CHAPTER II.

"How could you be so mad?" he said at last; and the words seemed a strange mode of expressing his thanks for the life he owed her.

Iris lifted her eyes, and let them fall upon him in silence, and the color came welling back into his bronzed cheeks.

"I beg your pardon," he said; "but I know I owe you my life. I'm very grateful. But—but it was madness!"

"Was it?" she said, in her low, sweet, musical voice. "It was madness not to have come to you sooner, but—I didn't think of it till you fell."

"You should not have come at all," he said, almost sternly. "It was dangerous, horribly, wickedly dangerous! If your horse had stumbled or you had fallen—" he stopped, and a slight shudder ran through him. "Besides, I should have got to the gate—No," he broke off. "I should not! I know I should not? You have saved my life! But when I think of the risk you ran, I wish—I do wish most heartily—that you had been miles away."

She sat motionless, looking down at him contemplatively.

No one, not even her father, had ever spoken so firmly, so masterfully, as this stranger had done.

As she looked down at him she saw two or three drops of blood run down his wrist and fall to the ground.

A little spasm of pain passed her lips; all women hate the sight of blood.

"Are you hurt?" she said.

"Hurt? No." Then his eyes followed hers; and he put his hand behind him.

"At least, if I am I don't feel it. I suppose our friend must have struck me when he came dancing over me. But it is nothing, anyway. But you?"

She shook her head.

"Your habit is torn," he said suddenly, as his eyes roamed over her anxiously. "You are sure he did not touch you?"

"Quite," said Iris. "No, I am not hurt in the least. But you—I am afraid!"

"No, no," he replied quickly. "The worst harm I have got is an intolerable thirst!" and he laughed.

"There is a brook in the hollow there," she said. "I will show you."

She walked down the slope, and the young fellow walked by her side, brushing the dust from his clothes with his manured hand.

Every now and then during their short journey he glanced up at the pale face with a vague wonder at its beauty and its sweet calmness.

Most girls would have been in a state of palpitating "gush," half laughing, half crying; where this beautiful creature, who had descended, as it were, from heaven, on her black horse, was as calm and serene and self-pos-

Too Many Varieties.

"CHRISTIANIZE THE CHURCH" SAYS PRESBYTERIAN CLEGG MEN.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 22.—(Associated Press)—One of the greatest difficulties confronting the church lies in the fact that there are 175 varieties of churches in America. Dr. Baxter P. Fullerton, of St. Louis, told the World's Alliance of Presbyterian and Reformed Churches here today. Dr. Fullerton is secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions and was telling of the difficulties of home mission work in the United States. Denominationalism, he said, was one of the most serious of these. Each of the 175 kinds of church was endeavoring to promote its own work, both in the city and the country, among native and immigrant alike and consequently, there was not only overlapping but also overlooking, since there had been no co-operation in the location and development of these various local churches. Continuing he said that the greatest problem before the agencies of the Christian Church is to "Christianize the church itself." He declared that there are communities in America where four or five different denominations are at work, each church receiving home mission aid, when one or two churches could be both self-sustaining and self-respecting. Efforts had been made, he said, to change this "shameful situation" but up to the present it existed "to the embarrassment of the work" and "to the scorn of the ungodly." An attempt had been made to unite denominations having similar doctrine and government into one larger unit, and in this way unite the local churches into one for better service for the community but Dr. Fullerton said that extreme denominationalism prevents any very large application of this principle and strong peoples remain apart because of some unimportant, or subsidiary question, on which the salvation of no soul or community depends.

"It is apparent, therefore," he went on, "that this larger union will never be accomplished until the kingdom of God bulks larger in the minds of people than the church, until the salvation and service of mankind becomes a greater concern than the establishment of a specific church. This duplication of churches is not only harmful to the cause but is also a useless waste of both money and men."

Dr. Fullerton said it was heart-rending to know that this condition of things was being considered serious by churches and missionary agencies and pointed out that the organization of a Home Missions Council and Council of Women for Home Missions 14 years ago, had become an outstanding evidence of a spirit of co-operation prevailing in the churches. He pointed to the condition in Utah as an illustration of what had been accomplished by the Home Missions Council and said that to-day there were no communists in that state where two or more Gentile churches were at work except in the cities of Salt Lake and Ogden. Similar organizations for interdenominational home mission work had been made in Colorado, Montana, Porto Rico, Cuba, Alaska and Santa Domingo. Despite the hindrance of denominationalism, Dr. Fullerton reported that the spirit of evangelism prevailing in America was one of the most hopeful signs of the times. Never in the course of a year had there been such an interest in bringing men into the church, he said. He recounted the difficulties in attempting to Christianize and Americanize the polyglot peoples of the cities and held it to be the mission of the church, as well as of the state, to solve the problems of sanitation and housing. He said that, according to best information, there were now 18,500 men and women engaged in some form of missionary work in this country and more than $26,000,000 invested in the business of making and keeping America Christian for the redemption of mankind and the friendly service of the world.

Crime Wave
in New York.

People held up by handits and robbed—1,500 more policemen wanted to handle traffic and enforce prohibition.

New York, Sept. 27.—The cry of "crime wave" was raised to-day following yesterday's carnival for robberies.

In the Grand Central Station, in a crowded spot as can be found in the city, three handits, armed with lead pipes and revolvers, fell upon a cashier of the N. Y. N.H. and Hartford R. R. and tried to snatch a handbag containing thousands of dollars.

A pistol attack was made upon M. Jmacahacok, a theatre manager, at Second Avenue and 74th St., while he was carrying $1,200 to bank. Jmacahacok dropped his money box at the first shot, which grazed his cheek, and his assailant scooping up $400, escaped in an automobile.

Demott Perdisant and his bride were held up by four men at the bride's home on Ninth Avenue.

Four armed men held up Ralph De Mura, a taxicab driver, at Broadway and 8th street, took $13.65, precluded the possibility of pursuit by slashing his tires, and escaped.

Police Commissioner Earlight has asked Board of Estimate for an additional $4,000,000.

He asserted that about 1,600 more men were needed—but explained that many of them were required to handle traffic and enforce Prohibition.

Healthy Mother Merry Children Happy Home

To maintain a happy home the housewife must keep in good health. Her duties are many and various, and it seems as if every other member of the family depended very much on her. "Where is my hat?" cries the boy. "What did you do with my coat?" asks the daughter. "I can't find any handkerchiefs," yells the husband. The housewife is usually the advisor and general manager of the family.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helps women to maintain a happy home by keeping them in good health.

Toronto, Ont.—"I suffered with irregular menstruation, was weak and run down, could not eat, and had headaches. The worst symptoms were dragging down pains so bad I sometimes thought I would go crazy and I seemed to be smothering. I found one of your booklets and felt inclined to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I received the best results from it and now I keep house and go out to work and am like a new woman. I have recommended your Vegetable Compound to my friends and if these facts will help some poor woman use them as you please."—Mrs. W. PEASEY, 387 King St., Toronto.

Owen Sound, Ont.—"I suffered for ten years with female organic trouble, neuralgia and indigestion, and was weak and had such bad pains I could hardly walk or stand up at times. The last doctor I had told me he never expected me to be on my feet again or able to do a day's work. One day one of your little booklets was left at my door and my husband said I should try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I thank God I did, for it relieved me, and I am now well and strong. I think there is no remedy like the Vegetable Compound for anyone who has my troubles, and have recommended it to my neighbors."—Mrs. HENRY A. MITCHELL, 1767 7th Ave. East, Owen Sound, Ont.

SWEET, PURE MILK—always on hand when you want it!

If you have never used Libby's Evaporated Milk, you will be amazed to find how good, how convenient and economical it is. Many women who first tried it in some emergency now use it always—they find it gives such satisfactory results.

