NEW FEDERAL SUBSIDIES LIKELY IN EFFECT SOON

First Reading of Bill Passes British Parliament Unanimously

Words "Final and Unalterable" in Regard to New Scale for Provinces Struck Out—Churchill Reads Letter from Hon. Mr. Fielding Urging the Immediate Enactment of the Measure—Premier McBride's Demand for British Columbia Turned Down.

(Special to The Telegraph.) Montreal, June 13.—A London Canadian Associated Press cable says: Today Winston Churchill introduced in the house of commons the British North American Act of 1907, containing the essential portions of the resolutions of the Ottawa conference of last autumn. The new scale of federal subsidies is confirmed, but the words "final and unalterable" are omitted because no act of the British parliament is final. There was no opposition and the bill passed the first reading.

had many interviews with the colonial office about the inadequacy of his grant. Mr. McBride made a green impression and was complimented by Mr. Churchill and Mr. Hon. Alfred Lyttleton, but the authorities declined to interfere with the substance of the Ottawa conference and dominion parliament resolutions. They, however, declined to lay down a rule that the opinion of the federal government of Canada was necessarily final. Attorney-General Foy of Ontario, Campbell of Manitoba, and Premier McBride were in the gallery during the debate. Mr. Churchill read a letter from Hon. W. S. Fielding urging the immediate passage of the bill. The house greeted the speech with cheers.

FRANCIS D. HUNTER DEAD AT MONCTON

Former Well Known St. John Resident Passed Away Thursday

S. C. R. Clerks Likely to Get Increased Pay Next Month—Principal Witness Against "Buck" and "Jim" Dead—Holmes' Entries Will Not Be Received.

(Special to The Telegraph.) Moncton, N. B., June 13.—Francis D. Hunter, for the last ten years a resident of Moncton, passed away this afternoon after an illness of a year, at the residence of his son-in-law, W. H. Crandall, aged 85 years. Mr. Hunter was born in Ireland June 7, 1822, and had consequently just passed his 85th birthday. He was a son of Dr. John Hunter, who came to St. John from Ireland in 1838 and spent the remainder of his life there about a year when he died.

Deceased was the last of his family and previous to coming to Moncton lived in St. John, where he was bookkeeper for a number of years for George Carvell, iron merchant. The funeral will take place in St. John Saturday at Fernhill cemetery. The surviving members of the late Mr. Hunter's family are Mrs. W. B. Dickson, Hillboro; Mrs. W. H. Crandall, Moncton; Mrs. Wortman, Wolfville; Mrs. Geo. J. Hattabrook, St. John; W. J. Hunter, locomotive engineer, St. John; Herbert Hunter, Pittsburg; Francis D. Hunter, of Chicago and Rock Island Railway, Chicago.

The death occurred here last night of pneumonia of Selma Donnelly, who was one of the principal crown witnesses in the murder trial of "Buck" and "Jim," who shot Policeman Steadman at the Janelly House twelve years or more ago. It is reported the I. C. R. clerks will receive general increase of pay next month. It is expected about one-third of the clerks will participate in the increase, which it is said will take effect from April first. The clerks have been agitating for increases for some time. Asked today what were Driver Thos. Holmes' chances of inducing the management of the Moncton track to accept his entries for the July race a prominent official of the speedway said: "I think we will close our track and sell it at auction before Holmes gets on it." From an inside source it is stated the Moncton track management's rejection of Holmes' entries is due to some conduct on Holmes' part last year not pleasing to the track owners.

THREE NEW PROFESSORS FOR UNIVERSITY OF N. B.

Dr. Philip Cox of Chatham to Chair of Natural History and Geology

L. W. Carson of Toronto for Chemistry and W. B. Cartmell for Physics and Electrical Engineering—Other Members of Faculty Get Increased Salary—New King's Counsel Appointed by Local Government—Dunbar Concern of Woodstock May Move to Fredericton if Concessions Are Granted.

(Special to The Telegraph.) Fredericton, N. B., June 13.—The university senate, at a meeting here on the staff, filled two vacancies on the staff, caused by the resignation of Dr. Bailey and Prof. Salmon, and appointed a professor in chemistry. Dr. Bailey's successor is Dr. Philip Cox, principal of the Chatham Grammar school, one of the most experienced and most widely known educationists in the province. He is a native of Maugeville, Sunbury county, and graduated from the university in 1871. He received the degree of bachelor of science from his alma mater in 1890 and that of Ph. D. in 1894. Dr. Cox served as inspector of schools for several years, and has had a large experience as a teacher. He is familiar with the geology of the province, and is recognized as a most industrious and enthusiastic worker in the cause of education. He formerly taught in St. John.

Prof. Salmon's successor in the chair of physics and electrical engineering is W. B. Cartmell, who lately completed a post-graduate course at Harvard. He is a native of Greenwick (Eng.), and received his early education there, where he for a time acted as assistant instructor in chemistry. His list of testimonials included one from Prof. Alex. Smith, of Chicago University, who speaks of him in the very highest terms. Prof. Smith says of him that he is one of the three best students he ever had in chemistry all the time he was director of that department. The University of New Brunswick staff now consists of seven instructors, in addition to the three named above. The principal reason for the appointment of Dr. Cox is the government is proposed to add a professor of forestry and an assistant professor of engineering.

