WEEK OF PRAYER

Annual Union Services Being Held This Week in Town Churches

The annual week of prayer is being observed by the usual union services of the different congregations in this town in keeping with the custom prevailing all over the land. The services opened in the Baptist church on Monday evening Mr. Kinley, who is supplying for that congregation presiding. Rev. W. A. Thomson gave an address on "Causes for Humiliation and Gratitude."

On Tuesday evening the meeting was held in the Methodist Church the principal speaker being Rev. Dr. Carr on "The Church Universal."

Last evening the meeting was held in the Presbyterian church, when Mr. Kinley gave an address.

The meetings are largely attended and interesting.

The series will be continued in the Baptist Church this evening and in the Methodist church to-morrow evening.

TO MEET BODY AT HALIFAX

Montreal Mayor and Other Officials will Honor Late Minister

MONTREAL, Jan. 9.—Montreal will send a committee from the City Council to meet the steamer Dominion when it arrives at Halifax with the remains of the late Hon. Raymond Prefontaine and accompany the funeral train to Montreal. The committee will be composed of acting Mayor Vallieres, Aids, Liviere and Sadler, City Clerk, Senator David and Assistant City Clerk Bauset. In all probability the other public bodies will send delegates and other aldermen and citizens will accompany them.

NOUVELLE MUNICIPAL ELECTION RETURNS.

At a meeting of the electors of the Municipality of Nouvelle and Shoobred, held on Monday the 8th inst, Messrs Pierre Landry and Francis Lynch were re-elected for the third term of office as councillors.

Mr. Lynch having been elected by acclamation and Mr. Landry by a majority of 58 votes, on a total vote of 72 votes polled, or better say, Mr Landry received 95 votes and his opponent 7. This way of electing councillors is certainly a great proof of their capacity to fill the important office they are called to fill having stood six years test and being called by such a vote to fill it for a third time. Congratulating the winners and recognizing their past efforts to work for the great benefit of the Township, I beg to remain

ONE WHO VOTED.

Professor Macoun will act as judge in the exhibition of apples for which $37 is offered in prizes.

PRESTON ACQUITTED

St. John Physician Found Not Guilty And Discharged

ST. JOHN, Jan. 10.—Dr. Preston on trial on the charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Miss Edith Clark, has been found not guilty. As the foremen of the jury made the formal announcement yesterday afternoon, the defendant outwardly seemed without concern. He looked even disinterested. The jury retired at 3.20 and returned at 5.07. After receiving the congratulations of his counsel, Dr. Preston left the court room accompanied by his wife.

The closing scenes in court yesterday were not of special interest. In the forenoon Mr. C. N. Skinner addressed the jury on behalf of the prisoner. He said his first argument was that Miss Clark came to her death by reason of the inadequate treatment she received at the hands of Dr. Roberts and Dr. Scammell. In report of this argument, he referred to the evidence showing that it was some days after Dr. Roberts was called in before he even discovered the real cause of her illness; that after he did discover the cause he delayed until the next day before performing an operation, which according to the evidence of reliable physicians was insufficiently and improperly performed; and that for the ten days following until her death she did not receive any antiseptic treatment.

The second argument was that Dr. Preston swore he did not perform any abortion upon Miss Clark, but that he treated her legitimately. This testimony of Dr. Preston was uncontradicted.

The Recorder's third ground was that the deceased had herself tried to commit an illegal act upon herself. The evidence on this point was clear. The jury may be in doubt whether the act she herself attempted, or the improper treatment of Dr. Roberts and Dr. Scammell caused death, but he did not think that in the face of all the facts they could find that Dr. Preston caused her death.

Mr. Jones, followed Mr. Skinner on behalf of the crown. He contended that if Dr. Preston were the cause of Miss Clark's condition when Dr. Roberts and Dr. Scammell were called in, then no matter whether their treatment was proper or improper, if the girl died, which was a fact, the law would hold Dr. Preston responsible. Mr. Jones referred to section 226 of the Criminal Code of Canada in support of this contention.

LUMBER DEAL.

The Richards' Property Transfer Completed

SEVERAL DAYS AGO.

New Company will Build Pulp Mill at Chatham.

FREDERICTON, Jan. 10.—H. H. Gunter and R. W. McLellan who have been in New York on business in connection with the transfer of the Richards' property to the Miramichi Lumber Co., returned home last night by way of St. John.

They announce that the sale was completed several days ago and the new owners are now in charge of the property. The president and manager of the new company is John T. Rutledge of Boiestown and Chas. F. Oak of Bangor is vice-president and treasurer. The stock holders are principally New York and Bangor capitalists.

It is understood that the price paid for the property is in the neighborhood of $600,000. The new concern has acquired all the Richards Company's Miramichi holdings including the mills at Boiestown and Chatham but the old company retains the property on the Restigouche. Mr. Gunter will continue to act as president of the Richards Company. It is understood that the new company will erect, at Chatham, next season a large mill for the preparation of pulp wood for shipment to the American market.

The Miramichi Lumber Co. in addition to purchasing the Richards property have, it is understood, acquired certain riparian fishing rights on the south-west Miramichi belonging to Messrs Charles W. and Harry Beckwith of this city and of the late Henry Phair. The purchase price is in the vicinity of $2,500. The company are not particularly interested in the fishing privileges, their object in making the purchase being to secure control of the shore rights for stream driving purposes.

