BATTLEFORD, May 27.—There is quite a fine argument between Poundmaker and Colonel Otter. The wily Cree chief is trying to make out that Otter attacked him unjustly. He says that he was on his own reserve, that he was making war with nobody, that his people had taken little part in the raids and outrages, that he had done his best to preserve peace, that he had refused the offers of Riel to join him on the North Saskatchewan, that he had kept his young men in check at great personal risk, and that if Otter had left him alone there would have been no breach of the peace. Riel, on the other hand, stated that owing to Otter having licked Pound

But now the realities of their position, stare them in the face. They have lost all. Their families are destitute, their houses looted and many of them burged; their cattle killed and their horses taken. The season is so far advanced that no crop can be raised this year, and a severe winter is ahead of them. There will be terrible suffering yet. I can't say I feel sorry for them. I have ever believed in punishment (properly administered) and their condition now is punishment complassion for them. If you had seen the battlefield you would not have much compassion for them. Such a concentration of shrill tin whistle, bad bass horn, tremendous drum pounding and goas-you-please singing was never before heard on any other bloodless field. Fortunately the parade ended without any of its participants being marched off in irons to the asylum. Subsequently there were lacrosse matches, games and other sports. But all the while the boys were not forgetful of their comrades at Battleford. The following despatch was wired:

THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 128, 1885

This is what we are coming to in Canada and Sir John "missed it" badly in not going straight for it in his franchise bill this year. He complains that Mr. Mowat "atole his thunder," by passing a bill the of many of the same, or a constantly immain features of which were taken from proving sort. For having no heads and the dominion bill, the latter having been already before the country in 1883 and 1884. In other words, the Ontario premier, knowing what Sir John's bill was or was to be, made his own just a little more liberal, and so got credit that was not really his due. So Sir John says, and we may reasonably enough suppose that the expectation of the dominion bill being passed this year had much to do with causing the Ontario bill to be hurried forward. But. seeing all this, why did not Sir John get ahead of Mr. Mowat by promptly amend. liberal than the Ontario one? Had he high and dry. But how can a conservative manhood suffrage, it may be asked? The answer must be that he may as well do it soon as late; better get the credit of taking the lead and "doing it up brown." than incur the reproach of opposing it and word of explanation, broke.

It goes to confirm this view of the matter that the Montreal Gazette, which is for the east the chief newspaper exponent of wanted, but as something that must come before many years. Between dominion and provincial voting qualifications respectively the Gazette draws this very proper distinction—that whereas the dominion parliament has control of personal rights, the provincial assemblies have charge of the rights of property. Approperty qualification for electors is, therefore, really more necessary, or at least more defensible, for the latter than for the former. Exactly the contrary idea prevails, however; it is apopular mistake that the qualification for dominion voters is or should be higher than for provincial voters. This is all wrong, the truth being that, as far as property qualification goes, the municinal feature than for the former are property of the same will be found in another column. From the statement submitted, it appears that the profits for the year end deducting charges of management, etc., and making full provision for all bad and douttful debts, as far as property qualification goes, the municipal feature for the latter than for provincial voters. This is all wrong, the truth being that, as far as property qualification goes, the municipal feature for the latter than for provincial voters. This is all wrong, the truth being that, as far as property qualification goes, the municipal feature for the latter than for provincial voters. This is all wrong, the truth being that, as far as property qualification goes, the municipal feature for the latter dealing and the former. Exactly the contrary idea prevails, however; it is apopular mistake that the profits for the year and a report was far as property qualification goes, the municipal feature for the same will be found in another column. From the statement submitted, it appears that the profits for the year end deducting charges of framement leading and the form of the form of the former. Exactly the contrary idea provincial assemblies have even the dark far as moved by Mr. Beydand and Directors for their services during the year.

The statement submitted, it ap of manhood suffrage in dominion elections. that, as far as property qualification goes, the municipal franchise should be the highest of all, the provincial coming next, and that for the dominion being the lowest. On this point the Gazette says:

having been driven to it at last.

