"NONPAREIL"
Billiard Hall!
SHARKEY'S BUILDING,
OPP. OFFICERS' BARRACKS, QUEEN ST.,
FREDERICTON, N. B.

I. E. FOSTER, Proprietor
THIS HALL has been newly fitted up and handily furnished, and for room, light, ventilation and restfulness, compares most favorably with any Billiard Hall in the Dominion. The Billiard and Pool Tables are pronounced by players to be superior to any now in use in this Province. They are the BRILLIANT NOVELTY, size, 4 ft x 9 ft.

The main object in the construction of the Billiard Novelty, and the one most noticeable, is that it embodies all the more salient or most important features that have rendered popular all the other styles of Tables of the J. A. Brunswick & Co. Co.'s make.
The Billiard Novelty has all the advantages and good points, including the respective inlays claimed by the "Nonpareil" and "Avaranah" Tables. The "Brilliant" is a happy combination of all these celebrated tables, and happily takes the foremost place in the estimation of all players of Billiard and Pool Tables. The "Novelty" is inlaid and handily furnished in many different colors, made up from California Laurel, Pure Ash, French Walnut, Elm, Elm, Maple, Mahogany,
Rose Wood, Tully Wood and Ebony. It is supplied with the finest of Vermont Slate bed, Simons Cloth, and a first-class outfit of everything necessary.

A call is respectfully solicited from lovers of the game.
Boys under sixteen not allowed in the hall.
Temperance drinks of all kinds, Cigars, etc.

Strand and other avenues near the House of Parliament were almost impassable, and on every side were heard cheers for the Franchise and Redistribution Bills, and groans for Lord Salisbury and his Tory supporters.

It is understood to night that the leaders of the Irish National have decided to join hands with the promoters of the movement to abolish the House of Lords, with the double aim of at once depriving the peers of both their land and power. Mr. Michael Davitt will lead the new crusade for the Irish National League, and is expected to come out to-morrow in favor of the abolition of the Upper House.

NEWS SUMMARY.

Mr. William Maitland, who was a claimant some three or four years since at Albany to the Leake estate, is the most likely to be the successor to the Earldom of Landerdale of the several claimants. Mr. Maitland's sons, under the name of Mansell, were formerly lessees of the Lyceum, Mr. Irving's theatre, and produced there Herve's "Chilperic," with the famous composit in the title role, by which $100,000 was realized. Subsequently the eldest son, William, opened the Lyceum here in 1873 and made a failure. Richard Mansell is styled in London, "Father of Opera Bouffes."

The oldest and most celebrated dealer in wild animals in the world, Mr. Bernhardt Kohn, died in Kassala, at the beginning of August last, in his 72d year. Mr. Kohn was the first to import animals into Europe direct from Nubia. Quite lately he had procured a large number of giraffes, lions, antelopes, ostriches, monkeys, &c., and had them brought to Kassala. For eight months Kassala has been besieged by the adherents of the Mahdi, and since the death of Mr. Kohn the Mudir of Taka has been in great embarrassment what to do with all the animals. It was thought probable that they would be slaughtered by the inhabitants, who were said to be in danger of famine.

THE PROVINCIAL STOCK FARM.

The announcement that steps would be taken to remove the government stock from the Otty farm to the Murray farm has been greeted by the St. John Telegraph with a most extraordinary and unjust criticism. The article referred to closes with the following paragraph:—

"It is not our purpose to discuss the matter more fully to-day, further than to add that there are other considerations of a vital character affecting the matter, not known to the general public, which must be disclosed if steps are taken to have the removal carried out."

This is a most astonishing statement to appear in a journal which has been heretofore friendly to the Local Government, and the duty of our contemporary is to make the fullest disclosure of any information it may have in its possession. We feel quite justified in saying that the Government has no desire that any consideration for their interests will prevent the Telegraph from making the fullest possible disclosure.

The opposition of the Telegraph to the removal of the Stock Farm has been from sectional motives, and it seeks to disguise these by an attack upon the County of York, and by setting itself up in opposition not only to the policy of the last and the present Administration, but also to the course which in the past has met its warmest approval. Conscious that the reasons it assigned against the removal of the Stock Farm are of a character which would not commend them to impartial readers, the Telegraph attempts to raise a new issue and to represent York as being aggrieved at the expense of the rest of the Province. It says:—

It is known that matters have already been pushed to the limit of forbearance in the aggrandizement of York at the expense of the other counties of the province. To the large expenditure on provincial account made in York for the university, the legislative and departmental buildings, the normal school, and made and to be made for the big bridge we are asked to add the purchase of a farm also. It is asking too much. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been expended in York as against which no counterbalancing expenditure has been made in other counties.

