ROYAL Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Healthful cream of tartar, derived solely from grapes, refined to absolute purity, is the active principle of every pound of Royal Baking Powder.

Hence it is that Royal Baking Powder renders the food remarkable both for its fine flavor and healthfulness.

No alum, no phosphate—which are the principal elements of the so-called cheap baking powders—and which are derived from bones, rock and sulphuric acid.

REVIVAL OF SPA SPRINGS BOTTLING INDUSTRY.

(Outlook.)

Mr. A. J. Morrison returned Saturday from a trip to Boston.

But Mr. Morrison's trip was for business rather than pleasure. He was successful in completing arrangements for reopening a bottling business to utilize the famous medicinal waters of the Spa Springs, whose curative qualities are equal to the best in the world. These waters which have been running to waste for a number of years, will in a few weeks be again on the market.

American capital has been interested in the enterprise. The old name of the Wilmet Spa Springs Co. will be retained. Mr. Morrison will be manager and James Woodbury bottler. The bottling will be done at the Springs.

A couple of travellers will be put on the road and the goods placed all over Canada. This was an important industry when carried on by the late George Smith, whose untimely death was followed by the closing up of the business. Mr. Morrison's commendable enterprise in reopening the business will we hope meet with success.

BRAIN STORMS.

The Thaw trial and its intolerable publicity have forced into notice two comparatively new terms to describe morbid insanity. They are "brain storms" and "mental explosions." The experts in the Thaw trial pretend that he killed White while in a state of "mental explosion" or "brain storm," and Thaw's lawyers anticipate that he will escape the penalty for murder on such plea. Not only that, but they do not mean, if they can help it, to have Thaw confined as insane. When he killed White, he was insane, they plead, but not necessarily so before or afterwards. If such a defense is accepted for murder, it will doubtless be urged in less terrible crimes, such as manslaughter, horse stealing, bigamy and forgery. The old idea of sin has gone, according to the new theology; stealin has largely become kleptomaniac for those who can afford it, incompatibility of temper is the daily excuse for the severing of what should be most sacred ties; drink is no longer an appetite but a "disease" and now we have "mental explosion" and "brain storm" for murder, as we have long had "brain fog" for a form of intellectual laziness.

Gray's Syrup of Red Spruce Gum

Cures Coughs

GRAY'S SYRUP does that one thing, and does it well. It's no "cure-all," but a CURE for all throat and lung troubles. GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM stops the irritating tickle, takes away the soreness—soothes and heals the throat—and CURES COUGHS to stay cured.

Note the less effective because it is pleasant to take.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO LICENSE ACT

In the House of Assembly Friday last Mr. Tanner submitted to the Legislature an amendment to the Liquor License Act. It provides that licenses issued shall be subject to the provision that it shall not entitle the licensee to sell liquors to any person in a city, town or municipality in Nova Scotia in which the Canada Temperance Act is in force, or in which license under chap. 100, C. T. Act is not granted except to chemists or druggists duly registered or agents for the sale of liquors duly appointed. The licensee shall on the first Monday of every month while the license is in force deliver at the office of the Provincial Secretary a sworn statement in writing respecting all liquors sold by him or his servants or shipped for delivery during the month previous in any city, town or municipality in Nova Scotia in which the C. T. Act is in force, giving the dates of orders, descriptions and quantities, price of goods, name of person, company or carrier conveying the goods, name of sender and whether or not goods were to be paid for on delivery; those statements to be open to inspection by any person. Every package shipped to places, where the C. T. A. is in force to bear in a conspicuous place the name of the licensee and Christian and surname of the person for whom the goods are destined.

DIED WHILE FEEDING CATTLE.

A North Sydney dispatch says—Alexander McLean, of Boularderie east, died very suddenly, shortly after arising he left his house and went to the stable about a hundred yards distant, to feed and water his stock, leaving his wife at home to prepare breakfast. After being absent for some time, Mrs. McLean went to the stable to see what was detaining him, and on entering the door she found her husband lying on the floor dead, with the pitchfork which he was about to gather hay for the cattle, still in his hand.

Death is believed to have been due to heart failure, which was evidently precipitated by over exertion in going to the barn in the storm that was raging at the time. Mr. McLean was about seventy years of age, and leaves a widow and one son.

The Steamer Yarmouth comes across the bay today. Don't know what action Digby may take about landing.
D. A. Ry,
for P. F. GIFFKINS
Kentville.

The above message was received in response to a telegram inquiring what provision was made for continuing the Bay service.

A case of small-pox was discovered on the steamer Yarmouth, after its arrival in Digby from St. John on Monday, and after the passengers had left the steamer. The steamer sailed for St. John the same day with the small-pox patient on board, but with no passengers except three who had gone on board before the examination of the sick man by the Digby physicians. On arriving in St. John the small-pox patient was placed in the quarantine station, crew and passengers were vaccinated and the steamer was fumigated, and it is expected that she will make her regular trip today. The Yarmouth carried a large number of passengers, most of them holiday travellers and students, who will have to run their chances of infection. Among the passengers were two Bridgetown men, E. G. Langley and Constable Longmire.

She takes a school for the remainder of the term.
W. B. Withers spent a few days last week in Lower Granville.
Dr. Fred Beckwith, of Annapolis, and his mother from Wolfville, were guests of Mrs. W. F. Gilliat over Sunday.

SILK OF THE SPIDER.

The Delicate Machinery That Spins the Liquid Thread. The spider is able to secrete at least three colors of silk stuff—the white, which forms the web, and the eswatment of captives and the egg cocoon; the brown mass that fills the cocoon interior and the fleshy yellow between that and the inside of the sac. The glands end in minute ducts which empty into spinning spools regularly arranged along the sides and upon the tips of the six spinnerets, or "spinning mammals," or "spinning fingers," which are placed just beneath the apex of the abdomen. The spinnerets are movable and can be swung wide apart or pushed closely together, and the spinning spools can be managed in the same way.

The silk glands are infolded in muscular tissue, pressure upon which, at the will of the spider, forces the liquid silk through the duct into the spool, whence it issues as a minute filament, since it hardens upon contact with the air. One thread as seen in a web may be made up of a number of the filaments and is formed by putting the tips of the spools together as the liquid jets are forced out of the ducts. When the spinnerets are joined and a number of the spools are emptied at once their contents merge, and the sheets or ribbons are formed which are used in the enswathment of a captive or the making of Argiope's central shield. This delicate machinery the owner operates with utmost skill, bringing into play now one part and now another and again the whole with unflinching deftness and a mastery complete.—Dr. H. C. McCook in Harper's.

A QUEER HOUSE.

The Novel and Famous Fossil Bone Cabin in Wyoming. "The queerest house in the world," said a zoologist, "is undoubtedly the famous bone cabin in Wyoming, near the Medicine Bow river. This cabin's foundations are built of fossil bones. "Bones of dinosaurs—jaws of the diplodocus, teeth of the brontosaur, hankies of the ichthyosaurus, vertebrae of the camarasaurus, chunks of the barosaurus, the cetastaurus, the brachiosaurus, the stegosaurus, the ornithomimus or bird catching dinosaur—all entered into this wonderful cabin's foundations, making it the most curious and most costly edifice in America.

"This hut was built by a Mexican sheep herder who had happened by chance on the grandest extinct animal bed in the world. This was a plot about fifty yards square, wherein lay in rich profusion the bones of all the animals of the reptilian age. The heaviest and the lightest, the largest and the smallest, the most tranquil and the most ferocious, lay side by side.

