RECOGNITION. The care of the teeth is now recognized as a necessity. In fact the large hospitals all over the world examine the patients' teeth and where it is possible put them in good condition before attempting a surgical operation. Experience has shown that the patient has a better chance for recovery with a clean healthy mouth than without it. This ought to convince the most skeptical that care of the teeth is requisite to health.

MABEL HOWARD, OF THE LYRIC.

CHAPTER XVII. A MINIATURE PAGANINI.

"This lady," said the boy, flushing and stammering, "wants lodgings." Then he went up to the woman and spoke rapidly, and Iris caught the words. "So kind to me! Carried my violin!"

The woman eyed Iris with all a Londoner's keen scrutiny and suspicion, but her shrewd, gray eyes softened after a moment's inspection of the sad, beautiful face, with its unmistakable expression of refinement and goodness.

"Do you want lodgings, ma'am?" "Yes," said Iris, simply. "I've got rooms to let," said the woman, but still doubtfully; "will you walk inside, ma'am?"

Iris followed her upstairs into a small parlor, the boy limping after her with an eager flush on his face. Iris noticed that though the room was a tiny box and poorly furnished, it was scrupulously clean.

"Take a seat, ma'am," said the woman. The boy remained at the door, his eyes wandering anxiously from one face to the other.

"I am a stranger in London," said Iris, in her low, soft voice; "I have only just come up from the country. Your little friend is quite right when he says that I want lodgings."

The woman nodded. "I've got a couple of rooms to let, certainly," she said; "I suppose you can give references, ma'am?"

Iris's pale face crimsoned for a moment. "I am quite a stranger," she said, "that is—I cannot give references"—then as the woman's eyes seemed to grow hard, she added with a happy thought—"but I have money, I can pay in advance."

"Well, it's not usual," said the landlady. "Now, Master Paul, you leave me to manage this business—for the lad had muttered what seemed to be an eager expostulation—the lady knows a person has to be particular nowadays."

"I understand," said Iris, sadly, and she took up the bag which she had placed on the bed, "I do not blame you, I will go now."

Paul limped in hurriedly, and laid his hand on the landlady's arm. "Oh, Mrs. Barker!" he pleaded; "don't let her go! Don't you see how tired she looks? Don't you see that she's a lady? Don't be angry with her, please, miss," he entreated, hurrying to Iris, "everybody is so hard and suspicious, they are made to be so! Don't go, miss."

The landlady colored. "I'm not hard and suspicious, Master Paul," she said, indignantly; "all

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply ready and quickly made. Saves about 25c.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant. Children like it—and it is pure and good.

Four 2½ ounces of Pinex in a 16-oz. bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make 16 ounces—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly breaks the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough, influenza, and all other coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

eyes filling. "And do you teach music, too?"

He shook his head. "No, miss. I tried to get some teaching, but people said I was too young and too little—I think it was because of the latter more than the former—and they would not engage me. I play the third violin in the orchestra at the Lyric Theatre, miss," he added, with a touch of simple pride that went to Iris's heart.

"That is very grand!" she said. "But Paul—I may call you Paul, may I not?—it is such a pretty name."

"Oh, yes! Do, please, miss!" he said, eagerly. "Well, I will," said Iris; "but you must not call me Miss"—she stopped abruptly, and her face crimsoned. Her own name had almost passed her lips—the name to which she had now no right. "You must call me Mabel," she went on, inventing a name at hazard.

"May I?" he said, his eyes glistening. "Yes; my name is Mabel Howard, but you must call me Mabel. We are such very near neighbors, you see, as you said, Paul."

"Yes," he murmured, "it seems like a dream. And to think that I should have gone back! I think I shall wake directly and find myself all alone as usual, and my meeting with you really all a dream. But now you must come and sit in this chair. It is so comfortable, see! My father made it for me because I am so little. You can lean right back and rest beautifully. There!" and he patted a cushion and arranged it carefully.

"That is very nice," said Iris; "but I cannot take your chair, Paul."

"Yes, yes," he said, eagerly, and he lowered himself on to the floor almost at her feet. "I know you are tired, and I want you to rest. You would carry my violin, but it is my turn now," and he laughed a little, merry, childlike laugh.

"Tell me more about yourself," said Iris, after a moment or two of silence. He thought, with his head on one side, and pushed the long, fair hair off his forehead.

"There is no more to tell," he said, simply. "I haven't any one in the wide world belonging to me that I know, and only one friend that I know of—Mrs. Barker—and you. May I say that, Mabel?"

"Indeed, you may, Paul," said Iris, gently; "but I think you have shown the friendship on your side. But for you I should have been wandering in those awful streets now—and she shuddered—"instead of sitting here in your pretty room and comfortable chair."

He looked up at her musingly. "Were you going to ask me why I am so lonely and friendless, Paul?" she said, softly.

The boy colored, and hung his head. "You seem to read my very thoughts," he said, contritely. "If I do, I know that they are very kind one, Paul," she said, gently, "but indeed, it was not fair of me to ask you to tell me your history when I cannot tell you mine."

"I do not want to know," he said, eagerly. "You shall know—and see how I trust you, Paul," said Iris, "Mabel is not my right name, but that I cannot tell you. You must trust me, Paul, when I say that I have done nothing wrong, though you found me alone in London and friendless!"

THE HORSE.

Sometimes when viewing a motor car, and marking how they slay my friends, I sadly say, "I'll thank my stars if this wretched drama ever ends!" "Would be a blessed thing, indeed, if men these motors would eschew, and go back to the faithful steed that hauled our fathers' tro and so." And then he'd kick the dashboard loose. For good old dappled Prince I sigh, his pedigree was long and rich; at every little thing he'd shy, and dump the buggy in the ditch. And Barb, the Arab, lies beneath a granite boulder, gray and big; she'd get the bit firm in her teeth, and run away, and smash the rig. And faithful Nemo used to walk along the highway, white and straight; and he would hump himself and balk if I'd suggest a smarter gait. And when I think of all the nags I used to drive in other days, the spavined plugs, the equine hags, the blacks, the chestnuts and the bays; I think perhaps I am at fault to wish them back upon the scene, and to my river's seat I vault, and burn three quarts of gasoline.

