a finish rivalling in closeness that of a neck-and-neck horse race. Resolute had taken the lead early in her favorite 15 mile beat to windward, and rounding the stake with about a quarter of a mile lead, slipped swiftly down the wind with spinnaker and balloon jib topsail billowing superbly.

But Shamrock IV, with her greater spread of canvas, was not to be deterred and slowly, but steadily ate up the intervening distance, until, with little more than a mile to go, her bowprit reached, then slowly began to creep past the Resolute's stern.

Thrills at the Finish.
Inch by inch, as the spectators watched breathlessly Shamrock IV moved up and up. A mile from the stake they were running neck-and-neck through the fluffy little white-flags turned up by the breeze. They appeared so close together from the sea boats that it seemed as if a man might have jumped from challenger to defender. Actually the distance was several boat lengths. Shamrock IV kept the steady crawl ahead until, at the half mile mark from the line, she was nearly a full boat length ahead.

Then Resolute caught a tiny extra puff of wind from somewhere, and raining like a thoroughbred under the leash crept up slowly—almost imperceptibly. She got her bow about even with Shamrock's towering mast when a puff of steam from the committee boat's whistle registered Shamrock's finish.

The little fleet of spectator craft, though smaller by far than that which had gone out to previous races, burst into a veritable bedlam of shrieking whistles and sirens as the contenders swept over the line and sought their spinnakers and balloons fluttering down.

But the finish did not provide all the thrills of the race. Shamrock IV, seeking for position, seemed to have taken the advantage on the start, and started on a starboard tack in the weather berth. Captain Adams, of Resolute, offered little opposition, electing to wait for the port tack, which came within a few minutes.

Here he took the windward berth and pointed Resolute high up into the stretch until Shamrock IV, filled this gap with a little triangular jib. This seemed to help her immensely and she began to close up the interval until she had passed the defender.

The crews on both boats—35 on Resolute and 40 on Shamrock IV, including skippers and observers—had an easy time of it on the home stretch with no sails to shift and they crouched aft apparently "pulling" for their sloops to win.

When they had crossed the finish, both yachts hoisted the "O" flag that indicated unwillingness to race tomorrow and it was announced the next start would be Friday. Later, it was announced, Shamrock was to be placed in drydock tomorrow, presumably for cleaning and polishing of her hull.

The regatta committee waited an hour for the breeze, and then finding that the faint air from a little south of west gave promise of increasing later in the day, set signals for a fifteen-mile beat to a point 13 miles off the Jersey coast at Asbury Park. The struggle for place at the start was not as exciting as usual, for Captain Adams seemingly allowed Shamrock to gain the weather berth and made no effort to work his boat out of the leeward position.

The two yachts crossed the line on the starboard tack with Shamrock leading by 19 seconds. Captain Burton tacked immediately to port and headed for the shore. Resolute followed leisurely, and the yachts had not sailed ten minutes when it was seen that the defender was up to her old tricks of beating out to windward, leaving Shamrock to outfoot her but drop away.

For the first hour Shamrock seemed to be making more by footing faster than she was losing by falling off to leeward, and at 2 o'clock it looked as if she might cross Resolute if she tacked off-shore. However, Shamrock held in-shore until she was almost in shoal water. When she tacked it was seen at once that she had no chance to weather Resolute.

The defender awaited until assured that she held the weather berth and then tacked almost on top of Shamrock. This practically settled the race.

Twelve Knot Breeze.
Captain Burton tried every possible sea trick to squirm out from under Resolute. He made four or five fake tacks, throwing his boat up into the wind to get Resolute to follow and then falling back again in the old tack in the hope of leaving Resolute in irons. But Captain Adams was not to be caught napping. In fact, Resolute gained a few hundred yards by these fake tacks of Shamrock.

The yachts made more than 20 tacks between the Highlands and Long Beach, all of them within two miles of the beach, still Shamrock could not gain the weather berth.