There's no waiting for the milkman—you can always keep several cans on the shelf and in summer there's no bothering with ice, and in winter the milk wagon can get stuck in a heavy drift of snow as often as it wants to!

And there's less waste—a can of Libby's Evaporated Milk will keep indefinitely before being opened—and after you have opened a can you can use just what you need; the rest, put in a cool place, will keep several days.

Libby's Milk comes from the finest dairying section of America and is processed in our own sanitary condensaries—it is not the "distributed" product of an unknown and nameless plant.

Idle Regrets.

My heart is sore and heavy now; I'm feeling far from gay; for I am thinking of the cow that I ran down to-day. Ah, black and bitter in my mood and small relief I find in saying that the cow was stewed, or had a feeble mind. The man who has a worth at least five hundred bones. My car is to the junkyard gone, and it no more will zip along the highway was rubbering around, as drivers often do; I did not gaze upon the ground, or keep the curves in view. My thoughts from this gray world of men after had roved along, in fancy I was treading then the shining peaks of sons. The cow appeared upon the pike, ahead, a rod or perch, and oh the impact then was like the falling of a church. The undertakers found it hard through all the wreck to plow and harder yet to tell the hard from motor car or cow. The cow is planted in the earth, beneath a cairn of stones; the owner tells me she was worth at least five hundred bones. My car is to the junkyard gone, and it no more will zip along the highway

In the dawn—it's made its final trip. And I sit here and nurse my wounds, in misery intense, and cry, "Odsteh!" and likewise "Zounds!" and wish I had some sense.

Big Decrease in British Revenue Receipts

Morgan to Have Another Try--De Valera Not a Delegate to London--B. C. Has War Memorial--Premier Squires. Criticizes Dr. Grenfell's Methods.

SQUIRES ON GRENFELL.
SYDNEY, Oct. 3. That Dr. Willfred Grenfell's methods in raising money in the United States for mission work in Labrador has been highly injurious to the credit of Newfoundland, is a complaint voiced by Sir Richard Anderson Squires, Premier of the Ancient Colony, in an interview on his way home from Washington, where he interviewed President Harding and the Senate Finance Committee with reference to the Foraker Bill on the United States-Newfoundland trade. He said Dr. Grenfell had been representing Newfoundland as a land of poverty and destitution, and that his exaggerations were injurious to the credit and reputation of the Island, whose people are thus placed in a very false and misleading light before the people of the Continent.

REVENUE STATEMENT BAD BUT EXPECTED.
LONDON, Oct. 3. The half year's revenue statement for the United Kingdom shows that whereas the Exchequer calculated for a revenue decline of two hundred million pounds for the whole year, there has been actual decrease of one hundred and sixty-three million pounds for six months. Large unexpected items of expenditure have arisen in connection with minimum agriculture wages, railways and general unemployment.

B.C.'S MEMORIAL.
VICTORIA, Oct. 2. Lieut.-Governor W. C. Nichol yesterday afternoon planted the first tree in what is expected to be one of the outstanding War Memorials of the Empire, in the form of an avenue which, when completed, will contain one tree for each British Columbia soldier who lost his life in the Great War. A name plate will be embedded at the base of each tree.

DE VALERA NOT A DELEGATE.
DUBLIN, Oct. 3. Eamonn De Valera will not be one of the Sinn Fein delegation who will go to London to explore the situation with a view to settlement of Irish difficulties on October 11th, according to announcement made to-day by Desmond Fitzgerald, Sinn Fein Minister of Propaganda.

MORGAN RETURNING.
WINNIPEG, Oct. 3. R. C. Morgan, Supt. of Terminals for the Canadian Pacific here, has been granted leave of absence for six months to take charge of the Red Rd. Railway. Mr. Morgan leaves to-night for Newfoundland.

CREW SAFE; SHIP TOTAL WRECK.
QUEBEC, Oct. 3. Despatches reaching here to-night from Bonne Esperance on the Labrador Coast, state that the captain and crew of the Koren Rogenes, which is now jammed on the rocks at Burnt Island, are all safe at Oldfort Bay, about five miles west of Bonne Esperance. It is reported that the engine room of the vessel is full of water, and the ship is apparently a total wreck.

WILL IT BE CONTINUED?
LONDON, Oct. 3. Summer time in England ended last night. No legal provision has been made for continuing the expedition next year.

INDIAN URBEST.
LONDON, Oct. 3. A situation of the utmost gravity is developing in India, according to a despatch to the Labor Party's organ, the Herald. The despatch contains a declaration of the Nationalist leader, Mahatma Gandhi, that "it is sinful for anti-Muslim or Hindu to serve the existing Government."

FLOATING BAR BARRED.
BOSTON, Oct. 3. The schooner Arcthusa will not be accepted as an entry for the American elimination fishing schooner races to be held off Gloucester on October 12. The Arcthusa is a vessel alleged to have functioned as a "floating bar" off New Bedford and other ports during recent weeks.

ANOTHER WAR KING DEAD.
SPUTTGART, Oct. 3. Former King William II. of Wurtemberg is dead of a severe form of bronchitis. William II. abdicated in November, 1918, as a result of the great war.

IN MOROCCO.
MELILLA, Oct. 3. Continuing their advance against the Moorish tribesmen yesterday, Spanish troops engaged the rebels along a front of ten kilometers on the plains before Zeluán, inflicting casualties of more than one thousand on the Moors.

INVITATION DENIED.
BELFAST, Oct. 3. Reports that Ulster had been invited to send delegates to the London Conference next week on the Irish question, were officially denied here to-day.

HARDING'S REPLY TO HAIG.
EDINBURGH, Oct. 3. Field Marshal Earl Haig, who commanded the British forces in France and Belgium in the Great War, speaking at a grand rally of the Edinburgh branches of the British Legion held here, said he had written to President Harding congratulating him upon what he was doing in connection with the calling of a conference at Washington on the limitation of armaments and the problems of the Far-East, and that he had received a reply from the United States President to his communication. The Field Marshal read the President's letter to the audience. In it President Harding said he was deeply impressed with the warm congratulations upon "our efforts to establish more firmly the foundations of world peace."

EVERYBODY WANTING TO GO TO HONOLULU.
Honolulu, T.H., Sept. (By Associated Press).—The romantic lure of the south seas has become so potent throughout the world that the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce is faced with an increasingly onerous and embarrassing problem. Its officials announced here recently. For inhabitants of the crass, cold commercial world of the Temperate Zone desire—and make their desires known in a pile of mail that is increasing constantly with each steamer—to leave their romantic atmosphere and come to Hawaii, the land of music and flowers, where tradition has the golden moon always full and where as person's life, according to popular belief, consists of loling on the shaded beach at Waikiki, fanned by the cooling trade winds and reaching up occasionally to pluck enough fruit from the overladen boughs to afford sustenance. The writers of the last steamer's mail ranged from stenographers, educators, chiropractors, ex-jockeys, to schoolboys and countless others. All emphasized the great sacrifice they would make in coming to the islands. The only condition they impose about the positions they hoped to obtain was that they be "soft," according to Mrs. E. K. Stone, acting secretary of the chamber. "That's all they want," she added. "The number of letters containing the same request is increasing with each steamer, and some drastic measures will have to be taken soon to cope with the situation. It can't go on, or the Chamber building will be inundated."

One graduate of four leading universities, with a long string of degrees capped with a "Ph.D." desired to come to some local corporation as an "efficiency educator." Another letter asked whether hemstitching was popular in the islands. If so, the woman desired to transport her sewing to Honolulu. A young man in the backwoods of Maine offered to travel 5,000 miles to Hawaii to instruct the residents in higher education. A girl in California referred to the spell that the Hawaiian moon has cast over her, and wondered whether she couldn't help out some business man by doing "just a little typing."