At this morning's session Professors Raymond, Perrot, Geogegan and Macdonald had their salaries increased, and Prof. Macdonald withdrew his resignation. New King's Counsel. The local government has appointed the following King's counsel: John P. Marsh, police magistrate of Fredericton; Hon. R. J. Ritchie, St. John; J. R. Armstrong, F. B. Carvell, Hon. F. J. Sweney, O. P. King, G. J. Clarke, E. G. Kaye, W. D. Carter and F. A. McCully.

They are to have rank and precedence in the order of their appointment except in the cases of Messrs Marsh, Ritchie and Armstrong, who are to have the same rank and precedence among members of the bar as if they had been included in the first list of appointments under the act. Edward Perry, of Petitediac, has been appointed a provincial constable. The resignation of Hon. William Pugsley as attorney-general is gazetted. Reva Richard Bolt, of Fredericton; C. J. Cyr, of St. Hilare; J. Bernier, of St. Basel, and Rev. N. P. Savoy, of Egerve, are registered to solemnize marriages.

The city council met this evening and heard Alex. Dunbar, et al., of Woodstock in support of the application of the demand for which was so great that they had to be obliged to sacrifice property worth $30,000 and that the matter would be carefully considered and a reply given next week. John A. Morrison appeared before the council and strongly advocated an extension of the water system to his mills. A telegram was read from Donald Fraser stating that they were prepared to rebuild the Aberdeen mill if a siding were provided for the C. P. R. station and they were exempted from taxation for ten years and given free water. The council adjourned without taking any action. Chief Engineer McKenzie, of the I. C. R., and H. J. McGrath, inspector of machinery, of the Queen's Hotel, are tonight. The body of Warren Law, brakeman on the Bangor and Aroostook railway, who was accidentally killed at Bangor Tuesday night, arrived here last evening by the late train for government. The deceased was a son of Jarvis S. Law, of Canterbury, and a son-in-law of Conductor John Verza of this city. He was thirty years of age, leaves a widow and one child. From particulars at hand it seems that Law was alone at the time he met his death. He started out with a lantern to fly a train near the station at Bangor and an hour after his mangled body was found on the track after three trains passed over it. An inquest is being held at Bangor.

MAYOR SCHMITZ FOUND GUILTY OF EXTORTION

Abe Ruef Pleaded Guilty to the Chagre and Testified Against His Old Pal.

San Francisco, June 13.—Mayor Eugene A. Schmitz was tonight found guilty of extorting money from keepers of French restaurants in this city. This is the first formal conviction in the anti-graft commission inaugurated several months ago. Abe Ruef, who was indicted for a similar offense, pleaded guilty to the charges and appeared as a witness against Mayor Schmitz. When the verdict was announced Schmitz sat unmoved with his left hand on his chin. He apparently did not understand, and asked Barrett: "What is it?" "Guilty," said Barrett. "Schmitz" had dropped to the table, but he showed no other signs of emotion. Judge Damm announced that judgment will be pronounced June 27. Motions regarding the case will also be entertained on that date. The jury was out an hour and thirty-five minutes. When Foreman Capp said "guilty" the silence was broken in a hundred places at once. All over the house people jumped up and some of them turned to the street and at their elbows and thrust out the hands in the enthusiasm of a long-looked-for conviction and cried "shake."

S., June 13.—Annals Wurtzell has been committed for trial at the fall session of the supreme court on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of his father, Henry Wurtzell, of Aurobinda. The mother, Mrs. Bessie Wurtzell, has also been sent up as she was shown to have been implicated in the case. During the investigation many sensational things were brought out which disclosed a very serious condition of affairs existing in the family.

NEW YORK SHIP LABORERS LOSE STRIKE

New York, June 13.—Nineteen branches of the longshoremen's union, at a meeting tonight, declared off the strike of the longshoremen in this city and vicinity. The strikers will return to work tomorrow at the wage rate received before the inauguration of the strike against the transatlantic steamship companies for more pay. The old rate was thirty cents an hour for day work and forty-five for night, overtime Sunday and holiday work.

FOLLOWED LAWSON'S ADVICE AND WENT BROKE

Philadelphia Broker Acted Part of Hero in Thomas W.'s Book Disastrously

Sold Thousands of Shares of Stock Short and Couldn't Put Up Margins—American Paper Predicts All-Red Line Will Need $5,000,000 a Year Subsidy—Kaiser Cuffs Cousin, Strips His Decorations Off and Banishes Him from Germany—Dundonald Aims His Old Grievance Again, and Retires from Army.

