LOCAL MATTERS.

CHICAGO REEF.—Representatives of three Chicago beef concerns were in the city yesterday calling upon the butchers. The business is increasing every week there being no active beef in the market.—St. John Sun.

THE ANTI-JERSEY crusade has struck Cumberland. Rev. Dr. Burns, of Halifax, lectured at Amherst on Wednesday evening and on Thursday at Spring Hill Mines. The subject is attracting very little attention in Maritime Provinces.

DYNAMITE.—A stick of dynamite was fired into a thrashing machine in Indians recently. The machine was blown to pieces, three men were torn to atoms and their teams killed. An old feud had recently been revived, and some of the parties had concealed the dynamite in a sheaf of wheat.

ACCIDENT AT MIDCO.—Mrs. John Richardson, widow 79 years of age, living with her son, Mr. Stewart Richardson, slipped last Friday afternoon and fell of the doorstep, dislocating her thigh. Dr. Moore, of Sackville, was called, but the chances for her recovery are not very favorable.

DORCHESTER.

—A. W. Chapman started on a business trip to Boston on Monday.

—A good many of our Dorchester people are attending the Halifax Carnival.

—Geo. M. Fairweather is regaining his health in Sussex, his old home.

—Very extensive repairs and improvements are being made in this Cemetery. The fences are being repaired and the graves are being leveled.

—The ship railway contractors have purchased 8000 bbls of Portland cement. Three cargoes have arrived to date, and are being stored at the wharf.

—The Sackville Shoe factory building has been moved, put on a new foundation, and an addition is commenced. This well established institution still retains its prosperity.

—Ship railway works at Fort Lawrence attract visitors daily, to many of whom the steam excavator digging out the dock is a novelty. Work is carried on at night by means of the electric light.

—Joggins Railway Co. will until further notice run a special on Saturdays to Macaan to connect with No. 10, which arrives there from Amherst at 10.45, or 8.45 local time. This will be an additional convenience to the public.

—N. B. &amp; P. E. I. annual meeting took place on Tuesday; A. Ogden in the chair, W. C. Milner, Secretary. No change was made in officials. The reports of Directors and Auditors were very favorable, there having been a large percentage of increase in net earnings.

—The Sackville creamery has closed its first month's operations, and with great satisfaction to the farmers, who supply it with the milk of 85 cows. About two tons of butter have been manufactured. This butter has a sweet and delicate taste. No one can imagine the amount of dirt here, with ordinary butter until he sees the mass of dirt extracted from the milk by the steam separator.

—Why is it that the Salvation Army persists in interfering with the performances of the Cornet Band? Is it because whoever is responsible for the antics and tonfoolery of the Sackville contingent is opposed to anything like innocent amusement? It is not because the army has any objection to musical performances for pounding a drum appears to be the leading feature in their form of worship, and although they are not usually guilty of harmony, they certainly delight in noise. It looks as if they interrupt the band concerts solely for the purpose of making themselves as offensive as possible. The band is only able to favor the people of Lower Sackville with music for an hour or two once a fortnight, and it is simply an outrage that they have to be interrupted by a squad of howling derbies. The Sackville public is long suffering and patient or this nuisance would have been shamed some time ago.

The Rise of British Wages.

The steady rise of workingmen's wages now going on in Great Britain is so general as to attract attention. The London Statist is particularly impressed with "the facility and smoothness with which labor disputes are being settled to the satisfaction of the workpeople all over the country, affording highly satisfactory evidence of the social and economic progress made of late by the country. There is hardly a trade in which wages have not risen during the past year or two, and in some cases the rise has been very great." The miners of Lancashire, Yorkshire and the Midlands have gained 20 per cent. advance during the past year. Seamen and firemen, the weakest in organization of any class of labor, are now striking and striking for advances. The rise in wages is not accompanied by a proportionate gain in prices of commodities.

Mystic Words.

I CAN recommend Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for chronic diarrhoea, as I have used it for two years and can get nothing else that helps me. It is a natural cure for all mucus complaints.

Halifax Carnival.

Up to the present time the Halifax Summer Carnival has fully realized the most sanguine anticipations of its warmest promoters.

The weather, without being exceptionally fine, has been at least fairly propitious, and thousands of visitors have been charmed with the city and its environment, and delighted with the sports and pageants provided for their entertainment. Thousands who have hitherto been strangers to Halifax have gazed with surprise and admiration on its magnificent harbor, its impressive citadel, its noble park and charming public gardens; and have seen in its fine public buildings, stores and residences, tokens of thrift and progress which possibly was not in accordance with their preconceived opinions.

Although the Carnival did not open till Monday, the town on Saturday was thronged with visitors, and the churches on Sunday were crowded with the faithful.

Monday morning was bright and glorious, and the city was soon decked in gala attire. The decorations of the leading hotels and of many of the business houses were very handsome, and the whole city was gay with flags and bunting.