Finally Resolute refused to continue the short hitches and stood for the mark on a long six-mile beam-off-shore. Shamrock soon followed, and for more than half an hour, the yachts ploughed through the waves, for the breeze increased to nearly 12 knots and at times knocked the boats down until the water was rushing over the lee rails.

The last mile was made with slightly started sheets and on this point of sailing Shamrock proved herself a trifle faster than Resolute. In fact, the last mile was quite significant in view of the fact that the next race will be over a triangular course with two legs on broad reaches.

If Shamrock can out-reach Resolute in the two ten-mile legs on Friday by eight or ten minutes she may make up for the loss of a minute or two in the ten-mile beat to windward, which would give her the third and deciding race. The last mile, therefore, on the windward leg to-day, which was in the nature of a reach, caused considerable discussion among the experts.

Resolute rushed around the mark in a very narrow circle and had her spinnaker blossoming out one minute and thirty-five seconds later. Shamrock made a wider turn and took half a minute in putting her spinnaker.

Shamrock Cut Down Lead.
It was a straight-away slide down to the finish, with Shamrock getting the better wind astern, the breeze softening as the yachts ran along. Half way to the finish Shamrock had cut Resolute's lead in half. Three miles from the line it had been brought to 200 yards, and half a mile from the lights the two yachts were sailing side by side.

The Shamrock passed Resolute to leeward and soon slipped out ahead and dashed for the line, reaching it 19 seconds before the white boat. As this race was exactly her lead at the start, the two yachts were found to be on even terms, boat for boat, for the first time in the history of cup races.

Resolute, with her time allowance, 7 minutes and 1 second, used it to win by that margin, so the series to-night stands 2 to 1 in favor of Shamrock.

As the yachts crossed the line, the committee asked the skippers whether they wished to race tomorrow and both replied in the negative.

London Elated.
LONDON, July 21.—Shamrock's success in obtaining two legs on the America's cup comes as a cheering surprise to most people here. Sir Thomas Lipton's past failures having inclined the public to believe there was little or no chance for the cup ever to be seen in England. It is recalled that experts here after the last defeat proclaimed the virtual impossibility of any English yacht winning under the stringent regulations imposed by the dead of gift. While it is realized that the trophy by no means is yet won, yesterday's result encouraged much hope.

The morning newspapers displayed prominently the reports of the race, but the result was received too late for much comment.

The Daily Telegraph thinks the victory all the more remarkable "because the Resolute showed superior to anything ever sailed in American waters and because the weather was of the type which wrecked the fortunes of every previous challenger."

Reprimanding the Great.

When the Prince of Wales was a "loot" in the Grenadiers, he was once cautioned for being late on early morning parade, and Prince Albert was also admonished on one occasion at Sandhurst for neglecting some small duty as N.C.O. It must be a trifle disconcerting to have to reprimand someone who is actually more notable than oneself, but in the Army and Navy these points do not matter, and more than one elderly private during the war was "shouted at" by his erstwhile office-boy.

Some years ago a stern sergeant in the Artists' Rifles reprimanded a humble private for wearing his watch-chain outside his tunic. The sergeant is known to-day as Sir J. Forbes-Robertson, and the private as Sir Victor Horsley.

TANLAC PUT HIM BACK ON JOB, SAYS N. F. MAN

Geo. Dodd Had Been Unable To Work For Six Months When He Began Taking It. Troubles Gone And He Never Loses a Day Now.

"Tanlac has not only put me back on the job, but I have gained twenty-two pounds in weight and am as strong and well as I ever was," recently declared George Dodd, who lives on Hamilton Ave., St. John's, Nfld.

"Before I started on Tanlac I was in such a weak and run-down condition that I hadn't done a stroke of work for six months. I had no appetite and hardly ate enough to keep me alive. My nerves were so upset that I could hardly sleep, and often went a whole night without sleeping a wink. I fell off in weight until I was a mere skeleton and actually became so weak that I couldn't move from one room to another without help.