(From Our Own Correspondent.) New York, June 13.—The insolvent of Arthur E. Appleyard, of Boston and Buffalo, the broker who sold 6,000 shares of United Gas Improvement stock on the Philadelphia stock exchange yesterday, causing a slump of three points in the stock, was announced at the opening of the exchange in that city today. Margins were called for and Appleyard was unable to cover the amount of the sales. U. G. I. opened at 91.2, nearly three points above yesterday's closing and then advanced to 92. Appleyard is said to have tried to carry out the system expounded by Thomas W. Lawson in his novel, Friday, the Thirtieth. In the novel the hero hammered down a stock until all the other brokers became bears. Then he bought back all the stock. The scheme worked all right in the novel and Lawson's hero made millions in the last chapter. Appleyard, after selling between 14,000 and 15,000 shares of U. G. I. yesterday at prices varying from 91.2 to 88.14, was unexpectedly called on for margins. This did not happen in the Lawson novel and was quite unforeseen by Appleyard. The result was that he was unable to make good and he was forced to the wall.

in which he elicits great bitterness against the Canadian government, and says he was "turned out of the Canadian militia for calling attention to political corruption in the appointment of officers." The Mail says: "The news of the retirement of Lieutenant-General the Earl of Dundonald, has caused no little sensation in army circles. He is the distinguished soldier who commanded the Canadian militia from 1902 to 1904. His mounted force was the first to enter Ladysmith in the Boer war. One quarter of his men were killed or wounded." A Mail representative asked him the reason for his sudden retirement. "Why have I retired?" he answered. "Well, I have not retired voluntarily from the army, in which I have served since I was a boy of seventeen. I have not retired because of old age, for I have still thirteen years before the age clause will affect me. I have not retired because the promotion board did not think me worthy of promotion, for I was promoted last year. I retired simply because the British authorities offered me no employment, since I was turned out. Yes, I prefer the words 'turned out' from the Canadian militia for calling attention to political corruption in the appointment of officers, corruption that if not protected against by some one would be bound to destroy the efficiency of that fine body of men, for I consider that unfairness and favoritism are bound to destroy the efficiency and take the heart out of any military force." Asked if he proposed to enter on a political career, Lord Dundonald said: "I do not intend to sit down and do nothing."

American Comment on "All-Red Line." The Sun today, in commenting editorially upon "the all-red line," says: "There is a possibility of the establishment within a few years of a British mail service which will carry a letter around the world in about forty-five days. The installation of what is called the All-Red Line from England to Australia and the east, by way of Canada, is a matter to which careful consideration is given by England and her colonies. Lord Strathcona is one of the leaders in this excellent enterprise.

The project was fully discussed by the representatives of the colonies at the recent conference in London and the delegates from Canada, Australia and New Zealand, the countries most directly affected, expressed hearty approval of the scheme and general conviction that their respective governments would make liberal appropriations in subsidy of such a route. The plan involves a line of twenty-five knot vessels from England to Canada, a fast train service to the Pacific coast, and eighteen knot steamers thence to New Zealand, Australia, China and Japan. The time required for mail despatch by such a route from England to Australia is estimated at twenty days. The distance by such a route is approximately 13,000 miles. To cover it in the estimated time an average daily run of 650 miles must be maintained. While such a rate of speed for so long a time is not a mechanical impossibility, it is a huge proposition even in these days of quick time and long distances.

"It is believed that an annual subsidy of about $5,000,000 would maintain such a route, and it is proposed that the appropriation shall be divided between England, Canada, Australia and New Zealand. "Down at the bottom of the project there lies the important and probably decisive question whether all or any of the governments interested would realize a profit on their investment or even 'get their seed back.' As a display of business enterprise it is almost of anything that we are doing along that line."

Dundonald At It Again. The London Daily Mail today publishes an interview with the Earl of Dundonald

Kaiser Disgraces and Banishes Cousin. The London Express today prints the following despatch from its Paris correspondent: "I am informed by a personage closely connected with the German court that the Kaiser has personally degraded his cousin, Prince Frederick Henry of Prussia—expelled him from the court and army, and banished him from Germany. The Kaiser dictated this severe punishment on receiving substantiated information that the Prince was addicted to certain practices of a perverse character. "The prince is the eldest son of the late Prince Albrecht, regent of Brunswick, and owing to his near relationship to the Kaiser occupies a prominent position in the German court. He entered the army at the age of 28 and became colonel of the First Brandenburg Dragoon Regiment. "When the Kaiser ascertained the nature of the charges he summoned his young cousin to the palace and in the presence of several members of the imperial family and a group of high army officers personally performed the ceremony of degradation. He tore the orders and decorations from the prince's breast and humiliated him by boxing his ears. The prince, in tears, left the palace without a word, drove hurriedly to his own residence and left Berlin the same evening for Egypt. He is now said to be living in a remote spot on the Khedive's dominions. The Kaiser has ordered that his name be mentioned in his hearing. The police have received instructions to expel him from the country if he attempts to return. Shortly before his disgrace the prince was appointed grand master of the Imperial Order of St. John. The appointment has been cancelled by an imperial decree. The prince is now 32 years old. He inherited a fortune of approximately $7,500,000 from his father, in addition to extensive estates and a magnificent palace in Wilhelmstrasse, Berlin."

ORCHARD'S SIX DAYS' GRILLING FINISHED

Breaks Down at the Fierce Fusillade of Questions About Motives for Confessing—Declares He Was Converted by Reading the Bible and Decided to Make a Clean Breast as Reparation for His Terrible Crimes—Witnesses Corroborate Part of His Story.

