SITUATION

UNCHANGED

Striking Miners as Firm as Ever—President Mitchell Still Optimistic.

Confident the Men are Going to Win—Senators' Aid Enlistment to Secure Settlement.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 23.—President Mitchell arrived here from Chicago this afternoon. He said he was not going to New York to hold a conference with any of the presidents of the coal-carrying railroads. So far as he knew the situation was unchanged.

"The miners," he said, "are just as firm now as the first day they went on strike. I am just as confident as ever, too," said the chief officer of the striking army, "that we are going to win."

Mr. Mitchell denied that he was in communication with Bishop Potter, but said the miners were still open to arbitration, providing it could be secured by honorable means.

SENATORS ARE ACTING.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 23.—The committee from the Public Alliance, of this city, which waited on Senators Quay and Penrose at Atlantic City last week and urged them to use their good offices to bring about arbitration in the coal strike, performed a like mission in this city today when they called on President Mitchell and requested him to co-operate with the Pennsylvania Senators in bringing about a settlement of the strike. Mr. Mitchell said he would do anything that was honorable to bring about an adjustment and he furnished the committee with the statistics of the strike, from the miners' point of view, which were forwarded to Senator Quay tonight.

CONGRESS TO BE ASKED TO ACT.

New York, Aug. 24.—President Roosevelt will be asked to call a special session of Congress to take action to end the coal strike. This was decided at a meeting today of the Central Federated Union, representing 250,000 workmen. A mass meeting, under the auspices of the labor unions of New York and vicinity, will be held at which resolutions will be adopted, urging President Roosevelt to immediately call Congress to meet and decide upon plans which will bring the strike to a speedy termination.

CONSCRIPTION

This Means of Recruiting the Army May Have to be Adopted.

London, Aug. 23.—A serious slump in recruiting has caused the resurrection of the conscription bogey, which persistently refuses to lie quiet for any length of time. It is understood that the year's recruiting returns, about to be issued, show the greatest decline of any year during the last five years, which promises to have serious influence in preventing the release of Reservists.

The Saturday Review frankly says that while the army proves effective in South Africa, in respect to the rank and file, the fact remains that it is too small for the requirements of the Empire, adding:—

"We have ultimately to face this question. Whether we like it or not conscription is certain to come, and the country might as well get used to the idea as quickly as it can."

Considering their experiences during and since the war, perhaps it is hardly strange that, while the authorities are lamenting the decline in recruiting, whole regiments of time-expired men are walking the streets rather than re-enlist in their own army, yet scores of former British soldiers continue to besiege the United States Embassy and Consulate, owing to reports, denied by the American officials, that the United States was enlisting men who had served in the South African army for service in the Philippines.

A. M. E. CONFERENCE

The eighteenth session of the Ontario A. M. E. Conference will convene in Campbell A. M. E. Church, King St., on Wednesday at 9.30 a. m. Bishop Abram Graith, D. D., of Indianapolis, Ind., presiding.

At 8 p. m. a conference reception and banquet will be tendered Grant and the Ontario Annual Conference, at which time addresses will be made by Mayor Sullivan, Judge R. S. Woods, Bishop Wilmore, Rev. Dr. Battisby, J. Cobbleick, J. J. Ross, Adjutant McCarty, also Dr. H. B. Parks, of New York; Prof. Geo. Woodson, of Philadelphia; O. Dr. B. F. Watson, of Philadelphia. At the close a banquet will be held in the vestry of the church. The conference will continue during the week.

J. A. McGarry and sons have returned from visiting in Youngstown, Ohio.

WOMAN TIRED OF LIFE

Ottawa, Aug. 24.—A sand carter driving along the Rideau Canal bank on Saturday near "Hog's Back," a point about three miles from Ottawa, saw a woman lying in a bush near the roadside. He went to ascertain what she was doing there, and found her in a very weak and emaciated condition. She said that she had gone there to escape the troubles of life, and had lain down to die. She was brought to the Salvation Army Rescue Home, where it was learned that her name was Mrs. John Brown. It seems she had been living in the woods since Monday last, and had no food for six days. She revived under medical care, and will recover. Her troubles were caused by domestic infelicity.

LADS HURLED FORTY FEET

The Thoughtlessness of a Boy Causes the Explosion of a Powder Magazine.

The Boy Responsible for the Calamity Escapes Miraculously—Companions Killed.

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 24.—A most distressing fatality occurred at Thornburn, six miles from New Glasgow, on Saturday afternoon, by which two lads—Charles McNulty, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., aged 15, and Finlay McDonald, of Thornburn, aged 17, lost their lives. The boys were employed by the Acadia Coal Company to carry powder, and went to the magazine and took two young lads named Patrician and McLeod with them. Patrician had a cartridge with him, and when he took a match from his pocket at the door of the magazine McLeod became frightened and ran away. Instantly there was a tremendous explosion and the brick magazine was blown to pieces. McDonald and McNulty were hurled forty feet in the air. The former was dead when picked up, but McDonald lived for an hour. Patrician only received slight injuries, but his escape was miraculous.

Miss Nora Limpke and Miss Emma Dauphin, Detroit, who have been the guests of the Misses Peck McRuse Farn, Raleigh, are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Wilcox, Bloomfield.

FOR DEFENDANT

Judgment Given for Daniel in the Case of Dupret vs. Daniel Lately Tried Here.

The following judgment in the case of Dupret vs. Daniel appeared in the Toronto papers on Saturday:—
Dupret vs. Daniel.—Judgment (H.) in action to have a certain indenture of lease declared void for fraud, misrepresentation and deceit, and because it was executed on Sunday and imprudently, without independent advice. At the trial the allegation of fraud was abandoned. Held, that imprudence and want of independent advice cannot support the plaintiff's case, as these are only circumstances which have been regarded as in a special degree marks of undue influence and fraud. May on Fraudulent Conveyances, 2nd ed., p. 496. Present case does not come within R. S. O. ch. 119, sec. 7, or R. S. O. 246, sec. 2. Held, also, that the lease was not made on the Sabbath, at the time of its actual execution, but many before. Action dismissed with costs. J. B. Rankin, K. C., for plaintiff, Matthew Wilson, K. C., and J. A. Walker, K. C., for defendant.

This case is a very interesting one, and it will be remembered came up at the assizes in Chatham. Miss Dupret, the plaintiff, was a sister of a retired priest, and built a house upon a farm which she owned in Dover, and in it a very fine chapel. She expected to spend the rest of her life there with her brother. The defendant, Daniel, and his wife had undertaken to support them for the consideration of the use of the farm, other than reserved rooms and the chapel. The priest became ill and desired to have the lease put in writing and signed. This was done through Mr. Pimoneault, who is now in the customs department here, and as time was urgent the lease and agreement was signed on a Sunday. Afterwards Fr. Dupret died and his sister became dissatisfied with Mr. Daniel and his wife and brought action to set aside the lease and get possession of the farm, on the grounds that the lease had been obtained when Fr. Dupret was ill and his sister was very old and had no lawyer to guard her interests, and on the grounds that the lease was signed on a Sabbath.

The learned judge has given judgment against Miss Dupret upon both grounds, holding that there was no undue influence used by Daniel, and second that the oral lease was really made at a time prior to the Sunday when the written lease was signed, and Miss Dupret will have to pay the costs of the action.

EXPENSIVE KINDNESS

Tug Petrel Fined for Carrying Passengers Without a License.

Capt. Sweeney Helped Belated People to Overtake a Steamer and Must Pay $500

Cleveland, August 24.—Information was filed with the government officials Saturday against the tug Petrel, owned by Capt. Joseph Sweeney, and he was fined $500, whereupon her owner, to use the vernacular, went up in the air.

A few days ago a party of passengers on the steamer China of the Anchor line went up town and stayed longer than they ought to have done, thereby missing their connections. Capt. Sweeney, out of the kindness of his heart, consented to take them on board his tug, made a chase after the fleeing steamer, overtook it several miles out in the lake and the passengers were placed on board.

