WEDDED AT LAST

CHAPTER XX.

"My dear Shirley," said Ruby Capel's gay voice, as her bright brunette face appeared at the door of Shirley's room the next morning. "This is not at all an early start. You ought not to have ventured to get up until you had had some tea; and of course you are not thinking of venturing down-stairs?"

Shirley, who had been standing at the window in her long crimson dressing gown, with her pretty chestnut hair falling around her, turned round, smiling, to answer her friend's gay greeting.

"Of course I am not going to venture down-stairs," she said lightly. "I have some slight regard for the conveniences, Ruby, and—"

"The very idea of a bride making her appearance before she is dressed in all her bridal finery is enough to make Mrs. Grundy expire!" cried Ruby gayly.

"Then if it would have such a very desirable effect, Ruby, I had better go down at once!"

"She would expire only for five minutes," said Ruby, resignedly. "She is a regular hydra-headed monster, and there is no killing her. It must have been a terrible shock to her to think that Major Stuart slept in the house last night. That is quite contrary to etiquette. Really, I am so au fait that you might very well imagine that I had been married myself."

While she chatted gayly she had placed on the table the little tray she had carried into the room; then she went to Shirley's side and stood on tiptoe to kiss her, for Shirley was much taller than the little "pocket Venus" with whom Captain Fairholme was so smitten.

"Come and have some breakfast, Shirley, my bonny bride," she said fondly. "You look awfully pale, my dear, to-day. Have you had a bad night?"

"I did not sleep much," Shirley answered, smiling. "But I am very well; and I am sure it is the correct thing for brides to be pale, Ruby."

"Yes, but you have such dark shadows under your eyes, dear. Never mind, you look most lovely," she added softly; and Shirley returned her kiss with passionate fondness as she went over to the table to pour out her tea.

"Alice is not stirring yet," Ruby said merrily. "She does not intend to put in an appearance until she comes to assist you with your toilet. She says getting up early is a mistake on an occasion of this kind. The men are wandering about as if they were lost, or had strayed," she went on, laughing. "I have just sent Captain Fairholme to take her into the billiard room, or they will get desperate. Men are such helpless mortals on an occasion like the present."

"Certainly women take more naturally to it," said Shirley languidly, drinking her tea feverishly, but not tasting any of the dainty breakfast which Ruby had brought her. "What is it, Ruby, who says that all the women seem to be in their natural element at a wedding, and all the men to be out of it?"

"Some one who has studied human nature," answered Ruby, laughing. "Come, Shirley, dear, do eat something. We shall have you fainting by and by and frightening poor Guy out of his senses."

"You need not be at all afraid," Shirley said laughingly. "I am not given to fainting, and no such catastrophe will happen. Even if it did, Guy would not be frightened out of his senses."

"You think not? Well, I think the reverse. And swooning brides may be very interesting in a novel, but they are very tiresome in real life, said Ruby gayly. "I have brought up your diamonds, Shirley. How superb you will be!"

"I wish that Sir Jasper had no desired that I should be married in his beautiful gift," Shirley remarked languidly. "I prefer a bride, especially a dowdless bride like me, to wear no jewels. What are you gazing at so steadfastly, Ruby?"

"At a mounted messenger riding hot haste up the avenue," said Ruby carelessly. "A telegram, I suppose."

She did not turn away from the window, or she would have seen the awful look of terror which crossed Shirley's face and the deathly pallor which stole into her lips. But Miss Ross conquered her emotion by an effort, and there was a short silence during which Ruby admired the diamonds glittering on their satin bed and Shirley sat still and calm outwardly, but full of a terrible anxiety.

Then Ruby flitted away to don her pretty bridesmaid's dress, and Shirley sat waiting for the bridesmaid to come and dress her, the color coming back slowly into her cheeks as the time slipped by and no unusual commotion was to be heard.

"After all," Shirley thought, as she leant her head upon the cushions and forced a smile to her lips, "my fears are groundless. Sir Hugh never meant that—he could not be so treacherous and so base. It would be too cruel to wait till now. Even if he knows the law, he does not care. I am so absurdly nervous. A breath of fresh air will do me good."

She went to the window, opened it, and leaned out. It was a fine sunny morning, although a good deal of snow had fallen during the night—bitterly cold, but seasonable—a fair day for a wedding-day. Shirley thought, if the proverb held good that "happy is the bride that the sun shines on." The view from the window was very beautiful; all the skeleton trees in the park were clothed with a fair, spotless mantle, which glittered in the sun. Two of the maid-servants were hurrying along the terrace under the window, laughingly comparing the valentines which the post had brought them; they looked bright and busy and smiling in their pretty new gray dresses and smart white-ribboned caps; and their gay, pleasant voices reached Shirley's ears as she leant at the window above, letting the cold fresh air blow on her hot brow and bring a faint color into her fair face.

She felt weary and languid, and the chill reviving breeze was pleasant to her; she had not slept all night, and the heavy shadows under the lovely hazel eyes testified to their long vigil. Her faint had been but short; she had returned to life and consciousness to find the fire dying out and her mother's letter still open upon her lap; and for the first few moments the agony of mind had been unendurable and indescribable, but then her calm reason had reasserted itself, and she told herself that Sir Hugh had not meant anything when he called her his wife—that it was merely a form, and that, even if the laws of Scotland made that a marriage, he never meant to claim her as his wife. Had he done so, he would not have delayed until now; he would not have gone away without a word or sign. Yet all through the night hours the thought had haunted her with a persistency which she could not dismiss, and the gray winter dawn had found her lying wakeful and wide-eyed upon the pillows.

How pleasant it would be, she was thinking, as she leant there, with sharp wind reviving her wearied senses, to go away with Guy from all his misery, to be cared for and loved as he would care for and love her to be his own forever! Dear Guy!

Presently a gay chime of bells rang out, sounding clearly on the keen frosty air, and Alice Fairholme and Ruby came in, in their dainty and very becoming great velvet dresses, to assist Shirley's tirewomen. They gathered up the pretty hair high upon her head and wreathed it with fragrant orange-flowers, and robed her in the glistening white satin and filmy lace and clasped the diamonds round her throat and on her wrists, and threw the soft lace veil over her; and no dower bride did mirror ever reflect than Shirley Ross, as, leaning on her uncle's arm, she walked up the aisle, where Guy stood waiting for her and watching her with his heart in his eyes.

All Shirley's senses seemed quickened in this supreme moment; it seemed to her that she saw all over the church, and that every face of the crowd assembled there was distinct and separate. She saw the pretty eager bridesmaids, Lady Fairholme stately in green velvet and chinchilla, Guy so grand-looking and stately with the look in his eyes which made her heart thrill. She heard the opening words of the marriage service:

Try This Home-made Cough Remedy
Costs Little, But Does the Work Quickly, or Money Refunded.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with 1 cup of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else ever used. Usually ends a deep-seated cough in less than 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, croup, chest pain, bronchitis, and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This recipe makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasantly.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in quercetin and all the natural pine elements, which are so healing to the membrane. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This plan of making cough syrup with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

then the sound of galloping horses and flying wheels fell upon her ears. The next moment there was some confusion in the body of the church, and a man, breathless with haste, and agitated, came up the aisle—a tall, handsome man, who looked haggard, and wore his right arm in a sling, but whom many present recognized as Sir Hugh Glynn.

"Stop!" he said haughtily and imperatively, conquering his agitation as he reached the bridal party. "This marriage must not continue!"

"Hugh!" Guy exclaimed, in intense surprise, while Sir Gilbert gently but firmly put him aside.

"By what right do you thus interrupt my niece's marriage, Sir Hugh?" he said haughtily, his face pale with anger.

"By the best of all rights!" was the equally haughty answer. "She is my wife!"

CHAPTER XXI.

"Shirley, for the love of Heaven, speak! Contradict the story this man is telling so plausibly; let me crush back his falsehoods into his throat! For pity's sake, do not stand there and let him bring such an accusation as this against you!"

The words broke from Guy Stuart's lips with a force and passion which left him pale as death, and each fell like a blow on the heart of the girl to whom they were addressed, and who dared not lift her eyes to the pleading anguish-stricken face of the man she loved so deeply, but to whom she had brought the most terrible agony heart could know.