Boise, Idaho, June 13.—The men who are battling to save the life of Wm. D. Hayward and the good name of the Western Federation of Miners had their greatest assault upon Harry Orchard today when carrying the review by cross-examination, they bitterly assaulted his motives. Six days they spent in stripping him of his life of every shred of morality. He then suddenly turning upon him in final fierce attack, they fought with every means known to the legal craft to convince the jury of every shred of morality. The lives of innocent men in the hope of saving his own. They carried their attack to the very language with which the apostolic delegate and head of the Catholic church in Canada, returned to Ottawa today. He came over on the Kron Prinz Wilhelm, landing in New York on Wednesday, where he was met by his secretary, Rev. Father Sinnott, and at once came on to Ottawa.

APOSTOLIC DELEGATE BACK IN OTTAWA

(Special to The Telegraph.) Ottawa, June 13.—After an absence of nine months, nearly all of which was spent in Rome, Mgr. Donato Sbarretti, apostolic delegate and head of the Catholic church in Canada, returned to Ottawa today. He came over on the Kron Prinz Wilhelm, landing in New York on Wednesday, where he was met by his secretary, Rev. Father Sinnott, and at once came on to Ottawa.

intensity, a compelling human interest that gripped and held every man and woman who watched and listened. Orchard (afterward when he recited to him the tale of David and Uriah, that Detective McParland related to him when he came seeking a confession. He fought to save himself, but tears filled his eyes and he rocked unweary like a fainting woman. His voice lowered to huskiness, and he hid his face in a handkerchief. Then he studied himself and went on strongly to the end. He defended his motive by saying that he had finally expected conversion and penitence and had resolved to make all possible reparation by freely confessing all. McParland had told him that he was doing a great service for the state and that states were kind to men who served them. There was no other promise. "You know that if you confessed to the Steney murder the state could put you out of the way," lamoured Attorney Richardson. (Continued on page 2, fifth column.)

FEEL TO DEATH DOWN ELEVATOR WEL

Melvin Spencer Killed Wednesday Working on New Royal Bank Building

SKULL FRACTURED; DIED SOON AFTER

Made a Mistake in Signaling While Working the Elevator, and Plunged 40 Feet to the Ground—Second Fatality in a Week.

For the second time in one week there has been a fatality on the new building of the Royal Bank of Canada now under construction by the Canada White Company at the corner of King and Canterbury streets.

Spencer's death is regarded as having been purely accidental. He had been employed as a laborer by the Canada White Company for two or three weeks, since night work on the building was started.

About 7:45 Spencer went up on the elevator with a wheelbarrow, intending to get off on the third story. Upon reaching the second floor he gave the signal to stop.

As soon as the accident was perceived, Spencer's employer, Stephen Harper, was notified. He immediately sent a messenger to the Royal Bank building to get the police.

The doctor at the hospital said that there was no hope of saving Spencer's life and notified the home of his father, Mr. J. J. Spencer, who lives in the city.

Fruit-a-tives

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" differ from any other remedy in the world.

They cure, absolutely, Stomach, Liver, Kidney, Bowel and Skin Troubles.

Because none of the usual remedies have given you relief, is no reason why you should not give "Fruit-a-tives" a good, honest trial.

"Fruit-a-tives" contain all the cumulative virtues of fruit in a wonderfully concentrated form.

"Fruit-a-tives" act directly on the bowels, kidneys and skin—strengthening them—and arousing them to vigorous action.

With the kidneys healthy—the bowels moving regularly every day—the liver active—and the pores of the skin doing their fair share towards ridding the system of waste—there can be no disease.

ORCHARD'S SIX DAYS GRILLING FINISHED

never be hanged for killing Stuenenber. Then came a snowing as to how the prisoner had been dressed and groomed for the trial, and lastly, for a climax, they showed Orchard pleading for and saving the life of Bob Wetter, condemned to death for murder.

Orchard left the stand at 2:30 o'clock. Just before he was excused and remanded he went back to the hands of the prosecution and identified the casing of the bomb he planted at the gate of Judge Goddard's house in Denver.

Orchard is to return to the witness chair later because the defense must lay the formal lines for impeaching him and the state must still have its red-ink examination.

Witnesses Corroborate Orchard. Immediately Orchard left the stand, the state began the corroboration of the Bradley poisoning story. Mrs. Sadie Swan who, as Miss Sadie Bell, was a maid in the Bradley home at Silver Creek; the milkman who sold the milk that was poisoned, and P. L. McCready, the chemist who analyzed the poisoned milk, carried the receding tale of the discovery that showed from forty to sixty grains of strychnine in a quart of it.

Orchard said his new suit of clothes was made by a convict in the penitentiary, while plainly nervous from the strain of the morning's examination, had recovered his equanimity and was speaking to one of the men who had accompanied him from the court house when the governor entered.

Orchard recognized him at once. As Mr. Peabody approached the man who had lured him for a year seeking an opportunity to kill, Orchard's face changed. He shrank back and trembled. The former governor smilingly held out his hand, saying: "How are you, Orchard?"

