The Question of Precedents.

London, July 23.—Regarding the article in the Post of yesterday, that journal is not an inspired organ, and the result of researches made to-day in official quarters by the representative of the Associated Press confirms his previous statements that both the Conservatives and Liberal-Unionist leaders have decided to resign on the first vote in which a majority is against them. The whip's reference to precedents recalls the fact of one single memorable instance of a Prime Minister persisting in defying a majority. This was Peel, who in 1834 returned from the polls supported by 264

WORDS THAT BURN.

WEAVING.

My life is but a weaving Between my God and me; I may but choose the colors— He worketh steadily. Full oft he weaveth sorrow; And I in foolish pride, Forget he sees the upper, And I the under side!

I choose the strands all golden, And watch for woven stars; I murmur when the pattern Is set in blurs or mars, I cannot yet remember Whose hands the shuttle guide: And that my stars are shining Upon the upper side.

I choose my strands all crimson, For warp and woof to blossom Upon that mighty loom. Full oft I seek them vainly, Though flowering wreaths and garlands May deck the upper side!

My life is but a weaving

Upon the upper side. JUDGE NOT. Judge not; the workings of his brain And of his heart thou canst not see; What looks to thy dim eyes a stain,

In God's pure sight may only be A scar brought from some well-fought field, Where thou wouldst only faint and yield. The look, the air that frets thy sight, May be a token that below.

May be a token that below.

The soul has closed in deadly fight

With some infernal deadly foe,

Whose glance would scorch thy smiling grace.

And cast thee shuddering on thy face!

The fall thou darest to despise— Maybe the angel's slackened han Has suffered it, that he may rise And take a firmer, surer, stand; Or, trusting less to earthly things, May henceforth learn to use his wings. And judge none lost; but wait and see,

With hope and rity, not disdain; The depth of the abyss may be The measure of the height of pain And love and glory that may raise
This soul to God in after days!

Discipline.

The true so obeys orders faithfully, no matter at what sacrifice. A company of a British regiment was once sent on some duty, in time of peace, to a remote village in Ireland, and left there for several weeks, quite separate from its usual base of supplies.

During this period some general orders, applicable more especially to men in barracks, were sent to the commander of the company. One clause of those words was as follows:

racks, were sent to the commander of the company. One clause of those words was as follows:

"All men in the command shall change their shirts at least twice a week."

The captain gave orders to the orderly sergeant to see this command put into execution.

"But, captain," said the sergeant "there's

"But, captain," said the sergeant "there's only a shirt apiece to every man in the company. How can they—"
"Silence," exclaimed the captaint "orders are orders, sergeant. Let the men change shirts with one another." So the sergeant saw to it that, as long as the company remained in the place, on every Sundar and Wednesday morning the soldiers swapped shirts with one

A Miracle.

This story about Pope Pius IX. is told by the Pall Mall Gazette. He granted an audience to a French lady of high station, who threw herself at his feet and devouily thanked him for the restoration of her health. "But how have I done it?" inquired the Pope. "I procured a stocking that belonged to your holiness," she replied. "One of my stockings?" "Yes, I put the talisman on my diseased toot, and it has been completely cured." "Madame," replied the Pope, a little maliciously, "fortune has been very kind to you. You need only put on one of my stockings and your foot is healed, while I put on both my stockings every morning, and I can hardly walk." A Miracle.

A Curious Fact.

A Curious Fact.

The wild horses that roamed over Europe in immense herds appear to have furnished the chief food of early man in Europe. Enormous refuse heaps, consisting mainly of the bones of wild horses, have been found outside the caves, as in those at the foot of Mount Pellegrino, near Palermo, where the floor is formed of a magma of the bones if wild horses, which were either stalked with spears, driven by the hunters into pit-falls, or chased over the cliffs. Similiar deposits have been found at the cave of Thayngen in Switzerland, and in front of the rock shelter at Solutre, near Macon, where there is a vast deposit, the relies of the feasts of these savages, nearly 10 feet in thickness, and more than 30 feet in length, composed entirely of th bones of horses, and comprising the remains of from 20,000 to 40,000 individuals. bones of horses, and comprising the remains of from 20,000 to 40,000 individuals.

Always Ready.

Suwaroff, Russia's great military commander, was a little man, insignificant in everything but that intangible power of mind and character with which physical strength is never to be compared. He had been sickly in his youth, but became hardy under the stimulus of cold bathing and the benefits of a plain dict. Buckets of cold water were thrown over him in the morning, and his table was moving with a piercing cock-orow, in commendation of early rising.

During the first Polish war he had given orders for an attack at cock-crow, and a spy in the camp carried the news to the enemy. The attack, however, really took place at 9 o'clock on the evening when the arrangement had been made, for Suwaroff, suspecting treachery, had then turned out the troops by his well-known crowing.

The enemy, expecting the event in the morning, were entirely unprepared, and fell easy victims to his forethought.

"To-morrow morning," said he to his troops on the evening before the storming of Ismail," an hour before daybreak, I mean to get up. I shall wash and dress myself, say my prayers, give one good cock-crow, and then capture Ismail."

It was hardly possible to find him off the alert.

Fly or Bait-The Fly Less Cruel.

Fly or Bait—The Fly Less Cruel.