They were gathered in the oak parlor at Fairholme Court, while the bewildered and startled household whispered among themselves that some dreadful thing had happened, since the bridal carriage had returned almost immediately from the church, and Miss Shirley looked more dead than alive, and Miss Alice was threatening hysterics.

Sir Gilbert, his face stern and grave and full of pain, stood by the mantelpiece, resting his elbow upon it, the old wood, which had closed, but had never healed, now torn open afresh. Lady Fairholme was trying to soothe Alice, who was crying and laughing alternately; and Oswald, his countenance grave and pained and wondering had gone to Guy's side, and stood there, with earnest sympathy for the agony in Guy's pale, despairing, anguish-stricken face on his own. Shirley stood alone; but Ruby Capel had crept near her, hiding her face in her hands to still her sobs; and Sir Hugh Glynn, haughty, erect, and resolute stood by the table, his head thrown back defiantly, his right arm in a sling.

It was a strange scene, and one which those who saw it never forgot. Shirley was the central figure, as she stood at the opposite side of the table to Sir Hugh, her long dress sweeping the floor in glistening, lustrous folds, the lace veil still falling around her, although she had thrown it back from her face, the diamonds glittering at her throat and on her wrists. Her face was white to her lips; a heavy shadow of brooding despair, almost desperation, had fallen upon it, and it had drained the blood from her cheeks, so that she stood motionless and colorless as a statue. It might have been the face of a dead woman for all the life and color which was in it, save when a sudden passionate quiver passed over it, like the quick light of a flame which flickers up ere it dies away.

"Shirley," Guy's passionate broken voice said eagerly, "only one word, dear; but no—you need not speak, you need not contradict him. I know that all he has said is false—false as himself."

"His" and some other Much Needed Words.

By RUTH CAMERON.

And yet I have one more suggestion.

I wish some generous philanthropist would present the English language with a synonym for the word "thing." I should be grateful to him all the days of my life. I cannot estimate how much time and trouble it would save, and I fancy anyone who has much occasion to express himself in writing would join me in thanking such a benefactor. The only synonyms which my thesaurus gives are "object" and "article." As you can readily see these cover about one-tenth of the meaning of "thing."

Of course, it must be partly because I do not know how to use it, but the English language certainly seems to me to be lamentably weak in several spots.

Indeed there can be no question but that it is weak and poor in comparison with some other languages. Japanese, for instance. A Japanese boy who was learning the English language could scarcely believe there was but one word for "I" in his language there were eight.

And not only does the English language lack synonyms, but there are many things for which it has no single word at all. For instance, what single word in the English language expresses "person one is talking with"?

"Person one is walking with" is also lacking. "Companion" has to weakly cover both these words.

I believe it is supposed to be an affection to use semi-French words such as "ennui" and "fiance," but what is one to do when the English gives us no exact synonym? Of course, the Frenchman invented "ennui" and would naturally have a patent on the word, but he certainly didn't invent engaged couples, and I don't see why we shouldn't have a word of our own to take the place of the word "fiance." To be sure, betrothed means engaged, but I cannot imagine anyone introducing Mr. So-and-So as "my betrothed." And yet why shouldn't we? After all, it is our fault instead of the fault of the language this time, for "betrothed" is really a rather sweet word and might well take the place of "fiance" if we would only use our own instead of borrowing.

Again, I don't see why we shouldn't have a recognized contraction of "am not." Why not authorize "aint" (for use with the first person singular alone, of course) if no other bridge across the difficulty is possible.

But if I could have only a single word added to the English language it wouldn't be any of these, but one the lack of which has caused writers more difficulty than all the rest combined. Surely you can guess what it is. A singular for "they," that is a common pronoun meaning either he or she. I have heard "hisr" suggested for the possessive of such a word but I want nominative, possessive and objective. Think of the trouble these words would save us. Can't some noble benefactor confer a blessing upon the billion or so English speaking people by presenting the English language with this new word?

HEALTH OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Coming face to face with the Prince of Wales at Oxford a few days ago, I could not help being struck with the rather white and wasted appearance of his face. His eyes were dull and heavy, and he had lost much of that springy boyish walk that formerly characterized him. Indeed, it is not too much to say that he looked extremely ill, and probably the rest of the Christmas vacation will do him a considerable amount of good. His Royal Highness has never been over-strong, and there is more than a suspicion that he has been rather over-doing it lately; what with his studies and his frequent hurried dashes to town on social pleasure bent. Probably the Queen will have something to say to him on this subject.

THE KAISER AND THE CROWN PRINCE.

The Emperor William of Germany has lost no time in removing his eldest son from Danzig to Berlin. One day the announcement is made, the next day the Crown Prince is bidding farewell to his regiment before taking train to Berlin. Evidently it was a lightning decision, executed at lightning speed. There must have been some very special reason for this astonishing precipitancy. What is it? In Berlin they say that the Empress was responsible. She wanted to have her son near her, and particularly her grandchildren. It is a pretty story, but it will not do. The Crown Prince does not at like his appointment to the General Staff. He wanted to remain with his regiment, and was looking forward to the command of a brigade, which would have come to him in due course. It should be noted, too, that he has just taken a new lease of his villa at Danzig. The fact is that he has been hurried away to Berlin because the Kaiser feared another "blazing indiscretion" from this amazingly indiscreet young soldier. In the Zahren "affair" the Crown Prince does not like his ap- with Lieutenant Von Foerster, a kindred spirit, and against the populace. The attitude of the Reichstag—an institution he despises—has annoyed him extremely. It was feared that he would express his views on the matter, probably in a little "allocution" to his regiment. The result would have been disastrous.

MODERN MAGIC—PERHAPS.

Monsieur Benson has set a good many tongues wagging by his story of the revival of the black arts. Even in London he alleges that there are devils' kitchens where the votaries of occultism celebrate weird rites which fall very little short of those of the "Sabbat" and the "Black Mass." Three secret societies, safe-guarded by fearful oaths on initiation, are said to be engaged in the propagation of the cult, and in the practice of all the medieval abracadabra of charms and incantations and satanic liturgies. From the preacher's point of view it is a sign the more of England's decadence—just as another preacher a night or two since found the decline and approaching fall of England in the fact that the Continental and Oriental residents in London and a few West End idlers were obsessed for the moment with a passion for the tango, and that the story of Salome and John the Baptist had been made the subject of a dance. All these things conceivably may be as deplorable as we are assured they are, but the pessimism of the minor prophets seems to be founded upon a curious misapprehension as to the part which occultism and tangoism and other diversions of the time play in the life of the community as a whole. I had occasion not very long since to make some inquiries as to the extent and character of the interest in black magic taken by the quaint crew of oddities who dabble in that kind of thing in London. It appeared that there were a number of people who took a harmless imaginative interest in the subject, and were given to weave for themselves weird stories compounded of medieval battles pretty much as imaginative children are. But the actual practitioners, so far as one could ascertain, consisted of a few lunatics and neurotics merely.

In the course of my investigations some amazing personal records—unpublished and unpublished—passed through my hands, but to found upon any Bedlam record of the kind a theory of national decadence would have been ridiculous. Monsieur Benson and those whom he has alarmed may be quite easy in their minds. The main stream of the life of the community flows on with the smallest possible regard to these reversionary eddies.

A CONSCIENTIOUS LADY WAR CORRESPONDENT.

I am informed that in consequence of the mutilations and other atrocities perpetrated by the Montenegrin army in the late war, Miss M. E. Durham, who described in the columns of two of England's greatest newspapers, the firing of the first shot in the Balkan War, has returned to the Montenegrin Government the gold decoration "For Merit" which she received from them in 1907. In taking this step she has not been influenced by hearsay reports, but entirely by the outrages that came under her personal notice.

THE IRON HAND OF KITCHENER.

or day, was not achieved without some anxiety. Considerable opposition was shown in official Khedivial circles. There were rumours of a plot, and one of the prominent Egyptian ministers muttered dark things about a possible revolution. Lord Kitchener, however, is not a man to be easily impressed by such threats.

There was as a fact some kind of plot, but one of the accomplices confessed what was afoot. The plot such as it was, was cleverly timed to coincide with an important Mohammedan religious festival, when the native population is naturally inclined to be excited and unbalanced, and for some days the situation contained dangerous possibilities. The British army of occupation was kept prepared for any outbreak while the position remained so uncertain, but happily no outbreak came. The fact that so little support was forthcoming for the conspirators in Egypt and that the approval which had been anticipated from abroad, and notably from Constantinople, was withheld, had something to do with the collapse of the resistance. The whole episode has helped to strengthen British prestige in Egypt and the fact that 1,500 British bluejackets visited Cairo immediately afterwards and made a holiday tour of the Pyramids—which to the amazement of the onlookers they climbed—has helped to confirm the impression that the British Agency in Cairo cannot be trifled with or deceived.