In respect to one of the expenditures above named, namely that on the bridge, it seems scarcely to lie in the mouth of a resident of St. John to object to the construction of a bridge across the river here, in view of the fact that it is only a few years since the sum of $80,000 was voted by the Legislature to purchase the suspension bridge at St. John; nor can it be claimed that because Fredericton happens to be the seat of Government, the residents of the city and of York County, and of the adjoining County of Sunbury should not have their due share of public expenditure on roads and bridges. Least of all does it seem to be open to the Telegraph to hold up this work as one to which this locality has a doubtful claim, seeing that it warmly espoused the work from its inception, and that the late proprietor of the Telegraph the Hon. Dr. Elder, was the first member of the new administration to publicly commit himself to its construction. While Fredericton continues to be the seat of Government there must be large expenditures here, for which no "counterbalancing expenditures" will be made elsewhere; but does the Telegraph propose to claim that in the distribution of public patronage York is to be entitled to nothing until the other counties have received in proportion to this expenditure? Must public works in York, outside of the Parliament Buildings and Departmental Offices, receive no consideration until the other Counties have had an expenditure to "counterbalance" what is spent for Provincial purposes in connection with the Legislature and the Departments; and if so will the same rule hold good as regards the expenditures in connection with the Lunatic Asylum in St. John? This must be what the Telegraph means, if it means anything, for we cannot imagine that it desires to create the impression that in the matter of public works, properly chargeable against the constituency in equalizing the distribution of patronage, York has received more than its share. If it has, the matter is susceptible of proof and we challenge the Telegraph to the proof.

So far as the Stock Farm is concerned, while the Attorney General has not promised to have it located here, as his enemies falsely allege, while he has simply, as in duty bound, used his vote and influence to secure the Farm for the County, when a majority of those upon whom the choice rested decided in favor of the Murray Farm, we do not imagine that the hostile criticisms of the Telegraph will lead him to ask his colleagues to reconsider the matter in order that he may vote against his own constituency; neither do we imagine that the other members of the Government are prepared because it suits the Telegraph to make a strong plea for Kings, to reconsider their decision as to the Murray Farm, made after the advice of the Board of Agriculture had been received, and after the views of the Telegraph in the premises had been expressed.

The Telegraph this morning says that The GLEANER failed to have anything to say in reference to this subject. Our contemporary is incorrect. The GLEANER mentioned the intention of the Government to remove the stock as a news item, which was all that there was any necessity for doing. We have not time to-day to make any further remarks upon this subject further than to characterize the following extract from this morning's Telegraph as a base, cowardly and malicious attempt to slander gentlemen of the highest honor and integrity, as it insinuates an unfair advantage has been given the Messrs. Murray. The Telegraph says:—

The Messrs. Murray enjoy the privilege of relationship, we are told, with a member of the firm in which a prominent member of the government is a partner, and also have long and close business relations with another member of the government.

THE UNIVERSITY.

The phase which matters have assumed at the University calls for careful handling, now that the original offender has made a full acknowledgment, and the Senior and Freshmen have returned to their lectures. While we have condemned the course of the students and have urged the Faculty to deal firmly with the breach of discipline, and while we most cordially approve of the action of the Senate and the course subsequently taken by the Faculty in suspending the Junior Class from lectures; we submit whether, the supremacy of the governing bodies having been asserted, it would not be judicious and calculated to promote the welfare of the students and the institution if the further punishment of the Junior Class were waived and the apology, which it is ready to make, were accepted and the whole unpleasant affair allowed to be forgotten. It was imperative that the control of the Faculty over the discipline of the University should be asserted. It has been; and the lesson which has been taught is one which will be long remembered by future students. We think that public opinion will fully bear out the Faculty in saying to the Junior Class that, while they do not assent to the idea that a class is justified in standing by one of their number in a falsehood, they are prepared to admit the Class to lectures again on an apology being made.

We have been asked by some who espouse the cause of the students, what we think they ought to have done, when questioned as to the original offence. Two courses lay open to them; one for the offender to acknowledge it; the other for the members of the class to decline to give any information; not to deny the charge, but simply in a respectful manner to reply when interrogated that they declined to answer. In this particular case, where the offence does not appear to have been very serious and in view of the unproved allegation that a dozen offences equal in degree had been passed over previously, and also in view of the expressed determination of the President to inflict a very severe punishment, the class would perhaps have been justified in adopting the latter course, thereby assuming the responsibility of the act. They might then have cited their precedents with almost unanswerable effect. The mistake was that the guilty party denied the charge, and the class sustained him in the denial. The students will see the difference between the two courses.

This case has given rise to a great deal of discussion as to the discipline of the University, and facts have come to the public knowledge giving good ground for the belief that the best results, either in discipline or instruction, are not likely to be obtained at the University under the present regime. The opinion is freely expressed that there is wanting in the management of the University that feeling of sympathy between the Students and the Faculty, that kindly yet dignified administration of discipline which appeals to the best side of student nature. It may be found necessary, in order that the University may gain the influence which it ought to have and may hold its proper place in public esteem, to take such steps in the matter of reorganization as will not only supply any deficiency in points specified, but will bring the institution fully abreast of the progress of modern ideas.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN.

On Tuesday next the Presidential election in the United States takes place and things look very much as if Grover Cleveland would be the occupant of the White House for the next four years. As we have already pointed out, New York is admitted by both parties to be the pivotal State, and although there are dissensions in the Democratic ranks, it now seems probable that the regular nominee of the party will have a handsome majority in the State. Betting in New York was on Saturday at the rate of $100 on Cleveland to $60 on Blaine. Previously the betting had been on even terms; but the great business men's demonstration on Saturday afternoon, when 30,000 men walked in line, 10,000 of them being Republicans, and all for Cleveland, seems to have forced the conviction home to men's minds that Cleveland will carry the State with a rush. This demonstration cannot fail to have a profound effect. We are told that the Democratic managers themselves were annoyed at its success, and that throughout the length of the State the party has taken a new lease of activity, and many who were indifferent to Cleveland are rallying to him because they think his to be the winning side. However, we venture no opinion as to the result, and only profess to give what appear to be the indications from time to time, and just now, as we said above, they appear to favor Cleveland. His cause is helped not a little by the cutting down of the Republican majority in Maine to 12,000 and in Ohio to 11,000.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The following facts relative to the decline in Canadian imports, while they are a subject for congratulation because that it is imperative that the volume of imports should be reduced, are ominous of coming deficits in the revenue. Unfortunately while the revenue is on the descending scale the expenditure is on the increase.