"Some of the letters show that the writers have at least a little knowledge about the islands," Mrs. Stone said. "Others are just as far fetched as that written recently by a man in a small Virginia town. He wanted to know whether there were any nice, warm tropical islands for sale in this vicinity. I answered that he could find, without any trouble, a real estate firm that would sell him part of this very island, but doubted whether he could even obtain a lease on all of it."

Another incident illustrating the lure of the tropics concerned a letter that some friends of an army enlisted man, stationed here, wrote to a newspaper in Portsmouth, England, signing the private's name without his knowledge. "This is more or less a lonely life for a fellow in Honolulu, as white women are scarce," the joking letter read. "More than one thousand women in England have written thus far, offering to marry the man, he said recently. The women range in age from 14 to 40, but all have felt the urge of the south seas. The letters are so numerous that postal authorities in San Francisco tie them in bundles of 50 each. The man said: "The truth of the matter is that I don't want a wife as I can't support one." Meanwhile the letters continue to pour in to this man at the rate of at least 500 every steamer."

THE TRAFFIC REGULATIONS.

In one of the volumes of the Consolidated Statutes will be found certain Rules and Regulations for the control of street traffic. If it were not for the fact that these regulations will be found there in cold print, there might be some reasonable allowance for the public to doubt that they exist. For this is one of the laws which, in this country, is honored in the breach. It is true that some Street Traffic Regulations exist, but to the ordinary pedestrian they are not very apparent. Drivers of vehicles seem to take a peculiar delight in breaking these rules and pay them little or no attention. They are broken, not because there is any necessity for such a course, but merely because it gives some slight satisfaction to the guilty ones to realize that they are breaking the law. The rule most frequently ignored is that which states that all traffic must keep to the left side of the road. This is a very necessary ordinance and a simple one to obey. Nevertheless, how often do we find it broken? Water Street is the centre of the city's traffic but what do we find there? Cars, cabs and carts drive along the centre of the street, few troubling to keep to their own side, whilst at frequent intervals a vehicle will dart across to the right side, risking a collision between it, the traffic behind and the traffic in front, not to speak of the poor pedestrian who generally escapes only by the skin of his teeth.

This tendency to drive on the wrong side is particularly dangerous in a town which contains so many hills and blind corners. The sight of a motor car turning up a hill only to find vehicles, all going in the opposite direction, and blocking the road, is too often seen, whilst some nasty accidents have been barely averted at certain cross roads where motorists going up on their wrong side nearly collide with other vehicles going across on the left side. These are but instances of the manner in which the Street Traffic Regulations are neglected, and it is miraculous that so far, no serious accidents have resulted. We do not attach any blame to the police for the many breaches of the Traffic Regulations. It is manifestly impossible for such a small force as we possess to look after the law and order of the city and do traffic duty also. The only solution to the problem, if, as it appears, it is useless to appeal to the common sense of some drivers, is to form a special force of police who will look after traffic solely and see that the Rules and Regulations, which in themselves are wise, are more rigidly observed.

Many Thanks.

"THE HERDER CUP." Whether by the above captain Mr. Herder's generous offer is to be officially known, we are unaware, but it will always be identified with his personality. Mr. W. J. Herder of the Evening Telegram has always taken a warm and personal interest in sports, and his sons have proved themselves admirable seconds and practical athletes. Sport plays a large part in the world to-day, possibly too large a part, but clean, wholesome, manly sportsmanship, is an asset to any community. We express the hope, in which Daily News readers will, we are confident, heartily unite, that the Herder Memorial may be an institution for many years to come, and that the generous donor may be privileged to witness many well-run races, and to himself award the trophy to many a victor. We thank our morning contemporary for the kind reference above, contained on its editorial page of this day's issue.

Blue Puttee Reunion.

AT DONOVAN'S TO-NIGHT. At the final Blue Puttee meeting held last night in the G.W.V.A. Rooms, it was decided by the committee to leave town at 7.45 p.m. Any men who have not yet purchased their tickets will be able to do so at the railway station before leaving. All arrangements have been completed very satisfactorily and the catering will be made perfect at Donovan's by Mrs. Hughes and her competent staff in the well known style that has made Donovan's popular. It is hoped that every member of the "first five hundred" living in or near St. John's, will be present at the dinner. This is the one chance in a year to get together and meet old friends you may not meet again until the next re-union. It is an event that has always been a foregone conclusion even in the days when war was paramount and peace unknown. It will bring you back to Tipperary days, back to Pleasantville, back to Salisbury Plain, and back to Fort George. You'll never know the joy of meeting old friends until you attend the dinner to-night. Go along, boys and make it a night to remember. All the "old reliables" will be there and you bet they'll make things hum. Don't forget this is the last word. Be at the station at 7.45. If you haven't your tickets get them there before leaving.

TO-NIGHT.—C. C. C. Promenade Band Concert, Prince's Rink. By request the selection "Hunting Chorus." Admission 20c.—oct.4

Good News for Bell Island.

We learn, this morning, on good authority, that the Canadian Government has placed an order for between 100,000 and 200,000 steel rails with the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. for the Canadian Northern Railway. This will mean the shipping of from 200,000 to 400,000 tons of ore from their mines at Bell Island.

TO-NIGHT.—C. C. C. Promenade Band Concert, Prince's Rink. Follow the big crowd; the largest attendance since the opening assured to-night. Floor in splendid condition for the dancing numbers. Admission 20c.—oct.4

Nfld. Athletes Here on Way Home.

The Newfoundland athletes, Tom Butler, Fred Phelan, H. Skirving and E. J. Goodland, Manager of the team, who participated in the Wanderers' sports in Halifax a few days ago, arrived in town by this morning's express and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Shano, until they sail for their homes in St. John's by the Kyle. This was the first occasion in which Newfoundland was represented at any Halifax meet, and the boys made a wonderful fine showing and a host of friends by their sportsmanship. The Terra Nova team won second place in the total results, and was only one point behind the Halifax Crescents, which lead with 12 points. One of the most sensational features of the sports was the winning of the 5 mile race by Bell in the record time of 25.51, defeating the crack distance man Alf Rodgers, and for which he received a good ovation from the crowd. Bell is still at Truro, where he is training for the big 10 mile event which takes place shortly.—North Sydney Herald.

TO WELCOME RECTOR.—Rev. Mr. Earg, the new rector of St. Thomas's Church, will be leaving England this week on S.S. Digby and the congregation of the church is holding a meeting to-night to make preparations for his welcome.

Police Court.

Four drunks were the only occupants of the prisoners' bench to-day and they were each fined $1. Two of the men had been conveyed to the Police Station early this morning in a coal cart by two officers of the night watch, who were unable to find any other means of getting the men to the lock-up.

Producing Musical Comedy.

A musical comedy, "The Quaker Girl" will be produced in the city within the next month or two in aid of the K. of C. Memorial School Fund. The musical part of the programme will be in the hands of Mr. F. J. King whilst Prof. C. Hutton will act as stage manager. Several talented local artists have been asked to take part.

Poultry Stolen.

Several fine hens were recently stolen from the yard of a prominent business man living in the West End. The hens were all Rhode Island Reds and were greatly prized by their owner. The matter has been placed in the hands of the police who are now investigating it and hope to run the guilty ones to earth.

In view of the exceptionally large sale of the September issue of the "Veteran Magazine", unsold copies now remaining in the city bookstores will be withdrawn after Tuesday, so as to fill outport orders.—oct.3

A Curious Suit.