Orchard broke down completely. He said: "I am ashamed to look at you, sir, I am ashamed to speak to you." The governor reassured him in a few words and Orchard replied: "I am thankful that I did not kill you and am spared the thought of that crime."

ORCHARD'S CHANGE OF HEART. Judge Wood said he would allow the witness latitude in cross-examination. "Did Mr. Orchard tell you that every man of the Molly Maguires who turned state's evidence was allowed to go free?" "I don't know that he did. Some of them escaped."

Orchard said Mr. Peabody told him he was in a position to do the state a good deal of good and that the state usually acted fair with its witnesses. "Did he tell you your attorney had deserted you and that the state could use you either way it wanted to?" "No, sir."

Orchard declared that his talks with Peabody had induced him to tell his story earlier than he otherwise would have done, but he had made up his mind to do it.

"I didn't want to live any longer in that way, I went on, and I was tempted to do myself out of the way. I began to think about my past, and the unnatural manner I had been in, and I did not care much what happened to me. I was afraid to do it, but I came to believe that I would do it and I did it. It was after I received a Bible from a missionary society in Chicago that I came to the conclusion that I would be forgiven if I truly repented and made a clean breast of it all. And I have never been in doubt from that moment on."

Several times Attorney Richardson attempted to stop Orchard in his dramatic recital, but he was prevented by Attorney Hawley.

When Orchard paused at last, Richardson sneered: "Did Mr. Orchard help you on this speech?" "No, sir," replied Orchard. Orchard said he had once been a member of Colburn Canada Lodge of Masons. He knew that Peabody, Bell, Goddard and

AMHERST.

Salisbury, June 12.—The annual meetings of the Sackville district of the Methodist church are being held at Salisbury this week. Nearly all the clergymen of the district are in attendance, and are being entertained at the homes of prominent Methodist families in the village.

The meetings are being well attended and an unusual amount of business transacted. A public meeting, held in the Methodist church last evening, was addressed by visiting ministers and was greatly enjoyed by the large number present.

The thief was evidently in search of money and, not finding any, did not, so far as Mr. Decker can judge, take anything.

It is an unusual sight in this locality in the balmy month of June to see people driving all muffled up in fur coats. Owing to the coolness of the weather, however, this mode of dress is necessary, and yesterday, June 11, several gentlemen were observed driving with their coats not only well buttoned up but with the collars well turned up about their ears.

Dr. H. A. Jones' horse ran away today. The animal was standing in front of the doctor's office when something started it and it started for its stable, some distance away. In making a turn the carriage came in contact with a gate post, doing considerable damage to the carriage and harness. The horse was uninjured.

Alex. Mitton, of Wheaton Settlement, Salisbury, was in this village this morning on his way to Hillsboro, having received the sad intelligence yesterday that one of his sons, who is in the employ of the Albert Manufacturing Company, had one of his legs cut off while working about the firm's car line this week.

IRISH NATIONALISTS BREAK WITH LIBERALS

Resolve to Fight Them in the House of Commons and Out of It

Will Ally Themselves With No Party But Keep Up an Aggressive Fight for Home Rule--Raids of Graziers Spread in Ireland, and Many Serious Clashes Have Occurred Between Rioters and Police.

London, June 12--At a meeting of the Irish parliamentary party in the house of commons yesterday, it was decided to fight the government, both in the house and in the constituencies in order to punish the Liberals for failing to give Ireland a broader measure of home rule than contained in the rejected Irish council bill.

War on Irish Graziers

The grazing war is spreading rapidly and becoming popular. The most serious affair which has yet occurred was near Albury, Galway, at midnight yesterday. A large posse of police opposed a crowd of persons who were driving cattle off a farm. The people stoned the officers, several of the latter were badly hurt and the sergeant in command ordered the posse to fire. The latter fired repeated volleys at the crowd and the raiders retreated. Two or three farmhouses have been fired into at night recently. The general sympathy of the masses is with the people, even in the case of many public officials, which ties the government's hands.

ORCHARD ADDS NEW HORRORS TO HIS TERRIBLE STORY

Boise, Idaho, June 11.—The attack of Harry Orchard goes on unrelentingly and the witness will probably be examined on the stand two full days more. Orchard withstands the strain with remarkable fortitude and the end of six days shows no indication of mental or physical flagging.

Today began with the dynamiting of Fred Bradley in San Francisco. The witness made a long and determined effort to expose several features of it to doubt and improbability, and to vitiate it all by revealing the history of the Pinkerton.

Then the play went back to Denver for the winter of 1904-5 and in the spring that followed, and there was an extended effort to show that Orchard had practically no communication with the leaders of the federation; that he received no pay for the Bradley crime or anything else.

Orchard, to a laughing court room, confessed that he stole the sheep, but denied that it was because of it. He insisted that all through that supposedly hard winter and spring he continued to draw money from Pettibone through Adams.

The Story that didn't come true

By LAWRENCE MOTT

(Copyright, 1907, by the New York Herald Company—All Rights Reserved.)

