The Mystery of Rutledge Hall

"The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER XVI.

"I do not understand," she faltered, in a bewildered manner—"I do not understand. That note that I found on my table—"

"Was put there by me," he said. "I knew the Gray House well enough to watch my opportunity and leave it there unseen. The servants who had not gone to the church were busy with the preparations for the wedding-feast."

"What did that mean?" she asked suddenly, looking at him eagerly and inquiringly. "Did you know then that he did not love me? Was it for that that you lifted me?"

"That he did not love you?" he echoed, after a momentary hesitation. "Is a husband's love necessary when he gives wealth and position and all that makes life easy and pleasant? Heaven help you, Sidney, if it do not make your happiness!"

"You did not ask me to meet you here to talk of my happiness," Sidney said, struggling for calmness. "Tell me of yourself, Frank. Tell me how I can help you—how I can alleviate your trouble or make your life easier."

"My life must always be what it is until my innocence is proved," he said, mournfully—"a life of toil and privation and misery. Sidney, if I dared to ask you—did I not know that, if you accepted my request, it could not fail to bring misery upon yourself later, and perhaps make you curse me—I would ask you to use some of your wealth to remove the stain from my name, to save me from the misery I endure now."

"And I would do it—oh, Frank, you know it would make me happy to do it."

"No, no," he said, after a moment's hesitation; "do not—you would hate me."

"Why?" she asked, gently. "Do you think I am so afraid of my husband's displeasure? He will be angry perhaps if he finds out that I am doing so; but it will not be the first time he has been angry with me on your account."

"Why?" He looked at her keenly as she spoke. "Does he—does Stephen—"

"Oh, Frank, don't!" she cried pitifully. "It cannot be true."

"It is true enough," he replied, in the same reckless manner. "Beggars mustn't be choosers; and I am a beggar, Sidney. All I have eaten to-day is a bit of bread a woman at one of the cottages in the village gave me. Do you know that I almost went round to your kitchen to beg to-night?"

"Oh, Frank, oh, Frank," she sobbed, "do not—do not; I cannot bear it!" It was a piteous and terrible thing to think of the man who had been brought up in luxury and refinement reduced to such terrible straits, while his own father and sister were wealthy and considered and respected. Almost blinded with tears, Sidney felt nervously in her pocket; but it was empty—her purse had been left indoors. Frank, seeing her movement, made a hasty gesture of refusal.

"I could not take his money, Sidney," he said hurriedly. "I would starve outright rather than owe anything to your husband."

"You need not—you need not," she declared tremulously. "I have money of my own that I will bring."

"Money given you by him!" "No, no! Papa gave me some when I was married," she said. "Let me help you, Frank. I will bring you some money to-morrow."

He looked down at her with a faint, pale smile. "How?" he asked, sadly. "Do you think I dare come here in daylight, you poor child?"

"I will come to you wherever you will," she said earnestly. "Frank, let me help you—I can never know happiness if I do not."

"But you are never alone," he remarked hesitatingly. "I have loafed about here for four days, hoping to get an opportunity of seeing you, and it was only to-night that I got the chance. I have seen you scores of times driving and walking, but you have never been alone; and even to-night I should not have dared to speak to you if I had not seen your face with a look on it which should never have been there if I had been your husband."

"Ah, you poor little child," he added, pityingly, "you have found out soon enough that it is not wealth and position which make happiness, that where no love is—"

"Frank," she cried, passionately, throwing back her head, and looking at him with sudden indignation, "if my husband did not love me, why did he marry me? I had no wealth to bring him—no position; but little beauty—"

"But little beauty," he repeated incredulously. "Do you ever see your own face, Sidney? You are as lovely now as the wretched wife of that murdered man was then."

"And I was lonely and wretched," she went on unheedingly. "Perhaps he married me because he was sorry. Heaven knows! At any rate I am his wife now, and I bear his name, and I must be true and loyal. And yet—oh, Frank!"—she was too miserable to heed what she said, as she turned to him with outstretched pleading hands—"if he did not love me, why did he marry me?"

"He married you because he knew," he began passionately, then stopped abruptly and turned away.

"Because he knew what?" she asked, with feverish earnestness, putting her little hands upon his arm.

"Ah, do not ask me! I cannot tell you—Sidney, I do not know. He married because he loved you, I suppose. You are beautiful enough to win any man's love."

"That was not why," she declared. "Ah, if he loved me, could he be so cold to me? Frank, he saw your note."

"My note to you?" Frank said suddenly, turning to her again in eager excitement. "What did he say? Tell me, Sidney. Have you forgotten?"

"Forgotten!" she repeated, pushing back the heavy loosened hair from the beautiful pale face which looked ashen white in the moonlight. "Shall I ever forget! He was so angry—so angry that I look back to our wedding-day with terror even now."

"Was it on your wedding-day?" Frank said eagerly, and yet remorsefully.

"Yes. I found it just as I was dressing to go away," she answered faintly; "and I slipped it into my dress. When we were on the way, it fell out, and I forgot for a moment, and said he might read it."

"And he was angry?" "Yes, he was angry."

By EDGAR GUEST.

AFTER-SWIMMING HUNGER.
Roast beef and gravy and pot pie and lamb.
Chicken and potatoes and sugar-cured ham.
Add every good thing
Of which epicures sing;
The twenty-four blackbirds dished up
For a king
Aren't in it a minute with that bite
You take
Just after you've come from a dip in The lake.

You may boast as you will of the dish
You like best.
And let it be salad or guinea hen's breast.
A tenderloin rare,
Or stewed rabbit's ears,
I'll answer there's nothing that quite can compare

With that bite of delight which you go for with best
That cookie or cracker just after your swim.

Ah, hunger's a sauce which no chef can provide,
No recipe book has its secret inside.
It's in no dish of Delft
And on no pantry shelf,
It's a relish which each must provide for himself;

It's a spice without price, worth an anthem or hymn,
That everyone gets who goes in for a swim.

So I sing of no pheasant that's floating in wine,
To bread and to jam is this ditty of mine,
To cookies or cake
Which all housekeepers make,
And always have ready for hunger's sweet sake.

And I vow here and now that all food tastes the best
Just after a swim when you've agreed to get dressed.

And What of Poor Us at 20 Cents?

Halifax, N.S., Sept. (By Canadian Press).—One reason, perhaps, why milk in this city costs 14 cents a quart, while in Moncton, it sells for 10 cents, is to be found in a statement by the Secretary of the Board of Health that on one morning (after collection in a period not stated) two tons of milk bottles were destroyed at the city dump. A groceryware firm quotes prices of bottles as $14.50 a gross for quarts and $10.50 for pints, so that the average per bottle is eight to ten cents. This matter of milk-bottle waste is literally brought home to every woman's door, for the householder is responsible for the return of these bottles.

Halifax, N.S., Sept. (By Canadian Press).—One reason, perhaps, why milk in this city costs 14 cents a quart, while in Moncton, it sells for 10 cents, is to be found in a statement by the Secretary of the Board of Health that on one morning (after collection in a period not stated) two tons of milk bottles were destroyed at the city dump. A groceryware firm quotes prices of bottles as $14.50 a gross for quarts and $10.50 for pints, so that the average per bottle is eight to ten cents. This matter of milk-bottle waste is literally brought home to every woman's door, for the householder is responsible for the return of these bottles.

Miss End Wilson, of Chesterfield, best Miss Katharine Nicholls, of Kid-aminster, by 5 up and 3 to play in the 18-holes final of the girls' championship at Stoke Poges, Slough, yesterday, Sept. 16th. For a golfer aged 15 1/2—the youngest who has won this event in its sev- en years' history—Miss Wilson played disappointingly well. It is time, too, that the rising generation in Britain produced a feminine golfer of outstanding promise. It has been singularly disappointing in this respect since Miss Joyce Wethered came to front in 1920.

other son of the late industrial magnate became involved in financial difficulties. It was a well-known fact that the relation between the two brothers was not an affectionate one and the failure of Hugo Stinnes, Jr., could not possibly affect the business of Edmond Stinnes. When the two sons of Hugo Stinnes decided to dissolve their business interests they took painful care of becoming absolutely independent. Apparently there was no reason at all why the collapse of Hugo should be followed by the financial failure of Edmond. Yet for those who know the intimate details of the business of the Stinnes family, Edmond's failure is much more obvious and significant than the collapse of Hugo, Jr., and reveals the real cause of the exit of the House of Stinnes a short time after the death of the great industrial magnate.

Artist, Not Businessman.
Dr. Edmond Stinnes is the elder son of the late magnate. But though the natural successor of old Stinnes, he never played an important role in the management of the immense business of his father, while he was alive. Stinnes, Sr., was very fond of his elder son but never considered him an able and efficient businessman. While the younger brother was secretary to his father and general manager of the huge Stinnes business, the older Edmond studied in various German universities. His hobby was the study of arts and his ambition was to become a noted writer on this subject or a professor in a famous German university, rather than to be the successor of his father as head of the House of Stinnes. He disliked business and loved to be among artists. On one occasion he stated that the painter Liebermann or the writer Gerhart Hauptmann was worth more to him in his eyes than all the business of Germany. His father's idea was that although Edmond—obviously the degree of Bachelor of Arts—should be a member of the firm, the active leader should be Hugo, Jr., his second son, Edmond devoting the larger part of his time to study and writing.