Information was forthwith lodged against Capt. Sweeney for carrying passengers without a license, and the imposition of a fine was the immediate result. When he was informed of the fine Capt. Sweeney was what one might call "warm under the collar." He said that all of the forces that are trying to bear down on the striking tugmen, spend themselves on him. His masters are arrested and he stands the expense; his firemen are thrown into jail and he goes on their bond; he is himself dragged up before the inspectors on the charge of conspiracy and is made to fight to hold his license; his boats are shot full of holes by special policemen; and last of all his boats are fined without a hearing for having carried passengers.

When he had delivered himself of the list of misfortunes that he followed him Capt. Sweeney vowed that he would tie his boats to the docks, as they are bonded for all they are worth, and he is carrying more than he is worth and his friends have put up all he cares to ask them to.

Fire alarm box No. 43 has been placed where 31 was, corner of Prince and Park streets, and No. 31 has been placed at the corner of Grey and La-croix streets. "The idea of the changes," said Chief Pritchard this morning, "is to get all the numbers in totation as near as possible. Now all the three with one exception are in No. 2 ward."

WOULDN'T BITE

Couldn't Fool This Smart Man With Any Catch.

He was telling the story of the engaged young man who stopped at the home of his sweetheart on his way to business one morning just to hold her hand for a moment.

"The young man rang the bell," said the story teller, "and asked the maid to announce him. Pretty soon the girl poked her head out of the bathroom door and cried, 'Hello, Jack, dear!'" "Hello," Jack called out. "Come on down." "I can't, Jack, I'm—er—well, I'm in my bath." "But I won't keep you a moment." "I haven't, er—got—er—anything on, Jack," was the hesitating reply. "Well," said Jack, "slip on something and come down—"

"So," concluded the story teller, "she slipped on the top step and came down."

Everybody laughed but one man. He looked as though deep in thought for a second and then cried: "You don't get me to bite on that gag."—New York Evening Sun.

LOST HIS ALL

John Homer, caretaker of St. Anthony's cemetery, had a very unpleasant surprise awaiting him when he returned from church yesterday morning.

Mr. Homer lives just outside the city limits in Harwich, and while he was away at church some unknown person or persons broke into his house and proceeded to look for booty. They ransacked every room in the house and succeeded in carrying away about $75 in cash, which Mr. Homer had saved up during the summer, to keep him during the winter months. As for as Mr. Homer knows at present, nothing else was taken, but he is much grieved over the loss of his money, which to him means a great deal. For the last few days Mr. Homer has noticed a couple of tramps hanging around his house, and when he discovered his loss he at once suspected them of the robbery.

Major Coogan was notified and investigated the matter yesterday. He is inclined to believe, however, that the robbery was not committed by the tramps, but by some one who knew where Mr. Homer kept his money, which was hidden in a little tin box on a shelf over a door. The tracks of the robbers were traced through a cornfield and over near the G. T. R. station. Mr. Coogan is inclined to believe that the deed was done by some one in the city.

MONDAY, AUGUST 25.

SING IT ALWAYS.
 Says the Brockville Times:
 We notice with regret that this fine old verse is too often omitted from the National Anthem:
 O Lord, our God, arise,
 Scatter his enemies
 And make them fall:
 Confound their politics;
 Frustrate their knavish tricks;
 On Thee our hope we fix;
 God save us all.

There is no valid reason why it should be left out. It expresses the sentiment of every good British subject; there is nothing to be ashamed of in it; it is printed in the hymn books regularly; yet as a rule it is ignominiously omitted, while frequently some tame, insipid amateur addition is sung in its place.
 It is a shame to spoil our noble National Anthem by leaving out the second verse, a hearty, wholesome expression of hostility to the King's enemies. May confusion ever be their lot!

SECRET OF BRITISH STRENGTH.
 The London Times calls attention to a feature of colonization peculiar to the British, when it says: "It is one of the secrets of our Imperial strength that we have never tried to Anglicize more than the Administration of the countries under our sway. We have not done with Frenchmen in Canada what Germany is now trying to do with the Poles, nor shall we dream of endeavoring to stamp out the national characteristics of the Boers. We shall try simply to make them our friends, and to give them good government, which is appreciated by every race."
 Britain, the backbone of Protestantism, is the greatest Catholic power on earth; the chief promoter of Christianity, she rivals the Sultan of Turkey in the number of her Moslem subjects; an English power, she embraces those who speak all known languages. All parts of this great polyglot Empire are alike in one thing—human liberty is respected. The only laws which we demand each shall obey are those which ensure equal justice to all. Time has shown that John Bull keeps faith with his new subjects, however inconvenient doing so may prove to him, and however powerless these subjects might be to compel him to do so. It is an Empire built up and held together by good faith.

TARTE'S TRIUMPHANT TRIP.
 Proper importance is attached by the people of Chicago to the arrival in that city of Hon. J. I. Tarte, Canadian Minister of Public Works. The Record-Herald of that city says:
 "Lord Tarte's steamer entered Chicago harbor yesterday afternoon in a blaze of color. She docked at the salt docks at the river entrance, but later in the day returned to a private slip near the club-house of the Chicago Yacht Club, where Lord Tarte met a number of callers. During the six years Lord Tarte has been Minister of Marine he has gained considerable prominence from his consistent work to build up the commerce of the great lakes from the Canadian standpoint. Recently he has come into public notice by reviving a plan to construct a canal from Georgian Bay through Ontario to Lake Ontario, thus shortening the route between the Atlantic and the head of the lakes. The canal, Lord Tarte estimated, would cost $100,000,000."
 That good Liberal journal, the Montreal Witness, gives us a view of the significance of the touring minister. It recently observed:
 "Every day we hear of him in some new place, Collingwood, Sault Ste. Marie, Fort William, Owen Sound, Chicago. And wherever they ask him to build docks or deepen harbors he books the order with the alertness of a commercial traveller who is afraid his customer will change his mind. Then he says, 'Surely, you can think of something else. Why, this line only comes to half a million or so. Can't we put you up a nice elevator designed by my own fancy experts? Thanks, that'll come to about two million. And now I must be going. But Mr. Tarte rises to his height at Chicago, where he spends a few hundred millions on prospective canals, and so forth, with an abandon that Morgan would envy."

It is unfortunate that the public will continue to treat our excited young local contemporary and its comments with such manifest contempt. It has now been forced to manufacture a mythical "prominent conservative" and put words in his mouth in the hope that in this way it may find at least some credence. The expedient is not a new one with journals of the Banner ilk, neither has it been a successful one.

 Sir Wilfrid says: "I love England, I love Scotland, I love Ireland." While the premier is in this amatory mood why does he not bestow a little of his love upon Wales, and what in thunder is the matter with the Isle of Man, the Channel Islands, and the Town and County of Berwick-on-Tweed?
WHY SUPERSTITION THRIVES.
 Woodstock Express.
 The coronation of the King was one instance when the fortune teller failed; but it would be difficult to find an instance, when, by a chance, the fortune tellers were successful in guessing the event; and it is the successes that count with the ardent devotee; the failures are forgotten.

GOLDWIN SMITH'S OPINION OF THE KAISER.
 Bystander, in Weekly Sun.
 He is not without talent, but he is evidently without ballast, and his self-esteem borders on mania. Were he a revolutionary paper or fitting out a balloon for the North Pole. The strangest things are told us of his personal eccentricities and escapades. It is impossible to tell what he will do next. Like a sort of human explosive, he bounces and explodes, unaccountably with combustibles all round. He is evidently subject to paroxysms dangerous to a holder of power, in one of which he told the soldiers whom he was despatching to China to leave no Chinaman who could stand alive.