A FAMOUS STAMP DEALER.

The retirement from business of W. H. Peckitt, the well-known London dealer in postage stamps, removes a familiar name from the philatelic world. The purchase of his collection by another London firm is, I understand, the biggest transaction in the history of stamp dealing. Not only does the collection contain some of the rarest and most interesting specimens extant, but its value is very high indeed, running, I am told, into six figures. To Scottish collectors it is interesting to note that part of the wonderful collection of the late Lord Crawford was acquired by Mr. Peckitt. Its special feature was the exceedingly valuable sets of the Italian States, such as Tuscany and Sicily, the issue of which ceased altogether on the consumption of Italian unity in the 'sixties. Most of these stamps are as unfamiliar to the present generation as some of the older issues of the Transvaal or the Orange River Colony before the war of 1899 will probably be twenty or thirty years hence.

Cured Eczema Like Magic

Suffered for Years—Tried All Kinds of Treatment—Surprised at Results From Dr. Chase's Ointment.

You can soon tell when people are enthusiastic about medical treatment by the language they use. After experimenting with all sorts of ointments in a vain effort to obtain relief and cure, the writer of this letter was astonished at the quick and satisfactory results obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

"It worked like magic," she writes. Indeed, it is surprising the healing that is effected in a single night by this great ointment. The stinging and itching are relieved at once, and cure is only a matter of time and patient treatment.

Mrs. Clements, 13 Strange street, Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have suffered from eczema for years, and after using all kinds of ointments, at last tried Dr. Chase's Ointment. It worked like magic and proved a God-send to me. I would advise anyone suffering from eczema to try one box and be convinced." 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanston, Bates & Co. THE EASTERN TRUST COMPANY.

The business of the The Eastern Trust Company is to administer Trusts. In this work it specializes, and it does no other. But no kind of trust is foreign to its scope or beyond its power to administer efficiently.

The Eastern Trust Company never speculates. It invests. It depends for its prosperity upon the efficiency of its management of its clients' business and upon the security of its investments.

The Eastern Trust Company executes the office of executor or administrator with unexampled efficiency, and its usefulness in this field is becoming rapidly more availed of.

For instance—in St. John, New Brunswick, where it has quite lately established a branch, the estate of James Ready, of Fairville, which has been sworn to under $651,300.00, is being administered by The Eastern Trust Company as one of the joint executors of Mr. Ready's will.

In Halifax, Nova Scotia, again, The Eastern Trust Company has just been chosen to administer the estate of Captain William Fleming, which is valued at more than half a million dollars.

The Company now administers many estates which in value amount to several millions of dollars. Particulars will appear in later advertisements.

The Eastern Trust Company can execute this function of executor or administrator as efficiently in Newfoundland as it can in Nova Scotia, Quebec, or New Brunswick.

The Eastern Trust Company requires commodious offices on Water Street. Apply to

The Price of Coal.

Cannot something be done to bring the price of coal down to a reasonable basis? Every now and again the price goes up and never down. It is now soaring to prohibitive rates. More than this, it is the experience of some that as the price goes up, the quality goes down. We know of one instance where coal supplied at $7.20 was the worst in quality that was ever received even in the days coal was at $4.00 and $4.80 and consisted mostly of slack and a plentiful supply of shale. It looks as if Newfoundland consumers suffer in both respects. In Newfoundland the prices have risen steadily the past two decades. In England at the pit mouth prices have fluctuated, reaching the highest point in 1900, when the price was $2.60, and their second highest in 1907 when the price was $2.16. Between that time and 1911 there was a steady drop. The average price for 1911 being $1.94. These are of course wholesale prices at the pit-mouth. But they show only an increase of about 55 cents during the decades; whereas our retail rate show nearly $3.00 of an increase. It is impossible to put down the cost of mining as the material cause of such an increase. Sir Edward Morris declared over five years ago that the then present price of coal was a national grievance. He said "coal in Sydney to-day sells as low as $3.00 a ton, yet it costs our people in many settlements in the colony as high as $7.20 a ton, though a cargo of English household coal was brought across the Atlantic, a distance of two thousand miles and sold in St. John's recently for $5.90 a ton."

In the fall of 1908, Sir Edward complained that the price in many settlements was as high as $7.20. To-day it is $7.60 in the city. What must it be in these settlements? It is time some efforts were made to cheapen fuel.

Harkins Co.

OPENING AT THE CASINO.

Last night the Harkins Company opened at the Casino with a society comedy drama, entitled, Bought and Paid For. It pleased the audience much and it may be again said that this company has caught on once more, and the large audience appreciated greatly the lines of the play and the playing of them. The story is about a wealthy man of the "self made" type, who marries a telephone girl. The self made man is Robert Stafford who is addicted to indulgence in liquor and who in one of his cups insults his wife by taunting her with her origin and lowly employment, claiming to do as he pleases as he has bought and paid for her. Owing to his conduct she leaves him and goes back to her old work. Her sister, Fanny Blane and her lover, Jimmie Gillie succeed at last in bringing husband and wife together again and all ends well.

Frank Conway who took the role of Stafford and Miss Sue Van Duzer that of the injured wife did excellent work and had to respond to curtain calls. The pathetic parts of the play is relieved by much that is humorous and comical.

Mr. Harry Stubbs takes the part of Jimmie and Miss Eileen Cosgriff that of Fanny and do well. Mr. Stark played the part of O Ku, a Japanese servant and Miss Bladale that of Josephine, a French maid.

The play is worth seeing and can be seen again to-night, as it will be repeated.

AT THE CRESCENT.

The three thousand foot film in three reels entitled "Bedford's Hope," was an agreeable surprise to the patrons of the Crescent Picture Palace which was thronged to the doors afternoon and night. The spectacular race between a fast train express and an automobile can be witnessed for miles, and created much excitement. The plot of Bedford's Hope is of exceptional interest. "Foolhead Hypnotizer" is a comic well worth seeing. David Parks, the soloist, also scored a hit. The same bill will be repeated to-night and on Wednesday and Thursday an entire change is arranged.

EPIPHANY, a Church Festival intended to commemorate the manifestation of the Infant Jesus to the Gentiles. It falls on the 6th January and in the 4th century the Eastern Church celebrated on this date the Baptism of Jesus and also His Birth. About the same period the Western Church observed the Feast of the Nativity on December 25th. By the next century the Western custom had spread to the East, and the Eastern to the West, so that while December 25 came to be universally observed as the day of Nativity, the feast of January 6, twelve days after, was retained as the Epiphany—the manifestation of Jesus to the Magi who had been guided by the Star.

The Long Bridge

Many of the piles supporting Job's Bridge will now be removed and substituted by iron girders. At present these piles are placed rather thickly and so hold the ice that comes driving down after a freshet, whereas the substitution of girders will give more room for the ice to pass out. The engineering staff of the Council are taking soundings preparatory to ascertaining the possibilities of the erection of a draw bridge in this place. The project is a large one, and if undertaken will include the dredging of the inner basin to afford anchorage for shipping.

JOHN B. AYRE.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Victoria Street (Presbyterian) and the Methodist Schools opened this morning after the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. George W. Pike, of Woodville Road, died early yesterday morning, aged 70 years. A husband and one son are left to mourn their loss.

The very handsome sum of $700 was realized at the Cathedral Christmas Tree last week. The ladies of the Parish are to be congratulated on the result of their labors.

Mr. Thos. J. Freeman, one of our most talented young men, left last week for Boston and New York. It is said part of the business in the big cities is to secure a patent for a useful invention of his, but rumor says there is also another function for which Cupid is responsible, to take place during his absence. More power to him is the wish of his many friends.

The very pretty calendar issued by the H. G. Boot & Shoe Co., shows the firm is up-to-date in calendars as well as in Boots and Shoes. We thank the obliging manager, Mr. James, for a copy of this excellent calendar.