"The place was evidently once a river bed, and the dead bodies that floated down the stream were here arrested to lie for hundreds of thousands of years till a sheep herder chanced along and, rooting among bones as big as bowlders, set about the building of the world's queerest cabin."

Grip Facts. The grip is not simply a bad cold, and this fact is worth knowing. It resembles a cold in some respects, and colds are often wrongly diagnosed by the victims as grip. The grip is a malady which has laws of its own, both as to origin and progress after development. According to the doctors, it must run its course—"there is no special remedy that can directly destroy the infection, no drug that can kill the bacillus or neutralize its toxin." This also is worth knowing. The main thing is to nurse with care and give the system the best possible aid in its efforts to throw off the poison.

Not Thirsty. Jane, the bright new maid, always anxiously to please, had been entrusted with the care of a little aquarium, in which the goldfish had always thrived very well until Jane came on the scene. The first day she arrived she gave them fresh water, as instructed, and then left them to their own devices. But, alas, one morning the little fishes were found floating feebly on their backs. "Jane," called the anxious mistress, regarding her pets with concern, "have you given the fish any fresh water lately?" "No, ma'am. Bless their little hearts, they haven't drunk the water I gave them last month yet!"

A Normal Disadvantage. "Why do reformers so often come to grief?" "I have often asked the question," answered Senator Scroggum. "I think it must be because they take up politics as an incidental diversion instead of a regular business. It's the difference between the amateur and the professional."

Shopping Politeness. "Never point, my dear," said the mother. "But, mamma," objected the little girl, "suppose I don't know the name of the thing?" "Then let the salesman show you all he has in stock until he comes to the article that is desired."

Considerate. Singleton—What have you in that package, old man? Wedderty—An ash receiver. It's a present for my wife. Singleton—What! You don't mean to tell me she smokes cigarettes? Wedderty—Oh, no, but if she has an ash receiver for me to put my cigar ashes in it will save her the trouble of sweeping them up. See?

There are some truths that are perceived less by the intellect than by the heart, and the man who is devoid of this heart perception is lacking in much.—Torrell (Tex.) Transcript.

PUZZLE TO THE WORLD

DANISH THOUGHT READERS 'MYSTIFY ENGLAND.

The Zancigs Are Now Performing Marvelous Feats of Supposed Mental Transference—Trick Or Genuine Transmission?—Stead, Sir William Crookes, Sir Oliver Lodge Would Be Glad of Enlightenment.

For once England has been obliged to confess that it is completely mystified. Two Danes, it seems, man and wife, under the rather disconcerting name of Zancig, have done the business. This clever pair have set the British metropolis guessing by their marvelous and utterly unexplainable feats of what our transatlantic cousins are quite sure, you know, to be mental transference. W. T. Stead, who is always open to conviction, no matter what the source, has been keenly interested. Sir William Crookes, foremost in the ranks of science, admits that he would be glad to be enlightened, and Sir Oliver Lodge is equally curious. Lord Rothschild declares that he is "profoundly impressed" and the English nobility "wants to know, you know."

The most amazing feature of the business is the Zancigs, apparently upright persons that they are, disclaim every suggestion of supernatural aid and will not even admit that telepathy, thought transmission or the possession of those who have lived in India, this feat of suspension is practiced quite extensively by the native races. It made a great impression on the Zancigs and convinced them that they still had much to learn.

The Zancigs appear to be very simple, unostentatious, frank and genuine in their manner. The wife is slightly below the medium height, with a rather sharp countenance, dark eyes and firm mouth and chin. Still her face is kindly, and its most frequent expression is a frank and even maternal one. She wears eyeglasses and is rather timid and retiring. Her husband seems much younger and is tall and slender complexioned, with a slight mustache. He also wears eyeglasses and might easily be mistaken for a college professor. He speaks with a slight accent, as does his wife, but there is no suggestion of anything occult about either of them.

THE OLDEST ENGINEER. George Thomas Horton, Who Was Sent From England to Open the Great Western Railway.

George T. Horton, aged 88, of Chicago, has been present in Toronto. Mr. Horton is to-day the oldest engineer alive and likewise the oldest Brotherhood member. He is still chaplain of Division 208. He is in France as engineer, and was one of the first to see the Zancigs in the French Empire under Napoleon III. On returning to England he was honored by being the only engineer chosen to come to this country to open the Great Western Railway. He was the first man to run over the Suspension Bridge—was engineer of ition to the bridge, stopping at farm houses each night. Later he was made foreman at Hambleton, and again at London.

Mr. Horton retired to go into business, but his old desire for railroading was too strong, and he returned to the throttle. Then he worked at Winnipeg, St. Paul, Chicago, San Francisco, and Bloomington, until old age asserted itself.

Mr. Horton has three daughters living—one in Chicago, with whom he resides; one in Geddes, the eldest; Mrs. R. J. Fielder of East Toronto, where there were gathered the five generations. Mr. Horton has living 15 grandchildren, thirty great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild.

It is an interesting coincidence that David Liddell, a grandson, was engineer of an engine that tested the new Suspension Bridge.

Latest In Anaesthetics. The latest discovery in anaesthetics is that of Dr. Stephen Letch, a Parisian physician, who destroys sensibility all over the body by sending a mild alternating current of electricity through the brain in the same general manner as in electrocution. If this case the patient loses sensation, but in every other respect is absolutely unaffected. The patient becomes conscious the instant the current is shut off and with a decidedly invigorated sensation.

No Co-operation. "Your woman's lunch club" proved to be a failure? How did that happen? "No—er—men ever came" to lunch there."

tract a good deal of attention. It occurred to the Zancigs that they could cultivate this newly discovered field, and they proceeded to do so. They gave themselves up to the practice of the mental feat and made great progress. Before long they had acquired an accuracy which astonished even themselves.

The Zancigs do not seem to be convinced that what they are doing is especially wonderful. They are inclined to the belief that it is not beyond the ability of any intelligent person who knows how to develop his latent power in this direction. When the couple visited India an old priest sought an introduction, and in the course of the conversation that followed assured the mind readers that they were only on the threshold of their career; that far greater things were to come if they would accept the proper conditions and lead the life of those who are worthy.

The Zancigs were greatly interested and asked the old man to give them some evidence of his authority to speak of these matters. The oriental folded his hands across his frail body, gathered his feet beneath him and almost immediately began to rise in the air. When his body had reached a height of several feet it hung suspended in the air. Zancig, who had been mesmerized and he called out loudly to his wife, who was in adjoining room. When she entered Mrs. Zancig saw the fakir suspended. Her husband concluded that both were hypnotized and seized his cane and thrust it into the space between the floor and the suspended man. This convinced them that there was no mental or optical illusion. According to the best tests of those who have lived in India, this feat of suspension is practiced quite extensively by the native races. It made a great impression on the Zancigs and convinced them that they still had much to learn.

An Anecdote of Shelley. The poet Shelley tells an amusing story of the influence that language "hard to be understood" exercises on the vulgar mind. Walking near Covent Garden, London, he accidentally jostled against an Irish navvy, who, being in a quarrelsome mood, seemed inclined to attack the poet. A crowd of ragged sympathizers began to gather, when Shelley, calmly facing them, deliberately pronounced: "I have put my hand into the hamper. I have eaten out of the sacred belly. I have drunk and am well pleased. I have said 'Euxo Omnia' and it is finished."