The return of the exports and imports for September show a great contraction in trade, as compared with the same month of last year. The exports of Canadian produce fell from $8,003,533 in September, 1883, to $7,905,464 last month. The total exports for the month show a reduction of $1,765,749 in value as compared with those of the same month last year. In imports there has also been a large falling off; the aggregate value for the month being $9,989,151, of which $1,663,074 were dutiable. In September, 1883, the imports amounted to $10,343,164. The balance of trade against Canada—excess of imports over exports—for last month was $1,142,708; the average duty collected on dutiable goods last month was about twenty-five per cent.

FOR LADIES ONLY.

What Clara Belle has to Say About Dresses.

The Changes which the Goddess of Fashion Prescribes.

As for the improvement of women in general, the winter fashions have taken definite form, and I am glad to report resistance to the enlargement of bustles, so that the distortion of shape has not progressed quite so rapidly as there was reason to dread. Women with good taste of their own are not disposed to disguise themselves until the pressure of fashion compels it. For a long time the draperies are now placed three or four inches below the belt, and are sewed there upon the foundation skirt; there are also many darts taken in the upper part of the front and side breadths, and even a belt is dispensed with, a corded facing being the only finish at the top, so that nothing may be added to the dress. Steel springs are sometimes at the back of the skirts very high up, so that they will adjust themselves easily to any change of position. It is embarrassing, on rising from a chair, to find one's bustle rampant. Foundation skirts made of four breadths of silk are now fastened back by five sets of strings or elastic bands that are attached in the middle of the wide side breadths. Two pair of ribbon strings or tapes are at the top, the upper pair being five inches below the belt; the next two pairs are short elastic bands with ribbons at their ends to tie them together, and the fifth is a single elastic band fastened permanently only ten inches above the foot of the skirt; this band is about half a yard long, and is tucked in two or three places to the lower skirt. An arrangement like this is used with fully draped skirts when the pad bustle and steel springs are omitted, and the wearer trust to a separate bustle and the drapery to make the skirt stylishly bouffant. The full straight English skirt also appears on French dresses of velvet and other costly fabrics, but the Parisian dress-maker gives a style to these that makes them look very different from those of last season. This is done by using a foundation skirt, on which the straight outside breadths are suspended beneath a full drapery about the hips, instead of being at the belt, in the way they are made here. Indeed no French dress is considered well made without this foundation skirt, which is the only remnant left of the closely-laced pull-backed dresses worn three years ago. To make this skirt the amateur dress-maker must have a good pattern, and across the back should be run one, two or three casings for steel springs. When these are used the pad bustle may be dispensed with, if the drapery is full; otherwise a square cushion filled with hair is added permanently at the waist belt, or one may be made with strings to tie around the waist and serve with any dress. This casing, as a woman feels as though some awful disaster had broken her all up, and the repairing surgeon had splintered, plastered and banded her from head to foot. However, I'm not saying anything against real improvement in figures. What I condemn is the lack of individual good taste. So many women dress badly, considering the amount of time and money they give to the subject. Variety is the order of the day, and no one need be at loss to find out what suits her. "Women are fools to act like a flock of sheep," said a skilled dress-maker, "but have a great difficulty in getting my clients to wear what best suits them. Because I invent a beautiful costume for a Young and Graceful Woman, should it be worn by a fat dowager? But the dowager will have it in spite of all entreaty. There are no old, and few middle-aged women. Fat women don't exist. All want to wear tight-fitting white gowns, and what girls they look in them! The only chance of living in peace is to let women have their own way. A glove-fitting gown is very well for a fine, lithe figure, but how many women possess this requisite? Such a costume on skeletons or the opposite extreme is repulsive, so we have revived the panier and made skirts fuller in the back, that's all. A clever actress studies her style, appears in costume admirably suited to it, and all the other women blindly copy her. It is really too dreadful!

I improve you, in getting your winter together, to take your physical dimensions into account. Now, for instance, a stout lady with a short neck can wear lace often as becomingly as her swan-throated sister, provided she does not attempt to tug it close up under her ears or to button it tight across her throat and shoulders. The lace neck trimming, of whatever sort, should invariably be flat, decrease in width as it approaches the waist line, and never stop short here, but fall in two graduated points, if possible, to several inches below the waist. It would also be well, before adjusting the lace, to have, &c., to turn back very slightly that portion of the bodice which comes just under the chin. This V opening of about three inches in length has the semblance of a neck, don't you see? Again, a great deal can be done to modify the shape of the corage. Surface indications can be made exceedingly deceptive. Our modistes are making corages with high and long darts that give slender waists and large busts. Ostensibly to make light cloth suits warm enough for December, but really to add breadth to spare shoulders, a round cape is added to the mantle, warmly warmed. These capes reach to the waist line, like large pelerines. In a well made corage the seams are now laid open, and are notched in two or three places about the waist line to make them curve in smoothly with the tapering figure. Other corages intended to give hard bone