The members of the British Band on Christmas Eve presented a handsome silver shaving set to Mr. L. Whitman, the energetic band instructor or as a small token of their appreciation of his valuable service. Mr. H. Andrews, President of the band made the presentation with a few appropriate remarks. Mr. Whitman replied thanking the members for their gift, and assuring them it was only pleasure to him to be with them.

An occasion of general interest was the celebration here on Thursday last, New Year's Day, of the silver jubilee of ordination to Priesthood of Right Rev. John March, D.D., Bishop of Hr. Grace. The Cathedral was the scene of a magnificent demonstration of general rejoicing. Pontifical High Mass was celebrated at 10.30, at which the Bishop was the celebrant. A large number of clergy was present. At the conclusion of the Mass a beautiful illuminated address from the clergy and laity of the diocese was presented to the good Bishop, accompanied by a substantial cheque. His Lordship replied as follows:—

"And now dear brethren of the laity, permit me to thank you very sincerely for your kind recognition of my jubilee year, and for the beautiful illuminated address and accompanying generous gift of which the clergy and laity of the diocese have to-day made me the recipient. The reference in your address to the twenty-five years of my ministry is far too complimentary. Your generosity has allowed you to estimate far too highly the very little I have done or been instrumental in accomplishing in the sacred ministry. My work has been humble indeed, not exceeding the limits of sincerity of purpose and of faithful endeavor, according to the circumstances in which I have been placed to discharge the duties of an office which reflects its honor and the credit of its usefulness on the least worthy to whom it may be entrusted. I gladly avail myself of this opportunity to make grateful acknowledgement of the active co-operation of clergy and laity with me in everything I have undertaken for the benefit of the diocese. Your assistance has been whole-souled, generous and unstinted. I again thank you from my utmost soul, for your kindness and generosity to me this morning. I wish you all the blessings of this holy season, and I pray you may enjoy every happiness during the New Year upon which we have just entered."

Calumet Miners Bury Their Dead.

Calumet, Mich., Dec. 27.—The Western Federation of Miners buried its dead to-day. Fifty-nine bodies, including those of forty-four children, were carried through the streets to-day, down a winding country highway, and laid in graves in a snow-enveloped cemetery in sight of Lake Superior. Thousands of saddened miners formed the escort of the funeral parties, and passed between other thousands who, as spectators testified as to the grief that has oppressed the community since seventy-two men, women and children were killed in the Christmas Eve panic in Italian Hall.

The supply of hearses was inadequate and there were only fourteen of these vehicles in the van. Then came three undertakers' waggons and an automobile truck, the latter carrying three coffins. These vehicles contained the adult victims and the older children. Beside one marched eight women who acted as pall-bearers, for a member of the Women's Auxiliary of the Western Federation.

It was this women's organization which was distributing gifts of candy, shoes, caps and mittens, to the children of the strikers when the panic broke out.

Behind the hearses was a section of the procession which brought tears and sobs from the onlookers. Thirty-nine white coffins, their size testifying to the short life of the little forms within, were carried by relays of strikers. Four men bore each coffin, and as their arms grew weary or feet stumbled on the slippery roadway companions relieved them of their burdens.

Fifty singers chanted hymns in the wake of the children carriers. Most of these men were English miners, who had learned in Cornwall to chant Christmas carols in the streets and years ago brought this old custom to the copper country. To-day, however, they did not sing songs of a new life born. "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Rock of Ages," and "Nearer My God to Thee" came from throats filled with emotion, but the harmonies were full and rich.

As the singers turned into Pine Street, which leads to the cemetery road, the open ranks of marchers wheeled into line. Ishpeming and Negaunsee came first, followed by a brass band and the members of the copper country locals.

The cemetery is in two sections. One is consecrated to the dead of the Roman Catholic faith, the other to those belonging to Protestant denominations. In the former three trenches had been excavated, and in these twenty-five bodies were laid.

On the Protestant side of the burial place two large graves received twenty-eight bodies. The other six were laid in family plots. Only brief addresses were delivered in the cemetery. Eugene A. McNally, a local attorney, eulogized the dead in English, and George Strezich, of St. Louis, Frank Aultman, of Negaunsee, and the Western Federation leaders delivered addresses in Austrian, Finnish and Croatian.

Cascarets' Relieve Sick, Sour Stomach

Move acids, gases and clogged-up waste from Stomach, Liver, Bowels—Cure Indigestion.

Get a 10-cent box now.

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, dizziness and sick headache, means a disordered stomach, which cannot be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing too.

Police Search for Missing Radium.

Particle Half the Size of a Pin's Head Has Been Stolen From Chicago Hospital.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—Search to-day by police and hospital authorities failed to disclose any clue to thirty-five milligrams of radium believed to have been lost or stolen several days ago while being used in the treatment of a cancer patient.

Unless the person having the precious particle of radium—it is half the size of a pin's head and is worth $4,500—in his possession knows how to protect himself from it, it may kill him, according to hospital physicians. If instead of being stolen it is mislaid, it will declare its presence by its influences on whatever substances are around it.

The speck of radium was imported from France by Saint Luke's Hospital. It was kept in a platinum capsule at 8th of an inch in diameter and three quarters of an inch long. Its last appearance known to the hospital staff was when the capsule was placed in an incision in the arm of a woman patient. After several treatments it was found that the capsule was inactive. The capsule was opened and it was found that the radium was gone.

It would be impossible to tell the missing bit of radium.

It was said a record was kept of every particle known to exist in the world and this piece is on that register. No respectable physician, laboratory experts says, would purchase a piece of radium from an unknown source.

The Nickel's Big Bill Delights Thousands.

The Nickel Theatre gave a splendid bill last evening. Thousands attended in the afternoon and evening, the total being one of the largest since the Nickel opened here. During the night it was not an easy matter to get seats. The programme contained no less than six different subjects, each of which was watched with the greatest interest. The pictures were entitled "Strange places and people in New York," "A Simple Maid," "Poison Ivy," "A Leap Year Proposal," "The Country Boy" and "The Clay Industry." Mr. Cameron, who is now appearing for the last week, made another great hit in his popular song "The Scientific Man." For eighteen weeks he has been singing at the Nickel and has had wonderful success. There seems to be no end to his repertoire of comic songs. To-night he will sing "A thing he had never done before," and to-morrow "There's an Exhibition." The great tenor Charles F. Tingle, and Carolyn Williams, the Welsh soloist, will arrive in the city shortly. Mr. Kleley also has some superlative feature films which will be given in the near future.

Healthy and Unhail by Lighting.

Gas, it may be said, vitiates the atmosphere. True. But it also helps to purify it. Its purifying power is greater than its vitiating power. Electricity does not vitiate, nor does it purify. Hear what three eminent men have said:—

Much evidence has lately been adduced to show that gas is more useful than the electric light in promoting efficient ventilation of air. It is for this, amongst other reasons, that gas is being frequently substituted for the electric light. The latest example is, perhaps, the Society of Medical Officers of Health, which has recently installed gas on its premises, after experience with the electric light.—Dr. Jamieson B. Hurry.

He would merely add that no member who had experience of their meeting room under the old conditions could deny the improvement that had taken place since gas had been substituted for the electric light and the new system of heating and ventilation had been installed.—Dr. Reginald Duffield, before the Society of Medical Officers of Health.

I have in my mind's eye, at the moment, a hall which, in the old days, was lighted by gas, and in which a large audience could, with comfort, sit through an hour's lecture, or with pleasure through a three hours' dinner, but which with the march of civilization, had its illumination changed from gas to electricity, the latter been employed with all the latest refinements to effect the lighting under the best conditions, with the result that any large gathering within its walls leads to a state little short of asphyxiation.—Vivian B. Lewes, Professor of Chemistry at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich.—nov.6.cd

There is a pretty blouse called the riding blouse. It is of heavy white china silk, has a deep shoulder yoke, a line of gathers across the front and a line of large pearl buttons. The sleeves are long, with narrow turnover cuff. Under the turn-over collar is a mannish cravat run through, with a scarfpin. This is strictly a house blouse and for morning wear on the street.

ROYAL Baking Powder Absolutely Pure

There is a remarkable interest in Home Baking and Cooking throughout the land.

This is a most encouraging indication that the battle against impure, improper food is going to be won.

The credit for the victory will belong to the women of the country.

Home cooking has the backing of science and the approval of fashion. It adds to housekeeping a pride; to our food, healthfulness.