THIS BEATS JONAH.
 London Globe.
 The inscription on a tombstone in a Jamaica cemetery shows that the individual there commemorated had survived an earthquake. The inscription is as follows: "Lewis Galdy, Esq., who died on the 22nd of September, 1737, aged 80. He was born at Montpellier, France, which place he left for his religion and, settled on this island, where in the great earthquake of 1672, he was swallowed up, and by the wonderful providence of God by a second shock was thrown into the sea, where he continued swimming until he was taken up by a boat and thus miraculously preserved." The earthquake mentioned took place in Jamaica 23 years ago.

SHREWD VICTOR HUGO.

The Quiet Way in Which He Bullied the Theatrical Managers.
 Here are the methods which Dumas the elder and Victor Hugo employed when they had a new play to offer to the theater. Dumas would write to the director of the Porte St. Martin:
 My Dear Friend—I shall bring you on Monday a play in five acts. I shall need Mlle. Georges, Mme. Dorval, Bocage, Lockroy, Provost and five new scenes.
 This extravagance would alarm the director, who would put off the production of the play till better days.
 Then Victor Hugo would appear and shyly draw a manuscript out of his pocket. He would agree to everything. The stock company would play his piece admirably, since all he wanted was a good ensemble; no new decorations would be needed nor any change at all.

So the piece would be read, and as the roles were distributed Hugo would say musingly, "Dieu, how fine Frederick would be in that part!" "That is true," Horel would murmur, and a few days after he would announce that Frederick was engaged. Hugo would then renege that this destroyed the equinox of the cast and Hancourt, Lafontaine and Mlle. Georges would be engaged. Then Hugo would attack the stage setting. Old scenes, that the public had tired of, were almost an insult to these great artists. If Horel showed reluctance at this, Hugo would threaten to withdraw his piece. And so the game would go on, till, little by little, Hugo had obtained everything he wanted, even to changing the paper hangings in the stage boxes.

Jim O'Brien's Epitaph.
 "I suppose our western country has furnished more funny things in the epitaph line than all the rest of the world," remarked a Colorado ex-congressman.

"I remember one that adorned the cemetery at Leadville in the palmy days of that great mining camp. It seems that in the course of a barroom broil one Jim O'Brien, a well known character, had his existence terminated prematurely. He was a good fellow in the main and not without friends. One of the dead man's associates, in deep grief over his demise, erected a wooden slab over his grave on which he had written in large letters:
 "Jim O'Brien departed for heaven at 9:30 a. m."
 "A local humorist happened along soon afterward and appended the following:
 "Heaven, 4:20 p. m.—O'Brien not yet arrived. Intense excitement. The worst is feared."

Love of Country.
 For the love of country, as such, it would be difficult to decide between the highlanders of Scotland and the mountain born inhabitants of the Tyrol. Both will wander in search of fortune to the ends of the world and yet look back to their native mountains as their only real home. The same is true of the Swiss, although in a lesser degree. It is a very singular fact that inhabitants of mountainous countries possess this feeling of attachment in a much more intense form than those of flat countries.

Lacked Heart.
 "Once there was a lawyer out near Galesburg," said an Illinois congressman, "who made a brilliant defense in a certain case. Men praised his effort. 'Will he make his mark for ability as an advocate?' some one asked. 'No,' replied the veteran lawyer. 'His ability begins here at the Adam's apple and extends upward. He must have something under his left breast.' The congressman cited this as an example why some speeches fail in the house of representatives."

ALL CANADA AT TORONTO

There will not be a province or a piece of territory in the Dominion that will not be represented at the exhibition to be held in Toronto this year from Monday, Sept. 1st, to Saturday, Sept. 13th. To mark their appreciation of this evidence of the country's confidence, the Executive have increased the prize list until now it is proudly boasted that, with special, upwards of $37,000 will be distributed in prizes among the exhibitors, six-sevenths of which will find its way to the agricultural community. While this large sum proves the magnitude of the exposition, the enterprise of its managers, and the comprehensiveness of the exhibits, the fact that $30,000 is to be spent in attractions and special features, the latest inventions as well as the latest novelties in the amusement world, and including $7,000 for music, shows that while the agricultural and industrial interests of the country are to be well looked after, the people's enjoyment will not be neglected. America and Europe have been scouring for all that is best in every line of attraction. Boldest, Kinrally, the greatest master of spectacle on earth, has been secured to produce in all its brilliancy and gorgeousness his stupendous production "The Orient," which was the wonder of London, Eng., at Olympia for a year, and that is only one of the really costly features that have either been engaged or are being negotiated for. Then there are the new Dairy Building and the new Art Gallery, which will greatly increase the value of the exhibition as a factor in the education and elevation of the people. In the Dairy Building not only will there be exhibits of dairy products, utensils, and so on, but lectures and demonstrations will be given twice daily in a hall provided with seating accommodation for 600 people. Reduced rates will, of course, be available on all lines of travel.

Dr. W. R. Hall has removed his office from Victoria Block to his new building on Sixth street, next door to the Fire Hall.
 From one point of view the bearded always has an attractive figure.

HEALTH RESORTS AND ATTRACTIONS

There is no region in America richer in mineral springs than Colorado, while throughout the state there are pleasure resorts and splendid places of attraction of various kinds in great numbers. It has been truly said that all of Colorado is a health resort, and this statement is sustained by the most eminent physicians of the country. What with its beautiful cities on the plains, its gorgeous mountain peaks and lovely valleys, its awful canons and their rushing torrents, its forests and streams, its broad green parks, and charming crystal lakes amid the mountains, what more could nature provide or man desire for his welfare or his delights. Not only the health-giving mineral and thermal springs, which gush spontaneously from the mountain sides invite the invalid and the weary, but in all the rest of these charms of nature is found a panacea for the ills and cares of body and mind diseased.

To enable persons to reach these favored localities without unnecessary expenditure of time or money, the Union Pacific has put in effect very low rates and splendid train service, three trains leaving Missouri River daily for Denver, one of which is "The Colorado Special," which is the finest train in the West. Accommodations are provided for all classes of passengers, the equipment including free reclining chair car, dining car, buffet, smoking car, drawing room sleepers and day coaches.

GOT JAGGED

Fishermen Filled Captured Turtle With Their Own Ammunition.

In case the knack of telling fish tales should become a lost art and to show Vitel Gourdeau that he is no longer a bald-headed rowdy but must take a seat in the god's, A. C. McKay once again wonders into the sacred precincts of piscatorial tale telling.

"It was a beautiful summer's day when Grant and Hooper, Mr. Tweedie, Chas. Rutley, Jake Guittard and one or two more of us hired the tug Vick and went down to the mouth of the river to fish," said the veteran Maple City sportsman as he settled back in his seat and took a long draw at his pipe as if for inspiration.

Mr. Tweedie was the man who had charge of the Northwestern Stone Co.'s work here when they laid the cement walk that still stands, or rather stands still, in front of the Rankin Hotel. In addition to laying walks, Mr. Tweedie labored under the impression that he could catch fish. He never proved it on this day, however. Arrived at the lighthouse, Mr. Tweedie ran across the river and began to fish. In a few minutes he had a bite that carried off the biggest part of his fishing tackle. He came over to us, replenished his line and took a pull at the bait jar. He again got a bite with ruinous results. This time he came over for more line and bait, saying that he had the biggest bass in Lake St. Clair biting at his line. He wanted the rest of us to go over and help catch the fish, but we were wise and had seen those kind of dog fish bass before and we didn't go. We knew what was biting. After repeated loss of tackle the dog fish quit bothering him and we heard nothing for a while. Suddenly we heard a great shout of jubilation from across the river and looking over we saw Tweedie pulling up something. When he got it to the top of the water it proved to be a huge snapping turtle. In some way the hook had caught the turtle in the tail and it came up tail first with head and feet dangling spasmodically in the atmosphere. We secured it and took the turtle on board the tug. Then the fun commenced. Chas. Rutley gave the turtle a drink of whiskey. That shell creature was soon walking on air. It was soon on a howling drunk. It staggered round the deck the most joyful turtle you ever saw. It fell into the stoke hole, where Reeves, the stoker, made a kick at him. The creature resented this and snapped a mouthful of shoe, incidentally getting its teeth mixed up with the colored man's feet. That turtle was gloriously drunk. It snapped at everything, even the iron stanchions on the boat. Jack Guittard brought the hilarious turtle home and put it in the barrel at the Rankin House, where it lived for some time, but it never had such a good time as the day it went on the spree.