Outward Semblance of Soft Flesh are made rather high, shirred on the shoulders and at the waist in front. The newest sleeves are pointed at the top, and extend upward between the shoulder seams to within two inches of the collar; as this destroys the graceful fall of sloping shoulders it will scarcely become popular. In all the important dresses exhibited this season on the padding at the top of the sleeve is omitted. French jackets are only partly fitted on the arms, in what is called the quarter fitted garment. The fronts hang loose and straight, without darts, and are double-breasted. The back is fitted to the form closely by three seams and darts, and is held in place by a belt underneath. This makes a really erect figure seem too hollow-backed and bulge-fronted, but is becoming in many cases. The fashion jacket-waists with vests threatens to last forever, and it certainly affords opportunity to bring the bust into prominence, as well as to give it false outlines without padding. Jersey webbing remains a favorite cloth on account of its elasticity, and is used for both short and long coats. The braiding that promises to be the most used is easily done at home. And that brings me to the latest craze among those New York girls who affect to mix with their dressing. Instead of doing decorative needlework on screens and other inanimate things, they literally hug it to their own bosoms. That is to say, they amuse themselves by sewing the braid on their corages. The dress in other respects complete on coming from the maker, but the front of the waist is left clear, whereon the wearer may outline such designs as she considers most conducive to the idealization of that section of her figure. The assumption is that no mere artisan can understand the true principles of art, or the true

Lines of Beauty so well as her highly cultivated self; that she can best express her ideas as to what the dress should be by sewing the braid on it; in short, that the braiding ought to be, as it were, a part of the breast which it is to cover, and therefore, must be done by her own fingers, guided by her presumably exquisite taste. The ridiculous idea! Just as though a girl, under the multifarious constraints of an ever-changing toilet, can give in any way a true expression of herself. "There is character in every step a person takes," said a man who thought he knew it all, so far as the science of gait was concerned. "When I see you pass me, house the other day, Miss Clara, I was impressed by the easy, independent freedom of your walk. Such firm yet gentle strides betrayed the dominant unconventionality of your character."

He was a doctor of divinity, and I didn't care to sass him, but I felt bound in Christian honesty to ask him: "Was I wearing my brown and black plush suit?" He believed so.

Then I was making a special effort to take long, swinging steps," I said, "because that's the only way I can make the con-founded drapery swing right. That meant exiguity, not character. See me in my new dark-blue street costume, with its narrow skirt and internal strappings, and you'll say I'm a mincer from Minceville."

GLEASINGS. Principal Kennedy of the Mount Allison Ladies' Academy, has been called suddenly to Ontario by the illness of his father.

Thos. Cadwallader, representing E. & G. G. Hook & Hastings, of Boston, is at Halifax where he is erect a $2,500 organ in the Fort Massey Presbyterian church.

A Boileston, Miramichi, correspondent writing on the 25th inst: "The mill pond was covered with a pretty thick sheet of ice this morning. Some parties are already starting for the lumber woods."

Of the total number of bursaries won at the Dalhousie College examinations completed lately, 18 were won by Nova Scotians, 4 by P. E. Islanders, and 3 by New Brunswickers. Edmund P. Allison, is the only Halifaxian who has secured a bursary. He stood No. 12 in the general list, and was at the High School. The bursary is worth $100 for two years.

In the superior criminal court, at Boston, on Tuesday, George T. Clark and Mary Kennedy pleaded guilty to adultery, and were sentenced to one year each in the house of correction. These parties went from Moncton, N. B., about a year ago, where they left a wife and husband respectively. Clark, who is quite a young man, and a carpenter, appealed to the court for leniency in the matter of sentence. Mrs. Clark, a sharp-featured woman, was on hand to see that George was properly punished so far as she could influence the court on this point.

The Supreme Court gave an important decision under the Scott Act on Friday. Perth county, from which the petition for submission of the act came, is formed of non-partisan members, and the case was argued for each riding. The temperance people, in filing their petition for examination, filed it with but one of the registrars, and this the Supreme Court held to be an insufficient opportunity for examination. Had the temperance people gone across the street and filed the petition in the sheriff's office, who is an official for the whole county and not a riding, the petition would have been allowed.

Rev. G. M. W. Carey, formerly pastor of the German street Baptist Church, arrived in Quebec the other day by the steamer Vancouver, from England, on his way to Bay City, Mich., where he takes a church. At the testimonial services on the 2nd and 3rd of October, by his late congregation, he was presented with two illuminated addresses, bound tastefully in morocco at cost of $10, besides a purse of gold and private subscriptions amounting to $600. Mrs. Carey and family will leave England about the first of November, and is expected that they will visit their friends in this city before going to Bay City.

Rev. Father Ouellet, who has resided in St. John some sixteen years, has removed to Sherbrooke to take charge of the R. C. church there. Before leaving the city a number of his friends presented him with a well filled purse. The Montreal Acaden records his arrival at Sherbrooke on Wednesday. He was met at the train by a number of citizens, and Rev. Father Lefebvre, whom he succeeds, awaited him at the Presbytery. Rev. Father Carson, of Cape Bale, was at the Presbytery too. The Acaden says the retiring priest carries away with him the esteem and veneration of the whole parish, and "in Father Ouellet he will have a no less estimable successor."