Penances of the Duchess of Gloucester.

Old London Bridge was the scene of many penances. In 1440, the Bridge Street—by which is meant as well the passage over the river as the main street beyond it on each side—was the scene of the public penances of Eleanor Cobham, Duchess of Gloucester, on the very grave charge of having practiced necromantic rites, in conjunction with other persons—Thomas Southwell, a priest and canon of St. Stephen's, who died in the Tower; Roger Bolynbroke, a priest and great astronomer, and Margery Jourdemaine, or Gardemayne, a witch of Eye, besides Westminster; the former being hanged and quartered at Tyburn, and

GIRLS! GROW THICK LONG, HEAVY HAIR WITH "DANDERINE"

Buy a 35-cent bottle of "Danderine." One application ends all dandruff, stops itching and falling hair, and, in a few moments, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will appear a mass of soft, lustrous, and easy to go up. But what will please you most will be after a few weeks when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yet—but really new hair, growing all over the scalp. "Danderine" is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. This delightful, stimulating tonic helps thin, lifeless, faded hair to grow long, thick, heavy and luxuriant.

When Davy Killed the Cat.

(A well known city editor having recently had a nocturnal adventure with a prowling animal of the feline species, in which he came off second best, the episode inspired the bard to the following epic, captioned as above.)

The shades of night had fallen fast, In fact the midnight hour was past; And Davy had retired at last To enjoy a well-earned rest. That he to battle soon must go, And there must meet an awful foe Whose skill was far renowned.

So, as he laid him down to wink, He mused: "Well, I'm a lucky gink, For, though the country's on the blink My limbs are safe and sound." But little did our hero know That he to battle soon must go, And there must meet an awful foe Whose skill was far renowned.

A cry went forth: "Arouse! Arouse!" And from her slumber Davy's spouse Was wakened by infernal moans That made her blood run cold. She quickly claimed her woman's right,

And called up Davy for the fight; And forth he issued in his might To meet the foe so bold.

The night was dark, and from below Pealed forth the challenge of the foe; But yet no sign of fear did show Upon our hero's cheek. Quoth he: "My love, be not alarmed, For, though I am not fully armed, I'll crush this foe; you'll not be harmed."

Bravely did Davy speak.

O! shades of Arthur's famous knights Who fought a thousand glorious fights And rescued maidens from sad plighta Behold our doughty Davy! His manly soul was filled with ire, His brow o'er cast with righteous ire, A glorious son of mighty sire, He hurried forth to sare.

In negligence he stood arrayed, A manly warrior untried; Whilst watchful and yet undismayed, The enemy stood pat. He sent his challenge forth once more And by his nineteen gods Davy swore, That he would surely spill the gore Of that poor Pussy-cat.

Davy made a rush, "Run, Pussy, run!" "Now Davy, awoot the son of a gun, Then when battle's fairly won, Retire again to rest." But Pussy was a wily cat, And as Davy bravely came to bat, His foeman slipped across the mat And mowed with heavy stat.

Poor Davy at last was fairly daft, For let that feline, full of craft, At Davy's efforts only laughed In wild sarcastic glee. He hurried here and scurried there, Whilst tumbling over hearth and chair Our Editor was heard to swear At Pussy's strategy.

At last Davy got a chance to kill, And so, depending on his skill, He made a mighty kick, to spill Poor Pussy's gentle gore. Was Pussy killed? Alas! Alack! It was not on her furry back That Davy's foot fell with mighty whack. But on the kitchen door.

The fight was ended; Pussy fled, Unconquered from the scene she sped; Whilst Davy crept sadly back to bed In dreadful agony. One mighty toe was smashed in twain, And as he lay in dreadful pain, He swore that he would ne'er again A champion strive to be.

The moral of the tale is clear: Control your anger, pride and fear, And above all, be sure prepare When you to battle go. For if our Davy had made his shoot With foot encased in sturdy boot, He might indeed have missed the trout, But would have saved his toe.

Girls for Sacrifice.

Carried Off By Chinese Buddhist Priests.

Revelations have been made concerning the celebration at Peking of the Buddhist festival of ghosts, during which six girls were carried off by priests of the Hut Lan Monastery as a sacrifice to the gods. Chinese Buddhists celebrate this festival every year in order to secure from the gods, to whom offerings are made, a promise of happiness in the next world. When the August celebration was at its height the priests, it is stated, suddenly disappeared. A few hours later a hue-and-cry was raised by parents who declared that their daughters had vanished. The police were told, and search parties were formed, which eventually tracked the missing girls to the monastery, where they were about to be offered as a sacrifice to the gods. When rescued the girls were unconscious.

LONDON, Nov. 8. Official reports were current tonight that if Thursday's Conference between Lloyd George and the Ulsterites shows the impossibility of an agreement being reached with Ulster, the Premier will make a grave announcement to the House. When Wallpaper Began.
Wallpaper, of which some century-old specimens have been discovered in the drawing-room of a house in Lee, Massachusetts, U.S.A., was unknown in England until about two hundred years ago.

It was introduced by William Kent, who, beginning life as a coach painter, became famous both as an architect and landscape gardener, and, according to Horace Walpole, was consulted "not only for furniture—as frames of pictures, glasses, tables, chairs—but for plate, for a barge, and for a cradle."

When Kent was commissioned by George I. to redecorate Kensington Palace, it was "on the walls of the King's great drawing-room that the then new art of paper-hangings, in imitation of the old velvet flock, was displayed, with an effect that soon led to the adoption of so cheap and elegant a manufacture, in preference to the original rich material from which it was copied."

10-DAY'S MESSAGES.

TO INITIATE NEGOTIATIONS.
PARIS, Nov. 9.
Great Britain, according to a semi-official Temps despatch, has proposed to France and Italy in agreement with Greece, the Allies initiate negotiations with the Turkish Nationalist Government at Angora, with a view to ending the Turko-Greek conflict.

REPUBLICANS WIN.
ALBANY, Nov. 9.
The Republican majority in the New York Assembly will be continued in power according to available figures on yesterday's voting.

$15,000,000 DEFICIT.
TOKIO, Nov. 9.
Japan faces a deficit of thirty million yen for the present fiscal year, the Cabinet was told to-day by Baron Takahashi, Minister of Finance.