For Improving The Nails.

By far worse than corns, the ingrowing toe nail makes life miserable for the man or woman, and no relief seems to come from paring the nail or in wadding it with cotton. To give instant relief to such pain a mixture used by the best physicians can be made as follows: Procure of the druggist one dram of muriatic acid and one dram of nitric acid and one ounce of chloride of zinc. Have these mixed thoroughly by the druggist or perform the operation yourself and apply one drop to the affected part once a day. It will not only give relief at once, but it will last all day.

The Orange In Spain.

It is considered a very beautiful thing to eat an orange before breakfast. But who can eat an orange well? One must go to Spain to see that done. The senorita cuts off the rind with her silver knife, then, putting her fork into the peeled fruit, she detaches every morsel with her pearly teeth and continues to eat the orange without losing a drop of the juice and lays down the core with the fork still in it.

Octopus For Dinner.

Octopuses are pretty plentiful in Japanese waters and have been known to attack fishermen in their boats. When this hideous monster assumes the aggressive, the only chance the fishermen have is to lop off the tentacles of the beast. Falling this, the boat may be upset and the men dragged under. The octopus is highly valued in Japan as an article of food.

The Explanation.

Knock—I sat down in my easy chair last night and picked up that new novel of Scribner's. I didn't get to bed until 4 this morning.

THE MAN IN ARMOR

Was no match for the microbe. Giants he might slay but this microscopic organism defied him, and in many a campaign more men were destroyed by camp diseases than by the enemy's sword.

The one way to arm against microbic disease is to keep the blood pure. Impure blood both breeds and feeds disease.

The signs of impure blood are easy to read. Pimples, boils and eruptions generally proclaim the blood to be impure. Scrofulous sores and swellings, salt-rheum, eczema, etc., are other signs of a corrupt condition of the blood.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood and cures diseases caused by the blood's impurity. It cures scrofulous sores, boils, pimples, eczema and other defiling and disgusting diseases.

It gives me great pleasure to express my faith in the virtue of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Mr. Ezekiel Florio, of Graytown, Ottawa Co., Ohio. "I suffered every thing for two years with humor on my face, which baffled the skill of some of the most noted physicians. Was at once advised to go to the hospital; was doctored there for three months without success. Then began to doctor with a 'chemist.' He also failed to help me. I began Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, with no faith whatever in it. Did it only to please my wife, but I am happy to tell you that after taking five bottles I am entirely cured."

FREE. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. K. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

JOYOUS CROWDS.

London Led on the Difference Between the Insanity of the Man in the Asylum and in the Street.

The London Lancet seriously discusses the psychology of jubilation. After referring to the shouting, the bell-ringing, the feather-ticking and so on it proceeds:

"Of course, such exuberance is an insanity of the moment. When it is over we make excuses and look sheep-faced when brought to reflection; but we are able to settle down to our prosaic existence much more quickly than would have been possible if we had fought against the volcanic explosion of feeling and endeavored to cool ourselves by more gradual and rational methods."

In the public outbursts of enthusiasm in the night time, which sees the culmination of the seismic social disturbance because inhibition is then at its lowest ebb and the light of day is gone, we must have more light so we flout the quiet heavens with artificial fire. The silence of night is oppressive and we must have a soothing noise. So we shout and then laugh and sung until the lava of jubilation has run out and we can rest lapped in the peace that follows an irresistible letting-go.

"So might argue the crowds filling our streets on Monday and peace nights and the ability of this frame of mind to madness must strike observant men. The essential difference between madness of a man inside an asylum and the insanity of a man outside is that the former has his full inhibition at times when there is no excuse except his own personal morbid condition. When, therefore, the rest of society is unprepared it resents the forcible exhibition of what is against its feeling of the moment. The latter's outburst exactly represents that feeling and the sanity of what is really a manifestation of insanity is accepted by all."

The Lancet argues that these ebullitions are good for the community, though it says: "We feel that this is tantamount to confessing that the march of civilization has not modified human nature so much as might be believed. The world is very much as it was long ago. There is still the same tendency toward explosive-ness, mind storms, and loss of inhibition, and it takes very little to seduce the seductive into the de-structive of the child, the 'rag' of the university student or the 'hooliganism' of the man in the street. Habit may do much. The events of the last three years have been in the nature of a new experience. There was no preparation and no gradual adaptation to new conditions, while everything that argued for explosiveness was provided."

Killing of a Great Enemy.

Tippoo Sahib succeeded his father, Tipoo Ali, in the Government of Mysore, which he defied with success against the Great Mogul. In 1799 he engaged in war with the English, and was defeated in a number of actions. He then made overtures to the French Republic through the Governor of the Isle of France. Only a few hundreds of French of the lowest caste, however, reached Seringapatam, and these immediately set up a tree of liberty, surrounded by a red night cap, and vowed vengeance to all tyrants except their ally, "citizen Tippoo." Lord Mornington, determined to annihilate the plans of Tippoo, at once despatched thirty-one thousand men into Mysore. To these was added a strong reinforcement of British troops in the pay of the Nizam, and some regiments of Sepoys commanded by English officers. The united forces came into conflict with Tippoo's army on March 22, 1799, when within two days' march of Seringapatam. In this action Colonel Wellesley (afterwards Duke of Wellington) greatly distinguished himself, and the success of the action was ascribed to his regiment, the 34th. Tippoo soon made very humble overtures for peace, but the English, having no faith in him, continued the siege, and the city was carried by storm on May 4. In the midst of the confusion the Sultan was seen to mount a horse and make a state apparently without aim or object. There he received a wound in the right side. He rode forward a few paces, when he was again wounded in the left breast, and at the same moment his horse was brought down. He was placed in a palanquin and a few Mysoreans gathered round him. His turban attracted the notice of a grenadier, who attempted to seize his sword-belt, which was very valuable. He was weak and helpless as he was, made a stroke at the soldier with his sword, who thereupon shot him through the head. The English Empire of India, thus freed from its most formidable enemy, was enabled soon after to send an armament up the Red Sea to assist in driving the French from Egypt.

An Orphan Home.

A certain young youth from the East end of London, had just been deported into the country for a week's holiday, under the auspices of one of the benevolent societies which now exist for that purpose, and on the morning of his arrival he stood in the main street of the rural town, watching the local pair-horse bus as it drove up from the railway station. "Hi, sonny," shouted the driver, as he brought the bus to a standstill, "just catch hold of that horse's head, will you?" Which "ore?" queried the lad. "The off 'un," said the driver. "Horphan," said the lad in disgust, "ow d'ye think 'I know which ov em's a horphan? Gars you don't kid me that way," and he walked away with an air of supreme contempt.

A CATASTROPHE

The steam roller, with its waterproof covering on Park street, was the cause of what might have been a fatal runaway last evening on that street. Charles Lynn and Walter Harbert were out taking a pleasant
Sunday evening drive on Park street.
All went well until the horse became frightened at the steam roller—better known as the black elephant—and ran away.

Both young men kept their nerve and grabbed a line apiece and were getting the horse steadied down a little when the line Robert held broke. The horse thus steered by the one line ran in a telegraph pole at the side of the road near Waterhouse's bakery, throwing both out—Lynn hit first and Harbert came on top of him. Neither were seriously hurt, but were badly bruised about the body and will be laid up for a few days. The buggy was badly smashed. The young men are thinking of coming on the city for damages.