A business man of Theatre Hill used a young man, a former tenant, for $85, made up as follows: $5 for breaking a pane of glass, $5 for plaster and $75 because the house was unoccupied for five weeks. Mr. G. W. B. Ayre appeared for the defendant and protested the claim. His Honor dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

McMurdo's Store News.

TUESDAY, Oct. 4, '21. Among new goods just opened we note a line of Hair Brushes of reasonable good quality and on which we are able to give excellent value as things are to-day. Some rosewood and real ebony backs are amongst the lot, as well as some cheaper wood, but none of them are of inferior quality so far as bristles are concerned. Prices range from 50c. to $3.75 and at the price all are, as we have said, exceptional value at their respective prices. Mustard is among the best of counter-irritants, and is a quick remedy for many kinds of pain.

Obituary.

HILARY C. CAREY. The passing of Hilary C. Carey, which occurred at his home, Leslie Street, last evening, will be learned with regret by a large circle of friends, coming as it does in the prime of life, for the deceased was but 37 years old. He was the son of Dr. Carey of Ferryland, and up to a short while ago was book-keeper at Knowling's, having previously been with the firms of A. E. Hickman and Job Bros. & Co. About three years ago he married the daughter of Mr. Chas. Lester, by whom he has one child. For some time he was Secretary of the St. John's Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and was also a P. G. of Colonial Lodge, I.O.O.F. To his wife, mother, two sisters (Mrs. Dr. Brehm and Mrs. Eagan) and three brothers the Telegram extends sympathy.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

AMENDMENTS ADOPTED. GENEVA, Oct. 3. Several amendments to the blockade regulations of the League of Nations were adopted at this morning's Assembly of the League. The principal changes made were in the provision for the adjournment of the blockade by particular states which in the judgment of the Council run too great a risk from a neighbour which has violated the covenant. An additional clause stipulated that the Council would give an opinion whether a breach of a covenant had taken place and if a delegate from the accused state should on such occasion be a member of the Council he would be debarred from voting.

CLAIMING THE SANDPITS.

Recently there has been an attempt by some persons to claim all that piece of land situated at the head of Long Pond and known as the sandpits. Visitors to the place say that stakes have been driven as if to fence off the property. It may not be generally known, but the facts may be obtained at the Crown Lands Office, that in the year of 1888 Col. Robert Law obtained a grant for use as a rifle range of 28 1/2 acres of this land. It has ever since been used by the public, and any attempt by private parties to claim it is unjustifiable. Since the building up of the higher levels this place has been very much used as a picnic and recreation ground, and attempts to claim or encroach on it by private land owners should not be permitted.

Large Eggs.

Mr. Alex. Shields, of Foster and Shields, who has a poultry yard on the Mundy Pond Road, has amongst his flock of Rhode Island Reds some hens which are remarkable for laying eggs of unusual size. A short while ago one of this flock laid an egg which weighed 3 1/2 ounces. Since then Mr. Shields has brought to our office another egg from his yard which weighs exactly 4 ounces. Can any other poultry raisers beat this?

SOVIET GOVERNMENT'S REPLY.

LONDON, Oct. 4. The reply of Soviet Russian Government to recent charges by Great Britain, of intrigue against United Kingdom, is understood to be on the way to London. The reply does not attempt to answer the charges. It is said, but attributes evidence of intrigue to "notorious German agency."

REFERRED TO ARBITRATION BOARD.

LONDON, Oct. 4. South Wales coal miners, at a meeting, yesterday, at Cardiff, decided to accept an invitation of the Mines Department of the Govt. to refer to an arbitration board the dispute over the terms under which the suitably was granted to hasten the end of the recent coal miners strike. Premier Interviewed.

OUR TRADE RELATIONS WITH U.S.

Sir Richard Squires, who returned yesterday from a trip to Canada and the United States, told the Telegram to-day of the efforts made by him to have the Fordney Tariff, in so far as it concerns Newfoundland, abandoned. The real object of Sir Richard's visit was to foster trade relations between the U. S. and Newfoundland. During the course of his visit he visited Washington three times and had informal interviews with President Harding, Secretary of State Hughes, Secretary of Commerce Hoover, Dr. Klein, Director of Commerce and Mr. Boyes Penrose, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. He addressed the last named body on the subject of the trade relations as affected by the proposed Fordney Tariff. In New York, he got in touch directly with financial interests connected with Newfoundland, and particularly the representatives of American buyers who handle our fish products. At a luncheon attended by thirty of the leading representatives of these interests, all in fact, except Bowring's, who were unable through pressure of business, to send a member of their firm, the Prime Minister made an address on trade relations between Newfoundland and the United States. During his visit he also got in touch with leading newspaper interests in New York in the hope that adverse paper propaganda discrediting Newfoundland's financial institutions, and the value of its trade and commerce, and the trade relations between Newfoundland and the U.S. was that when they proposed a prohibitory tariff the framers of the measure could not have had an opportunity to make themselves fully acquainted with conditions, because the imposition of discriminatory tariff was much more adverse to the interests of the U.S. than to those of Newfoundland. Sir Richard pointed out that whilst the annual imports of American goods by Newfoundland amounted to $16,000,000 directly and $4,000,000 indirectly, we, on the other hand, exported to them products to the value of only $6,000,000, half of which were re-exported by the Americans. Newfoundland had not at any time imposed any discriminatory customs tariff against the United States and under these circumstances, with the trade balance in the proportion of 20 to 3 in favor of the U.S., their action was a declaration of trade war. The Prime Minister took the position that such had never been intended by the U.S. authorities, that there had been a pure misunderstanding, and that it was only necessary for the facts to be laid before the responsible authorities and the matter would be set right.

Quaried as to the result of his mission, Sir Richard declined absolutely to make any statement. Asked if it were true that Mr. R. C. Morgan, late General Manager of the railroad, was returning, Sir Richard said that he had had several interviews with Mr. Morgan both in the United States and in Montreal, but he could make no definite pronouncement until he had conferred with his executive.

Strange Origins of Coin Names.

Most coinage names are very old, and many have changed considerably from their original form.

The pound, for instance, was at first not a coin at all, but simply a measure of weight. Before the use of gold coins it was probably sixteen ounces of iron or copper. The gold coin represents the equivalent of these unwieldy amounts. For centuries the Scottish pound was a small silver coin worth only a shilling or two.

The word shilling means a division. In years gone by the silver coins were called twentieth shillings, or divisions of a pound. This was too long a name, and only the word shilling survived.

The crown and half crown receive their names from the fact that in early days they bore the King's arms and crown on their reverse side.

The florin is really a Florence piece. At Florence coinage was made of very pure silver, and, therefore, had a high value in the eyes of merchants. Edward III. resolved to produce an English coin of equal purity and value, which, when it appeared, at once received the name of Florence piece, florin, or florin.

Penny comes from a Saxon word paennig, meaning a pledge. The original meaning of the word is seen in the phrase "binding penny," a pledge given to seal a bargain.

The farthing is really a fourthing or fourth part. Saxon pennies had grooves cut in them in the form of a cross so that they could be broken at will into four fourthings.

Safety in Rhymes.

The safety of all sea-borne traffic depends entirely upon a rigid observance of the "rules of the road." Sailors have turned these rules into a series of rhymed couplets.

When both side-lights you see ahead
 Port your helm and show your red.

This refers to the case of two vessels approaching one another, head on, both lights of each (green for starboard, red for port) being visible to the other ship. If each ports her helm—or, in other words, swings out to starboard—they will pass one another as they ought, each keeping to the right.

If on your starboard red appear,
 It is your duty to keep clear.

That is to say, if two vessels are running in the same direction, side by side, the ship to port sees on his starboard side the port light of the other vessel. The onus is entirely on the left hand ship to keep out of the way of the other.