It is acknowledged by experts, and by the women who know, that the best cooking in the world to-day is with the aid of Royal Baking Powder.

Statues.

By GEORGE FITCH.

When a sculptor wishes to make a portrait of a man he seats the victim on a pedestal and asks him to look pleasant for six months while he models him in clay. When a good negative has been secured, the sculptor takes a two-ton block of marble and trims it down until it resembles the original—that is, until it resembles the sitter as he would look if he had fallen into a flour bin.

Carving a statue from marble is very difficult work. If the sculptor carelessly cuts off an ear while absorbed in thought, he cannot put it back. He has to throw away that block of marble and get another.

Very few sculptors can afford to do this because the marble comes from Italy and costs about as much per pound as winter eggs. The great cost of marble has kept many a man out of the sculpture business.

When we walk through the capitol at Washington and gaze upon the statuary in that noble but long-suffering building, we cannot help wishing that the price of marble might be much higher.

The ancient Greeks spent most of their time carving statues from marble, and from those which survived, we get the idea that about a yard of cheesecloth did the entire Greek nation for clothes. No one objects to the absence of coats and vests on the work of the old Greek sculptors, but when a modern sculptor reproduces George Washington, clad in a long flowing table cloth, or Abraham Lincoln, draped in a bed sheet, it is time to object. This sort of thing may compromise us with posterity. Statues are very plentiful in Europe, especially in Rome, where a man can hardly spade up his spring garden without unearthing a 2,000-year-old goddess. A group of handsome and athletic marble statues is a fine thing with which to decorate a public square, and every man should strive to so live that when he dies a grateful city will hire a sculptor to carve him in marble, seated on a Roman chair with Antiquity and Posterity, both extremely good looking, twining their arms about him and Memory, clad in marble portieres, sitting in his lap.

"What a small bottle of Stafford's Essence of Ginger Wine can do." From the 10th of this month up to the 24th we sold 1,000 bottles of Essence of Ginger Wine. This is an average of 66 bottles a day. One 10 cent bottle of this Essence of Ginger Wine makes 3 quarts. Now "Just a minute," please. 3 quarts makes 120 ounces. A wineglassful holds 2 ounces. Therefore you obtain 60 glasses of Ginger Wine from one little 10 cent bottle of the Essence, so that by our having sold 1,000 bottles we have provided 60,000 drinks for persons supposing that only one drink had been taken by every person. This is utterly "impossible," we mean (one drink for each person) because once a person having taken one drink nothing in this world would prevent them from having 5 or 6 more.

The reason is simple. "They know a good drink when they taste it." The sales for Stafford's Essence of Ginger Wine has exceeded all other previous years, just the same as:— "Stafford's Liniment," "Stafford's Prescription "A" and Stafford's "Phorator Cough Cure" have done.—dec.26.ft

State-Owned Railways.

"The issue of the Parliamentary white paper on State railways, asked for by Mr. Chiozza Money, could not have happened more fittingly than at the present moment, when the whole country is discussing the management of the railways in the light of a great calamity," says the Daily News.

Nationalism in General.

"The return shows that the great majority of the countries of the world including our own Colonies, have nationalized their railways in whole or in part. Owing to the fact, however, that the United States, which has far more railways than any other country—249,000 miles—tolerates private ownership, privately owned railways form the greater part of our world's railway mileage. All our self-governing Dominions, except Canada and Newfoundland, have national railways.

"In India the lines are mainly State-owned, but largely operated by companies. In our self-governing Dominions, Canada has followed the deplorable policy of allowing great private railway monopolists to arise, and has handed them huge slices of her territory to make trouble for her children's children.

"In Australasia State ownership is universal, and although, as is usual and proper with national railways, profit-making is not the first consideration, excellent results are achieved from a purely financial point of view. New South Wales, for example, made in 1912 a net State profit of £245,000 after paying interest on capital. To state the result as it would appear if the lines were company-owned, the earnings were £2,322,000 in excess of the working expenses.

"New Zealand in 1912 showed a surplus of £1,211,000 in gross receipts as compared with working expenses. In South Africa the State railways made an important contribution to the Budget:

Gross receipts	£12,286,000
Working expenses and renewals	7,255,000
Profit	£5,031,000

"Of this fine profit £2,622,000 went in payment of interest, leaving £2,409,000 to be paid to the Treasury in relief of taxation.

"Turning to foreign countries, the German results first engage our attention. The German Empire owned in 1910-11 34,427 miles of railway, in which the Empire and the various States had invested £224,000,000.

"This may be compared with the United Kingdom, in which a much smaller railway system, only 23,000 miles, actually figures in the books of the railway companies for the absurdly inflated capitalisation of £1,385,000,000! It is a comparison which tells its own tale, and in view of it we need not be surprised that whereas the British railway companies only earn 3½ per cent. on their capital, the German State Railways as a whole earn 5½ per cent., the British 3½ per cent.

MINARD'S LIME-TREE CURE'S GARBET IN COWS.

ing made out of high fares and rates, while the German 5½ is earned out of lower fares and lower railway rates.

Enviably German Results.

"The Prussian State Railways earn 6½ per cent. on the capital employed. Prussia made a net profit of £30,300,000. This enabled her (1) to pay off the interest on the railway part of the State debt; (2) to pay off £2,500,000 of capital; (3) to find £5,700,000 for capital expenditure out of revenue; (4) to put £8,000,000 to the reserve fund, and yet to pay over £10,800,000 to the National Exchequer in relief of taxation.

"Let every British taxpayer take note of the fact that Prussia makes out of her railway every year a sum more than old age pensions costs us."

Soldier Pedestrian Bringing Letter

From Mayor of Winnipeg to Mayor High.

Saute Ste Marie, Ont., Jan. 2.—Wm. C. Brown, of the King's Own Scottish Borderers, who walked on a wagger from Providence, R.I., to Winnipeg, passed through the Soo Wednesday on another 2,000 mile walk from Winnipeg to Halifax. He carried with him a letter from the Mayor's office in the city of Winnipeg to the United States Consul here, and also a letter of introduction to the Mayor of Halifax.

He wears his regimental uniform and fur cap, on the front of which is a silver crest of the Winnipeg coat of arms. Brown reached the Soo about 3 p.m. and will leave again Thursday for Sudbury, and from there will go to Ottawa. He did the 400-mile walk from Providence in three months and two weeks being six weeks under his ill-fated time, for which he is to receive $3,000 on his return to England. He expects to reach Halifax about February 6th, from which place he will sail.

Man Shrank Twenty Inches.

Albert Mills, an Englishman, known as the "Brittle man of Birmingham," has literally shrunk to death. For 26 years he suffered from an obscure disease which caused a shrinkage of bodily stature and made him the object of study by medical men from all over the world.

The chief symptom was the disappearance of lime from the body, leaving the bones soft and misshapen. It became impossible for him to move, and for over fourteen years he had been confined to his bed.

Before his illness he was 5 feet 8 inches in height, but he gradually shrank until at the time of his death he was under 4 feet high, having thus lost 20 inches in 26 years.

Mills was an engraver and the first intimation of the disease was a stiffening of the muscles which prevented him using his arms freely. After a time this condition extended to his legs.

Oil Tanker Broke in Two

Special to Evening Telegram.

NEW YORK, To-day.

The oil tank steamer, Oklahoma, broke in two amidships without warning, on Sunday morning, south of Sandy Hook, and a large number of the crew of some forty men perished. The stern section, in which was situated all the heavy machinery of the vessel and on which there were thirty-two members of the crew, sank immediately. Eight members of the crew were rescued by the steamer Bavaria, whose captain says that some of the Oklahoma's men told him that they saw an open boat put away from the wreck with ten men in it. This information is contained in a wireless despatch received last night from Capt. Gralls of the Bavarian, which is proceeding to Boston with the eight survivors of the tanker on board.

Servant Girl a Great Scholar.

A servant girl has won the first prize for New Testament Greek given by The Sunday School Chronicle of London, Eng. She studied it in her pantry. The girl was left motherless at ten years of age, and, in consequence, had not properly mastered even English grammar in her childhood. She bought a Greek testament, and, after learning the alphabet, proceeded to learn simultaneously English from the Bible and Greek from the New Testament. On odd pieces of paper she would scribble notes of what she wished to learn, and learnt them in intervals during her duties about the house.