MR. VAN HAMM DEAD

G. P. Scholfield, manager of the Standard Bank here, received a telegram at noon from Sutton, Ont., announcing the death of John Van-dahl Hamm. Mr. VanHamm was for several years Mr. Scholfield's accountant in the Chatham branch and he was well known and liked during his six years' residence in this city.

In the year 1892 Mr. Scholfield and Mr. Hamm came to this city to accept positions in the Standard Bank.
Mr. Hamm, or VanHamm, as he was better known, lived here till the 15th of June, 1898. While here he was married to Miss Armstrong, of Markham. Mr. Hamm was an enthusiastic bicyclist, a member of the old bicycle club, and also manager of the lacrosse team. It was with genuine regret that his friends learned in 1898 that Mr. Hamm was suffering from consumption and had been forced to take a three months' holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamm left for Denver, Colorado. At the expiration of the three months he was still unfit to return to work and was granted a leave of absence of six months.

He got no better, however,
and finding he would never be able to resume his duties, he resigned.
About seven months ago Mr. and Mrs. VanHamm returned from the west and since then they have lived north of Toronto.

The funeral will take place from Jackson Point to Markham on Wednesday.

Mr. Van-dahl Hamm was one of the most popular young men in Chatham and a large circle of friends regret his early death. The warmest tribute to them was that of his former manager, Mr. Scholfield, who he said, "Mr. Van-dahl Hamm was the finest fellow I ever knew."

There will be a meeting of the directors of the West Kent Agricultural Society at 7.30 Thursday evening.
Important business is to be transacted and all the directors are asked to be don, and the editor of this G. H. J.

stories from these gentlemen when they

VICIOUS DOG

Pherele, the little daughter of Wm.
Crackie, man-of-all-work at Ursula Academy, met with quite a serious accident on Saturday while playing with the dog. The animal became angry and pounced upon the unfortunate little girl, setting his teeth in her forehead just above the left eye, tearing an ugly gash which required five stitches.
Before assistance could arrive the dog had bitten her in several places on the face. Dr. J. W. Rutherford was called and dressed the wounds, alleviating to some extent the child's intense suffering.

MUST STOP

A number of young lads have been in the habit lately of shooting birds with a shot gun on the flats near Brundage's ice house. This practice while directly contrary to the law, has become a dangerous one for the employees at Drader's mill.

Arthur Merritt, one of these employees, entered a complaint at the police station this morning and, as a result, the matter will be investigated by the police, and if these young men are caught while indulging in their dangerous sport there will be trouble for some of them.

Mr. Merritt says that the shot from their guns travels across the river and upon several occasions he has been struck by it while at work.

No names were given to the police,
so that if the boys are wise and discontinue this practice the matter will be quietly dropped.

BASEBALL

The Tilbury Juniors and the Briscoes play at 2 o'clock on the park this afternoon.

The Bankers and the Aberdeens do battle at 4.30 this afternoon this afternoon. Robert and Campbell will be the battery for the Aberdeens, Hamilton and Creighton for the bankers.

The C. M. C. C. baseball team goes to Leamington on Wednesday and play Tilbury here on Friday afternoon, the latter will be a good game, no doubt, as both teams have been winning right along.

The Grays' baseball team was defeated on Saturday evening by The Planet, assisted by the Bankers' battery, Hamilton and McKee. The score stood 19 to 12 when the game was called on account of darkness at the end of the eighth inning.

"Joe" Douglas, as usual, was in the box for the Grays, and was hit hard at times and at other times received the most ragged support. The game was interesting and anybody's until the last inning, when by a conglomera-tion of errors and heavy hitting The Planet secured six runs.

The Planet registered a kick against Umpire Johnston's decisions and he was replaced by Austin.

Hamilton pitched a good game, only a few hits being secured off his delivery, and with a few exceptions he had good support. The score was as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R	H	E
Grays	0	1	1	6	1	1	2	0	12	10	7
Planet	0	0	4	0	3	6	0	6	19	12	3

Yellowstone National Park

This famous national park offers to the tourist and sightseer more novelties and curiosities than perhaps any other spot on earth. The stage ride

The new route to the Yellowstone

COUPLE OF CASES

A couple of interesting cases came up before Judge Houston at the Police Court this morning. The first was that of King vs. Taylor for providing liquor for Michael Healey, who has been on the "Indian list." After the hearing of some of the evidence the case was adjourned till this afternoon at four o'clock.

The other case was that against Frank Brundage, who was charged by Humane Officer McGregor with cruelty to animals. It is claimed by the complainant that the defendant was working a horse which was suffering from a sore shoulder. This case came up last week and was adjourned until to-day.

Henry Dagneau, broker, was the first witness. He said that the horse was in a very bad condition and should have been laid up. In his examination by "Doc" Arnold, who appeared for Brundage, he said that the sores were as large as a couple of silver dollars.

Mr. Arnold—I suppose they would be the kind that you would get 14 or 15 per cent. interest on.—Laughter.

On further examination he said that he pressed his hand over the sore on the horse's back and the animal flinched visibly.

Mr. Arnold—How many pounds of pressure did you put on the horse's back?

Mr. Dagneau—Oh, I could not say.
I didn't have any scales there.

Mr. Arnold—Oh, didn't you? Why,
I should think you could have found a "scale" on the sore.—More laughter.

Mr. Dagneau, however, held to the opinion that the horse should not be worked.

Dr. Radley and Dr. DeCov, however, both of whom had examined the horse,
said that the owner was perfectly justified in working the horse, the wounds being such that working the animal did not impede their healing in the least.

Judgment was reserved until a week
from to-morrow.

ERIEAU

Aug. 24.—Mr. and Mrs. Will Rutley and son Frederick are spending Sunday at Thursville.

Miss Verna Heyward is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Falls.

Quite recently a gentleman, while talking to a group of young people, asked why one got so well acquainted with the summer girl. No one made an observation, though all looked rosy and conscious. "Because one sees so much of her," and the speaker cast a fleeting glance toward the beach where a number of charming specimens clad in abbreviated lengths of flannel and more or less braid, disported themselves in the wave-lets to the edification of the sparrows on the telegraph wire.

Mrs. Panchard and daughter Mildred, of Chicago, and Miss Edith Tackaberry, are the guests of Miss Abram at Shaganappee.

On Friday evening last the c-fagers were awakened by sweet strains and melodies which came over the water. All the most tender songs, both classical and popular, rang out with all the sweet harmonies which "Dreaming of Love," "Sunny Tennessee," "I Love Thee, I Adore Thee," and others of that line possess.

When finally the feeling words and dainty symphony of "O Promise Me" floated on the warm moon beam myophrys it would have given an on-looker the impression that promises were either a thing of the past or else wholly unnecessary.

The Bonnie Belle took a merry party out this morning for a sail. It happened to be a crowd of musicians, and songs, gospel of course, were sung that brought the tears to the eyes of the top. It being Sunday and having no lines aboard the yacht, the finny tribe gave in peace.

Saturday morning a happy crowd went out for a sail in one of the most yachts, and the Eau not being large enough to contain them they took a jaunt into the lake. It was delightful until about half past twelve, and then they began to think about lunch. They turned to come back, but alas, the breeze was gone and then the high spirits of the party went too. They drifted leisurely sawward and sighed and longed for home—sweet home. After long and dreary waiting the piers loomed up and also a tiny breeze, and they sat watches in hand and had visions of dinner float in distorted shapes before their strained eyes. The breeze freshened and in time the yacht grated on the sand. With one accord the hungry yachters climbed to the deck and made for terra firma. Their watches said four o'clock, while the inner man cried for food. Its a queer fact, but you can't coax them to take another trip of that kind for a few days any way.

The Bungalow is filled with Cleveland visitors, while Chatham is represented by Will Martin, Will Goodreau and Miss Kate Delahanty, of Austin's.

Miss Rose Sheldon returned to the city after a pleasant visit with Mrs. Jerry O'Brien.

Bert Merritt has painted his summer residence a steel grey with trimmings of white and a red roof. The cottage presents a fine appearance.