"Well, that was the condition I was in when I began taking Tanlac last fall. The very first few doses gave me a good appetite and by the time I was through with the first bottle I was able to walk down to Connors' drug store and buy the second one for myself. From then on I got stronger right along until now I can do fourteen hours hard work a day and honestly never felt better in my life. My nerves are as steady as can be and I sleep like a log every night. As I said before, I've gained twenty-two pounds in weight and although I've several months since I finished my last bottle of Tanlac, I'm just feeling fine all the time. I've never come across the equal of this medicine and strongly recommend it to all who suffer as I did."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors; by Reg. Sullivan, Pouch Cove; Sound Island Store, Sound Island; Dennis Flynn, Avondale; J. J. O'Brien, Cape Broyle; J. W. Smith, Baine Harbor; W. A. Burdock, Belleoram; John Morey, Fermeuse; Mrs. Jos. Quinn, Renew's.—adv

DIAMOND DUST

Nothing But the Truth—Without Fear or Favour.

Don't forget that the big double-header in aid of the Church of England Orphans begins to-night, sharp at 7.

The first clash will be between the Cubs and Wanderers, and in view of their last clash it should be really exciting. Young Donnelly who stole a march on Claude's gang will be in the box again.

The lineups will likely be:—

WANDERERS	CUBS
Donnelly	Hall
Eritt	Clouston
Clouston	DeMers
McCordle	Duggan
Grown	Manning
Sarnton	Sawyer
Dillon	Gosse
Dobbin	Phelan
Regan	O'Driscoll
Sinnott	Canning

We are requested by the Empire Chief to state that the first game to-night will commence sharp at 7 o'clock, and both managers are requested to see that their men are on hand in full uniform, as partially dressed players will not be allowed to participate.

THE PUNCH.

The clever young batter steps up to the platter and lays down a neat little runt. And up in the bleachers the tense rooting creatures start eating their peanuts and grum. They know the kid's clever. They like his endeavor. They grin when he beats out the hit. But though the kid's speedy and tallies are neatly it doesn't excite them a bit. But when the next hitter steps into the spitter and places the ball on the nose for two or three bases with one of his maces, the rooters get up on their toes. "Oh, attack! Baby, take their kind, you got to," they roar in a frenzy of glee. "Oh boy what a pippin, the pitcher is slippin'." "Oh Baby!" "Oh Lady!" "Oh Gee!" Their spirits go soaring; their voices start roaring. The stands are a riot of joy. Old ladies pedantic and gentlemen frantic howl. "Good for you Kid, 'sta boy." The fan likes the quick stuff; the smooth, clever slick stuff. The bunt and the steal make him smile. But it sets him a-howling and roaring and yowling when some baby hits it a mile. And all the world over, in Pittsburgh or Dover; in any old pasture or cause, the old knock-out swing, the big punch is the thing that always gets fandom's applause.

The second game will be between the B.L.S. and Red Lions, and while it is impossible to assure anything exciting, still in a ball game one never knows, and the Irish may come back with a rush particularly as in a 5th inning game, the start, right with the smoke of the pistol, is the whole thing.

The following will be the lineups:—

LIONS	B. L. S.
Robinson	O'Leary
Cahill	French

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

July 24th, 1920.

Dear Peesge,—Where do you get that stuff that Cooney and Donnelly were the only ones to pitch shut-out games in the League? Can't you remember when Classy Bill Carew shut out the Cubs 4 to 0 in 1917 and thereby won the pennant? And when the King of Them All, old Bat Hall stepped out in 1918 and pitched a 21 to 0 victory over the Wanderers, and the following season clipped the tail of the Red Lions by 8 to 0? Truly, fame is short lived but you can look up the above records for your data on the game.

Yours truly,
BASEBALL BUG.