Had Foreseen the Catastrophe.
But despite his dislike of business, Edmond proved to be the one of the brothers who saw things more clearly. After the death of Stinnes, Edmond disapproved his younger brother's reckless and bold business tactics. Violent scenes between the two took place almost every day. Edmond wanted to slow down the speed of the business. He emphasized that conditions since the death of his father had been changed greatly and that tactics used by his father could not be applied under the present conditions. Germany had returned to the gold standard and the chapter of buying up everything on credit and paying after a few months was closed in the economic life of Germany. Old Stinnes bought and paid with borrowed money because he knew that in a few weeks or even in a few days he could pay it back in paper money more worthless than it was a few weeks ago. Hugo Stinnes, Jr., bought and borrowed freely, despite the fact that the epoch of inflation was over. Edmond wanted to run the business on a sound, conservative basis. Hugo, Jr., wanted to gamble and to speculate.

The Earth's Largest Crack

What is known by scientists as the Great Rift Valley is the largest tectonic fracture in the surface of the earth. The tremendous indentation reaches from the Dead Sea and the Jordan River in Asia to the Sabi River in South Africa, and has been traced that entire distance, a length of five to six thousand miles, writes Chase S. Osborne.

There may be more impressive dents covered by waters of the oceans, but nothing on land even approaches it in magnitude. No combination of words can be applied in an attempt to describe or interpret it that will approach exaggeration, so huge is this mighty phenomenon of nature, extending more than a sixth of the earth's circumference in length.

In places, it is two miles and more in depth and hundreds of miles in width. In it could be placed the great sink in California and the Gulf of California, and also the Rocky Mountain trough and the rift of the Colorado without filling it. Should this planet of ours ever break up, the disintegration would begin at the flaw made by this impressive crack.

Yet its gigantic size has apparently kept some very clear-eyed men from seeing it. Upon his return from Africa, I asked Theodore Roosevelt how the Great Rift impressed him. He looked blank and said he had not heard of it. Nevertheless, he had travelled through a considerable portion of it and had skirted it at some of its most spectacular points, including the Mau Escarpment where the Uganda railroad follows its edge. I mention this merely to cure any feeling of humiliation that the rest of us more ordinary individuals may feel.

Explored The Whole Region.
I have been from one end to the other of the Great Rift. By this I do not mean that I have explored it completely all the way, but that I have seen it and recognized it at many different points from the Holy Land to Southern Rhodesia. Moreover, I have lived in sections of it and have explored other parts of it. Yet this does not make me an authority upon it; nor is there any authority upon the entire chasm.

Prof. J. W. Gregory of the Department of Geology of the University of Glasgow, Scotland, knows more about the Great Rift than any other person on earth. He has been studying and exploring it for more than thirty years. In fact, his was one of the first minds to grasp the dimensions of it and to realize its significance.

It was Professor Gregory who first called earth fractures "rifts," and who first applied the name "Great Rift" to this aggressive wound in the surface of our sphere. He has perhaps contributed more information on the subject than anyone else, and he has certainly done more to collate the bibliography of the valley than anybody else, which, itself, has been a major task, for there has been much written about phases and sections by those who did not realize that they were considering portions of a vast whole.

No one man knows all that is known and there is much more to learn that has been set down as yet by all observers combined.

The first hint of this major fault was drawn from the report of the American Dead Sea expedition headed by Lieutenant Lynch in 1848. The startling information in the report nearly three-quarters of a century ago supplied the first authentic data to be had upon the Dead Sea region.

1,289 Feet Below Sea Level.
The Red Sea trough, of which the Dead Sea and Jordan Valley are a part, took on a new significance in the light of Lynch's report. For by his surprising revelation, it was found that the valley of the Dead Sea measured 1,289 feet below sea level, the lowest land on the surface of the earth, and that the actual bottom of the sea was 1,800 feet lower.

As early as 1841, Leopold von Puch described the Red Sea as a crevasse in the earth's crust, a conclusion forced by its channelled, parallel shores, suggesting fracture rather than erosion. In 1897 Sir George Adam Smith wrote of the Jordan Valley that there might be something on some other planet that matched it, but not on this one. So began the comprehension of the trough. Pioneer geologists began to trace it into Asia and others took up the trail into Africa.

Reports came from various sections of similar indentations between walls so steep and well formed as to denote breaking and subsidence. When these reports were put together the data showed a line of practically continuous fissure over a vast distance.

Burton did his part and Stanley noted how fordlike are certain of the African lakes: Rudolf, Adbert Nyanza, and Tanganyika. Lake Victoria Nyanza is not so clearly in the Great Rift as it is between two branches of it, for the Rift actually branches. There are more than thirty blind lakes in the Big Sink, none of which has outlets overground. Several may have underground outlets, as is almost undoubtedly true of Naivasha.

Crosses Mountains and Rivers.
Extension of the Red Sea fracture into Africa was first recognized by Douville, a French geologist. The abruptness of the eastern front of Abyssinia caught his imagination and he likened it to the fracture lines of the Red Sea and the Jordan Valley. Douville thought the crack continued across what he called the "Eastern Horn of Africa," and on down the "Mozambique Coast" to Mombasa. This led him to say that it was one of the most important "accidents" on the surface of the earth.

He was correct in conjecturing about its extent, but wrong as to direction. This was proved by Suess in 1891 after the discovery of Lake Rudolf. Suess correctly traced the Jordan-Red Sea rift along the eastern face of Abyssinia, down the Hawash depression between the highlands of Somaliland and Abyssinia, including the lake chain of southeast Abyssinia, across British East Africa to Lake Manjara. Here he found a gap, so far as his evidence went.

This has now been supplied and the Rift has been traced on through the Shire lowland across the Zambesi with laterals in several places including Tanganyika, Kivu and Albert Nyanza, and with lesser rifts to the Sabi Valley. Nyassa is in the main course; so are Naivasha and Nakuru, and many more lakes.

The Rift crosses mountains and rivers. In certain parts of the line of depression its devious and carved way is as clearly formed as if done with a channelling machine, and at other places the break is eroded so that its escarpments are not easy to follow, and the trail must be kept by altitude or lack of it.

The Fault in The Jordan.
Between the Dead Sea and the Araba Valley there is a ridge 600 feet high marking the uplifts of Edom and Sinai. Blanckenhorn gives the depth of the fault of the Jordan as 4,500 ft., all in limestone. In the Red Sea, Crossland gives the downthrow as 11,000 feet. Hume, director of the geological survey of Egypt, reports at least five subsidiary rifts in the Sinai peninsula.

The Atar desert plains between Abyssinia and the sea contain many lakes below the sea level, and these plains are the northern entrance to the Great Rift Valley in Africa. The British War Office has attempted a map of the Great Rift, which is quite perfect in such regions as Abyssinia and British East Africa, but which is more vague further south.

The Great Rift is volcanic with secondary sedimentary rocks. For the entire length of the fissure there are volcanoes of all ages from active, steaming ones to dead craters of great antiquity.

The Master of Nazareth was born in the Rift region and knew its demon weirdness. It was in the Great Rift that the devil tempted Him. 'Mosses had the decalogue from the top of a neighboring mountain. Israel's hosts were helped across the Red Sea by some magic of the Great Rift. Mohammed took his midnight walks along its escarpments and there heard the voice of Allah.

There are mineral riches, too; gold and precious stones and iron and copper. In ten thousand years the Rift has been the stage of the world as well as its deepest wound and least-healed scar.

Origin of The Rift.
The origin of the Rift is usually placed at the end of the Eocene period, but it was by no means finished then and in fact is still subject to minor convulsions. The Ophiir gold trails, over which came the gold for Solomon's temple gathered by Hiram of Tyre, were obliterated no doubt in the incandescent Rift. All who knew them were destroyed, and the trails have been picked up, again only recently. In these convulsions civilizations have been entombed, as more will be before the Great Rift becomes stable.

In large part, the phenomenon still encompasses the widest portions of Africa. Thousands of square miles of its area are infested with the tsetse fly, and the graves of sleeping sickness victims within its walls are millions.

Speke's cones that scrape the sky are in the Rift, likewise the Mountains of the Moon that Ptolemy knew. Its volcanoes are of all ages and conditions. There are scores that are still warm, yet the oldest of its veins are more ancient than the Alps. For the Great Rift was not torn asunder all at one time. The wrecking and rebuilding is still going on to-day.

The fascination of good Teeth

Beautiful teeth—as fair and lovely as the smile that reveals them—are truly fascinating. Their whiteness heightens the charm of ruby lips, and reflects the glowing health of their owner.

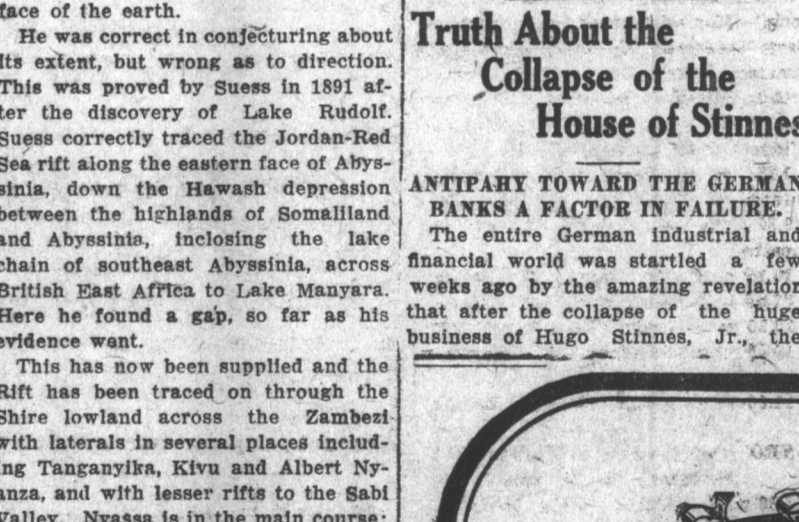

But the beauty of teeth is only enamel-deep. A gritty cleanser is dangerous to their lustre.

Colgate's Dental Cream contains no harmful grit. It is designed like a good toilet soap—with respect for the surface it must cleanse.