L. G. MAY RESIGN.
LONDON, Nov. 9.
Forecasters of the King's speech, presenting Parliament, which is expected to be delivered to-morrow, expect to effect that it deals almost exclusively with the Irish situation. Mr. Lloyd George presided last night over Cabinet Council, at which terms of the speech were said to have been discussed. Conferences between Mr. Lloyd George and members of the Cabinet had been set for to-morrow, but prorogation of Parliament on that date, together with the fact that Friday is Armistice Day, would probably force a postponement until Monday. The report continues that should the Government be unable to reconcile their views with those of Mr. Lloyd George, he will offer his resignation as Premier.

GERMANY ALL OVER.
PARIS, Nov. 9.
Insurmountable economic difficulties may compel Russia to appeal to foreign capitalists for aid, in order to avert disaster. Foreign Minister Krichinskii of the Bolshevist Government is quoted as saying, "Russia's financial situation is only by economic means to be averted, and not by diplomatic means." He concluded by declaring that the Great Britain endeavors to win the confidence of Russia, Germany is trying to take advantage of her.

HONORING "THE UNKNOWN."
WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.
Her progress up the Potomac River, marked by periodic renditions of salutes of twenty one guns, the cruiser brought to his homeland today the unknown soldier, representative of thousands of U.S. soldiers dead overseas.

Spain's Error.
POOR POLICY IN MOROCCO.
Paris, (Associated Press)—Spain's policy in Morocco are due to a donkey, according to a French former officer, Marcel Pays, who has long been resident in Morocco. "Spanish policy," he tells the EX-AMINER, "both misinterprets treaties and ignores native psychology. Spain is treating her zone of influence as a Spanish protectorate. There is only one Morocco and only one Sultan who is its political and religious head. The Sultan, in agreement with France, has recognized the predominance of Spanish interests in a certain zone and has entrusted its pacification to Spain in his name. In theory, and as far as religion is concerned, also in fact, the Sultan is sovereign in the Spanish zone as in the French but, as he cannot be present in person in both zones he is represented in the Spanish zone by a Caliph, to act for him in the Spanish authorities. All the trouble arises from the investing of the Caliph, the administrator of Fez, by the Spaniards, with all the political and religious prerogatives of the Sultan. This rupture of Moroccan unity has set up a real republic in Morocco, which has influenced the natives of the Spanish zone. To avoid even the form of dependence on the Sultan, Mouley Youssef, the Spaniards have granted the Caliph all the attributes of a Sultan, a parcel of state, a court, the right to issue letters like the Sultan, etc., and to increase their own influence. This policy entirely disconcerts the natives, and leaves them very victims to ambitious men seeking to stir up trouble, who spread reports that the Sultan has abandoned them and that the Caliph's religious authority is nothing but an imposture. "You have no right," they tell the natives, "to live under the rule of the unfaithful. The only way to save your soul is to wage the holy war." "This may be the only reason for the rebellion of the Rif," concludes M. Pays, "but it is what is at the bottom of the difficulties Spain meets in her zone."

Family's Religious Mania
A terrifying story of religious mania is reported from Hooe Soeren, a hamlet in Central Holland (says an Amsterdam telegram). A farmer, consisting of the man, his wife, the grandmother, and the child, spent a whole day praying, reading the Bible, and singing psalms by the farmer's wife. When she came to the fact that the doors and windows of the house had remained sealed during the last few days, the police of the neighboring town decided to enter by force. They found the whole family together praying for the spiritual welfare of four foster children, a boy of twelve years and a girl of nine years, who should be offered as a sacrifice to heaven and burnt alive. The police arrived just in time to prevent murder, saving the children after a violent struggle with the mad family.

Doing Rushing Business.
OCCASIONAL MISTAKES OCCUR, HOWEVER.
BERLIN (Associated Press)—The numerous matrimonial bureaus of Berlin, where a spouse may be had for the payment of 10 marks registration fee, are doing a rushing business. The advertising columns of the newspapers are being utilized, "prospects" are being bombarded with letters and circulars extolling the advantages and virtues of the several bureaus are being scattered broadcast. The marriage literature makes its principal appeal to the "home-loving instinct" of men, who are in much greater demand in the marriage market than women. The press agents, however, are not always discriminating or discreet in the selection of "eligible mates." One bureau sent a letter to a married man with a large family urging him to "marry happily; don't select your acquaintances at random from the streets; send us your photograph and 10 marks and we'll find you a good wife." The man became very indignant because of the lonely life she had been living, with no opportunity to become acquainted with marriageable men. While the young, attractive girls, who make application for husbands are comparatively few, according to the agents, scores of young men apply for wives, "virtually always with the stipulation that they must be wealthy or well-to-do. Formerly the chief women applicants were servant girls. Shop girls seldom patronize the marriage bureaus. Scores of marriages are made through the medium of the matrimonial bureaus every month, and their popularity has steadily increased since the war, which left the German women in a large and conspicuous majority.

How the Moon Was Made.
Many millions of years ago the earth was not the hard, solid mass that it is now; it was a soft, semi-liquid globe. Scientists believe that at this time the moon was flung off from the earth by what is called centrifugal force. Any spinning wheel gives an example of this force, which endeavours to throw outwards matter that is adhering to its circumference. It is centrifugal force that makes the rear wheel of a bicycle splash mud on to the clothing of the rider. The earth in those far-distant days used to spin much faster than it now does, and as it revolved it tended to fling off great masses of matter from its surface. These would collect together in the form of a gigantic "blob" at one point of its surface, and eventually the "blob" was flung into space, where, owing to its own rapid rotation, it soon became the globe which we call the moon.

U.S. Medal For Our Unknown Warrior--Memorial Ceremony in Westminster Abbey.