DR. PRESTON ON THE STAND Says His Treatment Was Legal

ST. JOHN, Jan. 8.—Dr. Edward A. Preston took the stand in his own behalf on Saturday afternoon and swore that he had treated Miss Edith F. Clark, but not for the purpose of bringing on an abortion.

What he had done, he said, was what any reputable physician would have done under similar circumstances. He said he received $25 from Howard Camp.

Dr. Preston also imparted some information dealing with the past relations between Camp and Miss Clark. He swore that on a previous occasion he had been, from a professional standpoint, of service to the deceased.

MISS CLARK'S STATEMENT RULED OUT. In the forenoon, Judge Tuck ruled that the statement of Miss Clark could not be admitted as evidence, and the decision was not unexpected.

DR. ROBERTS OCCUPIED THE STAND for about an hour in the morning session, and for about the same length of time in the afternoon.

DR. PRESTON GAVE EVIDENCE in his own behalf. "It was on Oct. 1," he said, "that Camp came to my office, 45 Sydney street. I think it was Oct. 1, and he said he had got a young lady in trouble.

RIGOROUS WINTER Steamers Arriving Report Boisterous Weather NUMEROUS DISASTERS Storms on Pacific as Well as Atlantic—Many Lives Lost in Shipwrecks

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The Journal of Commerce says: While this season is notable for climatic moderation through out the country, being particularly free from pronounced extremes, it has been one of the most rigorous winters on record at sea.

The Holland-American liner Statendam, from Rotterdam was 11 days making the passage, whereas under normal conditions she would take nine to ten days.

The Warren liner Sagamore arrived at Boston on Wednesday, damaged by the heavy seas. The British steamer Carmania, which left Liverpool last Saturday for New York, was held up by a gale off Queenstown Sunday night and could not get away until Monday forenoon.

During the month of December, including the last week of November, 35 vessels have been reported wrecked. Nineteen of these were steamers. One ship was lost and three barques.

Additional testimony was given. "I was trying he said, to stop the threatened abortion, and Miss Clark came to me off and on until the first of October. She was doing very well indeed."

"You wish," said Judge Tuck, to establish the fact that you never used an instrument on Miss Clark for the purpose of bringing on an abortion."

"Yes," he said, "that Camp came to my office, 45 Sydney street. I think it was Oct. 1, and he said he had got a young lady in trouble. He asked me to look after her. It was in the evening. I asked him what he meant and said I would be glad to do anything that would not be illegal. He said he would send the young lady around, and I said all right, to send her over. I told him the office hours, from 8 to 10, from 1 to 3, and from 6 to 8.

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

COMPULSORY EDUCATION

Announcement has been made that the New Brunswick Education Bill, at the next sitting of the Legislature, introduce a measure of compulsory education. The general announcement is modified by the statement that the measure will be of a local option nature; that is to say, a district or division of local will, by a general vote, decide whether or not it will require all the children resident in that district to attend school from 6 to 14 years of age. The bill is a modified arrangement of this kind will be more readily adopted by the Legislature than a compulsory law for the entire province; but, of course, one effect of such a modified system will be to prepare the people for the general law. Some such scheme as that now proposed was under consideration several years ago, and while it, apparently, was never passed upon formally, the idea met with a good deal of favor. On the other hand, there are many who have not yet been converted, and who maintain that enough is done when schools are provided for all who desire to use them, and that to drag children to them will not have a good result in making them learn. Still, there is strength in the position that the state undertakes the work of education in order to train up good citizens, and that if a third or fourth of the rising generation is not educated, the main object of a state system is defeated. Some thirty odd years ago—when the present system of public education was adopted in New Brunswick—no body supposed that compulsory education would be necessary. The generally accepted idea was that the new system would induce the education of all the children who were of school age, or if it did not do so immediately it would very soon. An entire generation of school children has grown into manhood and womanhood since 1872 or thereabouts, when the public school system became effective, and their children are the scholars of today; but it is not found that the idea of education has taken the strong hold of public sentiment as to justify leaving its satisfactory practice to voluntarism. It is now as it was in the past; many parents are making great sacrifices in order to give their children an education; many are quite indifferent as to whether their offspring are educated or not. Others, requiring the labor of the child for the benefit of the family, are compelled—or believe they are compelled—to postpone to a time that never comes the educational period. For it is pretty certain that with many children, when they have passed the age at which they can enter school, their minds are so set that they never desire for education leaves them. They are either too old to learn, or too shamed-faced to enter classes with children much younger than themselves. For them the golden moment is gone. Many persons must still be perplexed as to the general result of the educational theory of the day. No doubt it is a theory which is not so much concerned with the happiness or success of the individual man or woman as it is with the safety and security of the organized community. It is probably not intended by its designers to have considerable influence and effort in that direction. Of course, if all men and women were good as a result of education, it would not be necessary to raise any question as to the theory of why the state educated people. But it must be plain to every observer of the events of the day that education alone is not sufficient. It no doubt strengthens the good and increases their capacity for well-doing; but it also seems to increase the power and the capacity for evil of those who prefer self to the general good of the community. Those insurance people whose dones have been attracting so much attention in the last few months are not educated men. They might have been much worse than they are if they were not educated. On the other hand, they might not have been presidents, managers and directors of their concerns but for their education. Apparently there is nothing to be done but to put the opportunities in the hands of everyone, and let him work out results for himself. Still the question comes back, Is this what the state wants? Or, at least, is this all that the state wants? Surely not. That it seeks its own security seems to be certain; and it endeavors to secure this by educational systems which it supports and supplements by penal legislation, much of which is calculated to convey the idea that men and women are ever children.