At a meeting held in St. John to decide upon a vote on the Scott Act, it was resolved that a committee of seven be appointed to prepare a call for and obtain signatures thereto of the citizens of the City and County of St. John and that they be empowered to call a public meeting at such time and place as they may determine. The following gentlemen were appointed such committee: Rev. A. J. McFarland, Rev. Job Sheenton, H. A. McKown, Thos. Dale, J. R. Woodburn, J. S. Turner, Josiah Fowler.

The Bridge. The contractors expect to put up the first span of the superstructure next week. The work of erecting the piers with iron has been begun.

Public Examinations. The semi-annual public examinations in all the city schools takes place to-morrow morning, commencing at 10 o'clock.

THE UNIVERSITY.

Meeting of the Senate to Consider the Question of Discipline.

A Dead-lock between the College Authorities and the Juniors.

Pursuant to notice the University Senate met on Tuesday afternoon to consider "a grave case of discipline and general insubordination." There were present Dr. Jack, Senator Wark, Hon. A. A. Davidson, Hon. A. Harrison, Dr. Travers, Dr. McFarlane the Chief Superintendent of Education and Mr. E. L. Wetmore.

The members were requested to send representatives to the Senate, and according Mr. A. B. Boyer for the Senior class, Mr. W. D. Rankin for the Junior class, and Mr. W. H. Hand for the Freshman class, attended before the Senate and were permitted to state their case from the class standpoint. They were questioned by the members of the Senate. After deliberating over the matter, the following resolution was then passed unanimously:

Resolved, that the action taken by the faculty in relation to the breach of discipline which occurred in Dr. Jack's lecture room and the circumstances connected therewith meets with the entire approval of the Senate, and that the members of the Senate, but on the faculty to be dealt with in accordance with the statutes; and

Further Resolved, that this Senate express its strong disapproval of the classes or a class organizing against the faculty, and must express its opinion that the discipline of the University must be maintained at all hazards; and

Further Resolved, that having heard a delegation from the several classes, this Senate can find no justification whatever for the course taken by any of the classes, but on the contrary find that the classes have acted against discipline and in a spirit of insubordination which cannot be countenanced.

The Senate then adjourned. The general opinion around town seemed to be that the Senate had dealt with the matter in a dignified and proper manner, and that the case being left for the Faculty and students to arrange between them, no difficulty would be experienced in coming to a satisfactory settlement. It was known that the Faculty were averse to taking an extreme course. The attitude of the students was everywhere a subject of unfavorable comment, and scarcely a person could be found who did not most heartily condemn it.

Yesterday morning a meeting of the Faculty was held, and it was decided to suspend the whole Junior class for the remainder of the present term. This action, while it was felt to be severe, was generally recognized as quite warranted by the aggravated case which the students had fully met by their persistent refusal to acknowledge their wrong.

After Dr. Jack had announced the decision of the Faculty the spokesman of the class reported that they would take their leave of the University. This expression called for an expression of regret from at least one of the professors. The junior class had fully determined upon not returning to the University after the period of rustication had expired; and intended to have held a valedictory meeting to-morrow night. This morning owing to a threat of legal proceedings against the University by Mr. J. A. Cushing of St. John, who's sons are in the Junior class, led the original offender to acknowledge his offence. This he did without consulting his fellow class members. Several of the members of the class have presented a petition to the Faculty asking that the order for rustication should be rescinded. The Senior and Freshman classes have returned to their lectures with the understanding that the punishment to be meted out to him shall be decided hereafter. The Senior class does not come out of the matter very well.

The Club Rooms. To the Editor of THE GLEANER:

Sir,—I observed by your last paper a few comments made about the club rooms and I think they are rather harsh and leave a bad impression upon the public mind. Now I can speak for one club in this city, whose rooms are on York street, and say that any merchant is welcome to come into it, and see what it is like for himself, and if his employees are members of this club; and if he thinks his till is sweating in consequence let him so speak and not leave the impression that every clerk who is a club member is robbing his master's till to support the same. Now Mr. Editor if they suspect their clerks of theft (the mildest word I could use) let them discharge them and notigmatize the clubs and not try to create a belief that they are kept up for the purpose of gambling, drinking and other vices. There is no gambling or drinking allowed in our room, and any member who is found out in any of the above offences will be immediately expelled. As far as the cost is concerned, I consider it a great saving to a young man to belong to a club and have some place to go in the winter evenings and if he had no club to go to they would likely go to some place of amusement and spend some money in one evening as it costs them in a club for one month. I don't think the young men referred to are members of any club and if the merchants would only look around in the evenings they would find out where and how they spend their time and money.

Yours, CLUB MEMBER.

Fredericton, Oct. 30, 1884.

St. John Presbytery.

The Presbytery met in St. David's Church, on Tuesday, Rev. Mr. Bruce in the chair. The moderator reported that he had declared the pulpit of the Carleton church vacant, and the clerk reported having furnished Rev. Mr. Burgess with a certificate of standing in the church.

On motion Rev. T. F. Fotheringham was appointed moderator for the next six months. Rev. Geo. Bruce submitted a report on the augmentation scheme and the committee, as recommended by Rev. Messrs. Bruce, Hogg and McKay, and Messrs. L. W. Johnston, D. J. Welch and J. G. Forbes. This committee are to submit a report of the visitation scheme at the next meeting.

The report of the home mission committee was read by Rev. Dr. Macrae and received. Bouteau and Chipman were on motion recommended to the committee for supplement.

Match Wanted. The Celestial Base Ball Club is anxious for a match on Thanksgiving Day with any City Base Ball Club; the military preferred.