The Toy-Strewn House.

Give me the house where the toys are strewn.

Where the dolls are asleep in the chairs, Where the building blocks and the toy balloon And the soldiers guard the stairs; Let me stop in a house where the tin cart, With its horses rules the floor, And rest comes into my weary heart, For I am at home once more.

Give me the house with the toys about, With battered old train of cars, The box of paints and the books left out, And the ship with her broken spars; Let me step in the house at the close of day

That is littered with children's toys, And dwell once more in the haunts of play With echoes of by-gone noise, Give me the house where the toys are seen.

The house where the children romp, And I'm happier than man has been; Neath the gilded dome of pomp; Let me see the litter of bright-eyed play.

Strewn over the parlor floor, And the boys I knew in a far-off day Will gladden my heart once more, Whoever has lived in a toy-strewn home.

Though feeble he be and gray, Will yearn, no matter how far he roam, For the glorious disarray Of the little home with its littered floor.

That was his in by-gone days, And his heart will throb as it throbbeth before, When he rests where a baby plays.

Foxes Short.

Almost every available pair of Class A. foxes has been sold for 1913. Never in the history of the fox industry has the supply been so short or the demand so great as at present, says the Charlottetown Guardian.

There is a brisk demand for cross foxes and many persons are ready to go into the business of breeding if they can secure the stock. Good crosses are very scarce at present and will continue to be sold until the latter part of January. Many persons who mated foxes even in February last obtained splendid results, and it is probable that mating will continue as late as that this season. Enquiries are coming to the Island from abroad in respect of 1914 options. One exchange in the city yesterday received no fewer than four letters asking for prices of 1914 pups.

Brotherhood Through Business.

In a remarkable article on Sir Horace Plunkett's work for Agricultural Co-operation in Ireland called "Brotherhood Through Business" T. A. Finlay says:

"That the agricultural co-operative society offers to men of good will, whatever their differences of creed or class or party, a field in which all may unite to make lighter the burdens of the tiller of the soil, and give him a larger share in that civilization of which his labour is the basis."

"Sir Horace Plunkett's first essay was made among the dairy farmers of Munster. Their industry was carried on by methods which had become obsolete in more progressive communities. Cream was ripened by allowing the milk to stand in pails or basins, the farmer's butter was made by hand in his own dairy, and was then taken to market by himself or his wife, and sold to dealers who regulated prices by agreement amongst themselves. It was easy to demonstrate what, in these circumstances, they could gain by co-operation.

"Combining their resources of capital and credit they could establish a creamery, where a moderate head of steam would do the mechanical work which exhausted the muscles of a whole parish; where centrifugal separators would in a few minutes of the early hours of the day extract the cream from the morning's milk, where highly trained hands would ensure a butter product of the first quality, and from which the butter of a whole district would be despatched in one consignment, with consequent reduction of transport charges, to the market in which the best price of the day could be obtained.

"The sum of these advantages would, it was shown, be equivalent to an increase of at least thirty per cent. in the value of the farmer's milk supply; to say nothing of the labour saved in the dairy and left free for other occupations. This reasoning was without flaw, but for long it was addressed to deaf ears."

Demons Kill Young Babes in Robbery.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 2.—Fifty criminals, known in Russia as "the Demons of the Steppe," are now in prison at Ekaterinoslaw. Eleven have been sentenced to death and thirty-one to long terms of imprisonment.

In the last five years "the Demons of the Steppe" have committed two hundred murders and countless other crimes, all characterized by such extraordinary cruelty that most of the medical experts at the trials believed the criminals to be madmen, largely because the evidence showed that "the Demons" laid more stress on tormenting their victims than on the material profits.

In the early days the gang murdered chiefly by hanging in order to avoid the accusation of shedding blood, but later when several unfortunate creatures who were supposed to be hanged managed to escape alive "the Demons" resorted to the knife and even to the axe.

Usually the gang attacked farmers in lonely districts and worked only at night.

One of the chiefs told the judges it was the custom never to leave a person alive at the scene of the crime—not even a child—lest there be a witness to the horrible affair. "Where we passed there was sure to be complete silence," he said with a sardonic grin.

Often when the peasants refused to reveal the hiding place of their poor savings "the Demons" poured kerosene on the victims' legs and lighted it, but when the tortured victims told the secret and the money was safely in their hands the thieves killed the peasant with knife or axe.

In five instances they placed dynamite cartridges between farmers' teeth and blew them and their families and house simultaneously to atoms.

One of the last crimes of the "Demons" was to attack a German peasant named Hiel and shoot his two oldest sons and one of the servants. Then they ran into the house, pulled Hiel and his wife from bed, carved them to pieces, hanged to the ceiling the four younger children, from two to thirteen years old, picked a six months old baby from its cradle, dashed it out of the window and then killed Hiel's two nieces.

The bandits might still be at work if one of the leaders had not quarrelled with other chiefs. The police always failed to detect them, but the reason was very simple, for money buys anything in Russia, and the bandits paid large sums to very high police officials in the Kuban district.

Curious Gifts.

King George of England, as Emperor of India, is sending a costly and curious gift to the Dalai Lama of Tibet. The centre piece is a great teakwood casket lined with white velvet, with a cup and platter of the gold; then set in frames of gold are autographed portraits of King George and Queen Mary. In addition there is a complete sequence of the English coinage of the current year, from a farthing to a sovereign; photograph of Buckingham Palace and the palace of Westminster in silver-gilt frames, and the whole guarded by small replicas of the Trafalgar Square lions, fashioned in 18-carat gold. The cup is a magnificent piece of workmanship, a replica of a Charles II. cup. The crown goldsmiths were specially commissioned to execute this splendid gift at their London factory. But this casket and its wonderful golden fittings are only part of the peculiar treasure now on its way to the sacred city of Lhasa. A saddle and saddle cloth go with it, and rolls of varied tartans, and, most peculiar of all, a complete set of the latest edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Crew Marooned Six Months on Lonely Island

Norfolk Island, Australia, Dec. 3.—The shipwrecked crew of the schooner Eldorado, of San Francisco, after a forced stay of six months on Eastern Island, a Chilean possession about 200 miles out in the Pacific ocean, were picked up and rescued by the Knight of the Garter, a British steamer, while she was making the voyage from Valparaiso to Newcastle, New South Wales.

The Eldorado which left Columbia River on April 1, for Antofagasta, was abandoned at sea on June 13, and her crew of eleven men made their way to a boat to Easter Island. The place is practically uninhabited and is out of all trade routes.

The captain, N. Benson, decided therefore to risk another voyage in his small boat and with three of the crew, set out to sea leaving his two mates, the ship's cook and four sailors behind. He set off and after a twenty-eight day voyage reached Papecte, one of the Society Islands on Nov. 5, when he reported the predicament of his mates.

Nothing further was heard of the shipwrecked men till the arrival at the cable station here of the Knight of the Garter, which had the rest of the Eldorado's crew on board.

Whose Income?

The Prime Minister having foreshadowed a widening of the basis of the Income Tax there are many speculations as to whose income tax is to be affected.

"Why, after all, should Mr. Asquith desire to widen the basis of the income tax at all?" asks the New Statesman. "The basis is wide enough already; if an increased yield is desired it can be obtained more easily and far more equitably by a steeper graduation. The Japanese income tax is graduated up to more than 4s. in the £ on the largest incomes; ours, including the super-tax, never quite reaches 1s. 8d."

"If Mr. Asquith's Government decide to place any part of the burden of increased expenditure upon incomes of between £2 and £3 a week as an alternative to placing it upon incomes of between £20 and £30 a day, they will not find that the elector is to be satisfied by any mere appeal to Whig shibboleths."

"A small reduction of the limit would bring in certain classes of manual workers, whilst a reduction to the old figure of £100 would make quite a large section legally liable to pay direct taxation. There is, of course, the alternative that these might be allowed to escape whilst the salaried clerk would have to pay; than which we can imagine no more inequitable arrangement, since it is certain that the clerk drawing his cheque for £8 16s. 8d. a month is a substantially poorer man than the miner or the ironworker drawing £2 a week."

"The temptation to lower the limit of exemption so as to include incomes below the present limit of £160 must be steadily resisted," says the Nation. "Doubtless there are working-class incomes that improperly escape the present tax. But any reduction of the limit would be an assault upon the standard of life and efficiency of labour which already bears its full share of taxation in its indirect forms."