The Grip "Before we can sympathize with others we must have suffered ourselves. No one can realize the suffering attendant upon an attack of the grip, unless he has had the actual experience. There is probably no disease that causes so much physical and mental agony, or which so successfully defies medical aid. All danger from the grip however may be avoided by the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy not one case has ever been reported that resulted in pneumonia or that has not recovered. For sale by all druggists.

Dear Frank—This is to introduce to you Frank White (brother of Grace White). You might put him up to the ropes and give him a hell, though.

Other articles in the pockets were a circular brass check, plain on one side, and on the other bearing the symbol O 23, and containing the letters Vickers, Sons & Maxim, Ltd., Erie, a buckle evidently belonging to a naval uniform; a private un-stamped postal card addressed to "W. Evans, 30 Estelle Road, Gospel Oak, N. W.," and a card bearing the name of "Chas. M. Forshaw, 120 Wymeking Mansions, Elgin avenue, W."

A vaccination certificate was also found, showing that the deceased was a passenger on the Lake Erie on her last trip to St. John. No wounds that would indicate foul play were on the body. The case is possibly one of suicide, though there is little if any evidence of self-destruction.

Dr. McFarland and the following jurymen viewed the body:

Messrs George Moore (foreman), Jas Mills, Albert Taylor, Joseph Semple, Harry Kelly, John Martin and Joseph McAnley.

The remains were taken to the dead house this morning. An inquest will be held on Monday afternoon in the Fairville court house at half past two.

BODY FOUND IN THE WOODS

English Immigrant may have Committed Suicide

The body of a well dressed young man, which maybe that of Frank White an Englishman was found lying near some bushes on the Gypsy Settlement road on Friday afternoon by a party of boys. The boys at once notified Officer Lawson, who in turn sent word to Dr. M. L. McFarland, the coroner, and then drove to the spot where the body was found. The corpse, frozen fast to the ground, lay face downward. Apparently it had been there for about two weeks. The man was evidently about thirty years of age, was muscularly built, five feet ten inches in height. His hair was dark brown. He was clean shaven, save for a light moustache. He was clothed in grey woolen underclothing, a pink striped cotton shirt, with collar attached, blue four-in-hand tie, dark blue trousers, dark coat and heavy double breasted vest. The overcoat was of Raglan make and of large check. The socks were black and the laced boots comparatively new. A small cloth cap was lying close to the body. Apparently the deceased was a man of refinement. Seven dollars and seventy cents were found in an inside pocket, and in another pocket a small memo. book with hard, shining black cover.

In one of the pockets a ten-ounce bottle of salts of lemon bearing the label of Mr. W. C. R. Allan was found. The bottle was half full. A note addressed to Mr. Frank Pike, 66 Kate, Winnipeg, was also found on the body. The note was as follows:

18 Rochester Terrace, N. W.

Dear Frank—This is to introduce to you Frank White (brother of Grace White). You might put him up to the ropes and give him a hell, though.

Other articles in the pockets were a circular brass check, plain on one side, and on the other bearing the symbol O 23, and containing the letters Vickers, Sons & Maxim, Ltd., Erie, a buckle evidently belonging to a naval uniform; a private un-stamped postal card addressed to "W. THE LATE TRIAL.

The trial of a well-known city physician on a serious criminal charge, resulted in his acquittal, a result that—at least in the later days of the trial—was not unexpected. For the people, the Solicitor General presented his case strongly and fairly and without an apparent desire to prejudice the accused. The defence had the advantage of an able lawyer of long practice and well skilled in all the arts which appeal to the feelings, hearts and minds of men. One great advantage came to the prisoner in the course of the trial, and that was the ruling out as evidence of the before-death statement of the girl. That this was a proper ruling seems to be the general opinion of members of the legal profession, and, indeed, it was a ruling in accordance with common sense and with the principles which control in legal matters of this nature. Naturally a statement of this kind is required to be made in such a solemn manner as that it will bear evidence of having been given with a full sense of the responsibility of the person testifying and in absolute consciousness of the certainty of immediate death. There is no way for the defence to cross-examine the dead, or to show from the testator's lips that the statements made were the result of hallucination, or ill-feeling, or error of any kind. The two elements mentioned as necessary in such a statement were wanting in this one. If the statement had been admitted and the prisoner convicted as the result of her admission, the sense of security in the administration of justice would have been weakened. Under all the circumstances of the case, the community will probably feel that no other verdict ought to have been given. And this, if not wholly satisfactory, is somewhat supported by recognition of the fact that the case took such a form as to create a state of opinion which, if it did not reach the jury, was yet active in the public mind. That arose out of the immunity which the real principal in the case secured by the course of matters. Whether the Crown acted wisely or not in this, it is not necessary to consider now; but the effect of its action in putting him upon the stand was to compel the public mind to comparisons, which are odious. And, in the trial of the whole question between all the parties concerned, there can be no doubt what the verdict is. The publicity of the whole matter, some statements and incidents at the trial, the suggestions made by more than one person capable of speaking with authority, that there are more cases of this kind in the community than come to the public notice, are not cheering, but are decidedly unpleasant.