One of the social events of the season took place Saturday evening on the grounds of "Oscola." C. Greening's pretty summer residence. A large bon-fire was lighted about nine o'clock, and the large number of guests sat or stood in groups around it engaged in conversation or taking short strolls along the beach beneath the beams of the kindly moon. When nothing remained but the glowing coals, corn was roasted and the guests hovered around the butter place, armed with a roasted ear. Candy was passed, after which all repaired to the pavilion, where an impromptu dance was held, the gentleman furnishing the music by singing and whistling. The guests dispersed at a late hour after a most delightful evening and what was a novel experience to many. Nearly all the cottages on the bar were represented, and the ladies in their dainty frocks and bright ribbons aided, of course, by the mainly beauty of the male portion, presented a lovely sight in the flashing lights of the fire as well as the softer radiance of the moon.

Mr. A. M. Dowdley is an Erieau visitor to-day.

The Misses Robertson entertained a large number of friends to a bon-fire and corn roast Saturday evening. A most enjoyable time is reported by all.

The beauty lovers would enjoy the sights seen here at times. The harbor was dotted with sails to-day, nearly every boat here being out, and it made one of the prettiest scenes imaginable. Then to-night when the moon arose it was, of course, on the wane, but it shone on the dark surface of the bay in a silvery pathway, touching the rushes with its magic wand until they looked like steel. One need not go to distant lands for beautiful sights as long as Erieau possesses a moon.

Mrs. McLean, of Chatham, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. G. Kerr, "Hazeldean" cottage.

Miss Mabel Johnson returned to the city after a pleasant visit with Miss Bessie Brackin, of Happy Days.

George A. Taylor, barber, Erieau, has opened a first class barber shop and will give his customers the best service.

REV. COLLES ABROAD

Windsor, Aug. 24.—Rev. W. H. G. Colles, of Chatham, filled Rev. Canon Hincks' pulpit at All Saints' church this evening, the Canon having gone to Sarina for the day. A mixed choir led the singing. The regular vestry choir is enjoying its annual camp at Bar Point. To-day it sang at Grace church, Amherstburg. By next Sunday both the Canon and his choir will have returned to the city. Rev. Mr. Colles announced this evening that the vestry would meet to-morrow evening to consider the trouble between All Saints' and its off-shot, the Chapel of the Ascension.

ROYAL MUSKOKA NOW OPEN

Guests Are Arriving Daily at the New Summer Resort.

The opening of the new Royal Muskoka Hotel, on Lake Rosseau, Muskoka, has been a source of satisfaction to the proprietors, and the reservations that have been made up to the present for accommodation at this resort assures the success of the venture. Guests are arriving daily, and by next week, hundreds of people will be enjoying the beauties of Muskoka with the advantage of sojourning in one of the best summer hotels in America.

Among the guests at the hotel now are prominent people from Buffalo, Chicago, New York, and other American cities, as well as many Canadians.

The Ontario Government, in conjunction with the Grand Trunk Railway system, is continuing the policy inaugurated last year of restocking the Muskoka lakes with parent bass. The first carload was deposited in lake Rosseau, June 20, and a finer lot of bass have seldom been seen. Last year 10,000 fish were transplanted into the Northern Lakes with much success. The fishing this year in the Muskoka Lakes is good, some excellent catches having been made, the bass weighing from two to four pounds, and pickerel from two to eight pounds.

ONLY A MASK.

Many are not being benefited by the summer vacation, as they should be. Now, notwithstanding much outdoor life, they are little if any stronger than they were. The tan on their faces is darker and makes them look healthier, but it is only a mask. They are still nervous, easily tired, upset, trifles, and they do not eat nor sleep well. What they need is what tones the nerves, perfects digestion, creates appetite, and makes sleep refreshing, and that is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Pupils and teachers generally will find the chief purpose of the vacation best subserved by this great medicine which, as we know, "builds up the whole system."

CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE,
Chatham, Ont.

I had been so borne along by the rushing tide of excitement that I had not found time to picture the moment of my meeting with John Bourke. My mind had gone further than that, and I had fancied myself telling him the wonderful story of his true birth. But now, as I rang the door-bell, my heart failed me. Of what ingratitude and selfishness must I not seem guilty after the letter I had left and my sudden disappearance!

If I had come back on an errand of my own I think that I should have turned and run away.

However, in the matter which had brought me I was a thing of no importance—only a voice with which great news should be told.

Mrs. Jennett herself came to the door, and started back with an exclamation of amazement at sight of me. Her little round face lighted up, then fell again.

"Well, I am surprised, miss," she remarked, with a certain stiffness foreign to her kindly nature. "After the fright you gave us. And Mr. Bourke said, from your letter to him, you were never coming back any more."

"Fears sprang to my eyes, and under the chill of her displeasure I realized that I was hungry, and miserable, and very, very tired."

"Oh, Mrs. Jennett, please don't scold me. Indeed I couldn't help it," I exclaimed, like a child. And then the tears came plashing down over my cheeks.

In an instant the cloud was gone from the sun of my kindness. "You poor child!" she ejaculated. "Now, don't you cry. I'm sure it's all right. Or it will be, since you've come back. Just as I said to Mr. Bourke. 'You mark my words; something's behind it all.' And now I'm certain it was so. Come in and I'll make you a nice fresh cup of tea. My word, it is good to see your pretty face again!"

With pattings and caressings, which went straight to my heart, she drew me into the neat, narrow passage and shut the door.

"Is Mr. Bourke at home?" I faltered, drying my eyes. "I want to see him very much on most important business."

"He's this instant finished his breakfast, and just as I came to answer the door he was on his way to the study, where a man was waiting to see him. He sent a message that he had important business, too; just those very words."

The blood rushed up to my face. What if it should be Roger—already? "Do you know the man's name?" I quickly asked.

"He was a stranger to me and Mr. Bourke, too, when I took in the name. But he said I was to say 'Jim Wel-

A GIRL OF THE PEOPLE
By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

Never had moments seemed so long; but at last I was opposite the tops of the laurel bushes that grew near the house; then my feet touched the ground. With that I gave a sob, and letting go of the rope fell in a huddled heap on the grass, where I lay quite still and nerveless. I was not in the least hurt, but I felt broken to pieces, and my hands and feet pringed, all over with the sensation known as "going to sleep."

A faint "Hiss!" at the window whence I had come roused me at length, and I tottered up, unsteady, until I supported myself against the house wall. But in a minute or two I was myself again, sufficiently at least to feel that I could walk; and when I had given back an answering whistle and seen the rope drawn up I began to search for the wide avenue which would lead me to the gates I remembered.

A late moon was just rising, and after I had stumbled over a few flower-beds I came into the drive. Never before had I been out alone in the night and the country, but I was too thankful to have escaped from the house with sound limbs to think of being afraid.

The great gates were locked, but there was a small gate for foot-passengers at the side, and this was open. The lodge was dark, and apparently deserted, as it had been before, so I passed freely, and drew a long breath of relief when I found myself out in the open road.

I forced myself to recall that in driving in we had first seen the gates on the right, therefore I could form an idea of the way to the railway station. I was glad now that I had looked often in the carriage window, for I remembered several landmarks which made the long walk seem shorter, buoying me up from time to time with renewed hope.

At the station I had a bitter disappointment, for the place was dark and deserted; but when I had hovered miserably about for half an hour, perhaps I saw in the brightening moonlight a huge market cart coming down the road.

I halted it, careless of the surprise which might be aroused by the appeal of a young woman alone near the railway station at such a time of night. A man answered my call, peering curiously down at me from his high seat. He was going to Bournemouth, at which place he would arrive about four in the morning. If I were anxious to reach town as soon as possible I could certainly get an early train from there, while at a small place like this I might have to wait till much later. He would give me a lift if I liked. I did like; and presently, perched beside my new friend, I was jogging along the quiet country road, with only the moon to stare at me.