When Chloroform Was New. Here is a curious little story about Sir James Simpson, the man who introduced the use of chloroform into surgery, and a peril which he escaped, as recorded by Lyon Playfair. Simpson when busy with his researches in the subject of anaesthetics called one day on Playfair and asked if he had anything new likely to produce anaesthesia. Playfair had just prepared a liquid which seemed worthy of trial. Simpson, who knew no fear, prepared instantly to test it on himself. This Playfair refused to allow until it had first been tried on rabbits. Two were procured and placed under the effects of the anaesthetic. Next day Simpson proposed to try it on himself. "We might as well see how rabbits have fared," said Playfair. They found both the animals dead.

Agricultural

FEMINE DAIRY WISDOM.

The chief cause of the difficulty of getting butter in winter, is that the cream is too cold or too old.

The temperature of ordinary farm cream in winter should be from sixty-eight degrees to seventy-two degrees.

If a separator has been used from two degrees to four degrees lower will often bring better results.

Another important condition to remember is not to have too much skim milk in the cream.

Skim the pans or cans carefully, taking as little milk as possible in the process.

If cream has been allowed to become too old and bitter, it will be impossible to get good butter, or to churn in a reasonable length of time.

Proper temperature and rich cream are two important points.

In some cases, where cows have been milking for a long time, there is some difficulty in churning.

The addition of one or two fresh cows in the milking herd will often overcome the difficulty.

The best way to bring cream to the proper temperature, is by putting the cream can into a pail or tank of very warm water. Stir gently until the cream is of the proper temperature.

Never churn in a cold room. The butter will be cheesy if you do.

The churning room should be about the temperature of the cream.

A perfect butter can not be made in a kitchen where there are all the odors of cooking.

Humped backs and starting coats will put the balance on the wrong side of the ledger.

Are your cows only grazed? Make the most of them. Feed them well, care for them as well as you would thoroughbreds and improve your herd as fast as you can.

FEEDING DRY COWS AT MILKING TIME.

The custom of feeding cows just before or during milking time is a common one. Many farmers claim that the cows will stand more quietly and give their milk down better if they are eating while being milked.

The experience of many dairymen, as ascertained by the Storrs, Connecticut, Experiment Station, shows this to be a mistaken idea.

The man who has once adopted the done seldom, if ever, cares to go back to the old method of having the cows eating while being milked.

The average cow seems to be unable to divide her attention satisfactorily between two operations, and the result is that either she pays most of her attention to eating or else she pays more attention to the man who is milking her, and is, therefore, unable to eat quietly during the milking process, and becomes annoyed and nervous because she cannot stand more quietly during their milking process if they have nothing else to attract their attention.

Cows which have been accustomed to eating during the milking process may bother for a few days if the feeding is postponed until after the milking, but they become accustomed to the new order of things very quickly, and after a few days will behave much more satisfactorily than they did when the two operations were done at the same time.

It is not only more pleasant to do the milking before the feeding is done as a result of the better behavior of the cows, but the sanitary and keeping qualities of the milk are also better than when the feeding has been done just before or during the milking period.

All of the dry feeds, such as the common grains, hays, etc., contain large quantities of dust, which is thrown into the air by the handling. This dust is heavily charged with bacteria, and the atmosphere of the stable thus becomes filled with these micro-organisms.

As this dust settles into the milk pail it carries down with it the adhering bacteria and the germ content of the milk is thereby increased. At the same time, the restlessness of the cow results in the dislodgment of a greater amount of dust and bacteria from the cow and the milk and these also fall into the milk.

THE VALUE OF A MANURE SPREADER.

To know the real value of a manure spreader in the saving of manure, we must first know the value of manure, and what it adds to the productive capacity of a soil.

When we top-dress with manure, we are supposed to add in a measure, all the elements needed for plant growth. It is considered a complete fertilizer. In addition we supply vegetable matter which darkens and enlivens a worn soil. The decaying of manure when applied to a soil also makes unavailable plant food in that soil available to growing plants.

ical properties of a worn out soil is one important factor, recommending its use. Scarcely a farmer can make or obtain one-half enough manure for his entire farming operations.

To cover ten acres with ten loads to the acre, the old way is difficult. With the manure spreader the ten loads per acre may be cut in two and only five loads used, and the total manure made to cover 20 acres instead of ten.

We get the physical benefit over twice the acres by using the spreader. If more plant food is needed supplement with commercial fertilizers. Fertilizers add plant food only. Commercial fertilizers prove the most profitable when used with farm manures.

The manure spreader will do much to help this combination. The spreader is used every day in the year and keeps the farmer watching for some better way of making more manure for his own use or of getting it from outside sources. He also learns of ways to save all he makes. Without it, he loses much of the value of manure by allowing it to wash away from his barnyard lots or to fire lang in little piles under the drip or, somewhere near the barn.

PROTECTING WELLS.

Having read in your valuable journal the account of five people being afflicted with ptomaine by bad well water and also a communication regarding the top of the well being unprotected, and having had some experience, I should like to call your attention to a never failing remedy.

By laying the brick of the wall in cement mortar and filling all openings you will make it perfect so far as the surrounding is concerned. Then by closing in the wall to two feet across and either raising the top of the well above the surrounding earth or putting it below and covering the top two feet with earth, perfect isolation will be secured.

Or make a few circles six inches smaller than the size of the fresh dug well and by nailing boards around them make a mould that will leave you four inches of wall outside the cone, fill in with cement and gravel well mixed (six of cement to one of gravel).

PASTOR AND PEOPLE PRAISE PSYCHINE

(PRONOUNCED SI-KEEN)

A Marvellous and Triumphant Record of Victory Over Disease.

No medicine has ever effected as large a number of wonderful and almost marvellous cures as Psychine. It has had one continuous record of victories over diseases of the throat, chest, lungs and stomach. Where doctors have pronounced cases incurable, Psychine steps in and saves countless people even from the very verge of the grave. Coughs, Colic, Hiccups, Bronchitis, Chills, Night Sweats, Grippe, Pneumonia, and other like troubles, all of which are forerunners of consumption, yield quickly to the curative powers of Psychine.

Mrs. Campbell, one of the many cured, writes the following statement: "I cannot refrain from telling all who suffer from any of the above named troubles, that I had a heavy cold which settled on my lungs and finally led to consumption. I could not sleep, was subject to night sweats, my lungs were inflamed, my doctor pronounced me incurable. Mr. Halsey, Fort Eben, Ontario, advised me to try Psychine. I bought a bottle and took it as directed. In a few days I was able to get up, the night sweats and cough ceased. My lungs were cleared, and I was greatly restored to health and today I never feel better in my life. Psychine has been a god send to me." Mrs. Andrew Campbell, Ontario, N.W.T.

PSYCHINE never disappoints. PSYCHINE has no substitute. There is no other medicine "Just as good."

gravel), which will make a water tight wall, and finish at top same as recommended for brick.

To be safe the wall of the well must be tight for ten feet from the top to keep out worms, grubs, etc.

APPLY FARM MANURE NOW.

Top dressing with manure the pasture field or the unprofitable meadows may so encourage the good grasses present that their larger growth may crowd out the red clover and other objectionable weeds that too often come in just to fill vacant places. The chief points to be kept in mind are that the manure is best utilized when spread as soon as possible after it has been made, and that its best service comes from its use as a top dressing upon a growing crop.

The new clover field, the meadow and the old pasture field would be greatly benefited by a top dressing in the winter or early spring, when the clover and grass plants are making their new start for their summer crops.

STARTING LIFE ON THE FARM.