Spread out before her, clad in veils of purple wavering mists, the Manitoba wheat plains stretched away to great distances—one apparently endless solitude that was deep, silent and darkening fast in the twilight.

Clare Dale rested her cheek against a cool, white painted piazza post, her eyes wandering, traveling aimlessly over space of earth, and she sighed. Then, as a droning whisper at first that grew to sounds like those of bees' wings, a long line of glitters flashed across the horizon far away to the westward.

"Fred, dear Fred," she whispered, sitting down on the steps, a tiny night air moving her hair slightly. Thoughts, memories and waking dreams passed slowly. She remembered it all—when he first came from the East; when she first saw him that night her father—old man Carew—had taken him on as helper in reaping time; how kind and faithful always, as her father's employe, he had been.

Frederick Dale, from the East, as he had at first described himself to old man Carew, was one of those rare characters among men who do nothing apparently to help others and yet do nothing material for fellow creatures. He could not when he came West, for he was bitterly poor.

Sitting there in the soft chill of the gloom she could hear his words, as though they had been spoken but yesterday: "Clare, dear, I have not been able to ask before, nor was it just that I am shy, but I think—there he had put his hand quietly on hers—that we have understood each other for a long time."

But in her world of happiness there was one drop that tainted her waters of mental peace. She was just old man Carew's girl, while he—ah, he was clever, educated, everything. Once, and once only, she had been at the station across the prairie with him on her ponies, when the express came in. She had seen him talking with men that got out of a beautiful car, the last one on the train. He had asked her to come, but she was frightened and slipped away in the crowd. He seemed hurt afterward, but never reproached her.

She remembered telling him that she was afraid. Since then he had been even more kind and devoted. Often she saddled the fields—the grand little mare he had given her on her last birthday—and loped over the furrows to where two rigid lines of steel came as one out of the west and disappeared as one in the east. There she would wait until the express roared by, the ground shaking beneath her. She thought in this way to get glimpses of "his people." Twenty years old, born and bred on the prairie, she was young and crude in everything but her love for him. She felt that she was crude, she knew that she was ignorant, and it saddened her to realize that she could not appreciate the things he did, the way he talked, the books he read. Only a girl of Nature's own, with nothing but her love and her life.

He had talked to her in the long winter evenings when the snow struck violently against the windows and the wind tugged at the house, told her of strange lands across the ocean where he had been. He read to her from books that he called Shakespeare and George Eliot and Dickens. She enjoyed them so; and he tried to explain the characters to her, but she could not understand.

Sometimes when he was away she peeped into these books and read along slowly; the effort lost the effect for her and she closed them sadly.

That she was beautiful she knew, because he had told her so, but she didn't care. To make herself what he was to be like him, was the great cry of her soul. She got spelling books and a copy book and worked hard, so hard that her eyes ached and her temples throbbed. Then one night—she remembered the surprise—he was tired and could not write to Winnipeg. "Tell me," she had said, and he dictated to her. His words came strong. "Dear girl, all this work for me?" "Yes, and my life for you," she had answered. From then on she learned rapidly, and they read together every evening when the Chinese servant had gone to bed.

All these minute details of their life came to her tonight, each bringing its own fragrant breath of pleasure that moved ever so gently through the long arches of memory and down the great aisles of the past.

"Plata-plata, plata-plata. She jumped up at the sound of a horse's feet. "He's coming," running in the house. "Laol! Laol!" she called. "Lantern, Missy! There!" The Chinaman popped from the kitchen. "Mr. Dale is coming—supper ready!" "Allo! Leadee!—Lantern!" She ran out again. Yes—her lips trembled—yes, he was coming. She heard him dismount, heard his words to the stable boy.

"Dearest girl!" "My own!" "Well, well, well!"—he shook himself— "patty late, honey, but I had to arrange about the steam reaper, and the wires are all busy today for some reason; so sorry. How's the lad?"

In answer she opened a door in the hallway quietly; they tipped in. A shaded night lamp gave out its warm glow from the corner of the room. In the faint light they leaned over a tiny crib, she on one side, he on the other. No sound save for the almost imperceptible breathing of the child. One little hand was on the coverlet; it grasped a white rattle. The man touched it gently. "My boy, my boy," he whispered.

"Mine!" she whispered back. He looked up at her, with a world of sweetness and strength in his eyes. "Ours!" They crept out. "I'll run up and take off these dusty things," he laughed. "Go on with supper, I shan't be long!"

She carved the broiled chicken carefully, as she had learned to do by watching him, and picked out his choice bits—a wing and a "drum stick." Every least comfort that she could put in his path she sought; finding them here and there, she always placed them where he would see with the least trouble.

He bounded in then, full of life, teeming with health, a magnificent specimen of man. "Now then, Honey—" he kissed her—"what have you for a hungry being? Ah, chicken? You never forget what I like, do you? Dearest, I—" They moved apart quietly when Lao burst in, for they were not long enough married to be hardened!

"The 'Chink' seemed not to notice, but he saw, and was delighted in his quaint Oriental way. The pale eyes of jet black fairly glinted.