My patience was sorely tried by this delay, which I had not been practical enough to count upon. But I consoled myself with the thought that my tracks were being more skilfully covered than if I had gone direct to London by train; and that as it was I should probably arrive in town before the hour at which my absence was likely to be discovered. I counted still upon getting away by five; but I had to wait in Bournemouth till nearly six, and it was nine when I reached Waterloo Station. Walter Leigh's money got me a cab, and at half-past nine, told by distant Big Ben, my driver was stopping before the well-remembered house in the quiet Westminster street.

I had been so borne along by the rushing tide of excitement that I had not found time to picture the moment of my meeting with John Bourke. My mind had gone further than that, and I had fancied myself telling him the wonderful story of his true birth. But now, as I rang the door-bell, my heart failed me. Of what ingratitude and selfishness must I not seem guilty after the letter I had left and my sudden disappearance!

If I had come back on an errand of my own I think that I should have turned and run away.

The name struck like a sharp knife. For all I knew to the contrary there might be a million Jim Welcomes in the world; harmless fellows, who might have equally harmless reasons for calling on the well-known young member of Parliament. But, quick as a flash, I was as sure as if I had been told that this Jim Welcome was from Essex street; that he was the man who had persecuted me; that he was the cat-paw who, in some sly, unexplained, horribly clever way, was now to be thrust in the fire by Roger Opp.

Without a word I ran down the passage to the study door. My fingers shook so that I could hardly grasp the knob. I never thought of stopping to knock, and as I fumbled with the handle there came to my ears the loud sound of a coarse voice raised in anger. "She was my girl, I tell you. Leastways, she would 'bin if you hadn't come round 'er with yer wicked lies, to spite 'er life and mine too. I know wot you done, well enough. The girl's own cousin told me, no longer ago than last night, and I've been 'angin' round your 'ouse since 'twas light, wylin' till I could 'ope to be let in. Now, wot I'm goin' to do is this—"

I flung the door open and staggered across the floor. I do not think I half knew what I was doing. The room seemed dark with white light. In the midst of it, black against a window, I saw two tall figures—John Bourke and Welcome—close together. John was unarmed, but Welcome had whipped out a revolver. With a scream, I rushed forward and struck up his arm. His finger had been on the trigger, and the weapon went off with a report that deafened me, then fell on the floor at a distance. Quick as lightning I ran, and, picking the smoking revolver up, flung it out through the window.

There was a crash and jingle of shivering glass and a shout in the street from some passer-by, but I hardly heard either. "Take care!—take care!" I was crying. "He may have a knife; he will use it."

But, deprived of the one advantage he had possessed over the man taken unawares, Welcome—the swaggering Adonis of Broad street—was a child in the hands of John Bourke.

I saw the great fellow seized and forced down upon his knees, his arms twisted behind him. And by that time John Bourke had drawn a pistol, and I found that I was sitting in the deck-chair where I had sat so often in happier days, and near me was the table with the typewriter, where I had been working when Lady Feo Ringwood came one day—a hundred years ago.

"My child, don't cry, unless you are sorry that you saved my life from that poor ruffian-madman," John Bourke was saying.

ARGYLLSHIRE.

Who knows Argyllshire's story? You tell all Britain's fate. Since there the Roman's glory broke at her Highland gate. To leave the sons of Erin To bring the Scottish name Where blessed by holy Kieran, A town has kindly fame.

For there the stone of wonder, To Eastern magic known, Was brought the oak thwarts under, From Britain's crowning stone: Kinloch, Dunadd, Dunstaffnage—Three forts of old renown—Safe kept that stone, the preface Where Scot shall wear the crown.

Argyll's sweet dewy splendor Looks over loch and sound, Whose purple lights attend her, Imperially crowned and frown. And, kissed by loving nature, In ocean's arms she lies, Fair faced with hills whose verdure From isle and mainland rises.

In mist the mountains haunting The spirits still remain Of those who wooed her, ranting Proud names of Scot or Dane. The flag of Fionn dailes Once more grim Haco's galleys Flash past the Hebrides.

Once more, Iona, waken With choral songs the deeps, Lift fear from hearts sin shaken Where great Columbia sleeps—Green isle of white sands, bearer Of happiness and doom. Dred with a hue yet fairer—The red of martyrdom—Duke of Argyll.

THE KING'S ENGLISH.

Some Curiosities of Language in Writing or speaking.

A short time ago a midland contemporary published a series of curious notices which had come to the personal knowledge of some of its correspondents. Among these were the following: "Welsh (Welsh) eggs 're deadly.'" "I will myself, every Tuesday and Friday." "Take notice when this board is out of site the river is dangerous." "Widow with large family wants washing by the week." "Mr. and Mrs. Jones (of a Birmingham address) have left off clothing of every description; inspection invited; splendid opportunities for everyone." "Ladies and gents sold and holed; ladies, 1s 6d, gents 2s 6d." "This is the old shop just come from above." "A large stock of ladies' hose, pure cashmere, to be cleared at 8d per pair. They won't last long at this price." "Try our 1s 2d butter; nobody can touch it." "Astonishing belts made to order." "Sailor's vitals cooked here." On a tombstone: "Erected to the memory of John Phillips, accidentally shot as a mark of affection by his brother." "Why go further and be galled elsewhere? Step inside." "Bring your bones here, good prices given." "Closed for the day owing to funeral of proprietor's wife, and who will carry on as usual to-morrow morning." We have also come across the following collection of curios in writing or speaking: A certain politician, condemning the Government of the day for its policy concerning the income tax, is reported to have said: "They'll keep cutting the wool off the sheep that lays the golden egg until they pump it dry." An orator bore off the palm for mixed metaphor when he declared that "The British lion, whether it is roaming the deserts of India or climbing the forests of Canada, will not draw in its horns or retire into its shell." A lecturer on chemistry once said: "One drop of this poison placed on the tongue of a cat is sufficient to kill the strongest man," and a lieutenant stated that the Royal Niger Company wished to kill him to prevent his going up the river until next year. On one occasion one of the Irish whips in the House of Commons telegraphed to Dublin that "the silence of the Irish members would be heard in the House of Commons no longer." A coroner's jury once reported that a coroner had come to his death by excessive drinking, producing apoplexy in the minds of the jury.—Golden Penny.

A Mystifying Village.

Stokenchurch is a very delightful little village as anybody who has stayed there during the summer will be only too ready to testify, but the difficulty about Stokenchurch is that it doesn't quite know where it is so to speak. There seem to be quite a number of English country gentlemen of reckoning the pretty place within their borders, with the usual result that "too many cooks spoil the broth," and Stokenchurch occasionally gets into a muddle as to how it exactly stands in the matter of location. The postal authorities tell you to address your letter to "Stokenchurch, near Wallingford." This, therefore, makes the village come in Berkshire, but if you get the parliamentary voting lists you will find that for all electoral purposes Stokenchurch is regarded as being in the county of Oxfordshire. And then, as if to drive the inhabitant quite out of his senses, there comes along the Poor Law people, who say and insist that Stokenchurch is in Buckinghamshire. The whole business sounds very much like comic opera, although the comic side is not always obvious to the inhabitants.

Brave Grenadier Rewarded.

Ex-Color Sergeant Morgan, late of the 2nd Grenadier Guards, has been appointed Lodge-keeper by the King, near the Sovereign's entrance at Windsor Castle.

This gallant soldier wears the distinguished conduct medal for bravery in South Africa. In the engagement when the veldt was set on fire by the Boers, and our wounded Guardsmen were burned to death, Morgan lost both his officers by his side and 46 of his company.

When the officers were placed out of action he brought his company out of the fire, and came through it himself unscathed.

Charles Dickens' Effects.

Charles Dickens' office table, chair, and looking-glass, and another high-backed chair which he used in the editor's office of All the Year Round, were sold at auction in London recently for £85. They were given at Dickens' death to his housekeeper, and sold by her to a collector.