Calvelonia Banner—Country life has its drawbacks, but it has great advantages which overcome them. True, those who live in the country are "Rubes" and "farmers" and "hay-seeds" to the cigarette smokers in town, but the boast of business men in the world today is that they were born on a farm. Take away the surrounding evils that beset the young men or women on the threshold of life's journey in the city, and substitute the helpful influences of nature, and you fortify them for the sterner walks of life. The few things they do not know about table etiquette, and when it is proper to leave two visiting cards and when but one, they will catch onto much quicker than city boys or girls will learn to properly shake the furnace or make good bread. No boy or girl need be ashamed of living on a farm, for if they have taken advantage of what it has offered they are well fortified for after life.

ADAPTABILITY IN FASHIONS.

There is a new keynote in the spring fashions this year which every woman who makes her own clothes will be glad to know about. It is adaptability. This new adaptability is perhaps the most important feature in the new styles of dress which are to be so very fashionable throughout the spring and summer. The jumper waists will be seen in panna, voile and silk, and plaid and check gingham and hilly also in the cotton fabrics, such as mercerized madras. It is this style of dress that will be worn in place of the shirt-waist suit. There is no doubt that it has many good points in its favor.

Take, for example, the jumper frock for a young girl, and let us look into its possibilities for usefulness. The pattern consists of three garments—the skirt, the waist and the bib jumper. In making up the gown it would be wise to have at least two waists to wear with it, and two or more jumper bibs. One of the waists might be of sheer India linen or all-over lace. When the waist that matches the skirt is worn, then the bib jumper may be of some other material. For instance, if the waist and the skirt are made of dark blue cotton voile, the bib jumper would look attractive in all-over lace.

And then again, if an entirely different sort of a dress was wanted, the skirt and the bib jumper could be made of plaid mercerized madras, and the waist be of all-over embroidery or linen. The jumper in this frock is slipped on over the head and is made with tabs at the back and front which button onto the belt—Grace Margaret Gould in Woman's Home Companion for March.

A HEADACHE REMEDY.

Take each morning 1 cup hot water with pinch common table salt added; drink as hot as possible. A simple remedy but a good one.

A SWINDLE.

Old Farmer.—No, I don't want any more of your labor saving machines. I've tried enough on 'em. Look at this. There's a typewriting machine the missus spent all her egg and butter money on to buy for me 'cause I ain't so over handy with the pen. Just look at the swindle.

Friend.—What's the matter with it? Old Farmer.—Matter? Why you can't even write yer name with the bloomin' thing unless yer know how to play the pianer.—London Telegraph.

THE SYMPATHIZER.

"Croaker seems to feel a great sympathy for any one who is ill." "Huh! his idea of sympathy is to get some poor invalid in a corner and tell him how miserable he is looking."—The Catholic Standard and Times.

A WOMAN TELLS HOW TO RELIEVE RHEUMATIC PAINS.

I have been a very great sufferer from the dreadful disease, rheumatism, for a number of years. I have tried many medicines but never got much relief from any of them until two years ago, when I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I found relief before I had used all of one bottle, but kept on applying it and soon felt like a different woman. Through my advice many of my friends have tried it and can tell you how wonderfully it has worked.—MRS. SARAH A. COLE, 140 S. New St., Dover, Del. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is a liniment. A HOPEFUL SIGN.

A wave of moral reform appears to have struck our houses of parliament, both dominion and local. Intemperance is the charge against certain members of the local house, while "wine, women and graft" is the accusation hurled at our ministerial delegates at Ottawa. Whether or not this attempt to expose moral evil is the result of political animosity or a genuine horror of immorality in its worst forms, as displayed in a body of men publicly honored and acknowledged as leaders and representatives of our people, it is a hopeful sign of the times that the charge is not treated with indifference, but is causing an excitement and agitation in proportion to its importance.

Rumors and insinuations are insufficient for action on the part of our parliaments, but should direct charges be formulated they should be promptly investigated and action taken accordingly.

Mr. Fowler, a member of Dominion Parliament and editor of the Fredericton Gleaner, is responsible for statements made in that journal casting insinuations upon the private character of members of the parliamentary body. Mr. Bourassa demanded an investigation of the charges made and the matter was brought up in the house of commons last week. The Premier in his speech dealing with the subject promised, if charges were formulated and made in a parliamentary manner, that immediate investigation should take place, but protested strongly against the present manner of procedure on the part of Bourassa and his colleagues. Emerson, minister of railways, who was openly attacked by the Gleaner, has made a public denial of the charges brought against him. If the charges are unsubstantiated, doubtless the affair will result in a libel suit.

HYMENEAL

AKIN-LEONARD.

A quiet wedding took place on Good Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Leonard, when their second daughter, Susie, was united in marriage to Mr. T. B. Akin, of Pictou. The ceremony was performed at one p. m., by the Rev. H. H. Saunders. Miss Nettie Longley rendered Lohengrin's wedding march. The bride was attired in a brown travelling suit. After congratulations and refreshments the happy couple were driven to the station in Anderson's wedding turnout en route to the west. Many useful and valuable presents were received. We clip the following from the Halifax Herald:
 "Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Akin, of Pictou, arrived in the city last night and were guests at the King Edward. They left this morning on the C. P. R. for Montreal, Winnipeg, Vancouver and other western points."

OBITUARY

ROBERT STONE BETTON.

On the morning of March 29th, Robert Stone Betton passed peacefully to his rest, at Maple Ridge, Waterville, aged fifty-two years. His long and tedious illness was borne with Christian resignation to the will of his Heavenly Father, and those who knew him could not but note the great gentleness of his spirit. He died as he lived, calmly and tranquilly, and truly it may be said "he fell asleep in Jesus." The deceased was a son of the late John Betton, of Market Drayton, Shropshire County, England, and grandson of the late Colonel Stone, of England. Mr. Betton was well and favorably known throughout the province, having been during his life time an active business man. He was baptized at Clarence, in the year 1877, by Rev. Mr. Durkee, and during the remaining years of his life was a consistent member of the Baptist Church. His funeral service was conducted at Waterville, by Rev. Asaph Whitman, assisted by Rev. John Hawley. The text was Philippians 1, 21, "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." The hymns "Asleep in Jesus", "Someday We'll Understand" and "The Christian's Good-night" were beautifully sung by the combined choirs of the Baptist and Presbyterian churches. The body was taken to Lawrencetown on the Western Express, and interred in Sunnyside cemetery by the side of his father, who predeceased him by a few years. A wife and daughter mourn the love and devotion of a husband and father who was most exemplary in love and kindness. An aged mother and two brothers also survive him. Time alone can heal the wounded hearts and teach them to say "Thy will be done."—COM.

RALPH BENT.

The death occurred suddenly, at his home, Tupperville, on Wednesday noon, of Ralph Bent, one of the most respected and prosperous farmers of that section. Mr. Bent who was seventy years of age, but a man of fine physique and remarkably vigorous for his years, had been logging in the woods, about ten days before, and having taken ill with severe pains in his chest returned home. A physician was summoned, who treated Mr. Bent for acute indigestion and at the end of a week he was considered convalescent, but while sitting in his chair a few days later, he suddenly expired from heart failure. Mr. Bent leaves a family of five sons and three daughters, besides his wife, and two brothers, Bushy Bent of Tupperville, and John Z. Bent of Everett, Mass., also survive him. The sons are Charles, Fred, and St. Clair of Tupperville, Ralph of Boston, and Benjamin, teacher in the Middlesex Consolidated school. Mrs. William Calder of Round Hill, Mrs. N. M. Smith, wife of the photographer, and Mrs. Rupert Bent of Boston, are daughters. All the family were present at the funeral which took place on Saturday, Rev. W. H. Langille conducting the service.