Taxation is the true basis of the suffrage. Every man who contributes to the cost of government ought to exercise a vote, and if the sources of revenue of the federal and trovincial governments are considered the character of the franchise which ought to prevail will be best understood. The dominion derives its income from customs and inland revenue duties, and toward this income every chizen contributes. The provinces derive their revenue from the federal subsidy, licenses, crown lands and law stamus, and toward that revenue the people, as a people, do not contribute one dollar excepting through the medium of the federal treasury. But the provincial legislatures are charged with distinct powers and privileges; they have exclusive jurisdiction in matters of civil rights and rights in property and of education; until, therefore, direct taxation is had, we see much force in the contention that the franchise for the provincial legislature should be somewhat restricted and based upon property. With the dominion it is different. Every citizen is a taxpayer and contributes to the maintenance of the central government, and may fairly ask that he shall be given a voice in the control of its administration. Taxation is the true basis of the suffra

And our contemporary thus concludes: And our contemporary thus concludes:

Manhood suffrage, with registration, need not be dreaded by any class of people. It will come sooner or later, and judging by the liberality of the bill now before parliament, is already well-nigh reached. The conservative party in two provinces is formally committed too manhood suffrage, and in the direction thus indicated the whole party must ere many years follow. The franchise bill now before parliament is a long step toward it: as far as, having regard to the recent expression of opinion by the provincial legislature, it would be proper to go at this time. The discussion will have an educational influence which will bear fruit before many years.

Had Sir John boldly pronounced for manhood suffrage this year, he would have manhood suffrage this year he would have been first in the race to-day, with Mr. Mowat nowhere. Hanging back on this question has cost him a good deal of popuarity, and has inflicted upon his governsome very important and necessary measures delayed in consequence. But Mr. Mowat does not appear to much advantage in the franchise business, after all. Some time back he gave votes to farmers' sons, but it was like drawing teeth to

He con. cludes by asking the temperance people what they are going to do about it?

A New Kind of Sheep. FREAK OF NATURE.—Recently a ewe belonging to Mr. Henry Lock, of Scugog, gave birth to three lambs. Two of them were perfect in form, but the other had no head and only very short fore legs. A clump of long wool had grown out where the head should have been, and, strange to say there were strong indications for supposing that it had lived for a while after birth, although dead when found.

We are pleased to place before our readers this morning the above item from the Port Perry Standard, a paper published every Thursday by Mr. Mundy, conseevery Thursday by Mr. Mundy, consequently a bi-weekly journal.

This lamb with no head and with very short fore-legs may be but the fore-runner of many of the same, or a constantly improving sert. For having no heads and living just by absorption from the atmosphere no food will be needed, and the cost of raising lamb for the market will be reof raising lamb for the market will be reduced to almost nil.

And the fact of the fore legs being shorter than usual may be taken as an indication that more attention will be paid to the development of the hindquarters; in fact, as there will be no head all the quarters will be sold as hindquarters, and justly so. This, we must remark, will be better by half than the present arrangement. Stock farming will receive a great im.

The Channel Tunnel. Although we are of opinion that this scheme to connect England and the continent of Europe and afford an all-rail route between London and Paris, will be ultimately accomplished, yet the feeling in England appears, at present, to be strongly against it. Sir Edward Watkin's motion in the house of commons to read the channel tunnel bill a second time was voted down. Sir Edward argued that as the enterprise was one for extending the British empire to mid-channel it ought therefore to be carried out at the national expense; and the London Times remarks Tradish coolers are the trade of the coolers and Exchange Rebate on Bills Dischange Rebate On Bills Disc that English coalowners and eronauts might put forth an equally sound claim upon the national purse on the ground that they extend the British empire toward the centre and the dog-star. But neither the fascinating idea of an under-ground extension of the empire, with Sir E. Watkin as viceroy, nor the advantage of having two holes fourteen feet wide for the nation to burrow in, in case of invasion. could induce the house of commons to pass the second reading of the bill.

From Manitoba we hear that notwithstanding all the injury done by the ment a long and troublesome session, with rebellion farmers there are away ahead with their spring work, and harvest prospects are considered good—that is, as far as appears thus early in the season.

Rewards For the Brave. Editor World: A few days ago a letter get him to consent to anything like a appeared in The World advocating a money parallel extension of the franchise in grant from parliament to Gen. Middleton cities and towns. And his bill of this as a recognition of his services in suppresscities and towns. And his bill of this year, not to come into force till the first of January next, is full of finical and farcical distinctions as if intended to make lawyers and judges as necessary as posible to explain it. There are far too many absurd and needless restrictions. The better opportunity, therefore, was there for Sir John to have put the Ontario measure into the shade by bringing forward a far more liberal one. And, from what the Gazette says, it may be conjectured that there are some influential supporters of his who take just this view of it, and who wish now that something like Hon. Peter Mitchell's plan of tax-paying manhood suffrage had been adopted from the start, Still, there is no saying yet how far Sir John may go with his bill ere he be done with it.

Still, there is no saying yet how far Sir John may go with his bill ere he be done with it.

The Scott Act Not Being Enforced.