Considerable inconvenience has been caused in the past because funerals scheduled to take place at a certain time are delayed, in some cases, nearly an hour. In summer weather these delays are bad enough, but in the winter when men, with their horses, have to wait an hour in the cold it is a different matter. Only last week a funeral set for two o'clock, did not start until ten minutes to three, and those who had come to pay their last respects to the departed had to wait that length of time in a blinding snowstorm. Surely this can be remedied and the cause of the many complaints which have been made removed.

The Tribune has another fault to find with the School Board. It throws out the hint that somebody on the Board is "crooked" and that the matter of the fuel account should be investigated. He quotes figures from the Annual Report of the schools of New Brunswick, 1905-4, and makes some unfair comparisons. For instance Newcastle has three schools and the School Board of that town expended $47,12 for fuel in 1905-4. But we would inform the Tribune that two of these schools are one-room buildings each heated by a single stove—one burning wood and the other coal, and both of these schools could be heated for one hundred dollars. This would leave three hundred and seventy three dollars to supply the Harkins Academy, which is a building similar in size to the Campbellton Grammar School. And again we would state, for the benefit of the editor of the Tribune that wood can be bought in Newcastle from seventy-five cents to one dollar per cord, cheaper than in Campbellton.

Practical Joke of Campbellton Hotel Man.

A practical joke was recently perpetrated on a well-known Campbellton blacksmith, by the proprietor of an hotel at that place that is very largely patronized by the sporting fraternity from across the line. The hotel man, who yearly imports and raises for sale and for his own use a considerable number of swine recently sold a small pig to the blacksmith and everything went well for some weeks, both parties' pigs increasing in size as the week went around. A short time ago one of the hotel man's swine fell ill and no hopes were entertained for recovery. The wily proprietor of the hotel conceived an idea of turning the table on his friend, the blacksmith. The knight of the anvil was at once interviewed by the hotel man, the qualities of the blacksmith's pig were discussed pro and con and the latter was finally convinced that his pig was not growing fast enough owing to lack of proper nourishment, and having to live a lone life. The hotel man offered to overcome these obstacles by allowing the blacksmith's pig to occupy the same quarters and to be fed the same as his swine. The blacksmith bit, and the pig was at once sent into the hotel quarters. A few days after the hotel man's pig died as was expected and the blacksmith was at once notified that his animal had in some mysterious manner given up the ghost. The hotel man's piggyery now consists of the same number, the blacksmith's sty is empty and the blacksmith is wondering how it all happened—Transcript.

NEWS FARMERS.

Mr. Preston, Emigration Agent for the Dominion Government in London Eng., has stated that any lot of farm peasants from Northern or Middle Europe make the very best agriculturalists. Farmers in New Brunswick who need labour and can accommodate a man and his family with lodging and give him the use of a few acres for his own cultivation, cannot do better than apply to Mr. Preston. He describes them as a class that remain on the land for generations, are thrifty and industrious and willing to work as farm laborers or farm tenants. Applications will be gladly forwarded by the St. John Board of Trade or through this office.

In Scotland the custom still prevails of taking down the window blinds at a death and hanging white sheets across the windows. The custom also prevails in the north of England, and in many families a special sheet reserved for the death chamber is kept for the purpose and often used from generation to generation. In many parts of Scotland, too, it is still customary for the nearest relatives of the deceased to lower the body into the grave and wait by the side until the grave is filled up.—Westminster Gazette.

IT'S THE WISEST THING YOU CAN DO.

It's the wisest thing you can do to have your watch examined at this time of year. If it is in good order we'll let it alone; if it needs repairing we'll do it thoroughly at a moderate price.

Few watches are cleaned and oiled as they should be—once a year. People usually wait until something breaks.

THE ROARIN' GAME.

The Curling Club met Wednesday evening to select rinks to play at early dates on home ice. It has been the practice of this club for the skips to be elected by the Club, and those skips picked their own men. At last meeting a new system was put forth, and a trial is to be given for this season. A Com. of five was elected, who had full power to select all teams to play foreign teams at home and abroad. This plan worked well in several Clubs last year and should give satisfaction here.

Following are the teams selected to play Chatham next week: T. Wran, skip A. D. MacKendrick, skip J. P. Jardine, A. O'Keefe W. Marquis W. Marquis J. T. Stewart J. R. McKenzie H. Wilson, skip D. J. Bruce E. J. Milligan H. Milligan Wm Sprout

The Return of Sherlock Holmes

By A. CONAN DOYLE,

Author of "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," "The Hound of the Baskervilles," "The Sign of the Four," "A Study in Scarlet," Etc.

ILLUSTRATED BY F. D. STEELE

Lestrade shook his head, though it seemed to me that his manner was less absolutely assured than before.