"Beggs' muckee sores in'lan'!" He deposited a plate of toast and some baked potatoes on the table. The man and the girl laughed.

"Go to bed, Lao, quick!" "Up away, Misses Dale, light away! Nightie, nightie!" "Good-night," they answered. "Sweetheart, have you been lonely?" "Sure—of course," she caught herself. "I'm always lonely without you."

He waved a kiss to her and ate heartily. "It's been a hard long day," he said, as he sipped his coffee and lighted a pipe; "but, puff—puff—puff—puff, I've sold the Wheeler land for $8,000."

"Six thousand dollars?" She was aghast at the greatness of their gain. "Yes—here," he pulled a long case from his inner waistcoat pocket—"there it is!" He counted the money out on the white cloth in bills of $20.

"But it only cost us $1,000." "True, dear, but with the improvements and drains that I have put on, it is well worth the price. Now, you see, I can pay off the whole of your dad's last payment for our home; isn't that fine?" She moved round the table to him.

"You are so—" she hesitated for words. "So what?" "Oh, so everything!" He lifted her hands to his lips. "And you are so true, so beautiful, dear." She bent her head shyly. "You always say that way Fred, but me, I—" she knelt by his chair—"somehow I am ashamed before you."

"Clare, dear, you mustn't say those things, promise that you will not do so again!" The girl shook her head quickly. "I think of 'em just the same."

"Why?" He took her face between his hands. "Because you're educated—a gent—oh, Fred, why don't you tell me, why haven't you ever told me about your home—out East?" She shuddered over the word "home" very gently. Dale turned away, his clean chiselled face sombre. He breathed deeply, throwing his head back, compressing his lips in a rigid line. She saw the change.

"There, now I've asked too much." And tears gathered in the big, gray eyes. "Oh—ah—yes. Years ago—let's see—just twelve years ago, Clare, I lived in the happiest of homes, with everything as fine that life, health and youth give. I was one long joy of travel, of ease, of luxurious study. I used to write—once."

"Write what?" The girl's eyes were absorbed with interest. "So-called novels, and stories, and—" "Like Mr. Dickens' books?" "Hardly, dear!" He smiled sadly—"but it was my delight to create beings under my pen; to see them grow, their pleasures, and—finally—their great happiness. I wrote a story about a man who came out West, when I was fifteen years old—just as I have done—and who married a girl—just as I have done."

"Dear Mother!" His voice shook—"it's all gone, isn't it? Your dream of my future, your ambition, your hope." Dale whispered on to himself, unconscious of the girl beside him. "It seems so far away, that time of my life; so very far away, mother; yet you and the Governor were wrong; then! He stiffened all over; the muscles of his jaws worked under the sunburned skin. "I did not, mother, really, honestly. I wonder if you ever realize that? I hope always that you will see, even though our lives are separated, that I left it all because I could not stand the taint. Possibly I was a coward to have done so, but freedom, in a new world, even though it be a lonely one, is better than the other. I am lonely for you, lonely for your love, lonely for your advice; but I cannot go back now. One letter from you in months, dear; that's all I have to bind me to your physical presence. Yet you know where I am. You—"

The girl could not choke a sob. He awoke from his dream speech instantly. "Why, my little girl, my Clare!" He drew her toward him, smoothing the masses of hair that tumbled over her forehead. "Crying? What for, dear? I didn't mean to keep you waiting for my story so long. I didn't, honey. Now, let's see. I stopped when I came to the end of my first story. That was when I—"

"She stood up quickly. "You've told me everything, boy, and I've thanked it more an' more times than I can count. Now I know."

"Know what?" He rose too. "Know that you're longing for your mother an' your home; know that I ain't no fit wife for you; know that you might 'a' been a fine story writer an' had lots of money an' things?" "Who told you?" He took her hands firmly—aye, a bit roughly. She looked at him in awe.

"You just said it all—there," pointing to his chair.

"Crank! A window pane smothered as the bullet entered from the outside. She sank to the floor.

The masked man turned his head for just an instant, but it was enough. Dale got his long Colt from the desk. Then it was Bang! Bang! Bang! Bang! Bang! The atmosphere was thick with powder fumes that hung, nauseatingly, gray. The lamp was shot out by the gun outside.

"God, I'm hit!" Dale muttered as his left arm refused duty. In the darkness he clenched the butt of the revolver between his teeth and rebounded with his right hand. He crawled over the floor, seeking to get the other between him and the faint light of the windows. Clare's body was in his path.

"Sweetheart! Sweetheart!" She was still. "The've killed her!" he groaned.

"Get him, Dick!" "Not yet, but, by God, I'll have him in er shake! You fellows keep watch on t' outside; I've winged the cuss an' he's a-crawlin' someres on t' floor! The damned woman's busted too! What in hell d'ye down her fer?"

"She had a gun under t' table, an wuz point' ter pop ye!" "Alright, but it'er stinkin' job!" Thus the man inside answered the men outside. Dale's agonized sorrow grew into a frenzied craving for revenge. He crept away from the girl's body with that stealthiness only known to them that have blood lust.