"The object of reform should be to secure that, by a finer process of graduation, carried far beyond the present upward limit, the principle of payment according to ability should be better applied," adds the Nation. "Unless some such means can be devised, whereby every citizen of means shall keep his account with the State disclosing his full income and paying on it, we cannot hope to realize the justice and expediency of the maximum of payment according to 'ability' which is the only equitable basis of taxation."

The New Land Programme.

"The Prime Minister's summary of the Government's Land Proposals," says the Nation, "while extremely moderate in form and likely to conciliate needless alarms, extends the Chancellor's announcements in a distinctly radical direction. This is a very important departure, for, of course, the Prime Minister's speech will be the text of a thousand discourses, and the basis of a 'firm' offer to the Agricultural community."

"The following seem to be the most important of Mr. Asquith's pronouncements, and some of them are distinctly new:

"(1) The Prime Minister makes the minimum wage the corner-stone of the land policy, and he clearly aims, not at a mere rise of 1s. or 2s. a week, but at a substantial increase adequate to produce a decent living for the worker's family and to ensure a commercial rent for his cottage."

"(2) He has promised that the evil of the tied cottage system is to be dealt with by an extension of the period of notice."

"(3) He proposes to give the agricultural tenant some right to control the letting of game to the sporting tenant—a very far-reaching and popular proposal."

"(4) He has made it clear that the Commissioners attached to the new Ministry of Land are to be a judicial body, and will act in complete independence of the Executive."

"(5) He has repudiated leasehold enfranchisement as a solution of the housing problem in towns. This means that the rights of the community will be recognized, and that the element of 'unearned increment' will not simply be tied on to 'good-will' and expenditure on improvements and made over to a tenant. The analysis of 'unearned increment' may not be an easy one. But we have Mr. Asquith's pledge that it will be attempted."

DIFFICULTIES ABOUT FEDERALISM.

"The question remains whether the whole business of British and Irish government is ripe for solution on federal lines," says the Nation. "To that important issue, now steadily assuming shape, it is essential that the Government should devote themselves. If Federalism is not possible, the sooner that path is definitely barred the better."

"If, on the other hand, it is possible, but not ripe, the sowing of the virgin mind of the nation with some elementary ideas upon it cannot be undertaken too soon. For the moment we consider the application of federalism to these islands—we are confronted with three or four outstanding difficulties, on none of which we venture to say, has much thought been bestowed. Let us state them in brief:

"1. The first decision to be taken is whether we desire the reform of the Imperial Parliament by way of a drastic change in its procedure, or whether we prefer a delegation of powers to subordinate assemblies for England, Ireland, Wales, and Scotland. A vital change in the character of the House of Commons is an inevitable consequence of Federalism."

"2. The second is whether we desire a single or a double Imperial Assembly, and what kind of revising power we should reserve to it in its relations with the national bodies."

"3. The third is the creation of a totally new system of Imperial and local finance."

"But beyond and above all these considerations is the governing difficulty of English public opinion. Of the three other nationalities, it may be said with truth that they are ripe or nearly ripe for Home Rule. Of England, the predominant partner, we can affirm nothing whatever. She has neither said 'Yes' nor 'No.' She has not considered the question herself, nor have her statesmen presented it to her in any other form than as a signpost to an agreed settlement of the Irish difficulty. But that is not enough."

"Constitutions cannot be made or re-made out of the brains of the masters of the arts of formalism. They must grow out of the deep-seated needs, and the broad, if half-realized, conceptions, of the national will. It is to this fountain that our leaders must go if they would draw fresh life for the State, and dig new channels for fertilizing its activities."

"A settlement," says the Nation, "requires a formal acceptance of Home Rule or Devolution for Ireland plus an act of faith in the future fulfilment of Liberal pledges. Mr. Bonar Law speaking at Carrarvon, stated that he believed the chance of a settlement to be smaller to-day than it was six weeks ago, but he repeated his declaration that if a proposal were made by the Government the Opposition would consider it without any regard to party advantage or disadvantage, but with sole regard to the welfare of the nation."

Another Drowning. City Appraisers

Last evening Deputy Minister of Justice Hutchings received the following message from Magistrate Barrow of Botwood:—

"Samuel Peyton, formerly of Joe Batt's Arm, while crossing the river from Botwood to Burnt Arm on Saturday afternoon, accidentally fell through the ice and was drowned. The body was recovered yesterday. Deceased was about 35 years of age and leaves a widow and two children."

Inspector General Sullivan had a message something similar from Constable Churchill.

Overdue Vessels.

Grave fears are now being entertained by the friends of those on board the schr. Checkers, Capt. Godard, which is now seventy days on the passage to this port from Oporto. Considerable anxiety is also expressed for the schr. Banshee, which is over sixty days out from Cadix. Both vessels must have had a hard time of it coming on this coast. Their safe arrival would dispel much alarm and uneasiness.

Enquiry Held.

Yesterday afternoon an enquiry was held into the death of stoker Sergeant on board the S.S. Dundee, when the evidence of trimmer Murphy, fireman McGrath and engineers Crawford and Tizzard was taken. Drs. Rendell and Scully who held a post mortem on the body gave testimony that death was due to congestion of the lungs.

Immediately after the installation, D.D.G.M. Phillips, on behalf of Past Master Craig of the Grand Lodge of the Maritime Provinces, who paid an official visit in 1911, presented P. G. Adrain with a Chief Patriarch's Jewel and the following brothers with handsome mementoes, viz.: W. T. Quick, W. T. Young, Walter Butler, A. Long, Chesley Woods and J. McLean. At the close of the session the Brothers retired to the banquetting room, where a pleasant hour was spent, in which songs and speeches were indulged in, and the usual toast list gone through, after which the gathering separated after one of the most enjoyable events that Atlantic Lodge has had for a number of years.

Music and Talk.

We begged that fine musician, the great Professor Prunes, to help our souls' condition by playing divers tunes. He didn't wish to do it, for he was tired and stale, we had to force him to it by plea and threat and wall. Then on the keys his fingers began to travel light; his tunes were all humdingers his skill was out of sight. And faster still and faster his magic fingers flew; from this and that old master sweet ecstasy he drew. His brow began to darken, he sternly scowled around; he saw we did not harken to all that burst of sound. Like sundry bonehead vandals we chattered in our seats, withdrawing ancient scandals from out their winding sheets; with lungs of brass and leather we filled the room with yawns; we talked about the weather, we talked about the crops. And then the great musician rose from his padded stool, and said: "It's not my mission to be your private fool." He promptly wrecked the shanty from roof to cellar stair, and buried Dad and Auntie beneath a Morris chair. And when, all bruised and broken, we crawled out from the wreck, these words were sadly spoken: "It served us right by heck!"

Week of Prayer

Opened at the Congregational Church.

The Week of Prayer was opened last night in the Congregational Church. The service was one of humiliation and thanksgiving and was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Thomas. He was assisted by many pastors of city churches. The Rev. Mr. Matthews offered the opening prayer and the Rev. Dr. Fenwick read the Scripture Lesson. The chairman spoke a few words but what he said touched the hearts of those present. He paid a personal tribute to the memory of the late Dr. Rogers who passed away during the year, and had entered into the "rest that remaineth for the people of God."

The speaker of the evening was the Rev. Mr. Whitemarsh, who opened his remarks with an illustration to make clear the subject of the evening—Humiliation and Thanksgiving. He then enumerated what especially called for humiliation and what for thanksgiving. Among the former, he dwelt particularly on a spirit of irreverence which seemed to be prevalent. He spoke for twenty minutes and the discourse was deeply impressed on the mind of the congregation.

After the address, a service of song and prayer continued until quarter past nine, when the Benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Sutherland, of the Presbyterian Church. To-night the second service will be held in the Kirk and the principal address given by the Rev. Dr. Cowperthwaite.

Crowds See the Pantomime.