WILLIAM TODD.

William Todd, Jr., son of James Todd, of Dalhousie, died at his home Friday, 29th inst., after an illness of several weeks. He leaves a wife, formerly Miss Spurr of Perotte, and one child. He was twenty-five years of age. Rev. W. H. Langille conducted the funeral service, which was one of the most largely attended ever seen in Dalhousie. His early demise is deeply regretted by the entire community.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

More millinery openings this week.
 "The robin's return" has met a cold greeting.
 The Bridgetown Band has revived and is holding regular weekly practices.

The regular meeting of the town council was postponed from Monday last till Monday of next week.

J. H. Hicks has begun building a house on the lot purchased by him from E. C. Hall, adjoining the property of the latter.

The degree team of Autumn Leaf Lodge, No. 41, are requested to meet for practice next Monday night at 7.30 at the Lodge room.

The Agricultural Societies of Bridgetown, Dalhousie, Brooklyn and Torbrook have petitioned the local government for increase of grant.

Commencing next Sunday and continuing until further notice, the evening services in the various churches will begin at 7.30 instead of 7 o'clock.

A centurion passed away in Digby County last week in the person of Mrs. John Eisenman of North West, at the age of one hundred years and ten months.

Walter Davis, who has been employed in Owen Covert's barber shop, moves with his family to Berwick, this week where he will open a business of his own.

Capt. W. Longmire returned on Monday from St. John, where he had been overseeing his schooner before placing them on the route for the season's service. One of them will leave St. John today and is expected to arrive with a full cargo on Friday.

Principal Bastin will call the attention of the school board to the lack of fire escapes on the school house. He thinks they should be provided if possible and most citizens will agree, especially parents of school children. Mr. Bastin says that no fire drill is practiced.

Good Friday and Easter Sunday gave a foretaste of spring, but on Monday winter returned, and a liberal quantity of "the beautiful" now covers the ground. The snow plough was out yesterday morning, though not till after a good many pedestrians had done their own "road-breaking."

The young people who attended the assemblies held before Lent gave an Easter dance in Ruggles Hall on Monday night, which was a very enjoyable occasion, although owing to the storm a number of invited guests were unable to be present. Mitchell, with harp and violin, furnished the music.

Commencing next Monday a series of special meetings is to be held at 7.30 in St. Peter-by-the-sea, Young's Cove. This is in anticipation of a visit from the Bishop of the Diocese on the first Sunday in May. The meetings will be held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday each week until then. The usual service will take place next Sunday afternoon.

Owing to the storm on Monday the attendance at the annual meeting of St. James Church was unusually small, and after the presentation of the balance sheet the meeting adjourned until the evening of Friday, April 12th, at 7.30, the meeting to take the place of the usual evening service. The balance sheet gave satisfaction, excepting the stippled account section. This showed a serious deficit.

L. D. Shaffer left for Boston via St. John, on Monday, in response to a telegram stating that his little daughter Helen, who has been spending the winter at the home of Dr. Arch. Dennison, was very ill of scarlet fever. On reaching Digby, owing to the suspension of the Yarmouth, he was obliged to return home, but will leave today via the Yarmouth and Boston route. A later message says the little girl is better.

The property of Mrs. Capt. J. Fraser, the well known business "stated" real-estate, has passed into the hands of Karl Freeman, who is the present occupant of the store. Mr. Freeman has begun alterations which will enlarge and greatly improve his store, and will convert the other part of the lower story into a room suitable for the barber business of Owen Covert. The upper stories will continue to be occupied as a dwelling by Mrs. Fraser and her sister, Miss Quirk.

PRELIMINARY.

Houses where the public shall be entertained are necessary, but the bar-room is not necessary. It is a disgrace to our country and humanity.

Think of what a liquor license means and shudder at the thought of your responsibility if you favor it:

"Licensed to make the strong man weak,"

"Licensed to lay the strong man low,"

"Licensed the wife's fond heart to break,"

"And make the children's tears to flow,"

"Licensed to do thy neighbor harm,"

"Licensed to kindle hate and strife,"

"Licensed to nerve the robber's arm,"

"Licensed to whet the assassin's knife."

John McEwan, who attended the Sportsman's Show at Madison Square Garden, New York, as the representative of the Nova Scotia Guides, returned home last week and reports having a grand time and being most royally entertained by the management as well as others whom he had met and acted as guide for in the hunting season here. While there he gave out considerable advertising matter for the D. A. R., calling attention to the Land of Evangeline as a summer resort, from which no doubt benefits will be reaped during the coming tourist season.—Telephone.

Household

EMBRYO MANHOOD.

I know a woman who is very tender hearted where domestic animals are concerned. She has one little boy, and he has been taught to be fairly respectful to the cats. She and he regularly feed a neighbor's half starved dog. The husband and father of that household is possessed of an uncontrolled temper, and it requires all the woman's tact to teach the boy not to vent his irritation on a biting horse or a kicking cow.

"The dumb things are so helpless," she explained to me. "I have more consideration for them even than for human beings."

But when her exasperation is stirred to its depths she, too, loses her reasonableness. Rats come in on the grain cars, and people their collar. She views her destroyed vegetables and forgets the sympathy she yielded the vicious horse. "The hateful things, see what they've done," she cried, and imprisoning one behind a box while Earl, yelling with glee, is dispatched for his father to prod out the rat's life. And the child is allowed to dance around, hurrahing, while the helpless wretch is beaten to death.

Earl has a temper, and when he plays with his doll he indulges a play temper. The shakings and spankings undergone by that doll would tempt a smile if the tears come not first. Venting his own mimic rage on the offender fails to satisfy his infantile imagination and he raises his voice in lamentation.

"Hear that! Hear her cry! Don't that hurt some?" is his gratified comment between the walls. This conduct goes unrebuked, even applauded as "cute."

Earl's paternal grandmother was an excellent woman, but her knowledge of child lore. Her son's natural traits received no direction from her. He was negligent, even cruel to her in her helpless age. His wife suffers from his hard-hearted indifference where her dearest wishes are concerned. Is Earl likely to be more soft-hearted with his mother and his wife? Earl loves a fight, but he must be in the thick of it.

"Ivan's a bewl-baby. A lift under the ear will make him cry any time," he brags, and promptly picks a quarrel with Ivan, to enjoy his crying. Earl is six, Ivan but five and a half, small for his age, soft, babyish, even girlish, with a peace-loving disposition. He has not Earl's intellect—will never have. He will not make the successful citizen that Earl is shaping for but he will make a comfortable family man.

"I hit Ivan today," he made him run," boasts Earl.

"Didn't Ivan 'bit back'?" demands his father.

"No, he darst. I'm bigger'n Ivan. Ain't you glad I ain't little like Ivan, mamma?"

"Yes, dear, Ivan's very puny for his age. I don't see what makes him so spindling," in a tone plainly implying to the bouncing Earl that Ivan's inferiority is his own fault. And papa says,

"Well, of all the cowards! If he let you make him run he ought to be hit! Quee! His father was never any good with his fist."

Earl and a little girl neighbor quarreled one day, and he paid out to her the treatment practiced on his doll. Annie's mother came over to see about it as the children meeting every day it might be repeated.

"If it were Ivan's fault I would correct him," that young man's mother affirmed. "But Annie began it, Earl says, and Earl is truthful."

"But Annie is so much younger and smaller, and a girl."