CHIT-CHAT.

The editorial attachment to Mr. Colter's hurdy-gurdy told a gentleman in the city that it had a written invitation to meet the Governor General at Fredericton. The gentleman in question, having characterized the statement as an absolute falsehood, the attachment then said that it had been invited to go down in the train by the Private Secretary of the Lieutenant Governor. The Private Secretary can scarcely have taken such an unwarrantable course, and in proof that he did not, the further remark of the attachment may be quoted, that "if a man had not checked enough to push himself along no one else would push him."

The office boy, as he picked up the paper on which the above was written, murmured, "attachment to a hurdy-gurdy, that is that!" and then as he slowly wandered to the copy drawer he further murmured, "Oh yes—a monkey." Office boys are funny fellows and often with childish intuition discover the truth at a glance.

The attachment is having a little jubilee over the fact that it is a "chit-chat" and many of its advocates of the Murray property for stock farm purposes." The allusion is probably to its telegrams to the St. John Sun about Mr. Blair and his policy of centralization. Since the Murray Farm was chosen, the attachment has done its best to irritate the people of St. John and St. John in the hope that it can kill Mr. Blair politically.

Miramichi Notes. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday were made uncomfortable by heavy snow storms. The saw mills at Roebank, and opposite Douglastown, have been shut down for the winter.

Mr. Hugh Lamont, who has been working at shipbuilding in the United States has come home to spend the winter in Douglastown.

People here are very sorry to hear Inspector Cox has resigned his position.

Visit of Cabinet Ministers. Hon. A. P. Caron, Minister of Militia, Hon. John Costigan, Minister of Inland Revenue, Hon. John Carling, Postmaster General, and Hon. McKenzie Bowell, are expected in this city on Monday next, by the noon train of St. John. They will remain until Tuesday morning, when they leave for Victoria County.

The Scott Act Election. The Scott Act election is being held to-day in York County.

He Saw the Point. "Capital capital!" he ejaculated, as he bustled around and built a rousing fire in his little stove. "There will be no cholera this year in Toronto, the great comma bacillus is as dead as a ten-penny nail."

"How's that?" enquired his visitor. "Why, nature has provided an effectual check upon the propagation and development of the cholera germ, far superior to any doctor's stuff ever heard of, and that is the frost."

"It paralyzes it?" "No, not exactly. It deprives the bacillus of its fat, nips it in the bud so to speak, and the effect is to check the progress of the disease."

"Certainly, certainly, of course it is. If a comma be nipped of its fat, there is nothing for it but a full stop (.) is there?" The visitor dropped through a knot hole.

What Struck Him. A Western inventor, who brought out a new electric light some time ago, was lately in the city of St. John, where he had taken to bring it before the public.

"Nothing except a trip to Chicago and back," he said. "What was the trip for?" "To find out how much cash it would take to buy the Common Council."

"And did you succeed?" "Certainly, but they gave me my pile and wanted $20,000. I have abandoned the light, and decided to invent something new in bean-shooters."—Wall-st. News

How He Escaped. First Thief—"You're a lucky dog. I didn't expect to see you out so soon. So the Second Thief—"No."

"And yet there you stood before me with the money in your pocket. It's lucky they didn't search you!" "They did."

"They did? Then didn't they find it?" "No, I didn't have it."

"Why, what had you done with it?" "I paid it to my lawyer."—Philadelphia Call.

An Unfeeling Father. A bevy of girls were looking at a bridal trousseau.

"How exquisite!" "How lovely!" "How supremely sweet!" etc., ad nauseam were the exclamations made.

"You ought to be very happy, Clara," said one of the girls to the bride-elect. "I suppose I ought," said Clara discontentedly, "but papa won't bring a newspaper reporter to look at them."

Chorus—"What a shame!"—New York Sun.

Simple Enough. Beautiful Blonde—"Well, dear, it is your turn now. This paper says that brunettes will be the most popular this season."

Beautiful Brunette—"That is nothing unusual. You blondes have things your own way during the summer, but very fall there is a revolution in favor of brunettes."

Beautiful Blonde—"Yes, I have noticed that. A revolution in favor of brunettes." Beautiful Brunette—"Cold weather does notadden a brunette's nose."—N. Y. Mail.

A Russian Dog. From the Concord Monitor. A dog belonging to the B—s, which was a great favorite of theirs, and regarded as of thoroughly irreproachable training, was charged by some of their neighbors with worrying sheep at night. The family rebuked the charge on the ground that the dog was fastened into their kitchen at night. The farmers, however, persisted that they knew the dog well. When this was urged so strongly as to make it imperative on the B—s to take some further steps, one of the daughters volunteered to sleep in the kitchen and watch the dog's behavior.

When they made up the young lady's bed the dog seemed very restless and strange, but by and by he settled down, and all was silent.

A little after midnight he got up, came to the bed, and sniffed about until he had satisfied himself that the lady was not awake. Then he leaped into the window and opened the latch of the shutters and opened them. Then he undid the latch of the window, which he opened, and then disappeared. After a long interval he came back, closed and fastened the window and shutters, and remained by the door for some time. The marks which he had left by springing on the floor. To the terror of the seeming sleeper he sprang up, and snatched her, but she kept still and he at last crept off to his own bed.

As soon as he heard the servants stirring, the lady rose softly and slipped through the door. But the gaily dog had marked her. He sprang up and made a dash at her with most undisciplined fury, for he saw that his secret was discovered, and his character was being ruined by the now regarded as a hateful affair.