Keep your fascination. Use Colgate's twice a day, and consult the Dentist twice a year.

the Bruce Nationalist Government and the Labor Party as the result of the unofficial strike of British seamen in Australian waters. Indeed the election has been precipitated by the strike, and the appeal of the Premier, Stanley Melbourne Bruce, to the country is in the nature of a challenge to the extremists of the Labor Party.

The recent passage in the Australian House of Representatives of the amendment to the Immigration Act providing for the deportation of any person who is not of Australian birth who has been found guilty of fomenting labor trouble precipitated a crisis. The bill had a stormy route through the House because of the opposition of the Labor Party, led by Matthew Charlton, member for Hunter, New South Wales. Incidentally there was a wholesale issuance of warrants for the arrest of 600 striking British seamen. All this aroused such strong criticism of the Government that Premier Bruce decided on the dissolution of the House and an appeal to the country.

The bill providing for deportation and the appointment of a deportation board to carry out the measure is generally regarded as having been aimed chiefly at Tom Walsh, President of the Australian Seamen's Union, known as an extremist in the Labor Party. Walsh and J. Johansen, another labor agitator, have been asked to show cause why they should not be deported for their activity in the seamen's strike. Labor Leader Charlton and his supporters in the House of Representatives, in opposing the Bill, declared that this was an infringement on the liberty of the subject.

The outcome of the election may have a far-reaching effect, and the result may depend to a large extent on whether or not the seamen's strike is settled in the meantime.

Premier Bruce classes President Tom Walsh of the Australian Seamen's Union as a Communist. A short time prior to the Premier's announcement that he would dissolve parliament and appeal to the people for a mandate he made a speech in which he attacked the Communists. He declared that they had gained control of trades unions in Australia and were using it to aid in bringing about a social revolution and the establishment of a dictatorship by them over the whole of the Commonwealth. The Premier said the Government was determined to fight Communism with all the means at its disposal, and the Government would not permit any section of the community to arrogate to itself the power to enforce its will on the people against their consent. He demanded a mandate to "enact measures necessary to maintain the supremacy of parliamentary government and law and order."

Matthew Charlton, the Labor leader, in an address replying to a former speech of Premier Bruce denouncing Bolshevism in which speech the Premier, referring to the seamen's strike, said "the viper of Communism has raised its head," declared that the press and many public men were endeavoring to overshadow "the real issue" by trying to scare the people into believing that Australia was on the brink of a social revolution.

Mr. Charlton, criticizing the Government for having passed the deportation bill, referred to the fact that the British seamen's strike had occurred in Great Britain, New Zealand and South Africa, as well as in Australia, and said that no such drastic legislation as this had been passed by any of these other countries. He said he thought the ordinary penalty for law breaking should serve within Commonwealth, without resorting to special measures.

The Bruce Government succeeded the administration of William Morris Hughes, K.C., after the last general election, and the Bruce cabinet was formed on February 3, 1923, with Sir Bruce as Premier and Minister for External Affairs. Hughes was Premier of Australia from October 27, 1915, till his Government was overthrown at the general election and Bruce succeeded him on February 9, 1923, and stated.

Paramount's "Feet of Clay" Due Here Monday

From the safety of a yachting party on Catalina Island, Amy Loring, young, called by the generous allowance of half-sister, finds herself racing with necessity of work to support a husband, meted in a fight with a shark which had menaced her.

Such is the central situation of the picture, "Feet of Clay," the actor-general's first contribution to Paramount's Famous Forty. Adapted by Belah Marie Dix and Bertram Thibauer, this screen play has reaped all the modernity, zest and flavor which made Margaretta Tuttle's reel one of the reigning "best sellers."

The principal characters are Rod Rocque (Kerry Harlan), Vera Reynolds, the new DeMille "find" (Amy DeMille), Julia Faye (Bertha Lansell), Charlie Cortez (Tony Channing), Bert Edison, (Fergus Langella), and Joseph Kosloff (Bendick) and Vera Vercini.

The initial beach scenes at Catalina, punctuated by a thrilling race between Amy and Kerry on the huge Lansell yacht, en route back to New York. Bertha Lansell, half-sister to Amy, also interested in Kerry, is Amy's allowance.

In New York, the poor efficiency engineer is a wall-flower at a gorgeous dinner given by Bertha. A dance by Amy with his wife drives Kerry to the floor, a dance collapse and the doctor's verdict that death menaces him if he touches his foot to the ground within a year. Amy becomes involved in the establishment of Benks.

Then starts the play of two powerful dramatic forces. Harlan, helpless, leaving his tired wife needs recreation, is frantic, as Tony Channing appears with his invitations. On the other hand, Amy comes home at lunch and Bertha Lansell with her husband.

This situation brings the young couple to a misunderstanding. Disappointment. And then in a novel and dramatic manner DeMille brings "Feet of Clay" to a fitting climax.

NERVOUS BREAK-DOWN
Pains in Back and Legs Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ford, Ontario. "I had a nervous break-down, as it is called, with severe pains in my back and legs, and with fainting spells which left me very weak. I was nervous and could not sleep nor eat as I should and spent much time in bed. I was in this state, more or less, for over two years before Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me by my neighbor. Before I had taken five doses I was sitting up in bed when the first bottle was taken I was out of bed and able to walk around the house. During my sickness I had been obliged to get someone to look after my home for me, but thanks to the Vegetable Compound I am now able to look after it myself. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine in turn with the Vegetable Compound, and I certainly recommend these medicines to any one who is not enjoying good health. I am quite willing for you to use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. J. S. S. 1300 East Janice Avenue, Ford, Ontario.

Nervousness, irritability, painful pains, run-down feelings and weakness are symptoms to be noted. Women suffering from these troubles, which they so often have, should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. A druggist will sell this medicine.

You have seen so-called screen novelties galore, but you've never seen the real thing until you take in this picture. It's done in true DeMille style and more than measures up to the best thing he has ever done.

As advertised! Just a little rub and it's ready for your pipe.

"Dulcy"

AT THE CASINO THEATRE MONDAY

The great mystery play, "The Nightcap," will be put on for the last time at the Casino Theatre to-night. No one who loves excitement and hearty laughs should miss seeing "The Nightcap." Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the dramatic event of the season will be presented. Of "Dulcy," the Halifax Chronicle speaks of the play as follows:—A comedy, to praise which a dictionary of adjectives and synonyms would be inadequate, is "Dulcy," which had long "success" runs in New York and London, and which had its local premiere at the Majestic Theatre last night by the W. S. Harkins Players, under the direction of Joseph Selman. "Dulcy" is that very rare species of play, namely, a comedy that has novelty of plot in entangling situations and its resolutions which only tie up matters into a worse knot, and that, further, evokes not intermittent gales of mirth, but a constant flow of laughter, act after act, each and every moment. You are not exhausted by one big moment of "scream" comedy, but you gurgle, chortle, titter, or laugh right out loud, one or the other, all the time. But even so, that does not disclose to teatime-goers how infectious a laughing comedy "Dulcy" really is. This singular fact, however, does—namely, that while near the final curtain of most plays audiences begin to get ready to depart, the final curtain was actually on its way down last night before the audience knew that "Dulcy" had ended; they were so expectant and avid of more laughter that they waited in their seats till the fall of the curtain said, "It's over." The reviewer declares "Dulcy" to be the cleverest, liveliest, most sparkling—most original and novel—comedy seen in Halifax in many years.

Salmon Pack Largest in Country's History

Revenue From Fishing Increases Yearly—Even Prairies Yield More Than $2,000,000.

The largest salmon pack in the history of the industry and an increase of nearly 5 per cent. in the total value of all products are some of the features of the fishing industry during 1924. Fishing is usually thought of as one of the minor industries, as it undoubtedly is, yet it represents the livelihood of a large number of men and is yielding a greater net revenue each year. The total yield of the industry in 1924 was $44,534,235. With thousands of miles of coastline and so large an area of inland waters, there is no reason why our fishing revenue should not continue to expand each year.

The prairie provinces are not usually thought of as a fishing ground, but Manitoba's revenue last year was $1,232,563, and that of the three prairie provinces more than $2,000,000. This illustrates the fact that, with proper stocking, the inland waters of Canada may be expected to yield large quantities of food for many years to come, a fact which brings the interior of the country nearer to a self-supporting basis.

The four chief commercial fishes in order of their marketed value are salmon, halibut, cod and lobsters. Their values respectively were: $13,784,920; $5,878,870; $5,443,814, and $4,169,171. Of the principal kinds of fish marketed, salmon, cod, herring, mackerel, sardines, smelts, whitefish and pickerel all showed increases in value in comparison with the preceding year, while halibut, lobsters and haddock showed declines.

British Columbia, of course, stands far ahead of any of the provinces in the value of her fisheries. In fact her total last year was approximately equivalent to that of all the others combined, being $21,257,567 against a grand total for all of $44,534,235. Nova Scotia had second place, with $8,777,251, and New Brunswick third with $5,383,809. After these the order of importance was: Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba, Prince Edward Island, Saskatchewan, Alberta.

Visiting M.P.'S Impressions

In this issue appears an article written for the Daily Mail by Dr. L. Hayden Guest, M.P., on the recent visit of the Parliamentary Delegation to Newfoundland, and we quote the following extract from another article, in which the writer gives his impression of the people and the country's industrial outlook.

"150 PER CENT. BRITISH." "The people of Newfoundland are very British—150 per cent. British some of them describe themselves. They are largely descended from West of England families, very many from Dorset, and there are important elements from Scotland and from Ireland.