"Well, Mr. Sherlock Holmes, you may look for your tramp, and while you are finding him we will hold on to our man. The future will show which is right. Just notice this point, Mr. Holmes—that so far as we know none of the papers were removed and that the prisoner is the one man in the world who had no reason for removing them, since he was held at law and would come into them in any case."

My friend seemed struck by this remark.

"I don't mean to deny that the evidence is in some ways very strongly in favor of your theory," said he. "I only wish to point out that there are other theories possible. As you say, the future will decide. Good morning! I dare say that in the course of the day I shall drop in at Norwood and see how you are getting on."

When the detective departed my friend rose and made his preparations for the day's work with the alert air of a man who has a congenial task before him.

"My first movement, Watson," said he, "must, as I said, be in the direction of Blackheath."

"And why not Norwood?"

"Because we have in this case one singular incident coming close to the heels of another singular incident. The police are making the mistake of concentrating their attention upon the second because it happens to be the one which is actually criminal. But it is evident to me that the logical way to approach the case is upon the first incident—the curious will, so suddenly made and so unexpectedly altered."

"I don't think you do anything to simplify what follows. No, my dear fellow, I don't think you can help me. There is no prospect of danger, or I should not dream of stirring out without you. I trust that when I see you in the evening I will be able to report that I have been able to do something for this unfortunate youngster who has thrown himself upon my protection."

It was late when my friend returned, and I could see by a glance at his haggard and anxious face that the high hopes with which he had started had not been fulfilled. For an hour he droned away upon his violin, endeavoring to soothe his own ruffled spirits. At last he flung down the instrument and plunged into a detailed account of his misadventures.

"It is all going wrong, Watson—all as wrong as it can go. I kept a bold face before Lestrade, but, upon my soul, I believe that for once the fellow is on the right track and we are on the wrong. All my instincts are one way, and all the facts are the other, and I much fear that British juries have not yet attained that pitch of intelligence when they will give the preference to my theories over Lestrade's facts."

"Did you go to Blackheath?"

"Yes, Watson, I went there, and I found very quickly that the late lamented Oldacre was a pretty considerable backslider. The father was away in search of his son. The mother was at home—a little, stuffy, blue-eyed person, in a tremor of fear and indignation. Of course she would not admit even the possibility of his guilt. But she would not express either surprise or regret over the fate of Oldacre. On the contrary, she spoke of him with such bitterness that she was unconsciously considerably strengthening the case of the police, for, of course, if her son had heard her speak of the man in this fashion it would predispose him toward hatred and violence. He was more like a malignant and cunning ape than a human being," said she, "and he always was, ever since he was a young man."

"You knew him at that time?" said I.

"Yes, I knew him well; in fact, he was an old suitor of mine. Thank heaven that I had the sense to turn away from him and to marry a better, if poorer, man. I was engaged to him, Mr. Holmes, when I heard a shocking story of how he had turned a cat loose in an aviary, and I was so horrified at his brutal cruelty that I would have nothing more to do with him. She rummaged in a bureau, and presently she produced a photograph of a woman shamefully defaced and mutilated with a knife. "That is my own photograph," she said. "He sent it to me in that state, with his curse, upon my wedding morning."

"Well," said I, "at least he has forgiven you now, since he has left all his property to your son."

"Neither my son nor I want anything from Jones Oldacre, dead or alive," she cried, with a proper spirit. "There is a God in heaven, Mr. Holmes, and that same God who has punished the wicked man will show in his own good time that my son's hands are guiltless of his blood."

"Well, I tried one or two leads, but could get at nothing which would help our hypothesis and several points which would make against it. I gave it up at last, and I went to Norwood. "This place, Deep Dene House, is a big modern villa of stinging brick standing back in its own grounds, with a laurel-climbed lawn in front of it. To the right and some distance back from the road was the timber yard which had been the scene of the fire. Here's a rough plan on a leaf of my notebook. This window on the left is the one which opens into Oldacre's room. You can look into it from the road, you see. That is about the only bit of consolation I have had today. Lestrade was not there, but his head constable did the honors. They had just found a great treasure trove. They had spent the morning raking among the ashes of the burned wood pile, and besides the charred organic remains they had secured several discolored metal disks, I examined them with care, and there was no doubt that they were trousseau buttons. I even distinguished that one of them was marked with the name of Oldacre, who was Oldacre's tailor. I then worked the lawn very carefully for signs and traces, but this drought has made everything as hard as iron. Nothing was to be seen save that some body or bundle had been dragged through a low privet hedge which is in a line with the wood pile. All that, of course, fits in with the official theory. "Well, after this fiasco I went into the bedroom and examined that also. The blood stains were very slight, mere smears and discolorations, but undoubtedly fresh. The stick had been removed, but there also the marks were slight. There is no doubt about the stick belonging to our man, and he admits it. Footmarks of both men could be made out on the carpet, but none of any third person, which again is a trick for the other side. My theory is her name—a little, dark, silent person, with suspicious and sidelong eyes. She could tell us something if she would. I am convinced of it. But she was as close as wax. Yes, she had let Mr. McFarlane in at half past 9. She wished her hand had withered before she had done so. She had gone to bed at half past 10. Her room was at the other end of the house and she could hear nothing of what passed. Mr. McFarlane had left his hat and, to the best of her belief, his stick in the hall. She had been awakened by the alarm of fire. Her poor, dear master had certainly been murdered. Had he any enemies? Well, every man had enemies, but Mr. Oldacre kept himself very much to himself and only met people in the way of business. She had seen the buttons and was sure that they belonged to the clothes which he had worn last night. The wood pile was very dry, for it had not rained for a month. It burned like tinder, and by the time she reached the spot nothing could be seen but flames. She and all the freemen smelled the burned flesh from inside it. She knew nothing of the papers nor of Mr. Oldacre's private affairs. "So, my dear Watson, there's my report of a failure. And yet—and yet!"