Green to green, or red to red—
 Perfect safety, go ahead.

Here we have two vessels meeting and passing one another, presumably with plenty of sea-room. If a navigator sees on his starboard side the green starboard light only of another vessel—or on his port side, another red light—he knows that his ship and the stranger are clearing one another safely, and it is his duty to keep straight ahead.

Finally comes a couplet, based on common sense, but which many a mariner has ignored to his cost.

In danger, with no room to turn,
 Ease her, stop her, go astern.

Hayward, Reid, Motty and Fernin. In the tournament played last spring the C.E.I. were defeated by only 6 points, and they expect to do better this time.

Wars Waged Against Animals.

They Sometimes Retaliate Destructively to Human Beings.

For man to interfere with the balance of nature, so far as regards wild animal life, is always risky and may easily be disastrous.

Some years ago there was a decrease in the yield of fish from certain Australian rivers and estuaries. Blame was laid at the door of the cormorants, which are well known to be greedy fish-eaters, so the order went forth for a massacre of cormorants, says Professor J. Thomson, in the "Control of Life."

The extreme thinning of the cormorants, however, did not result in any increase of food-fishes, though it was persisted in for years.

At last, when an appeal was made to scientific knowledge, it was discovered that the cormorants fed in great part on the sand-eels and crabs which devoured the fry of the food-fishes.

To destroy rats in Jamaica which imported the mongoose from the Old World and, for a time, things went well; but when the mongoose had finished with the rats it had become many mungoeses, and these turned their attention to the poultry. Thence they passed to ground birds and lizards and snakes.

There was no mourning over the loss of snakes, but the lizards and ground birds were missed, for injurious insects and ticks began to multiply exceedingly, and some people said they would rather have the rats back again and the mungoeses safely home.

The last part of the story is that the insects and the ticks are making life a burden to the mungoeses!

Combinations in Clothing.

"A reversible overcoat has been invented," says the Outfitter.

"It can be worn either side out. One side provides a light, smart, well-tailored tweed overcoat for dry weather, and the other an equally serviceable rain coat."

This is not the first invention of its kind. Some years ago I purchased a waistcoat which could be worn either side out. One side offered a single-breasted garment, dark in colour, the other side was double-breasted and in a different pattern, a black and white check.

A far more startling garment was exhibited some years ago at an exhibition in London organized by the "Tailor and Cutter." It was a waistcoat which, by a novel device, could be worn in no fewer than fifteen different ways.

Equally if not more ingenious was the garment devised by Mr. Sydney Banks, a well-known tailor. This was a coat, the possessor of which was in the happy position of being able to face any social contingency.

At first sight it appeared to be a frock coat, but could be changed at will and within a few moments into either a morning coat or a dress jacket.

This was done by whipping off one skirt and lacing on another.

The ingenuity of the invention consisted in the method by which this was effected. The skirts joined the body of the garment in a line not to be distinguished from an ordinary seam.

The same tailor has, I understand, produced trousers that can be adapted either for walking or riding.

There is more than one double purpose hat on the market—hats so made that their shape can be completely changed at the whim of the wearer.

These Animals Don't Eat

Sleeping Through the Winter.
 Certain forms of life are unable to leave our shores for the winter are provided by Nature with a means of living known as hibernation, a means whereby they exist without air, warmth or even nourishment. For this period they remain in a state almost of death. Only the heart functions, making six beats less each minute than at other times.

Food—or fat—alone is required in small quantities to keep the animal alive, and enough is generally stored up in the flesh without their having to take recourse to eating, though a few specimens, such as squirrels and hedgehogs, arise on odd, fine weather occasions and re-fuel their bodies, then return to sleep again.

By tumbling a hibernation animal in water it can easily be seen that it does not breathe at this time. Even after a long period under the surface it will still be found to live. Neither do its digestive organs work.

Insects, of course, return into cocoons or chrysalides, and when the winter is over come out an entirely changed form.

Rabbits, hares, stoats and weasels never hibernates, as their food is always obtainable. Neither do moles, because their means of subsistence, consisting chiefly of worms, do the very same.

Sydney Men Idle.
 SYDNEY, N.S., Sept. 30.—Sydney steel mills rolled the last roll of a Government order of 40,000 tons at 4 o'clock this morning and the mill has been idle for the remainder of the day. The management has announced that the greater part of the plant must close down immediately unless the C.N.R. should be in a position to order more rolls.

Local politicians announced yesterday that a 100,000-ton rail order was to be split immediately between the Soo and Sydney steel plants, but no advice to this effect has been received here from Ottawa.

Great Sports Demonstration.

Returning Athletes Get Great Reception--The Telegram Road Race.

The demonstration made yesterday in honour of the return of our track team, victorious, from the Halifax sports, outlasted everything of a similar nature ever held here. No Roman Caesar ever had such a triumphal return from the wars as had Fred Phelan, Harvey Skirving, Tom Butler and their manager, Ern Goodland, from Halifax. From the time they got off the express at Donovan's until they left the Majestic Theatre to proceed to their homes, the four were the centre of an admiring and loudly enthusiastic crowd. What July 14th is to the French, what July 4th is to the Americans, October 3rd will be to the sporting public of Newfoundland, a date to be remembered for years to come. And in the future, when representatives of Newfoundland will return victorious from the Olympic games, the great reception given to our Halifax track team will be recalled. It is an event that will live long in the memories of those who witnessed it and is, let us hope, the first of many such celebrations. May October 3rd be the national sports day of Newfoundland.

THE RECEPTION AT DONOVAN'S.
At 11.30 a.m. yesterday, the National Sports Committee and their guests met at the office of their chairman, Mr. G. W. R. Ayre from whom they proceeded in motor cars to Donovan's. They had barely arrived there when the express bearing our track team towards home, approached and led by Mr. Ayre, the party lined up at the station to greet the returning athletes. As these left the train a cheering, enthusiastic crowd gathered round them, each one eager to be the first to offer which are to-day denied to all but a favoured few, to be enjoyed by all. The medals, he said, which the boys brought back was nothing to the reputation they had made, and which was so well expressed by Mr. J. Ahearn, Sporting Editor of the Halifax Herald, when he called that they were "modest and unassuming, good winners and good losers, and neither boosters or knockers." Mr. Ayre then proposed the health of the Newfoundland athletes, which was drunk amidst loud applause.

ELOQUENT ADDRESSES.
Mr. Ern Goodland was the next to speak. He graphically outlined the trip from the time he and his charges left St. John's until their return. He told of the almost insurmountable difficulties which they had to face, and how they were overcome through sheer doggedness and perseverance. He told once more the story of the Wanderer's Sports. How Butler and Phelan, tired out by their heats, did so well against fresh men, how Harvey Skirving, still a youngster of but 18 years, ran La Pierre, one mile champion of the Maritime Provinces, so close that he became violently ill after the race. The story of Jack Bell and the five mile race was also related and how Tom Butler, not wishing to come home empty handed, walked off with a cup and an umbrella. At the indoor sports held by the Ancient Order of Hibernians. The hospitality of the Halifaxians and particularly of Newfoundlanders resident there, was lauded, as was also the kindness of Sir Richard and Lady Squires on the homeward journey. In concluding, Mr. Goodland expressed the hope that next year the team would return twice as strong. The Newfoundland yell was again given by the team after their manager's speech.