"Shame, Mrs. Seavey!" cries Earl's mamma, and Earl hears and approves. "Are you going to bring up your child to hide behind her screen of womanhood? Don't let that excuse wrong-doing! Let her learn that a girl must suffer for her sin, as well as a boy." And that is all Earl hears on the subject.

In school Earl outstrips his fellows. "I can beat Ivan every time," he boasts. "I'm smarter than Ivan. I can spell him down 'thout half tryin'."

Earl will make a "smarter" man than Ivan. He will have the "push" so admired by his parents. The defenceless, the defective, the dumb, may go to the wall, for aught he will care. He will "get there" just the same. And the pity of it is, he has finer qualities—Homestead.

CATCHING WORMS IN HOUSE PLANTS.

By this time all the windows of our farm homes are full of growing flowers, at least I hope they are, and the old, old bother begins of worms in the flower pots. I have settled this difficulty for myself and my flowers to our perfect satisfaction, and will share my discovery, says a flower lover.

I have seen remedies printed from time to time such as watering with lime water or other chemicals, but I am always a little afraid of them. They might do the worm a mischief, but who knows that they would do the plant any good? My process is what might be called mechanical instead of chemical. It cannot possibly hurt the plant, and I guarantee it to be as long as the "early bird," whose methods it closely follows.

At night lay something cold and heavy, (a flat stone is good and easily obtainable) on the surface of the soil and water the plant copiously. Next morning, armed with a spoon or a paper-cutter, or any convenient small weapon which will "jab" quickly and effectively, approach the pot with extreme caution, for worms are astonishingly sensitive, and lightly and suddenly lift the stone.

You will be pretty sure to find your worm beneath it, and if you are quick enough you can scoop him out before he can dodge back into his hole. But he will be as quick as lightning about it, so you will have to be just a little quicker.

It really is an important matter to detect and get rid of worms. They are the cause of many a plant's languidness, and when all the visible conditions are perfect, and you cannot imagine why it will not bloom. Try my way once, and you will use no other.

GENTE AND EFFECTIVE

A well-known Manitoba editor writes: "As an inside worker I find Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets invaluable for the troubles of business natural and sedentary life, their action being gentle and effective, clearing the digestive tract and the bowels, and acting on the stomach."—W. A. Warren, Phm. B.

THE CONVENT ROLL.

The expert needlewoman is apt to discover simplified methods of accomplishing any given result, and to economize time as well as labor. In these days, when dainty lingerie waists and gowns are common possessions, and when underwear is elaborately trimmed, any method which saves time and labor is gratefully received. A comparatively little effort must be eagerly welcomed.

What is known as the convent roll, or the rolled edge, as it is commonly called in the convents, where so much fine needlework is done, is, in reality, quite simple. To make in the easiest way the lace should be laid upon the cloth with the right side to the right and the edge of the lace as eighth of an inch below that of the material, then the two edges whipped closely and finely together. The additional edge of the cloth will naturally and easily roll over into the under side, so forming a complete roll.

When the seam is opened out the stitches are literally invisible, and the lace and material appear to be almost woven together. Compared with the old-fashioned method of first rolling the edge of the cloth and then whipping the lace thereto, this one is simplicity itself, and any woman who has tried both will substantially declare in favor of the convent method. There is a fine treatment for lingerie waists, collars, bouffants, and the like, and is excellent for shirtwaists, trimmed with lace in pure simple lines.

BATHS FOR CHILDREN.

They should be given according to age and constitution. Some require warm baths and cannot stand the effect of cold water, while with other children it agrees perfectly.

A tepid bath is the one most generally suitable.

A child should never be given a hot bath in a very cold room, and thorough drying after bathing is of great importance.

TAKE IN JAM.

We all know that salts (Epsom) are recommended for blood diseases, such as rheumatism, neuritis and many other ailments, and yet so unpleasant to the taste that one often neglects to take them.

In giving them to my children I have tried many ways and have struck something that I consider worth mentioning.

Try mixing equal portions of salts and jam. I am using raspberry at present and find that they can be taken without troubling it. I give it to the younger ones and they think it is the jam straight. Of course I give them a drink of water or milk after.—E. C.

WHOOPIING COUGH.

I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in my family in cases of whooping cough, and want to tell you that it is the best medicine I have ever used.—W. F. GASTON, Posco, Ga. This remedy is safe and sure. For sale by W. A. Warren, Phm. B.

THE MEDICINAL VALUE OF FRESH FRUIT JUICES

One of the Greatest Wonders of the Age.

Hundreds Have Been Made Well by Taking Advantage of an Ottawa Physician's Discovery.

Everyone knows how beneficial fruits, when eaten regularly. Fruit is nature's laxative—the finest kidney regulator—and the ideal skin tonic. Unfortunately, the medicinal principle of fruit occurs only in minute quantities. In order to consume enough fruit to relieve biliousness, one would also consume a large amount of woody fibre or pulp, which would upset the stomach and impair digestion.

An Ottawa physician discovered a way to get around these difficulties. He pressed the juices from apples, oranges, figs and prunes—and then forced one more atom of the bitter principle from the discarded orange peels, into the concentrated juices. This formed a new compound, having all the curative effects of fresh fruit—and

In a highly intensified degree. These valuable tonics and internal antiseptics were added and the whole pressed into tablets.

These are "Fruit-a-tives" the wonderful Liver Tablets you hear so much about. "Fruit-a-tives" cure the most obstinate cases of non-action of the bowels, biliousness, headaches, sleeplessness, nervousness, kidney trouble, rheumatism, sciatica and neuralgia. They are the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world, while their action on the skin, in clearing and beautifying the complexion, is nothing short of marvellous. Ask your druggist for "Fruit-a-tives" and see that you get the postpaid, from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Jokes

QUICK WITTED.

Curran once met his match in a pert, jolly, keen-eyed son of Erin, who was up as a witness in a case of dispute in the matter of a horse deal. Curran much desired to break down credibility of his witness, and thought to do it by making the man contradict himself, by tangling him up in a network of adroitly framed questions, but to no avail.

The hostler was a companion to Sam Weller. His good common sense, and his equanimity and good nature, were not to be overturned. By-and-by Curran, in a towering rage, belch- ing forth, as not another counsel would have dared to do in the presence of the court:

"Sirrah, you are incorrigible! The Truth is not to be got from you, for it is not in you. I see the villain in your face!"

"Faith, yer honor," said the witness with the utmost simplicity of truth and honesty, "my face must be moity, clean and shiny, inside, if it can be best like that."

For once in his life the great barrister was floored by a single witness. He could not recover from that repartee, and the case went against him.

HARD ON THE CAPTAIN.

The captain of a steamer trading on the coast of Africa had a large pet monkey which he usually dressed in a suit of his old clothes and kept in his cabin.

Returning to Queenstown with the pilot on board he had occasion to send the man into the cabin where the monkey was, to get some refreshments. The pilot, seeing someone dressed in the sailor's clothes in the corner of the cabin, remarked: "Fine weather we're having lately, sir."

No answer.

He tried once more.

"Wind blows very strong off the land, sir." Still no answer.

Going up on deck again, he remarked to the captain: "What a quiet old man your father is, sir."

(Collapse of captain.)

GOING TO INVESTIGATE.

A steamer was working up the Clyde where the soundings were not quite known, and one of the crew (an Irishman) who was making his first deep-sea voyage, was posted in the fore chains to heave the lead, and the mate went forward to keep an eye on him.