The advantages of the fly are obvious enough. It is always ready, bait must be procured for each occasion. "I wish," said a lady one day, "that you would teach my husband to use a fly, for I observe that when you desire o go a fishing, you go; but he raises the whole village for four days to collect his baits. "Besides it is a gratification to avoid giving pain, even if slight, to living bait. A still greater practical advantage is that the fly does not mortally and any fish, and such as (by reason of r for any other cause) are not wanted obasket, may be returned to the water marmed. Unharmed? Probably entirely so. In bait fishing many an undesired fish is basketed because wounds of its gills or gullet makes its survival improbable if it were returned to the water. But a fly is not swallowed unless a bait has been added to it. It goes no further than the mouth, and—by trout at least—is instantly recognized as a deception, and if it has not been fastened at the moment of seizure, is immediately rejected. That the presence of a hook in the mouth of predatory fish causes little, if any pain, becomes more probable the more their behavior is watched. Their mouths being their only prehensile apparatus, we should expect these parts to be but slightly sensitive to pain, and such seems from observation to be really the case. Such fish often seize and swallow others so protected with spines that the angler handles them with great caution. Most anglers of experience have seen a fish take a fly repeatedly, or take a second while still struggling to be really the case.

For experiment's sake, the writer once caught, unhooked, and returned to the water the same trout four times within a few minutes (it being plainly visible all the time), and finally drove it out of the pool with a stick lest it should swallow the bait and be destroyed if it were allowed another opportunity.—[From "Getting Out the Fly Books," by Dr. Leroy M. Yale, in the Jur Scribner.

The pionic of 1892 will be held on Wednesday, July 27, at the same place. If ourgetic committees, claborate preparations and a splendid programme go for anything, it should eclipse even last year's. A glance at the numerous and diversified athletic events will show that the prizes are valuable enough to invite plenty of competition. There are no less than 35 numbers on the programme, and every kind of entertainment is provided from a fat men's race to an Irish jig. The half-mile race open to the world and St. Thomas is expected to call out some crack sprinters. It will be a holiday for the grocers of the city. A procession of decorated grocers' wagons will leave the market square at 10 a.m. for the park and the turnout is expected to be a fine one. The various committees are as follows:

Christianity

Christianity is not dying out, but has moved forward until it has obtained a marvelous hold among all civilized nations. The Army Chaplain states the following: "Three centuries after Christ there were 5,000,000 Christians. Eight centuries after Christ there were 50,000,000 Christians. Fitcen centuries after Christ there were 50,000,000 Christians. Fitcen centuries after Christ there were 100,000,000 Christians. Eighteen centuries after Christ there were 15,000,000 Christians. Now there are 450,000,000 Christians. Now there are 450,000,000 Christians. The followers of the three religions, Confucianism, Buddhism and Tacism, all combined, are less in number than the Christians alone. Including the latest division of Africa among the European powers, about four-fifths of the land of the world is under Christian control." So much for figures; but what of the general influence upon society! Of one thing we must beware. The above figures represent not the converted disciples of Christ, but those identified with so-called Christian communities.

The Transfer of a License.

In the action of Smith vs. Greer at Osgoode Hall the vacation judge, Mr. Justice Robertson, on Friday granted an injunction restraining the defendant, a hotel-keeper of this city, from transferring his tayern license to new premises. The plaintiff is the owner of the present premises, and alleges that the license was obtained in respect of those premises, and is held by the defendant as trustee for him. An order was also made for the appointment of some person to be agreed upon as receiver of the business in question.

Trying to Scare Gladstone.

London, July 23.—The Times (Tory) declares the Government will carry out the programme which it adopted prior to the dissolution of Parliament, and will resign immediately after a vote of no confidence is passed. Mr. Gladstone, it says, will meet with no obstruction from the Opposition side, but before he thinks of starting a Cabinet he must consider whether he ought to undertake the duties of the Cabinet at all. It is idle to pretend that he is not showing signs of the increasing pressure of old age.

It the spring of 1891 I returned to Oakville, and made an attempt to do something towards my own support. I was given light work in the basket factory, but had to be conveyed to and from my place of labor in a buggy and carried from the rig to a table in the works on which I sat and performed my work. In August, 1891, I was again stricken down, and remained in autterly helpless condition until January 1892. At this time Mr. James, a local druggist, strongly urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I was prejudiced against proprietary medicines as I had spent nearly all I possessed on numerous highly recommended so-called remedies. I had exhausted the list of liniments, but all in vain, and I was therefore reductant to take Mr. James' advice. I, however, saw several strong testimonials as to the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a blood builder and nerve tonic, and thinking that if I could only get my blood in better condition my general state of health might be improved, I resolved to give Pink Pills at I all. With the courage born of despair bought a box, but there was no noticeable improvement, and I thought this was like the other remedies I had used. But urged on by friends I continued taking Pink Pills and after using seven boxes I was rewarded by noticing a decided change for the better. My appetite returned, my spirits began to rise and I had a little freer use of my muceles and limbs, the old troublesome swellings subsiding. I continued the remedy until I had used 52 boxes, when I left off. By this time I had taken on considerable

Professors Goldstein and Fraid, ophthalmic epticians, are coming to the city on a professional visit, and they will be found at the Grigg House for two weeks, commencing July 25, where they will be pleased to treat with spectacles all those who are troubled with complicated errors of refraction, such as hypermetropea (or far sight). This is a condition in which the eyebal is shorter from backward than it should be, and as a consequence parallel rays of light are not united when they reach the retina, unless the accomodation be called into play. This is done by a muscular effort and can be maintained only for a short time. When it fails there comes a sense of fatigue and blurring of vision. A sensation of heaviness, which may pass into pain, invades the eyes and forehead. The second is myopia, or near sightedness, in which the eyebal is longer than normal—just the opposite of hypermetropea—causing the retina to be situated back of the point at which rays will go into effect next week.

More care should be used in the purchase of flavoring extracts, and consumers should demand good quality rather than quantity. If this were done, fewer complaints about the masty taste of cakes, bruddings and suice would be heard of at home. Many of the low-grade compounds soll are little less than poisonous. You are sure to get pure flavoring extracts—warranted pure.