Bright With Hope. It will be development on a splendid foundation not only of great wealth of natural resources but also of great strength of national character. To one who served, as the present writer did, alongside the Newfoundland Battalion in the 29th Division in France, watching can ever eradicate the impression of a fanaticism, of a bravery, and of a splendour of courage and endurance which characterized those men. And the naval record of Newfoundland surpassed, if possible, the land record.

For my own part, I think that if it were only to visit the land that had produced the Newfoundland people, the time of the Imperial delegation would have been well spent. But the object of such visits is not only to pay homage to the past but also to consider developments of the future and how better to use the joint resources of all our great Dominions. To visit Newfoundland now when social and industrial developments of a far-reaching character are taking place, when despite great political difficulties and handicaps, a point of vantage has been attained, is to visit a country bright with hope.

Just what practical results may follow the visit of the members it is of course impossible to conjecture, but there can be no doubt that Dr. Hayden Guest's graceful tributes will have the effect of enlightening the people of Great Britain regarding the Colony, and even if the visit serves no other purpose, it will have been well worth while. The remarks made by Dr. Guest are all the more gratifying as he is a keen observer, familiar with conditions in many countries, and is by no means given to paying empty compliments.

Our Money or Their Lives

The high death rate among children during the month of September as indicated in the Table of Vital Statistics prepared by the Registrar General is a setback after the favourable returns of the previous months, and is far from reassuring to those who were of the opinion that conditions were improving in this respect.

The heaviest toll is again taken by those diseases to which the children in the city are susceptible at this season, and the figures are all the more significant in view of the increased efforts made in recent years to cope with such cases. The solution of the problem, however, rests, not with the medical fraternity and the Welfare Associations, but with the civic authorities and in particular with the citizens themselves. So long as we are willing to tolerate dirt, to submit to the careless handling of foods, and to be satisfied with the antiquated system of sanitation which is in operation in the city, so long must we expect to pay the price in the precious lives of our children.

The plea is there is not sufficient money available to effect the necessary improvements; but the question is, is there any serious effort made to find the money? Is there even any inclination in that direction? As a matter of fact many desirable improvements do not call for the expenditure of a single cent, but simply for the exercising of the authority which the powers possess.

And in so far as it is a question of money, are we hesitating as to whether we shall part with our dollars or part with our children?

Put Back the Clock

At 11 o'clock to-morrow night Daylight Saving Time ends, and all clocks will be changed to one hour earlier. To effect the change of time it is considered advisable either to advance the hands of the clock eleven hours or to stop it for one hour, rather than to move the hands back, as it is considered that the latter method injures the mechanism.

Hotel Tenders Accepted

We are informed that in connection with the plumbing and heating of the Newfoundland Hotel the contract has been given to Farquhar Bros., Halifax, owing to the fact that it was "incredibly lower" than the one local tender submitted. It is said to be one of the largest contracts of the kind undertaken by a Nova Scotia firm.

Magistrate's Court

A woman, taken in for safekeeping, was discharged. A man for failing to support his wife and children within the past month was ordered to sign a personal bond of $500, the security of another in the sum of $200, or in default 14 days' imprisonment. A case for threatening language between husband and wife was postponed until this afternoon.

And Why Not?

If women can have their hair cut, why can't men use Talcum? Most men know that as an after shave Talcum Powder is a delightful treat, especially when the Three Flowers Talcum for this powder does not throw off a "loud" odor. Its faint, pleasing perfume is but a suggestion, a touch of fragrance. Certainly men may use Three Flowers Talcum, and need not fear criticism by doing so. Well groomed men know that Three Flowers is the ideal talcum to use.

Vagrant a Problem to Police

A 23 year old girl, named Milley, was brought to the police station last night by the Rev. Mr. Moore, for shelter, pending some arrangement which would provide her with a home. This is the girl reported as sleeping in the open in the vicinity of Cornhill Ave. She is somewhat weak-minded and delicate. Several parties who have interested themselves in the matter have suggested that the unfortunate girl be sent to the Poor Asylum, but as the place is crowded she cannot be admitted there. By request she was not brought before the magistrate this morning and the police are perplexed. The only thing they can do is release her or have her sent to the penitentiary. There are seven or eight unfortunates of this class in the city.

The Twillingate Hospital

Dear Sir.—It seems to me rather extraordinary that, in the various articles on the subject of the Twillingate Hospital which have appeared in the local press from time to time, no reference is ever made to the assistance rendered by Dr. Grenfell. It was Dr. Grenfell that the people of Twillingate turned when the idea of the Hospital was first mooted. At the request of the local Committee he must have paid at least a dozen visits to Twillingate. It was he who selected the site, and I think I am right in stating that it was through him that Dr. Parsons, the energetic and most capable superintendent, was secured. It was through Dr. Grenfell and his friends in the United States that the sum of $50,000 was donated by the Commonwealth Fund of America towards the erection of the building. This amount was in two subscriptions of $25,000 each, the first of which was originally given for the proposed new Hospital at St. Anthony, but as Dr. Grenfell was not then ready to proceed with that building he very generously had the money diverted to Twillingate. In other words, Dr. Grenfell raised more than half the money required for Twillingate but no mention is ever made of that fact. The Twillingate Hospital is not one of the Grenfell chain of hospitals, and I am not writing this in any way disparaging the excellent work accomplished by Dr. Parsons. But I do think that when an article appears such as that in Friday's Telegram—an article by the way in which I am in thorough sympathy—some acknowledgment might be made of the part played by Dr. Grenfell, without whose aid the Twillingate Memorial Hospital would in all probability never have been erected.

Hayden Guest on Newfoundland

MAGIC TOUCH OF INDUSTRY. By L. HAYDEN GUEST, M.C., M.P. One of the delegation of M.P.'s touring Newfoundland and Canada. ST. JOHN'S, Nfld.—One of the great human problems of Newfoundland is the pull and attraction of the United States. The birthrate is high and the emigration rate to the United States is also high.

The attraction of cities, the sparkle and shine of an immense spending prosperity in the United States, the white shining light of New York like a tremendous lighthouse beam flashing out all over the New World, these things take many of Newfoundland's young men and women away from the woods and rivers and townships of their native land. Many return. For Newfoundland is a homey place to those of British race; its grey rocks and soft skies, its green woods and the short close turf by the sides of roads and tracks, its solid, simple house, and its soft speech make a background familiar to our race for many generations.

But many do not return. Fishing, lumbering, mining—these three activities the island are not a broad enough basis for a much expanded life.

Birth of a Town. To have seen the country as it is now is to realize how tremendous was the idea of The Daily Mail in starting the paper industry here about 20 years ago at Grand Falls. Only a great imaginative effort would have been capable of beginning a big scale industry in the midst of what was then almost a wilderness. Now around the paper mills the town of Grand Falls has arisen, there are well-built, convenient, electrically lighted houses, public halls, banks, shops, churches, recreation grounds, and a happy contented population rapidly increasing in numbers (hundreds of babies are born every year), and even existing on a small scale a problem of employment, for the paper mills provide no openings for girls (except for a few clerks and stenographers), and not all the boys can be absorbed.

More significant still perhaps is the starting of a new paper mill at Corner Brook on the Hunger River on the west coast of the island by a new and independent company. And here out of the wilderness again has been built up in two years a completely up-to-date paper plant capable of producing 400 tons of news print a day.—Daily Mail.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES.

October 2nd.—Called this morning at 5 o'clock, and up and to dress in haste being that the house is cold and the morning like unto late November weather, and indeed, the season said to be a month advanced. So to breakfast of some hot tea and toast with bacon, all 4 of us in high good humour and hoping for much sport. Anon, taking the motor coach up the road, did leave it by the wayside and start our tramp across the barrens, having 2 dogs with us, which being Povey's, he do swear by, yet do seem to me slow enough to swear at. But Lord, to recount all the happenings of this day is beyond me, save that a few incidents do remain in my memory, among them how poor Povey did sigh shoot the tail off 1 dog, and Blabbs comes close to shooting the head off Povey. Indeed, such fools with a gun I did never before see, and for my part will never go with them again, being that I would have had a good 12 brace were it not for them, and instead needs must be satisfied with 6. But as for the dogs, I did never before see their like, being more used to hunt chicken in a run than to rise ptarmigan, as I did tell Povey in no uncertain language. Being returned to the house at last, mighty tired, do have among us but 6 brace of birds, 3 of which are mine, and Blabbs gets none at all. So to sit down to a hearty meal of corned beef and cabbage, which I did much enjoy, and then by motor coach, to the city, where we did arrive at midnight. Find my wife is abroad playing at Bridge, which maddens me that knowing I was on my way home, she did yet go abroad, and has neither fire nor food awaiting me, and our cookie may go to bed. So rummaging about for something to eat, do trip over the cat and fall across a chair, which bruises my shin so that I may hardly walk. So in high ill humour to bed, being sore in need of rest.

In the Magistrate's Court

MINISTER OF FINANCE VS. SIR RD. SQUIRES. In the case of the Minister of Finance vs. Sir Richard Squires, the further hearing has been adjourned until Nov. 3rd next. In the meantime Howley, K.C. will appeal to the Supreme Court on the matter of the Judge's jurisdiction. On Wednesday last his Honor Judge Morris fined the defendant $1000 for not making a proper return of his income for the year preceding Dec. 31st, 1921, as required by Section 7 of the War Tax Act of 1918. Mr. Howley asked for an adjournment of the hearing of six other like charges until to-day and intimated that he would ask the Judge to state a case. When the hearing began this forenoon, Mr. Howley stated his intention to apply to the Supreme Court on Tuesday next on the question of the Judge's jurisdiction, and he asked that, as the charge of Sir Richard failing to make his income tax for 1919 had partly been gone into that it might be concluded.

Mr. Emerson for the Minister of Finance, pointed out that as all the cases were identical and the question of jurisdiction may apply that all the cases be adjourned. He asked that as a fine had been imposed it should be paid or security for payment given.