The man, however, fouled the lead-line, and the mate, in leaning out to see where it was caught, lost his grip and fell overboard, just as the captain called from the bridge:

"What water have we?"

"Sure, I don't know," said the Irishman; "but the mate's just gone over to sea, sir."

SHE KNEW.

An architect remarked to a lady that he had been to see the great nave in the new church.

The lady replied: "Don't mention names; I know the man to whom you refer."—The News.

PROFITABLE FOR THE SHOEMAKER.

A few days back an Irish laborer went to buy a pair of shoes, and, at the same time, he asked the shoemaker if he could tell him what would prevent them from going down on the sides.

The shoemaker said: "The only way to prevent it is to change them every morning."

Pat left the shop after purchasing the pair, and the following morning returned, asked for a pair of shoes, tried them on, and (leaving the pair he bought the day before) was proceeding out of the shop without further notice, when the shoemaker called him to know what he was doing, telling him at the same time that he had forgotten to pay for the shoes he had just bought.

"And is it what am I doing, you ask? Am I not doing what you told me yesterday—changing my shoes every morning?"

NOT ON THE MENU

It was in a down-town restaurant that the little short woman and her tall husband went to dinner.

"Will you have oysters?" asked he.

"Yes," said the short little woman, as she tried in vain to touch her toes to the floor. "And, John, I want a hassock."

John nodded, and, as he handed his order to the waiter, said, "And bring a hassock for the lady."

"One hassock?" asked the waiter, with what John thought more than ordinary interest. The waiter did not go, while his face got red. Then he came around to John's side, and speaking sotto voce said: "Say, mister, I haven't been here long, and I'm not on to all these things. Will the lady have the hassock broiled or fried?"

UNEXPECTED.

"Never," says a political orator, ask a question of your audience and then pause for a reply. I was taught the lesson by a humiliating experience.

"I was addressing a large open-air meeting. In the course of my remarks I said:—'What have I done that I should deserve this honor at your hands?' Then with my hand upon my heart, I waited.

"'Nothing,' came the answer from a loud-voiced man. I felt decidedly disconcerted."

A HELPING OF PEAS.

At a dinner party the coachman was called upon in an emergency to assist in waiting upon the guests, among whom was a very old lady. The coachman, in passing the vegetables, comes to the dear lady. "Peas, mum?" says John. No answer. "Peas, mum?" (louder). Still there was no answer from the old lady, who at this moment lifts her ear trumpet interrogatively towards the man. Glancing down and seeing the tube he ejaculates in a whisper, "Well, it's a rum way of taking them, but I suppose she likes them." Then with my hand upon my heart, I waited.

Mrs. Stewart Harris went to the Victoria General Hospital, Halifax, last Thursday, for treatment to one of her eyes.

E. B. Purdy has accepted the position of engineer at W. E. Dunn's mill, Digby Neck, and left for there Wednesday.

W. M. Romans, manager of the Union Bank branch here, spent Sunday last Thursday for treatment to one of his eyes.

Captain Francis F. Harris, of the Salvation Army, arrived home last week on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Harris.

Mrs. W. E. Banks and daughter, Frances, returned to Weymouth last Saturday, after having spent a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Zwicker.

Frank Coombs met with a very bad accident on Wednesday of last week. While working in the woods, his mate with whom he was chopping, accidentally put the whole blade of his axe into his arm, cutting a gash five inches long and over two inches deep.

The wound was dressed by Dr. C. C. Archibald and is doing well.

Messrs. Clarke Bros. and Miller have about completed their winter's operations in the woods in the vicinity of Lake Jolly, the larger part of the crews having come out last week.

They report an excellent winter's work and a large cut of timber, having upwards of three million feet. They have some very fine logs on the ice at Lake Jolly, among them being some nice pine. One log in particular, which is called the champion, is a pine fifty feet long, which scales 1333 feet. If anyone can beat this, we would like to hear from them.

Messrs. Reuben Aloor and John O'Brien, and sons, who have been lumbering for the Campbell Lumber Co., of Weymouth, this winter, near Chubb Lake, broke camp last week. They report a splendid winter's work. Mr. Aloor's cut being over two million feet, and Mr. O'Brien's about six hundred and sixty thousand. The Robbins Bros., who have been operating in the same section for Messrs. Dickie & McGrath, Tusket, also came out. Their cut being about six hundred thousand. The roads are so rough in places that folks with false teeth are compelled to take them out of their mouth before starting for town in a wagon.

SMITH'S COVE.

The storm on the 20th. instant was very severe here. The wind blew a hurricane and dashed the spray from the Bay a considerable distance. Next day there was salt on the windows of many houses, and the station, which is quite close to the water, was fairly white with salt. Old timers say it was the worst storm they have seen for many a year.

A number of the older residents declare that there was a shock of earthquake about four o'clock on the morning of the nineteenth instant. Squire Patten, the post master, and his neighbor, Capt. Hunt, are particularly emphatic in their declaration of such an occurrence.

Property holders are taking steps to have a close season for clams. A number of Deep Brook residents, in meeting assembled, passed a resolution favoring such a course and expressed the opinion that the time should not be shorter than a year and a half. This would give the clams a chance to grow. If measures are not taken now, it is feared that clams will soon be exterminated.

WHO IS THE CRIMINAL?

It is urged that convicts must not be kept idle, that they must earn their living, that the people should not be taxed to feed and clothe an army of criminals, and so forth.

Let us see how the law works. The strong arm of the law arrests a young fellow who, let us say, in a drunken quarrel has stabbed a companion. He is hurried away to prison.

He is brought into court, tried and convicted. He is sent to prison for five or ten years, or for life. The government that makes the sale of the stuff which is accountable for the crime legal, eats his labor. The rum-seller, who took his earnings for that poison which crazed his brain, is received by society with open arms.

All the while a young wife and a half dozen little children are left without their natural protector and support. They huddle in a corner of the court room; they listen to the verdict; the case is closed. The young father is bundled off in one direction in chains. The young family is turned off in another direction in tears. The government takes the time and the earnings of the one to itself, leaving the other to starve.

The mother dies of despair, the boys grow up thieves, the girls grow up harlots, the law is vindicated, the taxpayer is protected, the criminal classes are replenished. Is it not damnable? does not the society which Can Consumption be Cured?

There is plenty of indisputable evidence to prove that Consumption has been cured even after the symptoms were well defined and the lungs actually involved.

On the other hand, there has always been a point beyond which the disease has been considered incurable. Until a comparatively recent date this point had a place at a very early stage of the malady, but modern scientific discovery and common-sense methods of treatment have gradually moved the hopeless point further and further back, until now the Consumptive is not "given up" until the very last stage of the disease is reached.

Nothing in recent years has done so much to improve the chances of Consumptives as the advent of

FERROL

In fact, it is claimed that, with plenty of fresh air, sunlight and comfortable surroundings, FERROL has pushed the hopeless point to the limit, that is to say, where these fail the chances of cure are very slim indeed.

FERROL does not kill the germs of Consumption (anything that will do that will kill the patient), but FERROL does the work by repairing the waste tissue, enriching the blood, toning the nerves, in short, by building up the whole system and thus enabling nature to expel the disease.

The only possible chance of curing Consumption is by proper nutrition, and FERROL is the only perfect nutrient, because it combines in palatable and easily digested form the very essentials of life—Oil, Iron and Phosphorus.

Never feel some diffidence in claiming that FERROL will cure Consumption, lest we be misunderstood, but we have not the slightest hesitation in stating that it is an infallible cure for BRONCHITIS, CHRONIC COUGHS, CROUP, WHOOPING COUGH, CHRONIC RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, NERVOUS EXHAUSTION, SCROFULA and all wasting diseases.