THE ECLE DRUG CO., WINNIPEG, MAN.

"But we formed ours yesterday, and now it proves to be correct, so you must acknowledge that we have been a little in front of you this time, Mr. Holmes."

"You certainly have the air of some thing unusual having occurred," said Holmes.

Lestrade laughed loudly.

"You don't like being beaten any more than the rest of us do," said he. "A man can't expect always to have it his own way, can he, Dr. Watson? Step this way, if you please, gentlemen, and I think I can convince you once for all that it was John McFarlane who did this crime."

He led us through the passage and out into a dark hall beyond.

"This is where young McFarlane must have come out to get his hat after the crime was done," said he. "Now, look at this." With dramatic audaciousness he struck a match and by its light exposed a stain of blood upon the whitewashed wall. As he held the match nearer I saw that it was more than a stain. It was the well marked print of a thumb.

"Look at that with your magnifying glass, Mr. Holmes."

"Yes, I am doing so."

"You are aware that no two thumb marks are alike?"

"I have heard something of the kind."

"Well, then, will you please compare that print with this wax impression of young McFarlane's right thumb taken by my orders this morning?"

As he held the waxen print close to the blood stain it did not take a magnifying glass to see that the two were undoubtedly from the same thumb. It was evident to me that our unfortunate client was lost.

"That is final," said Lestrade.

"Yes, that is final," I involuntarily echoed.

"It is final," said Holmes.

Something in his tone caught my ear, and I turned to look at him. An extraordinary change had come over his face. It was wrinkling with inward merriment. His two eyes were shining like stars. It seemed to me that he was making desperate efforts to restrain a convulsive attack of laughter.

"Dear me! Dear me!" he said at last. "Well, now, who would have thought it! And how deceptive appearance may be, to be sure! Such a nice young man to look at! It is a lesson to us not to trust our own judgment, is it not, Lestrade?"

"Yes, some of us are a little too much inclined to be cocksure," Mr. Holmes, said Lestrade. The man's insolence was maddening, but we could not resent it.

"What a providential thing that this young man should press his right thumb against the wall in taking his hat from the peg! Such a very natural action, too, if you come to think of it!"

Holmes was outwardly calm, but his whole body gave a wriggle of suppressed excitement as he spoke. "By the way, Lestrade, who made this remarkable discovery?"

"It was the housekeeper, Mrs. Lexington, who drew the night constable's attention to it."

"Where was the night constable?"

"He was on guard in the bedroom where the crime was committed so as to see that nothing was touched."

"But why didn't the police see this mark yesterday?"

"We had no particular reason to make a careful examination of the hall. Besides, it's not in a very prominent place, as you see."

"No, then—one, two, three?"

"There is no doubt that the mark was there yesterday?"

Lestrade looked at Holmes as if he thought he was going out of his mind. I confess that I was myself surprised both at his hilarious manner and at his rather wild observation.

"I don't know whether you think that McFarlane came out of jail in the dead of night in order to strengthen the evidence against himself," said Lestrade. "I leave it to any expert in the world whether that is not the evidence of a humbug."

"It is unquestionably the mark of his thumb," said Lestrade.

"There, that's enough," said Lestrade. "I'm a practical man, Mr. Holmes, and when I have got my evidence I come to my conclusions. If you have anything to say you will find me writing myself in the sitting room."

"No, then—one, two, three?"

"Indeed, Holmes! What is it?"

"Only this, that I know that that mark was not there when I examined the hall yesterday. And now, Watson, let us have a little stroll round in the sunshine."

With a confused brain, but with a heart into which some warmth of hope was returning, I accompanied my friend in a walk round the garden. Holmes took each face of the house in turn and examined it with great interest. He then led the way inside and went over the whole building from basement to attic. Most of the rooms were unfurnished, but none the less Holmes inspected them all minutely. Finally, on the top corridor, which ran outside three unoccupied bedrooms, he again was seized with a spasm of merriment.

"There are really some very unique features about this case, Watson," said he. "I think it is time now that we took our friend Lestrade into our confidence. He has had his little smile at our expense, and perhaps we may do as much by him if my reading of this problem proves to be correct. Yes, yes, I think I see how we should approach it."

The Scotland Yard detective was still writing in the parlor when Holmes interrupted him.

"I understood that you were writing a report of this case," said he.

"So I am."

"Don't you think it may be a little premature? I can't help thinking that your evidence is not complete."

Lestrade knew my friend too well to disregard his words. He laid down his pen and looked curiously at him.