Mr. Howley absolutely refused to pay the fine or give security and pointed out the embarrassing position which would arise if the conviction was quashed.

His Honor—"Yes, if it is quashed." Mr. Emerson—"This man has been convicted and fined and the fine should be paid."

Mr. Howley—"Go ahead and collect it."

Mr. Emerson—"So I will." After a little further cross-firing, Mr. Howley submitted that as the law provides seven days within which to ask for a statement of case he would ask for an adjournment until the period expires.

Mr. Emerson submitted that there was no adjournment of the case under discussion, it had concluded and the only question was would they proceed with the other charges. His opinion was that it was not advisable to continue.

Mr. Howley—"I am prepared to proceed."

Mr. Emerson—"I am not."

His Honor—"I don't intend to proceed when my jurisdiction is attacked."

Mr. Howley—"I have a greater regard for your Honor's integrity than for your jurisdiction."

It was decided to adjourn the matter until Nov. 3rd next, pending the decision of the Supreme Court.

MESSAGE FROM HALIFAX. Newfoundland's First To Enter. Mr. J. M. Tobin received the following message last night from Mr. J. E. Ahern, Sporting Editor of the Halifax Herald, in connection with the participation by the Newfoundland runners in the marathon race:—

Everything arranged; the Y.M.C.A. will look after you. The Newfoundlanders are the first team to enter. The numbers have been drawn as follows:—Bell, 1; O'Toole, 2; Stone, 3; Ralph, 4.

THE HALIFAX ROAD RACE.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir—I understand that it is the intention of the Nfld. Amateur Athletic Association to send Ron O'Toole and other athletes to Halifax to compete for the 10-Mile Modified Marathon and other sports.

It is so, then it may not be considered presumptuous on my part if I, who was President of the N.A.A.A. when Bell, Butler, Phelan and Skirving went to Halifax and covered themselves with glory by coming back, every man of them, with trophies won against the picked athletes of Eastern Canada, say a few words on this matter.

Probably you will remember that previously to our sending these men, Jim Vincombe, that good old sport, champion one hundred yards and quarter mile sprinter in his day, went with Jack Bell to take part in the 10-Mile Race, but Bell got sick. A couple of years after we sent Bell and the others, O'Toole went up to Halifax, but developed boils. To me that condition of affairs should not have been. It showed bad management or bad training; something wrong somewhere.

Had Bell or his managers explicitly followed our instructions there is no doubt in my mind, but that he would have done what he was sent up to do, that is, bring back the 10-Mile Halifax Herald Trophy. He, however, took part in the Halifax Wanderers' sports, in which the best men of Eastern Canada competed. He romped home, easily first, in the 8-Mile race, the big event of the meet. That, of course, gave his head away with the result that it was not there, and he, in fact, never did let the cup go to poor old Newfoundland (that would be too terrible an indignity, the wires were pulled to bring McLaughlin, an outstanding runner, from Boston. He came, competed, and was the only one who could compare with Bell. McLaughlin won the race and, I believe, won it the next two years, and thereby became, owner of this much coveted trophy. We, however, had nothing to say to Bell for he, as I said before, covered himself with glory and put Newfoundland on the map athletically, showing that we, in Newfoundland, bred the stuff that in the future would have to be reckoned with any that happens, then those responsible for that state of affairs should be ashamed of themselves, and should not again be trusted with such an important matter.

The sending of men to Canada to represent Newfoundland is, in my opinion, a very important matter, one which every man, woman and child in the country, who has red blood in his veins, should be interested in. Why, everybody went crazy over Bell and his associates, and the greatest demonstration ever seen in Newfoundland, up to that time, was made in their honor the night they returned.

I should just love to see O'Toole go to Halifax and run away from the others, and if he does I can promise that he will get such a reception that even the demonstration to Bell will look like a picnic in the wilderness, quite a lonesome affair.

I am sure you will pardon my taking up your space, but I am greatly interested in this matter and hope that this clever young athlete is given a fair show.

Yours sincerely, GEO. W. B. AYRE. October 3rd, 1925.

Masquerade Carnival

WAS A HUGE SUCCESS.

The Masquerade Carnival held in the Prince's Rink last night under the direction of the C.L.B. and C.C.C. Bands was largely attended and proved an unqualified success. The carnival started at 8 o'clock with a large number of masqueraders in attendance. The costumes worn were varied and pretty, and as the dancers glided over the floor the scene was very animated. The musical part of the programme was equal to anything yet heard here, and the dancers showed their appreciation by applauding for encores, which were responded to on every occasion. The judges were Mesdames W. J. Walsh and P. J. Hayes; Messrs. J. M. Tobin, E. Chate, A. Bulley, J. Gamberger and T. Woods, and the awards were announced as follows:

Ladies—1. Miss Marie Dawe, representing a Kewpie Doll, prize, a hoop bracelet; 2nd, Mrs. G. Cox as the Tourist Hotel, prize, a box of chocolates.

Gentlemen—1st, Fred Francis as Charlie Chaplin, prize, cigarette and cigar holder; 2nd, John Power, representing $200 or 3 months, prize, a tin of cigarettes. At 9.30 general dancing began and was continued until early this morning. The affair was voted a huge success and all those responsible for the arrangements are to be congratulated.

Obituary

LIZZIE BAKER.
There passed away last evening quite suddenly a highly esteemed and well known lady of St. John's West in the person of Mrs. Wm. Baker. The deceased, who previous to her marriage was Miss Elizabeth Glynn, daughter of Mr. Francis Glynn, H.M.C., was always noted for her kindness and charity. A kind friend in trouble and affliction, the news of her passing will come as a shock to her many friends. She leaves to mourn a husband, father and four brothers, to whom much sympathy goes out in their sad bereavement. Her funeral takes place at 2.30 p.m. to-morrow from her late residence, No. 13 Hagerty Street.

Further Evidence

Last Monday week we expressed optimistic feelings with regard to the Trade of the coming season. We did so from information given us by S. Richard Steele of The China and Glass Store, opposite Court House. We are now pleased to be able to confirm this, having just learnt from this firm that their combined Wholesale and Retail Sales during September was 94 per cent. ahead of September 1924. This is certainly a remarkable showing, and one which is placing them, although only in their third year of business, in a position as the Leading China and Glass Store in the City. oct3,11

We have been told that some persons believe we only sell Wall Paper in Wholesale quantities. This may have been caused by observing the low prices marked on goods displayed in the window. Apple Recipes You Will Like Spiced Apples—Choose six fairly large apples as much the same size as possible. Peel and core without breaking them, put them into a casserole, and sprinkle over them one piece of stick cinnamon broken in pieces, 4 cloves, 2 blades of mace, 2 allspice, ½ tea spoonful of nutmeg. 6oz. of brown sugar. Pour in 1 gill of cider, cover the casserole, and bake in a moderate oven until the apples are soft. Serve cold with or without cream.

Apples Croquettees are another dish well worth trying. Peel, core, and chop finely about 6 apples, put them into a pan with 1 gill of water, and simmer gently until the apples are soft. Rub them through a sieve and add ¼ lb. of breadcrumbs, 1 tea spoonful of lemon rind, ¼ tea spoonful of grated nutmeg, ¼ lb. of finely chopped and stoned raisins or sultanas, and 4 oz. of brown sugar. Mix these ingredients well together, shape them into balls, roll them in flour until coated all over and try pale brown in hot fat. Drain them on soft paper and dish on a doily on a hot dish. Sift caster sugar over and add wine sauce.

Apple Snow—Cut six small sponge cakes into thin slices, put them into a glass dish and pour over a wineglassful of sherry. Let this soak into the cakes, and then cover them with ½ pint of cream or custard. Bake 8 large apples, and when soft remove the pulp with a spoon. Put it into a basin and beat it up when cold with the

Gored by Buffalo

SETTLER KILLED AFTER BEING ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

NAKURU, Kenya.—A settler named Hunter, residing in Solal Valley, set out to shoot a savage buffalo, his native gun-bearer following him, when the buffalo suddenly came out of the bush and charged him.

The gun-bearer, intending to divert the beast, fired at the precise moment that Hunter jumped aside and the settler received the bullet in his side.

Almost at the same instant the buffalo caught Hunter and gored and trampled upon him, killing him in a return charge.

A Ruler to Watch

Those officers of the First British Cruiser Squadron who were entertained to lunch by King Boris at Varna (Bulgaria) would be surprised to find that the young monarch speaks English with ease, has great natural charm, and that he shares their interests in sport. The importance of Boris is being slowly appreciated. He is one of the outstanding figures in the Balkans, and may readily make a great name for himself. The recent Communist outbreak in Bulgaria with its terrible outrages, ended decidedly against the Reds. And the success of the Constitutional Party was due, in no small measure, to the personal popularity of the King, who, though younger than our Prince of Wales, enjoys something like the same esteem.

He says that the revenue from postage is steadily overtaking the reduction and in a few weeks will have passed the total received when the rate was 1½d.

DO MEN LIKE FEAR IN WOMEN?

Are men attracted or repelled by a show of fear in a woman?

That question came up the other day during a discussion of the eternally absorbing subject how to lure a man.

One mother had been telling me what she had done to teach her little girl to overcome her fear of bugs and worms of all kinds, and another mother had said: "Why do you bother? I don't see what harm it does if she is afraid of them. If it were a boy it would be different. Personally, I don't care so much for this type of girl who isn't afraid of anything. I think she's been overdone in the last few years and is rather going out of style. I think the other type is coming back. You can't get away from it, my dear, men really like a girl who is afraid of a few things."