We see by the Parry Sound paper called the North Star that the Scott act is not proving a success in that district. The Ontario government officials say their jurisdiction does not cover it, and the dominion ones do not seem anxious to enforce it, so that the North Star is led to conclude: "We will have free trade in whisky in this district, for a time at least." It contends further that it supleast." It contends further that it sup- Guelph, May 26, 1885.

WHOLES ALE MARKET REVIEW OF TORONTO.

From the Merchant of this month.

Navigation is open, and money is expected to circulate more freely as the result of a freer movement of produce, but shipments thus far have been small, and wholesale trade continues quiet. The elimination of the possibility of a foreign war from the business status brings us back to the fundamental conditions previously existing. A large part of the advance in the price of grain has naturally disappeared, but there is liftle danger that values will again sink as low as they have been, at least not until the question of the next crop is settled. The been, at least not until the question of the next crop is settled. The volume of business is generally equal to that of the like period fast year, but profits are in some cases smaller. Owing to the backward weather, the demand for summer goods has been slow, but collections cannot be altered yet, however.

Grain and Produce Markets by Telegraph.

NEW YORK. May 27.—Cotton weak; midling uplands 10 1-66. Orleans 11½c. Flour-Receipts 29,000 brls., heavy; sales 9000 brls.; thous $3.50 to $4.20; extra Ohio and St. Louis $3.50 to $4.20; extra Ohio and St. Louis $3.50 to $4.20; extra Ohio and St.

tions from the interior are generally satisfactory. The situation may be called one of healthful soundness rather than of irregular growth; no particular "boom" is expected to characterize the business of 1885, which probably will rather be of steady development, with average results. This undoubtedly is better for the trade of the country than oscillating periods of feverish presperity and depression.

Breadstuffs.—Since the prospect of peace between the contanding nations in Europe became evident, the local flour and grain market has ruled very dull, with prices declining. Flour merchants, bakers and others had some weeks ago bought large stocks on speculation, and are now forced to work off these surplus quantities, while millers and wholesale dealers, in the absence of demand, are piling up stocks. There is, however, little business being done in either flour or grain; holders are willing to make concessions, but regular buyers hold off and there is no speculation whatever. The future course of the market will depend very largely upon the crep prospects, pend very largely upon the crep prospects, which are being closely watched; a June frost would, doubtless, check the decline, and cause a turn upward. In the absence of cuchable transactions. We can only refer and cause a turn upward. In the absence of quotable transactions, we can only refer to the revised table of quotations on another page. Stocks of grain in store are 307,325 bushels, compared with 411,237 bushels a week ago.

Boots and Shoes.—Business is not specially active, but the older, larger manufacturers are as busy as usual at this period, executing sorting-up orders received per travelers now out. Stocks are not excessive, either at wholesale or retail, and country merchants first purretail, and country merchants' first pur-chases this season being rather small, they are compelled to place rather larger sorting up orders than usual. There are no specia up orders than usual. There are no special features to note; remittances are reported quite satisfactory for the time of year, and the price list remains unchanged.

Drugs and Chemicals.—The demand for all lines of goods is reported only moderate, and with no quotable change in the price list, there is little of interest to chronicle. In heavy chemicals there is some prospect of a decline in values owing to the larger receipts expected now that navigation has reopened.

Dry Goods.—This staple branch of trade, which depends more largely upon the Dry Goods.—This staple branch of trade, which depends more largely upon the weather than any other, perhaps, rules generally quiet. There has been a lack of spirit or animation in business at both retail and wholesale; during the last few days of warmer sunshine, however, retailers have realized an improvement, but too late, doubtless, to recover the lost portion of their usual spring trade. The sorting up demand is not large, and already travelers are calling for their fall samples. Fancy goods and millinery are commencing to move more freely. Canadian cottons are again reported slightly easier, as the mills are overtaking their orders for staples generally. Payments fair, and expected steadily to improve.

to improve.

Groceries.—The business generally is in quiet and firm, without change in values. Low grades are becoming scarcer every day, and low-priced Congous and Young Hysons are much wanted. Fruits quiet and firm also, for all kinds; good qualities are wanted, but we note no change in prices. Tobaccos active; country merchants buying rather freely, owing to the auticipated increase of duty, which would of course advance prices. Tapiona and sago have elightly advanced, in view of impending scarcity brought on by drouth; there is an advance here of $\overline{g}$c, on the cost of importation. Coffees, rice, spices, etc., steady and unchanged. Remittances fairly satisfactory.

Hardware and Iron.—Trade gradually

fairly satisfactory.