Fortunately, she got the door fast shut in time, and at once returned to her room. The dog was now so furious that no one dared go into the kitchen, and at last a gun was brought, pointed through a aperture, and he was shot dead.

The Tichborne Claimant Seeking for Public Sympathy.

General Notes and News from all Parts of the World.

On the War Path. (Special to Gleaner.)

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The first of series of meetings in behalf of the Tichborne claimant was held last night at St. James Hall. The claimant was accompanied by his son upon the platform and delivered an address to the large and enthusiastic gathering. Mrs. Weldon also made a speech. The claimant (Tichborne) in his speech declared his persecution by the government was ascribable to the fact that Mr. Gladstone's daughter had married into the Tichborne family. He stated that he had determined to devote his life to obtaining justice for himself and his children. A resolution was passed by the meeting demanding that the claimant should be restored to his rightful position.

German Politics. (Special to Gleaner.)

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—The feature of the elections in Germany has been the enormous increase in the social-democratic vote in Berlin and other cities. The strength of that party in the next German Parliament will probably be double that in last parliament. It shows the complete failure of the repressive measures undertaken for splitting the Reichstag into many sections and renders the hopes of government in attaining any great majority impossible.

Interesting to Canadians. (Special to Gleaner.)

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The Daily News is informed that preliminary negotiations are proceeding between England and America, with a view to established improved commercial relations between America and the British West India colonies. At the present time the duties on bread stuffs injuriously affect the West Indies.

Spain Worried. (Special to Gleaner.)

MADRID, Oct. 30.—Considerable uneasiness is manifested in government circles owing to reports being current that Ruiz Zorilla, the revolutionist, is hidden on the French frontier, where he is tampering with the Spanish troops in the northern provinces. The authorities are taking such precautions as they deem necessary to overcome his efforts against the peace of the country.

WHAT CAN SHE DO?

By E. P. Roe.

"But I must have the money," said Edith.

"Then you have come to the wrong shop for it," replied the lawyer, coolly. "Here's Crowl, now, he lends where I wouldn't. He's got money of his own, while I invest mainly for other people."

Edith's attention was thus directed to another red-faced man, whom, thus far, she had scarcely noticed, though he had been watching her with the closest scrutiny. He was quite corpulent, past middle age, and in height not much taller than herself. He was quite bald, and had what seemed a black moustache, but Edith's quick eye noted that it was unskillfully dyed. There seemed a wide expanse in his heavy, flabby cheeks, and the rather pugish nose looked insignificant between them. A slight tobacco stain on one corner of his mouth did not increase his attractions to Edith, and she positively shrank from the expression of his small, cunning black eyes. He was dressed both loudly and shabbily, and a great breastpin was like a blotch upon his rumpled shirt-bosom.

"Let me see your deed, my dear," he said, with coarse familiarity.

"My name is Miss Allen," replied Edith, with dignity.

The man paid little heed to her rebuke, but looked over the deed with slow and microscopic scrutiny. At last he said to Edith, whom nothing but dire necessity impelled to have dealings with so disagreeable a person.

"Will you come with me to my office?" Reluctantly she followed. At first she had a strong impulse to have nothing to do with him, but then had thought, "It makes no difference of whom I borrow the money, for it must be paid in any case, and perhaps I can't get it anywhere else."

"Are you sure there is no other mortgage?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Edith.

"How much do you want?"

"I will try to make four hundred answer."

"I suppose you know how hard it is to borrow money now," said Mr. Crowl, in a depressing manner, "especially in cases like this. I don't believe you'd get a dollar anywhere else in town. Even where everything is good and promising, we usually get a bonus on such a loan. The best I could do would be to let you have three hundred and sixty on such a mortgage."

"Then give me my deed. The security is good, and I'm not willing to pay more than seven per cent."

Old Crowl looked a moment at her resolute face, beautiful even in its pallor and pain, and a new thought seemed to strike him.

"Well, well," said he, with an awkward show of gallantry, "one can't do business with a pretty girl as with a man. You shall make your own terms."

"I wish to make no terms whatever," said Edith, firmly. "I only expect what is right and just."

"And I'm the man that'll do what's right and just when appealed to by the fair unfortunate," said Mr. Crowl with a wave of his hand.

Edith's only response to this sentiment was a frown, and an impatient tapping of the floor with her foot.

"Now, see how I trust you," he continued, filling out a cheque. "There is the money. I'll draw up the papers, and you may sign them at your leisure. Only just put your name to this receipt, which gives the nature of our transaction," and in a scrawling hand, he soon stated the case.

It was with strong misgivings that Edith took the money and gave her signature, but she did not see what else to do, and she was already very weary.

"You may call again the first time you are in the village, and by that time I'll have things fixed up. You see now, what it is to have a friend in need."

Edith's only reply was a bow, and she hastened to the bank. The cashier looked curiously at her, smiled a little significant smile as he saw Crowl's cheque, which she did not like, but at her request, placed it, and what was left from the second sale of jewellery, to her credit, and gave her a small cheque book.

CHAPTER XXVII.
THE MYSTERY SOLVED.

Edith again resumed her watching in her mother's room. The invalid was still dwelling on the past, and her delirium appeared to Edith's true emblem of her old, unreal life. Indeed, it seemed to her she had never lived before. A quiet, but divine exaltation filled her soul. She did not care to read any more, but just sat still and thought, and her spiritual light grew clearer and clearer.