Last night Rossey's was filled to overflowing. On the first show many had to go away disappointed, as there was not even standing room available. Jack and the Bean Stalk is a splendid pantomime. Every costume is new and beautiful. The Demon scene is the finest thing of its kind ever seen here. How Mrs. Rossey thinks out such things is marvellous. Then the wood nymphs by the Imperial Ballet, brought down the house. They are in this pantomime all in another beautiful change of costume, and their work is perfect. Jack Rossey as the Giant's cook made lots of fun, and his clever dancing was loudly applauded. Joe Durbert made a fine hero, while Percy Orth, as the Giant, had the house in roars. The two babies who danced the Irish jig were cheered again and again, while dainty Marie Magnar was brought back several times. Miss Arkandy charmed every one by her singing. While the city children worked like old timers. It's a splendid show, one of the best ever seen at Rossey's. There is a matinee to-day being a holiday.

House and Contents Destroyed by Fire.

The house owned and occupied by John Snow, carpenter, of Sumner st., was destroyed by fire this morning. Practically all the contents and the sum of $305 in cash were lost in the flames.

The alarm was rung in from box 257 on Freshwater Road at 4.50 a.m., to which the Central and Western Companies responded, but the fire had too far advanced for their services to be of any material assistance.

After a struggle with the flames which were fanned by a strong breeze the "all out" signal was sent in at 5.45 a.m.

The loss to Mr. Snow is considerable, as it was only partly covered by insurance, the amount held on the house and effects being $1,100. The origin of the fire is unknown, but a theory was expressed that a stove in the bedroom was responsible for the outbreak. The inmates suffered great inconvenience, seeking shelter at such an early hour, when a blinding snow storm was in progress.

Fashions and Fads.

Very good are the blouses of tullest French batiste, hand embroidered and lined with pink chiffon.

Tassels of braid, silk fringe or beads are found on everything, from hair ornaments to tailor-mades.

Separate skirts are of woolen plaids and worn with plain, colored, black, navy blue or green coats.

Evening wraps appear in very daring colors. Those of chiffon velvet are extensively worn at the opera.

Some of the velvet street costumes have extremely long coats, reaching nearly to the hem of the gown.

Silk is the most-favoured material at present, and the smart afternoon frocks are fashioned of this material or velvet.

The business girl will look smart and modish in navy blue. She should choose one of the hats of black velvet for her head.

Girdles are very important accessories to the costume, and they are made in all styles and sizes of every material.

The big muff must have on it a large bunch of flowers. They should be at its front, side, near the center, or near one corner.

The skirt of the fashionable garments must not fit. It is draped, usually gathered around the waist and is met by a baggy blouse.

Chic velvet hats are modish for outdoor wear. They are good either in black or colors. They match the sport coat or linen up the somber suit.

There is a slight change in the shape of the back of the collarless blouse. They are higher in the center front and lower on the shoulders.

Fashion has taken a fancy to light-colored suits. The tones known as safe as lait, biscuit, string, oyster and pale pink have appeared in coats and skirts.

Sweaters have found their way into fashion's favour and are being worn in the country with suits of various colors and overskirts of dull brown and blue.

A craze for antique velvet is predicted. Antique velvet is merely velvet in soft tones that have the appearance of being delicately faded like a piece of material half a century old.

Deputies Released.

Mexico City, January 2. — Twenty-six former Mexican Deputies imprisoned by Provisional President Huerta last October were released from the penitentiary to-day. This number does not include Rodolfo Reyes, former minister of justice, nor Jorge Vera Estanol, former minister of public instruction.

The judge of the district court who had charge of the investigation into the charges against them found there was no basis for the accusation of rebellion and their release was ordered.

LONDON, Jan. 5.
The Lord Mayor of Bristol stated in the City Council that returns for the past year of shipping entering the Port, exceeded by two and a half millions, a growth of 25 per cent. in 5 years, an increase greater than at any other port in the country.

PARIS, Jan. 5.
The loan to Mexico was recently arranged here by an international group of bankers for the sole use of meeting the January interest on the Mexican Government and City of Mexico bonds, amounting to about $5,900,000, of which total the New York bankers took $390,000, London $3,465,000, and Paris $1,505,000.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.
A wireless message received by the agent of the Transatlantic Company, said that the steamer Manuel Calvo, of that line, was on the way to port, towing a disabled tank steamer, when at a point 15 miles east of Sandy Hook, the tank steamer sunk. No mention of any loss of life or of the name of the steamer was given.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.
With a 75 mile gale from the N.E., driving great seas against bulkheads, already weakened or broken through by a storm on Christmas night, the New Jersey coast points yesterday and last night underwent perhaps the worst experience they have had for many years. So far no loss of life has been reported, but damages to property already reach well into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 5.

The announcement that President Wilson's policy would remain unchanged, after John Lind's trip to Pass Christian, is a source of disappointment to most foreigners and many Mexicans, who believed that the interview between the President and his personal representative might result in some definite step to put an early end to the distressing conditions which, so far as business is concerned, are fast growing acute. To official Mexico, while outwardly Mr. Lind's visit to the President was of little significance, the apparent determination of the United States still to keep its hands off is known to be highly gratifying. As one official tersely summed up the relations with the United States: The best Mexico can expect of Washington is to be left alone to work out its problem. In spite of the critical financial outlook the administration appears to be highly optimistic.

Wedding Bells.

PECKHAM-NIXON.
A very quiet wedding took place at St. Thomas's Church, on Saturday night, when Miss L. Nixon and Mr. R. Peckham were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. G. R. Golden. The bride was attended by Miss Blanche Rowe, the groom being supported by his brother, Mr. Harry Peckham. After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride, where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. The presents were numerous and useful.

Portia Returns.

ROUGH TRIP.
The S. S. Portia arrived from the Westward at 6 o'clock last evening, after a very rough trip. Snow storms were frequent during the round trip. On her way west she was hung up at Bay of Islands and at Bonny Bay by storms. A similar experience was had at Trepassay on Sunday, as referred to yesterday. The Portia brought a large freight and as passengers:—Miss Lilly, E. Boone, C. C. Harris, J. Courage, Miss Kelland, Miss M. Bulger, G. Devereaux, J. Walsh, J. F. Brophy, Mrs. M. Redd; and 20 in second class.

Getting Ready For Banking.

By the Portia we learn that active preparations are being made along the southwest coast for this year's banking. The different captains are now engaged fitting out their vessels.

The first winter trip will be made in February on the western grounds, as the fleet will be supplied the last of the present month.

MAY VISIT ST. JOHN'S.—According to the Sydney Record it is likely that a team of Cape Breton hockey-ists will visit St. John's this winter and play a series of games with our boys. A request has been received by a well known sporting enthusiast of Cape Breton to send along a good team.

Note From Mr. Harkins.

Editor Evening Telegram.

SIR.—During the past week, I have heard at various times rumors of an interview which I gave about three years ago after leaving St. John's. For some unexplainable reason this interview has been "garbled" to such an extent that it is now made to appear that I had insulted, in that interview, the people of your city. I now wish to announce to your citizens the gist of just what I did say at that time.

After leaving here three years ago, we were detained at Port aux Basques for several days. To vary the monotony it was suggested that we give a performance in the Hall at Channel. We printed announcements that the doors would open at 7 and the performance begin at 8. That night a terrific storm commenced, and you can imagine our surprise on arrival at the Hall to find it crowded and not a ticket sold. We decided to allow the audience to pay their admission at their leisure, and everyone did. There was no curtain, no scenery, no dressing rooms, and very little heat. When questioned about this, the remark was made to me, "Why didn't you use icicles for tickets?" Later it was jokingly said to me, you can now make Channel a week stand every time you go to St. John's, and I replied then, and I repeat now, "Never again in a thousand years." That, Mr. Editor, is the extent of my offense.

It is now thirty-four years since I first came to St. John's, and in all that time I think I can say that the business men of St. John's have always found me upright and square in all my dealings—and the son of the man who worked for me on my first visit here is working for me now. In all my travels—and I have visited many countries—I have never received better or more hospitable treatment than I have from the people of St. John's, and I am proud to say that some of my most cherished friends reside here. From the Reid Nfd. Co. I have always received the most generous treatment, and in our delays—over which they have no control—they have always made it as pleasant for us as they possibly could, providing our meals, etc., gratis. I am sorry to have to take up so much of your valuable space, but I feel in view of the reports that are in circulation, that an explanation is due to the citizens of St. John's, and I trust that this will settle once and for all the different rumors that are in circulation. In conclusion, I wish to thank the large audience present last evening, and those who intend going to future performances for their generous support in the past, and I trust that they will continue it in the future. Thanking you for your courtesy, I remain, yours truly,

W. S. HARKINS.