It gives them the illusion of their own courage. Of course "men" is a very broad word. All men don't like any one thing, any more than all women do. But how about the majority? I should like to hear what men themselves have to say on this subject. Because, personally, I am reluctantly obliged to believe what I don't want to believe—that this woman is right. Courage in a man is universally admired. Every man desires to believe that he possesses it. Many men don't. But nothing gives them the illusion that they do more than a woman's timidity. They may know it is silly for a woman to be afraid of small, harmless snakes, and mice and June bugs and crows and thunderstorms and all the traditional female bugaboos. But it is a lovable silliness since it makes them proudly conscious of their own comparative fearlessness.

Admire Versus Feel Flattered By.

I have known men who said they disliked foolish fears in a woman and admired fearlessness. I think they meant to speak the truth but I doubt if they did speak it, or at least not the whole truth. For I have seen those same men react just as other men do to some very feminine woman's silly fear. I suspect that their dislike of silly fears and admiration of fearlessness in women is mental, and their reaction to such fears when expressed by a woman in their presence is emotional, the deep, primitive subconscious instinct of man, the protector, for woman, the mother.

True, men do sometimes admire courage in one woman even while they enjoy the expression of timidity in another. But the two verbs, admire and enjoy—though they were chosen without premeditation, do pretty well express the situation. They admire one woman but they are flattered by the other. And one does not have to be told which of those two is the more powerful emotion.

Not In Praise Of Fear.

All of which is not written in praise of fear but simply from the point of view of the huntress. But one warning! Men may be flattered and amused by a show of real timidity in a woman even after marriage but I think that the most canny are quick to detect deliberately assumed fear and to be antagonized by it, especially after marriage, and most especially if it is in any way hampering to them.

WRITING HOME.

I am writing to my aunt, and she'll doubtless cease to grieve when at last she takes a slant at the letter she'll receive. She was always good to me; when I left the old home shack, she exclaimed: "Oh, honey, don't be long in coming back! For we'll miss you here at home, miss you sadly every day; life will cease to be a poem when our gossamer is away. From our eyes the tears will leak but you'll dry

Little Jack Rabbit

Up the Old Cow Path sped the galows, raised his head above the Luckymobile with the two little rabbits on their way to visit Old Mr. Dog, that bright old canine who had made up the Cross Word Puzzle for the Bunnybridge Bugle.

"Hope we'll find him home," sighed dear Uncle Lucky. "I imagine he's a lonely old fellow. We'll cheer him up," and turning into the Shady Forest, the old gentleman rabbit followed the winding trail under the leafy trees until, all of a sudden, just like that, a low hanging branch knocked off his hat; his precious old wedding stove-pipe hat.

"Goodness, gracious meebus!" cried the anxious bunny man. And hopping out, he looked about as down the path he ran.

"Here it is," cried a little voice in the tree top, and pointing to a clump of bushes, Squirrel Shadownail scrambled down to the ground. Sure enough, there lay the precious old hat. But, dearest me! When the old gentleman rabbit reached out his paw to pick it up an angry hiss greeted his long ears. And the next minute, Mr. Rattler, that slippery old snake robber of birds' nests and furry folks' bun-

"I've been looking for a nice place in which to sleep," he explained. "Your hat will suit me to a T. Just leave it here 'longside of me."

"I'll do nothing of the kind," answered brave Uncle Lucky, although his heart was beating so hard that it nearly jostled his big gold watch out of his vest pocket.

"Then take the consequences," which means dreadful things to happen, Little Reader—bissed Mr. Rattle Snake and drawing back his head, he made ready to strike poor Uncle Lucky.

Quick as a wink the little rabbit dropped his khaki cap on the head of the wicked old snake. Down over his eyes it fell, and before Old Mr. Rattler could shake it off, nimble Uncle Lucky picked up his precious hat and hopped back into the Luckymobile, closely followed by his clever little bunny nephew. Then away they sped in their motor car as Shadownail laughed a merry "Ha, ha!"

"Snakes and wasps!" gasped dear Uncle Lucky, "that was a narrow escape. You're a quick-witted little rabbit. Saved your Uncle Lucky's hat and his job as President of the Rabbitville Savings Bank," and with a chuckle, the funny old gentleman rabbit put on more power and sped through the forest.

By and by, after a while, and a bump and a smile, and more than a

"Your hat will suit me to a T." mile they came in sight of Old Mr. Dog's log cabin. Right there on the front doorstep sat the old fellow, the Bunnybridge Bugle in his paw and a big blue pencil behind his left ear.

"Hello, hello!" shouted Uncle Lucky, giving the horn a squeeze or two as over the mossy ground they flew. Maybe I should have said speed, Little Reader. But the Luckymobile can almost fly. I really believe, for it goes so fast sometimes that the wheels are right off the ground; perhaps if Uncle Lucky would fasten on it a pair of wings it might clear bumps and stones and hollow places. And now we must wait to hear what happens next until your Uncle Dave writes tomorrow's story.

The Odyssey of the PN-9 No. 1

The Odyssey of the PN-9 No. 1, every airman, will make a new epic of the sea, worthy to go down in the log of the ages. "Men have dared the perils of the deep," one newspaper observes; "here are men who dared the perils of both sea and air—and survived." Commander John Rodgers and his crew of four failed to complete their flight from San Francisco to Hawaii, but they provided the material for one of the most thrilling chapters in the history of aviation. As the Norfolk Virginia-Pilot remarks: "Forced down within reach of his destination by lack of fuel, the plane drifted helplessly in the lonely waters of the Pacific for nine days, during the last four days of this period the members of the crew were wholly without food. Their supply of water depended upon the few meager drops they could gather in a piece of canvas whenever it rained." According to the Washington Star: "When the plane disappeared, it was hoped that she would be found quickly by the searching flotilla of destroyers and submarines sent at once to the rescue. But as days passed with no trace of the missing aviators, that hope faded. Then suddenly came the radio announcement that Commander Rodgers and his men were found. "Though the giant Navy seaplane failed to reach its destination by air, the flight, thinks the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "was a brilliant achievement, since it established a world's record for a non-stop flight entirely over water." "The experience gained on this unsuccessful attempt can be put to profitable account," believes the Washington Star. Furthermore, adds the New York Times, "Commander Rodgers and his men all came through in a fashion to make the country feel proud of them." The St. Paul Pioneer Press, the Newark News, and other newspapers are reminded of the attempt of Harry Hawker and Commander Grieve to fly from Newfoundland to Ireland in a land plane; of their unfortunate plunge into the Atlantic, and of their return to "civilization" six days later. One recalls the "loss" for six days last year of Lieutenant Locatelli, of the Italian Navy, in Greenland waters, and of Amundsen's more recent disappearance into the Arctic. But more dramatic of any of these, in the opinion of the Newark paper, is the adventure of the PN-9 No. 1. Says the Boston Globe, in a column editorial: "Consider it. Here was an argonaut of the air, leaping skyward on August 31, with his comrades in a seaplane from the Golden Gate, to span the blue waters of the greatest ocean on the globe; to traverse without stopping the 2,100 miles between America and Hawaii. "Hour after hour they thundered on, through day and dark, watching their fuel supply diminish inch by inch in the tanks as the tussle with the elements proceeded. "Below the angry sea crests rattled out into vells of acid under the flails of the wind. And at last, down into this welter of spume and spray, they and their craft were forced to drop, fifty miles from the nearest ship, the radio-sending apparatus wrecked. "There the giant seaplane bobbed. The second chapter of the grim adventure opened. "Through the air and over cables orders flashed from Washington to the Orient. Relief ships, destroyers, airplanes, fleet tenders, mine sweepers, submarines—began their quest. They combed the sea in vain. The greatest search in naval annals went on, day after day, and apparently failed. Hopes that had been high at first among the searchers began to dwindle. "All the while, through 218 eternal hours, across 400 miles of ocean, this Commander and his crew in their cockle-shell drifted amid the isolation of the Pacific; parceling out their food supply; watching this, too, grow smaller, carrying out a routine to divert their minds from their plight; catching desperately at fortunate showers with improvised cloth basins. Food failed. The water was drunk. Between them and one of the most fearful deaths known to man, there remained only their courage and a small still for purifying sea-water, which had been brought along solely because of the insistence of the Commander's mother. "Helpless, they listened to messages speeding through the air, as the searching craft wore back and forth in this prodigious hunt. They caught from the ether the decision of the pilots in the searching party that the hunt was hopeless and much be given up. "The days dragged on. And then, like the hero of an impossible melodrama who materializes out of nothing, up came the submarine R-4 from the bowels of the deep to discover that bedraggled, drifting plane and its crew, and to flash the news. "In all this, remarks another Boston paper, the Post: "Commander John Rodgers, of the PN-9 No. 1 stands out as a great figure. The others all agree that his able handling of the floating plane, his patience, his courage, and his self-denial were an enormously helpful factor in keeping up their morale and their strength. It is with extreme fitness and swift appreciation of good work that Secretary Wilbur makes him Assistant Chief of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics."

In a statement to The Associated Press, Commander Rodgers said, in part:

"About noon of the second day, September 1, we decided that our gasoline supply would carry us midway between the Aroostook and the Tusniger, respectively, the next to the last and the last station ship. I, therefore, decided to land at the Aroostook, which is a fully equipped airplane tender. I started to write a message which would give her some clue to our whereabouts, but just then the gasoline gave out.

"Due to total expenditure of gasoline we could not use radio. I determined our position to be fifty miles north of the Aroostook's station.

"We rigged a radio antenna on the plane and received without much difficulty everything that was in the air. We sailed before the wind, endeavoring to work the plane in toward the Hawaiian Islands, hoping to make Oahu. We made an average of two miles an hour.

"We cut the fabric from the lower wing and rigged a foresail. Weather conditions were moderate, although during the afternoon the seas were high.