Her faith was very simple, her knowledge very slight. She was scarcely in advance of a Hebrew maiden who might have been one of the mournful procession passing out of the gates of Naim, when a stranger, unknown, revealed himself by turning death into life, sorrow into joy. The eye of her faith was fastened on the distinct, living, loving personality of our human yet Divine Friend, who no longer seemed afar off, but as near as to that other burdened one, "who touched the hem of His garment."

"He does not change, the Bible says," she thought. "He cannot change. Therefore he will help me, just as surely as he did the poor, suffering people among whom he lived."

It was but three o'clock, and yet the eastern sky was pale with dawn. At length her attention was gained by a faint but repeated sound. It seemed to come from the direction of the garden, and at once the mystery that so oppressed poor Hannibal occurred to her. She rose and passed back to her own room, which overlooked the garden, and, through the lattice, in the faint morning twilight, saw a tall, dusky figure, that looked much too substantial to be any such shadowy being as the old negro surmised, and the strokes of his hoe were too vigorous and noisy for ghostly gardening.

"It must be Arden Lacey," thought Edith, "but I will put this matter beyond all doubt. I don't like this night work, either, though for different reasons than those of poor Hannibal. We have suffered enough from scandal already, and henceforth, all connected with my life shall be as open as the day. Then, if the world believes evil of me, it will be because it likes it best."

These thoughts passed through her mind while she hastily threw off her wrapper and dressed. Cautiously opening the back door, she looked again. The nearer view and clearer light revealed to her Arden Lacey. She did not fear him, and at once determined to question him as to the motive of his action. He was but a little way off, and was tying up a grapevine that had been neglected, his back being toward her. Edith had great physical courage and firmness naturally, and it seemed that on this morning she could fear nothing, in the strength of her new born enthusiasm.

With noiseless step she reached his side, and asked, almost sternly, "Who are you, sir, and what does this action mean?"

Arden started violently, trembled like the leaves in the morning wind, and turned slowly toward her, feeling more guilty and alarmed than if he had been playing the part of a burglar, than her good genius.

"Why don't you answer?" she asked, in still more decided tones. "By what right are you doing this work?"

Edith had lost faith in men. She knew little of Arden, and the thought flashed through her mind, "This may be some new plot against us." Therefore her manner was stern and almost threatening.

Poor Arden was startled out of all self-control. Edith's coming was so sudden and unexpected, and her pale face was so spirit-like, that for a moment he scarcely knew whether the constant object of his thoughts was really before him, or whether his strong imagination was only mocking him.

Edith mistook his agitation and hesitancy as evidences of guilt, and he so far recovered himself as to recognize her suspicions.

"I will be answered. You shall speak the truth," she said, imperiously. "By what right are you doing this work?"

Then his own proud, passionate spirit flamed up, and looking her unflinchingly in the face, he replied:

"The right of my great love for you. Can I not serve my idol?"

An expression of deep pain and repulsion came out upon Edith's face, and he saw it. The avowal of his love was so abrupt—indeed it was almost stern, and coming thus from quite a stranger, who had so little place even in her thoughts, it was exceedingly painful, that it was like a blow. She had been dwelling upon the serene heights of a Divine love, and the most delicate declaration of a human and earthly love at that time would have jarred rudely upon her sensitive spirit. And yet she hardly knew how to answer him, for she saw in his open, manly face, his respectful manner, that he meant no evil, however he might err through ignorance or feeling. He seemed to wait for her to speak again, and his face, from being like the eastern sky, became very pale. From recent experience, and the teachings of the Patient One, Edith's heart was very tender toward anything that looked like suffering, and though she deemed Arden's feelings but the infatuation of a rude and ill-regulated mind, she could not be harsh, now that all suspicion of evil designs were banished. Therefore she said quietly, and almost kindly,

"You have done wrong, Mr. Lacey. Remember I have no father or brother to protect me. The world is too ready to take up evil reports, and your strange action might be misunderstood. All transactions with me must be like the sunlight."

With an expression of almost anguish, Arden bowed his head before her, and groaned.

"Forgive me! I did not think," said Edith, with real kindness in her tone. "You would not knowingly make me any harder for a poor girl that has too much already to struggle against. And now, good-bye. I shall trust to your sense of honor, assured that you will treat me as you would were your sister dealt with," and she vanished, leaving Arden so overwhelmed with conflicting emotions that he could scarcely make his way home.

CHAPTER XXVIII.
HANIBAL LEARNS HOW HIS HEART CAN BE WHITE.

When Edith rose the next morning she found Laura only at her mother's bedside. Mrs. Lacey had returned quite early, saying that she would come soon again. Mrs. Allen's delirium had passed away, leaving her exceedingly weak, but the doctor said at his morning call:

"With quiet and good nursing she will slowly regain her usual health."

After he was gone, Laura said: "Taking care of mother will now be my work, Edie. I feel a good deal stronger. I'll doze in a chair during the day, and I am a light sleeper at night, so I don't think we will need any more watchers. Poor Mrs. Lacey works hard at home, I am sure, and I don't want to trespass on her kindness any longer. So if Mrs. Groody sends you work you may give all your time to it."

And early after breakfast quite a bundle did come from the hotel, with a crawl from the housekeeper: "You may mend this linen, my dear, and I'll send for it to-morrow night."