(News of the world, Oct. 23.)
Few events of recent years have stirred the imagination of the British public so profoundly as the Abbey ceremonial this week, when General Pershing laid on the tomb of Britain's Unknown Warrior the specially-voted Congressional Medal of Honour. In the words of King George, "It is a gesture of friendly sympathy and goodwill which we will not forget." Following the deeply impressive pageant in the Abbey, His Majesty announced his decision to confer upon America's Unknown Warrior the decoration of the Victoria Cross—an honour never before bestowed on the subject of another State. Large crowds congregated outside the Abbey to see General Pershing as he drove to Westminster in a Royal carriage with Mr. Harding, the American Ambassador, from the Embassy. It was a silent crowd, for it was moved by very deep feelings, and a great number of those who lined the route had given sons or husbands or brothers to be our own brother in death with the Unknown Warrior. At one moment there came from a distance the sound of a military band playing "The Star-Spangled Banner," and there was a curious thrill as heads were bared to the fine march all along Birdcage Walk. General Pershing alighted at the entrance to Parliament-square, and walked through lines of British troops to the Abbey—American soldiers in steel helmets on his right, and our own Guards on his left. The American troops had come straight from the Rhine, tall, hardy men, in their khaki service kit, each carrying tucked beneath his arm the painted "tin" hat on which a large letter "A" was conspicuous. They looked bronzed and weather-worn, confronting our young nearer, and through the screen the head of the procession emerged, the Cross of Westminster, borne high above the standing people, preceding the choir. Immediately behind the Dean walked General Pershing, a tall, broad figure in khaki, with the American Ambassador at his side, and after them Admiral Niblack, U.S.N., and other naval and military officers, and the British Ministers. While others went to their seats, the Ambassador and General Pershing moved round the low rails that mark the Unknown Warrior's grave to join the Dean standing at its head, and when the long hymn ceased Mr. Harvey at once began his address. Low at first, the Ambassador's voice strengthened, till his words were distinctly heard in the great space. In a dramatic passage he typified the two armies in two soldiers, different in race, but one in patriotism, fidelity, honour, and courage; the other, equally noble, equally well beloved, and equally true to his countrymen. "What more fitting," he asked, "than that this soldier of the great Republic should place this rare and precious token of appreciation and AFFECTION OF A HUNDRED MILLIONS of kinsmen upon the tomb of his comrade, the soldier of the mighty Empire? Proudly and reverently, by authority of the Congress and the President, I call upon the General of the Armies of the United States, fifth only in line as the successor of Washington, Grant, Sherman, and Sheridan, to bestow the Medal of Honour upon this typical British soldier who, though alas, in common with thousands of others, unnamed and unidentified, shall never be 'unwet, unhonoured, and unused.'" General Pershing, moving to the head of the grave, and evidently deeply impressed by the spirit of the place, spoke with soldier-like precision and directness, saying: "One cannot enter here and not feel an overpowering emotion in recalling the important events in the history of Great Britain that have shaped the progress of the nations. Distinguished men and women are here enshrined who, through the centuries, have unselfishly given their services and their lives to make that record glorious. As they pass in memory before us, there is none whose deeds are more worthy, and none whose devotion inspires our admiration more than this Unknown Warrior. He will always remain the symbol of the tremendous sacrifice by his people in the world's greatest conflict. . . . As we fondly gather about this sepulchre, the hearts of the American people join in this tribute to their English-speaking kinsman. Let us profit by the occasion, and under its inspiration pledge anew our trust in the God of our fathers that He may guide and direct our faltering footsteps into paths of permanent peace. Let us resolve together in friendship and in confidence to maintain toward all peoples a fraternal spirit that shall underlie the character of both nations. And now, in this holy sanctuary, in the name of the President and the people of the United States, I place upon his tomb the Medal of Honour conferred upon him by special Act of the American Congress, in commemoration of the sacrifices of our British comrades and his fellow-countrymen, and as a slight token of our gratitude and affection toward this people." The General stepped forward a few paces on the stone. Sunlight, overcoming the morning mist, now streamed through the Abbey windows upon the grave.

GLITTERING THE GILT LETTERS
That of one humble man's sacrifice for King and country, General Pershing stooped to one knee, and with reverent hands deposited the Congressional Medal. Then, springing up, he paced back to the grave's head, with eyes still riveted upon the hallowed spot and, standing out alone, at attention, gave a soldier's salute. No one stirred. Intense silence prevailed throughout all the scene inside the Abbey at that moment shrouded in the shadows of the Abbey, the duty fell to the Dean to accept the care of the gift. One other orator there was, and from a skilled orator, none is better endowed than Mr. Lloyd George in sensing the dignity and importance of an historic occasion, and he made himself the spokesman of the British people in the few passages in which he expressed the gratitude of the nation to America. "This Empire, to its remotest corners, will not miss the deep significance of this deed and of this day—that was his reading of the day's memorable act. 'The action of the President and of Congress has deeply stirred British hearts,'" he declared. "We know the value of this famous medal. We know how jealously its worth has been guarded. We know it represents, not merely in purpose but in fact, the highest distinction which the great Republic can confer on valour amongst its sons, and it has been consecrated by its heroism amongst a conspicuously brave people. We thank the American people for conferring this, the highest tribute of honour in their command, upon the poor remains of a humble and obscure British warrior who gave his life for a noble cause. We thank them for conferring this Medal of Honour through the hands of the distinguished soldier who played such a notable part in the final triumph. This Empire, to its remotest corners, will not miss the deep significance of this deed and of this day. We feel we are taking part in no idle pageant. The warrior who rests in this sacred tomb is but a representative of nearly one million British dead from many continents who gave their young lives freely—not only for the honour of their native lands, but for human freedom in all lands. The cause for which they fell America espoused in a critical hour and helped to carry to victory, so that the homage laid to-day on this grave will remain as an emblem of a common sacrifice for a common purpose. It will be a reminder not only to this generation, but for all generations to come, that the fundamental