Hardware and Iron.—Trade gradually improves as the season advances, but the market presents no special features. Shelf in hardware and harvest tools are moving out more freely, and the trade expect to be quite busy next mon'h. Spades and shovels are being called for at the moment, and a good many tin plates are sold for fall delivery. Prices generally steady and unchanged, but in certain lines of heavy goods they favor buyers, and importers still complain of the absence of profits. Window glass and zinc rule firmer, owing to the loss per the wrecked steamer Helvetia from Antwerp. Payments fairly good, renewals not being as frequent this season as usual.

Hides and Skins, Tallow, etc.—The supply of hides is fair for the time of year, and continues about equal to the wants of dealers, while prices remain steady and unchanged. The local opposition referred to at our last reference still compels the trade to sell cured and inspected hides at a loss; butchers are receiving $4c. for No. 1, and car lots of cured hides have changed hands at that figure. Lambakins have advanced 5c. this week, and now command 25c. The season for woolskins is about over, but the few coming in find ready sale at about $1 and $1.40 each. Calfakins are plentiful, but all offering are readily taken at 13c. for green, and 15c. for cured No. 1. Tallow quiet, steady and unchanged for both kinds.

Leather.—This market continues quiet and featureless. Orders are reported to be

No. 1. Tallow quiet, steady and unchanged for both kinds.

Leather.—This market continues quiet and featureless. Orders are reported to be of a hand-to-mouth character throughout, yet the volume of business, while very steady from mouth to mouth, generally compares favorably with what it was at like periods in other years. Harness leather has moved off rather more freely since the spring opened, but the demand thus far has not developed anything special. Prices rule remarkably steady, and payments fulfil expectations.

Provisions.—Business reported fair for the time of year, and remittances improving. The butter market is demoralized; stocks held are almost entirely on consignment, and are offered at any price without finding buyers. Choice old butter is nominally worth 15c., but none to be had; sales of common to inferior have been made this week at from 5c. to 10c. per lb. Very little, if any, new butter has come in by rail yet; small lots of new rolls have sold at 10c., but no tubs yet offering. Cheese—A fair jobbing demand exists, at about 11c. for fine, and 8c. to 9c. for inferior to common qualities. It is too early to anticipate the market.

just exactly how it had happened, it would seem that the explanation, confession, whatever it was, had only been wrung from her under the fear of his confinding to ethers what he knew himself. Was he ligely to submit to the loss of the racquet without s word? He had let her see how much he knew for her own sake, hoping, no doubt, that it would draw her into returning it before he openly asked for it back again or applied to others.

He had been at the match, too; his black sling and gray clothes stood out among the flannel suits; but he had never once come near her. At luncheon he had studiously avoided looking at her, as indeed she had avoided looking at him, and when by inada avoided looking at him, and when by inada avoided from the content of the corns.

She let herself out through the same glass door at which she had stood looking into the garden yesterday. She went rapidly along a gravel path, over a plot of dripping grass, and now here was the abrubbery. She had on thin shoes, but ahe plunged in among the soft earth, and fought her way through the laurels and bays and hollies—until at last she stood beneath her own window. Yes, it was just as she thought. Alas! there lay the racquet.

Last fall McGill commenced to look after the higher education of ladies, to look after it so sharply that the ladies and expectant students never managed to become even in the remotest degree acquainted with each other. The disappointment was great and afflicted the masculines so acutely that they prepared themselves for examinatin half-heartedly. They were even content that heartedly. They were even content that the ladies should bear away all the credit the ladies should bear away all the credit of the contest. Only the tennis players retained a degree of hopefulness, and this sping they were observed mowing and marking out their courts with unusual care. A large number of recruits joined the ciub and commercial quotations showed a great boom in tennis requisites. This was all in preparation for a step in coeducation. The ladies were invited to foin the club and accepted the invitation; the fata interposed. The authorities were join the club and accepted the invitation; but fate interposed. The authorities were on the alert and issued a command that ladies and gentlemen should not play tennis together, i.e. not on the McGill grounds. Diplomacy was resorted to, but all the pour parlers would not to make the don's swerve a bair's breadth from their position. The ladies were indifferent; they wanted to play tennis. So they formed a club of their cwn. Then it occurred to the austere wearers of scarlet gowns that perhaps the two clubs might by accident play at the same time or even arrange matches. The

Here you will find our business men discussing the state of trade over "splits" denouncing the hard times and the causes that lead thereto, and while talking about cutting, down expenses, recklessly fling down a half dollar, and with the remark "What will you have?" This is repeated by every one in the crowd, and when they finally separate they seek their respective stores or offices and again denounce the stringency in the money market.

A prominent merchant, who is not an abstainer, told The World yesterday that and after business hours—are congregated chair and a committee on ways and mean catch up with pressing business. It may be mentioned that the probable reason for default on the part of so many of the city fathers was that they were at Lieut.