A cricket match in the morning between the States Island Club and the Army and Navy drew a large number of spectators and ended in a draw, but the chief attraction of the day was the regatta on the harbor.

The professional races comprised a professional single-scur race for the championship of the harbor, and also professional whaler, squid boats, four-oared and other races, including a number of man-of-war boats. The professional races all took place according to programme, and were all closely contested, but about five o'clock the rain began to fall and the amateur races were postponed till next day.

During the regatta the harbor was crowded with boats and yachts of every description, including the steamer "Goliath," which carried the press representatives, and many thousands of spectators lined the shores on both sides of the harbor.

Tuesday morning dawned bright and clear after the rain of the previous evening, and thousands of visitors were early to witness the military review on the Common.

The reviewing officers were General Ross and Staff and General Middleton.

As soon as the exercises were concluded the troops marched down to Point Pleasant and took up a position to repel the attack that was shortly to be made by the naval forces. A vast number of spectators accompanied the troops to the scene of the expected engagement.

While many others embarked to witness the battle from the harbor, the press on this occasion being indebted to the Canada Atlantic S. S. line for a free trip on their magnificent new Clyde built steamer "Hall."

The naval attack was made by a fleet of boats towed by steam launches. The first gun was fired from Fort Ogilvie, and the field batteries stationed between Point Pleasant and Steele's Pond speedily replied.

The attack was a complete success, and the naval forces, which were advancing from behind George's Island, promptly returned the fire and the cannonading became continuous. As the boats rapidly approached the shore the infantry regiments opened fire, and the battle was a complete success.

The Rain-Harp.

When out-of-doors is full of rain,
I look out through the window-pane,
And see the branches of the trees,
Like people dancing to the breeze.

They bow politely, cross, and meet,
Salute their partners and retreat.
And never stop to rest until
They reach the end of the quadrille.

The strings are made of rain, and when
The branches wave to dance again,
They whisper to the breeze, and he Begins another melody.

I've heard him play the pretty things
Upon those slender, shining strings;
And when he ends—he's very sharp,
He always hides away the harp.

—Frank Dempster Sherman, in St.
Nicholas for August.

"Strange Bravery."

ANNIE WESTON WHITNEY.

"There's no other way. I must try it alone. It's a chance if I live to get over. If I don't, boys, tell my wife I died as a man should;
and, boys—look after her and the child."

The speaker was an engineer on one of the roads, and was leading from a large city, and he had been examining a bridge under which the water had risen to such a height during the recent freshet, that he questioned its ability to stand the strain of so long and heavy a train as that which he was about to lead. He had refused to take it across before testing the bridge alone with the engine.
Better one life lost he thought, than several hundreds.

Just as he was preparing to start, he felt a touch on his arm, and looking round he saw a tall, rather awkward figure whom he recognized as an engineer who had been on the road, but had been discharged the year before on account of his habits.

A better engineer than Sam Colter when sober could not be found, but unfortunately for him, he had allowed the demon drink to get the better of him and was fast losing not only the confidence of others, but his own self-respect.

"Come down, John," he said in a low tone. "Your wife needs you; no one needs me. I'll take the train."
"Sam!" exclaimed his companion in some surprise.

"There, there; no use arguing.
I've made up my mind. I'm sober and you know what that means.
You need not fear to trust me."

"I'm not afraid of that, but I can't let you do it, Sam. My duty it is,
and I can't shove it off on some one else. To tell the truth, it looks to me like a shaky business, but no man shall call John Lawrence a coward."

"You are as brave a man as ever lived, John, but there are those at home you must think of. There's a wife thinking of and perhaps praying for you now, and I heard you speak of a child, her child. I can't stand by and perhaps see her made a widow and her child an orphan."

"I'm pretty bad, John, but not so bad as that. She did well to choose between us as she did, though I've always had a grudge against you since, but I can't feel it now, John. It's all gone when I think of her. There, for her sake you must let me go
now. Move aside."

Sam Colter was a strong man, and with all his faults was still able at times to exert a wonderful influence over others. His command to "move aside" was given in a tone and manner that caused John Lawrence to look at him hesitatingly, and before he could recover himself, Sam had him in his strong arms lifting him out of the way. As he sprang into the engine and started her off, he called out:

"I'm his substitute. Good-bye, boys!"

So quiet had all this gone on that but a few of the passengers knew of the danger, but more were coming forward now to learn the cause of the delay. The rush of the angry waters, and the anxious look of the men watching the slowly-moving engine told its own tale. The rapidly gathering darkness rendered the lights confused, and night and scenes were so uncertain that the watchers gave up the use of their eyes and trusted to their ears down on the track to follow the engine in its course. A great silence seemed to have fallen over everything as those who watched and listened held their breath in the agony of suspense, while the travellers in the engine, and the anxious look of the