are the same, and it will be interpreted as a solemn pledge given to the valiant dead that these two mighty peoples who were comrades in the Great War have resolved to remain comrades to guarantee a great peace." There was a sound of bugles in the distance, an instinctive clinking of heels to attention, and the Last Post passed from waiting to triumph among the echoes in the dim roof. And then, perhaps, the most striking thing of all—a linking of two nations in their most familiar anthems, The Guards' Band played our National Anthem, and the familiar words of the first verse were sung. But for the second verse were sung words that brought a look of pride and tenderness to the faces of the Americans who sang them, for they are words that mean very much to men singing them far from home in this country of the British race—
My country 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where my fathers died!
Land of the Pilgrims' pride!
From every mountain side
Let freedom ring.
The return journey was made through Whitehall, where a great crowd gathered at the Cenotaph to see the simple little ceremony, when General Pershing placed a wreath tied with the American colours, bearing the inscription:
Laid by General Pershing, with loving sympathy and in glorious memory of his British comrades who fell during the Great War.
V.C. FOR U.S. WARRIOR, BESTOWED FOR THE FIRST TIME ON A FOREIGNER.
In announcing to the President of the United States his decision to confer the Victoria Cross on the unknown warrior of the United States, the King made the following notable declaration:—
I wish to express to you and to the Congress and people of the United States, the warm appreciation felt throughout this country of the tribute which you are paying to-day to your unknown warrior. The gift of your medal of honour to a British comrade-in-arms, whose tomb in Westminster Abbey stands for all our best endeavour and hardest sacrifice in the war, is a gesture of friendly sympathy and goodwill which we will not forget. On Armistice Day the representatives of the British Empire in Washington will join with you in a ceremony held to honour the splendid record of your own troops. I greatly wish on that occasion to confer on your unknown warrior our highest decoration for valour, the Victoria Cross. It has never yet been bestowed upon the subject of another State, but I trust that you and the American people will accept the gift in order that the British Empire may thus most fully pay its tribute to a tomb which symbolises every deed of conspicuous valour performed by man of your race in the name of his God on land, upon the Western Front. I also send my heartfelt good wishes to the great International Conference which opens by your wise initiative upon that day. My Ministers will, I know, strive as wholeheartedly as yours to make the Conference a meeting success. May they, in common with yours, do all that practical statesmanship can achieve to perpetuate the comradeship of war in the maintenance of peace.
GEORGE, R.I.
His Majesty's decision was announced by Sir Laming Worthington Evans at a Government banquet given in honour of General Pershing. "I hope," he added, "it will be possible for General Lord Cavan, the head of the British Military Mission at the Washington Conference, on behalf of His Majesty

The Lure of the Labrador
(By DR. WILFRED T. GRENFELL, M.D., F.R.C.S.)

ARTICLE I.
Only those who know by personal experience the northern coast of Newfoundland and the Labrador coast, and know from the point of view of personal comradeship, those who make their living from its fisheries and fur trapping, can understand why anyone really loves it, or ever believe that they really do so. Nowhere is that more common than in Newfoundland—they understand a willingness to live on St. John's, or Harbour Grace or St. Lawrence, but I do not think I exaggerate when I say that the bulk of the people who live in St. John's itself cannot understand that there is any attraction to living in the North, even if I temper it and say "with occasional visits to so-called civilization." No one can think any man who is willing to spend the larger part of his life in the North, or Labrador must go there to make money, to become famous, or because he is a fool, or a hero, not an ordinary man. To attempt to convince my readers otherwise through the medium of a newspaper, I realize would be an unjustifiable expenditure of time in a critical year like this, when all one's energies are called for day by day to meet the immediate problems of poverty and want, starvation amongst the friends of the largest part of the world's life. There must be a quota in every British audience, who have that ineradicable British sense of character which makes them actually crazy to go and leave the fish pots and dwell in the uttermost parts of the Empire. There will always be some who will never understand and believe this, and they will, according to their temperament, class as "explorer" or Rudyard Kipling as a hero, a fool, or, possibly, an exaggerator, as their own measure of generosity and stature permits. But the facts are not altered, and the real Englishman doesn't the least what you call him. It was the English on the heights of All Saints, who won that decisive world war, because as the French commander-in-chief said, after his cavalry had ridden through and through their lines, they "didn't know they had been beaten." During the past thirty years many hundreds of English Canadian and Americans, who have stayed longer or shorter periods with us on these coasts, especially school teachers—a class whose school judges have discovered the lure of this coast and the characters of the kinds of people it evolves. They are carried back with them such vivid visions that the stream continually increases. It is only lack of imagination and of opportunity that keeps the numbers from coming. To say that hundreds have to be recruited yearly the privilege of a visit to their own expense does sound at first an exaggeration, it is so easy of proof from our prosaic record book that I offer it as a truth which my readers can rely on with quite as justifiable confidence as many statistics that they will listen to from the lips of men in far more prominent positions in the Colony than that of a "medical doctor" in the far North.

This article would have to translate all bounds of reason if it tried to present individual instances, to demonstrate the real lure of the North, sufficiently to satisfy my volubility pen that I had put the matter beyond dispute. To sustain any contention, references to unprejudiced people, who know the facts, are considered in this busy day to be satisfactory as a way as any. I must commend all the readers of this paper to all the hands of our visitors past or present, or to those whose occupations as captains of steamers or fishing craft on our coast have brought them in contact with our visitors, a class well able to judge for nearly all come from an entirely rich class, and have been able to buy, and have already sampled, these conventional joys of civilization that range from the moving picture show to the private aeroplane, and from Coney Island to the grand tour around this globe. They include scores from the loftiest heights of aristocracy and plutocracy from both sides of the Atlantic. To those who have ears and yet can't understand, it sounds only an exaggeration to say that as far as my memory goes every single one has through all these years developed only the Oliver Twistian passion for more, at whatever cost; thus, in a fisherman's cottage on the Straits Shore this winter is a young volunteer lady-teacher, at her own expense for a second winter, whose family are known from New York to San Francisco. Why? Because she likes it. Candidates this year came from such sources as the family of the president of one of the richest companies in the world has ever known, and from the British House of Commons from a millionaire's son to join our staff, the latter having sampled Etos and Cambridge has so far succumbed to the lure of the North that he, with others, one of the nobles of a noble house, is wintering in Labrador on our volunteer staff. One doctor of philosophy who for seventeen years has spent the summer teaching in the tiny schools as a volunteer in the villages of Newfoundland and Labrador, has now built a schoolhouse for private use, so much does she admire the character and believe in the capacities of our Northern people. Probably as famous a Fisherman as Newfoundland

Summer Weather in the West Country.