Mr. T. P. Halley next recited "In Bohemia" after which each modest athlete expressed his thanks for the welcome accorded him. The Mayor, Mr. I. C. Morris, then spoke. He paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Ayre and noted that the beautiful day for Newfoundland, Mr. E. Leo Carter responded to the call for a song with "Danny Boy" after which Mr. Mark Chaplain, "King" of local sport, made a brief address. He was followed by Sir Richard Squires who termed the occasion an unique one and eulogized our athletes for their splendid efforts. Mr. Carl Trapnell followed with a song. Other speakers during the afternoon were Mr. J. G. Higgins, B.A., of the G.W.V.A., Mr. J. R. Bennett, M.H.A., Mr. W. J. Higgins, E.C., so aptly termed "The King" of local sport, Mr. C. E. Hunt, Mr. Goodyear of Grand Falls, Mr. Wallace, representing the cricketers, Mr. Rennie, Messrs. Perlin, Joy, Mosler and Galway representing the Press, and Messrs. Burke, Grace and Capt. Bulley. Near the end, whilst Mr. Ayre was replying to the toast of the chairman, a weird noise was heard outside, and suddenly, to the strains of "The Banks of Newfoundland" played in a wide range of discords, a motley assembly rushed into the room and introduced themselves as the Magnifico-Duggan band. They were arrayed in football shirts of the league teams and were a source of great amusement.

THE GREAT PARADE.
After an enjoyable tea had been partaken of, the return to town was made. Even on the country road all the houses were lit up and cheering groups stood in each gateway. When, however, the parade formed up at the Cross Roads the enthusiasm of the people knew no bounds. All were imbued with the same feeling, that they had come to do honor to men who had made our Island known throughout the length and breadth of the Maritime Provinces, and it is merely doing them justice to say that they nobly carried out their self-imposed task. None who witnessed that parade could have had any doubt as to the whole-heartedness of the reception to our athletes and the least that can be said of it that it was a royal Newfoundland welcome. All the city of St. John's, the whole thirty odd thousands of them, seemed to have turned out with the set purpose of making the event a memorable one and they succeeded, beyond perhaps, even their wildest dreams. So dense was the crowd that some difficulty was experienced in getting the parade under way. The procession was led by the Magnifico Duggan Band, previously referred to, and consisted of the C.L.B. Methodist Guards and C.C.C. Bands, cars containing the executive of the National Sports Committee and their guests and the entire population of the city, or at least, all capable of walking. The cab containing the Halifax track team was mobbed by an ardent, cordial and impetuous crowd who untended the horse and themselves, drew the vehicle. Amidst a brilliant display of fireworks, and Greek fire, the procession made its slow but triumphant progress along Water Street, Adelaide Street and New Gower Street to the offices of the Municipal Council where Mayor Morris extended an official welcome on behalf of the city. Then, the parade continued along Duckworth Street, Cochrane Street, Military Road, Queen's Road and Theatre Hill until a halt was called outside the Majestic Theatre. Within the theatre which the proprietors had kindly lent for the purpose, a meeting was held, over 2000 people being present. Mr. Ayre again made a laudatory address and Mr. Goodland repeated the story of the trip to Halifax. Upon concluding, on behalf of the track team, he presented the Chairman with a set of photographs. The various prizes won by our athletes at Halifax were next presented. Someone had a happy thought and suggested that three young ladies should be selected from the audience to make the presentations. Those chosen were Miss Kathleen Larkin, Miss Gladys Newell and Miss Gertrude Olfphant. Speeches by Mr. "Coke" Cadill of Halifax, who showed himself as gifted on the public platform as in the hockey arena, Mr. W. Burke and Mr. W. J. Higgins followed. The last named expressed the thanks of the Committee to all who had assisted to make the day a success. The National Anthem then brought one of the most memorable demonstrations in the history of the city to a close.

Disrespect for Law.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—May I request space in your esteemed journal for a very brief reply to the letter signed "Warrick Smith," which appeared in your issue of yesterday.

Mr. Smith's statement respecting the flow of wine in the United States leaves me quite unmoved, as the millions of staunch temperance workers of that great country can well look after their own interests and require no help from me. Besides the constant efforts made by the rummies to violate the law are proof of the inconvincence it causes them. But what does disturb me in Mr. Smith's letter is the encouragement to lawlessness which it exhibits. It was because I feared that this spirit of chaos I sent you Attorney General Daugherty's address; but it was left to Mr. Smith to openly flout the law and to still further foster lawlessness among our people. That to me is simply shocking, and I am sure that all law respecting citizens must have been smashed that a man of his upbringing and family connections could write such a letter. Evidently Mr. Smith has been getting into bad company.

Thanking you in anticipation, Mr. Editor.

Faithfully yours,

L. CURTIS.

Anti-Dumping Act.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—I am interested in some bankrupt stocks in New York and would like to know through the columns of your paper if same would be affected by the "Anti-Dumping Act" if imported here. I wish to know before I place my order. I notice by a Canadian paper that the Canadian Customs is rigidly enforcing the act as follows:

ANTI-DUMPING ACT.

"The recent Act respecting the Department of Customs and Excise assented to June 4, 1921, provides that the value for duty of new or unused goods shall be no less than the actual cost of production of similar goods at date of shipment direct to Canada, plus a reasonable profit thereon and the Minister of Customs and Excise shall be the sole judge of what shall constitute a reasonable profit in the circumstances. The cost of production is now being investigated, but until such time as this cost is determined, importers are required to give an undertaking that they will pay duty and dumping duty on such on the basis of such cost and a reasonable profit. The Act is being rigidly enforced."

Yours truly,

ENQUIRER.

Knights to Open Memorial School.

Wednesday, October 12th, will be a red-letter day in local Columbianism. On that day the Memorial School erected to commemorate the memory of soldier heroes of Terra Nova Council who died in the War will be formally opened. The wonderful patriotic and educational work for which the Order of Knights of Columbus is now justly famous throughout the United States of America and the Dominion of Canada, is being followed by the local Council, and in the erection of the splendid school which now forms a magnificent addition to the group of ecclesiastical buildings beneath the shadow of the R. C. Cathedral, Terra Nova Council has made a notable contribution to the educational advancement of the city and country. A fitting program has been arranged to commemorate the event, and many prominent citizens will participate in the ceremony.

Vessel Foundered; Crew Safe.

The Prime Minister received the following message last night from the British Consul at St. Pierre: "Schr. M. J. Parks foundered at sea; Capt. Thomas Flander and crew brought in by French steamer. Please report all safe." The schr. M. J. Parks is owned by A. E. Hickman, and was on her first voyage for her new owners. She was formerly engaged in the bank fishery from Lunenburg. During the summer of 1920 the vessel was wrecked near Ferryland, the hull being afterwards towed to St. John's where it was purchased by A. E. Hickman & Co. During last winter Mr. Chalk, the well-known shipbuilder of Alexander Bay, refitted the vessel. She loaded fish at St. Anthony and was on her way to Greece when the mishap occurred. The Parks has been re-named the Golden Age, but her registration papers have not yet gone through.

Turbine Operator at Plant Injured.

Several thousand dollars' damage was caused this morning to machinery at No. 2 power house in the mill, and an operator received injuries which may prove fatal, when a large turbine engine got out of control and ran at such excessive speed that it smashed to pieces. The accident was caused when the motor which controls the turbine failed to function. The huge machine gained such speed that it threw many of its parts about the mill, some of them going through the walls and roof. A piece of steel part of the turbine, flying through the air struck one of the operators named John Crooks and

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

HE NEVER TASTED THE BREAST OF A CHICKEN.

The function of the court jester in the old days was to make the king and his court laugh. But the best jesters were those who were not jesters at all, but men who were so wise that they could see the faults of their rulers and point them out in a way that would not offend them.

Now and then one hears a jest that is of that fine old stamp.

A Jest Worthy The King's Jester.

Such a one it has always seemed to me is the little tale of the father who when carving one day was asked if he liked the breast of a chicken.

"I never tasted it," he said.

"But how could that be?"