"What do you mean, Mr. Holmes?"

"Only that there is an important witness whom you have not seen."

"Can you produce him?"

"I think I can."

"Then do so."

"I will do my best. How many constables have you?"

"There are three within call."

"Excellent!" said Holmes. "May I accompany you to see that you get men with powerful voices?"

"I have no doubt they are, though I fall to see what their voices have to do with it."

"Perhaps I can help you to see that and one or two other things as well," said Holmes. "Kindly summon your men, and I will try."

Five minutes later three policemen had assembled in the hall.

"In the outhouse you will find a considerable quantity of straw," said Holmes.

"I will ask you to carry in two bundles of it. I think it will be of the greatest assistance in producing the witness whom I require. Thank you very much. I believe you have some matches in your pocket, Watson. Now, Mr. Lestrade, I will ask you all to accompany me to the top landing."

As I have said, there was a broad corridor there, which ran outside three empty bedrooms. At one end of the corridor were two small rooms, which were the constables' quarters. Sherlock Holmes, the constables grinning and Lestrade staring at my friend with amazement, expectation and derision chasing each other across his features, Holmes stood before us with the air of a conjurer who is performing a trick.

"Would you kindly send one of your constables for two buckets of water? Put the straw on the floor here, free from the wall on either side. Now I think that we are all ready."

Lestrade's face had begun to grow red and angry.

"I don't know whether you are playing a game with us, Mr. Sherlock Holmes," said he. "If you know anything you can surely say it without all this tomfoolery."

"I assure you, my good Lestrade, that I have an excellent reason for everything that I do. You may possibly remember that you chaffed me a little some hours ago when the sun seemed on your side of the hedge, so you must not grudge me a little pomp and ceremony now. Might I ask you, Watson, to open that window and then throw a match to the edge of the straw?"

I did so, and, driven by the draft, a coil of gray smoke swirled down the corridor, while the dry straw crackled and flamed.

"Now we must see if we can find this witness for you, Lestrade. Might I ask you all to join in the cry of 'Fire?' Now, then—one, two, three?"

"Fire!" we all yelled.

"Thank you. I will trouble you once again."

"Fire!"

"Just once more, gentlemen, and all together."

"Fire!" The shout must have rung over Norwood.

Oldacre gave an uneasy laugh, shrinking back from the furious red face of the angry detective.

"I have done no harm."

"No harm? You have done your best to get an innocent man hanged. If it wasn't for this gentleman here I am not sure that you would not have succeeded."

The wretched creature began to whimper.

"I am sure, sir, it was only my practical joke."

ne clenched his thin hands in a paroxysm of emotion. "I know it's all wrong. I feel it in my bones. There is something that has not come out, and that housekeeper knows it. There was a sort of bulky package in her eyes which only goes with guilty knowledge. However, there's no good talking any more about it. Watson. But unless some lucky chance comes our way I fear that the Norwood disappearance case will not prove in that chronicle of our successes which I foresee that a patient public will sooner or later have to endure."

"Surely," said I, "the man's appearance would go far with any jury."

"That is a dangerous argument, my dear Watson. You remember that terrible murderer, Bert Stevens, who was there ever a more mild mannered, Sunday school young man?"

"It is true."

"Unless we succeed in establishing an alternative theory this man is lost. You can hardly find a saw in the case which can now be presented against him, and all further investigation has served to strengthen it. By the way, there is one curious little point about those papers which may serve us as the starting point for an inquiry. On looking over the bank book I found that the low state of the balance was principally due to large checks which have been made out during the last year to Mr. Cornelius. I confess that I should be interested to know who this Mr. Cornelius may be with whom a retired builder has such very large transactions. Is it possible that he has had a hand in the affair? Cornelius might be a broker, but we have found no scrip to correspond with these large payments. But I fear, my dear Watson, that our case will end ingloriously by Lestrade hanging our client, which will certainly be a triumph for Scotland Yard."

I do not know how far Sherlock Holmes took any sleep that night, but when I came down to breakfast I found him pale and harassed, his bright eyes the brighter for the dark shadows round them. The carpet round his chair

The question of arranging a series of meetings in St. John by E. Tennyson Smith, leader of 'The Christian Crusade Against the Liquor Traffic,' was left with the executive. It is expected the meetings will be held in the early spring.

The meeting adjourned at the call of the chair.

Dangers of a cold and how to Avoid them

More fatalities have their origin in or result from a cold than from any other cause. This fact alone should make people more careful as there is no danger whatever from a cold when it is properly treated in the beginning.

DOMINION FINANCES.

Significant Figures from Public Accounts.

THE NATIONAL DEBT

Public Revenues have Increased and Business has Prospered.

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—The year 1904-05 has been characterized throughout the whole of the Dominion by a wonderful degree of prosperity. Such is the opinion which Mr J. M. Courtney, Deputy Minister of Finance, puts on record in the public accounts, the last blue book, probably, with which his name will be identified. He goes on to say:

'It will be seen from the accounts now published how the public revenues have increased. In all other particulars, such as the railway traffic, receipts, immigration, the blank clearings, and in the deposits in the chartered banks, a wonderfully steady progress has taken place. The increase in the public deposits held in the chartered banks averages over $1,000,000 a week, and over $5,000,000 are now held on deposit.'