A lady of Harbor Grace now residing in Plymouth, Eng., where she is married to a Captain of a coasting vessel, writing to a friend in St. John's under date of Oct. 8th says: "The times over here are very dull, with thousands out of employment. It is a mystery how the people live. Of course there are collections every week for them, but the amount is so little for the number needing relief. Whilst the war was one one never saw a beggar; now they are everywhere. It is a blessing that we are having such glorious weather, and only for the short days it is real summer. On Saturday morning fresh strawberries and raspberries were selling. Some of the farmers were cutting their third crop of hay last week, and fruit trees such as pears, plums and damsons are all in bloom again. Such a thing has not been known for the last 150 years. Since last February there has been very little rain, and it is predicted that the beautiful weather will last."

A COMFORT BOX

Having answered a letter the other day, I started to destroy it, as is my custom. And then I stopped. I couldn't bear to because it was such a terribly nice letter. It seemed like destroying something precious, even though I had read it and stored away the tenderness and kindness of it in my heart.

Keep Them to Look at When You're Down.

I said as much to the Authorman and he answered at once, "Don't keep it."

"But," said I, "I don't keep answered letters. I can't very often because I have so many that I should soon have to move out of the house to make room for them if I did."

"Start a file," he said, "for extra specially nice letters and things of that sort. Keep it to look at times when you're down. You know how blue you get sometimes. Wouldn't it cheer you up to read over things like that?"

"And I admitted it would. Hence my Comfort Box. I started it with that letter."

Do You Have Such Moments?

"Why wouldn't that be a good thing for anyone who has these 'nobody-loves-me, my-life-is-a-failure' moments?"

Maybe there aren't many of that kind of people but I am inclined to think there are.

The average person, as I see it, has times when he feels that he is an unusually desirable and attractive person, when he feels full of power and ability, and rather fancies the use he has made of his life. And then again, he has times when he does not feel that anyone likes him and cannot see any reason why anyone should--when he feels that everything about his life represents unattained ideals and general failure.

The most useful, the most all-around woman I know, carried me one day by saying that it seemed to her that her life was a failure. One small thing after another had gone wrong with her, and that was the result.

Help Us to Climb Back to Courage.

It seems to me one might also keep in one's Comfort Box little notes on some of the kind things people have said.

If the above-mentioned woman had had a Comfort Box to look into with records in it of some of the high lights of her life, might it not have helped her in the climb back to courage and cheerfulness?

A Luxurious Laundry.

One of the most wonderful laundries in the world is to be found in San Francisco.

The main building, which is two hundred and seventy-five feet square, is divided into two immense rooms by a fireproof wall, and it has been arranged so that all the washing enters at the extreme left of the building, and is discharged, ready for use, on the right.

The garments are handled almost entirely by labour-saving devices, which have been installed at the cost of about £20,000. One hundred and twenty-five thousand pounds of soft soap are used every week. This is made in a special plant, so situated that the liquid soap is delivered to each battery of wash-wheels by special piping.

All water is secured from artesian wells on the premises, and that used for washing purposes is softened by a specially-constructed apparatus.

Every machine in the laundry is operated by electric motors, the current for which is generated in the laundry's own power-house.

If someone asked you, "What is that which has a beak like that of a parrot and cheek pouches like those of a monkey, lives in the sea, and chews the cud like a cow?" you might imagine it was some kind of catch riddle. It inhabits the warm waters of the Mediterranean, where it lives by browsing on the weeds that flourish on the sea floor.

Chloroform in the Harem

The first experience of the use of chloroform by the Sultan Mulai Abdul Aziz of Morocco might easily have led to more serious results. Dr. Verdon, his English doctor, had operated on a slave under chloroform, and the Sultan had been present.

The operation over (writes Mr. Walter B. Harris in "Morocco That Was"), the Sultan retired into the palace carrying with him a large bottle of the anaesthetic. The doctor tried to obtain possession of the bottle, but in vain, and all he could do was to warn the Sultan to be very careful with it.

He no doubt was, for apparently nobody died; but his ladies lay all over the palace as insensible as logs of wood--for he had a grand chloroforming evening all to himself!

A Sealskin Church.

The world's queerest church was discovered not long ago by a missionary in the Arctic. It stands on Blacklead Island, Cumberland Sound, and is constructed entirely of sealskins.

Wood and other building material not being available, the missionary responsible for its erection sawed the skins together and stretched them over whalebone "girders."

Another Eskimo missionary built a church of snow with seats, altar, and pulpit complete. He stated that his snow-built edifice was warmer than most churches he had visited in England.

Among cathedrals, probably the most curious is to be found in Uganda. Viewed from a distance, it looks like a giant haystack, but at close quarters it is seen to be built of grass and mud. It seats four thousand persons.

HINARD'S LINIMENT FOR GARGET IN COWS

New Cure for Blindness (?)

THE SUNLIGHT, HOT SALT, AND ICE-WATER BATHS.

Senator Thomas P. Gore, of Oklahoma, after being totally blind for forty years, is now believed to have a fighting chance to recover his vision owing to extraordinary treatment applied by Dr. Samuel Harris, of Boston. Senator Gore lost his left eye at the age of eight, when he was accidentally struck with a stick by a playmate (says a cable to the "New York Herald" Paris edition). Three years later he lost his right eye in a similar accident. Dr. Harris decided that blindness was due to improper circulation. He prescribed a simple treatment, including looking directly into the sun, so as to let the bright light filter behind the lens of the eye, and the application of massages alternating with hot salt and ice-water baths. The senator's secretary telegraphed to Dr. Harris a few days ago saying that the senator's eyes were becoming extremely sensitive to the sunlight.

Headaches Gone

Perhaps you can imagine what this means to one who had suffered terribly with headaches for ten years.

Read about it in this letter.

Mrs. Tena A. Smith, Country Harbor Cross Roads, N. S., writes:

"I feel that if anyone can recommend Dr. Chase's medicine I certainly can. I suffered for ten years from severe headaches, and although I took all kinds of headache powders they just relieved me at the time. I became very nervous and run-down, and everything seemed to trouble me. I have taken eighteen boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and it has made an entirely new person of me. I felt that I could not have lived without it. I do not have one headache now for every hundred I used to have, and my nerves are good and strong. I just weighed 105 pounds when I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and now I weigh 121. Knowing what this treatment has done for me, I cannot too highly recommend it to others."