(We have gone back through the records and find that "Baseball Bug" is correct. 5 shutouts have been pitched, as follows:—Hall 2, Cooney 1, Carew 1, and Donnelly 1.—Ed. D.D.)

Should the Wanderers win to-night they will be in the finals for the Bowring Cup, and should they win again to-morrow afternoon at Mount Cashel they will own the H. D. Reid trophy outright. In both cases they have to face the Cubs, and in view of the drubbing they gave them last week the Smith aggregation are by no means uncertain of the outcome.

There was a man in our town, Who was a baseball fan; And who was always in his seat Before the game began; And every time the Lions played And Kieley came to bat And failed to bust the ball, he rose And yelled and waved his hat.

PARK CONCERT.—A large gathering attended Bannerman Park last night and fully enjoyed the excellent music furnished by the C. C. C. Band.

The Nucleus of a Nfld. Yacht Club.

On Saturday a Telegram representative visited the yacht "Josephine" and was shown over the craft by the owner, Mr. Geo. R. Parsons. The "Josephine" is a boat of 100 tons, propelled by a six cylinder gasoline engine, with a speed of 15 knots. She requires a crew of six for cruising night and day, but three men can run her perfectly. The deck is a spacious one, and in hot weather is covered with an awning. On deck she carries three power-boats, one a speed-boat, capable of doing 25 knots per hour, the other two doing 10 and twelve respectively. On the bridge is situated the wheel, compass, engine-room, controls, etc., and last, but not least, a powerful arc searchlight for use in navigating through locks, or canals and for docking at night.

The dining saloon is on deck and has seating room for twelve, the whole being nicely furnished in mahogany and well lighted by electricity. Accessible by a small companionway underneath the saloon is the galley and crew quarters. The furnishings even in the latter are of mahogany. Aboard the bridge is another companionway leading to the sleeping cabins. The owners' apartment is roomy enough for four and is furnished the same way as the dining saloon. On the opposite side are the ladies and gentlemen's cabins. These are nearly the same as the owners' and also hold four. Aft of the cabins is the engine room containing the engine with its compressed air, self-starter, main switchboard and dynamo. The yacht is built throughout of oak and is copper-riveted. Everything except the engine is electrically including a switch. Capt. Andrews and Mr. Parsons brought the yacht from Philadelphia, stopping at Bridgeport and Halifax. The trip was accomplished in 11 days, despite the fact that from Halifax to this port she encountered bad weather and much fog.

Why the Delay?

At Thursday's meeting of the Civic Commission, it was ordered that lime be scattered over the DUMP at Quidi Vidé Lake, but up to last evening this had not been done. For the sake of the health of the hundreds visiting the place every evening, this should have been attended to at once. Why delay? Is the Inspector waiting till the day after the fair?

Why the Piano Requires Tuning.

"It is the king of all musical instruments," said a writer named Bart Kennedy. "Or perhaps, it would be better to say that it is the queen. It is an etherealised combination of many instruments. An instrument at times soft and tender, at times strong and resonant in tone. It is at once suitable for playing by the fireside, and for playing in the vast concert room. Though, to tell the truth I am convinced that the piano is heard at its best by the fireside. Its inner genius, to me, seems to come out more. It is essentially an instrument for the home."

Bart Kennedy was right. The piano is essentially a home instrument, and educational necessity, not a piece of furniture but yet a beautiful piece of furnishing. But a piano must have a little attention. No matter what the man who sold it to you may have said, about your piano not requiring tuning for an indefinite period, it requires regular tuning for more reasons than one. The popular idea is that the tuning of a piano is only to keep it in tune. But more than that the regular tuning of a piano is also that the sounding board, the plate and the strings may remain intact. Atmospheric changes affect wood and metal, causing expansion and contrac-

Adventures of "The Duchess."

There are many masterpieces on the walls of the Royal Academy this year, but their newness will probably not be a sufficient bait for the picture-stealer, who likes something "old and crusted," as a rule, with a pedigree and a price that runs to five figures.