"THE LAND OF THE SUNSET"

Some Impressions of a Chatham Citizen who is Touring in Southern California. Special Correspondence to THE PLANET.

Capitola, Cal., Aug. 14, 1902.
To the Editor of The Planet.

Leaving Menlo Park, I came down here through the famous Santa Clara Valley, which, for miles, simply one orchard of well-trimmed young trees, loaded down with ripe and ripening fruit. On the way I had a good view of the Lick Observatory, on the summit of Mount Hamilton, about 30 miles from San Jose. Capitola is situated on the Bay of Monterey, the great seaside resort of Central California. The bay is a half moon, about ten miles across, with Santa Cruz on one side and the city of Monterey on the other. It is very much like the Bay of Naples with Loma Prieta (dark mountain) in the distance to do duty for Vesuvius; and for two months in the summer its numerous beaches are crowded with the ubiquitous summer girl, prettily draped in a diminished bathing dress. The Hotel Veranda overlooking the sea, are filled with American tourists, and they in turn are filled with plutocratic dowagers and ambitious mammas, who rock incessantly while their daughters are bathing in the surf, or sunning themselves on the sands.

DAINTY DANCERS.

Not far from here are the celebrated "Big Trees," some of which are 40 to 40 feet in diameter. One young lady told me twenty couples danced on the stump of one tree, and that she was one of the dancers. Another big tree stump in the middle of the woods, they have cut a tunnel through the tree, as it is so much shorter than going round. At Santa Cruz, about four miles from here, I saw a very curious machine, a wave motor. It consists of a perpendicular shaft or well, about ten feet in diameter, sunk in the rocky cliffs, close to the sea, with a tunnel at the lower end on a level with the water. Inside the shaft there is a float of great weight which is raised by every wave that comes into the tunnel and falls by its own weight as the wave recedes. This motion works a pump whereby water is raised into a large tank, and from there is used to run a dynamo which supplies the street car line with power.

THE SUN ENGINE.

Near Pasadena is another curious labor saving machine called a sun engine. It consists of a series of power lenses for focusing the sun's rays and is mounted like a sidereal telescope in such a way as to follow the sun's course throughout the day, and keep the sun's rays concentrated on a given surface. The heat thus obtained is used to generate steam in a boiler and run a small engine. During cloudy weather, of course, it cannot be used, but there they have a clear sky continuing for about eight months in the year.

Truckee, Cal., Aug. 16, 1902.

The last place I visited in California was Tahoe City on Tahoe Lake, a body of fresh water about as large as Lake St. Clair. It lies on the border of California and Nevada and is about 7,000 feet above sea level in one of the highest parts of the Sierras. It is surrounded on all sides by mountains and is said to be 2,000 feet deep in the deepest part. Here on the shore of the lake in the heart of the virgin forest of pine and fir is a large modern hotel called the Tahoe Tavern, much frequented by vacationists during the summer months. I returned to the line of railway by a stage drive of fifteen miles through the mountains, the grandeur and wildness of which are only equaled by the Selkirk and the Canadian Rockies.

A DARING HOLD-UP.

At one point the road passed around a narrow ledge of rock that rises sheer 500 feet above the gorge below. The driver was very expert in handling his four horses and showed no much confidence that we did not realize what might have happened if a stray boulder had tipped us over the edge. He told us how a short time before he was "held up" on this road by a masked highwayman. When he was rounding a curve he suddenly found himself looking into the muzzle end of two revolvers and he was politely asked to stop the stage, which he immediately did, although this man was a "perfect stranger" to him. The passengers were then invited to alight and deposit their money and valuables on the ground, which they all did with much more alacrity than willingness. The driver had a shot gun and two of the passengers had revolvers, but they were afraid to reach for them so long as the robber had "the drop" on them. As the robber was alone he did not take the risk of searching their pockets, but was content to take their word that what ever they turned out for him was all they had. After the ceremony was over they were permitted to resume their journey, the highwayman covering them until they were out of sight. We, however, arrived safely at Truckee without any such romantic adventure and took the overland route for Salt Lake City.

A COSMOPOLITAN COUNTRY.

There is one feature of the people of California that is not likely to escape observation. There is no California type of Down East Yankee, a Southerner, or even a man from the Middle West, is so apt to betray his locality by his accent. But Californians have no accent of their own. The country is made up of people from all parts of America, and indeed from all parts of the world. Mexicans, South Americans, Hawaiians, Japanese, Chinese, as well as people from all parts of Canada and the other states of the union are to be found all over California, and especially in San Francisco. I was much impressed with the large number of Englishmen in San Francisco, more than in most American cities. Under these circumstances it is impossible that the people should be of a homogeneous character and present a distinctive type. In my next I shall try to say something of Salt Lake City and Denver, and the country in which they are situated.

SUCCESSFUL C. B. COLLEGE STUDENTS.

Mr. Edward Wells, former teacher in this County, who has been attending the Business College here for some time, has accepted the position of Commercial Master and Penman in a Massachu. business college. Mr. Wells had six positions to choose from, all good ones.

Three ex-public school teachers of this County and one of Middlesex, all of whom received their training in the C. B. C., have taken positions of this kind during the past few months. The average earnings of the four is $750 per annum, which is certainly an excellent showing.

Getting Ready For Fall . . .

Each season our stocks must be made attractive and the clothing more to your liking or the movement is backward. We therefore challenge our own record and propose to hold against all comers the claim that we produce as fine clothing as any firm in Canada.

In our workrooms we are busy and have been for weeks manufacturing the suits and overcoats that will go to make the best display we have ever known. The results will show themselves in the freshest, brightest, biggest collection of fine clothing for men and boys that will clearly discount everything in the past. We mean to double the trade we have now and constantly reach out for more.

A SOLEMN QUESTION.

One of the Franks Artemus Ward Played Upon His Brother.

In the days when Cyrus Browne and his brother, Charles Farrar Browne, better known as "Artemus Ward," lived in Waterford, "the little Maine village that nestled among the hills and never did anything else but nestle," Charles delighted to play practical jokes on Cyrus. Charles came home one freezing night, says the narrator of the following prank in the Boston Herald, at an hour that would be thought early in a metropolis, but was not so considered in Waterford. The family were sleeping soundly in the warm comfort of their beds when the future showman halted under the window of Cyrus, and raised an alarm. "Cy! Oh, Cy! Come out here, Cy!" After a time Cyrus appeared at the window. "What do you want?" he demanded through the crack he had opened.

"I want you to come down," with great earnestness. "I want to ask you a question, Cy."

"Oh, go 'way," said Cyrus, his teeth chattering in the awful cold. "It's only one of your jokes."

"Really, Cy, it's a very important question!" persisted Charles with increased earnestness. "It's a solemn thing, and I want you to come down, Cy. I want you bad."

Finally, after grumbling and expostulating, Cyrus slipped on some clothes and came reluctantly downstairs and out into the arctic cold. "Now what in the world is it that you want?" he asked.

Charles came up close, laid his hands on his brother's shivering shoulders, and in that voice of plaintive solemnity which in after years moved so many people to mirth said:

"I want to ask you, Cy, if you think slavery is wrong?"

Only a Girl's Purse.

Poems and stories used to be written about the infinite variety of articles to be found in a boy's pocket. Girls do not have pockets—so much the worse for them—but the things they stow away in their pocketbooks would put a boy to the blush.

A girl emptied her purse the other day. "I have to clean it out," she explained, "every once in awhile, just as I do my bureau drawers." These are some of the things that were in it: Two one dollar bills, a fifty cent piece, two quarters, a five cent piece (dead) and ten pennies, a "lucky" Italian coin, a Japanese "pocket piece," two receipts, three bills, a parlor car check, four street railway transfers, five mutilated stamps, a pencil stub, matinee coupon, three keys, newspaper clippings and a cleaner's check for gloves. That was not at all an unusual case. Almost any girl can match it.