The Diver's Perils.

By A DEEP-SEA DIVER.
A diver risks his life every time he descends below the surface of the sea, for countless dangers beset him in his under-sea work.

One of the greatest risks he runs is the fouling of the air-pipes. A French diver has just lost his life in this way though working at a depth of only 53 feet.

To prevent such fouling, the diver must be very careful to note exactly where he wanders once he touches ground, so that he can return the same way. If not, the life-line may become entangled, and it is the hardest thing in the world to free it in the partial darkness.

For this reason sunken wrecks provide biggest dangers. The diver must exercise caution when climbing about the holds or penetrating from cabin to cabin that air-pipes and life-lines are quite free.

Another great danger is the pressure of the water. At a depth of 200 feet there is a pressure of 88lb. to the sq. inch, and this increases or decreases proportionately. Should a diver feel himself getting dizzy, he must signal to be hauled up at once, otherwise he may have a bad seizure owing to the blood running to his head.

It is generally thought that the diver's chief foe is the shark. This is not so, for a shark can be frightened off by the bubbles the diver makes when going down.

A much worse enemy is the rock-cod. This creature, which attains a great size, hovers about the diver while he is working and seizes his chance to bite the man's hands at the wrists, just where the diving-dress ends. And this fish is afraid of nothing.

The octopus is another terrible foe to be reckoned with, for his tentacles will strangle a diver once they get a hold. All divers are supplied with small axes to ward off the attacks of these creatures.

Rays and devil-fish are also dangerous, but are not so bad to fight as the octopus, which adds to the danger of a combat by squirting a brown fluid about in the water and bewildering the diver.

Everything possible is done to ensure the diver's safety. His dress is of one piece, made of tanned twill and rubber, with a large opening at the neck. The helmet, which screws tightly on the shoulders, is of copper, and the air is pumped into it through a canvas-covered rubber pipe. Outlet valves are fitted for the escape of bad air. This helmet weighs about 28lb., and the two boots are an equivalent weight.

Training for the work is long and arduous and the diver must be physically strong. He starts in four fathoms and gradually works on till he can dive safely in 120ft. But a long time elapses before he can do this.

Though a risky life, it has its advantages. It is well paid, and the diver has the knowledge of knowing his own work where other men cannot, and is proud of this.—Daily Mail.

Distinguished Visitor.

On Friday, of last week, there arrived here from England Major W. Malbese Beckwith, D.S.O., on a visit of pleasure and business combined. On Saturday he was entertained to luncheon at the Golf Links by friends of his in the city, and on Monday at the City Club. During his brief stay in the capital he took advantage of several motor drives through our principal streets and nearby settlements and expressed himself as particularly pleased with the grandeur of our natural scenery and the picturesque safe and secluded situation of the capital city of England's oldest colony. By yesterday's express the Major left for the West Coast to spend a few days shooting in the neighborhood of Spruce Brook. Mr. Taylor accompanied the Major on his shooting trip and will provide guides and camping outfit, and it is safe to say that Mr. Taylor's many years' experience in the forests of the country and over its game grounds is an assurance that the Major will meet with the best success and big heads. After a week's hunting, the Major visits Ottawa for several days, then New York and thence back to England. Needless to say the Major saw active service in the late war, as well as serving all through the African wars. "Who's Who" amongst other things, has this to say of him: "Major William Malbese Beckwith, D.S.O., 1918, late Coldstream Guards; General Staff Officer 1st Grade; born August 30th, 1877; son of H. J. Beckwith, of Millchoppe Park, Salop, England; married 1904. Lady Muriel Beatrice Gordon Lennox, 3rd daughter of the 7th Duke of Richmond, etc., etc."

It is to be hoped the Major will enjoy his first hunting trip to Newfoundland and return to the old country favorably impressed with our great natural resources.

Portia for Westward.

S.S. Portia, Capt. T. Connors, sailed on the Western Coastal service at 10 a.m. to-day, taking a large freight and the following passengers: Rev. Fr. Conway, Mrs. S. Miller, Miss Ball, P. J. Leonard, M. Epstein, W. Clarke, Mrs. J. Baker and 12 in steerage.

To ¼ cupful whipped cream add ¼ cupful horseradish, ¼ cupful scraped apple, salt and paprika. Mix well and serve with roasted fowl.

Household Notes.

If small rubber mats are placed on the sick room table, the clatter of bottles and spoons will be avoided.

Gold-boned rice, chopped raisins, almonds and dates make an interesting salad. Serve with mayonnaise.

Bacon sauce, made with finely-chopped bacon, is excellent over hot string beans, sliced boiled potatoes or beets.

If using an electric iron, slip a piece of asbestos under the iron rest, and the ironing sheet will not be scorched.

A good sauce for meat is made as follows: Melt 2 tablespoons fat, add 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon flour, 1 teaspoon salt, pepper, 1 ½ cups stock, ¼ cup vinegar. Raise to a boil and add ¼ cup chopped ripe olives, and ¼ cup chopped raisins.

Scouts Celebrate Anniversary.

GOVER STREET TROOP VISIT GOVERNOR.

Their Third anniversary was last night celebrated by Gower Street Troop of Bay Scouts with a banquet and concert in the Lecture Room of Gower Street Church, after a torchlight parade through the city. In the course of which, H. E. the Governor, who is Chief Scout in Newfoundland, was visited. His Excellency congratulated the troop and wished them a successful winter season. On returning to the Hall the boys found a bountiful meal awaiting them, which had been tastefully arranged by a number of ladies from the various Methodist Churches. The four companies, A, B, C, and D, were seated at tables in the form of a hollow square, the places for the various patrols at the tables being marked by the patrol emblems. There were 113 scouts at the tables with 12 guests. After doing full justice to the beautiful repast the following programme was given: Piano solo, Mr. Gordon Christian, solo, Miss Johnson; singing, Scouts Mayo and Howard; solo, Mrs. Charles Garland; musical number, Pittman brothers; solo, Scout Kennedy; recitation, Scout Howard. The Caruso family, all musical prodigies, were present in full force. After being introduced by their manager, they entertained the audience, and even the baby, who was wheeled in a wheelbarrow, did her part in adding to the general enjoyment. During the evening the camp pennants were presented, which had been awarded at the Scout Camp to the Owl Patrol last summer for the largest number of points won in games, athletics and general scouting programme. It was also announced that a birthday present of drum and two bugles had been given to the Troop by scout-master Harris of B. Company. At the close of the programme, Mr. James Stowe, scout-master of the recently organised Congregational Troop, was introduced, and brought greetings from his Troop. Mr. Robert Ferguson, A.S.M. St. Bon's Troop also congratulated the Gower Street Troop on their celebration, and expressed his pleasure in being present. Mr. W. H. Peters, in speaking to the Scouts, recalled the fact that last year Commandant Penn, who had been one of the Instructors of the Gower Street Troop, was present, and expressed his sense of loss and the loss the troop had met with in his death during the intervening year. Letters of regret were received from a number of guests who were unable to attend.