Then silence. Each man sought the other; neither daring to fire lest by the sight of the powder their respective positions should be apparent. "Hurry up, Dick; can't you get t' dough?" The raucous voice from the night air came harshly.

"I can't see the fool!" "Kick round an' rouse him up!" "Yep, an' git a slug in t' ribs! I'm full o' that game," the inside man answered sarcastically.

"Oh, by G—!" Dale listened to the curious thump and gurgle. "Keepee stille!" Lao's whisper came thickly.

"Dick, Dick, t' Mounters be comin'; mind yerself!" Then the sound of horses' feet on the earth. Plata-plata, rata-plata, till it died away.

"There they go, men! After 'em hard!" Dale heard the jingling of spurs—the rattle of carbines and the hard breathing of horses as the Royal Northwest Mounted Police swept by.

Silence again. "Say, Misser Dale, bossce, p'leceman gone catches, catches; gettee up!" He got to his feet slowly. The Chinaman struck a match. "Clare, my darling!" The girl opened her eyes, blinking as Lao set the chimneyless wicks of the lamp aflame.

"The money's safe? It's for you and the lad."

"She felt herself getting weaker; realized that her wits were flying. "Fred—Fred—you'll always love—the boy—the boy!"

"Of course; we'll love him together." A spasm of pain passed through her. "I can't tell him," she breathed, and continued with difficulty. "If you hadn't married me you wouldn't have got hurt out here, an' you'd be with your mother now!"

"Dear Mother! But, Honey, she'll realize before it's too late how—much I love you, and everything—will be—right again."

"She put her hand to her side and felt the hot spurts. "You're not sorry you married me, Fred?"

"Sorry? Sweetheart—I'm so glad, so thankful, because I've been a better—man since. You have taught me unselfishness—yes—everything that is good in the—world. I'm weak—dear, I—bit—more—whiskey—till—the doctor comes, please?"

"She tried bravely to get up. No use. "You'll—love—sn—watch—over—the—boy?"

"What?" He couldn't hear her words. Everything was dark and quiet to her. She felt herself as if drifting—drifting in a cool peace. No pain, nothing but her love for him, and that made so happy. She tried to repeat, but her lips, somehow, would not obey.

"Say—you—love—me." He got his face to hers with effort. "Ah! Don't wor-ry, dear." She pushed her face weakly nearer to him and was still.

The night wind, growing stronger from the east blew the flames of the lamp powerfully till they licked a black stain on the brass supports. The bitter taste of powder was yet noticeable.

"I won't worry, darling; go to sleep—on—my—arm. I've writ-ten mother—she'll come—and—we'll—go home together with—out—boy!" With half shut eyes, he looked at her beside him. "Poor—little girl, she's worn—out taking care of—me. Funny my tale—came true though—funny."

He breathed deeply then and slept from pure weariness and pain.

happy ever after." A long pause, her breath coming in little, hard gasps. She felt for his face with her one good hand and caressed it with passionate tenderness. "Fred, I'm sufferin' bad, but I don't care, 'cept fur our boy!" He moved restlessly, lifted his head.

"What happened, Clare?" He looked around the room. "I'm here." The tiny whisper came to his wandering senses as from a great distance.

"Don't worry about me, darling, I'm all right. Where were you when the fight was on?"

"He's forgotten everythin' 'cause o' his hurt," she muttered. "I ain't goin' to meet him." He groaned and his head fell back. "A drop of whiskey, please."

"The girl took a deep breath, tensioned her muscles to act and stood up. "I must—I must!" Always with the thought of him, she kept the side of her dress that was bloodstained away from his left hand. She reached it to his lips and he drank it all.

"Thank so much, dearest!" His eyes closed. "You see, honey, ha!" he chuckled brokenly. "My story has come—true; robbers—you'll nurse me—we'll—live—sn—t' it funny." Kiss the boy for me tonight, an' don't tell him Dad's hurt, will-you?"

"No." Her head was on his arm again. "Sent for doctor?" "Yes."

TEMPERANCE ON THE NORTH SHORE

Rev. C. W. Hamilton Reports That Chatham is in the Grip of the Liquor Interest; Other Places Not So Bad.

Rev. C. W. Hamilton, grand scribe, lecturer and organizer, is moving to and from the North Shore section of the province. He has recently organized two new divisions—one at Tetagouche, Gloucester county, and one at Bay du Vin, Northumberland county. North Star division, at Glen Anglin, Gloucester county, has been reorganized, and a movement to reorganize New Era division at Nelson has been set on foot.

Besides this work this officer has addressed meetings within the last two weeks at Bass River, Grandville, Harcourt, Bathurst, Douglastown, Bathurst, and Coates Mills. He also preached twice on each of the Sabbaths he has been away.

Mr. Hamilton says he met a discouraging condition at Chatham, where he hoped to get the ear of a representative public gathering and to meet the S. of T. in private session of division. He succeeded in neither. Not enough active interest in temperance work is existent in the town at present to prompt or warrant the announcement of a meeting to promote the cause.

The town is in the grip of the liquor traffic, and the citizens give their sanction to this by a careless inactivity so far as any definite temperance work is concerned.