"Well, when I was a child the father of the family always had the breast and now the children do."

There is a world of truth, and some pathos, I think, in that little tale.

The father of this generation does seem to have fallen between two stools. When he was a child, children were a natural corollary of family life, they were not the axis around which the family laboriously revolved. The father and mother were the dominant figures, they sacrificed themselves for their children as fathers and mothers have since Adam went out to hunt food for Cain and Abel, but they were the master and mistress of their own and the children's destinies. The boy child of those days had reasonable expectations of growing up and being a father in his turn and as such being the most considered person in the family.

The Divine Right of the Child Was Deserved.

But, alas, for reasonable expectations! While he was growing up the divine right of the child was discovered and by the time he had children of his own the child had taken its place as the most to be considered factor in the home. The home circle had come to revolve about him, the problem of his education, his amusement, his proper feeding, his teeth, his school, his tonics, his appendix, his dancing school. In more senses than one many a father has "never tasted the breast of a chicken."

Of course I know that the educator will rise up in wrath at my speaking thus lightly and perhaps disparagingly on such a serious subject as the child's divine right to the concentrated attention of the older generation. Is he not at a stage where such attention pays manifold dividends?

He Had to Struggle to Meet His Bills.

And we shall answer, yes, when that attention is necessary to his health, his education, his discipline. But there are many times when the breast of the chicken represents luxuries that are not absolutely essential to the child's future, and often give him a false idea of what he has a right to expect. A woman said to me yesterday, "Roger (her brother-in-law, a man of moderate income) was dreadfully hard pushed to pay his bills last year. You know, Adelaide went to a private school where the tuition alone was a thousand dollars." Which one of us does not know cases like that?

And even where the breast of the chicken represents such absolute necessities as the best medical attention, you will admit, won't you, that it is a bit hard on the fathers of the present generation who didn't get the breast of the chicken either as children or fathers, and will feel for them the damnation they often deserve.

Next generation will have had their share of the breast as children, whatever their experience as fathers. I wonder if the pendulum will ever swing the other way?

Pipeless Furnace.

COMFORT AND HEALTH

Without a single pipe—without tearing up floors and walls, you can enjoy in your home on winter's coldest day 70 degrees of happy, healthful warmth and comfort.

WHAT IS A PIPELESS FURNACE?

A Pipeless Furnace is a heating system which, instead of using pipes as a means of carrying heat, uses one centre register. The idea on which it is designed is the scientific fact that warm air rises and cold air falls.

A MORE COMFORTABLE HOME IN EVERY WAY.

The advantages of a good Pipeless Furnace are numberless. You will be amazed at the difference it will make to your home. From cellar to attic it will mean a home more comfortable, more convenient, more pleasant.

EVERY HOME A BETTER HOME.

With very few exceptions every home would be a better home with a "Hecla" Pipeless Furnace.

A better home because of the proper ventilation with moist warm air.

A better home because of the extraordinary economy of the "Hecla" Pipeless Furnace.

A better home because free from gas and dust.

Start now to make sure next winter will be a happy, healthy, comfortable one in your home. Give your family the greatest benefit you can offer.

Gigantic Scheme to Electrify France.

Harnessing the River Rhone, which being one of the greatest engineering tasks ever contemplated, promises wholly to revolutionize French industry by producing electric power sufficient to operate all Paris industries, besides, providing electricity for lighting and power for a score of cities between the Mediterranean and the Swiss frontier.

The hydro-electric station to be erected at Genesac, it is estimated, will produce at least 250,000 h.p., while the total horse-power available will exceed 1,250,000. Experts of the Paris, Lyons, and Mediterranean railway who have studied the project, declare it will be impossible to electrify the entire southern branches of the road.

Plans of the engineers at present involve two distinct transmission systems, one of 14 high current lines passing via Dijon to Paris, and another of 14 lines via Nevers. Unless the Rhone's water supply falls it will be possible for these lines to carry a constant force of 150,000 watts.

In addition to a 220 feet dam at Genesac it is now believed possible to erect supplementary dams of 75 feet each at Malpertuis and Bellegerde to handle which it will be necessary to provide 18 separate power stations along the river's course. The government engineers are now studying the problem of constructing barge canals alongside the river, whereby it will be possible to divert Swiss traffic to French Mediterranean instead of Italian ports.

It is estimated that the project cannot be completed in less than twenty years, but power production would commence within five years if government and private capital is promptly forthcoming. French financiers are insisting that this alone promises a wonderful future for French industry and are prophesying huge dividends as soon as electricity can be delivered in Paris.

Pompeian Discoveries.

Some important new discoveries are reported at Pompeii. Among the more interesting objects uncovered after the lapse of nearly two thousand years are several fine paintings, including a large one of the Twelve Custodians of Pompeii. To the right of this painting, which is probably more interesting than any other found in Pompeii, except that of the Villa of Dionysius, as yet almost unknown to the public, is a sacrificial scene. Beneath this is a real altar of masonry built into the wall, on which are still preserved the ashes of the last sacrifice that was held before the fatal August 24, A.D. 79. Near this "comitum" is a house with the remains of a balcony on the first floor, much larger than the well-known house with the balcony in the port of the city which has already been open to the public. One end of the horizontal beam on which the balcony formerly rested is preserved under glass. Nothing about the new excavations will interest visitors more than the bar, with many terracotta amphorae or jars still fixed in the ground, and at the end of the counter a small furnace. Above the furnace is a candelron with a lid, in which the excavators still found some liquid that had been placed there on the day of the great catastrophe.

One of the best known guides in Nova Scotia gives this testimonial of MINARD'S LINIMENT:

Have used Minard's Liniment in my home, hunting and lumber camps for years, and consider it the best white liniment on the market. I find that it gives quick relief to minor ailments, such as sprains, bruises and all kinds of wounds. Also it is a great remedy for coughs, colds, etc., which one is liable to catch when log driving and cruising during the winter and spring months. I would not be without MINARD'S LINIMENT and cannot recommend it too highly.

How Plants are Gassed.

IT MAKES THEM GROW MORE RAPIDLY.

Fertilizing the air instead of the soil is the newest method of speeding up the growth of plants.

Of course, the air, unlike the soil, cannot be fertilized with manure; carbonic acid gas is used, with marvelous results. This gas is absorbed by the green matter of the leaves, and promotes the growth of the plants. And the percentage of gas required is far below the limit where it would be injurious to health.

The air is very poor in carbonic acid. But ages ago, when the earth was covered with the forests that are now our coal mines, the atmosphere was rich in this gas. This fact suggested the idea of making the soil fertile by subjecting it to "gas attacks."

The gases escaping from factories, but more abundantly from blast furnaces, and which hitherto has been wasted, contain 20 per cent carbonic acid. It was from this source that the gas for the experiment in intensive gardening was obtained.

"Gassed" Cucumbers Were Big.

At first, three greenhouses were erected, one of which served as a testing room, while the two others were used for checking purposes. In the testing room the gas, purified of sulphur, was distributed by means of punctured piping.

After a few days there was a much more luxuriant vegetation in the testing room than in the checking rooms. The tomatoes in the testing room were twice the size of the others. The "gassed" cucumbers were very big and green.

Similar experiments were made outside in the open air, a square plot of ground being enclosed by punctured pipes from which a continuous supply of gases was escaping. Near by was another plot of the same size, which was not supplied with carbonic acid gas.

The gassed plot showed a greater yield than the other.

One big ironworks that uses 4,000 tons of coke a day produces in "waste" smoke, five million cubic meters of carbonic acid gas a day. This would Master Furniture Makers.

SHERATON, CHIPPENDALE AND HEPPLEWHITE.