There are collectors who are ready to buy a painting they want without being too inquisitive as to how the seller came into possession of it. Some collectors have even been known to become the thieves themselves, so great is their craving to own certain works of art. Though what use such possessions can be to them is difficult to imagine, since they must always remain hidden away through fear of detection.

Undoubtedly the most sensational theft in the history of Art was that of Gainsborough's famous "Duchess of Devonshire," known to everybody by innumerable reproductions.

This masterpiece, by one of England's greatest painters, was offered at Christie's sale rooms in King Street, St. James's, where the Red Cross Sale was recently held, for ten thousand guineas. That was on May 6th, 1876, just forty-four years ago.

Some days later they placed the picture on exhibition in their Bond Street galleries, and on May 28th, when the place was reopened, it was found that the famous "Duchess" had disappeared. The picture had been cut out of its frame with a knife, the edges of the canvas being left in the empty frame.

Hidden in a Cellar.

For twenty-five years the affair remained a mystery, and it was feared that the picture was gone for ever. At least, so the public thought, although there were some who knew otherwise. But whether it would ever be restored was in doubt to the very last.

The chief thief was a hyphenated German-American, named Adm. Wirth, a clever crook. His helper was a man twice his bulk, an Englishman named Jack Phillips.

Being a small man, Wirth climbed on Phillips' shoulders. The night was dark and Bond Street silent. By means of the awning, the German reached the window-ledge on the first floor, and gained an entrance to the gallery. There he carefully cut the picture from its frame, rolled it up, and departed by the way he had come.

But the masterpiece was no use to him: it was known to dealers in every city. To show it was to give the game away. Wirth got into touch with some solicitors, and held the picture to ransom.

The owners refused to compound a felony, so Wirth put the painting into a tin tube and built it into the wall of his cellar, where it lay hidden until the year 1901, when the world was surprised to hear that the lost "Duchess" was found and that a reward of £4,000 had been paid. The man through whose "good offices" the picture was restored was "Pat" Sheedy, a man of international notoriety. So, after the lapse of twenty-five years, the picture was again exhibited to the public, and proved a great "draw."

The Very Thing.

She was evidently in a hurry, and the fierce glare in her eye aroused the young bookstall clerk from his reverie.

"Look here," she said. "I want a book for my husband. It's his birthday. And I want it for a present. Show me what you have and be quick about it! Nothing too expensive, mind you, and I don't want anything too cheap, either. He's a mild-mannered man and not fond of sports, so don't show me anything in that line. For goodness' sake, don't offer me any of those trashy novels, and no matter how much you try to persuade me I won't take anything in the way of history or biography. Come, now, I'm in a dreadful hurry and I've already wasted too much time here. Of course, you don't know my husband, but from all I've said can't you suggest something appropriate?"

"Yes, ma'am," was the assistant's reply, after an instant's reflection. "Here is a little volume entitled, 'How to Manage a Talking Machine,'

See How It Pays

To beautify the teeth

All statements approved by high dental authorities

Millions of people now employ a new teeth cleaning method. Millions of white teeth show the results of it. This is to urge a ten-day test, to show what it means to you.

They fight the film

This new way combats film—that viscous film you feel. That is what clouds teeth and what wrecks them. Most tooth troubles are now traced to film.

Film clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. If not removed it hardens. Then month after month, between your dental cleanings, it may do a ceaseless damage.

It is the film-coat that discolors—not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve film, so the tooth brush leaves much of it intact. Thus very few people escape tooth troubles, despite the daily brushing.

Now dental science has evolved a film combantant. Five years of tests have amply proved its efficiency. Leading dentists now everywhere advise it. And it is embodied for your daily use in a dentifrice called Pepsodent—an ideal modern tooth paste.

Sent on request

A ten-day test of this new method is supplied to all who ask. Thus millions have seen the results of it.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to day by day combat it.