For restoring lost weight and building up the run-down system FERROL is absolutely without an equal.

S. N. WEARE, BRIDGETOWN, N. S.

tolerates such monotones deserve all the evils it entails upon itself. The government or state has no right to take that man's labor from his wife and children and give them no equivalent. It should punish the guilty not the innocent. Every dollar that is diverted in this way from the natural needs of the helpless to the uses of the public, is base blood money that should and does carry with it the curse of God. Instead of the Powers that be, trying to devise ways in which to make the labors of convicts more profitable, they should be devoting that time to the problem of getting rid of that terrible curse that is in some way accountable for more than two-thirds of all the crimes that are committed.

THE CLAM QUESTION

Nothing definite has yet been ascertained in regard to the petition against permitting outsiders to invade the flats for clams. A delegation headed by Robert Spurr went to Halifax to press the matter upon the attention of the Government. It will be remembered that the Supreme Court of the Province decided against property holders, the judge holding that the coming tide dispossessed them twice every twenty-four hours. But the question arises—Are clams fish? It is said that the English courts hold they are not. At any rate they have to be dug, and there is one thing sure you cannot dig clams at high water. If the flats are public property as far as clams are concerned, they are of little use to those to whom they have been granted. The principal value of the flats is due to the clams they contain, and there should be some recompense if that value is to be taken away. If it be true that the incoming tide cancels private ownership, what about the intervening time when the tide is out? You cannot cancel something that has no existence. It would therefore seem that the court in rendering judgment admitted private ownership during ebb tide, and that being so, by what process of reasoning are we to arrive at the conclusion that it is public at the same time? If a man owned a field of parsnips which the flood-tide submerged, would those parsnips pass out of his possession by that act of nature? Or if a lot of driftwood were left stranded in one of his fields by the flood, would he have no authority when the flood subsided to prevent trespassers from passing over the field with impunity in the act of picking up the wood? Those interested would like to see this clam matter thoroughly investigated with a view of arriving at something final.

William Burrill, the well known pedlar, became reminiscent the other day. Speaking of trade, he spoke of the value of honesty and paid a tribute to the integrity of the French inhabitants of St. Mary's Bay and vi-

LETTERS BY MESSENGER.

A Postal Law of Which You May Not Have Knowledge.

The statement made in an uptown club one evening lately that the law prohibits carrying an unstamped letter past a postoffice and delivering it except much argument. Inquiry was made at the postoffice, where an official said that the question had been asked frequently. "You may send a letter by postoffice anywhere, past as many postoffices as you please," said the official, "but you have no right to send your mail that way regularly or at stated periods. This is prohibited by the postal laws and regulations. Sections 1136 and 1137 were enacted to prevent the establishment of private mail routes, because the postoffice department is recognized as having the absolute monopoly of the transportation of letters and packets or bundles of letters by regular trips and at stated periods on all post routes. As to open letters and circulars, they may be delivered by rival concerns, but the people who make the delivery of circulars and stamped closed letters. The law about the milkmen and the tradesmen, who travel regularly along established post roads, who would otherwise become rivals to the United States post-office for the purpose of accommodating their customers."

As Clean as a Whistle.

Any one who has witnessed the manufacture of a rustic whistle can be at no loss for the origin of the saying, "As clean as a whistle." A piece of young ash about four inches long and the thickness of a finger is hammered all over with the handle of a knife until the bark is disengaged from the wood and capable of being drawn off in a notch and a cut or two having been made in the stick, the cuticle is replaced, and the instrument is completed. When stripped of its covering the white wood, with its colorless sap, presents the very acme of cleanness.

The Causes and Symptoms of Urta Acid in the Blood.
Rheumatism, so called, is probably as common as any ailment one ever hears of, and yet if one were to analyze carefully the average case of rheumatism the result would doubtless show that the disease was something very different indeed from the real thing. Almost everybody when suffering from a slight stiffness of a joint or a muscular soreness promptly makes a diagnosis of rheumatism when in reality the case is nothing more than what in technical language is known as lithaemia, sometimes called American gout.
The real disease of rheumatism is the result of an accumulation in the blood of imperfectly converted food, principally uric acid. This accumulation is due to intemperance in eating and drinking and insouciant active exertion.
Hereditarily in some cases seems to play an important part. In the great majority the symptoms follow a regular order, beginning with a feeling of throbbing headache, nervous irritability and vertigo, muscular pains which may be confined to one or more muscles or skip about from one to another. Lastly, and in most cases the most troublesome of all symptoms, is depression of spirits, the patient imagining that he has all sorts of ailments. Persons suffering from mental disorder as a result of this disease have been known to commit suicide. Fortunately these cases are not common, but it should be remembered that they are among the possibilities.—A Doctor in New York World.

An Incident of the Boyhood Days of William McKinley.
One does not readily associate our martyred president, William McKinley, with an ambition to become an actor, but in a grouping of eminent persons who have concurred at one time or another in their lives a passion to tread the boards we find the subjoined account:
"It was while holding the humble position of clerk at a hat store in Cincinnati that Mr. McKinley became stagestruck and once confessed that he did not outgrow his desire to become an actor for many years afterward. The desire arose through witnessing the Shakespearean plays as presented by the great tragedian, Edwin Forrest, for whom Mr. McKinley conceived a great admiration.
"Imagine my feelings," the president said on one occasion when relating his boyish ambitions, "when Forrest walked into our store one day to make a purchase. I rushed to the front in order to serve my ideal hero of the theater. The sale, however, was made by an older clerk, but I was given the privilege of pressing and stretching the hat. The great actor stood near me, observing my work, and the smile of appreciation which he gave me was one of the events of my youth."

Growth of Rocks.
Rocks do not grow in the sense that a plant grows. They may increase by accretion, and they may undergo chemical change. The old sea bed, being lifted up, becomes sandstone and limestone. The volcanic ash and lava thrown over the plains become tuff, hard enough for building stones. The pebbly shore of a river becomes conglomerate. The simple mineral does grow, however, when it takes a crystal form. The sparkling prism of quartz increases from an atom to a crystal as large as a forearm by a process of addition and assimilation, wonderfully slow but beautifully regular, exactly as crystals of ice form on the window pane.

Why Bulls Hate a Red Flag.
In the first place, says an English writer, red is a color to which cattle are unaccustomed, so that they may naturally be supposed to be startled by its very novelty. Scientists show the unaccountable to be the complement of that of green, being induced by exactly opposite affections of the retina. If the eyes of cattle are constructed on a similar principle to our own the continual contemplation of green, as in trees and herbage, must produce a state of retinal fatigue, predisposing a violent excitement of the retina immediately a red substance is presented to view.

Bismarck's Love of Authority.
At 9 p. m. we took tea with the king. I was seated opposite him when a footman came and whispered in my ear that Bismarck desired to see me. Great embarrassment! Puckler having told me I might leave the table, I did so. The king inquired what was the matter and permitted me to go. Bismarck had nothing of particular importance to tell me, and I suspect that he only wanted to show that he had the right to send for his employees even when they were with the king.

Strictly Business.
"The graviest man I ever knew," said Uncle Jerry Peabbles, "was an old chap named Snoopins. Somebody told him once that when he breathed he took in oxygen and gave out carbon. He spent a whole day trying to find out which of them two gases cost the most if you have to buy 'em. He wanted to know whether he was making or losing money when he breathed."