The three most famous English furniture makers, Thomas Sheraton, Thomas Chippendale, and George Hepplewhite, were contemporaries of the brothers Adam, perhaps the most famous British architects, and it is a remarkable fact that no portraits exist of any of them.

Sheraton was born at Stockton-on-Tees in 1751. He received practically no education, but taught himself drawing and geometry. This early learning shows itself throughout his work, as all his furniture was constructed on mathematical lines, in the same way as an engineer builds a bridge or tunnel. It was as a religious writer that Sheraton first came before the public. He was a zealous Baptist, and the first work he published was a religious tract, "A Scriptural Illustration of the Doctrine of Regeneration."

Lived and Died in Poverty.

Apprenticed to a cabinet-maker in his home town, he came to London and settled in Soho. In 1780 he started to publish a series of pamphlets on furniture design, and in 1791 he published his famous work, "The Cabinet-Maker and Upholsterer's Drawing Book." The year before his death he issued another work, "Discourse on the Character of Love as Love." All his publications were financial failures, and he lived and died in poverty, leaving his wife and children almost destitute in a house in Broad Street, Soho.

Thomas Chippendale was a native of Worcester. He came to London, and in 1752 he described himself as "cabinet-maker and upholsterer, of 60, St. Martin's Lane." Little is known about him, but he had such a great influence in his trade that ignorant people ascribe all the furniture of his date to him. In the same year as he came to London the first edition of his "Gentleman and Cabinet-Maker's Director" appeared. In 1760 he was elected a member of the Society of Arts.

The Claw and Ball Foot.

George Hepplewhite was apprenticed to a cabinet-maker in Gillow, Lancaster, and, later, moved to London and set up business in St. Giles, Cripplegate. He like his brother cabinet-makers, wrote a handbook, "The Cabinet-Maker and Upholsterer's Guide," which appeared in 1788.

The work of these three men differs in good deal. Chippendale's, though as severe in ornamentation, than that of the other two, was however less design. It was very elaborate and delicate, but lacked the necessary architectonic feeling. He introduced into English furniture the "cabriole leg," the "claw and ball foot" of oriental use, and the "rococo leg" with the curled or hooped foot. The outstanding characteristics of his furniture are its solidity, and construction was always his first consideration.

Believer in Utility.

Sheraton would have nothing to do with such designs as the "rococo" leg, and was a great advocate of severe taste in cabinet-making. Sheraton furniture is known by its square tapering legs, its severe lines, and its quiet ornamentation. A common characteristic of it is a square-necked pediment surmounting the cornice. Sheraton relied almost entirely on marqueterie for ornamentation, and he held that ornamentation should, at all times, give way to utility, and believed that the lines of the construction of any piece of furniture, if made soundly and well, were signs of beauty. His doctrine in his work was that "successful simplicity is simpler and more worthy of achievement than the highest development of Louis Quinze superfluity."

"Harlequin" Furniture.

Sheraton was, incidentally, the inventor of combined furniture, sometimes called "harlequin" furniture, and he made many queer combinations, such as a library table capable of a step-ladder for getting at the books on high shelves. He also liked to get a sphinx or a lion or some beast carved on somewhere on each bit of furniture. Hepplewhite furniture is difficult to pick out, and it is said that there is no piece at present existing that can be definitely said to be his work or his design. However, the characteristic of Hepplewhite furniture is lightness, delicacy, and grace. Chairs seemed to have been his great feature, and many of the most modern chairs designed from his style.—John of London's Weekly.

Tragedy of Kitchener

HAS NOW BEEN REVEALED IN NEW BOOK BY LORD ESHER.

A popular legend, or what remained of it, has been shattered by Lord Escher's revealing book, "The Tragedy of Lord Kitchener." At the beginning of the war the instinct of hero-worship settled on Kitchener with a wonderful unanimity. It was the glamo of K. of K. of the Sudan and South Africa that dazzled the public eye, but Lord Escher says that only Kitchener himself knew that the passage of time had left its corroding traces. He was put in charge of the ship, but the navigation was beyond him. In what appeared to his countrymen a mid-career of fame he himself became suddenly aware that the golden bowl was broken. He was "unreceptive to new ideas, disinclined to adopt new methods which he himself did not originate, slow to take advantage of the experience of lesser men." Afflicted with this rigid mental equipment he was called upon to confront circumstances amazing in their fluidity.

The most distressing thing at the outset to Kitchener, who had been accustomed to issue written orders even for such operations as those in the Sudan, was the compulsion to work with a Cabinet of twenty-three. Some of them learned to fear him, some detested him, and others to distrust him. Lord Escher gives a pathetic picture of him in Paris on his way to Gallipoli in November, 1915, conscious that many hoped he would not return. He spoke with tears in his eyes of the dislike felt for him by his colleagues; adding, "Asquith is my only friend." When told that an eminent member of the Cabinet had complained that he was wanting in candour and was fond of "Oriental methods," Kitchener replied humbly: "Yes, I suppose it is so; but I am an old man and I cannot change my habits—it is too late." Serious, indeed, are the faults imputed to him in Lord Escher's book. He was found ignorant of army organisation, indifferent to War Office regulations, and knew nothing of the Territorial Force, its organisation or origin. When the army was praying for shells he convinced himself, though not his colleagues, that the clamor was exaggerated and wantonly factious. He was unaware of the high mental tension at the front, and one night and the hall of York House, where he lived, littered with tapestries and bric-a-brac rejected or bought for the house at Broom's, where he was fated not to live and for which he had an old-age fever of acquiring things.

Lord Escher was in the political and official circle that guarded the secret of Kitchener's decadence from the public, so that, as he himself complained, they might continue to use his name while depriving him of his authority. For Kitchener's name was a mighty asset—it helped to raise great armies; and the confidence of the masses in him did not fluctuate. Another supreme service he rendered was his display of backbone in Sir John French's hour of weakness in 1914. Lord Escher's book is founded on his correspondence and a journal which recorded events as they happened, and these he intends to seal up and give to the British Museum, to be opened in sixty years. He does well to paint Kitchener's portrait while his contemporaries are alive and while there is the opportunity to convict the writer of error if he is open to attack. It is a disheartening book; it is not pleasant to discover that a popular 'hero' had the proverbial feet of clay. But the interests of truth are paramount.

American Attack on Mad Pictures.

Considerable stir has been caused in the art world by the publication in the New York Herald and several other newspapers of various cities of a remarkable denunciation from an anonymous committee of works of certain modern painters of "advanced" schools. These are condemned as the work of "degenerates" and "neurotic egomaniacs styling themselves worshippers of Satan, the god of ugliness."

The immediate object of the attack are the trustees of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, where there is now an exhibition of a collection of works of the modernistic schools. The writers of the manifesto describe some of the Metropolitan pictures as "degenerate and identical in respect to visual derangement with the drawings of insane people in asylums." One entitled "Girl Arranging Her Chemise" they characterize as "vulgar in subject, ugly in face and form, weird in colour."

In some respects, the manifesto continues, the modernistic movement is part of a Bolshevistic campaign to "break down law and order and to destroy the entire social system." Another aspect is that of Satanism, which cult "appeals to a limited number of European painters, mostly men of no talent and handicapped by talents of heredity or acquired insanity. To this class the cult of the ugly and obscene becomes the prime stimulus of their work."

Many pictures exhibit another form of mania—the impulse to mutilate the human body, "of which," the document adds, "there are numerous cases revealed in criminal medical annals." It concludes by quoting the discussion of a recent meeting of the American Art Alliance, when Dr. W. E. Wadsworth, a leading American physician, is reported to have said that, studying the work of modernistic artists, he came to the conclusion that the works represented those ghastly lessons of the mind and body which usually land people in asylums."