DOMINION LOANS MATURING.

Mr. Courtney comments with satisfaction on the high position of Dominion loans in Great Britain and the fact that since 1st July, 1903, maturing Dominion loans to the amount of $23,359,999 have been paid off. During the next seven years, however, loans to the amount of $143,168,665 will have to be refunded, no less than $134,893,331 during the first four years of this term.

Against this large amount sinking funds in the Canadian agencies to the amount of $47,365,008 were held on November 30th last. Provision will have to be made for the meeting of the large sums referred to, but after they have been refunded no further loans will mature until 1938. Of the loans in question, all but $24,333,333 at 4 per cent the balance is 3 1/2 per cent.

MR COURTNEY'S RETIREMENT.

Mr. Courtney alludes to his retirement in the following terms: 'I have held on at your request (addressing the Minister), but the time has now come when the question of a successor should be seriously taken into consideration. In view of the responsibilities that are daily being laid on the department, no time should be lost in making an appointment. As I have previously mentioned, I shall be very glad at any time to render assistance or give any information in my power.'

Mr Courtney is pleased that the termination of the fiscal year is to be changed from June 30th to March 31st; a change which he has favored ever since he entered the public service over thirty-six years ago. The system has been in vogue in Great Britain ever since 1854, but the 30th June is still maintained in the United States.

THE NATIONAL DEBT.

During the year receipts in consolidated fund amounted to $71,182,777, and the expenditure on the same amount to $63,316,682, giving a surplus of receipts over expenditure amounting to $7,866,095. The capital expenditure totalled $15,484,452, and deducting from this the surplus $2,261,618 of sinking funds and some smaller amounts, it leaves $5,356,448 to be added to the national debt, which now amounts to $266,224,166. The average rate of interest on gross debt for the year was $2.81, as compared with $3.08 in the previous year, and the net rate of interest fell from $2.49 to $2.26.

The reason for this remarkably low rate of interest on the net national debt is that the sinking fund investments realized $1,546,773 last year in interest, and there are $47,334,221 worth of Dominion notes not paying interest. These notes, of course, represent just that much of the debt.

DISCLOSED PLOT TO MURDER CZAR

Artillery Officer lost Plan of Tsarskoe-Selo Palace: Conspirators are Arrested

LONDON, Jan. 4.—A St Petersburg despatch under Thursday morning's date says a plot by Anarchists to assassinate the Czar was frustrated by accident. Trusted artillery officers are implicated. The chief conspirators are two students, who, with the army officers, have been arrested.

The plot was discovered by one of the officers losing a carefully-drawn plan of the Tsarskoe-Selo palace. The St Petersburg correspondent of the Times, denying rumors that Minister of the Interior Durnovo will replace Prime Minister Witte, says that the financial situation, in which the Government is most vulnerable, necessitates the retention of Count Witte. There will be need of all his resources to provide the 2,500,000,000 roubles ($1,250,000,000) required in 1906 in a country whose credit is impaired and a vast proportion of whose inhabitants cannot or will not pay taxes, owing to the commercial and agrarian distress and the revolutionary propaganda.

How to Prevent Bilious Attacks

One who is subject to bilious attacks will notice that for a day or more before the attack he is not hungry at meal times and feels dull after eating. A dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets when the first symptoms appear will ward off the attack. They are sold by all druggists.

NB TOURIST ASSOCIATION

To ask for Changes in the Game Law: Want License Fee Reduced

ST JOHN, Jan. 8.—The New Brunswick Tourist Association propose to ask the government at the meeting of the latter body tomorrow to make certain changes in the game laws. It is understood the association has been considering the recommendations of the guides at the annual meeting that the sale of moose meat should be restricted and will ask the government to consider the present license fees of $50 with a view to its reduction.

A Funny Metaphor.

Judge John Goode of Virginia, once a member of the Confederate congress, told of an attack by Foote of Tennessee upon Jefferson Davis and General Albert Sidney Johnston after the Confederate defeat at Cloyd mountain. He said that if Johnston had fought as he ought to have fought 'peace, like a wedding garment, would now cover our fair land.'

Better Than Aladdin's Lamp.

Aladdin's famous lamp was doubtless a very handy little piece of bric-a-brac to have about the house, but there is question whether it would be very highly esteemed in these days of advertising wonders. Aladdin may properly be regarded as a back number. Whenever he wanted anything he had to earn it by the sweat of his brow as a metal polisher. Nowadays people who want things put ads. in the newspapers—it's much easier than rubbing an old lamp—and they are served just as effectively as was Aladdin by his genie.

You'll Be Glad to Know This. The lucidity of this statement, made by a medical journal, will appeal to all hurried readers: 'Further evidence of the complex character of toxins was also furnished by the studies of haemolysins and bacteriolysins, which had their origin in the union of an amoebocyte and complement and were analogous to toxins, the amoebocyte representing the haptophore and the complement the toxophore group.'

His Wish was Gratified. Her head had dropped upon his shoulder. 'If only,' he whispered, 'my cheek could remain there forever!'

Little thought he what was to be. Little thought he until he got home and tried to remove her cheek from his dress coat with ammonia and alcohol.