Pepsin must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. So this method long seemed barred. But science has discovered a harmless activating method, so active pepsin can be every day applied.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coat disappears.

See the results and let our book explain them. Then judge for yourself what is best for you and yours. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget.

Advertise Bolshevism To Kill It.

"You don't need to persecute your Bolshevists in America. Just hand them a round trip ticket to Moscow. They will come back, in no time, enemies instead of friends of Bolshevism."

Such is the interesting statement made by Mrs. Philip Snowden, wife of the British Labor M.P., herself a member of the Labor Party, and one of the eleven Labor delegates who last April began a personal inspection of affairs in Russia. Mrs. Snowden is personally known to a great many Canadians, and she has never enjoyed a reputation for friendliness toward the powers-that-be in British political circles, so that her statements may be taken as quite unbiased. Mrs. Snowden remained a considerable time in Moscow where she talked with Trotsky, Lenin and other Bolshevist leaders. She also spent ten days in the smaller towns on the Volga River. To say the least, Mrs. Snowden was not impressed with Soviet methods.

Mrs. Snowden is strongly of the opinion that the truth in respect to the Bolshevist Government is all that is required to kill the movement throughout the world. It is a dead failure. In place of freedom there is oppression of the worst possible character. Over three-quarters of the population are practically voiceless, having no say in Government affairs. As Mrs. Snowden expresses it "the aim of Bolshevism is the good of mankind all right, but their way of getting it is absolutely opposed to human nature, for you cannot divide up everything equally to do so is a most disagreeable practice." She returned to England with the firm conviction that there is no need of trying Bolshevist theories either in that country or on this continent, because already, by our present political system, everybody has equal opportunities. If things do not go as the people want them, they only have their own indifference and apathy to blame.—Saturday Night.

Fraternal Enemies.

The battle of Talaïra, in which the English and Spanish forces defeated the French under Marshals Victor and Jourdan, on July 27, 1809, was destined unfortunately to be fruitless, owing to the complete breakdown of the Spanish co-operation, and the campaign as the whole proved to be a failure. But tactically it was successful, and to the more thoughtful of Napoleon's generals must have seemed ominous of trouble to come. Further, it was remarkable for the first display of that feeling of good fellowship and confidence between the French and English soldiers, which marked throughout their relations in the field in coming years. It happened that a small stream flowed through part of the battlefield, separating the combatants; and during a panic produced by heat and the fatigue of the troops, both sides went to the banks of the stream, and exchanged their brandy flasks and wine-skins. For the time being hostility was dormant, and the interval, also, was employed in removing the wounded, who lay intermingled on the hardy contested field, each endeavouring to extricate and carry off fallen friend and foe without distinction. Thus they busied themselves in perfect amity until the bugles sounded and the drums beat

"to arms." It was the signal to renew the battle, and the opponents parted, many of them with a shake of the hand and an expression of cordiality. Before very long they were meeting again at the bayonet's point in stern conflict. But, indeed, a rough regard, rather than rancour, characterised those honourable enemies, so much so that the terms of mutual respect and the friendly intercourse maintained, when possible, between the French and English armies have been commented upon by every writer on the Peninsula War.

How to Pronounce "Meighen."

a kindly and thoughtful spirit Canadian Associated Press has out instructions from Ottawa as to the name of the new Minister is to be pronounced "Meighen" prefaced by the word "official" information, presumably comes one "high in authority." It is to be uttered as though it were written Me-en. "The 'h' is 'Meighen' is not aspirated," says this authority. It is aspirated, so to speak. Or to put it in another way, the "h" is silent as in "Ampeasad 'Bath. The "g" disappears, though no mention of this unfortunate letter, which many persons are inclined to ignore on most occasions, occurs in the despatch. It also is silent, as in "gru" or "grat." No doubt the Scottish elements from which the new Prime Minister springs will regard the instruction as superfluous; but it is just as well that there should be no fumbling over his name by persons of less fortunate lineage.—Saturday Night.