"Our only concern was a question of water supply. We knew we could go along without food, of which we had small emergency rations. We were depending on a small water-still for water, which we managed to get going on the sixth day by burning wood from the trailing edges of the lower wings. This enabled us to survive.

"We reached a point about fifteen miles off Nawiliwili and were trying to signal that port when we were sighted by the patrolling submarine ten miles off Nawiliwili, and taken in tow. "The only miscarriage of the plan was due to our failure to find the Aroostook, the ship we had selected to refuel from, having passed close above all other station ships en route."

In a Honolulu dispatch to the New York Times we are told that:

"Even before he undertook the Hawaiian flight, Commander Rodgers was regarded as one of the best and most intrepid flyers in the Naval Air Service. Beyond that he was regarded as a topnotcher in seamanship and navigation, with the Navy spirit bred in the bone, having come from a family that had distinguished itself in naval annals. With Commander Rodgers were Lieut. Byron J. Connell, of Pittsburg, assistant pilot; Skiles N. Pope, of Jackson, Tennessee, aviation pilot; William H. Bowlin, of Richmond, Indiana, aviation chief machinist's mate; and Otis G. Stantz, of Terre Haute, Indiana, chief radio operator. All the men agree that the expert navigation of Commander Rodgers had been an important factor in saving their lives.

"When picked up, the seaplane, which left San Pablo Bay, California, August 31, on a scheduled non-stop flight to Pearl Harbour, Island of Oahu, was drifting westward about two knots an hour. Members of the crew said that if the submarine R-4 had not sighted the plane, they should have continued to drift to Kauai."

"I BEGAN TO EAT Fleischmann's Yeast to overcome constipation. My improvement was steady and permanent. To make a long story short: I am fighting fit in every way. Overwork does not bother me. My endurance is there. I eat and sleep like a he-man. The remarkable improvement in my health is a matter of record based on a physician's examination. Constipation? Banished forever. Fresh air, exercise and a few cakes of yeast a day did it." Walt Marsh, Belleville, Ill., 3

"ABOUT EIGHTEEN MONTHS AGO I was a complete wreck. Could not eat or sleep, was anemic and my color had faded to a sickly green. My friends began to exchange pitying glances and one day an old lady insisted on giving me her seat. That was the crowning humiliation. . . I decided to give yeast a trial. I started eating three cakes daily. In about six weeks found I could eat a real meal once more; in two months my natural color began to return. I kept on and now, thanks to Fleischmann's Yeast, I am a well woman." Mrs. F. R. Conner, Florence, Ky.

A Story Told by Thousands

"ABOUT THREE YEARS AGO I was very 'run down' and didn't have enough energy to do anything. The doctor said my system lacked vitamins. Finally, I discovered I was getting boils. I was bedridden just thirty days, when my physician insisted on my taking Fleischmann's Yeast. After a time the doctor noticed a change; the boils stopped appearing, my appetite was better, I became more cheerful, and was able to get about. I have never had a recurrence of the boils, and I am in excellent health. I still keep on taking Fleischmann's Yeast." Mrs. Mildred Mosher, Bellrose, L. I.

How they corrected their ills—regained the vitality of youth—through one simple fresh food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices or milk—or just plain. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before breakfast and at bedtime. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for health. The Fleischmann Company, 201 Duckworth Street, St. John's, Newfoundland.

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—banishes constipation, skin troubles, stomach disorders. Start eating it today.

"ON SEPTEMBER 12, 1924, I responded to the call of the War Department and found I was one of the many unfit, physically. At dinner I nibbled at my food, was nervous and irritated. When in other cities officiating at football games I was ashamed to take a shower in the same room with other officials because my back was broken out. My skin was scaly, I was not well; besides, I lacked optimism. Then I started using Fleischmann's Yeast. The results were remarkable. My appetite became normal, all traces of eruptions on my back disappeared, and I feel like a new man. It is a pleasure now to associate with other men in the locker room or club." Coach William B. Morgan, Senior High School, Sauk Centre, Minn.

Hotel Name Suggested

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—I have noticed from time to time in your esteemed journal letters suggesting a name for the new Hotel. I do not know whether this is by request of the Hotel Company or not, but as the letters have been received and published, I presume that a name for the Hotel has not yet been decided upon. Consequently may I be permitted to suggest to the Hotel Company to name their new building the Avalon Hotel.

It seems to me to call the new hotel the Royal Newfoundland would mean that they would be only one hotel in Newfoundland, and from what is expected of the tourist traffic in the future, we will have to have several such buildings. Consequently we will have to have several names as you would not be able to call all of them Royal Newfoundland Hotels. Trusting this suggestion will meet with the approval of the Hotel Company, I remain.

Yours truly, AVALONIA. St. John's, Oct. 2, 1925.

Things to Remember

Mildew can be removed from leather by rubbing vaseline well in, and leaving for a time before rubbing off. To dry a damp cupboard or pantry put a box of quicklime into it, and in a few days the moisture will be absorbed. A teaspoonful of kitchen salt and half a pint of ox-gill in a pail of hot water is a cleanser and restorer of a faded carpet. Brush of beat it well first; the solution will remove grease-spots and dirt, and restore the color. Boots and shoes not in use can be kept soft and supple by rubbing in castor oil. Leave it until the footwear comes into action again, and there will be no hardened or dried-up leather to deal with.

Fill a burnt saucepan with salt and water, and leave it until next day; bring slowly to boiling point, and the removal of the burnt particles is an easy matter then. Don't use soda.

A casserole will stand much more heat set on a kitchen range than on a gas stove, therefore when using it on the latter put an asbestos mat under it to prevent cracking.

Baby Sleeps Well and Enjoys his Food now!

Mothers are saved a world of worry over babies' feeding difficulties and teething pains, promptly by giving Woodward's Gripe Water. Read the experience of Mrs. J. J. Connor, 7, Willard Grove, Liverpool:—

"My baby suffered greatly with indigestion from birth till three months of age. His digestion was so bad he would scream after every feed. Since using Woodward's Gripe Water he sleeps better and enjoys his food better than he ever did, and has also progressed in weight and is a happier baby altogether."

Woodward's Gripe Water instantly relieves baby's indigestion, colic and teething pains, promptly sound sleep and protects against diarrhoea. It is also a valuable remedy for internal pains and stomach disorders in older children and adults. It is pleasant to take and perfectly free from opiate.

WOODWARD'S Gripe Water KEEPS BABY WELL

Mothers Treat Colds The New "Direct" Way

No Longer Necessary to "Dose" Children With Internal Medicines to Break Colds.

Children's digestions are easily upset by too much "dosing." Vicks VapoRub being externally applied, does not upset little stomachs.

At the first sign of croup, sore throat, or any other cold trouble, apply Vicks freely. There is nothing to swallow—you just "rub it on."

British News Notes

EDINBURGH'S WAR MEMORIAL.

London, Eng. Sept. (Canadian Press).—The Memorial on Edinburgh Castle Rock is steadily taking shape under the direction of the Duke of Atholl's committee and the architect, Sir Robert Lorimer.

The design consists of the conversion of the old disused barrack building known as "Billings Building" into a gallery of honor, and the erection of a shrine abutting the north side of this old building.

The great arch, nearly 30 feet high, that leads from the gallery into the shrine—the work of a young Edinburgh sculptor, Pilkington Jackson—is with its sculpture and carving already complete. The shrine is to contain a series of seven stained glass windows—each measuring about three feet wide by 16 feet high. In the naval window the subjects are destroyers, a camouflaged transport, the deck of a battleship and submarines. The Air Force window shows aeroplanes, airships, seaplanes and kite balloons.

It is hoped that if the present rate of progress is maintained the structure work will be completed in the autumn of 1926.

HAIG AND VETERANS' LEAGUE. London, Eng. Sept. (Canadian Press by Mail).—In view of the difficulties experienced in this country in amalgamating the ex-Servicemen's Associations, says Truth, Lord Haig is to be congratulated upon his success in bringing about the Canadian League of Veterans, which hopes to bring into one organization all the ex-servicemen's associations and societies in Canada.

I am afraid, however, continues Truth, that difficulties will be experienced unless politics are rightly excluded. It has hitherto been found almost impossible to exclude political influences from Canadian military organizations, and to run the defence forces with a view to efficiency only. If that cannot be done with men actually serving, it will not be more easy with those who have retired into private life.

CORONERS' VERDICT. London, Eng. Sept. (Canadian Press by Mail).—An inquest on a jag was held at Llandudno, the boat on the jag, which was washed ashore, being identified by a resident as one worn by her husband who disappeared two years ago. The jury found "the leg was a vital part of the body of John Roberts, and that the man was dead."

TERRITORIAL RECRUITING SLOW. London, Eng. Sept. (Canadian Press by Mail).—Recruiting figures, while more satisfactory, are still short of what is desired by the Territorial Association and the War Office. The Regular Army is receiving practically all the recruits it wants for all branches, but the ranks of the Territorials fill slowly. To the Northumbrian Division—comprising the east and north ridings of Yorkshire and the counties of Northumberland and Durham, there falls the distinction of requiring fewer officers and men to complete its peace footing, than any of the fourteen divisions into which the Territorial Force is divided.

ANIMALS AND THEIR GHOSTS. London, Eng. Sept. (Canadian Press by Mail).—"We have seen ghosts of animals in this house and we have seen our cats see apparitions and rear up at them." Rev. C. L. Tweedale, vicar of Weston, who has been called "the psychic parson" professing a belief in the survival of animals after death, based on apparitions he has seen.

Mr. Tweedale gave some experiences on "his word of honor as a gentleman and a minister." He said his wife and mother had seen a white dog in a cupboard. "It was my aunt's dog," he said.