At the close of the concert the thanks of the Scoutmasters and Scouts were tendered to Messrs. Campbell and O'Regan for gifts of meat, Mr. James Burt for apples, the ladies who had prepared the banquet and arranged the tables, and the members of the Ex "Eagle" Class of Gower Street Church and their teacher, Miss Charlotte Wornell, who acted as waiters during the evening.

Reference, however, must be made to the outport companies of which there are now five on the active list. These are at Bell Island, Bay Roberts, Hearst's Content, Bonavista and Trinity, whilst there are detachments, one at Topsail and the other at Whitbourne. Reports are expected shortly from these companies, and that from Hearst's Content has just been received. This company was started in 1910 by Rev. W. H. Bayly as C.O. assisted by Canon Smart, Chaplain, and Lieut. A. St. Anderson, M.D. Later Dr. Anderson took over the command with the rank of captain and has since been promoted to that of Major. By 1912 the company had so far advanced that a camp was held. St. Mary's Parish Hall was obtained as an armory and is still used for parades. With one exception, all the officers of this company who joined up in 1910, are still on the strength and are doing exceedingly good work. The Hearst's Content Company has a splendid war record and is now rapidly winning a name for itself in local athletics. It is mainly through the enthusiastic efforts of Major Anderson that the Hearst's Content Company has made such great progress and he has met with hearty co-operation on the part of his officers and men.

PRESENTATION TO RETIRING OFFICER.

Lieut. Colonel R. F. Goodridge presided over the meeting of the Officer's Mess which was held after parade. Others present were Major R. H. Tait, M.C., Captains F. Miles, C. E. A. Jeffrey, J. Snow, H. Outerbridge, N. Henry, G. House and Lieutenants G. Hunt, P. B. Rendell, H. C. Hayward, L. C. Hayward, M. G. Winter, J. Reeves, R. G. Ash, W. Mott, F. Reid, A. Lewis, and A. B. Perlin. Padres Clayton and Brinton were also present. Paymaster Lieutenant Lewis presented the reports of the various sub-committees in connection with Brigade Week. All were very promising. The matter of the annual supper for the lads, which is always looked forward to so much has been overshadowed by Brigade Week and it was decided that the matter should be introduced at the next meeting. As Capt. Fletcher, the Mess President has gone abroad, and Capt. Henry the Vice President, leaves shortly, it was decided that Lt.-Col. Goodridge should take the chair at all future meetings until the annual meeting, which takes place early in February.

All officers were asked to enter for the ping pong cup which was last year won by Major Raley. Before adjournment, Lt.-Col. Goodridge presented Captain Norman Henry, who has been placed on the reserve, with a handsome case of pipes as a tribute from the Mess to his excellent work and "bon camaraderie." Captain Henry goes to Labrador for the Hudson's Bay Company. He joined the Brigade nearly two years ago and is still on the strength and are doing exceedingly good work. The Hearst's Content Company has a splendid war record and is now rapidly winning a name for itself in local athletics. It is mainly through the enthusiastic efforts of Major Anderson that the Hearst's Content Company has made such great progress and he has met with hearty co-operation on the part of his officers and men.

PRESENTATION TO RETIRING OFFICER.

Lieut. Colonel R. F. Goodridge presided over the meeting of the Officer's Mess which was held after parade. Others present were Major R. H. Tait, commission owing to pressure of business, was adjutant of Avalon Battalion. On the 11th of November, St. Martin's Day, thirty years ago, the first Company of the Church Lads Brigade was inaugurated in the parish of Fulham, London, and so rapidly did it extend its activities that less than a year later, a company was formed in St. John's through the efforts of Rev. J. S. Thompson, Mr. C. Waring Hayward and Capt. Melville, who was then A.D.C. to Governor Sir Terence O'Brien. Private Harold Blackler was No. 1 on the roll of the new company and to-day there are many in the city who were among the first to join. The Brigade shifted from various quarters until finally it was able to erect the present splendid armory and to take up permanent quarters there. In the early days the officers who did most towards setting the Brigade firmly on its feet were Major Melville, Capt. (now Lt.-Col.) Franklin, Capt. Waring Hayward and Capt. Joseph Shea. Messrs. F. and H. Donnelly and D. Kearney also did excellent work. When Capt. Franklin assumed command after Major Melville had left our shores, he had associated with him Lieuts. W. R. Warren (the present Minister of Justice) and G. R. Williams as Adjutant and Paymaster respectively. The band which, at one time, was composed of tin whistles and drums, later becoming a fife and drum band and finally a brass band, was under Capt. Snow.

In 1901, Sir Joseph Outerbridge was appointed the first Lieut. Colonel of the Newfoundland Regiment of the C. L.B., which then consisted of four companies. In December 1903, Lieut. Col. Outerbridge resigned and was succeeded by Mr. R. G. Rendell, who for fifteen years directed the Brigade activities. Under his guidance the Brigade made rapid progress and at the time of his resignation in 1918, he had the satisfaction of knowing that the armoury was entirely free from debt. Major R. F. Goodridge, the present Lieut. Colonel, succeeded Lieut. Col. Rendell in the command of the Battalion and the Brigade is steadily progressing under his direction. An outline of the history of the various departments of the Brigade will be published later.

THE OUTPORT COMPANIES.