"Twice an apparition of my aunt, accompanied by that of a large bird, appeared, and struck a gong in the hall. Once the apparition of the white dog bounded into the gong and made a sound. And it sprang at my wife and caused her to break a lamp she was carrying. The apparition of my aunt spoke to us in a tremendously loud voice which rang through the house." Mr. Tweedale has a number of "spirit photographs" of his wife, himself and his son, which show dim figures and "spirit faces."

SIMPLICITY IN SCIENTIFIC LANGUAGE. London, Eng. Sept. (Canadian Press by Mail).—Sir Oliver Lodge made a plea for simpler language in dealing with scientific subjects, to the British Association for the Advancement of Science at Southampton. He thought the most obscure subjects could be discussed in plain English, and appealed, particularly to botanists, who were said to be the most prolific colners of troublesome names.

DEVELOPMENT OF FLYING SHIPS. London, Eng. Sept. (Canadian Press by Mail).—If a flying boat of fifty tons weight has not been developed within the next ten years, progress will have been inordinately slow, Oliver Simmonds told the engineering section of the British Association for the Advancement of Science at Southampton. Such a machine would have a body of about six thousand square feet wing space and a span of 220 feet. It would accommodate 100 persons, would fly at more than 100 knots an hour and would travel up to 1,500 miles without alighting. Such a boat would be able to fly from Europe to America with only one stop, at the Azores, in 36 hours or less.

Kitchen Efficiency
(By A COOKERY EXPERT)

When Making Mustard—If mustard is made with milk instead of water it will prevent the spoon from turning black. Of course mustard made in this way will not keep very long.

When Making Breadcrumbs—Try putting the bread, previously dried in the oven, through the mincing machine. This is a very quick and easy way of making breadcrumbs.

When Belling Potatoes—If the salt is not added till the potatoes are nearly cooked it will help to make them dry and floury. To whiten potatoes, especially old ones, a teaspoonful of vinegar should be added just before they are cooked.

When Making Dripping Cakes—A teaspoonful of lemon juice added to the rest of the ingredients will completely counteract the flavour of the dripping.

When Making Fruit Tarts—A straw placed through a hole in the centre of the tart will prevent the juice from boiling over.

When Making Pastry—Do not use baking powder in pastry that has to be kept for any length of time, but increase the quantity of fat, which will prevent it from becoming too dry.

When Skinning Sausages—Immerse them in cold water for a minute. The skins will then be quite easy to remove.

Hints for Your Home
TROUBLE SAVING TIPS.

Soda water used with any good tooth paste is much better than tap water. The teeth become whiter, and a sensation of thorough cleanliness is felt in the gums, tongue, and throat.

Rub salt on silver, china, or earthenware that has become stained by eggs, tea, or burns, and the stains will disappear.

Stains caused by sea water can be removed from brown leather shoes by rubbing them with a mixture of milk and soda. Dissolve a large piece of common soda in a cupful of hot milk, and rub this solution well into the leather. Afterwards polish with a good shoe cream.

To keep a loaf fresh for as long as possible, cut in the centre and use from each side. By placing the two cut edges together and wrapping in a clean cloth, they will keep fresh and moist.

Save old stiff linen collars. Boil the starch out, then use them as rubbers for polishing metal taps.

New blind cords are often stiff and difficult to heat securely. They may be made quite pliable by being rubbed with a piece of soap.

Before frying bacon, soak it in water for three or four minutes. This will prevent the fat from running and will make the bacon go farther.

Put salt in the water when washing coloured clothes, and the colours will neither run nor fade.

Tar stains can be removed by rubbing gently with benzine. When the darker stain has disappeared rub harder with a clean pad until all is removed.

To make coal last longer, dissolve a handful of washing soda in a gallon of water and throw the liquid over the coal when you get it in a fresh supply. When trying, if a saucepan lid is placed over the frying-pan and the steam kept in, the contents are cooked more quickly and cleanly.

Frying-pans should be wiped perfectly clean with soft paper immediately after use.

To keep potatoes white, do not use the saucepan in which they are boiled for any other purpose.

New Store Features Crisco

"Here is a store of wonderment. From every land has come a prize, Rich spices from the Orient. And fruit that knew Italian Skies."

Stocked to the eaves with a bountiful variety of high class groceries, fruits and vegetables, the new store of Mrs. W. Gaze Co. Ltd., threw open its doors to the public yesterday. The store was formerly Bishop & Son's grocery, and being centrally located, will undoubtedly cater to a large trade. Mrs. Gaze, who made hosts of friends during his many years at Steer Bros., possesses the necessary experience to conduct an up-to-date grocery, and that the new business will succeed, there is no doubt. Mr. James Edwards, formerly of the Royal Stores, will be associated with Mrs. Gaze, and a most competent and courteous staff will wait upon the patrons of this new grocery. An outstanding feature of the store, is the splendid and punctual delivery system that has been inaugurated. As might naturally be expected, one of the first items to be selected for this up-to-date grocery, was CRISCO, the pure vegetable shortening so highly recommended in all grocery and delicatessen stores all over the world.

WHY SUFFER

When CHIROPRACTIC has such a remarkable record for getting sick people well? If you are complaining of any ailment and cannot get relief by your present method of treatment, do not hesitate to employ CHIROPRACTIC as your salvation. Throw all prejudice to the winds, you are the one that is suffering, not your supposed friends who may try to influence you away from the blessings that you will find in CHIROPRACTIC. For once use a little COMMON SENSE; you were given a mind to think in logic terms, so when you find that your ailment is not responding to your efforts to get well, have CHIROPRACTIC to lift you out of the rut. Get your spine examined by a COMPETENT CHIROPRACTOR, he will locate and adjust the displaced vertebrae (one of the 24 bones of the spine) that is pressing on the nerves, stopping the flow of MENTAL IMPULSES (life force) from the BRAIN over the nerves to the part of the body affected. Then NATURE, LIFE, FORCE, the only healer of human ills, will have a chance to rebuild your body back to normal health, of which all mankind is entitled to. My slogan is: YOU CAN GET WELL and I CAN HELP YOU. If there is one spark of life within your body there is hope. So NOW, not to-morrow, embrace CHIROPRACTIC as your method to regain your health, and always KEEP SMILING, health will do it. Consultation free.

Jackie Coogan is Just Born Actor

FATHER OFFERS MAKING "RAG MAN" SCENE AS EXAMPLE.

There's a lot of argument about acting on the screen and acting on the stage—which is the finer art? "Acting is good," says Jack Coogan, Sr., "but it is good on the stage or on the screen. It is an art. As to whether it is acting is a matter to be decided only by individual cases."

In "The Rag Man," Jackie's latest picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Palace, which is coming Monday to the Nickel Theatre, there is a scene in which Jackie, as Tim Kelly, watches a woman round the corner into heavy traffic and sees how it is nearly run over by a rapidly moving and heavily laden truck.

As the picture is shown to Jackie's millions of admirers, the entire sequence of events follows in logical order. The beholder sees the accident, just as Tim is supposed to see it. He shudders with Tim's terror and rejoices with Tim's relief when the danger is over. But there are in any audience who react on the amazing art of little Jackie Coogan, whose performance of shock, horror, relief and dubious heroism was accomplished utterly unaided by anything the picture-makers saw. When the look of horror spreads the corner at the prospect of the limousine, there was nothing really to excite him except a picture of abandoned "sets" on the old Metro lot; when the succession of reactions were revealed upon the little boy's face, he had nothing except his imagination to suggest them.

It all comes from an inner consciousness that unconsciously tells Jackie how to respond to all the emotions. Jackie conjures in his imagination the facts and then responds to them with the historic skill of a mature genius.

Our Dumb Animals

REPORT OF THE CHIEF AGENT FOR WEEK ENDING: OCT. 2ND.

Attended to the landing of 80 head of cattle from the S. S. Hethpool. The cattle were all in good condition; and well cared for. This is the Hethpool's first trip to Nfld. The cattle are all carried between decks and are well protected from the weather. Also attended to two car-loads of cattle, at the Railway Station, and two sales of cattle at the Abattoir Co. Received a call to the West End by a driver who had run over a dog. He thought that something might be done for the animal but it's injuries were so bad that it had to be put to death. Sent in two dogs for treatment, one suffering from a very bad hoof, one with a broken leg, and the other had a broken skull. Received several calls from people residing on Pleasant Street, their poultry being destroyed by cats. One woman of Beaumont Street lost thirty chickens. The owner of the cat refused to have it put to death. I also had a report of dogs who are under age, being around the streets and killing white cattle are being killed. For this offence there is a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars. I should also like to call the attention of some butchers who are just starting business "to this section of the Act" viz: No animal should be slaughtered within the sight or hearing of other animals awaiting slaughter. I have attended to about thirty calls during the week. I should also like to state that the annual subscriptions, of members and lovers of dumb animals are now due and will be gratefully received by the secretary.

JONAS BARTER, Chief Agent.

Do you want a round trip to New York for two or $1000? Round trip to Halifax for two or $250? Trip to Corner Brook or $100? Seventy Five Dollars, Fifty Dollars, Twenty Five Dollars? See ad. this issue.—oct. 31, 1925

Broken Neck Recovery

Mr. Herbert Gray, the son of a Hilton-le-Moor (Lincs) farmer, has been successfully treated at Lincoln Hospital for a broken neck, which he received through a heavy fall from steps leading to a granary some months ago. The local doctor's examination at the time revealed that the vertebrae of the neck had been dislocated. Exceptional precautions were taken to guard against movement when he was taken to Lincoln for treatment as it was realized that a single jolt meant instant death. The special treatment resulted in a very gradual improvement, and the news of his recovery brought doctors from London and other parts of the country to see him.
